49 more suspects in Maungtaw armed attacks arrested

THE security forces led by an officer of the No. 1 border guard control office in Maungtaw Township arrested 59 suspects believed to be armed attackers at 10am yesterday during their area clearance operations at Kyaraguntaung, Gwazone and Dargyizar villages, according to an announcement from the Information Committee of the State Counsellor’s Office.

Out of the 59 suspects, 21 were from Gwazone, nine were from Kyaraguntaung, 15 from Gwa village, 12 from Kyaraguntaung village, one from Dargyizar village and one from Ooseinkya village.

Among the arrested suspects were Hamat Dular, 15 and Shaoshitarmauk, 52, both of Gwazone. The suspects are being held at No. 3 and No. 4 border guard control offices for interrogation.

Detainees: Forced terrorist training and arsons under threat of foreign extremists

FOUR detainees suspected of being involved in the deadly 9th October ambushes on border police outposts in northern Rakhine claimed that they were forced to undergo the terrorist training and then join with violent attackers and set fire to their own villages.

The suspects, who were arrested during the clearance operations by the government troops and the border guards, made the claims while being questioned by the authorities in accordance with the law.

The testimony of the suspects revealed a systematic recruitment of members of the Muslim community in the northern Rakhine State by foreign Muslim extremists that was carried out by the intimidation and the threat of execution.

“They said that they would shoot me or cut my throat and kill me if I did not do their course. They said that they would shoot me or cut my throat and kill me if I did not do their course. Twenty people from our village had to attend the course, which was conducted at the back of the Mayin Mountain”, said Jarbuman, a suspect who was detained from Pwintphyuchaung village on 12th November. “On the day the fighting broke out, we fired to our villages and left. The group also had 10 guns and 10 swords”.

Mammud Iserlan, another detainee from the same village, said that the Muslim cleric at the local mosque acted as an organizer. The cleric told villagers that people from Bangladesh would come soon and we need to cooperate with them to attack the troops of the government, which would never recognize them as the Rohingya.

“He also said that one person from each household had to join in the attacks. Otherwise, all family members would be slashed at their throats.”

Second Day Meeting, 3rd Regular Session of 2nd Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Held

U WIN KHAING, Union Minister for Construction, clarified the matter to get loans from Japan International Cooperation Agency sent by the President to build No.3 Thanlyin Bridge.

In the clarification at the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw yesterday, Union Minister said, “Now that Thilawa SEZ has emerged in Thanlyin Township, traffic & commodity flows are increasing, causing traffic jam. And, load capacity of the existing No 1 Thanlyin Bridge is only 32 tonnes, hence there arises the need to get loan from Japan International Cooperation Agency for the construction of No 3 Thanlyin Bridge, which will help the multi-sector development including social, economic, education, health and transport sectors. Thus the matter to grant loan amounting to 31051 million Japanese Yen has been submitted to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw for the approval.”

In this regard, it was announced that any interested persons to discuss the matter can enroll their names.

Similarly, U Kyaw Myo, Deputy Minister for Transport and Communication clarified the matter to get loans from RoK economic development cooperation fund sent by the President. In the clarification U Kyaw Myo said, “With the loan from the RoK economic development cooperation fund amounting to US $ 61.3 million, Twante Canal development project can be implemented to ensure the safety of water transport in the canal, fast flow of commodity, progress of tourism industry, lessening loss of growing acreage due to protection from bank erosion and over-floods and security of people’s lives and property. Thus the matter to grant loan from RoK EDCF has been submitted to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw for the approval.”

U Win Maw Tun, Deputy Minister for Education clarified the matter to allow the refilled water to get loans from RoK.

Pyithu Hluttaw to debate legal protection for house maids

The Pyithu Hluttaw regular session yesterday agreed to debate a motion urging the Union government to debate legal protection for house maids.

Representative Daw Aye Mya Myo of Kyauktan Constituency submitted the motion to prevent unlawful actions against workers, including forced labour and physical and emotional abuses. The representative further explained that she had submitted the motion because weaknesses in observance of the law by employers, a lack of understanding of the law by employees and the failure of authorities to inspect worksites on a regular basis lead to frequent labour disputes, forced labour and abuses against female workers and children. This requires a need to provide legal protection and a safe working environment for all workers, Daw Aye Mya Myo said.

The representative also suggested capacity building for committees for settlement of labour disputes in townships, frequent inspections, effective actions for offenders and creation of safe and healthy working environments for workers. The session agreed to debate the motion at a later session.

Concerning a question raised by a representative on the use of motorcycles in the satellite towns of Yangon, Deputy Minister U Kyaw Myo of the Ministry of Transport and Communication said that it is too dangerous to use a motorbike in populous cities and the ministry has no plans at present to allow them. He also added that the Yangon Region Government has also announced publicly that they also have no plans to lift the motorcycle ban in the city.

Union Government to fund ethnic language, culture courses

Naing Thet Lwin, the Union Minister for Ethnic Affairs, supported funding of language and culture courses of ethnic people at the Amyotha Hluttaw session yesterday, saying that he welcomed the question of a representative asking whether the government has plans to fund ethnic language and culture courses as an extracurricular activity.

The union minister also said that the decision is in accordance with the provisions of the constitution to encourage and preserve the languages and cultures of ethnic people.

He said that the government would fund the courses partially due to lack of funds, but said this

Eighth meeting of JMC-U held

At its meeting yesterday in Yangon, the Union Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC-U) said it was necessary to discuss deceleration of tensions and it was important to find out the root cause of the fighting.

Lt.-Gen. Yar Pyae said that the meeting will point out the weaknesses and strong points of the JMC process, which was responsible for prevention of armed conflicts as much as possible. He added that teams had been sent to verify that the fighting took place for the first time with the aim of finding who was right and who was wrong and of receding tensions.

But the vice chairman of the body, Saw Isaac Poe, said that it has been one year, one month and two days since the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement was signed and all leaders who signed it were responsible for its implementation.

The meeting will last three days and leaders of JMC-U said the meeting as observers.

The financial and implementation report of the temporary office of JMC’s technical support committee, the draft budget drafted by the JMC TSC, and the UNDP’s implementation of the standard operating procedures, the implementation of ceasefire during the seventh meeting and the eighth meeting of the body, formation of JMC-S in Chin State and verification of fighting in Shan State will be discussed at the three-day meeting.—Myanmar News Agency

Scenes of Maungtaw which is more frenetic day by day!

KO TET and group

SINCE our arrival at Maungtaw, the block in which tea and coffee shops are situated on the construction road, west ward of Maungtaw sees customers having their first morning meal from 7 a.m to 9 a.m in so daily.

When we roamed about the town on the morning of November 17, we saw tea shops and rice-selling shops c rammed with consumers. According to U Kyaw Htoo Mon, a local from Maungtaw, some shops remained close and now was less crowded compared to the situation of the past time.

I noticed Myoma Market run by board of township development committee has started to open since 6:30 or 7 a.m but nearly all shops started working just after 8 a.m. Shops usually close at 5 pm but these days at noon shops were closed as customs from nearby villages did not come to the market to purchase commodities they needed, it is learnt.

Gold and jewellery shops, hardware shops, fishery stalls and groc eries along the Member Gyi Street are active just in morning periods at the present time. They hope the business will return to the normal state very soon.

On the Anawrahta Street motor vehicles, motor trishaws, cycles, trishaws and pedestrians are moving and fro. There cannot be signs of worries or fear seen on their faces with normal living styles found as usual.

On my way in front of no 4 State Middle School branch. I found students playing happily in the school campus just prior to school bell toll.

During my brief observation at the check point of the Maungtaw toll gate this morning, I saw passenger buses plying between Maungtaw and Buthitaung, cargo trucks, sellers and purchasers from nearby villages by motor trishaws. According to passengers and drivers, their income is much less than ever and they want peace and stability as usual as soon as possible.

Farms and fields just outside Maungtaw and at both sides of the road were crowded with paddy harvesters, cattle and farming workers.

District Judicial Court Office, township education office and other buildings under construction are being built again.

Daw Ma Oo disclosed that she has grown many crops—pea, cabbage, chilli, cauliflower, egg plants and so on. She also wants peace and stability of the area.

During today’s trip to Buthitaung, I found more and more passenger buses and motorcycle carriage plying more than before.

They also told us that we needed to shout words like ‘Muslim’, ‘Rohingya’, ‘Nakaburi’ and ‘Wutuforce’. Courses were conducted in the valley. They said they waited a long time as they were promised the recognition of the Rohingya, but that never happened. When the attacks broke out, we were at our village with our swords. Some villages were set on fire by people who infiltrated from Bangladesh and some local rogues. Villagers had to take to the streets with swords when the attacks broke out”, Iserlian said.

Another detainee, Eielbar, who was arrested in Yedwington village, said that “Muslim Bengalis set fire to the village on 13th November. I think about one hundred houses were burnt down”.

A fourth suspect, Saudaranmeerin of Kyangchhaung (North) village, said: “We were gathering people with swords, slingshots and wooden clubs to rob the weapons of the security forces. Before the night of the attack, they took our elders into the jungle. They also put fire on our village and went into the forest.”

The interrogation of the detainees revealed that the violent attackers forced one man from each local family to join with them under the threat of the slaughtering death of their family members, according to the information committee of the State Counsellor’s Office. The detainees told the committee and interrogators that the local Muslim villagers were instructed to wait to attack the government troops with swords and sticks. The detainees also said the arsons in the villages were done by the violent attackers themselves, or by those under their direction.—Myanmar News Agency
Mandalay’s Chanmyashwepi Bus Terminal to be upgraded

MANDALAY City Development Committee plans to improve the Chanmyashwepi (Kywesekan) Bus Terminal located about 10 km (8 miles) central Mandalay, before the end of this year.

The M-development Corporation Myanmar will improve the 14.2-acre bus terminal through the Build, Operate and Transfer (BOT) system. The project will start after an agreement is signed between the company and the authorities.

The upgraded terminal will include restaurants, four or five-storey condos, hotels and supermarkets.

Situated in Chamyathazi Township, Mandalay Region, the Chanmyashwepi Highway Bus Terminal is the main bus terminal in the region to travel to all major destinations in the country including Yangon, Taunggyi, Kalaw, Nay Pyi Taw, Monywa, Hpa-An, Pyay, Bago and Lashio.

The bus terminal is projected to be upgraded to look like an airport, said U Zaw Win from the MCDC, who added that authorities are searching for a new runway area that can host the highway buses while the improvement project is being done.

U Zaw Win explained that the current condition of the terminal is always busy with people and commodities transported by over 350 express buses from 156 bus lines.

From the bus terminal, there are over 1,700 registered vehicles, including over 100 buses, that operate the Yangon-Nay Pyi Taw-Mandalay routes, he added.

The new plan will enable travellers to enjoy smooth, quick and safe public transport service under systematic arrangements.—Myitmakha News Agency

Over 1,200 trafficked to Thailand in six years

OVER 1,200 Myanmar citizens were trafficked to Thailand in various ways over the last six years, according to U Aung Myat Thu, a member of the Myanmar Association in Thailand (MAT).

“DSL Anti-Human Trafficking Division (AHTD) of the Royal Thai Police and the immigration department rescued the trafficked Myanmar national from time to time. Mostly, the traffickers were forced to work aboard fishing boats as slaves,” U Aung Myat Thu said.

The increasing number of trafficked persons can be directly attributed to the lack of employment opportunities in their mother land.

According to MAT statistics, there were a total of 1,237 people illegally trafficked to the other countries; 50 victims in 2011, 292 in 2012, 264 in 2013, 120 in 2014, 174 in 2015, 337 in 2016.—Myitmakha News Agency

Action taken against unlicensed car dealers in Myitkyina

POLICE have recently taken action against four car dealers who sold 12 unlicensed vehicles in Myitkyina township, Kachin state.

Police from Myitkyina Myoma station confiscated illegal vehicles and took action against the dealers under section 8 of the export and import control Act.

“We received information from local people that the dealers were selling and buying the unlicensed vehicles at the brokers’ market. So we took action against them in accordance with the law,” said Sub-inspector of police Aung Kyaw Min, the leader of control team.

The seized vehicles are: three Mitsubishi Pajeros, one Toyota Land Cruiser Prado, four Toyota Ipsums, one Toyota Mark Hi, one Honda Odyssey and one Toyota Kluger. Local police will continue to seize unlicensed vehicles and take action against the dealers, authorities said.—Myitmakha News Agency

Court to sentence seven policemen for detainee’s death

ON 23 November, the court will hand down the sentences for seven policemen who killed a detainee—suspect for the death of a detainee while they were investigating his case, according to Thaton district court.

“The policemen do not admit, just saying that it is not their fault. They have the right to deny. But, the detainee died during investigation. They are found guilty, so they will have punishment, said an official called U Tin Maung. On 2 March, 2016, Kyaw Thein Khin, 32, was charged with murder in Thaton town. When the police were investigating, Kyaw Thein Khin died in the prison. According to the post-mortem examination, the victim died of internal bleeding in the abdomen.

“I want only the fair judgment”, said the victim’s wife, Daw Nan Thida Hlaing. The seven policemen were charged under section 302/114 of the criminal law. —Myitmakha News Agency

Woman robbed of jewellery in Nay Pyi Taw Council Area

THREE robbers wearing masks entered a house in which there was only one woman inside on 16 November in Nay Pyi Taw Council Area, Pobabthi Township. The victim, Ma Mon Mon Zaw, was alone inside the house when the men entered from two different doors and robbed her of jewellery.

One of the robbers threatened her with a sharp weapon while the other turned off the electricity and pocketed jewellery at around 6 pm.

“They didn’t hurt me”, said Ma Mon Mon Zaw. The robbers took a ring, a bracelet, two earrings and a gold chain worth Ks10 lakh, she said.

Ma Mon Mon Zaw lives with her husband at Wunndapi Ward, Pobabthi Township. Her husband goes to work in the morning and comes back home in the evening. Ma Mon Mon Zaw reported the robbery to the local police station. “There have never been such cases like this before”, said a local resident in the ward.

Flower crab exports declined by half this year

Located on the northwestern corner of Rambre Island on Combermere Bay, Kyaukpyu is one of the areas where flower crabs can be found. But over-fishing may have adversely affected the crab population in Kyaukpyu. “The negative impacts on natural environment caused by some fishermen, who use prohibited methods to catch, leads to a decrease in production rate,” said U Khin Aye Maung, chair of the Fish and Shrimp Producers Association for Kyaukpyu Township.

Depending on the weather, the exporters get varying volume of crabs from offshore fishing boats. The supply of flower crabs has gradually declined year after year.

There are about 10 wholesale dealers in Kyaukpyu who export crabs to Thai market. According to the exporters, between seven and ten tonnes of flower crabs have been sent to the foreign buyers per week. Last year, they exported 13 to 18 tonnes of crabs per week.—Myanmar News Agency

Low-cost flats to be built in Yangon

NEW plans are underway to build over 3,000 low-cost housing units in Dagon Myothit (East) and Dagon Seikkan townships in Yangon to meet the growing demand, said Col Tin Aung Tun, Yangon Region Minister for Security and Border Affairs.

This comes from the Yangon Region Hluttaw meeting on 16 November, where U Kyaw Zeya raised a question relating to the management of squatter settlements.

In his reply, Col Tin Aung Tun said the region government plans to construct 1,040 low-cost housing units in Dagon Seikkan Township and 2,300 units in Dagon Myothit (East) in cooperation with the Construction Ministry and relevant departments.

The Yangon Region government recently invited tenders for projects to develop low-cost housing in Hlaingthaya and Thanlyin townships. The project is estimated to generate around over 4,600 units.

The government already had several housing projects with 2,208 low-cost apartments in Hlaingthaya and Dagon Seikkan townships. Those flats have been sold through an installment payment plan and full settlement plan by the region government, the Ministry of Construction and the Construction and the Construction and Housing Development Bank.

The bank launched on 1 August its service to open housing savings accounts. Over 5,000 customers have opened accounts at the bank with the purpose of buying a house.

The CHDB allowed buyers to purchase a low-cost apartment via eight-year installments, with plans to extend the term to 15 years. The buyer needs to pay 30 per cent of the total expenses to the bank first.

The Ministry of Construction is planning to build over 8,000 low-cost housing units within the next four years. Each new apartment will be sold for less than Ks10 million.

Tenders invited for water taxi vessels

YANGON Region Transport Authority (YRTA) invited tenders on 16 November for vessels that will be used as water taxis on the Hlaing River and Nga Moe Yeik creek. It is learnt.

The water buses will hopefully contribute to a reduction of traffic congestion and to ensure convenience of the passengers travelling around the Yangon region.

The YRTA plans to introduce two separate routes along the Hlaing River and Nga Moe Yeik creek.

The tender applications and regulations are available during office hours in room 216 of Yangon Region Government office starting from 21 November up to 20 December. Interested business men should submit tender applications not later than 26 December to the Yangon Region Transport Authority, which will consider the applications in accordance with the tender rules and regulations.—Min Min

Myanmar’s dried tea leaves to go to Germany before Christmas Eve

GERMANY pledged to purchase almost all the good-quality dried tea leaves produced from Shan State before Christmas, according to a spokesperson of the Ministry of Industry.

The demand from the western European countries will help grow the presence of Myanmar’s products in the international market, exporters say.

Producing quality dried tea leaves is a top priority of the local manufacturers wishing to expand their businesses into global market.

Under its small-and-medium enterprise development plan, the government has assisted in the manufacturing process by supporting modern drying machinery and related equipment to local firms.

In cooperation with relevant business organisations, the industry ministry continued its support for growers and producers in Pindaya, a town in Shan State, which is famous for its commercial tea plantations. Currently, about 30 villages in Pindaya can mass produce tea leaves with the use of modern equipment.—200
China sees THAAD deployment as ‘weather vane’ under Trump

BEIJING — Whether President-elect Donald Trump goes through with a deployment of a US anti-missile system in South Korea will be a key indicator to how political ties unfold with China, sources with ties to the leadership in Beijing said.

Beijing will also be keeping a close eye on Trump’s meeting on Thursday with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe of Japan, its key regional rival, for clues on how the President-elect, who has never held public office, is likely to conduct foreign policy, they said.

South Korea and the United States have agreed to deploy a Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) anti-missile system to counter missile threats from North Korea. It is expected to be in place within eight to 10 months, the commander of US forces in South Korea said earlier this month. China has argued that the planned deployment undermines strategic stability in Northeast Asia, and worries that THAAD’S powerful radar provides coverage of China’s missile installations.

"Whether deployment of the Terminal High Altitude Area Defence is delayed is a political weather vane," one source said. A security adviser to Trump said last week his meeting in New York with Abe on Thursday may mark the start of talks to garner Tokyo’s support for a pushback against China’s growing influence in Asia.

"We have heard what he said. We will now watch what he does," said the source, requesting anonymity because he is not authorized to speak to media. "We will play it by ear," the source said, invoking a term that translates to blocking a punch or a kick as it comes. Trump has described doubts over his commitment to security alliances with Japan and South Korea, suggesting they need to pay base ringed by steep military presence and even hinting they should develop their own nuclear weapons capability.

Japan’s nuclear war would be China’s worst nightmare and is likely to provoke strong reaction, diplomats and analysts have said. China’s relations with Japan have long been poisoned by what Beijing sees as Tokyo’s failure to atone for its invasion and occupation of parts of China before and during World War II as well as competing claims over a group of East China Sea islets.

"Northeast Asia would be a powder keg," a second source said, referring to a nuclearized sub-region including China, Japan, North and South Korea.

Japan, with a US-led Air Force, a gaggle of helicopters and popular whale-watching tours, is likely to conduct foreign policy experiments to see if they work, said Sarah Stuart-Black, a security expert at Chatham House.

"We are really concerned about the changing weather situation," she told reporters. "It could mean that there’s an increased risk of further landslides, obviously surface flooding, so we want to be safe."

An inland road to Kaikoura, briefly reopened to emergency vehicles, was closed due to more landslides, officials said.

"Warships from Australis, Canada and the United States, in the country for the Royal New Zealand Navy’s 75th anniversary, had arrived in Kaikoura to assist with the recovery."

"The ships, crews and maritime helicopters provided by our partner militaries have given us a great deal of flexibility in supporting the national relief effort," said New Zealand Joint Forces Commander Major General Tim Gall.

Storm lashes New Zealand quake zone, more buildings evacuated

CHRISTCHURCH, (New Zealand) — Rain and strong winds battered central New Zealand on Thursday, threatening further damage just days after a powerful earthquake killed two people and devastated parts of the country’s South Island with huge landslides.

More than 1,000 tourists and residents have been evacuated from the small seaside town of Kaikoura by a fleet of helicopters and a New Zealand naval vessel since the 7.8 magnitude quake struck early on Monday.

Kaikoura, a fishing town and popular whale-watching base ringed by steep mountains, was completely cut off by landslides covering the coastal road and rail corridor.

Further helicopter evacuations from Kaikoura on Thursday had been disrupted due to bad weather, said Sarah Stuart-Black, director of the Ministry of Civil Defence Emergency Management.

"We are really concerned about the changing weather situation," she told reporters. "It could mean that there’s an increased risk of further landslides, obviously surface flooding, so we want to be safe."

An inland road to Kaikoura, briefly reopened to emergency vehicles, was closed due to more landslides, officials said.

Warships from Australia, Canada and the United States, in the country for the Royal New Zealand Navy’s 75th anniversary, had arrived in Kaikoura to assist with the recovery.

"The ships, crews and maritime helicopters provided by our partner militaries have given us a great deal of flexibility in supporting the national relief effort," said New Zealand Joint Forces Commander Major General Tim Gall.

Most of the tourists evacuated to Christchurch, the South Island’s largest city about 150 km (90 miles) south of Kaikoura, had continued their journeys but around 130 people were being housed temporarily in Canterbury University’s student halls.

With damage expected to take months to repair, the government announced a NZ$7.5 million ($5.3 million) wage subsidy package to support small businesses in Kaikoura for two months. "These companies are going to have a sustained reduction in their turnover to the point of almost nothing for a long period of time and that’s why we think it’s appropriate for the government to step in," Economic Development Minister Steven Joyce told reporters.

Analysts at ANZ said that, while the local economic hit would be significant, there would only be a "small dent" in New Zealand’s overall activity, far lower than the 2011 quake in Christchurch that killed almost 200 people.—Reuters
India acts to help farmers hit by black money crackdown

NEW DELHI — India’s government on Thursday announced immediate steps to ease a cash crunch for farmers amid widespread criticism of Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s shock decision to withdraw old banknotes or withdraw rationed money from their accounts.

Modi dropped a bombshell on 8 November by abolishing 500 and 1,000 rupee notes that accounted for 86 per cent of cash in circulation. The move was aimed at cracking down on the shadow economy but has brought India’s cash economy to a virtual standstill.

In the latest in a series of ad hoc steps, Modi allowed farmers to withdraw up to 25,000 rupees ($368) a week against their crop loans to ensure that sowing of winter crops “takes place properly”, a senior finance ministry official said. Economic Affairs Secretary Shaktikanta Das also said a time limit for farmers to pay crop insurance premiums has been extended by 15 days. Many of India’s 260 million farmers have no bank accounts and depend on local money lenders to fund sowing, which means those that have to borrow to sow winter crops like wheat or rapeseed could face debt trouble without a good harvest.

The government also slashed the amount of old money people could exchange for new notes to 2,000 rupees — or just under $30 — from a limit of 4,500 rupees. The move sought to deter huge numbers of people queuing to swap cash repeatedly, some of whom are suspected to be acting on behalf of racketeers trying to launder “black cash” before a 30 December deadline for depositing or swapping old notes. — Reuters

Testing times as South Korean students sit for college exam

SEOUL — Financial markets stayed closed and aircraft grounded as students in South Korea sat down on Thursday morning for the annual college entrance exam that could make or break their careers.

Some 600,000 high school students will take the grueling eight-hour exam to determine if and where they will spend four years in higher education, with anxious parents heading to places of worship to pray for their children.

The students, including those retaking the exam, were overwhelmed with well-wishes and gifts of sticky rice cake, said to bring good luck. “My little boy is taking the exam for the third time,” said Kim Yong-woo, a 59-year-old mother, who joined other parents at cathedral to pray for their children. “All I can do is pray as his mom and I came out here hoping that he can manage his condition well and get a good score he wants,” she said.

The November event, which includes mathematics, sciences and languages tests, sees the country ground to a halt each year.

For 25 minutes, when the listening portion of the English test is administered, the takeoff and landing of aircraft are put on hold and bus drivers traveling near test sites are discouraged from sounding their horns.

Police vehicles and motorbikes were enlisted to escort students running late to the exam.

Financial markets opened an hour later and office workers were advised to be at work later than usual to allow students to get to the exam venue in smoother traffic.

At test sites, students arrived with mixed feelings of concern and anticipation of liberation when the exam is behind them.

“I won’t get nervous and I will work hard to solve problems in exams as I’ve been preparing,” said Lee Se-la, 19, steeling herself for the day-long test. — Reuters

Vietnam PM backs off from US-led TPP, emphasises independent foreign policy

HANOI — Vietnam will shelve ratification of a US-led Pacific trade accord due to political changes ahead in the United States, but wants to maintain good relations with Washington as much as it does other countries, its prime minister said on Thursday.

Viet Nam’s legislation was almost certain to ratify the 12-nation Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) agreed last year but had deferred it until after the US presidential election won by Republican Donald Trump, whose protectionist agenda on the campaign trail has unnerved Asian economies.

The TPP, the signature economic policy of President Barack Obama’s Asia-Pacific rebalance, looks increasingly uncertain with a Republican Congress and an incoming president who had called the agreement a “disaster”.

The TPP would be a big boon for Vietnam’s exports and manufacturing economy, which is receiving record foreign investment due to its numerous trade accords, cheap labour and relative stability.

“The United States has announced it suspends the submission of TPP to the parliament so there are not sufficient conditions for Vietnam to submit its proposal for ratification,” Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc told the National Assembly.

Post-US election responses by the Asian countries on the TPP varied, from suggestions by Malaysia that it would focus efforts on wrapping up a multi-nation trade pact led by China, and Japan trying to stick with the TPP and push ratification.

European leaders and Obama to discuss Russia sanctions in Berlin

BERLIN — European leaders and President Barack Obama on Friday will discuss extending sanctions imposed on Russia for its intervention in Ukraine, and possible new sanctions for its bombing in Syria, sources familiar with the plans said.

The meeting in Berlin, hosted by German Chancellor Angela Merkel and including the leaders of Britain, France, Italy and Spain, comes a little over a week after Donald Trump’s victory in the US presidential election.

Trump has indicated that he will seek a rapprochement with Russia, raising doubts in Europe about the future of the sanctions regime introduced by Washington and Brussels in 2014 following Russia’s intervention in eastern Ukraine.

A German official said the plan was to agree a rollover of EU sanctions against Russia, which are due to expire at the end of January, in the coming weeks.

There is concern that Trump might move in the opposite direction after his inauguration on 20 January. European leaders will therefore be seeking clarity from Obama, who must leave last week and said afterwards the president-elect would maintain core relationships around the world, including with NATO.

Obama arrived in Berlin on Wednesday evening after visiting Greece.

“We’re in a really critical situation,” said the German official.

British voters’ Brexit wishlist — free trade, EU immigration controls, survey shows

LONDON — British voters want to maintain free trade with the European Union after Brexit but also want to limit immigration from countries in the bloc, according to a survey on Wednesday.

In the United Kingdom’s 23 June referendum, a total of 17.4 million people, or 51.9 per cent, voted to leave the EU while 16.1 million, or 48.1 per cent, voted to remain.

The survey, which reflected the demographic profile of the British population and the referendum divide, is based on research conducted by independent social research institute NatCen during September and October via the internet and by phone with a panel of 1,391 people.

“There is nearly universal support for maintaining free trade between the UK and the EU,” said John Curtice, a senior research fellow at NatCen and professor of politics at Strathclyde University, wrote of the survey. “On the other, around seven in 10 voters believe that the UK should be able to limit immigration from the EU, while a similar proportion believe there should be customs checks at the border with an EU country,” Curtice said.

The survey also found a majority of Leave voters backed free trade, financial passporting and following EU manufacturing regulations, while a majority of Remain voters supported limiting immigration and introducing customs.

Prime Minister Theresa May, who quietly argued against Brexit for months, said the referendum was “a vote for a bright future, a vote to stay in the single market, a vote to keep our place in Europe’s biggest trading bloc.”

May also stressed that existing bilateral agreements are a good foundation for further cooperation, a Ministry of Foreign Affairs statement said.

The ministry, who signed a declaration of intent on an agreement on air transport, expressed the hope that the agreement will be signed soon — by the end of 2016 or early in 2017.

South Korea parliament approves bill for special prosecutor in political scandal

SEOUL — South Korea’s parliament on Thursday approved a bill to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate a corruption scandal engulfing President Park Geun-hye, sharply raising political pressure on her to step down.

The motion proposed by the main opposition Democratic Party passed by a vote of 196 in the 300-seat assembly, indicating some members of Park’s ruling Saenuri Party backed the bill.

The government has been rocked by allegations that a friend used her ties to Park to meddle in state affairs and wield improper influence, triggering calls for the president to be impeached or step down.

Dacic meets with Canadian Foreign Minister, Serbian caucus

BELGRADE/OTTAWA — On the last day of a visit to Canada, Serbian FM Ivica Dacic met with his counterpart Stephane Dion after attending the inaugural meeting of the parliamentary friendship group for cooperation with Serbia.

Dion stressed that both sides recognised the potentials for further developing friendly relations through future development of trade, economic, university and cultural cooperation.

He also stressed that existing bilateral agreements are a good foundation for further cooperation, a Ministry of Foreign Affairs statement said. The ministers, who signed a declaration of intent on an agreement on air transport, expressed the hope that the agreement will be signed soon — by the end of 2016 or early in 2017.

South Korea to develop long-range rocket to counter North Korea

SEOUL — South Korea on Wednesday approved a project for a new long-range rocket system to help bolster its capabilities to counter North Korea’s artillery threats, Yonhap News Agency said.

The report, citing the Defence Acquisition Program Administration, said South Korea will develop and deploy an unguided projectile that can be mounted on a new 230-millimeter multiple rocket launcher system. “If deployed and launched, the new unguided projectile MRLS could wreck considerable havoc on exposed targets deep within enemy territory,” DAPA spokesman Kim Si Cheol was quoted as saying, adding that one such rocket could fly waste to an area roughly the size of three football fields.

The system is reportedly scheduled to be deployed by 2020.

Two injured in gunfire near Russian consulate in Istanbul

ISTANBUL — Two persons were wounded on Thursday in a gunfire that erupted in front of the Russian consulate general in Istanbul, local media reported.

The Haberturk daily said a man opened fire in a quarrel among three people in front of the Russian consulate in Istanbul’s busy Istiklal Street, shooting the other two in the foot.

Police teams were sent to the scene, and the incident was not related to the Russian consulate, the daily said, citing a preliminary police report.

Italy’s Renzi rules out government role if he loses referendum

ROME — Italian Prime Minister Matteo Renzi said on Thursday he would not take any part in efforts to form a temporary or technocratic government if he loses next month’s referendum on constitutional reform.

Renzi has promised to resign if he loses the vote, and with the majority of polls pointing to that outcome, attention has focused on what may happen after the 4 December ballot.

Many observers expect a temporary government to be formed, charged with drafting a new electoral system, or a so-called “technical” government of experts without party affiliation.

Renzi said the electoral law would have to change whatever the outcome of the referendum, but indicated he would not be the person to re-write the legislation if his flagship constitutional reform is rejected.

“I can’t be someone who negotiates a deal with the other parties to create a little government or one with a limited goal (to change the electoral system),” he told radio station RTL.

Housemaids need legal protection

Myint Win Thein

NE of the reasons for frequent maid abuses in Myanmar is the lack of labour contracts between housemaids and their employers. Almost all housemaids, most of whom do not have any legal knowledge, are hired through unregistered brokers who know little about laws related to their roles. Moreover, they fail to understand that they are responsible for the safety and well-being of the housemaids that they help look for jobs, making the housemaids vulnerable to unlawful treatment by their employers.

To aggravate the situation, housemaids are not registered with employment offices as other workers are required to. It is thus difficult for authorities to know how many housemaids are working in a ward or township under their purview. In addition, unlike other workers, the housemaids usually have to work by themselves in a home far away from their families, without anyone to consult with. As a result, most of them are overlooked when worksite inspections are carried out by authorities.

People know that housemaids are forced to work long hours under abusive circumstances only when such unlawful treatment is exposed. More and more inhumane abuses against housemaids have recently been uncovered by neighbours and local residents. It is clear that the public has become more aware of the depth of the problem and is beginning to do everything they can to help protect housemaids. The public can expose one case after another with no end in sight. What is more important than public awareness in this problem is the provision of the same legal protection to housemaids as to other types of workers. As pointed out by a Pyithu Hluttaw representative at a recent Hluttaw session, they are eligible for the same legal protection as everyone else.

The Rights of Shareholders of a Public Company

Myint Win Thein

Myanmar is now launching a large-scale economic development for the whole country so that she may catch up with her neighboring countries, who have had an early start many years ago in their reconstruction endeavor. For Myanmar, she has encountered with the misfortune of hindering her way to improve the improvised newly independent young country by the successive authoritarian regimes for almost 45 years, leaving the country as poor branded as the “least developed country” in the whole world.

Now, with developed countries and the United Nations promising aids to our country after she has adopted the democratic political ideology for governing the country, a change in all spheres for a much desired social, political and economic reformist government, turning a new leaf to create a better country for her citizens in Myanmar. But the country has been a standstill in progress because of the previous regimes. Lagging behind in infrastructure facilities, resulted in a chaotic condition in which to accommodate all foreign investors scrambling to get a better share of the Myanmar investment opportunity pie.

Myanmar has carefully charted the best area of land for setting up economic zones for development of the country. The favorable conditions have allured Myanmar citizens’ companies as well as foreign companies to start operating in the various industrial, services and food production sectors.

Judging from this perspective of a crowded condition of various companies to outdo each other, we can imagine the tremendous task for the Directorate of Companies Management Department to settle the big pile of problems with only help from the out of date book “Myanmar Companies Act—1914”, Whereas countries like U.K., India, Singapore and Malaysia have had their Companies Act revised, amended and rewritten to bring it update already.

A person who has purchased shares of a public company shall be entitled to receive a certificate from such company, where in the certificate held by the member shall be prima-facie evidence of the title of the member to the shares thereon specified the name, address, nationality and occupation of the shareholder shall be entered into the Register of Members of the company.

As a member of a public company, it is obvious that a shareholder, would like to know all about the activities of the company in which he has invested his money, so that a shareholder shall have the statutory rights conferred on him as a shareholder. He shall have the rights to:

— Appoint directors
— Attend and vote at General Meeting
— Receive a copy of Memorandum and Articles of Association of the company.
— Inspect the statutory Registers and Minutes books.
— Receive copies of financial statements.
— Initiate winding up of the company.

As a shareholder of a public company, it is most important for each and every shareholder to get hold of a copy of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the company. [Section 25 (1) of the Myanmar Companies Act] In other words, this book contains the constitution of the company. In which the operation and management of the company is run in accordance with the regulations in the Article 1 in such Memorandum and Articles. These Articles are based and derived from the Myanmar Companies Act when first draft in 1914 and then amended by order of the company finaly.

However these regulations can be added and deducted, substituted and deleted and amended from time to time during the operation of the company when they think that needed to change on them. Thereby the company shall have to hold a General Meeting, discussing the matter at first or if required to get the final resolution by show of hands or if otherwise by holding a poll with casting of votes. Once the resolution is settled, a copy of the resolution should be filed with the Registrar of Companies Administration Office for approval. Until and unless the resolution of the company has been approved by the Registrar, then the rewritten regulations or Articles shall have effect to be enforced as an Article in the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the company finally.

Another distinctive aspect for the shareholders to keep in mind is the rights of shareholders to appoint directors in the General Meeting and in rotation of directors [section 83 (2) of Myanmar Companies Act] stipulated “not less than two-third of the whole member of directors shall be persons whose period of office is liable to determination at any time by retirement of directors in rotation.” However many companies have constituted this Article with the statement from the First Schedule, Table A of regulation 78 of Myanmar Companies Act, as [At the first ordinary meeting, the whole of the directors shall retire from office and at the ordinary meeting in every subsequent year. One – third of the directors for the time being or if their number is not three or a multiple of three, the number nearest to one – third shall retire from office].

Take for instance, the voting rights of shareholders have been stipulated in Article 60 of the The First Schedule of Table A of Myanmar Companies Act as “On a show of hands every member present in person shall have one vote, On poll Every member shall have one vote in respect of each share held by him.” Looking from this point, if a company has resorted to polling a problem, it would surely give an upper hands for the majority shareholders group over the minority shareholders group in contest of the matter concerned. Because more votes would be gathered in the hands of the majority shareholders. We often heard a lot of share holders of public company came back from their companies’ Annual General Meeting recently reluctantly confided among themselves, that their companies have already nominated and appointed the new Boards of Directors without even a single shareholder casting a single vote at all.

As now, Myanmar has enjoyed the luxury of more foreign investors and local investors establishing private and public companies, that sprout up inside every corner of Myanmar doing all sorts of business in Myanmar would create a difficult situation for the Directorate of Companies Administration Department to keep a tight rein on the crowded companies big and small which hardly can be considered as under control with the old Myanmar Companies Act alone.

Until a rewritten Myanmar Companies Act is coming out fast in time to curb the increasing number of companies who are operating daily not in conformity with the old Myanmar Companies Act or otherwise the situation would be flared up with such magnitude beyond control.
Two men suspected of involvement in Maungtaw armed attacks receive medical treatment

Two men arrested in separate incidents over the past week have required medical treatment during their incarceration, according to the State Counsellor’s Office.

Mammed, 28, of Wetpyin village, who was detained at the Maungtaw police station on suspicion of his involvement in the Maungtaw violent attacks, was sent to the Maungtaw hospital at 4 pm November 16 for medical treatment, according to the information team of the State Counsellor’s Office.

The suspect is one of 41 people believed to be involved in armed attacks who were arrested in the village of Pwintphyuachuang during an area clearance operation by the government troops on November 12. The information team of the State Counsellor’s Office also said yesterday that the combined forces led by a junior police officer of the No. 2 border guard control office caught 14 suspects red-handed with swords and sticks in the house of Aduharmi during their clearance operation in Mya Zin village, area 5 of Maungtaw region 2 at 7:45 am on 14th November.

Among the suspects, Idyces, 25, of Longdon Kyetchaung village, was given medical treatment for hypotension during his detention at Kyikanpyin station. — Myanmar News Agency

BFM’s warm clothing donations reach IDPs in Kachin State

WARM clothes donated by KBZ’s Brighter Future Myanmar Foundation have reached internally displaced persons and disaster victims in Kachin State in advance of the predicted extreme cold weather this winter.

Responsible personnel of the foundation handed over 30,000 warm clothes for the IDPs and the people to the Kachin State Government on 17 November through Kachin State Chief Minister Dr Khet Aung.

The philanthropic foundation imported 300,000 warm clothes and has delivered to the areas which are expected to be hit by extreme cold weather due to Lanina. So far, more than 250 articles of warm clothing have been delivered to the IDPs from Khiro and Mongkai townships in northern Shan State; more than 3,000 pieces of warm clothes and 3,000 packs of instant noodles to IDPs in Myaing Gyi Ngu and Martha-waw in Kayin State; more than 36,500 pieces of warm clothing to ethnic people including monks and nuns in the Mandalay Region; more than 3,500 pieces of imported warm clothing to Naga ethnic people in Lahe, Naga Self-administered Zone in Sagaing Region; more than 7,630 articles of warm clothing to IDPs in Namtu in northern Shan State and more than 470 pieces to the local people in uneasily accessible areas in Kalay Township. So far, the BFM has spent more than K109 billion on evacuation, relief and resettlement of people nationwide who are affected by disasters.

The money is also spent on disaster preparedness, education, health, religion and sports in communities across the country. — Thura Lwin (Eco)

New Myaungmya bridge to be built in 2017-18

The Ministry of Construction will build a new bridge that can withstand vehicle loads of up to 60 tonnes. The two-lane bridge will be built alongside the existing bridge.

The estimated cost of the bridge is K60,000 million, it is learnt from U Win Khine, Union Minister for Construction on Wednesday at the 2nd Yangon Region Hluttaw Third regular session.

“The new two-lane bridge will be built in parallel to the old one as quickly as possible. Regarding the renovation of the old one, we have already renovated the platform, fixed the safety signs, and laid down three-foot steel plates on both sides of the road under the first 100-day-project,” said U Win Khine, Union Minister for Construction.

Construction of the new bridge will start in the 2017-2018 fiscal year at an estimated cost of K60,000 million. It is expected to be completed in the 21018-2019 fiscal year.

The old Myaungmya Bridge was built more than 20 years ago in 1996. The old bridge was weakened by heavy vehicles and machinery crossing during rescue activities in 2008, when Myanmar was hit by the Cyclone Nargis. — Myitmakha News Agency

Police training aims to raise security in Rakhine State

SPECIAL police training has been given to new police members who will be assigned with duty in one of the townships of Rakhine State on the western coast of Myanmar.

The authorities allowed a total of 116 police to attend security training from 297/2016 as of 15 November, in order to protect local people from various forms of crimes. Those new members will be assigned security duty across the state after the four-month course.

Pol Brig-Gen Thura San Lwin, the chief of the No. 1 BorderGuard Police Force, said every Rakhine national wishing to protect their state will have a chance to become part of the local armed police.

In battered town seized from IS, Iraq’s Yazidis dream of return

BASHIQA, (Iraq) — For the first time since Islamic State militants swept into Bashiqa two years ago forcing him to flee, 61-year-old Barakat has finally found work — on Sunday he will be coming back to help clear debris from the destruction wrought upon his home town.

He and others who have been living in exile gathered in the town on Wednesday, just over a week after Kurdish peshmerga forces drove the jihadists out.

Yazidi, Christian and Muslim former neighbours and old friends kissed and greeted each other. But it will be a long time before they can move back for good.

Bashiqa’s residents fled in different directions and at different speeds when the militants took over in 2014 after sweeping through Albania.

“Where we left immediately,” said Bakarat, a Yazidi like most people from the town.

Islamic State has killed Muslims and non-Muslims alike, but has been particularly brutal with the Yazidi minority, whose beliefs combine elements of several religions. Thousands have been killed, captured and enslaved by the group in what the United Nations says is genocide.

Bakarat said some Muslim inhabitants had stayed on for a while, but Christians and Yazidis knew exactly what their fate would be if they did not get out straight away.

Those who were better off rented homes in other towns, and those without the means went to camps.

Bakarat and his family still live in the northern city of Duhok. With most of Bashiqa destroyed and no services or supplies, they expect it will be a long exile.

“We can begin to clean up this mess, but there’s no point returning to live until there’s electricity, water, and most importantly full security,” he said on his first trip back, declining to give his full name in a sign of lingering concern. —Reuters

Kosovo arrests 19 on suspicion of planning IS attacks

PRISTINA — Police in Kosovo said on Wednesday they had arrested 19 people in the past 10 days on suspicion of having links with Islamic State and planning to carry out attacks in Kosovo and in neighbouring Albania.

The police said the suspects were in contact with an Islamic State member, the self-declared “commander of Albanians in Syria and Iraq”, Ladvrim Muaxhixhri, from whom they received orders to attack.

“They were planning to commit terrorist attacks in Kosovo and also (an attack) against Israeli football team and their fans during the Albania-Israel match,” Kosovo police said in a statement in the evening.

Albania moved a World Cup European qualifying match with Israel on 12 November from the northern city of Shkoder to a venue near the capital Tirana because of fears of a possible attack by militants. Four people were arrested on terrorism charges.

The police said the suspects had planned to carry out “synchronized terrorist attacks”, but it did not give any details. It said explosives, weapons, ammunition and a drone had been seized.

At least 200 people have been detained or investigated in Kosovo over their alleged links with Islamic State in recent years. A total of 300 Kosovars went to Syria to fight alongside Islamic State troops and more than 50 have been killed there.

International and local security agencies in Kosovo, including NATO mission and the EU police operation, say zones could pose a security threat.

Most of Kosovo’s ethnic Albanian majority are nominally Muslim but overwhelmingly secular.

Islamic State killed 300 former policemen south of Mosul, HRW says

BAGHDAD — Islamic State militants probably killed more than 300 Iraqi former police three weeks ago and buried them in a mass grave near the town of Hammam al-Alil south of Mosul, Human Rights Watch said on Thursday.

A Reuters reporter visited the site of the mass grave, where residents said the ultra-hardline militants buried victims who had been shot or beheaded. The residents said they believed up to 200 people were killed in the weeks before Islamic State withdrew from the town.

Human Rights Watch said some of the former policemen were separated from a group of about 2,000 people from nearby villages and towns who were forced to march alongside the militants last month as they retreated north to Mosul and the town of Tal Afar.

It quoted a labourer who said he saw Islamic State fighters drive four large trucks carrying 100 to 125 men, some of whom he recognised as former policemen, past an agricultural college close to the site which was to become the mass grave. Minutes later, he heard automatic gunfire and cries of distress, he said. The next night, on 29 October, a similar scene was repeated, with between 130 to 145 men, he told HRW.

Another witness, a resident of Hammam al-Alil, said he heard automatic gunfire in the area for approximately seven minutes, three nights in a row. “This is another piece of evidence of the horrific mass murder by ISIS (Islamic State) of former law enforcement officers in and around Mosul,” said Joe Stork, deputy Middle East director at Human Rights Watch.

Escaped Chibok girls overcome doubts and jealousy to attend university

ABUJA — When a colleague asked Margee Ensign to help her sister who had been snatched by Boko Haram from her school dormitory in Chibok and escaped, the president of the American University of Nigeria could not refuse.

Ensign decided to offer scholarships to girls who managed to flee the Islamist militant group after it abducted more than 270 of their classmates in April 2014, its most high-profile assault in a seven-year insurgency to create an Islamic caliphate.

Of the 57 girls who escaped after the night-time raid in northeastern Nigeria, 24 accepted the university’s offer.

But not everyone celebrated their return to education in Yola, the capital of a state neighbouring Borno where they were snatched.

“People (in Chibok) told us that we are stupid for sending our children to school again after what happened,” said the father of one girl who took up a scholarship at the university in a video recording of her first day there. Scarred by her daughter’s ordeal, he was one of many parents who stayed with their children in the dormitories during the first few weeks.

Boko Haram has abducted hundreds of men, women and children, killed thousands and displaced more than 2 million people during its insurgency.

But it was the kidnapping of the Chibok girls which prompted outrage worldwide and spurred a campaign, #bringbackourgirls, backed by celebrities and US First lady Michelle Obama.

The Islamist militants released 21 of the girls last month after the Red Cross and the Swiss government brokered a deal with the group, but some 200 remain missing.—Reuters
Minnesota officer charged with manslaughter in death of black motorist

ST. PAUL, (Minnesota) — A Minnesota police officer was charged with second-degree manslaughter on Wednesday for the fatal shooting of a black motorist that sparked outrage when the moments that followed were broadcast on social media.

St. Anthony police officer Jeronimo Yanez broke the law when he shot and killed Philando Castile in Falcon Heights, a St. Paul suburb, during a traffic stop, Ramsey County Attorney John Choi said.

Yanez’s attorney could not be reached for comment but Dennis Flaherty, head of the Minnesota police union, said the police community was disappointed and expected Yanez to plead not guilty.

Choi said Yanez feared Castile was reaching for a weapon and just calmly said “Don’t pull it out,” according to Choi, who said the conversation was picked up by a microphone Yanez was wearing.

Starting about 40 seconds after the shooting, Castile’s final words after being shot were, “I wasn’t reaching for it,” according to Choi, who said the conversation was picked up by a microphone Yanez was wearing.

The incident began when he shot and killed Philando Castile in Falcon Heights, a St. Paul suburb, during a traffic stop, Ramsey County Attorney John Choi said.

Yanez then screamed, “Don’t pull it out,” drew his own gun, and fired.

Another officer standing on the car’s passenger side said he did not see Castile make any sudden movements and was surprised by the shots, Choi said.

When officers and paramedics were moving Castile, they found a 40-caliber semiautomatic handgun in his right front pocket that had a loaded magazine but no round in the chamber.

At the hospital, Castile’s wallet contained a driver’s license and his permit to carry a pistol.

“I cannot allow the death of a motorist who was lawfully carrying a firearm under these facts and circumstances to go unaccounted for,” Choi said.

Before Yanez, no officer had been charged in more than 150 police-involved deaths in Minnesota since 2000, according to the Star Tribune newspaper.

If convicted of the manslaughter charge, Yanez could serve almost 5 years in prison.

Yanez was also charged with two felony counts of dangerous discharge of a firearm that endangered the safety of Reynolds and her four-year-old daughter, who was also in the car.

Asked why he did not charge Yanez with more serious offense, Choi said this was the “highest, most provable offense.”

Choi said he met with Castile’s family on Tuesday night and informed them of the charges.—Reuters

Ecuador says Sweden should promise Assange will not be extradited

QUITO — Ecuador said on Wednesday that WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange should receive guarantees that he will not be extradited if he faces justice in Sweden after four years of living in the South American nation’s embassy in London.

Assange, who enraged Washington by publishing a flood of secret US diplomatic cables, fled to the embassy for fear that Sweden could end up sending him to the United States where he could face prison for leaking US secrets.

“If we can obtain guarantees that Mr. Assange will not face extradition to the third country, I think it’s fine for him to face Swedish justice — if there are charges, because are there still no charges,” said Foreign Minister Guillaume Long in an interview with an Ecuadorian radio station.

Swedish Chief Prosecutor Ingrid Isgreen spent several hours at the embassy on Tuesday where she posed questions through an Ecuadorian prosecutor, before leaving without making comment.

Court rejects demand for flight suspension at US base in Okinawa

NAHA, (Japan) — The Naha District Court on Thursday ordered the Japanese government to pay around 2.46 billion yen ($22.6 million) in damages to 3,395 residents due to aircraft noise from a key US air base in Okinawa Prefecture, but rejected the plaintiffs’ demand for a halt to flights at the base.

Presiding Judge Tet-suya Fujikura of the court’s Okinawa branch recognised the emotional distress and negative impacts on the health of residents around the Marine Corps Air Station Futenma caused by the aircraft noise that he says has disrupted sleep and people’s daily lives.

Fujikura said the government “has left the problem unaddressed” without taking effective measures even though the noise from the Futenma base has been an issue since the 1970s.

The plaintiffs demanded a total of about 10 billion yen in damages.

It dismissed the plaintiffs’ request to suspend flights with noise levels exceeding 40 decibels early in the morning and at night as well as 65 decibels at other times, saying the Japanese government “is not in a position to regulate the operation of US military aircraft.”

The plaintiffs said they plan to appeal to a higher court.

The ruling comes as the Japanese and US governments are seeking to move the Futenma base from a crowded residential area in Ginowan to the less-populated Henoko coastal area of Nago within Japan’s southern island prefecture. But the relocation plan has drawn opposition from local authorities to protect its home to the bulk of US military facilities in the country, as they want the Futenma base to be relocated outside the prefecture.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga said the central and Okinawa governments have been in legal battles after Tokyo filed a lawsuit against Okinawa as Gov. Takeshi Onaga, who was elected on an anti-base re-location platform, revoked in October last year his predecessor’s approval for landfill work required for the relocation plan.

The Naha branch of the Fukukoua High Court ruled in September the government’s decision was “illegal,” prompting him to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Prints and permits: graphics help bring Rowling’s magical world to life

The items by graphic designers Miraphora Mina and Eduardo Lima are among the fantastical creations helping to bring to life “Harry Potter” author J.K. Rowling’s latest offering from her magical world of witches and wizards, movie “Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them.”

The duo, who met on the “Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets” set, worked on eight films in the hugely popular series, designing items like “The Daily Prophet” newspaper with moving pictures to the magically revealing “Marauder’s Map.”

Along with other creative teams from the “Harry Potter” films, they have returned with more intricate designs for spin-off “Fantastic Beasts” to help tell the new story of “magizoologist” Newt Scamander.

The movie, set 70 years before the first “Harry Potter” books, unfolds in 1926 as Scamander, played by Oscar winner Eddie Redmayne, arrives in New York with a case of magical creatures.

“It was quite an organic transition for most people because quite a lot of the people who had worked on the ‘Harry Potter’ films stayed together for ‘Fantastic Beasts,’” Mina told Reuters in an interview with Reuters at the ‘House of MinaLima’ shop at Covent Garden in London, Britain, on 15 November 2016. Prince record label sues Jay Z’s company for song streaming

LOS ANGELES — The record label for Prince has sued rap star Jay Z’s entertainment company for copyright infringement, saying it illegally offered the late musician’s songs on its music streaming service, according to court records.

The lawsuit filed in the United States District Court in Minneso- ta on Tuesday by NPG Records, claims Jay Z’s Roc Nation illegally offered such Prince hits as “If I Was Your Girlfriend” and “1999” on its subscription-based streaming service, Tidal.

Roc Nation, through its Tidal service, is exploiting many copyrighted Prince works,” according to the lawsuit. While Tidal was authorized to offer some Prince songs to its customers, the service expanded the number around the time of the musician’s death on 7 June without approval from the Prince estate trust, it claims.

Roc Nation was not immediately available for comment on the lawsuit, which seeks undisclosed damages. A musical innovator, Prince notably blended elements of jazz, funk, R&B, disco and rock in a prolific career of more than 30 albums that have sold over 36 million copies in the United States alone since 1978. His hits included “Purple Rain,” “When Doves Cry,” and “Little Red Corvette.”

He was also known as fiercely determined to maintain creative control over his music, famously changing his name to an unpronouncable symbol for several years during a bitter contract battle with Warner Bros.—Reuters
Centuries-old Ten Commandments tablet goes under hammer for $850,000

DALLAS — A 1,500-year-old stone tablet with the earliest known chiseled inscription of the Ten Commandments was sold at a US auction on Wednesday for $850,000. The two-foot (61 cm) square slab of white marble that weighs about 115 pounds (50 kg) was sold in Beverly Hills, California by Dallas-based Heritage Auctions to a buyer who now to be immediately identified.

The tablet was put up for sale by Rabbi Shaul Deutsch, founder of the Living Torah Museum, in Brooklyn, New York, with the stipulation that the buyer must put it on public display, the auction house said.

The tablet is chiseled with 20 lines of Samaritan script with principles that are fundamental to Judaism and Christianity. The inscription lists nine of the 10 commandments in the Book of Exodus, omitting “Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain” and replacing it with a rule for Samaritan worshippers, “Thou shalt not commit adultery” and replacing it in vain” and replacing it with a rule for Samaritan worshippers, the auction house said. It was probably chiseled during the late Roman or Byzantine era, between 300 and 500 A.D., and marked the entrance of an ancient synagogue that was likely destroyed by the Romans, according to the auction house.

The tablet was discovered in 1913 during excavation for a railroad line near the modern city of Yavneh in Western Israel. Someone, possibly a construction worker, acquired it and set it in a courtyard where it remained until 1943 when it was acquired by an archeologist, who owned it until his death in 2000. Deutsch acquired the tablet for temporary display through an agreement with the Israel Antiquities Authority and then bought it outright after a legal settlement. Heritage officials said, Deutsch said he wished to sell the tablet and other artifacts from his collection chronicling Jewish life and history back to antiquity to raise money for a makeover of his museum. He said he plans to transform the museum with more hands-on exhibits to attract younger visitors. “The new owner is under obligation to display the tablet for the benefit of the public,” David Michaels, director of antiquities for Heritage Auctions, said in a statement.

TOKYO — At least several hundred million yen may have been withdrawn from bank ATMs in Japan using counterfeit Chinese UnionPay cards, a source at a major Japanese bank said on Thursday, with police having arrested four Taiwanese men in connection with the fraud over the past six months.

UnionPay cards are widely used among Chinese people to make purchases. Cash withdrawals using fake UnionPay cards have been reported at numerous Japanese banks, leading the police to suspect the involvement of an overseas crime ring.

Among the four arrested, Chen Cheng-hsien, 22, was arrested on suspicion of unlawfully withdrawing a total of 450,000 yen ($4,100) by using three forged UnionPay cards at a bank ATM in Tokyo’s Shinagawa Ward on 25 October. He has admitted to the allegation, the police said.

Two other men were arrested in May and another in July. All three, who are also 22 years old, have been indicted on charges including theft.

The four men came to Japan after being recruited in Taiwan to make cash withdrawals, the police said. When arrested, they had with them roughly 200 UnionPay cards that were fake or belonging to someone other than them.

They have told the police that a man with a supervisory role gave them the cards. Tracking the cards’ use, the police have built cases for suspected fraudulent cash withdrawals worth 15.7 million yen so far. UnionPay is a bank card association established in 2002. Its cards have both credit and debit functions and can be used to withdraw money from cardholders’ accounts at the ATMs of partnered financial institutions and make purchases at businesses that accept them. — Kyodo News

Pure gold ‘takoyaki’ dumpling maker on display in Osaka

OSAKA — Gold products worth over 4 billion yen ($36.82 million), including a pure gold “takoyaki” dumpling maker, were put on display Thursday at a Takashimaya department store in Osaka.

The exhibit through Monday showcases about 1,000 gold products, some of which are for sale, including the 43.2 million yen grill cooker for takoyaki, ball-shaped flour dumplings filled with minced octopus and other ingredients — one of the emblems of Osaka’s food culture.

The grill is 21 centimeters in diameter and weighs about 3 kilograms. It comes with golden toothpicks to flip and eat the dumplings with. Kenseku Kakuichi, a 44-year-old takoyaki shop owner who offered a cooking demonstration using the grill, said it produced great dumplings with thinner outer layers than he can make with his own cooker.

An entrance display is a 2-metre-tall figure of a phoenix gilded with some 5,000 gold leaf sheets, though it is not for sale.

The exhibit also showcases a pure gold rugby ball priced at 38.88 million yen, an oval gold coin with an image of Yukimura Sanada, legendary Japanese samurai warrior of the 17th century, sold for 205,200 yen, and Buddhist altar articles. — Kyodo News

Keyboard Days festival to open in Belgrade 18 November

BELGRADE — A concert of the LP Duo ensemble will open the Keyboard Days Festival at Belgrade’s Kolarac on 18 November.

Sonja Loncar and Andrija Pavlovic, who make up the LP Duo, will perform pieces by contemporary composers as well as original music. The Quantum music project, which will be the main topic of this year’s festival, will be presented.

Vlatko Vedral and Dragan Nikolic will speak about the project, quantum physics and quantum music as a new genre, being the leaders of a team tasked with developing a hybrid piano — a new “quantum” instrument. Vlatko Vedral is the professor of quantum physics at the Oxford University and Serbia’s most famous quantum physicist.

Before the LP Duo concert, visitors will have the chance to see the hybrid piano, which is a combination of an acoustic piano and an analog and digital synthesizer, with professional guidance. — Tanjug

Murray wobbles but hangs on to beat Nishikori in thriller

LONDON — Andy Murray has already scaled the tennis summit but Japan’s Kei Nishikori did his best to loosen his footing before falling in a three-hour thriller at the ATP World Tour Finals on Wednesday.

Home favourite Murray’s insatiable will power allowed him to prevail in a brutal encounter 6-7(10), 6-4, 6-4, keeping him on course for his first title at the year-ender.

Should he achieve that in his eighth attempt it would guarantee the 29-year-old end the year as world number one ahead of Novak Djokovic who would steal back the crown if he manages a fifth straight title at the O2 Arena.

The path will be a rocky one though if Wednesday’s c h a n g e — the longest match in the event’s seven-year existence in London — is anything to go by.

Miss-firing Murray looked in trouble as Nishikori edged a 20-point tiebreak to win an 85-minute opening set.

But he clawed his way back to claim a 21st consecutive v i c t o r y in three hours and 20 minutes. It avenged his five-set defeat at the hands of Nishikori in the US Open quarter-finals — from which he had to withdraw — the run that snapped Djokovic’s 122-week hold on power.

“I wasn’t able to dictate many of the points,” Murray said. “More so in the third set. But not in the first couple. I was having to run, fight, get as many balls back as I could.”

“The line. These are the sort of matches you work so hard for.”

With two wins from two, Murray would have been assured a semi-final berth had Marin Cilic beaten Stan Wawrinka in the later group match but Wawrinka recovered from his drubbing by Nishikori to win 7-6(3), 7-6(3).

Murray will now face US Open champion Wawrinka on Friday knowing anything but a straight-sets defeat would suf-fice.

“Hopefully there will be another three days to this season and I’ll do my best to get through them,” Murray said.

Murray’s game was out of kilter throughout a first set in which Nishikori’s punchy groundstrokes led the Scot a mercy dance. But he stubbornly kept his nose in front.

He saved break points in the third, fifth and 11th games, aimed verbal volleys at coach Ivan Lendl and at one point the wedding ring he ties to a lace of his military style black shoes broke loose and threatened to roll away.

It was that kind of day and Murray screwed himself for wasting a set point at 6-5 on the Nishikori serve.

He then found himself 6-3 down in a tiebreak prompting a passage of play that had the crowd on the edge of their seats.

Nishikori missed a forehand by a whisker on his first set point and Murray tacked away a forehand to save a second. At 6-5 Nishikori, with acres of blue court gaping, chose wrong on an easy volley and Murray guessed right, clearing the ball past the Japanese from almost the front row of seats.

A dumbfounded Nishikori then saved two set points — at 6-7 and 8-9 — the second when he needed two smashes to get the ball past a clambering Murray.

He then converted his fifth set point when Murray yanked a forehead wide.

Murray promptly broke at the start of the second set but lost his head slip when Nishikori fizzesed a backhand pass to break for 4-4. Murray was reeling and Nishikori was scented victory.

Murray drew first blood in the third thanks to a netcord, then saved yet more break points — he fought off 9 from 11 in the match — in the next game before forging the 5-1 ahead. Even twice there was a twist as Nishikori mounted one last assault to reel off three games before Murray sealed victory.—Reuters

Wenger eyes golden chance to put one over Mourinho

LONDON — Arsene Wenger has probably never had a better chance of finally beating a Jose Mourinho side than when Arsenal visit Old Trafford on Saturday to face a Manchester United team in underwhelming form and ravaged by injuries and suspensions.

The Frenchman has never trumped Mourinho in 13 competitive games since they first clashed in 2004 and he has often been the loser of the pitch as well, with Mourinho taunting him about Arsenal’s lack of title success over the past decade.

But Arsenal have a good opportunity to register their first Premier League win at Old Trafford since 2006 when they face a United team that could be without six players, including their most serious defence.

Striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic is suspended and centre halves Eric Bailly and Chris Smalling are injured along with right back Antonio Valencia who is recovering from surgery on a broken arm.

There are also doubts about midfielder Marouane Fellaini and full back Luke Shaw as Mourinho grapples with the most serious injury crisis of his time at United.

Ibrahimovic’s absence will give Marcus Rashford the chance to move to his natural position as central striker for the first of four straight United home games in all competitions.

The Old Trafford faithful will be looking for signs that Mourinho is making progress despite a disappointing start to his reign which has left them sixth in the table, six points behind fourth-placed Arsenal and eight adrift of leaders Liverpool.

Wenger’s main injury doubt cleared up on Tuesday when defender Alexis Sanchez, whom he had urged to miss Chile’s World Cup qualifier with Uruguay after tweaking a hamstring, showed no ill-effects after scoring twice in a 3-1 comeback win.

For once, Arsenal, who had 11 other players on full international duty last week, will be confident of winning on a ground where Wenger has often emerged as an angry second best, most notably in 2011 when they were humiliated 8-2.

Liverpool travel to Southampton with a major doubt over their former Saints midfielder Adam Lallana, who suffered a groin injury after scoring a penalty for England in their 2-2 friendly draw with Spain on Tuesday.—Reuters

Price of watching Premier League falling — BBC study

LONDON — The cost of watching Premier League football has fallen according to a BBC survey, which found that more than two thirds of ticket prices have been either cut or frozen this season.

The BBC’s Price of Football survey found that an away ticket in the second tier Championship can now be more expensive than for a Premier League match, with top-flight clubs having capped prices for visiting fans at 30 pounds (£37.32).

“Clubs are listening to their fans and working hard to make sure that Premier League football is accessible as well as competitive and compelling,” the Premier League said in a statement.

The fall in ticket prices comes in the first season of the Premier League’s bumper new 8 billion pounds global television rights deal.

The survey found that the average cost of the cheapest adult home Premier League ticket has decreased by six per cent (from 30.95 pounds to 29.05), while a cap of 30 pounds on away ticket prices has led to the average cost of the most expensive away ticket dropping 37 per cent (from 46.44 pounds to 29.44).

This is now lower than the average cost of the most expensive away ticket in the Championship (31.57 pounds).

Malcolm Clarke, chairman of the Football Supporters’ Federation, however, suggested prices could still be cut further and not harm clubs financially.

“On their current 8.3 billion pound deal, the Premier League could afford to let every single fan in free for every game and still have as much money as they had under the previous deal,” he was quoted as saying by the BBC.

“That gives you an idea of the scale of the amount of money they have got.”—Reuters
