2nd Pyidaungsu Hluttaw 3rd regular session’s 8th day meeting held

At yesterday’s Pyidaungsu Hluttaw meeting, Major General Aung Soe, the Deputy Minister for Home Affairs, clarified the approval of Myanmar’s admission into the ASEAN Convention Against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women & Children. “Admission into the ASEAN Convention will help the country to effectively control the crimes of border crossing and human trafficking activated by gangsters.

Now, the 2015 human trafficking eradication law is being amended, with rules and regulations to be drafted according to the new law. As per the ASEAN Convention for the country to enter now, ASEAN member countries are required to cooperate with countries of origin, transit or destination, under any circumstances, regarding the main objectives of taking responsibility, protection of human trafficking, filing cases and giving care to victims of human trafficking. This will help strengthen the commitments of regional and international cooperation.”

As regards the approval of Myanmar’s admission into ASEAN’s convention, 18 parliamentarians took part in the discussion and the Hluttaw approved it.

In the discussion, Daw Cho Cho of Oaktwin constituency said, “Trafficking in persons is attributed to poverty, unemployment and lack of rights and opportunities. Most victims of human trafficking are women under 18, and in Myanmar 2,009 girls under 18 and 86 boys were victims of human trafficking.”

Dr Daw Myin Win Myint of Mayangone constituency in Yangon Region said, “Myanmar, Cambodia, Laos and Thailand in south-eastern countries and China are closely related and they are notorious places of human trafficking. According to reports, human trafficking took place based on different development among neighboring countries, the existence of long border between countries and weakness of security in border areas. In Myanmar, women and children were mostly victims trafficked to Thailand and China. The agreement should be signed for approval as soon as possible, to save the lives of women and children and to be proud of ourselves as a country that can safeguard the rights of children and women.”

Dr Daw Khin Sithu of Loikaw constituency said, “Shan State is the most affected area in Myanmar in terms of human trafficking, followed by Yangon Region, Chin State and Kayah State. The government and the whole populace are required to actively take part in protecting from these inhumane activities. Particular facts should be included in school curricula to know how to avoid these situations.”

Dr Win Myint Chit of constituency 8 of Bago Region, Dr San Shwe Win of Ye constituency, Daw Htu May of constituency 11 of Rakhine State, Daw Nan Than Than Lwin of constituency of Pa-an, Dr Mya Thaung of constituency 7 of Bago, U Nyan Lin of Shwe Pyi Tha constituency, U Oo Kkaw Min of constituency 8 of Tanintharyi Region, U Nyi Sein of constituency 3, in Shan State, Daw Nan Htwe Thu of Phasaung constituency, U Kan Oo of Salin constituency, Daw Khin Hnin Thu of Padaung constituency, U Hla Oo of constituency 4, in Sagaing Region, U Sai Pan Pha of constituency 12 in Kayah State, Daw Shwe Shwe Sein Latt of constituency 3 in Bago Region and Daw Tin Tin Yi of Kyunzup constituency supported the motion respectively.

Yesterday’s meeting also recorded the appointments of U Min Thu as deputy minister for the President’s Office, and U Hla Kyaw as deputy minister for agriculture for reducing and eliminating anti-irrigation. Afterward, U Ohn Maung, Union Minister for Hotels and Tourism, addressed the matter concerning signing the agreement on establishing coordination on greater Mekong countries, sent back by the President of the State.

The Speaker of the Hluttaw announced he would enroll the names to discuss in the meeting.

Villager abducted by armed group in Maungtaw

Acting on a phone tip that claimed an armed group had abducted a villager, security forces conducted an investigation Tuesday night and found out that herby Roman from Thawunchaung (North) Village in Muangtaw Township was kidnapped by a 17-member armed group.

It was later discovered that the armed group led by Mawlawi Zubaing fired shots and abducted Herby Roman at his home in Thawunchaung Ywathl Village. Security forces found a bullet shell casing in the kitchen of the abduction and conducting area clearance operations in the eastern portion of Thawunchaung Village.

Security forces also seized two 90-foot long, 4.5-foot wide pieces of cloth commonly used to make uniforms hidden in a thatch plantaion near Leikai Village in the township on Monday.

Security forces also seized two activated improvised land mines in bags along with auto-mobile pistols used in making land mines while conducting area clearance operations in the hills near Mayintaung and Hmawtauang.—Myanmar News Agency

Freshwater fish garden to be opened in 2017

A freshwater fish garden that had been scheduled to open last month will now open early next year due to construction delays, it is learnt from the Yangon region fisheries department.

“Our freshwater fish garden will be opened in 2017, to enable the opening of ornamental fish showrooms. Actually, we expect to open in November 2016. We had to spend five months just to seek the approval of the Myanmar Investment Commission”, said U Tun Win Myint, the head of Yangon region fisheries department.

Local ornamental fish entrepreneurs can pursue a business jointly with foreign ornamental fish entrepreneurs. Also, local and foreign professionals can now conduct research for their research papers at the freshwater fish garden, officials said.

“The authorities have not made any official announcement. When they start to implement the project, we will move out from the Friday market. We are not sure yet whether our ornamental fish market will be good or bad,” said U Sai, chairman of Myanmar’s Ornamental Fish Entrepreneurs Association.

Most of the ornamental fish keepers are doing it as a part-time hobby. The prices of ornamental fish vary depending on the variety. Currently, ornamental fish keepers are faced with space problems, it is learnt.—Myanmar News Agency

Trial of Eleven Media CEO and chief editor postponed

THE trial of the CEO and the chief editor of the Eleven Media Group was postponed yesterday after the prison doctor applied for an exemption from appearing at the court as witness.

The CEO and the chief editor have been sued by the Yangon Region Government under Section 66 (D) of the Communication Law.

“Today’s trial was supposed to hear from the prison doctor of U Than Tun Aung, the CEO, but the doctor was not available and we asked for the medical certificate at the next hearing,” the Tamway Township judge told Myanmar News Agency.

U Kyi Myint, the lawyer representing Dr Than Tun Aung, applied for bail on health grounds after the accused had suffered from a fall, but the court rejected the application on 9th December.

Then the lawyer applied for bail for his client again, the court summoned the prison medical officer, but the doctor applied for an exemption from appearing at the court as a witness as there are only six doctors working for healthcare services, sanitation and food inspection at the prison, one of the biggest prisons in Myanmar.

“The doctor asked for an exemption from appearing at the court as a witness as he is too busy to appear at the court. I have never heard of such an application for exemption from appearing at the court as a witness in my life. My client has lost his right to justice,” said attorney U Kyi Myint.

The trial was adjourned to 22 December.—ZawGyi (Panita)

Traffic accidents in Mandalay kill 638, injure 3,124

SIX-HUNDRED and thirty-eight people died and 3,124 others were injured in road accidents across Mandalay over the past 11 months, according to regional traffic police.

The number of traffic accidents that occurred across the seven districts in the region this year topped 2,000, an increase of over 110 cases compared with the same period last year.

The traffic fatalities rate far exceeded last year’s total, although non-fatal injuries declined by about 100. In the first 11 months of 2015, a total of 1,878 cases were reported, leaving nearly 600 people dead and 3,226 injured.

Among all districts in the region, PyinOoLwin reported the most accidents with 434 cases, followed by Kaukse with 420 cases, Mandalay with 358 cases, Meiktila with 316 cases, Yamein with 168 cases, NyaungU with 165 cases and Myingyan with 158 cases.

A member of the traffic police said the high death toll in road accidents is due to both drivers and pedestrians who fail to abide by traffic safety rules and regulations. Traffic rule enforcement efforts have been made throughout the district to reduce road-related deaths in the region.—Khine Mye

Mine explosion kills two in Shan State

Four people died and 23 individuals sustained injuries in 80 cases of vehicles catching fire in the first nine months of this year across Myanmar, according to the Fire Services Department. Between January and September, a total of 80 cases of vehicles catching fire were reported across the country. Total losses from the fires reached over Ks26.2 million, the department official said.

Yangon topped the list of cities with the most car fires with 22 cases, including fatal accidents. The loss from the accidents in the commercial capital totalled about Ks14.1 million.

Similarly, at 6:20 pm or so, on 14 December, KIA, TNLA armed groups attacked a convoy of Tatmataw vehicles bound for Lashio from Hsenwi, performing their regular administrative duties with 2 remote-controlled mines, killing Maung Tun Naing, the driver of a 12-wheeled truck by shrapnel from the mine. The Fire Services Department continues to urge people to follow suggestions provided by the department to reduce possible losses in cases of vehicles catching fire.

Reasons for the vehicles catching fire are overheating, battery explosion and electrical issues, the head of the department said.

According to departmental records, 14 cases of cars catching fire occurred in January, 13 cases in February, 10 cases in March, nine cases in April, 11 cases in May, five cases in June, two cases in August and 11 cases in September.—200

Six people arrested for electro-fishing in Thabaung

SIX people were arrested for fishing with the use of illegal battery-powered shock machines by local people at Ta-bubonsar Creek, Thabaung Township, Ayeyawady Region yesterday.

U Zaw Khine, U Thura, U Than Oo, U Ko Win, U Maung Maung and U Nay Min were arrested. Local villagers also seized nine batteries, an electric-shock machine, two pipes and a boat.

“We arrested them when we found them fishing using the method of electro-fishing. It is an illegal fishing method,” said U Soe Naing, a local villager.

The illegal fishermen are avaricious, with a self-centred mentality. Their actions can adversely affect fish resources. We are planning to send them to the fisheries department,” said U Than Win, the village administrator.—Myitmaukha News Agency

MYANMAR’s real estate sector attained foreign direct investments of US$3.111.451 billion as of the end of November in the current fiscal year, according to the statistics of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

In the same period, over US$690 million of Myanmar citizen investments flowed into real estate development activities. The real estate sector ranks fifth in the foreign investment sector, whereas the oil and gas sector is at the top of the list with an investment of US$222.410.368 million. The FDI in the real estate sector constitutes 4.64 per cent of total foreign investments.

One third of the country’s population lives in urban areas, prompting authorities to implement numerous urban development projects. The real estate sector is thus required to improve and grow in line with the burgeoning urban population, experts said. Most of Yangon residents stay in rented housing, so the rental market of real property is the most active. Plots of land in suburban areas are selling well.

The construction ministry is developing projects to sell fair-and-low-cost apartments through an instalment plan via the Construction and Housing Development Bank. In addition, private developers have been found to sell their apartments under instalment plan.

Individual car importers need to seek permit in person

THOSE who want to individually import cars are required to seek permits in person, and asking somebody to do it will result in a denial of the permit, according to an announcement released by the Supervision Committee for Motor Vehicle Import.

Representatives, company staff and anyone else other than the actual importer are not permitted to apply for a free permit on car imports starting from 12th December because there are unscrupulous importers seeking free permits with the documents of others or forged National Registration Cards. Authorities will take immediate action against them.

Additionally, the photo of the license seeker will be recorded and affixed to the import license, stated on the announcement of the above said committee.

Car import licenses have to be applied for by 23rd December this year. The deadline for seeking a car import license was set at 28th December last year, according to the Commerce Ministry.— Ko Htar

Hatching rate of prawns plunges over 80 per cent within eight years

The hatching rate of prawns has dropped significantly since 2008, plunging 80 per cent in 2016, according to the Myanmar Shrimp Association.

The hatching rate plummeted after Cyclone Nargis devastated Myanmar. Previously, a hatchery could produce up to 5 million of prawns. Now, only 600,000 prawns can be produced per hatchery, said U Soe Myint, the joint-secretary of Myanmar Shrimp Association.

Prawn businessmen and experts are planning to discuss how to boost the production rate, according to the association.

The drop in production rate is also attributed to the high cost of feedstuff and other general costs, plus requirements in infrastructure, he added.

Additionally, the hatching rate declined due to diseases. The Myanmar Fishery Federation (MFF) is making an effort to prevent prawns from diseases, said Daw Toe Nanda Tin, the vice chair of the MFF.

Competent authorities and entrepreneurs need to cooperate for the shrimp farming business to raise its head again, she added.

South Korea presidential hopeful: US missile defence should wait

SEOUL — The former leader of South Korea’s main opposition party, who is leading polls of candidates to be the next president, said on Thursday deployment of a US anti-missile system that has antagonized China should be decided by the next administration.

Moon Jae-in, 63, who lost the last presidential election to Park Geun-hye by 3 percentage points, confirmed he would run in the next election, which is scheduled for the end of 2017 but could be much sooner if a Constitutional Court upholds an impeachment vote against Park and she has to leave office.

South Korea and the United States agreed this year to deploy a Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) anti-missile system in response to North Korean nuclear and ballistic missile tests.

But China vehemently opposes the system’s deployment in South Korea, fearing its radar would be able to penetrate its territory. Russia also opposes it.

The missile system has also raised opposition in South Korea, particularly in the area where it is due to be based.

Under the circumstances, Park following a vote in parliament to impeach her last week, the timing of the next election and the change of administration in the United States have contributed to questions about the timing of the deployment of the system.

Moon told a news conference in Seoul it should await a new president in South Korea.

“It is inappropriate for the THAAD deployment process to go under the current political circumstances,” he said.

The commander of US Forces Korea said last month the THAAD battery would be deployed to South Korea within eight to 10 months.

Moon held out the possibility of renegotiating the agreement to deploy the system, saying doing so would not damage relations with the United States.

He said if elected, he would work to maintain strong ties with the United States, which has 28,500 troops in South Korea.

Duterte continues to enjoy high satisfaction ratings

MANILA — Almost six months since his election, Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte continues to enjoy a high satisfaction rating of 77 per cent among Filipinos almost six months since his election, despite his controversial remarks and policies that have ruffled feathers domestically and abroad, an opinion poll released Thursday showed.

A 3-6 December survey by Social Weather Stations showed Duterte scored 1 percentage point higher than in a similar survey in September. The survey also showed 13 per cent of the 1,500 respondents were dissatisfied, while 10 per cent were undecided.

Duterte’s net rating of 63 percent, the rounded-up difference between those satisfied and dissatisfied, was a point lower than that in the September survey, but described by the pollster as “very good,” second to the highest classification of “excellent.”

The highest net satisfaction rating recorded since the SWS began conducting the survey was by then President Corazon Aquino, who scored 72 per cent in October 1986.

Duterte’s first five months in office have been marked by his intense campaign against illegal drugs and criminality, the shift of his foreign policy to establish friendly relations with China and Russia and a cooler one with traditional ally the United States, and his colourful language, particularly directed at US President Barack Obama, UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, and the European Union, among others.

He also allowed the burial of the remains of the late dictator Ferdinand Marcos at the country’s Cemetery for the Heroes amid opposition from victims of martial law.

In the same survey, 51 per cent agreed that “Duterte’s habit of publicly cursing foreign or international officials whom he does not like is harmful to the Philippines with the countries or institution of those officials.”

Meanwhile, 33 per cent disagreed, while 17 per cent were undecided.

Thai PM defends cyber controls as censorship concerns rise

BANGKOK — Thai Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-ocha on Thursday defended a decision to amend a cyber-crime law to increase the military government’s ability to remove online content as authorities seek to tighten control on dissent.

A royal transition this month saw new King Maha Vajiralongkorn ascend the throne.

Groups of Seven members and Russia’s ties deteriorated with November 2005. His visit was initiated by the war.

Japan, as neighbours from signing a post-World War II peace treaty.

Japan says the islands — Etorofu, Kunashiri, Shikotan and the Habomai islet group — are their inherent territory that were illegally seized by the Soviet Union after Japan’s surrender in World War II in August 1945. Russia says the Soviet Union took the islands legitimately as the result of the war.

Putin’s trip to Japan is the first by a Russian president since November 2005. His visit was initially eyed for 2014 but postponed as Russia’s ties deteriorated with Group of Seven members and other Western countries following Moscow’s annexation of Crimea in Ukraine.

Japan does not deny the idea but takes the stance they need to be conducted in a way that would not lead to recognizing Russian sovereignty over the islands, the sources said.

Japan as a G-7 member retains united with the European countries and the United States in imposing economic sanctions on Russia for the Crimea annexation, a move Moscow is not happy with.

Tokyo also says it needs to maintain close dialogue with Washington, its main security ally whose relations with Russia have hit a low over the Ukrainian and Syrian issues.

Aside from the motivation to move the island issue forward, Abe is also looking to forge closer ties with Russia in the security area, according to the rising assertiveness of China at sea and amid the intensifying nuclear development and missile activities in North Korea.

After staying in the hot spa resort overnight, Abe and Putin will travel to Tokyo the following day for another round of meetings focused on economic cooperation, hold a joint press conference and attend a business forum before Putin concludes his trip, Japanese officials said.

Abe and Putin were meeting for the 16th time, including during Abe’s first stint as prime minister from 2006 to 2007.

The current law says officials need court approval to remove content.

“This law is for when anyone posts something that is poisonous to society so that we know where it comes from,” Prayuth told reporters.

“Don’t think this is a rights violation. This isn’t what we call a rights violation ... this is what we call a law to be used against those who violate the law,” he said.

South Korea’s powerful business lobby group dealt big blow by Park scandal

SEOUL — Long the voice of the conglomerates that form the engine of South Korea’s economy, the Federation of Korean Industries could become another casualty of the scandal that is poised to cost President Park Geun-hye her job, as key members flee.

The FKI, whose board is made up of the chiefs of the country’s conglomerates, or chaebols, has been the nexus for close ties between government and big business. It formed the two noble foundations, Mir and K-Sports, backing Park initiatives that are central to the current political crisis.

Prosecutors have charged Park’s friend Choi Soon-sil with colluding with the president into pressuring conglomerates such as the Samsung Group [SAGRUL] to pay funds to the foundations.

Last week, Jo Y. Lee, scion of the Samsung Group, the FKI’s largest member, said it will leave the group, prompting others including the LG Group, SK Group and state-run banks including the Industrial Bank of Korea (IBK) and Export-Import Bank of Korea (KEXIM) to follow suit, raising questions over whether the group can survive in its current form.

“Don’t think this is a rights violation. This isn’t what we know where it comes from,” Prayuth told reporters.

Danger of steps taken with ulterior motive

We welcome the news that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi is planning a meeting with foreign ministers of ASEAN nations. The planned meeting with the foreign ministers will be a step taken in the right direction—a step taken to consolidate the existing friendly and co-operative tradition within the ASEAN family of nations.

The use of made-up and ugly photos as a tool to smear the good image of Myanmar abroad shows that there are linkages among the destructive forces inside and outside of Myanmar.

The Rakhine incident probably has its roots with that imagined race those insurgents held out with the intention of imposing on the minds of Myanmar people and international public. There had never been such a race among the indigenous races of Myanmar.

It is learnt that the Ministry of Religious Affairs is planning to prove the non-existence of such a race with the help of unbiassed research conducted by respectable historians.

Successive Myanmar governments have seen to it that those foreigners who had stayed in Myanmar within the prescribed period of time in the manner required by its laws had been given the status of naturalized citizenship. But the demands made by those whose citizenship is in question exceeded the bounds of reason. They are demanding that the whole lot of them be recognized as citizens irrespective of the law governing citizenship. Had they been recognized as citizens irrespective of the law the next step would inevitably be a demand for a state of their own—a state separate to the whole Myanmar people.

There are only around 3 million ethnic Arakanese in Rakhine State. But the nation on the other side exceeds a population of 160 million. It is natural for a large number of surplus citizens from that nation to cross the border and settle down in the sparsely populated state next door. Although successive governments have given citizenship status to those who are qualified for it, the whole lot of people who made their way into the state could not be given citizenship regardless of their real status.

No nation in the world has ever done such a thing (Myanmar laws promulgated in accordance with justice should gain international acceptance.)

The state has conspired to be fringed upon the freedom of faith or human rights of those who entered Myanmar. If the international community really had good intentions to help resolve the conflicts and reduce the tension prevailing in Rakhine State, they should promote peaceful co-existence among differing races of people and differing religious beliefs. They should also create employment opportunities for both communities equitably. That, we think, is the only way to develop and pacify the state and make it prosperous and happy.

EU leaders to hold ‘minefield’ summit

BRUSSELS — Leaders of the European Union meet in Brussels on Thursday for a summit fraught with disputes on how to handle the many crises they face, bar on possibly the biggest rift of all — how to handle Brexit.

After a day of talks on migrants, Turkey, Russia, defence in the era of Donald Trump and the euro zone economy in the age of austerity, leaders will see British Prime Minister Theresa May out and then agree over dinner how to get rid of her for good.

Diplomats and officials involved in preparing the quarterly European Council said a consensus on the procedures the 27 will adopt once May launches Britain’s formal withdrawal by March had been among the least divisive issues on the table.

“We are walking on a minefield,” a senior EU official said.

The 28 leaders will start with a review of where they stand on dealing with the crisis which blew up last year when over a million people, many war refugees from Syria, reached Europe, mostly via Turkey by boat to the Greek islands.

Satisfaction that the route is all but closed is shaded by unease at how this was achieved: tightening controls on borders within Europe, sealing Greece off from the Balkans and offering inducements to awkward neighbour Turkey to stop people leaving.

Leaders will reaffirm their commitment to keeping promises to Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan despite anger at the way he has cracked down on critics after a coup attempt six months ago.

But the Austrian government, battling anti-immigrant opponents at home, blocked a broader statement on Turkey one day joining the EU because Vienna had insisted that the summit formally suspend Ankara’s EU membership talks.

Britain’s May to brief Brussels as EU prepares for Brexit talks

BRUSSELS — Prime Minister Theresa May will update Britain’s partners in Brussels on Thursday on her plans to launch talks by March on quitting the EU, and they will settle their arrangements for the negotiations.

May will join an EU summit starting after 12 pm (1100 GMT) to discuss issues from migration to the economy, security and building up defences against Russia as Donald Trump prepares to enter the White House with an agenda many Europeans fear may dilute the historic US military commitment to protect them from Moscow.

Summit chair Donald Tusk said in a tweet that May will “update” the leaders on Brexit preparations before she leaves early in the evening to let the other 27 EU leaders agree their own strategy over dinner.

An aide to May stressed ahead of the meeting that she saw no problem in not being included — rather saw it as a positive — and said the premier was determined to open the two-year window for divorce talks within three months despite doubts raised by a court case that seeks more parliamentary control of the process.

They are facing up to the reality that the UK is leaving the EU,” the aide told reporters. “That means they are going to need to know how they are going to handle the process.”

Continental governments have been impatient for May to start a process which they see as being held up by divisions in London on what to ask for in a Brexit which even few of its supporters had thought likely before the shock referendum vote in June.

They will end their dinner debate by issuing a statement saying they are ready to start talks with London and stand by a commitment made in the days after the referendum to negotiate swiftly, to stick together to preserve the Union and to ensure Britain does not retain EU benefits, for instance on trade access, if it shirks obligations, such as accepting EU migrants.

“They stand ready to start negotiations with the UK as soon as the UK has notified a draft of the statement said.

It went on to detail how the Council of EU leaders would give a negotiating mandate to the UK’s executive arm, the European Commission, while ensuring national governments were kept in the loop by officials named by Tusk to sit in on talks run by the commission’s negotiator, former French minister Michel Barnier.

One party less than its usual allies, the EU has lined up its main partners including particularly Germany as its representatives to the Brexit talks, even as it has done with the US on the Trans-Pacific Partnership.

Meanwhile, French minister Michel Barnier raised the possibility of a so-called “hard Brexit” by a growing number of EU leaders, which May herself has described as an “archaic” threat.

The French minister said that Davies’s vote to leave the 28-nation bloc in June, the Nordic country last December rejected a government proposal for new laws needed to keep the country inside the European police agency.

Since then, Prime Minister Lars Lokke Rasmussen has sought a compromise to maintain police cooperation with the EU and access to Europol’s database, crucial to acquire information from other EU police forces. EU leaders Jean-Claude Juncker and Donald Tusk said in a joint statement with Rasmussen on Thursday that they had agreed on the need for operational arrangements, to minimise the negative impact of Denmark’s departure in May. — Reuters

Germany’s parliament approves nuclear waste deal with utilities

BERLIN — Germany’s lower house of parliament approved a new law on Thursday which will see the country’s top utilities pay into a 23.6 billion-euro ($24.8 billion) state fund from next year in return for shifting the liability for nuclear waste storage to the government.

The new legislation removes uncertainty over how to pay for the costs of storing nuclear waste, giving investors greater clarity over the finances of Germany’s top four utilities — E.ON, RWE, EnBW and Vattenfall. The energy firms will remain responsible for dismantling Germany’s 171 decommissioned reactors, but will be shut down in 2022 as part of the country’s abandonment of nuclear power, a decision triggered by Japan’s Fukushima disaster five years ago.

“I am glad we have succeeded in reaching an agreement on the disposal of nuclear waste in the future,” German Economy Minister Sigmar Gabriel told parliament. — Reuters

Japan’s oldest man, 112-year-old Masamitsu Yoshida, dies

TOKYO — The oldest man in Japan, 112-year-old Masamitsu Yoshida, a resident of Tokyo’s Ota Ward, has died, welfare ministry officials said on Thursday.

The Health, Labour and Welfare Ministry was informed of Yoshida’s death, on 29 October, by the Tokyo metropolitan government on Wednesday.

The oldest man in the country is now 111-year-old Masa Nomaka, who lives in Ashoro, Hokkaido. He was born on 25 July, 1905. The oldest person in Japan is 116-year-old Nabi Tajima, a woman in the town of Kikai, Kagoshima Prefecture, who was born on 4 August, 1900. — Kyodo News

EU, Denmark find deal on Europl after Danes voted to quit

BRUSSELS — The European Union and Denmark have found a way to continue police cooperation vital to counter-terrorism and crime fighting after Danes voted to leave Europol, the EU said on Thursday.

Foreshadowing Britain’s vote to leave the 28-nation bloc in June, the Nordic country last December rejected a government proposal for new laws needed to keep the country inside the European police agency.

Since then, Prime Minister Lars Lokke Rasmussen has sought a compromise to maintain police cooperation with the EU and access to Europol’s database, crucial to acquire information from other EU police forces. Dozens of Afghans deported from Germany arrive in Kabul

KABUL — A group of 38 Afghans arrived in Kabul from Germany on Thursday, the first to be deported under an agreement reached between the two countries this year, following the rejection of their applications for asylum.

Thousands of Afghans joined asylum-seekers from the Middle East and elsewhere entering Europe from 2015, and became the second biggest group of asylum seekers in Germany in 2016 after Syrians, according to German data.

A charter plane carrying the Afghans, all men, arrived in the Afghan capital from Frankfurt, a Reuters journalist at Kabul’s airport said. — Reuters

EU urges Kosovo to implement agreement on Community

BRUSSELS — On behalf of the Council of the EU, the Slovak EU Presidency has urged Kosovo authorities to implement the agreement on forming the Community of Serb Municipalities and cooperate with a court set up to try war crimes by the former “KLA”.

“The Council urges Kosovo to swiftly implement in good faith its part of all past agreements, in particular the establishment of the Association/Community of Serb majority municipalities and to engage constructively with Serbia in formulating and implementing future agreements,” an official statement said.

“The Council welcomes that Kosovo met its remaining obligation on the establishment of the Specialist Chambers and Specialist Prosecution Office to investigate allegations of international crimes committed during and after the 1999 conflict. All authorities in Kosovo should comply with their requests for assistance,” it said. — Tanjug
ALEPPO, (Syria)/BEIRUT — An attempt to evacuate people in need of medical attention from rebel-held eastern Aleppo stalled on Thursday when fighters loyal to the Syrian government fired on the convoy, wounding three, the head of the ambulance service said.

The vehicles had intended to leave under a deal to evacuate people from rebel areas following rapid advances in Aleppo by government forces.

The evacuation of the last rebel enclave would end years of fighting for the city and mark a major victory for Syrian President Bashar al-Assad.

“The convoy was shot at by regime forces and we have three injured, one of them from civil defence … They were brought back to besieged areas,” ambulance service chief Ahmed Sweid told pro-opposition Orient TV.

A Reuters witness in nearby government-held territory heard a burst of gunfire that lasted several minutes.

An official with an Aleppo rebel group said the medical convoy had stopped before clearing the besieged eastern part of the city.

A Syrian official source told Reuters earlier on Thursday that efforts to organise the departure of fighters from east Aleppo had begun and the International Committee of the Red Cross said it had been asked to assist with the evacuation.

A Reuters witness in government-held territory said columns of black smoke could be seen rising out of the rebel-held area. Thirty green buses guarded by Syrian soldiers were waiting to ferry people out of eastern Aleppo.

Residents hoping to be taken out have been burning personal belongings they cannot take with them. “Outside every building you see a small fire, papers, women’s clothes,” a resident of eastern Aleppo told Reuters.

Russian soldiers were preparing to lead rebels out of Aleppo, the defence ministry in Moscow said. Syria had guaranteed the safety of rebels and their families, who would be taken toward Idlib, a city in northwestern Syria.

Russia would use drones to monitor how rebels and their families were transported on 20 buses, accompanied by 10 ambulances, along a humanitarian corridor, the ministry said.

A truce brokered by Russia, Assad’s most powerful ally, and opposition backers Turkey and Saudi Arabia broke down following renewed fighting on Wednesday and the evacuation did not take place as planned.

An official from the Ja-ha Shamayy rebel group said a new truce came into effect at 2.30am (0030GMT) on Thursday.

Shortly before the new deal was announced, clashes raged in Aleppo.

Government forces made a new advance in Sukkari — one of a handful of districts still held by rebels — and brought half of the neighbourhood under their control, according to the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a monitoring group.

Rebels said they attacked government forces with suicide car bombs.

The Russian defence ministry said — before the report of the government forces’ advance in Sukka-ni — that the rebels controlled an enclave of only 2.5 square km (1 square mile). —Reuters

UN’s Egeland: hopeful about Aleppo deal but UN involved late

GENEVA — UN humanitarian adviser for Syria Jan Egeland said on Thursday that he was hopeful about the evacuation of thousands of civilians from eastern Aleppo but that Russia had only just asked for UN involvement, which was very late.

“We are now receiving information from the Russians that they would indeed want us to participate in the evacuation, but confirmation only seems to come now, this morning, which is very late, because it is already ongoing and there have already been security incidences,” Egeland told Reuters.

“Thousands of people are in need of evacuation, but the first and most urgent thing is wounded, sick and children, including orphans,” he said. “I am really hopeful because it’s long, long overdue.” —Reuters

Kabul security gates in storage as Afghan officials trade accusations

KABUL — A set of giant security gates financed by China and intended to protect Kabul from large bombs and drug smuggling he stored in a warehouse more than five months after they arrived, while Afghan authorities bicker over who should install them.

Intended for the four main entry points into Kabul, they have been delayed by infighting between departments and by a land dispute, underlining the difficulty of getting things done in a country where conflict and corruption have slowed progress.

The hangar-style gates, each weighing around 30 tonnes, are to reinforce the so-called “Ring of Steel” that surrounds Kabul, a city of five million people already protected by blast walls, armed checkpoints and eye-in-the-sky surveillance cameras. Although there are many entrances to the city, security officials believe channelling large vehicles through the gates could help reduce the risk of big truck and car bombs that have previously wrought devastation in Kabul.

The gates are to be equipped with control rooms and surveillance scanners to enhance inspections of vehicles.

Civilian deaths are rising across the country as Afghan Taliban insurgents backer Turkey on Tuesday backed up government and drive out foreign troops, while an offshoot of Islamic State has claimed responsibility for several attacks in the last year.

Not all are carried out by car or truck bombs, but in September a car bomb went off outside a central Kabul security office during rush hour, killing dozens of people. —Reuters
Japan, US holds antinuclear disaster drill at Yokosuka base

YOKOSUKA, (Japan) — Japan and the United States held a joint antinuclear disaster drill at the US Navy’s Yokosuka base in Kanagawa Prefecture near Tokyo on Thursday.

The drill was conducted on the supposition a blackout occurred in the city of Yokosuka following an earthquake measuring upper 6 on the Japanese seismic intensity scale of 7 with its epicenter beneath the Izu Peninsula on which the base is located.

Around 270 people, including officials from the US Navy, Japan’s Foreign Ministry and the US Embassy in Japan, participated in the drill. The nuclear-powered US aircraft carrier Ronald Reagan has been deployed at Yokosuka, southwest of Tokyo, since 2015.

In the drill, a team of officials from Japan’s Nuclear Regulation Authority set up transportable monitoring posts, on the assumption the blackout prevented monitoring posts which measure radiation levels around the base from sending data.

“It was a significant drill as we could conduct it following the manual,” said Yokosuka Mayor Yuto Yoshida.

He said if a quake measuring stronger than lower 6 on the Japanese seismic scale hits, the Japanese government can confirm the situation of US Navy vessels through the US embassy.

The drill was the 10th in a series that began in 2007.—Kyodo News

Russia to appeal Dutch ruling to return Crimean treasures to Ukraine

MOSCOW — Russia will appeal a Dutch court ruling that said a priceless collection of gold artifacts from Crimea on loan to a Dutch museum must be returned to Ukraine, the director of St Petersburg’s Hermitage Museum has said.

The collection, including gems, helmets and scabbards, was on loan to Amsterdam’s Allard Pierson Museum when Russia annexed Crimea from Ukraine in 2014. Kiev and Crimean museums have been wrangling over its fate ever since.

On Wednesday, a Dutch court ruled that only sovereign countries could claim such objects as cultural heritage, and that since only Ukraine, not Crimea, was sovereign, it was for an Ukrainian court to adjudicate competing ownership claims.

Mikhail Piotrovsky, director of the world-famous Hermitage Museum and one of Russia’s most senior cultural figures, told a news conference after the ruling, that Russian lawyers were preparing to appeal the decision.

The Dutch court’s decision disregarded guarantees given to the Crimean museums that the artifacts would be returned to them, he said.

“A Crimean museum’s things belong in a Crimean museum. That is fair, because they were found in that land,” said Piotrovsky.

He said the Dutch ruling was part of what he called a rising trend of using claims over cultural treasures to pursue other aims.

“It’s important that there are cultural rights, and not [just] government and individual rights,” said Piotrovsky.—Reuters

Life after the caliphate: Boko Haram’s Nigerian stronghold now a safe haven

BAMA, (Nigeria) — In the northern Nigerian town of Bama, the streets are eerily quiet. Houses lie empty, riddled with bullet holes, and symbols of the jihadist group Boko Haram are painted on the walls.

Bama, once the militants’ stronghold, was liberated from the Islamist fighters by the Nigerian army in March 2015, but is only reached safely by helicopter — the roads still too dangerous because of the risk of ambush by the insurgents.

Despite its ghastly atmosphere and violent history, the town is now a safe haven for around 10,000 people, among more than two million in Nigeria who have fled areas held by Boko Haram. Two years ago, when militants seized Bama and rounded up all the men, 55-year-old Malam Wana hid in his house for a month, surviving on grain and sending his wife out to collect water.

When Wana was eventually discovered by Boko Haram fighters, they took him to the yard of Bama prison, crowded with men.

“They spared the older men, but took the others out of the prison and shot them all,” said Wana, who was released due to his elderly appearance before fleeing to a nearby village.

Since the town’s liberation, Wana has lived in Bama’s camp for those uprooted by the conflict. The walled compound, full of makeshift shelters covered by tarpaulins bearing the names of aid groups, is home to 10,000 people who have fled fighting.

Some like Wana are from Bama itself — forbidden from leaving the confines of the camp as the town has been designated a military security zone. Most camp dwellers are from surrounding villages, many of which are still controlled by insurgents. Those who have reached Bama are the lucky ones.

Abdi Farah, an official at the UN World Food Programme (WFP) in Maiduguri told The Thomson Reuters Foundation that some areas still controlled by Boko Haram are out of the reach of aid agencies.

In many areas north of Bama, people are suffering “Tamine-like conditions” and millions are in need of urgent food aid in order to survive, according to several United Nations agencies.

Although they feel safer in Bama, the thousands displaced by conflict face a new set of problems on arrival. Kelu, 20, had just been dropped off by pick-up truck with her two infant sons.—Reuters

Colombia’s FARC rebels expel five commanders opposed to peace deal

BOGOTA — Colombia’s FARC rebels have expelled five commanders for refusing to demobilize and join a peace process with the government aimed at ending more than five decades of war, guerrilla leader said.

The five commanders, all from units in the country’s southeastern jungle, include one former participant in four-year-long peace talks in Cuba.

“This decision is motivated by their recent conduct, which contradicts our political-military line,” leader of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) said in statement late on Tuesday.

“We call on all combatants who have been tricked into this futureless path to distance themselves from this mistaken decision taken by their commanders,” the statement said.

The expelled commanders are the second group of rebels to declare their opposition to the peace deal under which the FARC convert into an unarmed political party. In July a First Front unit leader and some of his fighters left the group in protest of the deal.—Reuters

Beijing issues red alert for severely high air pollution

BEIJING — Beijing’s city government has issued a red alert for severely high levels of air pollution in the Chinese capital, running for five days from Friday evening, the environmental protection bureau said on its official Twitter-like Weibo account.

The city issued its first ever red alert on smog in December last year, after adopting a colour-graded warning system in a crackdown on environmental degradation left by decades of breakneck economic growth. Smog expected this week will stem from air pollution accumulated in Beijing and its environs, such as the nearby city of Tianjin and the northern provinces of Hebei, Shandong and Henan, the bureau said, citing environment monitoring forecasts.

News of the new high air pollution levels in the Beijing area on Thursday, among them unifying Beijing’s system of alerts with those of Tianjin and Hebei, and a ban aimed at keeping older, polluting cars off Beijing’s roads.

In addition, drivers of newer cars face an ‘odd-even’ usage limit determined by the final digit of their license-plates.

Schools freed from an earlier requirement to close en masse are being given the authority to ‘flexibly’ cancel classes, on the basis of their needs and those of students’ parents.

Companies may also consider early departures for employees, or provisions to work from home.

After temporary school closures and construction halts brought by last year’s smog alert, the city government has tweaked its system. In February it linked the threshold for red alerts to a higher average of the daily air quality index (AQI).

Red alerts are now issued when the AQI, a measure of pollutants in the air, is forecast to break 200 for more than four days in succession, surpass 300 for more than two days or overshoot 500 for at least 24 hours. — Reuters

Yahoo says one billion accounts exposed in newly discovered security breach

NEW YORK — Yahoo Inc warned on Wednesday that it had uncovered yet another massive cyber attack, saying data from more than 1 billion user accounts was compromised in August 2013, making it the largest breach in history.

The number of affected accounts was double the number implicated in a 2014 breach that the internet company disclosed in September and blamed on hackers working on behalf of a government. News of that attack, which affected at least 500 million accounts, prompted Verizon Communication Inc to say in October that it might withdraw from an agreement to buy Yahoo’s core internet business for $4.83 billion.

Following the latest disclosure, Verizon said, “we will review the impact of this new development before reaching any final conclusions.”

A Yahoo spokesman told Reuters that the company has been in communications with Verizon during its investigation into the breach and that it is confident the incident will not affect the pending acquisition. Yahoo required all of its customers to reset their passwords - a stronger measure than it took after the previous breach was discovered, when it only recommended a password reset. Yahoo also said Wednesday that it believes hackers responsible for the previous breach had also accessed the company’s proprietary code to learn how to forge “cookies” that would allow hackers to access an account without a password. “Yahoo badly screwed up,” said Bruce Schneider, a cryptologist and one of the world’s most respected security experts. “They were not taking security seriously and that’s now very clear. I would have trouble trusting Yahoo going forward.”

Yahoo was tentative in its description of new problems, saying the incident was “likely” distinct from the one it reported in September and that stolen information “may have included” names, e-mail addresses, telephone numbers, dates of birth, hashed passwords and, in some cases, encrypted or unencrypted security questions and answers. It said it had not yet identified the intrusion that led to the massive data theft and noted that payment-card data and bank account information were not stored in the system the company believes was affected. Yahoo said it discovered the breach while reviewing data provided to the company by law enforcement.

FireEye Inc’s Mandiant unit and Aon Plc’s Stroz Friedberg are assisting in the investigation, the Yahoo spokesman told Reuters.

The breach is the latest setback for Yahoo, an internet pioneer that has fallen on hard times in recent years after being eclipsed by younger, fast-growing rivals including Alphabet Inc’s Google and Facebook Inc. — Reuters
Japan’s pudgy pop stars take aim at obesity prejudice

TOKYO — Competition is cutthroat among Japan’s thousands of pop idol wannabes, but a unique concept is winning fame for a bunch of “chubby” girls deploying their cheeky cuteness to combat prejudices against obesity.

Despite one of the lowest rates of obesity in the developed world, Japan has a growing number of underweight young women, who rely on excessive dieting to satisfy society’s emphasis on being slim.

Heavy people are the frequent target of jokes in the media and use of the derogatory “debu,” or “fats,” remains common.

Enter “Potta,” a pop group named after a slang word for chubby and consisting of four young women who are not especially hefty to Western eyes, but well above average weight in Japan.

“People assume that being chubby is a sign of laziness or lack of self-discipline,” said Michiko Ohashi, the group’s heaviest member at 87 kg (192 lb) and a height of 167 cm (5.5 ft).

“I became an idol with the hope of changing that image. If they see us working to make our dreams come true, we can show that chubby people can work hard,” Ohashi said.

First treated as a quirky joke at its debut in 2015, the group’s image is changing, with the release of two albums and a growing roster of live concerts and television appearances.

Members range in weight from 63 kg (139 lb) to 87 kg (192 lb) for the 26-year-old Ohashi, and their average of 76 kg (168 lb) is about 26 kg (57 lb) over the Japanese average for women aged 13 to 18, according to the Health Ministry.

Their body mass index, which compares weight to height, ranges from 27.4 to 31.2. Doctors consider an individual with a BMI above 25 to be overweight, and one above 31 obese.

“We’re really heavy but we want to use that to shake up the idol world,” Ohashi said.

Potta has passionate devotees, both male and female, many of whom describe themselves as overweight.

Fans gather to meet Potta members for a high-calorie lunch each month, with the menu of one recent meal featuring rice, noodles, chicken and potatoes — all fried.

“I was quite attracted and overwhelmed with how lively their plus-size bodies move and dance,” said Tabo, a 36-year-old man who gave only his fan nickname.

The group was an inspiration, said Miho Kishi, who was bullied about her weight as a child.

“They’ve come out and are actually selling themselves as chubby, which has given us chubby women a lot of hope and courage,” said the 25-year-old.

‘Manchester by the Sea,’ ‘Moonlight’ edge out ‘La La Land’ in SAG nominations

LOS ANGELES — “Manchester by the Sea” and “Moonlight” cemented their status as Wednesday’s front-runners in Hollywood’s awards season in Screen Actors Guild (SAG) nominations that saw musical romance “La La Land” stumble.

“La La Land” scored nods for leads Emma Stone and Ryan Gosling, but was shut out of the top SAG prize for best ensemble. Although the category favours large casts, the omission was seen as a potential setback for the current awards darling.

With a leading four nominations, gritty family drama “Manchester by the Sea” will compete for best ensemble against “Moonlight,” “Fences,” “Hidden Figures” and — in a surprise entry — unorthodox family comedy “Captain Fantastic.”

Top SAG winners, voted for by actors, often go on to win Oscars as actors form the largest voting bloc in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. For example, “Spotlight” took the SAG best ensemble award and went on to win best picture at the Oscars this year.

“Manchester by the Sea,” about a working-class family dealing with multiple tragedies, landed nominations for actor Casey Affleck and supporting stars Michelle Williams and Lucas Hedges.

The SAG list followed Monday’s Golden Globe nominations, where “La La Land” and “Moonlight” led the race, and preceded January’s Oscar nods. SAG winners will be announced in Los Angeles on 29 January.

Other notable omissions on Wednesday included 1970s comedy “20th Century Women,” which stars Annette Bening as a free-spirited single mother, and “Loving,” the real-life story of a couple who changed interracial marriage laws in Virginia.

Independent drama “Moonlight,” about an impoverished black boy grappling with his sexuality, and “Fences,” an African-American family drama based on a Pulitzer Prize-winning play, scored three nominations each.

“Fences” best supporting actress nominee Viola Davis said in a statement that the nods were “not only a testament to the strength of (playwright) August Wilson’s words but to the endurance of the human spirit.”

“Captain Fantastic” and “Hidden Figures,” about three black female mathematicians working on the 1960s space race, also received nods in the best ensemble category.

Affleck and Gosling will face Andrew Garfield for “Hacksaw Ridge,” Viggo Mortensen for “Captain Fantastic” and “Fences” star Denzel Washington for best actor.

In television, HBO’s medieval fantasy series “Game of Thrones” and sci-fi western “Westworld” will compete against British period drama “Downton Abbey” and new Netflix shows “The Crown,” a British royal period drama, and 1980s sci-fi mystery “Stranger Things.”

Teen Jackie Evancho first singer confirmed for Trump inauguration

NEW YORK — Classical crossover singer Jackie Evancho, who charmed TV audiences as a child on “America’s Got Talent” six years ago, will sing the US national anthem at the inauguration of President-elect Donald Trump — the first performer to be announced for the ceremony.

Trump’s inaugural committee made the announcement on Wednesday, saying Evancho, 16, “represents the best and the brightest of America.”

“I’m so excited. It’s going to be awesome,” Evancho said on her Facebook page of the two of them standing together.

The inaugural committee has said it has “world-class talent” offering their services for the ceremony, but Evancho is the first celebrity to be announced.

The inaugural committee’s chairman, Tom Barrack, quashed speculation on Thursday that rapper Kanye West, who had a surprise meeting that day with the Republican president-elect at Trump Tower in New York, would be performing. —Reuters
Duchess of Cambridge celebrates a century of UK’s Cub Scouts

LONDON — The Duchess of Cambridge attended a special meeting on Wednesday, three weeks after attending an international summit in Japan. Five students, three from Japan and two from Indonesia, spoke at the event in Jakarta, which was organised by the UN Office for Disaster Reduction and the Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia.

All five had been among 400 high school students from 30 countries who attended a tsunami awareness summit in Karuho in Japan’s Kochi Prefecture on 26 November, where the participants adopted a declaration to learn, take action and create, with regards to awareness of the dangers of tsunamis. At the event in Jakarta, where students spoke about their experience and what they had learned from the summit, Wika Andriani, 18, an Indonesian student from Aceh, said she had learned about the importance of seeking higher ground during evacuation drills and earthquake simulations, among other things. "In Aceh I will make a team to demonstrate what we have learned to our friends. We want to share this important message. Knowledge about disasters is very important," she said.

Hidetoshi Nishimura, president of the Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia, said the symposium was aimed at sharing information about tsunami awareness. Tsunami Awareness Day, commemorated on 5 November, was inspired by the story of Goryo Hama-guchi, who helped save lives following a massive earthquake and tsunami which struck Japan’s Wakayama Prefecture in 1854, and subsequently invested in sea defences for the area.

Mohammad Haikal Razi, 17, a student from Aceh, said that Hamaguchi’s actions can help teach the importance of early warning and the importance of investing in disaster risk reduction. Haikal’s family passed away when a huge tsunami struck Aceh in 2004. He said people need to be well-prepared for future disasters.

Indonesian Vice President Jusuf Kalla said that the country has a long history of tsunamis. The wave created by the 26 December, 2004, magnitude-9.1 earthquake, which hit Aceh, triggered a tsunami and caused the deaths of 180,000 people.

"I’ve never seen a fish that has not been used to humans this much," Okamoto said. Physical contact between the two began about a month after the fish was moved from an aquarium in Ise, Mie Prefecture, to said. Physical contact escalated to toothbrushing this year. As the fish has sharp teeth, only Okamoto at the aquarium can touch it.

"The fish may have learned that it feels nice to be touched by human hands, just like it is touched by the fins of blueskreak cleaner wrasse" that cleanse longtooth grouper of parasites, said Tetsu Kowamura, a professor at Chukyo University specializing in fish behavior.—Kyodo News

High school students bring tsunami awareness back to Indonesia

Spirit character town to undergo major facelift

TOTTORI (Japan) — A popular tourist spot in western Japan featuring spirit and monster characters created by the late cartoonist Shigeru Mizuki will undergo its first major renovation, introducing a nighttime attraction.

"Mizuki Shigeru Road" in Sakaiminato, Tottori Prefecture, is a shopping street adorned with 153 statues of characters, including Kitaro and Nezumi Otoko (mouse man) from "GeGeGe no Kitaro," well-known comic series depicting spirits and monsters in Japanese folklore called "yokai."

From the summer of 2018, the yokai town, which opened in 1995, will be equipped with special illumination lamps to highlight the shadows of yokai inside spotlight circles on the street, enhancing its spooky appeal, according to the Sakaiminato city government.

Shops alongside the street will also extend their business hours in sync with the lamps’ introduction. The number of statues will be also increased by 18 and they will be re-organized into five zones such as “yokai inside a house” and “yokai of the forest.”

An annual 2 million people from Japan and abroad visit the Mizuki Shigeru Road, which also has a museum dedicated to the cartoonist. The city of 35,000 on the Sea of Japan coast is the birthplace of Mizuki.—Kyodo News

Superfriendly fish at aquarium demands petting, toothbrushing

NAGOYA — A one-meter-long fish in a Nagoya aquarium has become so accustomed to humans that it now demands to be petted and has its teeth brushed by its keeper.

The longtooth grouper, called Futami No. 1 at Port of Nagoya Public Aquarium approaches its 35-year-old keeper Hi-toshi Okamoto when he visits its fish tank, floating as he strokes it around the mouth.

"I’ve never seen a fish that has not been used to humans this much," Okamoto said. Physical contact between the two began about a month after the fish was moved from an aquarium in Ise, Mie Prefecture, to said. Physical contact escalated to toothbrushing this year. Fabregas earns Chelsea perfect 10, City and Liverpool win

LONDON — Chelsea maintained their stranglehold on the Premier League by beating Sunderland 1-0 on Wednesday to register their 10th successive win and move six points clear at the top of the table.

Cesc Fabregas’s first-half strike took advantage of the Blues’ full advantage of Tuesday’s slip-up by second-placed Arsenal to leave Liverpool, 3-0 winners at Middlesbrough, and Manchester City, who beat Watford 2-0, to keep up the chase.

Manchester United continued their recent improvement with a 2-1 victory at Crystal Palace and West Bromwich Albion’s Salomon Rondon took the individual honours with a hat-trick of headers in a 3-1 win over Swansea City.

Chelsea’s win was particularly welcome because it came without the injured Eden Hazard.

One of the secrets behind their success has been continuity so manager Antonio Conte will be delighted at the way his remade midfield of Fabregas and Willian combined beautifully just before halftime for the Spaniard to score the goal which confirmed Chelsea’s best run since 2005-06.

“Cesc is a good player for us,” Conte told reporters.

“I have four midfielders and it is important for me to evaluate the form of the single players, some games you need players more physical and some games more technical. It is important that Cesc had a good game.

“I prefer my players not to look at the table and to focus on the next game in three days. We must prepare very well to have a good Christmas.”

That seems guaranteed since Chelsea will definitely top the table on 25 December. On each of the previous four occasions they have done that they have gone on to win the league.

Liverpool overtook Arsenal in second place after a comfortable 3-0 win at Middlesbrough with Adam Lallana involved in all three goals, scoring twice and laying on another for Divock Origi.

Manager Juergen Klopp reacted to dropping five points in the last two games by picking Simon Mignolet in goal ahead of Loris Karius and the Belgian goalkeeping saves in a clean sheet.

Manchester City also put recent slumps behind them as goals from Pablo Zabaleta - his first in two years - and David Silva secured a 2-0 win over Watford, only their fifth victory in 16 games.

Fifth-placed Tottenham Hotspur comfortably overcame Hull City 3-0 while Jose Mourinho’s Manchester United are

Video evidence used for first time to award penalty

TOKYO — Video evidence was used to award a penalty for the first time in a FIFA competition at the Club World Cup on Wednesday and the decision itself and the time taken to reach a verdict.

Japanese champions Kashima Antlers were the beneficiaries after an off-field official known as a video assistant referee (VAR) called Hungarian referee Viktor Kassai’s attention to an infringement by Atletico Nacional of Orlando Berrio.

Kassai indicated that he would review the incident which he watched on a computer screen at the side of the pitch before deciding to award a penalty.

Shoma Doi converted the spot-kick for Kashima, who went on to beat the South American champions 3-0.

There was also concern about the time taken to make the decision.

The ball remained in play for 45 seconds after the penalty incident during which Atletico lost possession and Kashima launched another attack which was cleared by Atletico who then counter-attacked and won a throw-in.

Atletico were about to take the throw when Kassai called for a review, one minute and 10 seconds after the incident. It took another one minute and five seconds before the penalty was awarded.

Benzema and Ronaldo book Real’s place in Club World Cup final

TOKYO — Real Madrid booked their place in the Club World Cup final by beating Club America 2-0 on Thursday, although FIFA’s new video technology was again the talking point after confusion reigned following Cristiano Ronaldo’s injury time strike.

Real will play Japanese champions Kashima Antlers in Sunday’s final in Yokohama, looking to become world champions for the second time in three years and earn a record 21st international title.

Karim Benzema’s classy one touch finish put Real ahead in first half injury time, easing their nerves after they had struggled to find their rhythm in the opening 45 minutes against the Mexican side.

Newly crowned Ballon d’Or winner Ronaldo rounded off a far stronger performance from Real after the break with powerful finish in the 93rd minute.

The goal looked to have been ruled out as offside by Paraguayan referee Enrique Caceres before, in consultation with the video referee, eventually giving the goal.

Real initially struggled to break down the CONCACAF champions in a tight first half and the only opportunity before Benzema broke the deadlock was a Ronaldo header which struck the post.

Zinedine Zidane’s side took full control after the break and hit their opponents with frequent counter attacks.

Benzema spurned a free header and Ronaldo saw his stinging effort repelled by goalkeeper Moises Munoz, while substitute Morata wasted a late chance to kill off the Mexicans before Ronaldo’s late strike.
