Bravery titles conferred on soldiers by President

PRESIDENT U Htin Kyaw made an address and presented titles for bravery at a ceremony held in the Theater Room at the President’s Palace yesterday morning.

The President noted that the ceremony was held on Independence Day, a way to further highlight the importance and reverence for those who have served Myanmar with distinction.

Low quality C&D graded jade to be sold in local currency

AN emporium showcasing grade C and D jade of low quality will be held in March in Nay Pyi Taw, said an official from Myanmar Gems and Jewellery Entrepreneurs Association.

“The jade will be sold in kyats, providing raw materials to local jade merchants. This event will be held once a year, though jade entrepreneurs asked for a biannual emporium. We will try to schedule the events as they requested. There will be no quality jade to be displayed in this event,” the official said.

More than the sole reliance on the Chinese jade market, efforts are required to penetrate European markets as well in order to protect Myanmar’s jade market, say sources in the jade trading industry.

Myanmar needs to produce the finished products so as to allow domestically produced jade to secure trade with European markets.

The Southeast Asian nations of Thailand, Viet Nam, Cambodia, together with China, all possess natural jade deposits, but the majority of the world’s highest quality jade is reportedly found in Hpa Kant, Kachin State, it is learnt. — Ko Khant
Thai leaders say general election on track for this year

BANGKOK — Thai Deputy Prime Minister Prayut Chan-ocha said on Wednesday a general election will be held this year after doubts were raised by a member of the national legislature assembly. Thailand’s next polls will restore civilian rule following a 2014 coup, and will be the first under a new constitution, approved in a referendum last year, that critics say will ensure military oversight of elected governments.

“We can’t move it. It has its time frame. What the National Legislative Assembly has said is their roadmap, you mustn’t heed what anyone else says,” Prayuth told reporters in Bangkok.

A member of the military-appointed National Legislative Assembly said on Monday the election would have to be delayed until 2018 to allow time to pass laws needed to hold it. The military-appointed National Assembly has said is their time frame. What the National Legislative Assembly has said is their roadmap, you mustn’t heed what anyone else says,“ Prayuth told reporters in Bangkok.

The army said the 2014 coup, the second takeover in six years, was necessary to restore stability after months of sometimes deadly street protests against the government of Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra.

Some Western governments have pressed for a swift return to democracy.

The junta has struggled to kick-start a lacklustre economy which, after years of impressive growth, is struggling amid high household debt and low consumer confidence.

The next step in the transition back to civilian rule is for new King Maha Vajiralongkorn to endorse the new constitution.

The king, who came to the throne following the death of his father, King Bhumibol Adulyadej in October, has until next month to do so. Critics say certain elements of the constitution could stifle democracy including establishing an appointed upper house Senate with seats reserved for military commanders.

Some politicians have suggested that the election should be postponed until 2018 because this year, the country will be focusing on preparations for the cremation of the late king and the subsequent coronation of the new one.

Annuay Klangpa, a Thai member of the National Legislative Assembly said the army should work with constitutional bodies to establish an appointed upper house Senate with seats reserved for military commanders. According to reports, the army has taken steps to delay the election in order to ensure the new constitution is implemented.

The army has been accused of using military courts to suppress political dissent and has been involved in human rights abuses.

Abe calls for "new nation-building" in Constitution’s 70th year

ISE, (Japan) — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said on Wednesday his administration will proceed with "new nation-building" in 2017 as Japan marks the 70th anniversary of its post-World War II Constitution, a document he has long sought to revise.

"Now is the time to look to the future, in anticipation of the next 70 years, and proceed with new nation-building," Abe said at a news conference in Ise in Mie Prefecture, central Japan, after visiting the Ise Grand Shrine in the city earlier in the day.

“We, who are living today, must learn from our predecessors of 70 years ago who built postwar (Japan), face our challenges head-on and fulfill our responsibilities for the future,” Abe said.

Revising the war-renouncing Constitution, which was introduced while Japan was still under postwar occupation by the United States and has remained unaltered since, has been a long-standing goal both of Abe and the Liberal Democratic Party he leads for the head.

Gains by the LDP and likeminded lawmakers in last year’s upper house election pushed them past a legal hurdle required to formally consider a constitutional amendment.

“Hunting at a more self-reliant Japan, Abe said "our future is not something we are given by (other) people." "We, the Japanese people, will carve it out with our own hands -- now is the time when the grit (to do so) is needed," he said.

Abe also said his administration will “keep pushing on the high priority on the economy this year,” continuing to work to pull Japan out of deflation that has dominated the past two decades.

Abe said the next ordinary Diet session will convene on 20 January and will be aimed at “opening up (Japan’s) future.”

The premier said he is “not thinking at all of dissolving” the House of Representatives for election, which he has the sole discretion to do at any time.

With a government panel continuing to debate possible responses to Emperor Akihito’s apparent wish to abdicate, Abe reiterated that the issue is “an extremely serious matter and must not be turned into political fodder.”

Noting that 2017 is the Year of the Rooster in the Chinese zodiac, Abe said he will continue to advance “proactive diplomacy, looking across the globe with a bird’s-eye view, this year.”

Last month, Abe hosted Russian President Vladimir Putin for a summit in Japan.

Sources have said Abe and US President-elect Donald Trump may be planning a meeting in the United States at the end of this month, shortly after Trump’s inauguration.— Kyodo News

Armed men linked to Muslim rebels free more than 150 from Philippine prison

MANILA — Around 100 armed men with links to Muslim rebels stormed a prison in the southern Philippines on Wednesday, killing a guard and freeing more than 150 prisoners, some of them Islamic militants, officials said.

The Southeast Asian nation has for decades been plagued by insurgency by Muslim rebels in its southern islands.

The gunmen opened fire at guards at the North Cotabato District Jail in Kidapawan, prison warden Peter Bongat said on radio.

Of the jail’s 1,511 inmates, 158 managed to escape, he said.

Eight prisoners had since been caught, two had surrendered, while six were killed, according to the office of the president.

The leader of the attack, Gilbert Moreno, known as Commander Derbie, had links with the BIFF, a splinter group of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), Macasarte said.

Some members of the MILF and BIFF were said to be behind the killing of 44 police Commandos in a secret mission two years ago to capture a Malaysian bomb maker with a $5 million bounty from the US State Department on his head. In 2014, the government signed a peace deal with the MILF, the biggest Muslim rebel group, but clashes still occur with smaller groups.— Reuters

Taiwan objects to Vietnam deporting telecom fraud suspects to China

TAIPEI (China) — Taiwan on Tuesday strongly objected to the deportation from Vietnam to China of four Taiwanese nationals suspected of telecoms and internet fraud, saying the move was carried out under pressure from Beijing.

The latest deportation followed a series of similar cases this year where Taiwanese nationals in Kenya, Malaysia, Armenia and Cambodia have been arrested for alleged involvement in cross-border telecom scams and sent to China.

The deportations arose from the “one-China” policy of most countries under which they maintain formal relations only with the People’s Republic of China rather than Taiwan, a self-ruled island that Beijing regards as a renegade province. The four suspects, along with one Chinese national, were arrested in the northern Vietnamese city of Haiphong in December. Despite repeated requests from Taiwan envoys in Vietnam to have the four deported to Taiwan, they were “forcibly” sent to China, Taiwan’s foreign ministry said.

“China said that in this case the victims were mostly in China and depended on Vietnamese to repatriate all of the suspects to China (based on a bilateral legal treaty), obstructing our efforts to understand the case and visit the Taiwanese suspects,” it said in a statement.

Taiwan’s China pol icy-maker, the Mainland Af fairs Council (MAC), urged Beijing on Tuesday to open dialogue as soon as possible, saying its actions were unhelpful in tracing the source of the cross-border fraud groups and affected mutual trust in joint Chinese-Taiwanese crime-fighting efforts. China has suspended dialogue with Taipei since June, a month after pro-independence Tsai Ing-wen took office as Taiwan’s president, because Tsai has refused to accept Beijing’s “one China” principle that Taiwan is a part of China.

“China and Vietnam maintain close cooperation in combating cross-border telecoms and internet fraud crime,” Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Geng Shuang told a regular press briefing on Wednesday. Geng did not comment on Taiwan’s objection, saying it was not a foreign affairs matter.

According to MAC officials, there are over 200 Taiwanese suspected of telecom fraud who have been deported from third countries to China this year.

Chinese authorities have sought to contain an explosion of telecom crime, it says it has led to huge financial losses, with callers often impersonating officials or authority figures and preying on the elderly, students or the unemployed.

The fraud has spread overseas, with Chinese speakers recruited in neighboring self-ruled Taiwan increasingly setting up operations in East Africa or Southeast Asia.— Reuters
Freedom is not free, come let us reason together

Khin Maung Oo

By nature, all of us want freedom. Especially when we are under foreign rule, we want it more. We want to live, say, go about and work freely. So long as one’s freedom does not harm others, freedom sits well and is lovable thing for everyone. Once in the past, we were robbed of our rights—right of governing ourselves, right of expressing what we wish and so on. Colonialists occupied our country, seized our natural resources, and exploited our minerals. The worst thing is that they destroyed the unity among our national brethren. Armed with whatever weapons they had, such as it was, compared to those of our enemy, our forefathers fought against the colonialists for the freedom and independence they longed for, sacrificing their lives. Since the time we lost our independence, we, Myanmar people including national ethnic brethren living across the nation, took part in our determined struggle to liberate ourselves from colonial rule. This depicts that patriotism received in us emerged spontaneously if demanded by circumstances.

Well convinced of being unable to fight against the colonialists with incomparable weapons, the Thirty comrades led by Bogyoke Aung San decided to provide assistance and training from a great alien country to wage war against the enemy. Formed by Bogyoke Aung San, the Burma Independence Army (BLA) that is, the Tatmadaw fought against the colonialists hand in hand with the patriotic national ethnic brethren. Freedom was not free was won by blood, toil, sweat and tears. Now, Myanmar had gained its independence for nearly 7 decades. Sorrowfully enough, since the time of gaining our Independence, solidarity among us—our national brethren, has been broken into pieces. Our country did not develop as we had hoped. In an unprecedented manner, some areas have not been able to completely enjoy the taste of independence. We hear and see news about our displaced children in our daily and social web pages like Facebook. Whenever we see such desperate faces, deep sorrow occurs in us. At the time when our children are enjoying themselves on streets, in parks and at entertainment shows on Independence Day, they may be waiting for humanitarian assistance and relief supplies from donors, or lying in places without shelters and blankets. The joy of learning in is still impossible due to lack of schools and classrooms.

Now is the time for all of us to make them dream their futures and fulfill their hopes. We all know what brought about these conditions. Unless we remove our doubts, fears, mistrusts and mutual misunderstandings, we will never ever reach an agreement we all want and hope for.

Peace cannot be attained through fighting. Conflicts will increase hatred and ceaseless fighting. Now we are beginning to see the dawn of peace. The 21st Century Panglong Conference is our unique solution to reach our goal—attainment of nationwide eternal peace. For the benefit of our country and betterment of our future generations, now is the time for all to come forth for meaningful and sincere and honest dialogues at the round-table negotiations. However, there is one important condition and that is we all need to sign the nationwide ceasefire agreement as a first step. We firmly believe that we will reach our desired goal if we all make gaining internal peace our top priority. Let us forget about the gains and benefits of the present moment and work heart and soul for the long-term happiness, peace and prosperity of our future generations.

New Republican-led US Congress lays groundwork for Trump era

WASHINGTON — The Republican-led Congress begins a new session on Tuesday where it will start laying plans for enacting President-elect Donald Trump’s agenda of tax cuts, repeal of Obamacare and the rollback of financial and environmental regulations.

With Trump set to be sworn in as president on 20 January, Republican lawmakers hope to get a quick start on priorities that were blocked during Democratic President Barack Obama’s eight years in the White House.

Since his election on 8 November, the Republican president-elect has made clear he wants to move swiftly to enact proposals he outlined during the campaign such as simplifying the tax code, slashing corporate tax rates and repealing and replacing Obama’s signature health insurance program known as Obamacare.

Republicans have long sought to dismantle Obamacare, insisting it was unworkable and hampered job growth. But they face a dilemma over how to provide health insurance to economically vulnerable Americans. The law aims to provide health care to others who could lose their coverage under a Trump plan to replace conservative Justice Antonin Scalia, who died last February. Republicans refused to consider Obama’s nomination of Merrick Garland last year.

Amid the contention will be a move by House Republicans to clear the decks for Obamacare repeal.

That will come in the form of a vote on rules governing House procedures in the two-year term of the chamber. Tucked into the rules package is a move to prevent Democrats from slowing or stopping Obamacare repeal legislation because of the potential cost to the US Treasury of doing so.

Leading Democrats warned on Monday of a fierce battle over Obamacare.

“We’re going to fight as hard as ever to protect the ACA (Affordable Care Act),” said Representative Steny Hoyer, the House’s second-ranking Democrat.

Speaking to reporters, Hoyer and House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi said they would launch an effort to mobilize grassroots support for Obamacare by explaining how repeal would create a ripple effect hurting a majority of Americans.

Obama is scheduled to meet on Wednesday with congressional Democrats to discuss strategies for fending off the Republican attacks on Obamacare.

The Senate will kick off hearings on Trump’s choices to head his Cabinet departments and other top jobs in the new administration.

It is also expected to receive a Supreme Court nomination from Trump early in his term to replace conservative Justice Antonin Scalia, who died last February. Republicans refused to consider Obama’s nomination of Merrick Garland last year.

PROMINENT REPUBLICAN SENATOR JOHN MCCAIN HAS WARNED THAT REPUBLICAN LAWMAKERS HOPE TO DELIVER ON THEIR CAMPAIGN PROMISES TO REPEAL OBAMA’S SIGNATURE HEALTH INSURANCE PROGRAM KNOWN AS OBAMACARE. THE LAW AIMS TO PROVIDE HEALTH CARE TO ECONOMICALLY VULNERABLE AMERICANS. THE LAW AIMS TO PROVIDE HEALTH INSURANCE TO ECONOMICALLY VULNERABLE AMERICANS.

“Though we are in a minority, we are now in a position… to make certain that we block this, not only on the legislative front, but also on the procedural front,” McCaun said.

Republicans also want to curtail or block regulations aimed at controlling industrial emissions that contribute to climate change, and roll back banking industry reforms enacted after the near-collapse of Wall Street in 2008.

Republicans might use upcoming spending bills funding government agencies to try to kill some of those regulations. Trump is also expected to try to use his executive powers toward that end.

Republicans will hold a slightly smaller majority in both the Senate and House than they enjoyed the past two years.

That means Democrats will still have bargaining power, especially on issues that divide Republicans, such as spending priorities. —Reuters

Fire at China nursing home kills seven: Xinhua

BEIJING — A fire at a private nursing home in China killed seven people on Wednesday, the official Xinhua news agency reported, the latest deadly incident in a country struggling to improve its safety record.

The blaze broke out at 4:10 am (1000 GMT) at the nursing home in Chaoyang township in the northeastern province of Jilin, and was put out 17 minutes later, the news agency reported.

It is not clear how the seven people died. Firefighters rescued the other 32 people living at the home, Xinhua reported.

In 2015, a fire at an home for the elderly in Henan province killed 38 people, stirring debate about whether China’s growing population of old people are getting proper care.

The fire at that time prompted President Xi Jinping to call on authorities to take immediate steps to ensure accidents do not happen. —Reuters

Hitler’s “Mein Kampf” a hit in Germany

BERLIN — About 85,000 copies of an annotated edition of Adolf Hitler’s “Mein Kampf” have been sold since it was first launched a year ago, the book’s publisher said on Tuesday.

The Bavarian regional government, which held the copyright of the anti-Semitic Nazi manifesto, had banned reprinting since the end of World War II. Its relaunch was made possible after the copyright expired in late 2015.

The book was republished by the Institute of Contemporary History in Munich, or IfZ, with critical notes by scholars. The first print run was 4,000 copies, but the institute boosted production immediately based on intense demand. —Kyodo News

Turkey extends emergency rule to maintain purge of Gulen supporters: deputy PM

ANKARA — Turkey’s parliament voted overnight to extend emergency rule by three months in a move which the government said was needed to sustain a purge of supporters of the US-based Muslim cleric accused of orchestrating July’s failed coup, state media said.

Emergency rule, first imposed in Turkey after an attempted putsch on 15 July and then extended in October, enables the government to bypass parliament in enacting new laws and to limit or suspend rights and freedoms when deemed necessary.

The extension, effective from 19 January, comes as Turkey reels from a series of attacks by Islamist or Kurdish militants, most recently on Sunday when a lone gunman shot dead 39 people in an Istanbul nightclub during New Year celebrations.

Ankara accuses Pennsylvania-based preacher Fethullah Gulen and his supporters, whom it terms the Gulenist Terror Organisation (FETO), of being behind the July coup attempt. Gulen denies the allegations.

“The purge of FETO from the state has not been completed. We need the implementation of emergency rule until FETO and all terror groups have been purged from the state,” Deputy Prime Minister Numan Kurtulmus said in parliament ahead of the vote.

More than 41,000 people have been jailed pending trial in connection with the attempted coup out of 120,000 people, including soldiers, police officers, teachers, judges and journalists, who have been suspended or dismissed since the coup, although thousands of them have since been restored to their posts.— Reuters

Israeli soldier convicted of manslaughter in killing of immobile Palestinian assailant

JERUSALEM — An Israeli soldier who shot dead a wounded and incapacitated Palestinian assailant in the occupied West Bank was convicted of manslaughter on Wednesday in one of the most divisive trials in Israel’s history.

Hundreds of far-right protesters rallied in support of Sergeant Elor Azaria along a busy Tel Aviv street and some clashed with police outside an army base where the lengthy verdict was read out.

Despite a campaign by Azaria’s family and rightist politicians criticising the armed forces for putting him on trial at a time of Palestinian street attacks, members of Israel’s military establishment argued that shooting in violation of regulations could not be countenanced.

A three-judge military court rejected the 20-year-old convicted of manslaughter on Wednesday in one of the most divisive trials in Israel’s history.

“Finally we have been freed,” a second Mithaq resident told Reuters by phone. “We feared fighting would be fierce, but it was easy compared with other areas. Daesh members fled without putting up strong resistance.”

Counterterrorism units pushed into eastern Mosul in October but regular army troops tasked with advancing from the north and south made slower progress and the operation stalled.

After redeploying forces, Iraqi forces have been advancing on three fronts toward the Tigris river that bisects Mosul, in a second phase of the offensive. Victory in Mosul would probably spell the end for Islamic State’s self-styled caliphate but in recent days the militants have deployed the tactics to which they are likely to resort when they lose the city, with bomb attacks in Baghdad, and attacks on security forces in territory they have lost.— Reuters

Italy says same gun used in hijack of Berlin market truck, Milan shootout

ROME — A gun fired at Milan police by the man suspected of attacking a Christmas market in Berlin last month was the same one used to kill the driver of the truck that ploughed into revellers in the German capital, Italian police said on Wednesday.

Anis Amri, a failed asylum seeker from Tunisia, was shot dead in a gunfight with police in the Milan suburb of Sesto San Giovanni on 23 December days after he allegedly killed 12 people in Berlin.

Amri is also suspected of shooting dead a truck driver in Germany and hijacking his vehicle, which he then drove into the Christmas market crowd. Police had been carrying out tests to ascertain if the same gun was used in both the Berlin and Milan shootings.

“The comparison carried out between the exploded cartridge from the terrorist’s weapon in Sesto and the one found by the German police has given unequivocal proof that they were fired from the same gun,” police said in a statement.— Reuters
UK’s opposition Labour “too weak” to win an election — think tank

LONDON — Britain’s opposition Labour party is too weak to win a national election and should look to form an alliance with other smaller parties in order to have a chance of regaining power, a Labour-supporting think tank said on Tuesday.

Bessef by internal rifts, the party has struggled to articulate a clear position on Brexit which it had campaigned against, giving Prime Minister Theresa May’s ruling Conservatives a freer ride as she plots Britain’s divorce from the EU.

Opinion polls consistently put Labour about 10 percentage points behind the Conservatives and if replicated at the next election due in 2020, Labour would win less than 200 seats in the 650-seat House of Commons for the first time since 1935, the left-wing Fabian Society said on Tuesday.

With polling in the past overstating Labour’s popularity, it could actually win as few as 140 seats, the think tank, one of Labour’s original founders, said in an analysis paper entitled “Stuck.”

“For the time being Labour has no realistic chance of winning an election outright,” said Fabian Society General Secretary Andrew Harrop.

“It is much more plausible to imagine a group of anti-Conservative parties securing sufficient votes to form a governing alliance... although even this would still require a very large reverse in Labour’s present fortunes.”

Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn, a veteran socialist, was re-elected in September after a challenge from one of his lawmakers that exposed sharp divisions between the party’s elected representatives and grassroots supporters.

On Monday, the head of Britain’s biggest trade union and Labour’s largest financial backer was reported saying he did not think Corbyn would seek tocling on to power if the party’s opinion poll ratings were “still awful” in 2019.

Commentators say Labour’s weakness is giving May breathing space on her plans for Brexit about which she has so far given few details. But it has also meant her administration needs to be able to steer all security authorities as a security threat. For instance, de Maiziere said at the start of a Christmas market attack, it emerged after the Christmas market attack, it emerged that other countries have, and police and intelligence bodies are too fragmented.

“The federal government needs to be able to steer all security authorities where central government and the states work together on national security,” he wrote in a full-page newspaper article in the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung. Each of the 16 federal states has its own police force and intelligence agency, and the country’s worst attack in more than 35 years has reignited debate about how best to prevent information from falling between the cracks.

After the Christmas market attack, it emerged that Tunisian suspect Anis Amri had spent nearly a year and a half in Germany, using various names and moving between different parts of the country despite being identified as a security threat. For several days he evaded an intensive search, crossing three international borders before being shot dead in Italy.

De Maiziere said the federal police agency should lead national manhunts, and a discussion about centralising intelligence agencies was needed. Better coordination was also required to monitor several hundred individuals believed to pose a threat, including many who have returned from Syria and Iraq.

The minister said Germans should not fear installing more video cameras in public places to help prevent and solve crime. Germans have an aversion to such measures after an incident of mass snooping under the communist East German Stasi and the Nazis.

He also said failed asylum seekers who are viewed as a danger should be held until they can be deported. Amri, whose attack was claimed by Islamic State, was due to be sent home after his asylum application was rejected but Tunisia refused to take him back because of missing papers. Chancellor Angela Merkel, who is seeking a fourth term this year, is under growing pressure for allowing more than a million migrants into Germany over the past two years, which critics say has made the country more vulnerable to an attack.—Reuters

Vucic could win presidential elections in first round

BELGRADE — If he runs for president, Aleksandar Vucic could win the presidential elections in the first round already, while Tomislav Nikolic could have major problems in a run-off vote, shows a recent survey conducted by the Politika daily and the Faktor Plus opinion poll company.

The survey, based on a sample of 1,200 people, indicates Nikolic would be tied with Vucic in a potential run-off elections, and that he would win 62 pct of the votes in a show-down with Sasa Jankovic, and 53 pct or 58 pct if he faced Vojislav Seselj or Ivisca Dacic, respectively. Vucic would get 76 pct of the votes if he were to face Seselj in a run-off vote, and 68 pct or 74 pct in a race against Jankovic or Jankovic, respectively.

Vucic would also beat Nikolic convincingly in run-off elections — 64 pct of respondents said they would vote for Vucic, with 34 pct opting for Nikolic.—Tanjug
China says aircraft carrier testing weapons in South China Sea

BEIJING — A group of Chinese warships led by its sole aircraft carrier is testing weapons and equipment in exercises this week in the South China Sea that are going to plan, China’s foreign ministry spokesman Geng Shuang said on Wednesday.

Exercises by the ships, in particular the aircraft carrier Liaoning, since last month have unnerved China’s neighbors, especially at a time of heightened strain with self-ruled Taiwan, which Beijing claims as its own, and given long-running territorial disputes in the South China Sea. China says the Soviet-built Liaoning and the other ships conduct routine exercises that comply with international law. “The Liaoning aircraft carrier group in the South China Sea is carrying out scientific research and training, in accordance with plans,” Chinese foreign ministry spokesman Geng Shuang told a regular news briefing.

“The purpose is to test the performance of weapons and equipment,” he said. The People’s Liberation Army Navy said on its official microblog this week that the aircraft carrier conducted drills in the South China Sea with its fighter jets and helicopters. US warships have also been conducting what they call “freedom of navigation” patrols through the South China Sea over the past year as concern grows about Chinese construction of air strips and docks on disputed reefs and islands. The group of warships sailed through waters south of Japan and then rounded east and south of Taiwan late last month on their way to the south China province of Hainan, Taiwan’s defense minister warned at the time that “the threat of our enemies is growing day by day”.

Taiwan media have reported that the Liaoning could sail north up the medi-an line of the Taiwan Strait, the narrow body of water separating Taiwan and China, on its way to its home port of Qingdao.

Taiwan’s defense ministry said the talk about the timing and northward route of the Liaoning was speculation, and it would make preparations based on the situation and “maintain its grasp of the movements” of the ship. Business relations between mainland China and Taiwan have grown significantly over the past decade but tension has increased since the island elected a president from an independence-leaning party last year. China distrusts President Tsai Ing-wen and has stepped up pressure on her following a protocol-breaking phone call between her and US President-elect Donald Trump last month.

Beijing suspects Tsai wants to push for the island’s formal independence, a red line for the mainland, which has no renounced the use of force to bring what it deems a renegade province under its control.

Tsai says she wants to maintain peace with China.—Reuters

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Hollywood stars Tom Hanks and Nicole Kidman were among the actors honoured at the Palm Springs International Film Festival on Monday night as the 2017 awards season began.

Oscar winner Hanks received the “Icon Award” for his portrayal in drama “Sully” of pilot Captain Chesley Sullenberger, who in 2009 carried out a successful emergency plane landing in the Hudson River.

Kidman took the “International Star Award” for “ Lion”, in which she plays an Australian woman who adopts an Indian child.

Also honoured at the festival’s Film Awards Gala were Andrew Garfield with the “Spotlight Award” for his role in Mel Gibson’s war drama “Hacksaw Ridge” and Natalie Portman who received the “Desert Palm Achievement Award, Actress” for her portrayal of Jacqueline Kennedy in “Jackie”.

“Manchester by the Sea” actor Casey Affleck took the “Desert Palm Achievement Award”, “Arrival” actress Amy Adams was given the “Chairman’s Award”, Annette Benning was honoured with the “Career Achievement Award” and “Moonlight” actor Mahershala Ali took the honours in the “Breakthrough Performance” category.—Reuters

Janet Jackson, 50, announces birth of first child

NEW YORK — Pop star Janet Jackson gave birth on Tuesday to her first child, a boy, at the age of 50, her publicist said.

“Janet and husband Wissam Al Mana are thrilled to welcome their new son Eissa Al Mana into the world,” the singer’s representative said in a statement to People magazine.

“Janet had a stress-free healthy delivery and is resting comfortably,” the statement said.

Jackson and Qatari businessman Al Mana married in 2012, and the singer in April postponed her “Unbreakable” world tour so they could focus on starting a family.

In October, she showed off her baby bump in an exclusive photo for People magazine.

Jackson, the fiercely private youngest child of the famed Jackson family, has not given any details of the pregnancy or where the baby was born.

She had two previous marriages: a year-long union with soul singer James DeBarge in 1983, and a four-year union with actor Wissam Al Mana from 1991-2000.—Reuters

‘Pentatonix Christmas’ tops Billboard album charts for second straight week

NEW YORK — US a capella group Pentatonix extended its run at the top of the Billboard 200 album chart for a second week with “A Pentatonix Christmas,” according to Nielsen SoundScan figures for the final week of 2016 released on Tuesday.

The five-member group from Texas sold 101,000 units for the week and also saw its 2014 holiday release, “That’s Christmas To Me,” notch up another 42,000 units to take the No 9 spot on the Billboard 200.

In a week with few new releases, Canadian rapper The Weeknd rose to second place with his album “Starboy,” while R&B singer Bruno Mars was at No 3 with his latest album “24K Magic.”

The Billboard 200 album chart tallies units from album sales, song sales (10 songs equal one album) and streaming activity (1,500 streams equal one album).

On the digital songs chart, which measures online song sales, Rae Sremmurd’s viral hit “Black Beatles” moved back into No 1, while “Mercy,” the Shawn Mendes piano ballad about heartbreak, soared 12 places to land at No 2.

British singer George Michael, who was found dead on Christmas Day, saw a surge in popularity. His 1984 hit “Careless Whisper” entered the digital song charts in spot 21, and other hits including “Faith” and “Freedom” found their way into the top 30.—Reuters

‘La La Land’, ‘Manchester by the Sea’ and ‘Moonlight’ sweep New York Critics Circle

Directed by Damien Chazelle, the musical love story of an aspiring actress and a jazz musician set in Los Angeles is considered an Oscar front-runner this year.

Casey Affleck picked up Best Actor for his portrayal of a man who becomes the reluctant guardian for his teenage nephew after his brother dies, in the film “Manchester by the Sea”.

“Well, I’ve been singled out by this organization before in a less flattering way, but you got to take your lumps, you know, if you’re going to enjoy the sugar … So it’s nice to be in this room and to know that at least a majority of them appreciated the job I did in this movie, if not all of them,” Affleck said.

French actress Isabelle Huppert was recognized as Best Actress for her work in the drama films “Elle” and “Things To Come”.

“I feel like I have twins, it’s great, it’s really great … and I think both films speak in a very honest way about a woman’s condition in a very contemporary way”, she said.

Best Supporting Actress went to Michelle Williams for her roles in “Manchester by the Sea” and “Certain Women”.

“Moonlight”, which follows a young black man growing up in a tough Miami neighborhood, picked up multiple trophies.

Mahershala Ali snagged Best Supporting Actor for his depiction of a crack dealer, while Barry Jenkins was named Best Director and James Laxton Best Cinematographer.

Founded in 1935, the New York Film Critics Circle is among the oldest critics groups in the United States, and its awards are seen as a bellwether for the Oscars.—Reuters
China’s icy Harbin gets ready for annual snow festival

HARBIN, (China) — Artists put the final touches on a dazzling display of ice sculptures in China’s northern city of Harbin on Wednesday, home to one of the world’s biggest ice and snow festivals.

The 2017 Harbin International Ice and Snow Sculpture Festival kicks off on Thursday and runs to the end of February.

The event, in the northeastern province of Heilongjiang, draws visitors from all over China as well as foreign tourists to one of the country’s coldest places, where winter temperatures can fall to minus 35 Celsius.

“When I was in primary school, I read about how it snows in the northern part of our country in a textbook. So this has really attracted me to this place for some 10 years or so,” said Qing after taking a ride down an ice slide.

Zhang Yanyan, a 31-year-old tourist from southern Fujian province, said she was drawn to the colourful lights that illuminate the ice sculptures at night.

“I think they’re all beautiful. I really like it here,” she said.— Reuters

UK royal Kate given photographic society’s seal of approval

LONDON — Britain’s Duchess of Cambridge, whose pictures of her children Prince George and Princess Charlotte have graced the front pages of newspapers and magazines worldwide, was commend- ed on Tuesday by the Royal Photographic Society for her family snapshots.

Kate, the wife of Queen Elizabeth’s grandson Prince William, was given honorary lifetime membership of the society in recognition of her “talent and enthusiasm”. Her photographs, the first official portraits to be taken by a member of the royal family, have included shots of George holding his younger sister and of the young prince on his first day at nursery school.

“The Duchess of Cambridge has had a long-standing interest in photography and her history,” said Michael Pritchard, chief executive of the society which was formed in 1853 and counts Elizabeth’s great-great-grandmother Queen Victoria and her husband Prince Albert among its early patrons.

“She is latest in a long line of royal photographers and the Society is pleased to recognise her talent and enthusiasm through honorary membership,” Pritchard added.— Reuters

Britain’s Queen Elizabeth resumes duties as she recovers from cold

LONDON — Britain’s Queen Elizabeth has given an honour to a member of her staff in a private ceremony, resuming official duties as she continued to recover from a heavy cold that forced her to miss Christmas and New Year church services, a spokeswoman said.

The 90-year-old monarch fell ill before Christmas, delayed her trip from London to her country estate at Sandringham in eastern England by a day, then took the very rare decision not to attend the festive season church services.

She has not been seen in public since before she became unwell and Buckingham Palace has said she was recovering from a heavy cold.

On Tuesday, the queen gave a member of her staff, Raymond Whe- aton, the insignia of a Lieutenant of the Royal Victorian Order, an honour that usually rewards personal service to her or the monarchy.

A spokeswoman said the private ceremony took place at Sandringham and no pictures were available.

The queen also sent a personal message of condolence on Tuesday to Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan following the New Year’s Eve attack on a nightclub in Istanbul that killed 39 people.

Arsenal show their mettle to snatch point, Swansea win

LONDON — Flimsy before halftime, fabulous by the end; Arsenal revealed the split personality that has undermined so many of their Premier League title attempts as they snatched an unforgettable 3-3 draw at Bournemouth on Tuesday.

Out-battled for an hour by their modest south coast opponents, Arsenal belatedly sparked into life and Olivier Giroud’s glancing header two minutes into stoppage time completed their remarkable recovery from 3-0 down.

It was the first time Arsene Wenger’s side had recovered from such a deficit to draw in the Premier League and while they remained fourth, eight points adrift of leaders Chelsea who have played a game less, it could yet prove to be pivotal moment in their season as defeat would have been a hammer blow.

Swansea City’s new manager Paul Clement was not officially in charge of his side’s match at Crystal Palace but his presence helped the Swans move off the bottom of the table with a 2-1 victory at fellow strugglers Crystal Palace.

Stoke City also beat Watford 2-0 to leave Chelsea’s match at fifth-placed Tottenham Hotspur on Wednesday the final installment of a hectic fixture list.

The packed schedule over the Christmas-New Year period seemed to catch up with Arsenal who were back in action just 48 hours after beating Palace on Sunday.

They were second-best throughout the first half as Bournemouth moved 2-0 ahead after 20 minutes with a neat Charlie Daniels goal and a Calum Wilson penalty.

Ryan Fraser made it 3-0 in the 58th minute before goals from Alexis Sanchez and Lucas Perez set up a barnstorming finale.

Bournemouth were hanging on grimly after skipper Simon Fraser was sent off in the 82nd minute but were breached again by a rampaging Arsenal side in stoppage time as Giroud pounced to follow up on his “scorpion” volley against Palace on Sunday.

“It was not a result we wanted before the game but at 3-0 down we’d have signed for 3-3,” Wenger, whose side will slip out of the bottom four if they fail to take the points at the Vitality Stadium on Sunday.

The former Bayern Munich assistant would have taken heart from the way his new club dominated the first half in which Alfie Mawson gave them a 42nd-minute lead and by the way they snatched a late victory through Angel Rangel.

Palace have now failed to win in their three matches under new manager Sam Allardyce and sit just above the bottom three in 17th place, one point above Swansea and Sunderland.

Like Wenger, Allardyce said the quick turnaround from playing on Sunday had undermined his side.

“Whether you’re tired or not you have to play and I told them that at halftime,” he said.

“I was baffled with our first-half display, we were lumping the ball to Christian Bentke and who told them to do that? They were confused.”

Alan Curtis was officially in charge of Swansea but Clement came down to the dugout in the second half.

“He came down for some moral support, he made his presence felt at halftime, but there was not too much to say,” Curtis said. “We would have surprised a lot of people with our performance today.”

Ryan Shawcross and Peter Crouch scored either side of halftime for Stoke as they eased into mid-table. — Reuters

Guardiola needs time to establish City among Europe’s elite

LONDON — Manchester City may need a decade of consistent performances in the Champions League to establish themselves among Europe’s biggest clubs, manager Pep Guardiola has said.

City have won two Premier League titles, an FA Cup and two League Cups in the last six seasons under managers Roberto Mancini and Manuel Pellegrini, but the Spaniard wants his side to excel in Europe’s elite competition.

“We don’t have the history with this shirt, of Barcelona, Juventus, (Bayern Munich or Manchester United, Not their titles,” the 45-year-old manager told NBC.

“It’s about being in Europe and over the next decade to be there (in the Champions League) every year. That’s more important to this club than winning one title, believe me, more than that.

“We have to convince people at this amazing club that they are good. They are good. And the fans as well.”

City have qualified for the Champions League every year since 2010 and they reached the semi-final for the first time last season.

Guardiola believes it is not just the manager but several other factors that determine success at a club.

“I chose Manchester — to prove myself and have a new challenge,” he said. “If people think, ‘Pep’s here; City will win’. No. That’s not something you can switch on or off. You need many, many other things to change and we are in the process of doing that.”— Reuters

Pertamina drops sponsorship for F1 driver Haryanto

JAKARTA — Indonesian driver Rio Haryanto has suffered a major setback in his bid to return to Formula One this season after state-owned energy company Pertamina announced it was ending its sponsorship.

“This year there will not be a continuation of participation by Pertamina in F1,” spokesman Wianda Pusponegoro said in a statement on Tuesday, noting that Pertamina could not meet a sponsorship deadline.

“Of course we regret this very much, but we have already made maximal efforts for Rio and Indonesia,” she said.

Haryanto, the first Indonesian driver to race in Formula One, had a typically difficult season last year and scored his only point of the season at his home Grand Prix in Sepang.

Swiss-based Sauber, who are backed by French rookie Esteban Ocon after the German Grand Prix in July, Ocon has since moved on to Force India. Pertamina have been Haryanto’s constant backers in the costly sport, and Hunnisett said last month that while he was looking for other non-government backers he was confident that Pertamina would continue to sponsor Haryanto. — Reuters
