President attends Naga traditional New Year festival

THE Naga Traditional New Year festival kicked off in Lahe, Sagaing Region yesterday, with President U Htin Kyaw and wife Daw Su Su Lwin in attendance.

The President expressed his delight to see the unspoiled natural environment in the hilly region, pledging that the Union Government is committed to the socio-economic development of the ethnic people in the area.

In his speech at the opening ceremony, President U Htin Kyaw also called for cooperation from all ethnic people in making efforts for development of the country with the aim of building a federal union without separating the mainland and hilly areas.

The Naga Self-Administered Zone has seen progress to a certain extent, as the responsible ministries have built necessary infrastructures in the zone yearly, said Union Minister for Border Affairs Lt-Gen Ye Aung.

However, there is a limit to development in the region because the hilly areas are not easily accessible, he added.

The incumbent government allotted more than Ks 9 billion to the zone in the nine months since it took office and provided 3,758 bags of rice, said Sagaing Region Chief Minister Dr Myint Naing.

Camp for retired elephants in Pathein now a tourist attraction

THE Thitgatoeaing Elephant Camp in Pathein (South) of the Myanmar Timber Enterprise in Ayeyawady Region was turned into an elephant conservation camp for tourism earlier this month.

Among the 18 elephants in the camp, six have been chosen for tourism as they are clever enough to pose for photos with tourists, who can also feed them and wash them as well as travel on them short or long trips to study the natural environment of the camp.

It is also learnt that safety measures for tourists have also been taken during such experiences.

The camp is located at milepost 21/6 on Pathein-Mawtin Road, only about one hour away from Pathein, the region capital, by car. It is also on the way to Ngwe Saung Beach, Goringi Beach Resort and the Mawtinsun Pagoda.

Local and foreign tourists have already begun to visit the camp.

The elephants at the camp once belonged to the Myanmar Timber Enterprise (MTE), which falls under the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation (MNREC) and are now retired from their logging activities.

The retirement of the elephants reportedly comes as part of efforts to curb the deforestation of Myanmar’s wildness.

The number of elephants from Bago and Ayeyawady regions are reportedly depleting as hunters target the animals for their ivory and skin, which is exported to China for a high price.—Maung Maung Myint (IPRD)
Suspect in Rakhine attacks detained

WHILE conducting security operations in Bathtdaung, Rakhine State Saturday afternoon, a combined team of Tatmadaw columns and the police border guards captured Swedu Larmi, who is suspected of involvement in the violent attacks in Rakhine State last year.

The suspect was handed over to a local police station in order to take legal action against him in accordance with the law. — Myanmar News Agency

157 fire accidents in Bago Region last year

THE number of fires that occurred in Bago Region last year reached 157, an increase of seven cases compared with the previous year, according to the Bago Region Fire Service Department.

The majority of fire accidents happened in Bago District, which tops the list of regions with 56 cases, followed by Pyin Oo Lwin with 40 cases, Taungoo District with 31 cases and Thayawaddy District with 30 cases.

Last year’s fires in Bago Region killed five people and destroyed over Ks150 million worth of properties, including 185 households. Most of the fires were caused by negligence on the part of people who used stoves and electronic devices carelessly, said U Aung Myint, director of the department. Forest fires also occurred in the region twice last year. According to the figures of the Fire Service Department, a total of 150 fire cases occurred in 28 townships in the region in 2015.

The region has over 70 fire stations, 159 fire engines, 148 water tankers, 20 auxiliary vehicles and 22 other vehicles. The fire stations are staffed by nearly 800 officers and other ranks of the fire service and more than 23,900 auxiliary members. — Myitmakha News Agency

Union Minister for Information opens community centre, mobile library

A CEREMONY to formally open a community centre and a mobile library jointly founded by the Ministry of Information and the Daw Khin Kyi Foundation was held at the Natmauk Township Information and Public Relations Department in Magway District yesterday morning.

Union Minister for Information Dr Pe Myint said at the ceremony that the community centre and the mobile library are situated in the home town of the National Leader General Aung San, which was the childhood home of the national leader, and was implemented with the assistance of the government. The festival has become a state-level festival since 2001, celebrating in Lasay, Lake and Nanyun alternatively. At the ceremony, Chairman of the Naga Literature and Culture (Central) Committee U Aung Htu extended New Year greetings.

U Kay Sai, Chairman of the Naga SAZ, presented New Year gifts to the President.

Before the Naga traditional New Year was officially launched, the President, Union ministers, regional ministers and donors presented aid to local authorities for the development of the zone.

The Naga ethnic people celebrate the traditional New Year on 15th January after their harvest.

The Naga ethnic tribes have held the New Year festival in individual villages, but since 1956-57, chieftains of the ethnic tribes have collectively held the New Year festival in townships.

Since 1993, the Naga Traditional New Year festival has been held with the assistance of the government. The festival has become a state-level festival since 2001, celebrating in Lasay, Lake and Nanyun alternatively. Fisheries product export fetched over US$400mil this FY

The export value of fisheries products as of 6th Jan in this fiscal year 2016-2017 reached US$404.366 million, which was up from US$367.91m in the similar period of last FY 2015-2016, according to the statistics of the Commerce Ministry.

The fisheries exports attained over US$668m in 2011-2012, over US$493m in 2012-2013 and over US$341m in 2013-2014. Exports then declined slightly. In the 2015-2016 fiscal year, export values were up a bit at over US$469m.

“The erratic weather adversely affected fisheries production and fish resources, and offshore fishing does not look very promising. As a result of this, to boost the export volume, the fish farming sector should be prioritised,” said a representative of the fisheries sector. “All the stakeholders in the fisheries export supply chain, including the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation and Myanmar Fishery Federation (MFF) need to exert the concerted efforts.”

Those engaged in Myanmar’s fish and prawn farming need to switch over to modern farming methods from the traditional methods, the MFF said. Adopting the modern farming techniques can help to prevent the fish from infectious disease, increase the growth rate of fish and prawn and clean the farming lakes, according to MFF.

To control the quality of lake water, the farmers should conduct testing at the laboratories of the Fisheries department. Saltwater and freshwater prawn farming businessmen are currently facing difficulties. Out of 27 hatcheries for freshwater prawns, only four are left due to difficulties in the reproduction process. Similarly in saltwater farming, only some prawn farmers are able to farm prawns. Only 40,000 tonnes of freshwater and saltwater prawns can be produced in the country, requiring that prawns are being imported from Thailand, it is learnt.— Ko Khant

Rubber prices on the rise from high global petroleum price

The price of Myanmar rubber is on the rise due to its relation to the global petroleum price in the market, said rubber merchants recently.

“The price of rubber is also on the rise from the high purchase price from China and high petroleum price, plus the appreciation of the dollar in 2016,” said a representative of the rubber merchants.

In addition, the rise in rubber price resulted from the decrease in Thailand’s rubber production, said the rubber exporters.

Local rubber growers battered by low prices since 2012 resumed their operations, which were forced to halt due to the declining price, but the rubber price has turned to an upward trend towards the end of 2016. The rubber price hit a four-year record high of around Ks1,200 per pound, said the rubber businessmen.

Myanmar’s rubber is exported to China, Malaysia and Japan. Over 80,000 tonnes of rubber are annually exported, according to Myanmar Rubber Planters and Producers Association. To maintain the price on the rise, quality needs to be controlled so that Myanmar’s rubber meets the export market’s criteria. However, the quality of Myanmar’s rubber is inconsistent, merchants said.— Mon Mon

Thahtay power project hopes to generate 386 million kilowatts of electricity yearly

The THAHTAY hydropower project being developed in Thandwe, a township in Rakhine State, is expected to generate 386 million kilowatt hours of electricity yearly, according to the Ministry of Electricity and Energy.

The power project has been implemented on Thahtay Creek, 12 miles northeast of Thandwe in Rakhine State, at a cost of a government-approved Ks354.6 billion, said U Hlay Aung, deputy permanent secretary of the ministry.

The project covers the construction of a main dam, spillway, field channels, diversion tunnels and a power plant.

The construction of diversion tunnels No. 1 and No. 2 were finalised in January 2015, with the project implementer continuing the work relating to the strength development of the tunnels.

The Thahtay hydropower project has been initiated by the Department of Hydropower Implementation since the 2008-2009 fiscal year for the purpose of supplying over 380 million kilowatt hours of power across the country annually.

The project is expected to be completed by 2023-2024.— Myitmakha News Agency

Myanmar Tourism Bank to offer short-term loans to SME tourism businessmen

MYANMAR Tourism Bank will be opened to offer short-term loans to businessmen working on a manageable scale and to those engaged in small-and-medium-sized tourism enterprises (SMEs), according to the Myanmar Tourism Federation.

“Tourism Bank aims at providing loans to start-up entrepreneurs. The bank is not still granted as investment bank and so, it cannot provide long-term loan plan,” said U Phyo Wai Yarzar, the vice chairman of Myanmar Tourism Federation, at a regular meetings held on last Friday at UMPCCI.

Myanmar Tourism Bank branches will be opened in Nay Pyi Taw, Yangon and Mandalay regions. The bank is seeking a license from the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism to open a bank through the Central Bank of Myanmar, it is learnt.

The Central Bank of Myanmar is expected to grant the license soon, which would allow the bank to open this year, he continued.

Myanmar Tourism Bank was established by the Myanmar Tourism Bank Public Company and will offer banking services as local private banks, at an interest rate set by the Central Bank of Myanmar.

There are over 20 local private banks and over 10 foreign banks, it is learnt.— Myitmakha News Agency
Abe, Jokowi meet to strengthen cooperation on South China Sea

BOGOR, Indonesia — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Indonesian President Joko “Jokowi” Widodo met south of Jakarta on Sunday, with the leaders expected to affirm coordination on maritime security amid tension over China’s military buildup in disputed waters of the South China Sea.

In the talks at Bogor Palace, Abe is also set to pitch Japan’s cooperation in developing infrastructure in the Southeast Asian country, including a new port project in eastern Jakarta, at a time when Indonesia is strengthening economic ties with China.

Abe’s visit to Indonesia is the latest stop on a four-nation tour since Thursday that has already taken him to the Philippines and Australia. He will fly to Vietnam on Monday.

Japan views Indonesia, with the world’s fourth-largest population and high economic potential, as a major power in the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations and expects it to play a leading role in addressing regional challenges such as the South China Sea issue, Japanese officials said.

Territorial disputes in the South China Sea involve China and five other governments — Brunei, the Philippines, Malaysia, Vietnam and Taiwan.

Although neither Japan nor Indonesia is a claimant in the disputes, the officials said both countries are worried about China’s increasing military presence in the busy shipping lane and keen to maintain a rules-based order in the sea.

Tokyo is involved in a dispute with Beijing over the Japanese-controlled Senkaku Islands in the East China Sea that are claimed by China, which calls them Diaoyu.

In Sunday’s talks, Abe and Jokowi are set to agree on strengthening maritime cooperation, with the Indonesian navy maintaining alert in monitoring and patrolling the vicinity of the Natuna Islands on the southern edge of the South China Sea. The navy has also been cracking down on Chinese fishing boats operating illegally in the country’s exclusive economic zone.

China recognizes Indonesia’s sovereignty over the Natuna Islands but at the same time argues that Beijing and Jakarta have overlapping claims for maritime rights and interests in the area that need to be resolved — an assertion Indonesia rejects.

Indonesia has also proposed cooperation with Japan on exploration for oil and gas in the Natuna area.

In the area of infrastructure development, aside from the new Patimban port project, the leaders may also take up a medium-speed railway project linking Indonesia’s two largest business hubs of Jakarta and Surabaya.

The project is part of efforts to revitalize the existing 725-kilometre railway between Jakarta and Surabaya, after Japan lost out to China in September 2015 in bidding to construct a high-speed railway between Indonesia’s capital and the West Java provincial capital Bandung.

Abe and Jokowi are also expected to affirm security ties in light of an agreement to promote talks for forging a pact on the transfer of Japanese defence equipment and technology to Indonesia, the officials said.

Amid the growing threat of Islamist extremists, the leaders may also discuss counterterrorism measures, with Indonesia home to the world’s largest Muslim population, the officials said. —Kyodo News

Cambodian PM hosts dinner for local journalists, spokespersons for 1st time

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen hosted a banquet for more than 1,000 local media members and spokespersons for the first time on Saturday evening.

Speaking at the event held at the 5-star Sokha Phnom Penh Hotel here, Hun Sen urged journalists to report news “accurately and fast” and advised the spokespersons for state institutions and ministries to cooperate well with journalists.

The prime minister also called on journalists to comply with the journalist’s code of ethics, not taking money from unscrupulous wealthy or powerful people in order to conceal their wrong acts.

“I want nothing from you (journalists), but accurate news reporting,” he said. “My presence today is to strengthen the role of media outlets and to give an incentive to journalists, not to stifle your rights.”

He added that journalists must dare to make corrections if they had released untrue information.

The Southeast Asian country has some 22 television channels, 812 newspapers, news bulletins and magazines, and 72 news websites as well as 334 radio stations, according to Information Minister Khieu Kanharith. —Xinhua

Philippines takes helm of ASEAN, as bloc nears 50th anniversary

MANILA — The Philippines launched its one-year chairmanship of the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations on Sunday, as the bloc nears the 50th anniversary of its formation.

A ceremony led by the country’s President Rodrigo Duterte was held at a convention centre in his hometown of Davao City in the south of the country, with around a thousand people, including government officials and diplomats from other countries, attending the event.

“The Philippines, as ASEAN chair, will remain steadfast in upholding the ideals and values we hold dear and in working for the realization of our shared aspirations,” Duterte said in his speech, noting that the organization’s goals would be achieved through policy initiatives, coordination, consensus and cooperation.

The chairmanship of the regional bloc — which groups together Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam — is rotated every year. In the previous year, ASEAN’s chairmanship was held by Laos, under its president, Bounnhang Vorachith.

In the same speech, Duterte also said that priorities under his term include regional peace and stability, as well as maritime security and cooperation, both of which are increasing concerns due to territorial disputes in the South China Sea which could potentially become a flashpoint for armed conflict between rival claimants.

The 50th anniversary of the formation of ASEAN will occur during the Philippines’ chairmanship, with the bloc having been formed in August 1967. The Philippines was one of the organization’s five founding member states. —Kyodo News
BANGKOK — Thailand faces more hardship from unseasonable floods that have killed 40 people in its south, with more rain expected in the major rubber-producing and tourist region in coming days, a top disaster agency official said on Sunday.

Persistent heavy rain will into what should be the dry season has triggered floods across the south, cutting road and rail links, threatening crops and affecting about 1.6 million people, said Chatchai Promlert, head of the Disaster Prevention and Mitigation Department.

“The worst isn’t over. We’re expecting more rain this week while clean-up efforts are underway in places where the waters have subsided,” Chatchai told Reuters.

The Meteorological Department said on its website more rain was expected on Monday.

The rains in Thailand normally take place from June to November. The floods, which began on January 1, have followed unusually heavy rain.

Thailand is one of the world’s most important producers of natural rubber and the national rubber authority said Thursday output in 2016-2017 would be about 10 per cent lower because of the floods.

Global rubber prices have spiked on concern about the impact.

Flooding occurs in Thailand regularly during the rainy season but January is traditionally sunny and clear, and a high season for the tourist industry, including in southern seaside resorts.

The country saw its worst flooding in half a century in 2011, when heavy rain beginning in July that year over northern regions led to six months of inundations, including in the central plains, where industrial estates have replaced rice fields in many places.

The floods submerged a third of the country, killed more than 900 people and crippled industry.

The army played a major role in relief efforts in 2011 while the then civilian government was criticised for what many saw as lacklustre disaster efforts.

Police Chief Zhou Qiang was reported by the news agency as saying: "The worst isn’t over. We’re expecting more rain this week while clean-up efforts are underway in places where the waters have subsided.”—Chatchai told Reuters.

China’s top judge warns courts on judicial independence

BEIJING — China’s courts must firmly resist the western idea of judicial independence and other ideologies which threaten the leadership of the ruling Communist Party, the country’s top judge was reported as saying by state-run Chinese News Service.

People’s Courts at all levels must resist foreign notions, including constitutional democracy and separation of powers, Chief Justice Zhou Qiang was reported by the news agency as saying at a Supreme People’s Court meeting on Saturday.

China has in recent years unvelied legal reforms such as those aimed at giving judges more independence and limiting local officials’ influence over courts, but courts are not independent and ultimately answer to the party leadership.

Since he took office in March 2013, President Xi Jinping, who has a doctorate in law, has vowed to put “power within the cage of regulations” and called for judicial independence under the party.

Zhou’s comments on Saturday came after the country’s anti-graft watchdog said that a mechanism independent of the Communist Party to keep officials in check cannot exist in China. At an annual meeting earlier this month, the Central Commission for Discipline Inspection (CCDI) pledged to create a national supervisory commission and a corresponding national law, as part of a move to reform the oversight system for thousands of party officials.

But the reforms would stop short of placing power outside the party, CCDI officials said at a briefing on 9 January.—Reuters

Japanese bid to launch world’s smallest satellite-carrying rocket fails

KAGOSHIMA, Japan — Japan’s space agency on Sunday aborted the launch of the world’s smallest rocket capable of placing a satellite in orbit shortly after liftoff following a communication problem.

Carrying a mini satellite for observation of the Earth’s surface, the No 4 vehicle of the SS-520 series lifted off at 8:33 am from the agency’s Uchinoura Space Centre in Kagoshima Prefecture, southwestern Japan, the Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency said earlier. But the agency aborted ignition of the second stage after it lost communication with the rocket 20 seconds after liftoff.

The rocket — about the size of a utility pole — and its payload fell into the sea off Uchinoura. JAXA has no further plans to launch a rocket of this size, it said.

“It’s truly regrettable. We will probe the cause (of the failure),” Hiroto Habu, associate professor at JAXA who was in charge of development of the rocket, said, adding the latest incident will not affect the development and launch of other rockets at the agency.

Measuring 10 metres in length and 50 centimetres in diameter, the Japanese rocket was developed to provide a technologically reliable means to launch mini satellites — a growing segment of the commercial space market.

JAXA used commercially available components found in home electronics and smartphones for the rocket to demonstrate how the cost of placing satellites in orbit could be reduced.

The No 4 vehicle’s total production and launch costs are estimated at around 500 million yen (US$4.3 million).

The small satellite carrier, roughly a fifth the size of JAXA’s mainstay H-2A launch vehicle, was a three-stage rocket based on a two-stage model that the agency has been using.

It was designed to place a satellite weighing up to 4 kilograms in orbit at altitudes of up to 1,000 kilometres above the Earth’s surface.—Kyodo News

South Korea prosecutor weighs economic impact of arrest of Samsung chief

SEOUL — South Korea’s special prosecutor said on Sunday it will take into account the economic impact of whether to arrest Samsung Group leader Jay Y Lee in connection with an influence-peddling investigation involving the president.

The office also delayed by one day, until Monday, its decision on whether to seek the arrest of Lee, the third-generation leader of South Korea’s largest conglomerate, or chaebol, citing the gravity of the case.

The special prosecutor had said it would make a decision on Lee by Sunday. But spokesman Lee Kyu-chul told reporters on Sunday investigators were deliberating all factors including the potential economic impact of the arrest of Jay Y Lee.

Prosecutors have been investigating whether Samsung provided 30 billion won ($25.46 million) to a business and foundations backed by President Park Geun-hye’s friend, Choi Soon-sil, in exchange for the national pension fund’s support for a 2015 merger of two Samsung affiliates.

The Samsung chief denied bribery accusations during a parliamentary hearing in December.

Taking into account the economic impact could prove beneficial to the 48-year-old Lee. The imposition of less severe punishment on erring business leaders to avoid negative economic consequences has precedent in South Korea.

“Law and principle are the most important metric, and after also considering various factors mentioned previously, we will decide by law and principle,” the prosecutor’s spokesman Lee said, referring to economic impact, without elaborating.

A Samsung Group spokesman declined to comment.

Samsung’s Lee was questioned for 22 hours before leaving the special prosecutors’ office on 30 December as part of the investigation into a corruption scandal that has led to President Park’s impeachment by parliament. Establishing a mon ey-for-favour exchange between Samsung and Park or her surrogate is critical for the special prosecutor’s investigation, analysts say.—Reuters

Washington protesters vow to fight for civil rights under Trump

WASHINGTON — US civil rights activists vowed on Saturday to defend hard-fought gains in voting rights and criminal justice during the presidency of Donald Trump, kicking off a week of protests ahead of the Republican’s inauguration.

About 2,000 mostly black protesters ignored steady rain to march and rally near Washington’s Martin Luther King Jr Memorial, as speakers urged them to fight for minority rights and President Barack Obama’s signature healthcare law, which Trump has vowed to dismantle.

The Rev Al Sharpton, the rally’s organizer and a veteran civil rights leader, said Democrats in Congress needed to be sent a simple message: “Get some backbone.”

“We march in the driving rain because we want the nation to understand that what has been fought for and gained, that you’re going to need more than one election to turn it around,” he said.

The rally drew fewer people than organizers had initially expected, but Sharpton said afterwards he was satisfied with the turnout, given the rain and temperatures hovering just above freezing.

“I really didn’t think we’d get those kind of numbers,” he said in a telephone interview.

Trump, a New York real estate developer, won with a populist platform that included promises to build a wall along the Mexican border, restrict immigration from Muslim countries and dismantle Obamacare.

His choice of Senator Jeff Sessions, an Alabama Republican, to become attorney general has raised concern among many on the left that Trump could weaken voting rights for minorities and roll back criminal justice reforms.

“We will march until hell freezes over, and when it does, we will march on the ice,” said Cornell William Brooks, president and chief executive of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The rally also included the Hispanic group La Raza, politicians, relatives of African-American slain by police, the National Urban League, Planned Parenthood and the Human Rights Campaign, an advocacy group for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender civil rights.

The rally came hours after Trump blasted US Representative John Lewis after the Georgia Democrat and civil rights campaigner said Russia’s alleged hacking aimed at helping Trump put his legitimacy into question.

Trump replied on Twitter that Lewis should focus instead on his Atlanta district. “All talk, talk, talk - no action or results! Sad!” he wrote.

About 30 groups, almost all of them anti-Trump, have gotten permits to protest before, during and after the inauguration. Thousands of demonstrators have vowed to shut down the inauguration.

Washington police and the US Secret Service plan to have some 3,000 extra officers and an additional 5,000 National Guard troops on hand for security.

By far the biggest event will be the Women’s March on Washington the day after the inauguration, which organizers say could draw 200,000 people.—Reuters

“‘We are Europe’ French presidential candidate Macron tells rally

PARIS — “We are Europe, we are Brussels, we wanted it and we need it,” French presidential candidate Emmanuel Macron told thousands of supporters on Saturday in a call for a stronger and united European Union.

Opinion polls indicate that Macron, who is running as an independent in the April-May election, is gaining on the front-runners, conservative candidate Francois Fillon and far-right leader Marine Le Pen.

“We need Europe because Europe makes us bigger, because Europe makes us stronger,” Macron told 5,000 supporters, according to his team, calling for a true joint security and defence policy at EU level.

Immigration and security are key issues in the campaign, with Le Pen promising to be tough on immigration and radical Islam and to exit the EU’s open-border Schengen area. Macron was addressing a rally in Lille, in northem France, a traditional Socialist bastion where Le Pen’s eurosceptic National Front has performed strongly in recent local elections. Macron said that, in order to counter illegal immigration, European states must reinforce controls at external borders, have a common asylum policy managed from the countries of origin, and a joint intelligence policy.

“I don’t propose an ideological policy in terms of immigration, but one that would be efficient, clear and carried out with our European partners,” he said.

Russia to upgrade its naval, air bases in Syria — Interfax

MOSCOW — Russia plans to improve and expand its naval and air bases in Syria, Interfax news agency reported on Sunday, citing an unnamed source, as Moscow cements its presence in the Middle Eastern country, its only overseas military deployment.

The source told Interfax that Russia will start repairing a second runway at Hmeimim air base near Latakia, while the Tartus naval base will be upgraded in order to handle bigger ships such as cruisers.

President Vladimir Putin has announced a partial withdrawal of Russian forces from Syria, where they have been helping forces loyal to President Bashar al-Assad.

But Moscow wants to retain a permanent presence both in Hmeimim and Tartus. The source also told Interfax that Russia will still deploy S-300 surface-to-air defence systems and Bastion coastal missile launchers in Tartus.—Reuters

Britain and UAE launch joint military exercises

DUBAI — Britain and the United Arab Emirates launched a joint military exercise dubbed “Sea Dagger 2017”, Emirati state news agency WAM reported on Sunday.

The exercise, which WAM said was aimed at “training on the planning, implementation and management of joint military operations”, takes place as Gulf Arab and American rivalry with nearby Iran continues to simmer. Saudi Arabia and its smaller Gulf Arab neighbors accuse Iran of seeking to spread its power in the Arab world at their expense by backing Shia Muslim militants in conflicts throughout the region, a charge Tehran denies. Filipino police arrest local man over murder of 2 Japanese in Manila

DAVAO, (Philippines) — Philippine police have arrested a local man in the killings of two Japanese men in Manila in 2014 and 2015 in a “murder-for-insurance” case, local broadcasters reported on Saturday.

The police arrested an army reservist Kirby Patricio Tan at his home in the southern part of Manila where they seized guns and a grenade, according to the report.

Tan is suspected of fatally shooting 32-year-old ShinSuke Toba, who ran an osteopathic clinic in Yamanashi Prefecture, west of Tokyo, on 18 October, 2014, and Tatsuya Nakamura, 42, an acquaintance of Toba also from Yamanashi, sometime between 31 August and 1 September, 2015.—Kyodo News

Three men taken for questioning after Brussels anti-terror raid released

BRUSSELS — Three men detained for questioning late on Saturday after an anti-terror raid in the Brussels district of Molenbeek were released without charges, Belgian prosecutors said on Sunday.

Prosecutors said on Saturday that several houses had been searched in relation to an anti-terror investigation but that nothing was found. They did not give any details about the case.

Molenbeek gained international attention when locals with links to Syria took part in the November 2015 attacks that killed 130 people in Paris.—Reuters

At least 24 dead in India as boat capsizes in Ganges

BHUDBANESHWAR — At least 24 people have drowned after a boat capsized in the Ganges river in India’s eastern state of Bihar on Saturday, a government official said.

The incident took place in the evening, when people were using the vessel to go to watch kite-flying celebrations to mark a harvest festival. The boat was carrying 50 people, more than its capacity of 32, and it capsized not far from the shore in the state capital Patna, state Disaster Management Minister Chandrashekhar told Reuters.

Nineteen bodies had been found, he said, while 10 to 12 people managed to swim to safety. Eight people were rescued and admitted to hospital.

“We believe a minimum of four to five (more) bodies may be in the river,” said Chandrashekhar, who goes by one name only.

He added that rescue operations were under way. —Reuters
A mother’s lap is paradise

Khin Maung Oo

Nowadays, Mothers’ Day is honored and held across the world in recognition of a mother’s gratitude. A tree gives shade and coolness to travelers. Likewise, a mother’s “metta” or loving-kindness gives warmth and protection to her children wherever they may be. During the period of conception which lasts for over nine months, the baby lives in the mother’s womb curled up with the knees touching its chest. Till the baby is born, the mother has to take care of her health and make sure that she sticks to a healthy diet. She suffers a lot and makes a lot of sacrifices.

From the time of birth we get all we need from our mothers plus a lot of tender loving care. For saying so, it may be tantamount to saying that we do not recognize the gratitude of our fathers. No, we do not mean to say that. In terms of the sacrifices and sufferings they have to go through for the sake of their offspring, we believe that mother’s love is far greater than that of a father. So, we eulogize mother’s love so much so that most of the people call their countries mother lands. They name their languages mother languages or mother tongues. For government service personnel, they call the departments under which they serve, their mother departments. Thus, we call the Ayeyawaddy River, Mother Ayeyawaddy.

Apart from a few, nearly all children love their mothers. Undeniably, we find it difficult to reciprocate our filial duties to our parents as much as we have received parental duties from our parents. To our great joy and delight, whatever it is, we will see many post their expressions of thanks and acknowledgements about their mothers’ gratitude on Facebook. We used to suck milk at our mothers’ breasts, lying in their laps. When we were young, we had slept in our mother’s lap whenever we needed soothing words, whenever we felt sorrow or pain. It is not an exaggeration if we say that a mother’s lap is comfortable and safe place for a baby. Not to mention the fact that children and adolescent youths, even the aged can never forget the time when they lay in the lap of their mothers.

Presently, most of our Myanmar youths have been in foreign countries for further studies or for work. Before they get accustomed to their new environments and the culture and traditions of these new countries, they will surely feel homesick for their mothers and their motherland. Especially, those who get into trouble or fall into difficult situations, it is natural that they will miss their mothers and their motherland and also feel downhearted. In fact, governments establish diplomatic and consular missions in foreign countries to protect the interests of their nationals. Now, our new government which was voted into power by people has instructed its embassies to help our overseas students and workers to solve problems encountered in their learning and working environments. Thus, our embassies will become mother-like overseas institutions representing our government, in the near future. The embassies on their part should try their best to make their fellow citizens feel safe and welcome whenever Myanmar citizens come to them for assistance. They should act like mothers living in foreign countries so that overseas Myanmar citizens will feel the urge to rush to them and “sit in their laps”, so to speak, whenever they need.

Last but not least, I would like to urge our national brethren to help in any way possible for the successful implementation of the Union Peace Conference — 21st Century Panglong, in order that our younger generations would be able to sit in the mother’s lap peacefully.

Special Procedures and Special Rapporteur

Dr. Khine Khine Win

Special rapporteur on the situations of human rights in Myanmar. Ms. Yanghee Lee arrived in Myanmar for her fifth trip during last week. In this regard, many Myanmar people revealed their feeling on facebook and some people showed their feeling very seriously. After seeing their emotional talking about her on facebook, I would like to share the basic knowledge about what is special rapporteur, what are special procedures, why she is coming, what is her mandate.

What is special rapporteur?
The Special Rapporteurs are part of what is known as the Special Procedures of the Human Rights Council. They are independent human rights experts with mandates to report and advise on thematic human rights issues in all parts of the world or a specific country. In order to maintain their impartiality, these experts are not UN staff and they work in accordance with their personal capabilities and are not paid a salary, furthermore they do not represent their country of citizenship.

What are special procedures?
Special Procedures are established by resolutions of the UN Human Rights Council (previously the Commission on Human Rights). The system of Special Procedures is a central element of the United Nations human rights machinery and covers all human rights: civil, cultural, economic, political, and social. There are two types of mandate in special procedures, thematic mandates and country mandates. As of 30 September 2016 there are 43 thematic and 14 country mandates.

Thematic mandates are to monitor a thematic human rights issue in all parts of the world for a term of 3 years (renewable once, max 6 years). What is country mandate? Country mandate is to monitor the human rights situation in a specific country, appointed on a one year basis reviewed annually by HRC. Currently there are 14 country mandates, they are Belarus, Cambodia, Central African Republic, Côte d’Ivoire, Eritrea, DPR Korea, Haiti, Iran, Mali, Myanmar, Palestine, Somalia, Sudan, Syria.

Sadly, the mandate of the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Myanmar was first established in 1992 under the Commission on Human Rights Resolution 58 and extend annually. Because of Human Rights Resolution on Myanmar, the special rapporteur came to Myanmar.

Ms. Yanghee Lee was appointed by the UN Human Rights Council in 2014 as the Special Rapporteur on situation of human rights in Myanmar. She is the fifth special rapporteur for Myanmar. Before, Mr. Tomas OJEA Quintana, (Argentina, 2008-2014), Mr. Jean-Pierre Amador Peres Rocha (Brazil), December 2000-April 2008) Mr. Rajoosmer LALLAH(Mauritius, 1996-2000) (resigned on 02/11/2000 and Mr. Yoizo YOKOTA (Japan, 1992-1996) were special rapporteur of Myanmar.

What are the main activities for thematic mandate and country mandate? The main activities are country visits, thematic work/ research and communications. The Special rapporteur can undertake official country visit (upon invitation from the Government) with representatives of the mission, a debriefing with government and a press conference will be held. Finally, special rapporteur will present report to the Human Rights Council. Observations of violations and specific recommendations made to Government, and also often to international community as well as specific UN Agencies.

Most experts (country mandate, thematic mandate) are mandated to receive complaints about human rights violations related to their mandates. These complaints can concern issues related to violations against individuals or groups of individuals. They can also relate to domestic legislation (draft or not), policies, programs or other measures affecting individuals or groups. Complaints can be submitted by victims, their representatives (families, lawyers), NGOs or other. The concerned Special procedures mandates review the information, then decide if they will send a communication to the Government concerned.

Here it should be noted that the communications of special procedures do not constitute a quasi-judicial procedure. They can be brought against all States regardless of its status of ratification of international human rights treaties and no requirement to exhaust domestic remedies prior to submitting the complaint.

These are the some basic knowledge about special procedure and special rapporteur. Myanmar is one of the countries which still have country mandate out of 14 countries. Because of UNRCS, Ms. Yanghee Lee came to Myanmar and she will monitor the situation of human rights and also assess progress in implementation of her previous recommenda tions in line with her mandate from the UN Human Rights Council.

Being Myanmar citizen, we all have responsibility to work together to improve the human rights situation in Myanmar instead of blaming special rapporteur, Government need to fulfill its international human rights obligations and commitment. Let me believe, Yes we can.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Nearly every technology startup wants the same thing: more data.

But in the rush to collect all manner of information about customers, tensions are rising in Silicon Valley over whether such practices amount to a form of surveillance that customers will ultimately find invasive.

Whether ordering an Uber, streaming music, shopping online or tracking a health condition, consumers are giving an unprecedented amount of information to technology companies.

“The data that companies...have on you is significantly greater than you appreciate,” Mark Suster, managing partner at venture capital firm Upfront Ventures, said in an interview at a conference in Santa Barbara, California, sponsored by CB Insights, a business data firm.

Discussions during the two-day conference centered on the importance of “big data,” the catchphrase referring to massive information sets that are stored and analyzed by companies.

Collecting big data helps Airbnb, for instance, know whether its customers prefer to travel to the beach or mountains, and Uber knows popular drop-off locations and how to price trips.

Collecting large amounts of data is also paramount to developing artificial intelligence (AI), among the most highly sought technologies in Silicon Valley, which teaches machines to make decisions that humans previously had. AI can, for example, help a shopper decide on a new pair of shoes, help a doctor diagnose a disease and enable a car to drive itself.

But questions loom about how much personal information startups are collecting and how securely they store the data, with whom they share it and how they intend to use it.

“We are going to become comfortable with a level of surveillance that we never would have previously been comfortable with, because it makes things just a little easier,” said Jeremy Liew, a venture capitalist with Lightspeed Venture Partners.

Some startups have over-stepped. Uber Technologies Inc faced an investigation by New York’s attorney general into a feature known internally as “God View,” which allowed employees to access and track the location of individual Uber riders with- out obtaining permission. Uber settled the matter and agreed to encrypt customers’ geo-location data.

Peter Coles, head economist for Airbnb, said the data his company guards is fairly benign. “I think it is very unlikely that we would be collecting anything about users that they would be surprised to know.”

But the tension was pronounced in one on-stage discussion at the conference. Matthew Zeiler, founder and chief executive of Clarifai, a visual recognition tool used in healthcare, suggested creating a Wikipedia-style database of anonymous patient data that was open to the public.

“That can be very harmful, especially to the patients,” argued Gabriel Otte, founder and CEO of Freenome, a cancer-detection startup. Patients would be loath to tell the truth, he said, if they knew their most private health information was going to end up on the internet, even without their names attached.

Still, it is unclear if younger generations, who have grown up with apps such as Facebook and Snapchat that encourage sharing, view privacy in the same way.

“They don’t care as much as they profess,” Dave McClure, founding partner of 500 Startups, said in an interview. “Convenience is generally going to win over privacy.”

Britain may change ‘economic model’ if shut out of EU single market: Hammond

LONDON — Britain could change its economic model to regain competitiveness if it were to leave the European Union without an agreement on market access, British finance minister Phillip Hammond said in a German newspaper interview published on Sunday.

In a thinly veiled threat that Britain could use its corporate tax as a form of leverage in Brexit negotiations, Hammond told Welt am Sonntag he hoped Britain would remain a European-style economy with corresponding tax and regulation systems.

“But if we are forced to be something different, then we will have to become something different,” Hammond said when asked directly about Britain’s plans to lower corporate tax.

“If we have no access to the European market, if we are closed off, if Britain were to leave the European Union without an agreement on market access, then we could suffer from economic damage at least in the short-term,” he said.

“In this case, we could be forced to change our economic model and we will have to change our model to regain competitiveness,” Hammond said. “We will change our model, and we will come back, and we will be competitively engaged.”

German Chancellor Angela Merkel has said the EU must consider limiting Britain’s access to its market if London fails to accept the bloc’s “four freedoms” in Brexit negotiations.

The EU’s single market emerged from the 1992 Maastricht Treaty on European integration. This enshrines the EU’s “four freedoms” — of movement of goods, capital, people, and services.

British Prime Minister Theresa May has repeatedly said she will not reveal her Brexit negotiating strategy before triggering Article 50 of the EU’s Lisbon Treaty, a step expected by the end of March.

May has said she wants Britain to regain control over immigration, restore its sovereignty and also establish the best possible trading relations with the EU.

But senior EU leaders have warned Britain there could be no “cherry picking”, and Merkel has urged the 27 remaining EU states not to allow themselves to be divided.

Hammond said in the interview Britain had not taken a firm position yet on what form of immigration controls it wants.

“But we are aware that the messages from the referendum is that we must control our immigration policy,” he added.

Hammond said Britain did not want to close its doors completely to EU citizens who wanted to work in the UK.

“Clearly we need people to come and work in our economy to keep it functioning,” Hammond said. “But we must have overall control.”

Nissan picks London for first European on-road autonomous car tests

LONDON — Japanese carmaker Nissan (7201.T) said it will conduct its first European real-world trials of self-driving cars in London, choosing Britain just months after it said it would build two new models in the country despite concerns over Brexit.

The government has said it wants to encourage the development and testing of autonomous driving technology in Britain, helping build an industry to serve a worldwide market it reckons could be worth around 900 billion pounds ($1.1 trillion) by 2025.

On Friday Nissan said a modified version of its compact electric Leaf car equipped with autonomous driving technology will be tested in the capital next month, the first such demonstration on European public roads.

“With future models secured and cutting-edge innovation being developed right here in the UK, we’re looking forward to a strong future of designing, engineering and manufacturing in the country for customers right across the world,” said Nissan Europe Chairman Paul Willcox.

In October the firm, which builds around a third of Britain’s total car output, said it would expand production at its plant in northeast England with what a source described as a government promise of extra support to counter any loss of competitiveness caused by Britain’s EU exit.

Iraq special forces sweep Mosul University for remaining militants — spokesman

MOSUL — Iraqi special forces swept the campus of Mosul University on Saturday to clear it of any remaining Islamic State militants after taking full control of the area, a spokesman said.

Counter-terrorism service (CTS) troops drove the jihadists back inside the strategically located university complex and seized clusters of buildings including colleges on Saturday, an important gain towards retaking the entire eastern half of the city.

“We are not stopping,” he added, saying the CTS was working to push into areas next to the university.

Parts of the sprawling campus overlook neighbouring districts in eastern Mosul, making it a crucial target for retaking IS-held areas along the Tigris river, an Iraqi commander said this week.

Iraqi forces, backed by air cover from a US-led coalition, say they are close to recapturing the entire eastern bank of the river bringing them in full control of eastern Mosul, and thus half of IS’s last major Iraqi stronghold.

Attacks on the west of the city, which Islamic State still fully controls, can begin once the east is secured. The Tigris bisects Mosul from north to south.— Reuters

Syria fighting threatens deal to fix damaged Damascus water source

DAMASCUS — The Syrian army and allied militia clashed with rebels in Wadi Barada near Damascus on Sunday, threatening to disrupt planned repair works to a pumping station that supplies most of the capital’s water, a war monitor said.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said the army and the allied Lebanese militia Hezbollah had made some gains against rebels in the Wadi Barada area. Heavy fighting reached the outskirts of the Ain al-Fija town, where the water springs are located, the British-based war monitor said.

Wadi Barada, a mountainous valley northwest of Damascus, has become a major battlefront in the Syrian war, and the damage to the pumping station has caused severe water shortages in the capital since the beginning of the year.

The governor of the Damascus Countryside province said on Friday that engineers had entered Ain al-Fija to repair the pumping station, as part of a wider agreement that included the departure of some rebels from Wadi Barada and a settlement with others who would remain there.

But the plan was derailed on Saturday evening, after armed men killed the head of a negotiation team who was overseeing the agreement and repairs, the Observatory said.

A military media unit run by Hezbollah said the army and its allies captured some positions overlooking Ain al-Fija on Saturday, after taking two nearby villages in recent days and edging closer towards the water facility.

Jordan’s king reshuffles cabinet amid growing security, economic challenges

AMMAN — Jordan’s King Abdullah reshuffled his cabinet but retained Hani Mulki as prime minister on Sunday, granting him more authority following a series of security lapses.

Jordan has stepped up its role in the US-led military campaign against Islamic State in the region and risks being drawn into a prolonged conflict with the militants.

The five new ministers entering the cabinet include Ghaleb Zubi, a former police chief, as interior minister and Ayman Safadi, a long-time adviser to the royal family, as foreign minister, according to a palace statement.

Safadi has strong ties to the Gulf states and has been critical of President Bashar al-Assad in neighbouring Syria. Safadi, whose appointment was a surprise, replaces Nassir Joudeh, who has served as Jordan’s chief diplomat since 2009. The outgoing interior minister, Salamah Hamad, had narrowly avoided a vote of no-confidence in parliament over his handling of an Islamic State attack in the southern city of Karak last month in which at least nine people, including a Canadian tourist and members of the security forces, were killed.

In another major security lapse, a Jordanian gun shot dead three members of the US special forces at an airstrike last November, an incident that tarnished the image of the country’s security forces and shook the confidence of its Western backers in its ability to handle security threats. Diplomats say the security lapses raise concerns over the possible radicalisation of some members of Jordan’s military and security apparatus. Jordan is among the closest allies of the United States in the Middle East region.

In Sunday’s reshuffle, Finance Minister Omar Malhas kept his job, in which he is overseeing a tough three-year programme agreed with the IMF. Malhas won a vote of confidence in parliament on Sunday that is expected to have grown by 2.4 percent last year, below an IMF target of 2.8 percent.— Reuters
SpaceX returns to flight, sending satellites into orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL — A SpaceX Falcon rocket blasted off from California on Saturday, returning the company to flight for the first time since the first serious launchpad explosion in September.

The 230-foot (70-metre) rocket launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base at 9:54 am PST (1754 GMT) to deliver 10 satellites into orbit for Iridium Communications Inc. “It’s a clean sweep - 10 for 10,” SpaceX launch commentator John Insprucker said after the satellites were released.

SpaceX founder and entrepreneur Elon Musk’s ambitious flight plans had been grounded since the 1 September explosion during fueling ahead of a pre-flight test in Florida.

About 10 minutes after Saturday’s launch, the first stage of the rocket, which had separated from the rest of craft, successfully touched down on a platform in the Pacific Ocean, a feat previously accomplished by four other returning Falcon rockets. SpaceX intends to reuse its rockets to cut costs.

“Rocket is stable,” Musk posted on Twitter. “Mission looks good.”

The accident clouded the company’s aggressive agenda, which includes beginning to ferry US astronauts into space next year, when it also plans to make its first voyage to Mars. Saturday’s flight began to clear a logjam of more than 70 planned missions, worth more than $10 billion, involving SpaceX Falcon rockets, which last flew in August, SpaceX said.

The launch is the first in a seven-flight contract with Iridium worth $468.1 million, company spokeswoman Diane Hockenbury said. SpaceX aims to launch 27 rockets in 2017, more than triple the eight flights the privately held firm managed in 2016, according to a report on Friday in the Wall Street Journal. In addition to its dozens of commercial customers, SpaceX is one of two companies hired by NASA to fly cargo to the International Space Station.

The company’s 2017 agenda includes the debut launch of a heavy-lift booster, flying its first reused rocket and repairing the Florida launchpad damaged in the explosion.—Reuters
Philippines’ Duterte says he may impose martial law if drug problem ‘virulent’

MANILA — Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte has said he would impose martial law if the drug problem became “very virulent”, just a month after dismissing as “nonsense” any suggestion he might do so.

Duterte has made a brutal war on drugs a central pillar of his administration since he took office in the middle of last year.

Since July, more than 6,000 people have been killed in the anti-drug campaign, in both police operations and unexplained killings by suspected “vigilantes.”

More than 1 million drug peddlers and users have been arrested or have surrendered to authorities.

Duterte, speaking to members of a chamber of commerce in the southern city of Davao late on Saturday, said he has sworn to protect the country against all threats, including drugs, which he said has affected about 4 million people. “If I wanted to, and it will deteriorate into something really very virulent, I will declare martial law,” he said.

“No one can stop me,” he said, referring to the Supreme Court and Congress.

“My country transcends everything else, even the limitations. The Philippines endured a decade of martial law from the early 1970s and memories of campaigns to restore democracy and protect human rights are fresh in the minds of many people.”

Last month, Duterte appeared to rule out any possibility he might declare martial law “That’s nonsense. We had martial law before, what happened? Did it improve our lives now? Not at all,” he said. —Reuters

German Eurowings flight to head home from Kuwait after bomb scare

FRANKFURT/DUBAI — A flight from Oman to Germany operated by Lufthansa’s budget unit Eurowings will head home after getting the all clear by authorities in Kuwait where it made an emergency landing over a bomb scare, spokespeople for the airlines said.

A Lufthansa spokesman confirmed that the plane, which was flying from Salalah in southern Oman to Cologne, had made an emergency landing in Kuwait for aviation authorities to carry out investigations.

It had 287 passengers and 14 crew on board. No evidence of explosives was found on the plane, he said.

A statement from the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) of Kuwait, published on state news agency KUNA, confirmed no explosives were found on board.

A Eurowings spokesman said passengers would be flown back to Germany from Kuwait on the same plane, an A330 jet. The pilot and relevant authorities had decided on an emergency landing as a preventive measure, he said, but declined to give further details of the incident.

Passengers had left the plane and were being looked after in a hotel while awaiting details for continuing flight home, he said.

Because the flight crew had exceeded its maximum working hours, the departure was scheduled for 2200 GMT on 15 January. —Reuters

Russia to deploy more S-400 to Crimea: report

MOSCOW — Russia will deploy more S-400 Triumph missile systems to Crimea after the Obama administration extended sanctions against Russia for its actions in Crimea and Ukraine, said local media on Saturday.

“Deployment of additional S-400 systems to Crimea is foreseen, but I will not talk about the timing now,” said Lt Gen Viktor Sevastyanov, a senior Russian air force commander, quoted by RIA Novosti agency as saying.

An anti-aircraft missile regiment armed with the S-400 system had entered combat duty in Crimea, Russia’s Southern Military District announced Friday.

The S-400 Triumph, by far Russia’s most advanced surface-to-air missile system, is capable of hitting an airborne target at a distance of up to 400 km with medium- and long-range missiles.

Outgoing US President Barack Obama ordered Friday to extend punitive measures against Russia imposed in March, 2014 for one more year for “its purported annexation of Crimea and its use of force in Ukraine.”

The US and its allies accused Russia of fueling the conflict in southeastern Ukraine and illegally incorporating Crimea.

Moscow insisted that a vast majority of Crimea residents voted to rejoin Russia in a popular referendum. —Xinhua

At Paris meeting, major powers to warn Trump over Middle East peace

PARIS — Major powers will send a message to US President-elect Donald Trump on Sunday that a two-state solution between Israelis and Palestinians is the only way forward, and warn that his plan to move the US Embassy to Jerusalem could derail peace efforts.

Some 70 countries, including key European and Arab states as well as the permanent members of the UN Security Council, are due in Paris for a meeting that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has rejected as “futile” and “rigged”. Neither the Israelis nor the Palestinians will be represented.

But, just five days before Trump is sworn in, the conference provides a platform for countries to send a strong signal to the future American leader.

Trump has pledged to pursue more pro-Israeli policies and move the US Embassy from Tel Aviv, where it has been for 68 years, to Jerusalem, all but ensnaring the city as Israel’s capital despite international objections.

“It would be a unilateral decision that could escalate tensions on the ground,” a senior French diplomat said.

“It’s not negligible that 70 countries recall (the need for) a two-state solution when his administration could implement controversial measures that may aggrivate things.”

France has said the meeting does not intend to impose anything on Israel or the Palestinians and that, ultimately, only direct negotiations between the two can resolve the conflict.

“There is no time to waste,” French Foreign Minister Jean-Marc Ayrault told delegates at the opening of the all-day conference.

“We are not sheltered from an explosion of violence.”

A draft communiqué seen by Reuters reaffirms existing international resolutions, urges both sides to restate their commitment to the two-state solution and disavow official who reject it, and asks the protagonists to “refrain from unilateral steps that prejudice the outcome of final status negotiations”.

Diplomats said the communiqué could be toughened up with an allusion to Trump’s plans for Jerusalem and whether to have a follow-up to the French initiative intermediately debated.

Relations between the United States and Israel have soured during President Barack Obama’s administration, reaching a low point late last month when Washington declined to veto a UN resolution demanding an end to Israeli settlements in occupied territory.

Obama’s secretary of state, John Kerry, said the settlement programme threatened Middle East peace, and that the two-state solution was in “serious jeopardy.”

Palestinian President Authority Mahmoud Abbas said on Saturday that he had written to Trump warning that a move to Jerusalem would kill off the peace process and strip the United States of its role as honest broker — and could lead to the Palestinians going back on their recognition of Israel.

Home to Europe’s largest Muslim and Jewish communities, France has tried to breathe new life into the peace process over the past year. It believes that, with the uncertainty surrounding how the next US administration will handle the issue, it is important to push the sides back to talks rather than allowing a fragile status quo to fester.

But with elections coming up this year in France and Germany, and Britain appearing to align itself more closely with the Trump administration on the issue, the prospects of the European Union, the largest economic partner for both Israel and the Palestinians, taking a lead on the matter appear unlikely.

Arab states have their own concerns about how Trump’s relationship with them will turn out, and have taken a cautious line.

“All this is premature. We need to give the new US administration time to assess what they want to do,” said a Middle Eastern diplomat based in Paris. —Reuters

It believes that, with the uncertainty surrounding how the next US administration will handle the issue, it is important to push the sides back to talks rather than allowing a fragile status quo to fester.

But with elections coming up this year in France and Germany, and Britain appearing to align itself more closely with the Trump administration on the issue, the prospects of the European Union, the largest economic partner for both Israel and the Palestinians, taking a lead on the matter appear unlikely.

Arab states have their own concerns about how Trump’s relationship with them will turn out, and have taken a cautious line.

“All this is premature. We need to give the new US administration time to assess what they want to do,” said a Middle Eastern diplomat based in Paris. —Reuters
LONDON — Prime Minister Theresa May will use a major speech on Brexit next week to call on Britons to reject the acrimony of last year’s referendum and unite around the vision of a Britain more open to the world, her office said on Sunday.

May intends to kick off the formal process of negotiating the terms of Britain’s exit from the European Union by the end of March, but has given little away about what deal she will be seeking, frustrating some investors, businesses and lawmakers. She is due to make a speech in London on Tuesday before an audience including foreign diplomats as well as Britain’s own Brexit negotiating team and other senior officials, May’s Downing Street office said in a statement.

It said she would stress the need for Britons, who voted for Brexit by 52 to 48 percent in last June’s referendum after a deeply divisive campaign, to unite around common goals such as protecting and enhancing workers’ rights.

“Now we need to put an end to the division and the language associated with it — ‘Leaver’ and ‘Remain’ — and all the accompanying insults — and unite to make a success of Brexit and build a truly global Britain,” May is expected to say. Her comments came as finance minister Philip Hammond said Britain could change its economic model to regain competitiveness if it were to leave the EU without an agreement on market access. Those comments, from an interview with German newspaper Welt am Sonntag, were interpreted as a warning that Britain could use its corporate tax as a form of leverage in Brexit negotiations.

“He appears to be making a sort of threat to the European community,” said Jeremy Corbyn, leader of the opposition Labour Party. “It seems to me a recipe for some kind of trade war with Europe in the future.”

Nevertheless, Corbyn said he would not block the triggering of “Article 50” — the legal process of leaving the EU. An upcoming legal ruling could insist that May gets parliamentary approval for her plan to trigger Article 50 by the end of March.

The extracts of May’s speech did not say whether she would reveal her stance on one of the key questions: whether she will try and keep Britain within the European single market and customs union or, if not, what level of access she will aim for.

The Sunday Times and other newspapers said the speech would signal that Britain was seeking a “clean and hard” Brexit, which would involve leaving the single market and the customs union. The report cited an unnamed source in May’s office who said her words were likely to cause a market correction. A spokesman from May’s office told Reuters the reports were speculation and did not comment further. The problem for Britain is that the EU is likely to insist on freedom of movement for EU citizens in return for full access to the single market, while many of those who voted for Brexit did so precisely in order to be able to restrict immigration. May’s speech will be closely watched by financial markets for information on which of these divergent goals she will prioritise.

After she said in a TV interview a week ago that post-Brexit Britain would not be able to keep “bits” of its EU membership, the pound fell sharply as the comment was interpreted as signalling a clean break from the single market.

In a separate Sunday Times article, Brexit minister David Davis wrote that Britain would consider ways to extend or smooth the exit process to provide certainty for businesses.

“If it proves necessary, we have said we will consider time for implementation of new arrangements,” he wrote.— Reuters

Ex-UN chief Ban says South Korea’s THAAD deployment appropriate

SEOUL — Former United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, who is expected to run for president of South Korea, said on Sunday it is appropriate for the country to be the site of a US anti-missile system that is due to be deployed later this year.

“Since the reality is the Korean peninsula is in a quasii-war-like state, such action made by the government is appropriate,” Ban was quoted by South Korea’s Yonhap News Agency as saying.

China objects strongly to the planned deployment of the Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) system as it worries its powerful radar can penetrate its territory.

Ban said he “understands THAAD deployment is made as a defensive measure, as ultimately North Korea is developing nuclear missiles and accumulating ballistic missile technologies,” he was quoted as telling reporters at the memorial for the 2010 sinking of a navy ship that South Korea blames on the North.

“THERE IS THE ISSUE OF RELATIONS WITH NEIGHBOURING COUNTRIES. THIS PROBLEM CAN BE SOLVED DIPLOMATICALLY,” Ban said, according to Yonhap. Ban returned to South Korea on Thursday after his decade at the helm of the global body ended in December. He has yet to say whether or not he will run for president.— Reuters

Chicken cull under way at farm in Gifu after bird flu detected

GIFU, (Japan) — Local authorities said Sunday they are culling all 80,000 chickens at a poultry farm in central Japan after a highly virulent strain of bird flu was detected Saturday, while they are also checking whether the flu has spread to neighboring farms.

With a highly pathogenic H5 virus, which can be found at poultry farms in Niigata and Aomori prefectures, Hokkaido as well as in Miyazaki Prefecture.

On Sunday morning, Gifu Governor Hajime Furuta met Kenichi Hosoda, parliamentary vice minister for agriculture, forestry and fisheries, to discuss ways to deal with the situation. Hosoda vowed to offer thorough support to the prefectural government.

The prefectural government has restricted the movement of poultry and eggs within a radius of 10 kilometers from the farm in question. The farm notified the prefectural government of a suspected bird flu case Saturday morning as it found more than 100 of its chickens had died. Of seven chickens examined by the local government, six tested positive in a preliminary exam. Further tests showed the presence of the H5 virus.—Kyodo News
Singer Jennifer Holliday pulls out of Trump inauguration event

NEW YORK — Broadway star Jennifer Holliday said on Saturday she was pulling out of a concert celebrating the inauguration of President-elect Donald Trump, citing an online article that cast the performance as a “betrayal” of her gay and lesbian fans.

The Tony-award winning singer, best known for her roles in the Broadway musicals “Dreamgirls” and “Your Arms Too Short to Box with God,” announced the cancellation in a letter first published by The Wrap, an entertainment industry news website.

“I sincerely apologize for my lapse of judgment, for being uneducated on the issues that affect every American at this crucial time in history and for causing such dismay and heartbreak to my fans,” Holliday said in the letter, which was released to Reuters by her representatives.

Holliday was not scheduled to perform at Friday’s inauguration itself but at an event at the Lincoln Memorial the night before called the “Make America Great Again! Welcome Celebration.” Also scheduled to appear are country music star Toby Keith, rock band 3 Doors Down and Oscar-winning actor Jon Voight.

In a column for the Daily Beast website, entertainment reporter Kevin Fallon called Holliday a gay icon for her work on Broadway and said that Trump had surrounded himself with politicians who vocally oppose LGBT rights.

“For the gay community that has bolstered Holliday’s, in her own words, embattled and difficult career, and cheered on her recent successes, the news (of Holliday’s planned performance) feels like a betrayal. It is heartbreaking,” Fallon wrote.

In her letter, Holliday wrote that she had originally agreed to perform for Trump as a “bi-partisan songbird” who had sung for four presidents, both Republican and Democrat, dating back to Ronald Reagan. “I was honestly just thinking that I wanted my voice to be a healing and unifying force for hope through music to help our deeply polarized country,” Holliday wrote.

“Regrettably, I did not take into consideration that my performing for the concert would actually instead be taken as a political act against my own personal beliefs and be mistaken for support of Donald Trump and Mike Pence,” she said.

In addition to her career on Broadway, Holliday has found success on the pop charts and as a Gospel singer. She won a Tony award in 1982 for her role as Effie White in the original production of “Dreamgirls” and two Grammy awards later that decade.

Olivia Wilde best female role model: Jason Sudeikis

LOS ANGELES — Actor Jason Sudeikis has praised partner Olivia Wilde for being the perfect female role model for their daughter, Daisy.

The 41-year-old star said that he is not afraid anymore to raise their newborn girl as he trusts the instincts of the 32-year-old actress as a woman, and he feels that he is not afraid anymore to raise their newborn girl as well.

“Screw him up. But with a little girl, I mean, she couldn’t have a better role model in (Olivia Wilde) and my sisters and Olivia’s sisters and our mothers,” the “Son of Zorn” star called himself a feminist and said his outlook on women is “We stand for women’s rights.”

Holliday was not scheduled to perform at Friday’s inauguration itself but at an event at the Lincoln Memorial the night before called the “Make America Great Again! Welcome Celebration.” Also scheduled to appear are country music star Toby Keith, rock band 3 Doors Down and Oscar-winning actor Jon Voight.

Post-Fukushima disaster character’s popularity grows in Thailand

AKITA — A Japanese hero character created in the aftermath of the 2011 Great East Japan Earthquake and tsunami is growing in popularity in Thailand through a television program broadcast in the Southeast Asian nation.

The television show featuring the character named “Toboku Gashin Miraigar” (Miraigar God of Toboku) has been broadcast in Thailand since November. It was initially launched in late 2015, showcasing the character and other famous aspects of four other northeastern prefectures. Since creating the character, the company has held live shows in support of disaster victims around the region.

In December 2014, Courage Force launched an overseas campaign, and President Tamotsu Ebina contacted Thai partners through an international exchange group. It later held a live show there and a decision was made in July 2016 to broadcast a Miraigar television programme.

The series named Miraigar T1, showcasing the character and a local counterpart, has proved very popular.

The programme depicts the two Miraigars fighting against demons in modern settings. Japanese singer Ichiro Mizuki put his voice to the theme song which is subtitled in Thai. The programme has been shot in popular sightseeing spots such as Kakunodate and Oga in Akita Prefecture, and Matsuura in Miyagi Prefecture, in a bid to attract Thai tourists.—Kyodo News

World’s biggest travel rush kicks off

BEIJING — The world’s most populous country kicked off its largest annual travel rush Friday, with a record number of trips expected during the Chinese New Year holiday season.

The 40-day travel frenzy from 13 January to 21 February is known as “Chunyun,” the hectic period surrounding Chinese lunar New Year, or Spring Festival, which falls on 27 January this year.

Up to 356 million trips are expected to be made via rail, up 9.7 per cent year on year.

A total of 2.52 billion trips are expected to be made via roads and 43.5 million trips via waterways, up 1 per cent and 2 per cent year on year, respectively.

Trips made via air are expected to rise 10 percent year on year to 20,000 km, the world’s largest.

Scientists find clues to why binge-drinking causes binge-eating

Scientists have found that the brain cells in mice that stimulate the urge to eat can be activated by alcohol as well as by hunger — a discovery that could help explain why binge drinking often leads to binge eating.

In an experiment, mice subjected to a three-day “alcoholic weekend” were found to eat significantly more food than mice that stayed sober.

The results, published in the journal Nature Communications on 10 January, show that major components of the brain’s feeding circuits are activated by alcohol, the researchers said.

“Our data suggest that alcohol sustains fundamental appetite signals, (and does) not just diminish their behavioral manifestation,” wrote Denis Burdakov, who led the study at the Francis Crick Institute in London.

Consumption of alcohol has presumably been linked to overeating in humans, but the underlying causes were unclear — particularly since alcohol is high in calories, and calorie intake usually suppresses brain appetite signals.

Burdakov said his study found that specific hunger-promoting brain cells known as Agrp neurons, which form part of the feeding circuit in mouse brains, are activated by alcohol.

To test the validity of their findings, Burdakov’s team were able to block activity of these neurons in some mice, and they found that this eliminated alcohol-induced overeating.

This shows, they said, “that the alcohol-associated activity of Agrp neurons...is the critical step for alcohol-induced overeating”.

Obesity and heavy drinking are major causes of heart disease, diabetes and other chronic health problems affecting millions of people worldwide. Public Health England said last month that eight out of 10 middle-aged adults in Britain either weigh too much, drink too much or exercise too little.

Madame Tussauds unveils Amitabh Bachchan waxwork for Delhi opening

NEW DELHI — Madame Tussauds unveiled a waxwork of Bollywood superstar Amitabh Bachchan on Thursday ahead of the museum’s opening later this year in the Indian capital of New Delhi.

Bachchan, 74, is one of India’s cinema’s most revered and influential actors and has been a mainstay on screens for five decades.

“Looking at the culture and of course, we have a lot of Indian visitors in our existing attractions as well. Their feedback is so positive... that we said we need to be there,” Marcel Kloss, Merlin Entertainments’ director of new openings in emerging markets said.

Guests at the unveiling photographed themselves alongside Bachchan, as well as with a waxwork of American popstar Lady Gaga.

The Delhi branch above the city centre’s famed Regal Cinema is India’s first Madame Tussauds, the museum’s twenty-third globally and its ninth in Asia, where a growing middle class are prepared to pay to see wax figures of their favourite stars.

Wax statues of leading figures from Bollywood, sports and politics will feature in Delhi including one of Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi — who is already in the London branch — as well as cricket icon Sachin Tendulkar.

Chelsea, Spurs and Arsenal enjoy big wins

LONDON — Chelsea made light of striker Diego Costa’s absence to extend their lead at the top of the Premier League to seven points on Saturday with a 3-0 win at champions Leicester City.

After a Harry Kane-inspired Tottenham Hotspur and a ruthless Arsenal side kept up the pressure at the top with four victories, Chelsea found an unlikely hero in wing back Marcos Alonso, who scored their first two goals at the King Power Stadium.

All the pre-match ballyhoo had been about Costa, the league’s leading marksman, having been dropped from Antonio Conte’s squad amid reports of a fall-out over his fitness.

Before the game, though, Chelsea released quotes from Conte on their official Twitter site saying that Costa had not trained since Tuesday because of a “pain in his back”.

“We played without Diego against Bournemouth and we have had time to prepare for this. We’ve prepared very well,” Conte said. That preparation was shown swiftly as Spaniard Alonso struck early in both halves and Pedro completed a rout of the feeble champions as Chelsea moved to 52 points, seven clear of Spurs.

Liverpool, on 44 with third-placed Arsenal, could regain second spot and cut the gap at the top back to five points if they win at Manchester United, who are fifth, on Sunday.

Tottenham striker Kane had a special day with a brilliant hat-trick in the 4-0 demolition of West Bromwich Albion that saw Mauricio Pochettino’s ever-improving contenders move into second with a seventh straight win in all competitions.

It was Kane’s first match since he became a father last Sunday. “It’s amazing. The week has been a whirlwind having a little daughter – to finish it off like this is the best way possible,” he said, after taking his season’s tally to 13 league goals.

Arsenal went up to third on goal difference after Olivier Giroud struck his fifth goal in as many games to set them on the way to a 4-0 trouncing of Swansea City, who are now bottom.

Between Giroud’s opener and Alexis Sanchez’s 73rd minute effort, Paul Clement, in his first league game in charge of the Swans, also had to watch merrably as Jack Cork and Kyle Naughton deflected Alex Iwobi shots past their own keeper.

Hull City recovered to beat Bournemouth 3-1 with a double from Abel Hernandez giving new manager Marco Silva the ideal league debut as they leap from last place above Swansea and Sunderland, who were beaten 3-1 at home by Stoke City.

Peter Crouch scored his 99th career goal for the Potters — a header, naturally — while Marko Arnautovic netted twice, but the goal of the day came from West Ham’s Andy Carroll who struck an astonishing mid-air volley in a 3-0 win over Crystal Palace.

“It’s been a while in the making. I’ve been trying for a couple of years. It’s got to be the best goal I’ve scored,” the striker, who has suffered from a string of injuries, said.— Reuters

Konta split with coach Esteban Carril last December soon after her sports psychologist Juan Coto, a friend of the Spaniard, died suddenly at the age of 47.

Belgian Wim Fissette, a former mentor of grand slam champion Kim Clijsters, has taken up the coaching reins and Konta was pleased with how the relationship was going.

“I guess we’re doing well together,” she laughed. “I think he’s a very calm individual, but he’s also quite funny. So far we’re having a good time.”

Having a good time is clearly important to a player like Konta, who struggled to deal with the pressures of the game before she embarked on her metoric rise.

“I am extremely grateful and really am enjoying what I do,” she said. “I really love playing. I love learning. I just try to make the most of every single day, and therefore really just maximise the career that I have.”
