Steps taken for construction of Hanthawaddy International Airport Project in Bago

The leading committee on the construction of the Hanthawaddy Airport held its first meeting at the Ministry of Transport and Communications in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Speaking at the meeting, Vice President U Henry Van Thio, chairman of the leading committee, in his capacity as the chairman of the committee, stressed the need for ensuring transparency and systematic implementation of the project.

He also pledged that the project would be implemented during the time of the incumbent government, considering it a national project.

“On completion of building the international airport, it will become a major gateway for international airlines to use and operate their businesses. So it will be implemented as a national project, thus the need for transparency for the public,” the Vice President said.

The Vice President stressed the need for respective ministries and regional and state cabinets to take part in the discussions about situations on an official development assistance (ODA) loan, potential difficulties, convenience of water supply and power supply, upgrading the current roads linking with the airport, having the ownership of the project area registered under the name of the Department of Civil Aviation and moving the squatters living in the project area to designated places.

Under the current situation, Yangon International Airport has been experiencing many difficulties — inability to expand the current runway and lack of parking space for aircrafts, noise problems around the clock for those living in the area, shared use of the airport together with the air force and restrictions for aircrafts to land and take off.

“In addition, the need for more passenger planes and cargo planes is likely to increase in the near future, for which we will continue to abide by the safety standards prescribed by international civil aviation organizations. So, it is urgently needed to construct a high-quality airport for international passenger aircrafts and cargo planes,” said U Henry Van Thio.

To fulfill the need, the Hanthawaddy International Airport project was implemented, which is an essential airport for the future that will help with the development of Myanmar’s economy. It is a project based on PPP system (Private-Public Partnership), tendered in 2012, he added.

Afterward, Union Minister U Thant Zin Maung clarified the need for an expansion of international airports, consultation with respective ministries for cooperation and preparation for the imminent emergence of an international airport, followed by explanations of U Min Lwin, Director-General of the department of civil aviation. In the meeting, he explained the need for an additional airport in Myanmar.—Myanmar News Agency

World Bank to provide US$100million credit to support Myanmar

The World Bank’s Board of Executive Directors today approved a US$100 million credit to support Myanmar in improving the access of families and small and medium-sized businesses to financial services.

Myanmar’s Financial Sector Development Project aims to promote the development of a sound and stable financial sector, includes reforms to increase the provision of banking services and access to loans and financial products across the country, and to develop the country’s nascent microfinance and insurance sectors.

“The project will help increase access to finance for households and small and medium-sized enterprises by reforming state-owned banks, strengthening the financial sector’s legal and regulatory frameworks and modernising the financial sector infrastructure,” said U Maung Maung Win, Deputy Minister for Planning and Finance. “These reforms are expected to extend the range of basic financial products and services to underserved areas and populations.”

Since 2012, private banks have rapidly expanded their operations. More than 1.4 million debit cards have been issued for the first time, and thousands of ATMs have been set up. Credit to the private sector has grown steadily, albeit from a low base. Still, Myanmar’s financial sector does not yet effectively meet the demands of the country’s growing economy. Myanmar has some of the lowest levels of access to financial services in the world.

Ministry of Industry should sell tractors at a fair price, farmers say

Farmers want the Ministry of Industry to sell tractors at a competitive price and in an installment plan in Mawlamyine region, it is learnt.

FARMERS want the Ministry of Industry to sell tractors at a competitive price and in an installment plan in Mawlamyine region, it is learnt. The agricultural mechanization department is selling the tractors in installments at a price ranging from Ks27,000 to Ks40,000.

The farmers owning small acres hope that the ministry of industry will sell the tractors at a cheaper price.

“I heard that the Ministry of Industry will sell the plough machines on an installment basis. We have to pay a down payment of 10 per cent. Then, we must pay the rest every six months until all the due amount is paid. But, the price of the tractors is too high,” said a farmer of Mullin township.

He said, “We cannot buy them because it is too expensive. I want the minister to sell the low-priced machines which every farmer can afford,” said U Hla Tun, a local farmer from Mawlamyine township.

Most of the farmers from Mawlamyine Township are using only hand-pushed tractors, which sell for about Ks2 million.

There are 261,308 acres of land in Mawlamyine Township. Farmer own an average of about 15 or 20 acres of land each.

The third regular session of second Amyotha Hluttaw concludes

The third regular session of the second Amyotha Hluttaw concluded yesterday following discussions on compensation for seized land, implementation of the report of the Investigation Commission of the Letpadaung Copper Mine Project and the crocodile threat in Ayeyawady.

In his concluding remarks, Mahn Win Khaing Thaung, Speaker of the Amyotha Hluttaw, said that 67 meetings during the period of the third regular session, Mahn Win Khaing Thaung said.

He said, “Today, Union Minister for Construction U Win Khaing said, in his answer to questions raised by MPs, that the ministry would construct a bypass road linking Kyakhto and Thaton after setting compensation for the seized land and seeking funds for the construction.

By the opening of the bypass construction, the ministry has submitted a report on land survey and compensation to the Mon State Government.

Concerning the question of whether Investigation Commission on the Letpadaung Copper Mine project would be reformed or not, the Union Minister for Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation U Ohn Win said there is no plan to reform the committee as 37 facts out of 47 suggested by the commission are being implemented.

MPs also discussed compensation to 25 land owners for the seized farmland in Mohnyin township, raising public awareness on the crocodile threat in Bogalay Township in Ayeyawady region,

The parliament also approved the Report on the draft law on Older Persons submitted by its Bill Committee. Members of the Parliament also discussed and approved 12 reports on parliamentary questions submitted during the 2nd National Parliament’s 2nd regular meetings.

2nd Pyithu Hluttaw 3rd regular session concludes

The start of construction on hospita- l buildings in Muse and Hinthada were among the issues discussed in the latest meeting of the Pyithu Hluttaw yesterday morning.

In reply to the question raised by U Sai Pho Myat of Muse Constituency at the 19th Meeting of 2nd Pyithu Hluttaw 3rd Regular Session held yesterday, Dr Myint Htwe, Union Minister for Health & Sports said: “As there was the budget allotment of Ks800 million to construct a 100-bed, 4-storey ward in Muse district general hospital in 2016-2017 fiscal year, the ministry has continued with the building department of the Ministry of Construction to build the hospital building on a 5-acre plot. Construction work has commenced. It is impossible for the ministry of health and sports to recover the land which had been given out to organisations and for private use, out of the initially permitted land plots. It had been submitted to the Shan State Cabinet to permit another 8,859 acres. If allowed, upgrading the 100-bed ward to a 200-bed one that needs 15 to 20 more acres, will be implemented.”

As regards the question raised by U Khin Maung Yi of Hinthada constituency, Dr Myint Htwe, Union Minister said: “MBD Construction Company, which won the tender bid to construct the annexed ward of a 4-storey building at a cost of Ks780 million at Hinthada General Hospital in the fiscal year 2015-2016, the company has been building. Depending upon the stage of completion, the payment will be given out to the company. Until now, only 35 per cent of the contract had been finished, thus only Ks273 million was given to the company.

In accord with procedure, the remaining portion of the allotted budget has been given back to the State. Due to failure to be on time for demand of another budget allocation in the 2017 financial year, it had been submitted to allot Ks507 million in the 2017-2018 fiscal year to construct the annexed 4-storey building.”

In addition, Dr Myint Htwe, U Win Maw Tun, deputy minister for Health and Sports and Deputy Minister U Maung Maung Win replied to the questions raised by U Khin Cho of Hlinhew country constituency, Daw Tin Tin Yi of Kyunyu constituency, U Khin Maung Thi of Lonein constituency, U Myint Ngwe of Kyaukkyi constituency and U Bo Gyi of Chauk constituency, concerning questionnaire on education, health and public services.

Afterward, U Win Myint, the Speaker of the Pyithu Hluttaw said: “The 2nd Pyithu Hluttaw 3rd Regular Session will come to an end today. During the period of the session, 117 asterisk-marked questions and 154 with no asterisks were answered. A total of 10 motions including a special one were submitted to the Hluttaw. There were 6 motions put on record and 4 to be tabled at the next session. Out of 17 bills which had been discussed, 7 were approved with 10 bills still to be approved.”

In performing duties vested by the people, all parliamentarians need to be free from racial and political prejudices. And all need to be well convinced of our deeds intended for national reconciliation and nationwide peace. Only if law abiding is strictly followed by us, will rule of law emerge, which will bring about accountability and responsibility. When we can accomplish these, our society will surely develop.

It is necessary for us to protect the benefits of the people, to make effort for the emergence of the federal democratic nation, to get rid of destructive elements by constantly finding enemies on our way to the democracy movement and to exert our concerted efforts for the national peace. Finally, I wish all my parliamentarians meeting again in the fourth regular session in good health and happiness.”—Myanmar News Agency

Independent journalists visit conflict areas in northern Rakhine

A group of independent journalists including local and foreign media made a field trip yesterday to the border outposts which were attacked by violent armed men on 9 October.

At No. 1 Border Outpost (Kyikanpyin), Police Brig-Gen Thura San Lwin explained the situation to reporters in the area before, during and after the attack.

He gave information about the arrests, interrogations, charges and releases regarding the armed attack.

U Ye Htut, Head of the Maungtaw District General Administration Department, spoke about receiving aid from the government and international organizations, the department’s efforts for reopening of schools and stability in the area.

The authorities also replied to queries raised by the journalists.

The group proceeded to Pyaungpaik village and collected information on the attack on security forces and also gathered information on the outbreak of fire in the village. Among the stops the reporters made was Kyeinchang Village, where they interviewed people from both the Muslim and Buddhist communities about their efforts for stability and peaceful coexistence.

Reporters also visited the Basic Education High School in Kyetchung and the Ngakhuya Police Station and interviewed subjects about the 9 October attack and the subsequent fires that occurred.—MNA

Joint Monitoring Committee on Ceasefire holds its general meeting to find ways and means to overcome difficulties and challenges

Ye Khaung Nyunt

THE Joint Monitoring Committee on Ceasefire held its general meeting to discuss the working process and responsibilities which are being carried out by the JMC, to find ways and means of overcoming difficulties and challenges encountered in implementing the task of the JMC-S (Joint Monitoring Committee at Region & State Level) and for those who have signed the Nationwide Cease-fire Agreement to maintain the bullet-free situations.

The JMC’s first-ever general meeting was held at the National Reconciliation and Peace Center (NRPC) branch of Shwe Li Street in Yangon at 9 am yesterday.

In his opening address, Lt-Gen Yar Pyae, Chairman of the Joint Monitoring Committee at Union Level (JMC-U), said, “The formation of the JMC can reduce the volume of fighting. Although there had been conflicts between RCSS and government troops, both sides had managed to solve carefully and systematically in accord with the instruction of working process of the JMC. In the process of accomplishing peace, Union Peace Dialogue Joint Committee (UPDJC) & Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC) were formed to perform their tasks in the long run. Under the leadership of the State Counsellor, the coordination combined team on peace process was set up to systematically manage the subvention and assistance for the peace process. Provided that those who signed the NCA can perform the peace process as an ideal, it will surely induce the remaining parties to join the signing of the NCA. The Programme for giving aid includes plans for current development and development plans for the respective regions. Therefore, it is necessary for all to maintain the conflict-free situations. As there are not yet definite separations of areas in some regions, ceasefire is the main objective of the JMC and can be maintained if the respective officers at the lower levels can consult with each other.”

He added, “Denying tasks are to be carried out by the JMC. Especially, public-used roads and routes need to be cleared so that the development process can be accomplished and the peace process will be successful. The JMC-S is necessary to openly discuss needs, weak points encountered in the period of one year and suggestions they want to make.”

Afterwards, Dr Shwe Khair, Secretary 1 of the JMC-U of ethnic armed groups read out the message of Saw Issac Po, Vice Chairman of JMC-U which said that the period of implementing the JMC under the instruction of the NCA has now reached over one year. Starting from the advent of the New Year, 100 % of the JMC will be operational. During the period of holding political dialogues, ceasefire needs to be maintained, and from the state of building mutual trusts a strengthened ceasefire must be built up.

He also stressed the need to acknowledge the trust gained to a certain extent between the people and armed groups, reminding them of the need to avoid using sensitive terms in their attempts to promote the trust between them.

He also called for promoting the role of the people in the peace making process in order to ensure transparency and trust from the people.

During the meeting yesterday, the joint monitoring committees in Tanintharyi Region, Bago Region, Kayin State, Mon State and Shan State discussed their challenges with the participants of the meeting.

“Tomorrow, we will discuss the recent armed conflict between the Tatmadaw and RCSS/SSA,” said Dr Shwe Khair.

A total of 67 representatives attended the meeting.
Renovation of 89 quake-hit pagodas in Bagan to start next month

WITH the close collaboration of experts at home and abroad, major renovations of 89 quake-damaged pagodas and Buddhist temples will begin next month, according to the department of archaeology, national museum library (Bagan branch).

In the first phase, the department will repair 36 pagodas including Bagan’s well-known Sulamani and Ananda temples, with plans to renovate 53 others in the second stage, said U Aung Aung Kyaw, director of the department.

A total of 389 pagodas and temples were destroyed by a powerful earthquake that hit the ancient city in August. All damaged pagodas have invaluable ancient architecture.

Renovations for more than 200 temples with minor damage were completed this month.

With a spending of Ks4.6 billion donated by well-wishers, renovation plans will be implemented in phases over the next five years, with plans to solicit further donations for each temple, said U Aung Aung Kyaw.

Over 500 types of precious ancient objects from inside the temples have been kept at Bagan’s Archaeological Museum, said NyaungU District General Administrator U Soe Tint.

Visitor arrivals to Chaungtha Beach decrease by half

THE NUMBER of high-season visitors this year to Chaungtha Beach, a popular beach resort situated in Ayeyawady Region, declined by half compared to last year.

According to the Chaungtha Zone Hoteliers Association, over 400,000 visitors at home and abroad visited the resort last year, compared to about 200,000 so far this year.

U Nyi Nyi Aung, a spokesman for the association, said it was his opinion that the decrease of visitors may be linked to the development of new beach resorts elsewhere and the high expense of travel.

Some visitors select world-famous beaches such as Phuket in Thailand and Bali in Indonesia rather than the local beach resorts in Myanmar because the costs are not so different, he added.

Win Maung, a resident of Pathein Town, said unpleasant weather in October and November and sanitation problems also reduced the arrivals of both local and international visitors, in his opinion.

Chaungtha Beach is a well-known resort and one of the top tourist attractions in Myanmar. It is about a 5-hour drive from the commercial capital of Yangon.

According to official figures of the hotels and tourism ministry, about 22 hotels with a total of about 1,000 rooms have been developed in the beach resort.

Stone Age objects found in ancient site in Ingapu Township

SEVERAL Stone Age objects, including human bones and man-made tools, have been found in an ancient site in Ingapu Township, Ayeyawady Region, according to locals.

The ancient objects including a stone axe, human bones, earthen pipes from the Pyu era, bronze statues, bronze rattles and other animal materials from Paleolithic Era were discovered in the site in October. The objects are being kept at Kyavtyinwa Monastery near Ingapu Tawgyitan.

Sayadaw U Pyinnya Thiri of the monastery said he collected several ancient objects from locals after he heard the news that locals from some villages near Ingapu Ancient City found stone weapons in October.

Currently, about 50 ancient objects are being kept at the monastery, the Sayadaw added.

According to locals, not only stone accessories have been found but also fossil footprints and handprints left by early humans were discovered at the bottom of the Rakhine Mountain Range near Kyauktaloone Village two miles from the city of Pyu.

Moreover, ancient symbols, including round shapes, and footprints of animals were found on the wall of Taungnyo Mountain, residents said.

Squatters in Hanthawaddy airport project area to get moving expenses

LOCAL authorities are now arranging to pay moving expenses to unregistered residents in the Hanthawaddy International Airport Project area, said U Than Win, Bago Region Minister for Industry, Electric Power and Transport.

The five-year airport project is planned to be started next year by tender winner JGC Yaungnam, the Japanese-Singaporean consortium. Several coordination meetings have been held between authorities and the company to successfully implement the project.

In the term of the then-government, authorities paid compensation twice to landowners affected by the development project.

Members of the regional government hosted several meetings to discuss the removal of squatters from the project area after providing moving expenses, said U Than Win.

No injuries in home fire in Taunggyi

NO one was injured in a home fire in Taunggyi, Shan State, on Tuesday, according to the town’s fire services department.

The blaze broke out at a house owned by Daw Ei Phyu, 28, in Phayaphyu Ward at around 1 pm on that day due to an overheated 5KV-ZEP fire booster, destroying some parts of the building.

The property loss due to the blaze was estimated to be about Ks100,000, an official from the department said.

The fire was brought under control by 45 local firefighters within one hour and 30 minutes. The fire services department used five fire engines and a water bowser to put out the blaze.

Action is being taken against the owner of the house under Section 285 of the Penal Code which is related to negligence with respect to a fire or combustible matter. —Myitmakha News Agency

52 investment proposals to MIC in first half of this month

A total of 52 investment proposals from private companies have been submitted to the Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) from 1st to 16th December, according to MIC officials.

“We are trying to verify and approve the submitted proposals as soon as possible,” said U Aung Naing Oo, the secretary of MIC. Investors are observing the investment policies of the incumbent government, resulting in a decline in foreign direct investments (FDI).

Foreign investments as of 17th December in this fiscal year reached only over US$3billion, which is down from US$4.96billion in the similar period of last fiscal year, it is learnt.

The telecommunications sector topped the foreign investment line-up of Myanmar with 47 per cent of total investments in this fiscal year. However, the figure is down by nearly US$1billion in comparison with that of last fiscal year, U Aung Naing Oo continued.

During this fiscal year, the percentage of investments flowing into the country are 47.07 per cent in the telecoms sector, 25.5 per cent in the industrial sector, 17.5 per cent in the power sector, 3.03 per cent in real estate, 2.82 per cent in hotel and tourism, 2.5 per cent in livestock and fishery and 1.59 per cent in other services, it is learnt.

Out of 52 investment proposals, 23 are from the private sector and 29 are from foreign investors, it is learnt.

The enterprises which want to proceed with the existing old investment law have to submit their investment proposals by 31st December. The new investment law will take effect on 1st January, 2017, it is learnt.—Myitmakha News agency

World Bank to provide US$100million . . .

Fewer than 30 per cent of adults can access financial services, and the rates are even lower in rural areas. Businesses identify the lack of access to finance as the largest constraint to doing business in the country.

“As Myanmar implements the Financial Sector Development Project, people in communities across the country will gain access to basic financial services and small loans,” said Ulrich Zachau, the World Bank Country Director for Southeast Asia. “Improved access to credit will mean higher incomes and more jobs. Farmers, small businesses and low-income households will benefit. The World Bank Group is pleased to help finance the project.”

The credit will come from the Internati- onal Development Association (IDA), the Bank’s fund for the poorest. The terms for the IDA credit include a maturity of 38 years, with a grace period of six years and a zero interest rate.—World Bank

Honda opens car servicing business in Myanmar

HONDA Motor Co., has opened its first automobile service center in Myanmar together with its regional subsidiary and a local firm to provide after-sales service to the owners of Honda vehicles.

Teaming up with Eastern Nova Co. as well as Asian Honda Motor Co., Honda’s regional headquarters for the Asia and Oceania region, the Japanese automaker set up the service center close to one of the largest parks in Myanmar in the western part of Yangon, the commercial hub of the South East Asian country.

Myint Oo, director of newly established Eastern Nova, said the increasing popularity of the Honda brand in Myanmar has driven the automaker to boost its presence in the market, which is largely dominated by Toyota which held a 65 per cent market share in 2014.

“People have imported more Honda vehicles since the government changed its vehicle import policy in 2011. The most popular model is the Honda Fit,” he said.

He estimates that the second most favored brand in Myanmar currently controls about 20 per cent of the market, rising from 11 per cent in 2014.

In a country where used cars account for 95 per cent of the market, demand for spare parts is likely to continue to grow as the automobile market flourishes.

A report released in mid-2016 by Germany’s largest market research institute GfK said car owners in Myanmar need to send their cars for maintenance and replacement of parts more frequently due to the hot climatic conditions and rough roads.

Nobuo Kannonji, general manager of the customer service division of Asian Honda, told NNA that Myanmar has growth potential in the after-sales automobile market.

“I see many Honda vehicles in the market. So, I see some potential.”

“Later we will consider new car business here,” he said.

According to Honda, there are more than 42,000 registered and used Honda vehicles in Myanmar at the moment.

Since 2011, Myanmar imported over 670,000 vehicles and changed its import policy at least 12 times in this period.—Kyodo News

THE Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry (UMFCCI) and its affiliated associations will jointly establish fund raising for protection from natural disasters.

The funds will be spent on agriculture sector, which is the backbone of country’s economy, it is learnt.

“The associations under UMFCCI will have to contribute to the fund,” said Dr Myo Thet, the vice chair of UMFCCI. “UMFCCI usually led the associates to provide the disaster-stricken areas. We cannot say sure yet when the fund raising activity will happen.”

The UMFCCI reformed its executive committee and central executive committee in September in concordance with the memorandum of association. “Resteallment plays a key role when disaster strikes. Fund-raising will help to reset the commerce and industry sectors,” said U Win Shwe, the director of the Yangon region restettlement department.

There are a total of 23 affiliated associations with UMFCCI, with over 30,000 members.

Eight companies selected to run in public bus line system

EIGHT companies have been selected to run in the public bus line system, according to the Yangon Region Transport Authority.

The public bus line system is set to launch on 1st January, 2017. The bus lines running in the city and bus companies were invited to operate a public bus line and 20 bus line companies applied for it, it is reported.

Out of 20 companies, eight consortium companies were selected to operate in the public bus line, including Bandoola Transport Co., Ltd; a company comprising Htet Myat Thu and Southern District bus lines; a company consisting of BRT Line, Myauk Pine Thar Bus line and Shwe Myo Taw bus lines; a company combined by Omni Focus Services and Trans Link Co., Ltd; Yangon Urban Public Transport (YUPT); a company of Power Eleven Public, A Mye Sein and Shwe Pyitha bus lines; a company of SRT, San Wai La and Shwe Inwa bus lines and a public company comprising Khit Thit Bayint Naang and Northern District Bus Lines, it is learnt.

“We are gearing up to run our bus lines in the city. We have already submitted the routes which we want,” said Ko Ta Yoke Lay from Power Eleven Public Company.

The government will allocate K478million for operation of a public bus line system in Yangon and the eight public companies will also jointly provide a set amount.—200

Indonesian police kill three suspects in gunfight after bombs found

JAKARTA — Indonesian anti-terrorism police killed three suspects after a gunfight on the outskirts of the capital, Jakarta, on Wednesday and foiled a suicide bomb plot, a police spokesman said.

The raid is the latest in a series over recent weeks that police say have disrupted bomb plots, raising concerns that homegrown militants in the world’s largest Muslim-majority nation are getting bolder in their attempts to launch attacks.

Police said earlier this week that at least 14 people were being interrogated over suicide bomb plots targeting the presidential palace in Jakarta and an undisclosed location outside Java island. Both involved a female suicide bomber — a new tactic for Indonesian militants.

After Wednesday’s raid, police said the suspects, who authorities believe are supporters of the Islamic State militant group, had planned to stab officers at a traffic post, and then detonate a “large, homemade” bomb as crowds gathered.

The attack was planned for the end of the year.

Police said a total of five bombs were found at the house in South Tangerang, Banten province near Jakarta, Indonesia on 21 December 2016. PHOTO:REUTERS

The attack showed a bomb squad officer wearing a blast-resistant suit entering the house as locals watched from behind a police line.

“During the raid, we tried to be careful but they threw something from inside the house and it was a bomb, but it did not explode. Then they fired from inside,” Rikwanto earlier told Metro TV.

He said one suspect was captured alive.

President Joko Widodo commended security forces for preventing attacks and called on the public to be vigilant against the spread of radicalism.

“We hope the public can also help fortify this country against terrorism and radicalism,” Widodo said in a statement.

Indonesia has suffered several major militant attacks over the years, the worst of which was the 2002 bombing on the holiday island of Bali that killed 202 people, many of them foreigners.

That attack led to Western help and funding for Indonesia to develop an elite counter-terrorism unit, which has been effective in stamping out militant cells.

Authorities however now worry about a resurgence in radicalism, inspired in part by Islamic State.

A gun and bomb assault in the heart of Jakarta in January killed four people and was the first attack in Southeast Asia claimed by Islamic State.

Police have arrested dozens of suspected militants in recent months, including a cell in Indonesia’s Batam island that planned a rocket attack on neighbouring Singapore.

Many suspects from the most recent arrests were found with military-grade explosives and police say they had been communicating with and receiving money from Bahrun Naim, an Indonesian militant known to be fighting with Islamic State in Syria.

South Korea seeks arrest of daughter of Park’s friend at centre of scandal

SEOUL — South Korea on Wednesday issued an arrest warrant for a daughter of the woman at the center of President Park Geun-hye’s corruption scandal and investigators raided the National Pension Service over possible links to the scandal.

A special prosecutor’s investigation started on Wednesday into the influence-peddling scandal that threatens to make Park, 64, the first democratically-elected leader to leave office early in disgrace.

Parliament has voted to impeach Park, a decision that must be confirmed or overturned by the Constitutional Court.

A court issued an arrest warrant on Wednesday for Chung Yoo-ra, the 20-year-old daughter of Choi Soon-sil, Park’s long-time friend who is in custody and on trial for fraud and abuse of power. Chung’s lawyer has said she is in Germany, where she flew with her mother and child in September, according to media reports.

“We have Chung’s arrest warrant on several charges including obstruction of justice and we plan to request the cooperation of German prosecutors based on these charges,” Lee Kyu-chul, a spokesman for the special prosecutor’s office, told a news conference.

Lee said authorities are working to invalidate Chung’s South Korean passport and have asked German prosecutors for information on her whereabouts and financial assets.

Chung, an equestrian athlete who competed in the 2014 Asian Games and won a gold medal in a team competition, sparked public ire earlier this year when it emerged that she had received special treatment from the prestigious Ewha Womans University.

Her admission to the university was subsequently canceled. She was also stripped of her high school diploma for fabrication of grades and attendance, according to the Seoul education office.—Reuters

Thailand seeks to develop military production facilities with China

BANGKOK — Thailand and China are in talks about building military production facilities in Thailand, a Thai defence ministry spokesman said on Wednesday, the latest sign of warming relations between China and America’s oldest ally in Asia.

Relations between Thailand and the United States cooled following a May 2014 military coup that the Thai military said was necessary to end months of unrest, including street protests that led to the ouster of an elected government.

The United States has said relations cannot return to normal until democracy is restored. The generals running Thailand have promised an election for 2017.

Since the coup, the military government has sought to counterbalance US ties by developing relations with China and Defence Minister Prawit Wongsawat met his Chinese counterpart, Chang Wanquan, during a visit to Beijing last week.

“The defence minister told his Chinese counterpart that we are interested in setting up facilities to repair and maintain the Chinese equipment we currently have in our arsenal,” ministry spokesman Kongcheep Tantrapanich told Reuters.

“We will also look to their expertise in producing small arms and other security-related equipment like drones,” he said.—Reuters
China, UK vow pragmatic cooperation, joint efforts in climate battle

LONDON — China and Britain on Tuesday pledged to enhance their pragmatic cooperation and join hands to combat the climate change.

The latest development came as visiting Chinese State Councillor Yang Jiechi met with the British Prime Minister Theresa May after the 8th China-UK Strategic Dialogue held in London.

Chinese and British leaders met on the sidelines of the G20 Summit in China in September, months after the Brexit Referendum and British government reshuffle. Leaders of the two countries had reassured each other for the commitment and confidence in the “golden era” for the bilateral relations.

Yang said that the mutual reassurance had injected fresh momentum into the Sino-UK cooperation and stands ready to maintain frequent exchanges of high-level visits with the British side and also deepen their pragmatic bilateral cooperation in areas including nuclear power, high-speed railway, finance and innovation, he said.

The senior Chinese official also called on the two sides to strengthen their communication and coordination to solve major international and regional issues, jointly push forward the open, inclusive economic globalization and combat the global challenges such as the climate change.

On her part, May said her country is expecting to strengthen pragmatic cooperation with China in various areas and promote global free trade. She said Britain is willing to address common challenges such as the climate changes with other countries in a concerted manner. —Xinhua

Japan should take leadership role in UNSC reform push: ex-US official

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania — Japan should leverage a window it has as President-elect Donald Trump sets up his new administration and as Tokyo marks its six-decade-long membership in the United Nations, a former US official said.

“Japan would have to take a lead and make a real concerted private, as well as public, effort to engage early and strongly and kind of become the spokesman for the expansion group,” Shirin Tahir-Kheli told Kyodo News in a recent interview at her Philadelphia home.

She was referring to efforts by Japan, Brazil, India and Germany, collectively known as the Group of Four. They have been pushing for additional permanent and nonpermanent council seats in the body which currently has 15 members.

Their expansion plan collides with other groups, such as Uniting for Consensus, which counts India, Pakistan and South Korea as its members, and advocates only for increasing the number of nonpermanent seats.

Despite a broad consensus in the international body that reform is needed to better reflect the reality of today’s world, and an apparent boost in 2005 when global leaders supported an “early reform” of the Security Council, intergovernmental negotiations have continued year after year with little notable change.

The five permanent members — Britain, China, France, Russia and the United States — hold veto powers on issues related to maintaining international peace and security. Ten nonpermanent members also comprise the council for two-year terms. Japan was elected last year for a record 11th time, with its present term to expire at the end of 2017. As the former senior adviser to the secretary of state for UN reform, she was instrumental in crafting past policy on reform issues.

In speaking about Japan’s current status, she said, “It’s been seen as a permanent member of the Security Council.”

However, when Japan later joined forces with Brazil, India and Germany, it suffered from the consequences of being caught up in the group’s internal politics, which complicated the picture, she said. With the addition of Brazil, objections were voiced from other regional players, such as Mexico and Argentina.

In considering Germany as a possible seat holder, questions were raised about the fairness of having three European nations represented when there was no representation from Africa.

With India’s bid came objections from neighboring Pakistan. She admitted, however, that over the last 10 years dynamics with Russia and China have created new challenges. —Kyodo News

Modi losing friends as anger grows over Indian cash crackdown

NEW DELHI — A leading political ally of Narendra Modi has abruptly distanced himself from the Indian prime minister’s move to scrap high-value banknotes, as broad initial support for the radical monetary reform showed signs of crumbling.

The shift by N. Chandrababu Naidu, chief minister of the southern state Andhra Pradesh, came six weeks after Modi announced to a stunned nation that he would scrap 86 per cent of the cash in circulation.

While Modi remains by far India’s most popular politician, any crack in his authority could have negative implications in state elections next year that will set the tone for his expected bid for a second term in 2019.

Naidu’s regional party is allied to Modi’s nationalists and he heads a federal committee set up to find ways to soften the impact on ordinary people of the crackdown against tax evaders, racketeers and bribe takers who rely on so-called “black cash.”

“I am breaking my head daily but we are unable to find a solution to this problem,” Naidu told party workers on Tuesday in the city of Vijayawada.

Modi, announcing the reform on 8 November cautioned that people would face temporary hardship. He promised to restore normalcy by the end of the year, when a deadline to deposit old 500 and 1,000 rupee banknotes expires.

His announcement enjoyed popular support at first, with many people prepared to endure hardship as long as others are forced to give up their ill-gotten wealth or pay tax. But continuing shortages of new 500 and 2,000 rupee notes have caused tempers to rise as millions queue at banks and ATMs to draw money. With new 500 rupee notes, worth $7.50, in very short supply it is hard for people to buy necessities because of a shortage of change.

“Modi is now a one-man army, every political ally will blame him if the cash crisis does not come to an end in the next 10 days,” said P. Raja Rao, a political science professor in Hyderabad. Frustrated over the lack of cash, mobs attacked six bank branches in Uttar Pradesh on Tuesday, forcing police to rescue bank staff.

The northern state, home to one in six Indians, is due to hold an election in early 2017 that is increasingly being viewed as a referendum on Modi’s demonestration drive. —Reuters

Co-operatives require effective team development

A IM HIGH, Think Global, Act local. Always be creative and innovative in thinking how to include women members in different operations of cooperative enterprises. The Paraguayan statistics follow the same trendlines. The women cooperatives have higher rates of female participation than agricultural cooperatives. For this reason, it is important to mention that most of the CDP participant cooperatives do not have savings and credit operations. This is likely an important factor in explaining why Manduvirá’s rates of female participation are so high above the average.

Teamwork, team building and effective team development need to be built up and developed within the cooperatives in order to create more opportunities for women to lead the cooperatives. According to the Observatorio del Sector Cooperativo Paraguayo (OBSECOOPY), Paraguayan savings and credit cooperatives have achieved gender parity in membership. These cooperatives also have a higher percentage of female presidents. However, it is important to keep in mind that a large number of these women are located in the capital of Asuncion and provide services to professional men and women.

Inclusiveness is one of the elements of good cooperative governance. Manduvirá stands out among CDP participant cooperatives in its rates of female-elected leadership as well. While over half of the CDP participant cooperatives do not have a single female-elected leader, 24 percent of Manduvirá’s 17 elected leaders are women. The positions held by women are Treasurer for the Board of Directors, Alternate for the Board of Directors, President of the Electoral Committee, and member of the Electoral Committee. There are also women in the Solidarity with Children, Education Committee, Credit Committee, and various staff management positions.

Our Vision is to protect, preserve, promote and perpetuate Our Planet, Our Dignity, Our Equality, and Our Future. One for all and all for one is our motto for democratic organization. Each for all and all for each is our motto for social services. In both of its operations, Manduvirá adheres strongly to the principle that men and women should be treated equally.

In 1999 the cooperative began to certify its sugar as fair trade and continues to do so through Fairtrade International (FLO). In order to achieve fair-trade certification, the cooperative has to comply with the standards set forth by FLO.

Now, profit but for service. From egg to electricity. From cradle to the grave. From primary health care to hospital care. From Microfinance to Cooperative Bank. From funeral services to funeral services. Thrift is the back- rock of cooperation. No pain, no gain. More pain, more gain. As one male leader said, the principles of fair trade state very clearly that “there is no type of discrimination, whether political, whether religious, gender.” Several leaders described the cooperative as “open” to women or stated that there was “space” for women to participate as members and leaders.

Foreign tourists are flocking in. But...!

Khin Maung Myint

I had written two articles in the GNLM under the same title before. I’m the first, I am over and over again not because I cannot think of other titles, but I intend it to be a feature series, where I can highlight the adverse consequences of tourism. Saying thus, I may sound like a pessimistic person with negative attitude, which I’m definitely not. Regular readers of my articles may have noticed that most of my articles covered a variety of fields where reforms are needed.

I agree that tourism generates much incomes and much needed foreign currencies for the country. It also creates jobs and increases the incomes of many individuals who are directly or indirectly involved in that business. In fact tourism is much more than just a business, it’s an industry—a smokeless industry. It is metaphorized as a smokeless in- dustry because though it is a provider of services, it generates large incomes that are comparable to the industries which are considered the back-rock of cooperation. No pain, no gain. More pain, more gain. As one male leader said, the principles of fair trade state very clearly that “there is no type of discrimination, whether political, whether religious, gender.”

Several leaders described the cooperative as “open” to women or stated that there was “space” for women to participate as members and leaders.

I think my main concern is about the threat of increasing tourism. Today, there are quite a sizeable number of foreigners working in the construction sector of our country with tourist visas, which is illegal. Many of the land plots and real estate properties are also in the hands of some foreigners, purchased in our citizens’ names. There may be many more sectors where they are involved, which we cannot know because some foreigners used our citizens as fronts to cover their illegal activities. As we are now encountering some similar cases of unscrupu- lous business operations, though not yet on a large scale as in Thai- land, it could be cautious in promot- ing tourism.

If the tourism sector is left unchecked, we are bound to be in the same dire situations that Thailand is now facing. My suggestion to the authorities and the business persons in the tourism industry is: “Please do not compromise the security, culture, values, religion, businesses of our citizens and the stability of the country just to ac- quire more tourist arrivals.”

The main threat to our people is the threat of increasing incomes and create more job op- portunities, the price we will have to pay is too much — a lesson learned from the experiences of Thailand.

A SPECIAL care centre for children with disabilities is planned to launch in Mawlamyine, the capital town of Mon State, at the beginning of next year, according to the Myanmar Autism Association.

With contributions of well-wishers and local charities, including the New Light Foundation and the Myanmar Autism Association, the new training centre will be located in the compound of the youth training centre in Sangyi Ward in Mawlamyine Town with the permission of Mon State government.

Daw San San Myint, vice chairman of the MAA, said well-trained experts will systematically provide individual care with the use of suitable teaching facilities.

Plans are underway to offer technical support for disabled children to care providers by both organisations.

The move aims to improve the lives of those children by providing specialised care, allowing for various kinds of disabilities, including physical, intellectual, audiological and visual impairments.

The centre will allow those from different backgrounds to receive special care. Needy children will not need to pay any fees for the rehabilitation services, but the centre will collect appropriate fees from those who can afford it.

The privately owned centers have been opened in Yangon, Mandalay and PyinOoLwin. There are eight centres in Yangon—two in Mandalay and one in PyinOoLwin. U Thike Tun, the father of an autistic child, said he welcomes the establishment of the training centre and believes it can help autistic children.

“There are many receptive children with disabilities who are facing barriers to receive adequate rehabilitation services from the outside because of different reasons,” he said.—Myitmakha News Agency

OVER 13,000 students in Nyaung U township have better conditions in their school, following the donation of 450 Enelloop Solar Storage Systems to 130 schools. The donation was made by Panasonic in coordination with UNESCO and the Myanmar Ministry of Education, through the project “Strengthening Schools for Education for Sustainable Development”.

The solar storage systems were donated during a ceremony held in Nyaung U on Saturday 17 December 2016. The ceremony was attended by over 200 teachers, students, parents and school leaders from basic education schools in the township.

Opening remarks were given by Dr. Thant Sin, Deputy Director-General, Department of Alternative Education, Ministry of Education. Mr. Hisakazu Maeda, Chief Representative, Panasonic Myanmar welcomed those attending. Ms. Min Jeong Kim, Head of Office, UNESCO Myanmar gave further description of the project and the role of sustainable development in our daily lives and for global prosperity. The ceremony also included Panasonic’s Eco Learning Program, in which students made their own solar lights and learned that renewable energy can reduce our carbon footprint. The importance of choosing renewable energy was emphasized by Mr. Hisakazu Maeda, as the Eco Learning Program’s objective is to “raise local leaders passionate about sustainable development”. Following the ceremony, 60 school heads and teachers attended a training conducted by UNESCO to learn more about teaching sustainable development in their classrooms.

The donation of the Enelloop Solar Storage Systems is the result of the public-private partnership of Panasonic, UNESCO and the Myanmar Ministry of Education. Dr. Thant Sin stated “This is the proudest day for us since Nyaung U has been chosen as the starting point for public-private partnerships for sustainable development in Myanmar.” He further stated the importance of private sector contribution in Myanmar’s development, including the emphasis placed on private sector assistance by State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. Mr. Hisakazu Maeda stated that Panasonic “believes all people benefit from access to electricity” and described Panasonic’s work to ensure all had access to electricity and especially renewable energy, and its long presence and contribution to Myanmar. The Enelloop Solar Storage Systems will provide a full day of solar lighting and access to power per each charge for the 130 schools, all of which do not currently have access to electricity.

Increasing awareness and use of renewable energy—which, as noted by Dr. Thant Sin, will be needed to sustainably answer Myanmar’s energy needs—is a featured component of the project “Strengthening Schools for Education for Sustainable Development”. The project, which will also develop teaching materials and teacher trainings, promotes knowledge and skills for sustainable development in classrooms. Sustainable development, as Ms. Min Jeong Kim described, is “development in which all are able to equally prosper and have lives with dignity for generation after generation.” She further noted this project is unique in that it brings together education, science and culture to improve lives. With these three elements, we can share in a culture of peace, using resources in a manner that allows for a harmonious society.

The project will continue through 2017, with the commitment voiced by the teachers and students at the Donation Ceremony to renewable energy and to practice their skills and knowledge for sustainable development. They will be supported by tools and trainings for their classrooms by UNESCO, the Ministry of Education, and Panasonic in their effort to “provide a better life and better world for people everywhere”—GNLM

Migration fears ebb since Brexit vote, giving PM May breathing space

PRESTATYN, (Wales) — When farmers, business leaders and politicians met in north Wales to discuss what Brexit meant for their community, there was barely any mention of immigration — the very issue that dominated the referendum campaign across Britain.

One man did stand up to air his worries over the unfettered movement of migrants from the rest of Europe which he blamed for losing his job. But the others responded by simply rolling their eyes and quickly moving on to the next point.

Most of those assembled by a British parliamentary committee in a cinema in the seaside town of Prestatyn had come to discuss their concerns about their future outside the European Union, not to revisit the arguments that led to Britain’s vote in June to leave the bloc.

Their response is part of a trend emerging across the country, according to opinion polls, with the immigration fears that loomed so large before the referendum being overtaken by concerns over what Brexit will mean for everyday life.

In the monthly Ipsos MORI / Economist Issues Index, which asks about 1,000 people across the country “What are the most important issues facing Britain?”, the EU and the terms of Britain’s exit led at 39 per cent in November — above immigration on 35 per cent.

A month earlier, immigration was at 36 per cent, with the EU and Brexit at 32 per cent, while in June — during the run-up to the vote — immigration was at 48 percent with the EU at 32.

This shift in public concerns could offer some respite to Prime Minister Theresa May as she prepares for negotiations on Britain’s exit from the 28-nation bloc.

She has been under immense pressure to curb free movement of people from Europe to Britain but will face fierce opposition from Brussels negotiators as she seeks, at the same time to retain access to the bloc’s trade and financial markets.

Should the talks boil down to a trade-off between accepting a degree of movement of people from the EU in return for preferential access to the single market, as widely expected, any relaxation of public pressure on immigration could help free the government’s hand at the negotiating table.

Gavan Skinner, research director at Ipsos MORI, told Reuters it was still too early to say whether fears about how Britain will manage outside the EU will continue to stay high as “concerns about immigration will be partly dependent on the outcomes of the Brexit negotiations”.

But he added: “It is certainly the case that concern about Brexit has increased significantly from the beginning of this year.”

Trump, Bill Clinton trade insults in unusual exchange

NEW YORK — Donald Trump pounced on a reported comment from Bill Clinton, the former president and husband of his Democratic rival in the 8 November election, in an unusual exchange on Tuesday between future and former US presidents.

Clinton, whose wife, Hillary, lost last month’s election after spending millions of dollars more than her Republican rival, was spotted at a bookstore near the couple’s hometown a suburb of New York City earlier this month. One person asked him, “Is Trump smart?” according to the editor of a local newspaper.

“He doesn’t know much. One thing he does know is how to get angry, white men to vote for him,” Clinton replied, according to the Record-Review of Bedford and Pound Ridge. Clinton also said he had received a telephone call from Trump the day after the November election, the newspaper said.

The report of the impromptu question-and-answer session was widely picked up on Monday.

Trump waited until Tuesday morning to hit back.

“Bill Clinton stated that I called him after the election. Wrong, he called me (with a very nice congratulations). He ‘doesn’t know much’...” Trump wrote on Twitter.

Trump added in a second post: “especially how to get people, even with an unlimited budget, out to vote in the vital swing states ( and more). They focused on wrong states.”

Trump has used Twitter regularly as his megaphone on everything from personal beefs to US policy on China. Trump’s individual targets have ranged from Fox News anchor Megyn Kelly, who during a presidential debate angered Trump, to the leader of an Indiana steelworkers union who disputed the number of jobs saved by a Trump deal in that state.

Cambodia seizes 1.3 tons of elephant tusks bound for China

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian authorities have seized more than 1.36 tons of elephant tusks imported from Africa and bound for China, a government official said on Wednesday.

Un Vanardit, deputy chief of the Phnom Penh forestry office, said his authority, in cooperation with other concerned government bodies, had seized 1.58 tons of elephant tusks, tails and other animal parts including tiger bones.

According to the government’s report, the tusks and other animal parts were packed inside three hollowed-out logs imported from Mozambique and owned by Cambodian authorities in Phnom Penh last Saturday after they were loaded onto a train from the country’s southwestern sea port of Sihanoukville.

The authorities took several days to uncover all animal parts and logs loaded in three containers. The government said the items, thought to be bound for China, were confiscated. —Kyodo News

US announces biggest land return on Okinawa to Japan since 1972

TOKYO — The US forces in Japan said Wednesday the United States and Japan are now prepared for the return of thousands of hectares of US military-used land on Okinawa to Japanese control, in what would be the biggest such land transfer in more than 40 years.

The return of part of the land of a US military training area is a positive development for Okinawa, which hopes to see a reduction in its heavy burden of hosting US bases, but the prefecture is in a far from festive mood following the recent crash landing of US Marines Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft off the coast of Okinawa.

Okinawa Gov. Takeshi Onaga, who is stepping up his demand to remove all Ospreys in the prefecture, plans to skip a ceremony, to be organised by the central government in Okinawa on Thursday, to mark the largest land return since the prefecture reverted to Japanese control in 1972 following postwar US occupation.

The land return involves about 4,000 hectares of forest area, or roughly half of the land in the Northern Training Area in the villages of Kuniyama and Higashi. The move is based on an agreement reached between Japan and the United States in 1996.

But six helpdes, likely to be used by Ospreys, have been built in the retained area in exchange for the land return — a project that has met stiff opposition from residents living nearby. —Kyodo News

German police step up manhunt after releasing Christmas market suspect

BERLIN — German police on Wednesday intensified a manhunt for the driver of a truck, who killed 12 people when he mowed into a Berlin Christmas market, and said they were following a number of good leads.

After releasing a Pakistani asylum-seeker arrested near the scene, authorities warned that the attacker is on the run and may be armed.

They have also said it is unclear if the perpetrator was acting alone or with others. Islamic State has claimed responsibility for the attack.

The head of the Association of German Criminal Detectives, told German television late on Tuesday that police hoped to make another arrest soon. “I am relatively confident that we will perhaps tomorrow or in the near future be able to present a new suspect,” Andre Schulz told a talk show on the ZDF public channel.

Wednesday’s Passauer Neue Presse quoted the head of the group of interior ministers from Germany’s 16 federal states, Klaus Boulion, as saying tougher security measures were needed. —Reuters

Kremlin: Too early to say who behind Turkey envoy’s killing

MOSCOW — The Kremlin said on Wednesday it was too early to say who stood behind the murder of Russia’s ambassador to Turkey, Andrei Karlov, who was shot dead by a gunman at an Ankara art gallery on Monday.

Turkey’s foreign minister has told US Secretary of State John Kerry that Ankara and Moscow believe followers of Muslim cleric Fethullah Gulen were behind the killing, ministry sources said on Tuesday.

But when Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov was asked about the Turkish foreign minister’s comments on Wednesday, he said it was too early to draw any conclusions about who may have orchestrated the murder. “We need to wait for the results of the joint investigative group,” Peskov told reporters on a conference call. “It is really not worth rushing to any conclusions.” —Reuters

KINSHASA — Security forces shot dead at least 26 protestors who had gathered in the streets of Kinshasa and other cities of Democratic Republic of Congo on Tuesday to demand that President Joseph Kabila step down after his mandate expired overnight.

Scattered protests started on Tuesday, and opposition leader Etienne Tshisekedi called on the Congolese people to peacefully resist Kabila, who has remained in power beyond his constitutional mandate with no election to pick a successor.

Human Rights Watch researcher Ida Sawyer said on Twitter that at least 26 protestors had been killed by security forces.

The government spokesman could not be reached for comment and a police spokesman had no information on deaths.

Gunfire cracked in several districts of the capital, Kinshasa, a city of 12 million, as measures to thwart dissent raised fears of bloody repression.

With a ban on demonstrations in force and a heavy military presence, Kinshasa’s normally busy main boulevards were mostly deserted as pockets of youths gathered in side-streets only to be dispersed by volleys of teargas.

Thousands stuck as Aleppo evacuation deal hits last-minute hitch

BEIRUT — A convoy of 60 buses carrying people desperate to leave the last rebel-held enclave of Aleppo was held up in freezing temperatures on Wednesday when an evacuation deal hit a last-minute hitch.

The eventual departure of the thousands left in the insurgent zone will hand full control of the city to Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, the biggest prize of the nearly six-year-old civil war.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a British-based monitoring group, said the bus convoy entered the last besieged pocket of the city on Tues-day in harsh weather conditions and some were loaded with people, but they had not moved since.

Eight buses en route to Aleppo from the pro-government villages of Foua and Kefraya had also been held up since Tuesday, the Observatory said. Government forces had insisted the two villages, besieged by rebels in Idlib, must be included in the deal to bring people out of east Aleppo.

State television, broadcasting live from near the Aleppo departure zone, said the rebels had presented new conditions with the aim of obstructing the evacuation deal. Rebels said the government was to blame for hindering the evacuations.

So far, about 25,000 people have been evacuated from Aleppo, according to the International Committee of the Red Cross, which is helping with the process. A UN official said 750 people had so far been evacuated from Foua and Kefraya.

Behind those leaving Aleppo’s rebel zone was a wasteland of flattened buildings, concrete rubble and bullet-pocked walls, where tens of thousands lived until recent days under intense bombardment even after medical and rescue services had collapsed.

Rebel-held parts of the once-flourishing economic centre with its renowned ancient sites has been pulverised during the war which has killed more than 300,000 people, created the world’s worst refugee crisis and allowed for the rise of Islamic State.

But in the much larger western part of the city, held throughout the war by the government, there were big street parties on Tuesday night, along with the lighting of a Christmas tree, as residents celebrated the end of fighting. The Syrian army has used loudspeakers to broadcast warnings to rebels that it was about to enter their rapidly diminishing area and told them how many people had already been arrested.

Control of Aleppo would be a major victory for Assad, and his main allies Iran and Russia, against rebels who have defied him in Syria’s most populous city for four years. — Reuters
Experts scour site of deadly blast at Mexico fireworks market

TULTEPEC, (Mexico) — Teams of forensic investigators pored over the charred remains of fireworks market outside Mexico City on Wednesday after a series of blasts a day earlier killed at least 31 people and injured dozens more in a disaster marked by disbelief and tears.

Videos of the blasts at the San Pablito market showed a spectacular flurry of pyrotechnics exploding high into the sky, like rockets in a war zone, as a massive plume of charcoal-gray smoke billowed out from the site.

It was the third time in just over a decade that explosions struck the popular marketplace in Tultepec, home to the country’s best-known fireworks shopping and located about 20 miles (32 km) north of Mexico City in the adjacent State of Mexico.

Evaicel Avila, the state’s governor, said the explosions injured at least 72 people while another 53 remained missing.

“Everything was destroyed, it was very ugly and many bodies were thrown all over the place, including a lot of children. It’s the worst thing I’ve ever seen in my life,” said 24-year-old housewife Angelica Avila as tears ran down her face.

Avila spoke outside a nearby hospital as she waited for an update on the health of her brother, a fireworks salesman, who she said was burned and also suffered a heart attack.

The federal attorney general’s office opened an investigation, saying in a statement late on Tuesday that six separate blasts kicked off the destruction. Director of Tultepec emergency services Isidro Sanchez told local television earlier on Tuesday that a lack of adequate safety measures was the likely cause of the blasts.

The vast majority of the market’s 300 stalls were completely destroyed by the explosions, said state official Jose Manzur, adding that the site was inspected by safety officials just last month and no irregularities were found.

In late 2005, explosions struck the same Tultepec fireworks market just days before independence day celebrations, injuring scores of people. Another explosion gutted the area again almost a year later.

The market was particularly busy on Tuesday as many Mexicans buy fireworks to celebrate the upcoming Christmas and New Year’s holidays.— Reuters

Obama bans new oil, gas drilling off Alaska, part of Atlantic coast

WASHINGTON — US President Barack Obama on Tuesday banned new oil and gas drilling in federal waters in the Atlantic and Arctic Oceans, in a push to leave his stamp on the environment before Republican Donald Trump takes office next month.

Obama used a 1950s-era law called the Outer Continental Shelf Act that allows presidents to go court if it sought to lift it.

Even if Trump tries to lift it, a recent memo from his energy transition team said his policy could increase oil and gas drilling.

A recent memo from his energy transition team said his policy could increase offshore oil and gas drilling. A recent memo from his energy transition team said his policy could increase oil and gas drilling.

The American Petroleum Institute oil industry group disagreed about the permanence of the ban and said Trump could likely use a presidential memorandum to lift it.

“We are hopeful the incoming administration will reverse this decision as the nation continues to need a robust strategy for developing offshore and onshore energy,” said Erik Milito, API’s upstream director.— Reuters

Hong Kong bans import of German, Dutch poultry products

HONG KONG — The Hong Kong food safety authority said on Wednesday that it has banned the import of poultry meat and products, including poultry eggs, from the two areas, the Centre for Food Safety (CFS) of Hong Kong’s Food and Environmental Hygiene Department said.

The ban, with immediate effect, aims to protect public health in Hong Kong, the CFS said.

According to a CFS spokesman, in the first 10 months of this year, Hong Kong imported about 8,400 tonnes of frozen poultry meat and 2 million poultry eggs from Germany, and about 7,800 tonnes of frozen poultry meat and 7.3 million poultry eggs from the Netherlands.— Xinhua

America mourns heroes, rock icons and sporting legends in 2016

NEW YORK — The United States lost some literal and figurative pioneers in 2016 with the deaths of famed sons and daughters from John Glenn, the first American to orbit Earth, to Gwen Ifill, the first black woman to anchor a major US television newscast.

The year also saw the deaths of stars of sports, the arts and politics, including former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali and golfing great Arnold Palmer, rock star Prince and US Supreme Court Associate Justice Antonin Scalia.

Glenn, a Democrat who served four terms as one of Ohio’s US Senators after his astronaut career, died at the age of 95 earlier this month.

Like former first lady Nancy Reagan and the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of “To Kill a Mockingbird,” Harper Lee, who also died this year, Glenn was part of the generation that lived through the deprivations of the Great Depression and the hardships of World War II.

“We will remember them for a long time,” said writer Nick Taylor, who collaborated with Glenn on his memoir.

“That generation was tested in a way that subsequent generations have not been,” Taylor said in an interview. “They had this attitude to put one foot in front of the other to make things better.”

British rock star David Bowie died of liver cancer in a New York City home in January just days after releasing his final album. He was one of the first in a long list of musical greats to play their last in 2016.

Tearful fans gathered in suburban Minneapolis after the April death of Prince at the age of 57 of an accidental, self-administered overdose of the painkiller fentanyl.

“He redefined what our theater could talk about and how,” actor Harvey Fierstein tweeted about the man who penned “Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf” and “A Delicate Balance.”

The year also saw the passing of many activists, politicians and journalists.

Among them were veteran CBS broadcast journal- ism professor at Canada’s McGill University and an expert in music history. "These were real icons and giants and they became that way because they didn’t sound like anyone else.”

The film and theater worlds also lost some stars this year. Comedians Gene Wilder and Garry Shandling took their final bows, as did Academy Award-winning-actress Patty Duke, Florence Henderson, America’s favorite TV mom from “The Brady Bunch,” and Zsa Zsa Gabor, who paved the way for future celebrities like Kim Kardashian.

American theater lost one of its greatest dramatists with the death of Edward Albee, the triple Pulitzer Prize winning playwright.

“He redefined what our theater could talk about and how,” actor Harvey Fierstein tweeted about the man who penned “Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf” and “A Delicate Balance.”

The House of Houdini, a museum in Budapest’s historic Castle district, seeks to shed light on the illusionist’s roots with a display of memorabilia and a research team tracking down documents about his life.

“If he was of course the greatest escape artist history ever had... but I believe his secrets lie from deep inside from his Hungarian roots, when as a poor Jewish family they escaped Hungary.”

Diezel hopes Paul Walker would be proud of ‘Fast & Furious 8’

LOS ANGELES — "The Fate of the Furious" will mark the first film in the "Fast & Furious" series since 2006’s “Tokyo Drift”, not to feature actor Paul Walker, who died in a car accident in 2013 and his co-star Vin Diesel hopes that he would be proud of the upcoming movie.

Diesel, 49, paid tribute to Walker in an Insta- gram post, sharing a photo of the pair at an Award ceremony, where they won the prize for best stunt team for their work in the original "Fast and the Furious" movie.

“You Pablo have given me strength, purpose and resolve. I promised you we would make something you would be proud of and I pray that we have... Miss you,” he captioned the picture. — PTI
Tropical Thailand expects up to 6 per cent rise in tourists in 2017

BANGKOK — Thailand’s tourist arrivals are forecast to rise between 3.75 per cent to 5.8 per cent next year, the Tourism Council said on Wednesday, driven largely by Chinese visitors.

Thailand’s tourism industry, which accounts for about 10 per cent of gross domestic product, has remained strong despite more than a decade of political turbulence including military coups in 2006 and 2014.

A wave of deadly bombings in August in key resort towns that killed four Thai tourists despite receding waters.

Sea of Galilee draws faithful despite receding waters

SEA OF GALILEE (Israel) — On the shimmering Sea of Galilee, where the Christian gospels say Jesus walked on water, 150 Nigerian pilgrims aboard a riverboat sign and dance to an African beat.

Their pilot, Reverend Samuel Tunde Ogumodede, said he and his congregation had come to the biblical lake to see what they had, until now, only read about in the scriptures.

“We came here to seek the face of God, pray to God as he did in the time of the disciples. We will pray here so that he will do the same in our lives,” he said on board the boat.

About 1 million tourists from abroad visit the Sea of Galilee, also known as Lake Tiberias or Kinneret, each year, according to the Israeli Tourism Ministry.

Stretching about 65 sq miles (170 square km) from the foot of the Israel-occupied Golan Heights, the Sea of Galilee, at its southern tip, spills into the Jordan River, where Jesus is believed to have been baptised.

On a crisp winter day, worshippers from Singapore, Nigeria and Germany performed their own baptism ceremonies in the waters.

The gospels tell of Jesus walking on the lake to comfort and save disciples as their ship was foundering in a storm and miraculously producing huge catches of fish for their nets.

But the Sea of Galilee may need a few more miracles these days.

A sharp drop in annual rainfall in the northern Galilee region over the past three years has caused the lake’s waters to recede, according to Israel’s Water Authority. It is now at its lowest in five years.

This has created problems for the largest freshwater lake in Israel, which is a water resource for the country’s north and neighbouring Jordan, a tourist hot-spot and a main fishing zone.

Receding water levels means higher salt levels, which harm the eco-balance and could render the water unsalvageable.

In an effort to control the damage, only a 10th of the annual average quantity of water supply has been drawn from the lake this year, Water Authority spokesman Uri Schor said.

And in a complex operation, salt water springs are found and their flow is diverted out of the lake.

To better keep the eco-balance and maintain water quality, the lake is now stocked with millions of fish every year, Schor said.

The Sea of Galilee has in the past provided up to a third of Israel’s water. Because of its grave situation it now supplies a fraction of the country’s water.

Israel relies now on the more expensive methods of desalination and recycling for more than half its water supply. — Reuters

Viet Nam to welcome 10m foreign visitors in 2016

HANOI — Viet Nam is expected to welcome over 10 million international arrivals in 2016, according to the Viet Nam National Administration of Tourism (VNNAT) on Wednesday.

The 10 millionth foreign visitor to Viet Nam is forecast to be welcomed at Phu Quoc international airport in the southern coastal Kien Giang province on Sunday.

On the same day, a ceremony will take place to round off the 2016 National Tourism Year, which was designated to draw visitors to Viet Nam’s tourist attraction of Phu Quoc Island and southern Mekong Delta region.

In 2016, more than 5.4 million tourists are likely to visit Kien Giang, increasing 24 per cent year-on-year and exceeding the yearly quota by 9.5 per cent. Of the figure, international arrivals will grow 31.4 per cent annually, 14 per cent higher than initial plan.— Xinhua
Kvitova undergoes hand surgery following knife attack, full recovery expected

PRAGUE — Two-time Wimbledon tennis champion Petra Kvitova underwent nearly four hours of surgery on her playing hand on Tuesday after she was stabbed by a knife-wielding intruder in her home in the Czech Republic.

Early indications showed the Czech world number 11 could well make a recovery and return to tennis, where she has been a mainstay in the Czech Republic.

“The scale of the injury is serious, but Petra is young and strong, according to the surgeon, who sees no reason why she could not return to playing tennis,” Karel Tejkal, spokesman for the Czech Fed Cup team, said.

Doctors operated on all five fingers of her left hand and she will not be able to exert pressure on the injured hand for three months to let repairs to tendons heal, he said.

Kvitova had said on social media before undergoing surgery that the attack by an individual with a knife on Tuesday had left her “shaken, but fortunate to be alive”.

The assault took place in her flat in the city of Prostejov, about 260 km (160 miles) southeast of Prague, the location of a tennis club where she, men’s world number 10 Tomas Berdych and other top-ranked Czech players often train.

Czech media reported the intruder presented himself to Kvitova as a boiler inspector.

“In my attempt to defend myself, I was badly injured on my left hand,” Kvitova said on Twitter. “The injury is severe and I will need to see specialists, but if you know anything about me I am strong and I will fight this.”—Reuters

Leicester’s Vardy to serve three-game ban after appeal rejected

LONDON — Leicester City striker Jamie Vardy will serve a three-match suspension after the club’s appeal against his dismissal during a Premier League match on Tuesday was rejected.

The 29-year-old, who has served the manager well during trophy-laden spells at Barcelona and Bayern Munich.

“You always have to do what you know. I don’t think he’s (Guardiola) going to change many things,” Toure said.

“I think he’s seen how difficult this league is physically, but he’s a very intelligent guy, he understands football very well. He always has to win, to conquer a league, but he’s seen that in England it’s complicated.”—Reuters

Dortmund stumble against Augsburg, Eintracht win again

BERLIN — Borussia Dortmund missed a bagful of chances to draw 1-1 at home with Augsburg on Tuesday, as they squandered the opportunity to make up ground in the Bundesliga title race heading into the winter break.

South Korean Ji Dong-won beat keeper Roman Weidenfeller at the second attempt in the 33rd minute to put the visitors ahead.

Dortmund, who had hit the post through Mario Goetze in the ninth minute, dominated late in the first half but could not make their pressure count until Ousmane Dembele levelled two minutes after the restart.

The hosts had numerous chances in a one-sided second half with Pierre-Emile Kjaer, the Bundesliga’s top scorer, scoring close half a dozen times. Dortmund are fourth on 27 points, nine points adrift of leaders Bayern Munich and RB Leipzig, who face each other on Wednesday.

“I think the game tonight reflects our first half of the season,” said Dortmund coach Thomas Tuchel after Dortmund’s third consecutive league draw. “We are being punished too often. We should be able at some point to keep a clean sheet and win 1-0,” Tuchel said. “We will obviously not stop working at it. We need to be consistent in our competitions.”

EINTRACHT FRANKFURT moved up to third on 29 after beating 10-man Mainz 05 3-0 with Branimir Hrgota scoring twice as they secured a fourth victory in their last seven league games.

Mario Gomez’s winner gave VfL Wolfsburg a 2-1 victory over Borussia Moenchengladbach that left both teams on 16 points and heaped further pressure on Gladbach coach Andre Schubert following their fifth loss in the last seven games.

Toure keen to help Man City become ‘bigger’ than United

LONDON — Midfielder Yaya Toure is determined to realise his dream of helping Manchester City eclipse arch rivals Manchester United.

The side have a long way to go to overhaul England’s most successful club but backed by the wealthy City Football Group, Toure felt huge strides had been made since he joined from Barcelona in 2010. “I have already won two Premier League titles and I want more than that, another new story,” Toure told British media.

“What we are seeing is the Premier League is so tough, this year it’s going to be tougher than any other years. When I signed for City, I came to this club to make history. “I want this club to change, I want this club to be bigger than United. I know it’s going to be a lot of work, but that’s my dream.” City made a flying start under manager Pep Guardiola, winning their first 10 games, but have won just six of 17 matches since, a run which has left them third in the Premier League, seven points behind leaders Chelsea after 17 games. Toure, however, is certain Guardiola will not buckle under pressure to tweak the tactics that have served the manager well during trophy-laden spells at Barcelona and Bayern Munich.

“You always have to do what you know. I don’t think he’s (Guardiola) going to change many things,” Toure said.
