MoHSS to improve coverage of HIV prevention services across Myanmar

HIV prevention activities have been carried out across the country by the Ministry of Health and Sports, which plans to improve coverage of its services across Myanmar next year, the ministry’s spokesperson said.

The ministry is now implementing the HIV prevention plans at over 30,000 hospitals in states and regions plus five 200-bed hospitals in the areas with the highest rate of HIV infections, including Kawthaung, Tachileik, Namshkam and border towns.

The ministry’s township-based HIV control programmes have reached the target population in over 300 townships this year. According to the ministry’s figures, an estimated 10,000 people become infected with the human immunodeficiency virus each year in Myanmar. There are almost 200,000 people living with HIV in the country, 23 per cent of whom are intravenous drug users and seven per cent of whom have engaged in same-sex relations.

The serious virus mostly found in young people is partly due to poor health education. The majority of transmissions occurred among commercial sex workers, intravenous drug users and same-sex partners. To control the disease, anti-retroviral drugs have been distributed by the ministry and its partner organizations.

About four hours later, approximately 10 members of the KIA attacked a tollgate near the Oriental Hotel in Kutkai. Security forces responsible for the road returned fire and the armed group withdrew to the west.

KIA/TNLA attack govt troops

GOVERNMENT troops came under attack by about 60 members of the KIA and the TNLA joint forces while conducting area clearance operations in Muse Township at about 4:30 pm Friday.

As government troops repelled the attack, the armed groups retreated to the southeast at 6 pm in the evening.

About four hours later, approximately 10 members of the KIA attacked a tollgate near the Oriental Hotel in Kutkai. Security forces responsible for the road returned fire and the armed group withdrew to the west.

Government troops were also attacked by the armed groups about 7,000 metres to the west of Mong-paw Village yesterday morning until the government troops returned fire, prompting the armed groups to withdraw to the west at about 7:15 am.

During the clashes, some of the security forces were injured, officials said. Several rounds of ammunition, a backpack and a guerrilla uniform were seized by the security forces.

Alley trash removal project to continue in Mingala Taungyun and Ahlon township

YANGON City Development Committee will continue to remove rubbish from alleys behind buildings in Mingala Taungyun and Ahlon townships after finishing similar projects in six downtown townships.

The YCDC’s Pollution Control and Cleansing Department initiated the project starting in mid-August in Pazundaung, Kyaukhtada, Botataung, Pabedan, Latha and Lammaw township. During the project, the committee also removed the squatters in downtown alleys.

The project successfully completed on 9 December in the target areas with the department planning to continue the waste collection works in Mingala Taungnyunt and Ahlon located near downtown.

The sanitation work is planned to begin in Ahlon township on 26 December and in Mingala Taungnyunt township in the first week of January. The committee is currently carrying out educative programmes to raise public awareness about the YCDC’s rules and regulations regarding undisciplined acts of throwing trash into alleys, which blocks the gutter and causes dirty water to flow into ground floors and into the environment.

Authorities has plan to finalise upgrading of Thabyaygon market in March, 2017

THE upgrading of Thabyaygon market, which serves many of the capital’s civil servants, is planned to be finalised in March next year, according to the administration office for the market under the Nay Pyi Taw Development Affairs Committee.

The development project aims to protect the market, which is located in basin areas, from possible weather effects during the rainy season. Water inundation usually occurs during the rainy season, which is disrupting the sellers and buyers in the market.

Art Wave, a Chinese company, has pledged to construct roofs on the new market for the purpose of promoting China-Myanmar friendship. The new project will include around 480 shops.

The tender-winning Tet Lan Construction company will undertake building of the floor of the building, including preparing the ground of the market, the committee’s spokesperson said.

Construction work began on 15 December.— 200

A NAVAL vessel intercepted an illegal fishing boat Friday in the territorial waters of Myanmar, arresting one Thai national and four Myanmar nationals who were on board. According to the ongoing investigation, the boat is owned by Ms Kruawan of Ranaung, Thailand, and the boat departed Ranaung on Wednesday and caught fish between Myanmar and Thailand and in Myanmar’s territorial waters on 23rd December. The navy ship found the fishing boat 36 miles south-west of Kawthaung around 8:35am on Friday and signaled it to stop.

The boat turned and attempted to escape, but the naval ship was able to intercept it at about 9:30 am. Action is being taken against the five in accordance with the law.— Myanmar News Agency
Lacquerware market in Bagan cool despite high season

THE lacquerware market in Bagan, a popular ancient city in Mandalay, continues to cool even in high season, according to those in industry.

“The region’s lacquerware trade mainly depends on visitors, especially foreign tourists,” said Daw Wah Wah, the proprietress of a lacquerware shop in Bagan.

“We are facing low demand for lacquerware. This year’s lacquerware trade significantly decreased compared with the same period last year, although many visitors entered the region this season.”

Daw Thanda, a visitor from Mandalay, said when she arrives in Bagan, she usually goes to lacquerware workshops to collect one or more traditional handicrafts which are suitable to give to her colleagues as a gift, observing the culture-based business. International visitors prefer cups, plates, kettles and lamps as well as large traditional bowls used for offering of food to monks.

External trade reaches $18.7b, over $3.2b in trade deficit

MYANMAR’S trade deficit over the past nine months reached more than US$3 billion on a trade value of over $18 billion, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

The export value for the period was over $7.7 billion while imports surpassed $10.9 billion, resulting in a trade deficit of $3.269 billion. This year’s trade deficit is fallen by over $1 billion compared with the same time last year.

According to the Central Statistical Organisation, the trade deficit in FY 2012-2013 was $91.9 million. It increased to $2.5 billion in FY 2013-2014, $4.912 billion in FY 2014-2015 and $5.407 billion in FY 2015-2016.

The ministry’s figure shows that the total external trade value between April and mid-December of this year hit around $18.714 billion, a decrease of over $343 million matched with last year.

Both imports and exports are up this year. Of total exports, normal trade accounted for $4.676 billion, increasing by $280 million compared with last year, while border trade totaled $3.045 billion, increasing $70 million.

Myanmar exported agricultural products worth $1.894 billion, animal products worth $5.628 billion, fisheries products worth $365 million, minerals worth over $680 million, forest products worth $166 million, industrial goods worth $3.409 billion and other commodities worth $1.199 billion to its trade partners this year.

The country imported capital goods worth $4.345 billion, raw materials worth $4.012 billion and personal goods worth $2.634 billion.

Banana prices double in domestic market

THE PRICES of banana doubled in Mawlamyinegyun Township in Ayeyawady Region due to low production this season, locals say.

The banana price increased to Ks1,300, the most per bunch this year from Ks200 in the last two years in the township.

“Based on the size and kinds of banana, we sell a bunch of bananas for between Ks1,000 and Ks1,300,” said U Aung Kyaw, a commercial banana grower.

He continued to say that low production is linked to the declining number of banana growers in the region, as some farmers have reduced their efforts to develop banana plantations because of unhealthy profits in previous years.

After 2014, some banana growers selected other marketable seasonal crops.

Daw Swe Swe, a resident of the township, said she always eats organic banana because of its essential nutrients including vitamin B-6, manganese, vitamin C, fiber, copper and potassium.

“I usually buy a bunch of banana at a price of above Ks1,000,” she added.

Villages in Mawlamyinegyun Township mainly rely on farming businesses.

Rice export volumes down by about 150,000 tonnes

THE volume of rice exports as of mid-December in this fiscal year slumped by about 150,000 tonnes when compared to the same period of last fiscal year, according to the Commerce Ministry.

Myanmar exported nearly 600,000 tonnes of rice to foreign countries as of 16th December in this fiscal year and the export volume is down from over 700,000 tonnes in last fiscal year.

China is the main export market of Myanmar’s rice, which is also exported to over 30 foreign countries through normal trade.

The rice is exported to China through the Muse border, but the decrease in rice exports is attributed to the confiscation of Myanmar rice by Chinese authorities and November attacks in Muse by ethnic groups. The export value in Muse border trade camp as of 16th December in this fiscal year amounted to US$ 2,279.224 million, which is down from US$ 2,518.073 in the previous fiscal year.

Import value in the same period also slumped by US$ 6.322 million, according to statistics of the Commerce Ministry.

Myanmar shifted to other rice export markets when the Muse border trade was suspended due to the attacks, exporting rice to European Union countries and the African market. Around 60,000 tonnes of rice per month are exported to African countries, according to the Myanmar Rice Federation.

Modi says won’t hesitate on tough decisions to help economy

PATALGANGA — India will not hesitate to make tough decisions to help support its growing economy, Prime Minister Narendra Modi said on Saturday, alluding to his recent scrapping of 500 and 1,000 rupee banknotes to tackle endemic corruption.

“Tough decisions will make India a developed country,” said Modi in remarks at an event organised by the Securities and Exchange Board of India. India’s capital markets regulator that his government would continue to follow sound and prudent economic policies to ensure that India’s long-term prospects are bright.

“We will not take decisions for short-term political point scoring... We will not shy away from the difficult decisions if those decisions are in the interests of the country,” Modi said.

“Demonetisation is an example. It is a short-term pain but it will bring long-term gain.”

Modi announced the shock move to ditch 500 and 1,000 rupee notes and with a combined value of $256 billion on 8 November, saying the large denomination notes fuelled corruption and fraud and were even used to finance attacks by militants who target India.

With the cash economy estimated to account for a fifth of India’s $2 trillion gross domestic product, the decision has disrupted the daily lives of hundreds of millions of Indians.

But economists and some businesses say it could ultimately help broaden the formal economy and improve tax compliance.

Modi said the government had transformed the economy in less than three years by cutting and achieving fiscal deficit targets, keeping the current account deficit low, boosting foreign exchange reserves and lowering inflation.

“Developed countries and emerging markets are both facing slow growth. Against this background, India is being seen as a bright spot. Growth is projected to remain among the highest in the world,” he said.— Reuters

Indonesian police kill two militants during raid on house in Java

JAKARTA — Indonesian police killed two suspected Islamist militants in a house in West Java on Sunday, a police spokesman said, marking the latest in a series of raids aimed at preventing planned attacks in the Muslim-majority nation.

Two men had been arrested in Cibinong, in West Java, and led police to a house at the Jatiuhur dam, national police spokesman Awi Setiyono said. “There were two men there and they were even used to finance attacks by militants who target India.”

With the cash economy estimated to account for a fifth of India’s $2 trillion gross domestic product, the decision has disrupted the daily lives of hundreds of millions of Indians.

South Korea prosecutor says it might raid presidential office

SEOUL — South Korea’s special prosecutor investigating a corruption scandal involving President Park Geun-hye said on Sunday it was considering whether to raid the presidential offices if and if it did so, it had no choice but to do so publicly.

Special prosecutors are investigating allegations that Park colluded with a friend, Choi Soon-sil, and aides to pressure big companies to contribute to foundations set up to back her policy initiatives.

“In case of raiding the Blue House... to carry out that, there is no choice but to make it public,” Lee Kyu-chul, a spokesman for the special prosecutor’s team told reporters in a briefing, referring to the presidential offices.

“We are still considering whether the raid is needed and if needed what the raid should be aimed at.”

Park, whose father ruled the country for 18 years after seizing power in a 1961 coup, was indicted in a 9 December parliamentary vote.

She has denied wrongdoing but apologized for carelessness in her ties with Choi, who is facing her own trial.

Prosecutors have said previously they needed access to the presidential offices as part of their investigation. The office has denied access.

Park has immunity from prosecution as long as she is in office even though her powers have been suspended since parliament voted to impeach her.

A large crowd of protesters, including about 200 young people dressed as Santa Claus, took to the streets of central Seoul on Saturday for the ninth weekend in a row to demand the immediate resignation of the president.— Reuters
China’s aircraft carrier to drill in Western Pacific

BEIJING — China’s first aircraft carrier will carry out drills in the Western Pacific, in what the navy called part of routine exercises, amid rising tensions over the self-ruled Taiwan that Beijing claims as its own.

The navy said in a statement late on Saturday the Liaoning, along with its accompanying fleet, would conduct “exercises far out at sea”, without giving details of the location or route, in what is likely its first blue-water drill far from home waters.

“This exercise is being carried out in accordance with annual exercise plans,” the navy said in a statement also carried on the front page of the official People’s Liberation Army Daily.

Taiwan’s defence ministry said on Sunday it had been monitoring the drills closely as the Liaoning went through the Miyako Strait, a body of water between the Japanese islands of Miyako and Okinawa, heading into the Pacific.

It said it was monitoring whether the aircraft carrier would continue into the Bashi Channel, which lies between Taiwan and the Philippines, on its return.

China’s military has conducted its first ever live-fire drills using an aircraft carrier and fighters in the northeastern Bohai Sea close to the Korean peninsula this month, and has more recently been in the East China Sea.

The navy showed pictures on its official microblog of the drills in the East China Sea, including J-15 carrier-borne fighter jets launching into the sky, overseen by navy chief Wu Shengli.

They conducted aerial refuelling and air combat exercises on Thursday, the navy said.

China’s growing military presence in the disputed South China Sea in particular has fuelled concern, with the United States criticising its militarization of maritime outposts and holding regular air and naval patrols to ensure freedom of navigation.

The Western Pacific exercise comes amid new tension over self-ruled Taiwan, following US President-elect Donald Trump’s telephone call with the island’s president that upset Beijing.

China’s air force conducted long-range drills this month above the East and South China Seas that rattled Japan and Taiwan. China said those exercises were also routine.

Japan to maintain Russia sanctions along with economic project

TOKYO — Japan will adopt a two-prong policy on Russia of maintaining sanctions in line with the Group of Seven’s protest against the seizure of Crimea, while also helping to boost the Russian economy, government sources said on Sunday.

Japan will explain to other countries in connection with the upcoming summit in Japan.

Japan has adopted a policy both to settle bilateral issues and allaying growing concerns that Tokyo could withdraw from the anti-Russia coalition over the Crimea annexation, the sources said.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s government believes in the anti-Russia coalition over the sovereignty returns to Ukraine,” one of the sources said. Another said the need to continue with the current sanction regimes “is likely to be a topic” at next year’s G-7 summit in Italy.

But Abe will make good on a recent agreement with President Vladimir Putin to provide a 300 billion yen (32.6 billion) package to help boost the Russian economy. The leaders reached the agreement during the 15-16 December summit in Japan.

Japan could help Russian corporations that are designated under sanctions imposed by other countries in connection with the Crimea issue and Russia’s largest oil producer Rosneft, which is covered by the Tokyo-Moscow package, might be one such company, the sources said.

In reaction to the Crimea annexation the G-7, which groups Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and the United States, as well as the European Union took various punitive actions against Russia. On a bilateral basis Japan has suspended inter-government negotiations on relaxing conditions for visa issuance and limited imports of products from Crimea.

Abe has pointed out Japan’s claim to Russian-held islands off Hokkaido to sign a post-World War II peace treaty.

Russia has shown few signs of budging over the sovereignty of the islands former Soviet troops seized after Japan’s surrender in the war in 1945.

Typhoon Nock-ten intensifies on Sunday as it approaches Philippines

MANILA — A powerful typhoon strengthened on Sunday as it approached the central Philippines and authorities issued warnings of Christmas Day destruction as they moved thousands of people to safety.

Typhoon Nock-ten was packing maximum sustained winds of 185 kph (115 mph) with gusts up to 255 kph as it moved west over the ocean at 15 knh, the national disaster agency said in its latest weather bulletin. Sustained wind was earlier 175 kph with gusts of 215 kph.

“We should be prepared because this is a strong typhoon. It could destroy houses and weak structures,” said Rene Paciente of the weather bureau.

The storm was expected to make landfall in Catanduanes province on the Bicol peninsula later on Sunday, and the highest storm alert had been issued there.

Authorities fearing a storm surge have moved thousands of people out of coastal villages to safety.

Land, sea and air travel has been suspended in some areas, leaving stranded thousands of people heading home for the holidays in the mostly Christian country.

In 2013, more than 6,000 people were killed and 200,000 homes were destroyed when Typhoon Haiyan, the strongest ever storm to make landfall in the Philippines, hit the central islands of Leyte and Samar.

About 20 major typhoons pass through the Philippines each year. Since 1948, at least seven typhoons have hit the country during the Christmas period. —Reuters
Under scrutiny, Trump decides to dissolve his foundation

NEW YORK — US President-elect Donald Trump said on Saturday he intends to dissolve his charitable foundation, the Donald J. Trump Foundation, which has been under investigation by the New York attorney general.

Trump gave no timeline for winding down the foundation, but said in a statement that he wanted “to avoid even the appearance of any conflict with my role as President.” He directed his counsel to take the necessary steps for the dissolution.

With less than four weeks to his 20 January inauguration, the New York real estate magnate is under increasing pressure to reduce potential conflicts of interest ranging from his vast global business operations to his family’s philanthropic work.

This week, Trump said his son Eric would stop raising money for his own foundation over concerns that donors could be seen as buying access to the Trump family. The president-elect said it was a “ridiculous shame” that his son’s foundation would stop raising money. Before Trump’s surprising election victory on 8 November, New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman in October directed the Donald J Trump Foundation to stop taking donations, saying the foundation violated state law requiring charitable organizations that solicit outside donations to register with a state office.

Schneiderman’s order followed a series of reports in The Washington Post that suggested improprieties by the foundation, including using its funds to settle legal disputes involving Trump businesses.

A spokeswoman for the attorney general’s office said on Saturday that Trump cannot shutter the foundation while the investigation is ongoing.

“The Trump Foundation is still under investigation by this office and cannot legally dissolve until that investigation is complete,” spokeswoman Amy Spitalnick said. She would not comment on expected timing for completing the investigation.

Trump said he was “very proud” of the money raised by the foundation and said it had operated at “essentially no cost for decades.”

“But because I will be devoting so much time and energy to the presidency, and solving the many problems facing our country and the world,” he added in his statement, “I don’t want to allow good work to be associated with a possible conflict of interest.”

The Trump Foundation, which was established in 1988, runs no programs of its own. Instead, it donates to other non-profit groups such as the Police Athletic League for youths. Scrutiny of the Trump family’s philanthropic activities heightened in recent weeks following reports of access to the foundation for potential donors.

Eric Trump faced criticism for an online auction sponsored by his foundation, which raises money to help terminally ill children at St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital, offering the highest bidder a chance to have coffee with his sister Ivanka. After the announcement that Eric would not be allowed to raise money for his foundation, Trump tweeted: “He loves these kids, has raised millions of dollars for them, and now must stop. Wrong answer!”

Trump’s critics, however, remembered how the president-elect had attacked his Democratic opponent Hillary Clinton and her husband, former President Bill Clinton, over their family foundation. In August, Trump urged the Justice Department to investigate the Clinton Foundation, which he called a “pay-to-play” operation that rewarded big donors with favors from the State Department while Clinton was secretary of state. Eric Trump and his brother Donald Trump Jr also came under fire this week for their role in a post-inauguration charity event that offered a private reception with Trump in exchange for a $1 million donation.

The brothers were listed on a draft invitation as honorary co-chairmen of the fundraiser for conservation charities, dubbed “Opening Day,” set to be held in Washington the day after the inauguration.

On Tuesday, the Trump transition team said Donald Trump Jr and Eric Trump were not involved with the fundraiser and a subsequent invitation dropped references to donors meeting with any members of the Trump family.

Trump aide named to lead White House communications says he won’t take job

NEW YORK CITY — Jason Miller, who President-elect Donald Trump announced this week would serve as his White House communications director, said on Saturday he would not take the job.

Miller, the communications director for Trump’s transition team, said in a statement that his family needed to take priority over career moves. He said he and his wife were expecting their second daughter in January. Trump takes office on 20 January.

“This is not the right time to start a new job as demanding as White House communications director,” Miller said.

He said his duties would instead be handled by Sean Spicer, who Trump named his press secretary on Thursday, the same day Miller was announced as communications director. Trump also said in that announcement that spokeswoman Hope Hicks would be director of strategic communications.

2 dead, 6 missing after China fireworks explosion

SHIJIAZHUANG — Two people were killed and six remained missing after an explosion at a fireworks workshop in north China’s Hebei Province Saturday, local police announced on Sunday.

The explosion at 1 pm on Saturday leveled down the workshop and damaged about a dozen homes nearby in Yanzei village in Fengrun District of Tangshan City, said the district’s public security bureau.

Sixteen more people were injured. One suffered severe eye injuries and the rest suffered bruises.

A police investigation found that the workshop owner, a villager surnamed Gao, were allegedly involved in illegal storage and production of fireworks. Police have retrieved some human tissues at the site.

Fuel tank ablaze in Oil Refineries in Israeli city of Haifa

HAIFA — A fire erupted in a fuel tank at Oil Refineries Ltd in Haifa on Sunday, sending thick black smoke into the sky above the northern Israeli port city.

“We have a fuel tank on fire. The level of the fuel in it is relatively low, about a metre (three feet) high,” Uri Chibotero, a Haifa Fire Brigade spokesman, said on Israel Radio.

He said firefighters were working to prevent the flames from spreading to nearby tanks and that he expected the blaze would be extinguished within a few hours.

There were no immediate reports of injuries, police spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said.

A video from the scene, on Israeli media websites, showed flames and black smoke pouring from the tank.

French-Swiss aid worker kidnapped in Mali town of Gao

DAKAR — A female French-Swiss aid worker was kidnapped in the city of Gao in northern Mali on Saturday afternoon, a spokesman for the Ministry of Security said.

It was not clear who was responsible for the act, or why the aid worker was taken, said Commandant Bahia Cissé, but the desert nation has been beset by attacks from Islamist fighters in recent years, especially in the north.

Sri Lanka’s president pardons over 500 inmates on Christmas Day

COLOMBO — Sri Lanka’s President Maithripala Sirisena, on Sunday, pardoned over 500 inmates who were serving sentences for minor offences in Sri Lankan prisons in order to mark Christmas Day.

Prison’s Spokesperson, TN Upuldeniya said that 567 prisoners, including 7 female inmates had received a presidential pardon.

Upuldeniya said that all the prisoners released were serving minor offences and those who could not pay their fines were also released.

Upuldeniya said that the Prison’s Department has also made special arrangements for families of Christian inmates to visit them in prison.

Fuel tank ablaze in Oil Refineries in Israeli city of Haifa

HAIFA — A fire erupted in a fuel tank at Oil Refineries Ltd in Haifa on Sunday, sending thick black smoke into the sky above the northern Israeli port city.

“We have a fuel tank on fire. The level of the fuel in it is relatively low, about a metre (three feet) high,” Uri Chibotero, a Haifa Fire Brigade spokesman, said on Israel Radio.

He said firefighters were working to prevent the flames from spreading to nearby tanks and that he expected the blaze would be extinguished within a few hours.

There were no immediate reports of injuries, police spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said.

A video from the scene, on Israeli media websites, showed flames and black smoke pouring from the tank.

Independence, Myanmar Language & Myanmar Literature

When they were fighting for independence against colonialists, patriotic Myanmar nationalists shouted the slogan, “Myanmar is our country, Myanmar language is our literature and Myanmar language is our language. Love our country, raise the standard of our literature and respect our language. They shouted these slogans not to think highly of colonialists and not to let our patriotic spirit diminish during the time of colonial occupation.

Because of the development of Myanmar language and literature, nationalism developed, and the patriotic spirit to win back the lost independence awakened and intensified. This proved to be beneficial till we achieved Independence.

As for the new generations, only if their level of understanding of the words “Myanmar is our country and Myanmar language is our language” is raised will our Independence and our national development endure for a long time.

Now is the time for our future generations to protect and preserve our Myanmar language and literature and work for its development and progress.

During the struggle for our independence, Myanmar literature saw a rebirth and growth because of the concerted efforts of the first-ever Myanmar national principal, teachers and students of the University College. Consequently, this is proof that all Myanmar nationals began to love and cherish our Myanmar literature and Myanmar language.

For a country and its people, their language and literature are like a priceless jewel. It is for this reason that every country and every race cherish their language and literature and therefore work ardently to preserve, development and propagation of their language and literature.

It can be seen that in our big neighboring country, they value and use their own language and literature. Even though the young people know English because it is the international language, they usually use their mother tongue as a priority to make sure that others give a high respect to their language.

For our country also, although we need to master the globally used language—English to keep up with the world, we need to make sure that we do not neglect our own mother language. We should not think too highly of other foreign languages. We need to keep them on the same level as ours.

As stated in the sayings—“The people who will flourish only if their literature is of a high standard,” and “The race will disappear if their literature disappears,” we are responsible to preserve and protect our Myanmar language and literature. It is a national responsibility. Failing that, one day we will not be able to stand tall in dignity among the other peoples of the world. Our race will vanish from the world the same way lost our independence.

We firmly believe that our efforts to preserve, develop and propagate our beloved language and literature with the spirit of nationalism will help our motherland—Myanmar to survive and endure forever.

Different country has different definitions, different classifications and different punishments of sexual offences which we should worthy to study for our country’s future legislation.
DUBAI — Iran plans to ask international oil companies to bid for the second phase of development of its Yadavaran and North Azadegan oilfields, a senior official said on Saturday.

That means Chinese firms China National Petroleum Corp (CNPC) (CNPET.UR) and Sinopec (0386.HK), which have played a leading role in developing the fields until now, will have to compete with other firms if they want to maintain that position.

“CNPC would like to extend its North Azadegan contract, but we have announced that they should take part in the bidding for a new contract,” Golamreza Manouchehri, deputy head of the National Iranian Oil Company (NIOC), was quoted as saying by state news agency IRNA.

“The Chinese have finally accepted this proposal,” Manouchehri said. He gave no details on the timing of the tender.

President Hassan Rouhani officially launched the first phases of the Yadavaran and North Azadegan fields as well as the North Yaran field in November, as the country ramps up its production after the lifting of sanctions.

Yadavaran will have a production of up to 115,000 bpd in its first phase and North Azadegan’s output is 75,000 bpd, the Iranian oil ministry’s news agency SHA- NA said.

The Chinese firms helped Iran develop the fields after Japanese and European companies pulled out of the country due to sanctions over Iran’s nuclear program.

Iran said in December 2007 that Sinopec would invest around $2 billion to develop the huge Yadavaran field. CNPC signed a deal with Iran in January 2009 to develop the North Azadegan oilfield, a project also worth $2 billion in its first phase.

In April 2014, however, Iranian news agency SHANA reported that Iran had terminated CNPC’s contract to develop the Azadegan field after the Chinese energy giant ignored repeated appeals to work on it.

While the Chinese companies took part in the first phase of development of the fields, there had been “some criticism of their performance,” IRNA said on Saturday, without elaborating.

There have also been talks with Sinopec regarding the Yadavaran field for which an international tender is set to be held,” Manouchehri said, according to the IRNA report.

Yadavaran has reserves of 31 billion barrels of light and heavy crude oil while North Azadegan has 5.7 billion barrels of crude reserves. Separately, the head of a regional state oil firm in central Iran said 20 tenders would be held to develop new gas and oil fields and boost production at existing ones, the semi-official Mehr news agency reported.

Salhadi Karmi, chief executive of the Iranian Central Oil Fields Company, said the projects would require $2 billion in investment to boost crude output by 100,000 barrels per day.— Reuters

Chinese firms face competition to maintain role in developing Iranian oilfields

BEIJING — One of China’s hottest residential real estate markets, will step up property controls to keep home prices stable next year, the official Xinhua news agency reported on Sunday.

Stoked by speculators, home prices in the capital are already too high, and rising social tensions pose enormous challenges to Beijing’s stability, Xinhua reported, citing the Beijing Municipal Committee.

Average new home prices in Beijing rose 26.4 percent in November from a year earlier, slowing for the second month following cooling measures taken by the government.

On 30 September, Beijing announced a requirement for higher downpayments on property purchases.

More than a dozen Chinese cities including Tianjin, Shanghai, Guangzhou and Shenzhen have taken measures to curb property speculation, partly fueled by easy credit.

China will impose strict limits on credit flowing into speculative buying in the property market in 2017, top officials said at an annual economic conference earlier this month.— Reuters
Russian jets step up raids on rebel-held Idlib and rural Aleppo

ANKARA — Russian jets stepped up strikes on several towns in Syria’s rebel-held Idlib province and rural Aleppo two days after the evacuation of rebels from their last pocket in the northern city of Aleppo, rebels and residents said on Saturday.

They said at least eight strikes targeted Binish, Saron, and Jisr al Shughour — main towns in the northwestern Syrian province of Idlib. There were reports of several casualties, mainly among civilians.

Idlib province for months has been a target of Russia’s heavy bombing campaign against rebel-held areas. It came even while the former eastern part of Aleppo under insurgent control faced an escalation in aerial raids and shelling until its defenses collapsed and the rebels were forced to agree to an evacuation deal.

The Syrian army has hinted the next major campaign after its victory in Aleppo was to rout insurgents in their stronghold of Idlib province, where mainly Islamist brigades operating under a coalition known as Jaish al Fateh are in control.

Residents and rebels said Russian and Syrian jets also staged heavy raids on rebel-held parts of western and southern parts of rural Aleppo for the second day since the last rebels left their remaining pocket of territory in Aleppo city.

They raided the town of Khan al Asal, about 14 km (9 miles) west of Aleppo, with cluster bombs while several strikes hit Hreitan and Andan, according to a rebel fighter from Jaish al Mujahdeen. The nearby town of Atareb was also hit.

Although the Syrian army, with the help of Iranian-backed militias, was able to take full control of Aleppo city after Russia conducted hundreds of raids that pulverized rebel-held parts, large swathes of western and southern Aleppo countryside remain in rebel hands.

Rebels said they repelled an Iranian-backed militia assault on Saturday to gain ground in the Rashideen area, west of Aleppo city.

The Syrian army continued to comb areas in eastern Aleppo.

Turkish authorities investigating 10,000 social media users

ANKARA — Turkish authorities are investigating some 10,000 people on suspicion of using social media to support terrorism, the interior ministry said on Saturday, part of a wide crackdown.

Turkey, which faces security threats from Kurdish and leftist militants and Islamic State, has sacked or suspended more than 100,000 people following an attempted military coup in July. It says the measures are necessary to root out supporters of the putsch and other terrorists.

Rights groups and some European countries have said President Tayyip Erdogan is using the current state of emergency to squash dissent. Since the coup, more than 150 media outlets have been shut down and 140 journalists arrested.

The interior ministry said on Saturday the fight against terrorism was being carried out “with determination” in social media.

In the last six months, authorities have detained 3,710 people for questioning, the ministry said. Of those, 1,656 have been formally arrested and 84 are still being questioned.

The remaining 1,970 have been released, although 1,203 of those are still being monitored, it said.

Access to social media sites such as Twitter and Facebook is commonly blocked, particularly after bombings or other deadly attacks, internet monitoring groups have said. Turkey denies that it blocks the internet, and has previously blamed outages on spikes in usage after major events.

Technical experts at watchdog groups say the blackouts on social media are intentional, aimed in part at stopping the spread of militant images and propaganda.

Israel to re-assess UN ties after settlement resolution, says Netanyahu

JERUSALEM — Israel will re-assess its ties with the United Nations following the adoption by the Security Council of a resolution demanding an end to Israeli settlement building, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said on Saturday.

The vote was able to pass the 15-member council on Friday because the United States broke with a long-standing approach of diplomatically shielding Israel and did not wold its veto power as it had on many times before — a decision that Netanyahu called “shameful”.

“I instructed the Foreign Ministry to complete within a month a re-evaluation of all our contacts with the United Nations, including the Israeli funding of UN institutions and the presence of UN representatives in Israel,” Netanyahu said in broadcast remarks.

“I have already instructed to stop about 30 million shekels ($7.8 million) in funding to five UN institutions, five bodies, that are especially hostile to Israel ... and there is more to come,” he said. The Israeli leader did not name the institutions or offer any further details.

Defying heavy pressure from long-time ally Israel and President-elect Donald Trump for Washington to use its veto, the United States abstained in the Security Council decision, which passed with 14 votes in favor.

Israel for decades has pursued a policy of constructing Jewish settlements on territory captured by Israel in a 1967 war with its Arab neighbours including the West Bank, Gaza and East Jerusalem.

Most countries view Israeli settlement activity in the West Bank and East Jerusalem as illegal and an obstacle to peace. Israel disagrees, citing a biblical connection to the land.

Asylum seekers riot at Papua New Guinea detention camp

SYDNEY — Asylum seekers held at a Papua New Guinea detention centre briefly took control of two compounds and expelled guards following the death of a refugee who fell ill at the centre, Papua New Guinea police said on Sunday.

Senior Sergeant Thomas Lelepo, from Lorengau Police Station on Manus Island, said guards at the Manus Island regional processing centre were expelled by residents last night.

“There was a situation there over the death of a resident,” he told Reuters by phone, adding that order had been restored.

A 27-year-old Sudanese man, who was identified as Faysal Ishak Ahmed by refugee advocates, collapsed at the centre and was evacuated to hospital in Australia this week. Australia’s Department of Immigration and Border Protection said he died on Saturday.

The man’s death is not being treated as suspicious by Australian authorities, but detainees and refugee rights groups have claimed the man was seriously ill for months and had made repeated requests for medical assistance before the emergency. Under Australia’s tough border security policy, asylum seekers intercepted trying to reach the country by boat are sent for processing at the camps on Papua New Guinea’s Manus island and Nauru in the South Pacific. They are never eligible for resettlement in Australia.

An Australian immigration department spokesperson confirmed an incident on Manus Island overnight.

“The Department is aware of a disturbance involving a group of residents in the mess area of Manus RPC,” the spokesperson said in a statement on Sunday.

“The disturbance has now been resolved. There is minor property damage and no reported injuries.”

Photos posted to Facebook by Iranian refugee Behrouz Boochani, who is among the asylum seekers held on Manus Island, showed what appeared to be damage to a mess area inside one of the compounds.

New tag to help study whale behaviour, marine environment

SAN FRANCISCO — A new type of tag, known as “Advanced Dive Behaviour”, or ADB, can record data every second for weeks at a time to provide a view of what whale behavior is like — and how it plays out at great depths.

Findings from data collected by the tag showed, among other things, that sperm whales diving all the way to the seafloor at great depths, and being submerged for up to 75 minutes, and five gallons of water is used on sperm, blue and fin whales.

Findings from data collected by the tag showed, among other things, that sperm whales diving all the way to the seafloor at great depths, and being submerged for up to 75 minutes, and five gallons of water is used on sperm, blue and fin whales.

"By using this technology on three different species, we’ve seen the full range of behavior that is specific to each species," said Daniel Palacios, co-author on the study. "Sperm whales, for instance, like to dive deep, staying down a long time and appearing to forage along the seafloor at times."

During summer the baleen whales will feed as much as possible in one area, and then they move on, probably after the prey density gets too low."

The tag, according to the researchers, expands by several orders of magnitude the observations that can be made of whale feeding and behavior, and it is showing what whales do while underwater; when, how and where they feed; how they might be affected by passing ships or other noises; and what types of water temperatures they prefer. — Xinhua

China’s Suzhou city to halt live poultry trade over bird flu concerns

BEIJING — A Chinese city said on Sunday it will suspend the trade of live poultry in the interests of public health after neighbouring provinces reported cases of human bird flu infections.

Suzhou, the second-biggest city in the eastern province of Jiangsu, will halt trading of live poultry at midnight (1600 GMT), the official People’s Daily reported on its website.

Two people have died of the H7N9 strain of bird flu in China this winter, the first fatalities among at least seven infections.

In the past week, Hong Kong and Macau have also reported their first human bird flu infections for this season.

H7N9 had not been detected in either humans or animals in China since March 2013. The city of Shanghai, about 100 km (62 miles) southeast of Suzhou, reported last week that a man had been diagnosed with the H7N9 strain after travelling from Jiangsu.

The two deaths were in Anhui province, west of both Shanghai and Suzhou. Anhui has reported five human infections since 8 December.

Authorities in Anhui, which has a population of almost 60 million, have shut some livestock markets and stepped up sterilisation to prevent virus spreading. “A few” chickens had been culled. In Xiamen, a city in Fujian province also in the east, authorities halted poultry sales in one district on Thursday after a 44-year-old man was diagnosed with H7N9, state news agency Xinhua reported. The H7N9 strain does not seem to transmit easily from person to person, and sustained human-to-human infection has not been reported, according to the World Health Organization (WHO).

The danger with any such virus is that it mutates and acquires genetic changes that might increase its pandemic potential. In China, the WHO confirmed two cases of an emerging strain behaved to be a cross-species infection in the past two months. A woman in Hunan province and another woman in Guangxi were admitted to hospital with the H5N6 strain, first reported in China in mid-2014. In Guangdong, a traveller was caught carrying 1.5 kg (2.29 lb) of chicken and duck eggs that later tested positive for bird flu, the state-run China Economic News reported on its website on Sunday.

The eggs found in the luggage of the Vietnamese traveller at Guangzhou airport on 14 December tested positive for the H5 strain, according to the report, which cited the provincial quarantine bureau.

The most well-known strain of avian influenza is the highly pathogenic H5N1 subtype, which has killed hundreds of people globally since its first human infection about two decades ago in Hong Kong.

The last major bird flu outbreak in mainland China — from late 2013 to early 2014 — killed 36 people and led to more than $6 billion in losses for the agricultural sector. — Reuters
Europe on Christmas high alert after truck attack in Berlin

ROME — Security was heightened for the Christmas weekend in Italy and at the Vatican on Saturday after Italian police killed the man believed to be responsible for the Berlin market truck attack while other European cities kept forces on high alert.

In France, Britain and Germany, which have all been targets of Islamist militant attacks, police increased their presence at tourist spots in major cities and other densely populated areas.

Anis Amri, a 24-year-old Tunisian suspected of carrying out the truck attack which killed 12 people, was shot dead in a town near Milan early on Friday after he pulled a gun on police during a routine check.

He had travelled undetected to Italy from Germany via France, taking advantage of Europe’s open-border Schengen pact. As investigators sought to determine if Amri had accomplices in Italy, and associates were being arrested in his home country of Tunisia, national security officials in Italy beefed up security at sensitive spots.

Rome authorities banned vans or trucks from entering the city centre and anti-terror police wearing masks and wielding machine guns set up roadblocks on routes leading to famous tourist sites or areas where crowds traditionally gather.

At the Vatican, where Pope Francis was due to celebrate Christmas Eve Mass in St. Peter’s basilica on Saturday evening, police cars and military jeeps stood about every 100 metres (yards) along streets leading to the Vatican.

Security was also stepped up in central Milan and other Italian cities, particularly near major churches where the faithful were attending Christmas services.

In France, where Islamist militants killed 130 people in shooting and bomb attacks in Paris in November 2015, authorities said more than 91,000 policemen and soldiers would be deployed, with additional security measures being enforced at churches.

Emergency rule has been in place since the Paris attacks, and French soldiers patrol the capital’s streets. Police have been given wider search and arrest powers to target suspects considered a threat to security.

In Germany, federal police reinforced armed patrols at airports and rail stations, officials said. They have also reintroduced spot checks on people coming into Germany along a 30-km (19 mile) corridor inside the international frontiers.

German Interior Minis- ter Thomas de Maiziere has said the danger of an attack in Germany remains high despite the death of the sus- pected attacker.

More than 100 investiga- tors would be working through the holidays searching for any accomplices or support network for Amri. The level of threat remains high,” he told reporters late on Friday. Britain is on its second-highest threat level, meaning an attack by milit- ant is considered highly likely.

Police there have in- creased security at a number of popular tourist attractions, including around Queen Elizabeth’s London resi- dence, Buckingham Palace. Armed officers patrol major shops and Christmas markets and places of wor- ship.—Reuters

Russian military plane crashes on route to Syria with 92 on board

MOSCOW — A Russian military plane with 92 people on board has crashed into the Black Sea on its way to Syria, Russian news agen- cies reported on Sunday, and it was unlikely there would be any survivors.

Russian agencies, citing unnamed security sources, said the Tu-154 aircraft had crashed in the sea near the southern Russian city of Sochi after disappearing from radar screens.

The plane was carrying Russian servicemen and members of a renowned military choir and dance ensemble, the Alexandrov Ensemble, who were being flown into Russia’s Hmeiym air base in Syria to en- tertain military personnel in the run up to the new year, the RIA news agency quoted the Defence Ministry as saying. The plane was carry- ing 84 passengers and eight crew members, agencies quoted the ministry as saying. Nine Russian reporters were among the passengers, agencies said. Fragments of the plane have already been found at a depth of 50-70 metres at a distance of around 1.5 kilometres (0.93 miles) from the Russian coast, agencies reported.

Russia’s RIA news agency, citing an unidentified security source, said preliminary data indicated that the plane had crashed because of a technical mal- function or a pilot error.

The Interfax news agen- cy cited an unnamed source as saying the plane had not sent an SOS signal. Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters on Sunday it was too early to say what had caused the crash. President Vladimir Putin was being kept in- formed of latest develop- ments, Peskov added.

Russia’s Defence Minis- try regularly flew mili- tiamen into Syria to put on concerts for military per- sonnel. The base they were heading for, Hmeiym, is in Syria’s Latakia province. It is from there that Russia flies air strikes against Syrian reb- els.—Reuters

Havana — Cuba and the United States are work- ing to consolidate restored diplomatic ties with less than a month left before US President Barack Obama’s term ends.

The two countries signed on Wednesday new memoranda of understanding in Washington on cooperation and research in fields of mutual interest, including meteorology, seismology and wildlife conservation.

As both sides are aware that the incoming admin- istration of President-elect Donald Trump may be less than supportive of the bilat- eral rapprochement, they have stepped up the effort to normalize ties. Trump, who will take office on 20 January, has criticized the White House’s about-face on Cuba on more than one occasion.

Following the death of Fidel Castro, Cuba’s revolu- tionary leader, Trump’s designated Chief of Staff Reince Priebus said his boss “will definitely reverse” Obama’s foreign policy on Cuba, unless Cuban authori- ties agree to make more concessions.

According to state dai- ly Granma, the agreements signed on Wednesday call for jointly studying climate models, expanding and inte- grating weather monitor- ing networks, and studying hurricane forecasting sys- tems.

“We trust this step will be the beginning of a sus- tained scientific relationship and of greater collaboration between the meteorologi- cal communities of Cuba and the United States,” the Ministry of Science, Tech- nology and Environment’s Deputy Minister Fernando Gonzalez said.

Since the two countries jointly announced on 17 December, 2014 their de- cision to start restoring ties, they have exchanged 24 high-level visits and signed 12 agreements, more with on the way. In addition, there have been upwards of 1,200 exchanges in the fields of culture, sports and education, among others. Cuba hopes the new US administration will val- uate the breakthroughs in bi- lateral relations made since 2014 after more than 50 years of animosity.

The US announced trade embargo against Cuba re- mains in place, the White House has relaxed some re- strictions, mainly in travel between the two countries.

Thousands have taken advantage of the thaw. In the first half of the year, 1.51 million US travelers came to Cuba, almost 80 per cent more than the same period the year before, according to Cuba’s national bureau of statistics.—Xinhua

China confirms aircraft carrier heading to Pacific for drills

BEIJING — A spokesman for China’s navy has announced that the country’s first aircraft carrier, Liaoning, was on Saturday headed for the Western Pacific to take part in an open-sea training exercise.

“Liaoning will conduct military drills in the West Pacific,” People’s Liberation Army Navy spokesman Li Yuan said on Saturday, China’s state-run Global Times reported.

It is the first time for navigation of a Chinese aircraft carrier through the so-called first island chain linking Okinawa, Taiwan and the Philippines to the Pacific Ocean to be reported.

The Western Pacific stretches from China to New Zealand and encompasses countries in the Pacific, Oceania and parts of Asia.

The mission appears aimed at sending a message to US President-elect Donald Trump, who has questioned whether China should continue to adhere to its nearly four-decade policy of recognizing Taiwan as part of “one China.”

Early this month, Trump broke with decades of diplomatic practice by accepting a congratulatory phone call on his election win from President Tsai Ing-wen of Taiwan, infuriating Beijing which considers the self-ruled democratic island an inherent part of its territory.

The Liaoning, considered a symbol of China’s recent naval expansion, is a refurbished aircraft carrier purchased from Ukraine in 1988.

It was commissioned by the Chinese navy in 2012.

The Japanese Defense Ministry announced on Sunday that a Japanese defence destroyer on Saturday spotted Liaoning in the central part of the East China Sea for the first time.

The fleet consists of seven other vessels — three guided-missile destroyers, three frigates and one supply ship — and was cruising eastward when the Maritime Self-Defense Force destroyer spotted it at around 4 pm.

The MSDF is closely monitoring the situation, given the possibility that the Chinese naval vessels may transit waters near Japan and proceed to the Western Pacific Ocean.

Public hearing on Japanese food products canceled amid melee

NEW TAIPEI, Taiwan — The first of three public hearings on whether Taiwan should ease its ban on imports of Japanese food products imposed in the wake of the 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster was canceled Sunday, according to the Chinese naval vessels heading to the Western Pacific, People’s Liberation Army Navy said in a statement.

The fleet consists of seven other vessels — three guided-missile destroyers, three frigates and one supply ship — and was cruising eastward when the Maritime Self-Defense Force destroyer spotted it at around 4 pm.

China to levy new taxes in bid to strengthen pollution fight

BEIJING — China’s large rubber-stamp parliament passed a law on Sunday that will levy specific environmental pollution taxes on industry for the first time from 2018, as part of a renewed focus on fighting the country’s pollution woes.

Anger has risen in the world’s second-largest economy at the government’s repeated failure to tackle land, water and air pollution, with large parts of northern China enveloped in dangerous smog in recent days.

“Tax revenue is an important economic means to promote environmental protection,” the Finance Ministry said in a statement.

The tax rates will be 1.2 yuan ($0.17) per unit of atmospheric pollution, 1.4 yuan per unit of water pollution, 5 yuan per tonne of coal waste and 1,000 yuan per tonne of “hazardous waste.”

Industrial noise polluters will also be levied 350 yuan per month if they exceed limits by 1-3 decibels, 700 yuan for 4-6 decibels and 11,200 yuan per month for 16 decibels and more.

The law goes into effect on 1st January, 2018.

China has not previously imposed any specific environmental taxes, and the new levy will replace an earlier system of miscellaneous charges that are regarded as far too low to deter polluters.

Officials have repeatedly stressed that the new policy is not designed to increase the tax burden on enterprises. The core purpose of the policy is not to increase taxes this year, but to improve the system and encourage enterprises to reduce emissions - the more they emit the more they will pay, and the less they emit the less they will pay,” environment minister Chen Jining said earlier this year.

The details of the new law have been fiercely contested by the Ministry of Environmental Protection, the Ministry of Finance, the State Taxation Administration and local governments, and has been subject to repeated delays.

Conflicts of interest have emerged as other departments worry about lost tax revenues once the previous system of emission discharge fees is abolished.

Some government researchers have also argued that carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases should be included in the plans.

Jia Kang of the Ministry of Finance’s Institute of Fiscal Science complained this year that environmental tax proposals were far too conservative, with the tax rate per tonne of sulphur dioxide still much cheaper than paying for the equipment required to stop it entering the atmosphere.

LOS ANGELES — Friends and colleagues of Hollywood actress Carrie Fisher shared their hopes for her swift recovery on Saturday, a day after she was admitted to the intensive care unit of a Los Angeles hospital.

Fisher, 60, suffered heart problems during a flight on Friday from London, where she had been shooting the third season of the British television comedy “Catastrophe.” Her younger brother, Todd Fisher, said she was taken to the hospital in critical condition and was undergoing treatment in the ICU.

No further details on her condition or prognosis were immediately available on Saturday, and a spokeswoman at the Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center declined to comment, citing patient confidentiality laws.

“I’m shocked and saddened to hear the news about my dear friend,” actor Harrison Ford told The Hollywood Reporter on Saturday. Ford played the swashbuckling Han Solo opposite Fisher’s Princess Leia in the original “Star Wars” film trilogy.

“Our thoughts are with Carrie, her family and friends,” Fisher caused a stir in November with the disclosure that she had a love affair with Ford during the making of the first “Star Wars” movie. Fisher revealed the secret to People magazine while promoting her new memoir, “The Princess Diarist,” just before it went on sale.

One of the more attention-grabbing messages appeared to come from Fisher’s dog Gary, who has his own Twitter account and was reported to be with her at the hospital. “I’ll be waiting right here mommy,” Gary tweeted in a post with a photo of the French bulldog staring attentively through a window - ears perked, paws perched on the sill.

Other celebrities, including Ellen DeGeneres and Christina Applegate, took to social media to share their sadness, while the singer-actress Bette Midler described Fisher as “hilarious on paper and in person, and just plain beloved.”

Fisher repudied her “Star Wars” role in two sequels, gaining sex symbol status in 1983’s “Return of the Jedi” when the Leia character was wearing a metallic gold bikini, as a captive of an evil alien.

She returned last year in Disney’s reboots of the “Star Wars” franchise, “The Force Awakens,” appearing as the more matronly military resistance leader, General Leia Organa.

Fisher’s career has been dogged at times by substance abuse and mental health issues, about which she has spoken openly. Her bestselling novel “Postcards from the Edge,” based on her experience in drug rehab, was adapted into a 1990 movie starring Meryl Streep. Fisher has also said she was briefly hospitalized in 2013 due to bipolar disorder. —Reuters

Status Quo guitarist Rick Parfitt dies aged 68

LONDON — Rick Parfitt, the guitarist of British rock group Status Quo, died in hospital on Saturday in Spain aged 68 after suffering from a severe infection.

“He will be sorely missed by his family, friends, fellow band members, management, crew and his dedicated legion of fans from throughout the world, gained through 50 years of monumental success with Status Quo,” his family and Status Quo Manager Simon Porter said in a joint statement.

“He died in hospital in Marbella, Spain as a result of a severe infection, having been admitted to hospital on Thursday evening following complications to a shoulder injury incurred by a previous fall,” his family said.

Parfitt is survived by his wife Linda, their twins Tom and Rick Jr’s adult children Rick Jnr and Harry.

“I cannot describe the sadness I feel right now. To many he was a rockstar, to me he was simply ‘Dad’, and I loved him hugely. RIP Pappa Parf,” Rick Jnr said on Twitter.

Born in Woking, Surrey, England, on 12 October 1948, Parfitt learned the guitar at 11 and met future Status Quo partner Francis Rossi at Butlins holiday camp when they were teenagers in the 1960s.

The meeting would herald one of the most successful British rock bands of the 20th Century, with hits such as “Rockin’ All Over The World” and “Whatever You Want”. Thrashing long blond hair while playing a white Telecaster guitar, Parfitt, in the words of Queen guitarist Brian May, “joyfully rocked our world.”

Beside the fame, wealth and women of a top rock career, Parfitt battled drugs and alcohol which took a toll on his health. He had quadruple heart bypass in 1997 but while recovering he continued to smoke in hospital.

He was a self confessed drug addict for many years, though he later kicked the habit. “I haven’t smoked a joint for 27 years and I haven’t done any cocaine for 10 years. I just do normal stuff — the kids keep me busy and I go shopping with the missus,” he told reporters in 2014. Parfitt pulled out of the band’s tour on medical advice.

In a music career spanning more than 50 years, Parfitt appealed to millions with the Quo’s brand of boogie-wogie rock, particularly with hits such as “Whatever You Want” which he co-wrote.

“Turn around, give me a shout, I take it all, You squeeze me dry, And now today, ‘You couldn’t even say goodbyes,” the lyrics read.—Reuters

A&E network cancels ‘Escaping the KKK’ documentary over cash payments

LOS ANGELES — The A&E cable television network said on Saturday it has canceled an upcoming documentary about efforts to help Ku Klux Klan members break away from the hate group, after learning cash payments were made “to facilitate access” to the film’s subjects.

The documentary, “Escaping the KKK,” completed after a year and a half in production, was set to premiere on 10 January and air in eight parts, capped by a town hall-style special broadcast on ending hate in America.

The decision to scrub the project came shortly after A&E said it had changed the series title to “Escaping the KKK,” from “Generation KKK,” in order to better reflect that the film was a work of documenta tory journalism rather than reality TV entertainment.

The network also had announced a partnership with a civil rights group, Colour of Change, which was to produce accompanying segments featuring civil rights leaders to furnish context for the documentary series.

As described by A&E, the series was intended to examine “anti-hate extractors,” who work to help individuals extirpate themselves from the Klan, a white-supremacist group with a long history of violence, primarily against blacks, but also Jews, immigrants and other groups.

The film drew controversy soon after plans for the series were unveiled earlier this week, with actors Wendell Pierce and Ellen Pompeo among those criticizing the project on social media and Pierce calling for a network boycott, Variety reported.

Pierce demanded A&E provide evidence that the documentary subjects were not paid for their participation, as subjects of reality TV programs typically would be, and the network insisted that no such payments were made, according to Variety.

On Saturday, however, the network acknowledged learning from its third-party producers that some cash payments were made to Klan members who participated in the documentary “in order to facilitate access” to them.

The network statement said that “the payments, though ‘understood to be nominal,” were nevertheless “a direct violation of A&E’s policies and practices for a documentary.” —Reuters
DENVER — A powerful Christmas Eve snowstorm descending on much of North America will not slow Santa Claus as he delivers presents to good girls and boys, US military officials who track his annual flight said on Saturday.

“Santa is an excellent pilot and since he lives on the North Pole he knows how to navigate through adverse weather conditions,” said John Cornelio, spokesman for the North American Aerospace Defense Command (NO-RAD), based at Peterson Air Force Base in Colorado Springs.

The National Weather Service has issued winter storm and blizzard warnings and watches for the western United States all the way up to northern-tier states. It warned of treacherous travel conditions for those not aboard airborne sleighs.

For 61 years, the defense command has tracked Santa, also known as Kris Kringle, St Nicholas or Father Christmas, as he and his reindeer-powered sleigh laden with presents traverses the globe.

The tradition began in 1955 when a Colorado Springs newspaper misprinted the phone number of a local department store for kids to call and speak to Santa.

The call instead went to what was then called the Continental Air Defense Command, and the on-duty commander assured the kids who called that Santa was aware of their Christmas wish lists and that all systems were go.

Three years later, the command began the tradition of offering the public updates on Santa’s yuletide trek.

Children and their parents can follow his global journey by logging on to www.norad santा.org for real-time satellite tracking of Santa, and through various social media apps.

In addition, the website features so-called “Santa Cams” that stream videos of Santa as he hits various geographic points.

Children can also call a phone number listed on the NORAD website for updates on his whereabouts, or email questions to teams of Santa’s helpers who are in constant contact with him and air traffic controllers.

NORAD’s Cornelio, a retired US Army lieutenant colonel, said that as St. Nick enters North American airspace, he slows down to greet US and Canadian fighter jet pilots who are scrambled to escort his sleigh.

Cornelio cautioned, however, that while Santa is committed to bring gifts to children, there are certain conditions that must be met. “Not only do kids have to be good boys and girls, but they also have to be in bed before he can bring presents,” he said.—Reuters

FINLAND — A Christmas Eve charity dinner on Saturday at the Helsinki Fair Centre saw nearly 2,000 guests in need, local media reported.

While the dinner has been offered for decades by a local charitable organization, its attendance figures have grown over the years.

Christmas dinners in Finland usually include ham and casserole.

Media reports cited Heikki Hursti, the main organizer, as saying that among the guests on Saturday were many people who had worked but with their income were not able to make ends meet.

There is no official criterion for poverty in Finland. Statistics Finland, however, determines that a single person with an income less of 1,190 euros is poor.

The National Institute of Health and Well being reported in October 2016 that the income level of 440,000 Finns, or 8 percent of the national population, remained under the requirements of meeting essential consumption needs.

Most vulnerable are those who live alone in rental accommodations and receive basic unemployment benefits, the Institute said.—Xinhua

ROMA — ski lift in northern Italy broke down on Saturday, blocking more than 120 holiday skiers in gondola cabins about 30 metres (yards) off the ground and a rescue operation was underway, officials said. Alpine rescue officials said the breakdown in the Cervinia mountain of northern Italy near the French border was likely due to winds.

Rescue squads were entering the cabins from hatches in the top of the gondolas and lowering the stranded skiers to the ground. A spokesman for the ski area told Italian television that the situation was under control. He said more than half of the skiers had been lowered and that the operation was due to be completed in several more hours.—Reuters

LONDON — Britain’s Queen Elizabeth, 90, will miss a traditional Christmas church service on Sunday for the first time in nearly 30 years due to a heavy cold, a Buckingham Palace spokesman said.

Elizabeth, the world’s longest-reigning living monarch, and her husband Prince Philip, 95, suffered what the Palace described as heavy colds this week that delayed by a day their journey to their Sandringham country residence in eastern England.

They travelled instead by helicopter on Thursday, Elizabeth has attended the Christmas service at the parish church of St Mary Magdalene in Sandringham every year since 1988.

“Her Majesty The Queen will not attend Church at Sandringham this morning. The Queen continues to recover from a heavy cold and will stay indoors to assist with her recovery,” a Palace spokesman said.

“Her Majesty will participate in the Royal Family Christmas celebrations during the day,” the Palace said.

After more than six decades on the throne, the Queen has cut back on international tours but still regularly performs official duties around Britain, although she said on Tuesday she would reduce the number of her patronages.—Reuters

United have moved away from traditions on transfers, says Moyes

LONDON — David Moyes has questioned his former club Manchester United’s transfer policy as he prepares Sunderland for Monday’s Premier League clash at Old Trafford.

United have splurged about 500 million pounds (£614.50 million) in the transfer market since Alex Ferguson ended his 26 trophy-laden years in charge in 2013.

Despite the vast outlay they have failed to add to their record 20 English league titles and are already 13 points off the pace this season under Jose Mourinho.

Moyes, who replaced Ferguson but lasted less than a season despite signing the likes of Chelsea midfielder Juan Mata for 37 million pounds and Marouane Fellaini for 27 million, said United have moved away from their traditions. “They were a football club who enjoyed traditions with the way they spent,” Moyes, whose Sunderland side are third from bottom, told the BBC. “They didn’t try to compete with all the other clubs. They did what they thought was the right thing to do and spent the right way.

“Maybe that has had to change because of the current situation. (But) Sir Alex (Ferguson) went out and bought wisely and correctly in the transfer market and what he thought he needed to do.”

Mourinho’s arrival at Old Trafford signalled another huge transfer outlay, with Paul Pogba arriving from Juventus for a world record 99 million pounds and the likes of Henrikh Mkhitaryan and Eric Bailly also joining for large fees.

“There have been a few changes at Manchester United but that’s the way they have chosen to go,” Moyes said.

The Scot added that one of the biggest regrets of his ill-fated stay at United was not signing Wales forward Gareth Bale from Tottenham Hotspur.

“When I first went in my real target was Gareth Bale,” said Moyes. “I felt all along that Gareth Bale was a Manchester United player. “I fought right until the last minute. We actually offered a bigger deal than Real Madrid. But Gareth had his mind made up on going to Real Madrid.”

Lampard to stay in close contact with Chelsea

NEW YORK CITY — Former England midfielder Frank Lampard says he will be “in close contact” with his old club Chelsea as he decides on his next career move. The 38-year-old left New York City in November and media speculation has mounted that he could return to the London team in a coaching role or some other capacity.

Lampard watched Premier League leaders Chelsea’s 1-0 home win over West Bromwich Albion earlier this month and was an onlooker at training on Wednesday when manager Antonio Conte said he was in good enough shape to continue his playing career.

“I’m still waiting for the five-year contract to come through from Chelsea. They haven’t called yet,” Lampard joked during an interview on Sky Sports television on Saturday.

“Whatever happens, in some capacity I will be at Chelsea, whether that’s with my season ticket watching them...I don’t know. I will be in very close contact. “Whether I have a role is not all in my hands so I can’t go any further than that. I am very relaxed about it which is a nice place to be.

“I’m not kind of eager that the end of my career is coming and thinking, ‘What’s going to happen now?,”’ added Lampard.

“I’ve taken this Christmas to enjoy family, a couple of beers and an extra turkey and I’ll make a decision in January whether I carry on playing — I have a few options — or finish and move on to whatever the next thing will be,” he said. —Reuters

Sam Allardyce says priority is plugging leaks at Crystal Palace

LONDON — Plugging the leaks in Crystal Palace’s porous defence will be the first priority for the south London club’s new manager Sam Allardyce as he looks ahead to a hectic Christmas period.

Former England boss Allardyce replaced the sacked Alan Pardew on Friday with Palace just above the relegation zone with the third-worst defensive record in the Premier League.

“We have a very important job of stopping the goals going in at the other end,” Allardyce, said in a video on Palace’s website (www.cpfc.co.uk). “Attacking players when you are in possession are fantastic this season. The strengthening in that area by the club and by Alan has brought a lot of flair to the team and I think that has brought quite a lot more goals. “But the other side is that when we are not in possession we have got to stop conceding and make sure that those goals we score win us games. It sounds simple but it’s not that easy.”

Allardyce is seen as one of the best managers in English football when it comes to surviving a relegation scrap. The experienced 62-year-old was available to Palace after his short reign as England manager ended after just 67 days in September following comments he made in a newspaper sting about “getting around” FA rules on player transfers.—Reuters
