The Union Minister also outlined the various steps taken by the government to revitalize the peace process since it came into office. He highlighted the State Counsellor’s leadership of the Union Peace Dialogue Joint Committee, the creation of the new Peace Commission chaired by Dr. Tin Myo Win and the reform of the National Reconciliation and Peace Centre to reflect the government’s wider focus on national reconciliation. He also expressed his view that national reconciliation and peace in the Rakhine State is crucial to peace and stability throughout the country. The government, therefore, established the Central Committee on Implementation of Peace, Stability and Development of Rakhine State, chaired by the State Counsellor, on 30 May 2016.

The Union Minister also stressed the importance of resolving, not inflaming, the situation in Rakhine State. He noted the government’s commitment to addressing the issue of underdevelopment in the State through the Central Committee on Implementation of Peace, Stability and Development of Rakhine State, and highlighted the work of the independent commission led by former UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, which will assist the government in finding long-term solutions.

Dr. Tin Myo Win, Chairman of the Peace Commission, then updated and shared developments in the peace process; implementation of the NCA; the Union Peace Conference-21st Century Panglong; the armed clashes and the discussions with non-signatories.

He explained that the government has chosen a two-track approach. One is to reach out to signatories of the NCA to ensure that the NCA implementation is on track, the other is to engage with new signatories to bring them into the process.

He said that the NCA includes two critical parts: to maintain ceasefire and to implement political dialogue. The government met with the Joint Ceasefire Monitoring Committee (JMC) to ensure that the JMC continues its functions effectively. As a result, the clashes among NCA signatories have been minimal and the ceasefire among signatories has become stronger.

He further explained that the government implemented the first 21st Century Panglong to ensure that political dialogue is an integral part of the peace process. To strengthen local participation, a series of National Dialogues were initiated to collect divergent views that will be carried forward to the 21st Century Panglong. He also emphasized that the government is working closely with the Tatmadaw to ensure that the political dialogue is meaningful and fruitful.

It has been decided that at the next session of the 21st Century Panglong, scheduled in March, the UPDJC will work for an agreement on some basic principles of federalism.

It is the belief of the government that there has to be a viable ceasefire agreement to reduce clashes. The NCA includes the mechanism and code of conduct necessary for the reduction of clashes.

It is concluded by stressing that the political dialogue is gaining momentum, and expressed his confidence that once all ethnic armed groups have joined the NCA process, military clashes will be reduced.

Summer onion growers not making profit, unlike merchants

Summer onion growers are not making much profit, unlike merchants which store the onions. A late harvest of onions resulted in the rise in price in early February, and the price could possibly turn downward in March, said local industry experts.

The domestic onion price is usually higher than the external price when merchants sell out their stocks at the end of year. However, the price goes back to normal when they come to purchase the onions from the growers in March.

The increase in the domestic onion price causes onions to be imported from abroad, which adversely affects the domestic market and leads to price declines. The wholesale price of onions produced from Seikphyu Township was Ks1,600-2,100 per viss, whereas that from Myittha Township fetched Ks2,150 to 2,500 per viss in Yangon market on 2 February.

The price slightly dropped in the Yangon market despite the high inflow of onions into the market. On 11 February, the wholesale price of onions from Seikphyu Township was Ks900-1,450 per viss, whereas that from Myittha was Ks1,700 to 1,950 per viss.

The onions imported from India fetched Ks2,500 per viss on 2 February, whereas the price of those onions (large size) was Ks1,550 per viss on 8 February. The price of various sizes of onions was Ks1,250 per viss on 10 February, it is learnt.

India says in talks with Vietnam for first missile sale

BENGALURU, India — India is in talks to sell short-range surface-to-air missiles to Vietnam, the head of India’s defence research agency said on Wednesday, in what would be its first transfer of such weapons to the Southeast Asian country.

India has been helping the Vietnamese military with training and patrol vessels, but a further deepening of ties with missile sales could draw criticism from China that has been locked in a territorial dispute with Hanoi in the South China Sea.

New Delhi is currently talking to a number of countries for sales of its surface-to-air Akash missiles, said S Christopher, chairman of state-run Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO). The move is in line with Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s push to establish India as an arms exporter.

“We are talking to countries, one of them is none other than Vietnam,” he told a news conference on the sidelines of an air show where the DRDO is showcasing its missile programmes and other key projects, including a home-grown light combat fighter.

Christopher did not provide any details of how many Akash missile batteries the government planned to supply Vietnam.

India is in the midst of a quiet military buildup that analysts say is designed as a deterrent, to secure its 200 nautical mile Exclusive Economic Zone as China grows more assertive in staking its claims in the South China Sea.

Experts say Vietnam is in the market for fighter jets and more advanced missile systems, in addition to the kilo-class submarines it has bought from Russia.

India, which is also sparring with China over a border dispute, has in the past considered the sale of its Brahmos supersonic missile with a range of 290 kms to Vietnam and has been steadily helping Hanoi beef up its defences.

Last year, Modi announced a $500 million credit line to Vietnam to buy defence equipment, on top of a $100 million given previously to help it buy patrol boats. The two sides have also agreed for training of Vietnamese air force pilots to operate Su-30 Russian fighter planes.

Malaysian police arrest female suspect related to death of DPRK man

KUALA LUMPUR — The Malaysian police said Wednesday that a female suspect was arrested in the investigation related to the death of a man from the Democratic People’s Re-public of Korea (DPRK).

National police chief Khalid Abu Bakar said in a statement that the suspect was arrested at the Kuala Lumpur International Airport’s second terminal, where the man looked for help after feeling unwell on Monday. He died on the way to hospital.

The female suspect, who was carrying a Vietnamese passport, was identified from the surveillance video footage at the airport, Khalid said, adding that the suspect was alone at the time of arrest.

The Malaysian police said earlier that the 46-year-old man who died Monday was holding a DPRK passport under the name Kim Chol.

The Jakarta poll has been overshadowed by religious tensions, with mass Islamist-led protests against Governor Basuki Tjahaja Purnama, an ethnic Chinese Christian.

The vote is also being widely seen as a proxy battle for the 2019 presidential election.

Purnama had secured 42.57 per cent of the votes, just ahead of former minister Anies Baswedan in second place with 40.23 per cent, based on a quick sample count of around 40 per cent of the vote by private polling firm SMRC.

The other candidate, Agus Yudhoyono, was in third place with 17 per cent. Other pollsters showed similar results.

A candidate needs to get more than 50 per cent of the votes in the first round to win outright.

The job of governor can be a springboard to the presidency and weeks of campaigning have been overshadowed by mudslinging, political intrigue and rising hardline Islam sentiment, raising questions about the role of religion in politics.

“We hope that everybody can return as a family after these elections,” President Joko Widodo said after voting in Jakarta earlier on Wednesday.

Purnama was a deputy to Widodo when he was the previous Jakarta governor and Widodo’s party is backing him.

Purnama has been campaigning while on trial on a charge of insulting the Koran, a case that has brought Muslims onto the streets, urging voters to shun a non-Muslim as leader.

He denies the charge and after dipping in opinion polls his support rebounded, which analysts attribute to his record of improving the bureaucracy and easing congestion and flooding in Jakarta.

Indonesia has the world’s largest Muslim population but is officially secular and home to minority Christian and Hindu communities, as well as hundreds of ethnic groups.

Baswedan is backed by a former general who Widodo beat in the last presidential election in 2014, Prabowo Subianto, who is promising a come-back to the national stage.

The elections in the capital, alongside scores of other regional polls in the world’s third-largest democracy, were peaceful and mostly running without hitches, police said.

Police had deployed 75,000 personnel across Indonesia with 16,000 in Jakarta, concerned hard-line Muslim groups may again take to the streets to oppose Purnama.

Japan offers 4.8 billion yen aid to improve water supply in Nepalese city

KATHMANDU — Japan agreed Wednesday to provide a 4.8 billion yen grant to Nepal to improve water supply in Pokhara, the country’s second largest city and a popular destination among tourists.

Under the project, which will be implemented by state-owned Nepal Water Supply Corp and is expected to be completed in 2022, water treatment plants and distribution infrastructure will be installed and upgraded in the western city.

The agreement for utilizing the official development assistance was signed by Japanese Ambassador Masashi Ogawa and Nepalese Finance Secretary Shankata Subedi at the Finance Ministry.

Jun Sakuma, chief representative of the Japan International Cooperation Agency’s Nepal office, said the project aims to provide round-the-clock safe drinking water in the city of about 250,000 people, which is visited by some 230,000 tourists each year.

Shinya Machida, the embassy’s deputy chief of mission, called the project a “new symbol of friendship between Nepal and Japan”.

Water scarcity is a major problem in the tourist city, with nearly a quarter of total households getting water supply just once a week, while E. coli bacteria have been detected in water reaching 98 percent of households.

Japan has been providing ODA assistance for water supply projects in Nepal, including in rural areas and capital Kathmandu, since 1976.

India launches record 104 satellites at one go

NEW DELHI — India successfully launched 104 satellites in a single mission on Wednesday, setting what its space agency says is a world record of launching the most satellites at one go.

Of the 104, 101 are foreign satellites to serve international customers as the South Asian nation seeks a bigger share of the $300 billion global space industry.

“This is a great moment for each and everyone of us. Today we have created history,” said project director B Jayakumar.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi tweeted his congratulations on the launch conducted by the state-run Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) that went off smoothly and was carried live on national TV news channels.

“India salutes our scientists,” Modi is bullish on India’s space program and has repeatedly praised the efforts of scientists who three years ago pulled off a low-cost mission to send a probe to orbit Mars that succeeded at the first attempt.

ISRO’s low prices attracted international customers to launch 75 satellites last year from Sriharikota in the southern state of Andhra Pradesh.

The launch of PSLV-C37 in a single payload, including the Cartosat-2 series and 103 co-passenger satellites, together weighed over 650 kg (1,433 lb). Out of 101 nano satellites, 96 were from the United States and one each from Israel, Kazakhstan, the Netherlands, Switzerland and the United Arab Emirates.—Reuters

China warns US against fresh naval patrols in South China Sea

BEIJING — China’s Foreign Ministry on Wednesday warned Washington against challenging its sovereignty, responding to reports the United States was planning fresh naval patrols in the disputed South China Sea.

On Sunday, the Navy Times reported that US Navy and Pacific Command leaders were considering freedom of navigation patrols in the busy waterway by the San Diego-based Carl Vinson carrier strike group, citing unnamed defense officials.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Geng Shuang said tension in the South China Sea had stabilised due to the hard work between China and Southeast Asia countries, and urged foreign nations including the US to respect this.

“We urge the US not to take any actions that challenge China’s sovereignty and security,” Geng told a regular news briefing on Wednesday.

The US military said the strike group was on a routine deployment in the western Pacific.

The United States has repeatedly said it would keep patrolling the South China Sea, where artifices have harassed and harmed its personnel and ships.

China lays claim to almost all of the resource-rich South China Sea, through which about $5 trillion worth of trade passes each year.

Brunei, Malaysia, the Philippines, Taiwan and Vietnam also claim parts of the waters that command strategic sea lanes and have rich fishing grounds, along with oil and gas deposits.

The United States has criticised Beijing’s construction of man-made islands and build-up of military facilities in the sea, and expressed concern they could be used to restrict free movement.—Reuters

Let us set up genuine mutual trust with people’s contribution!

Khin Maung Oo

In a country, it is very important to win the hearts of people. One we win, the hearts of the people, the power of the people can become a formidable force. In all the affairs of the country, especially in the national affairs of the country, it is very important to get the support and participation of the people. Thus, in order to make the process of achieving peace meaningful and effective, it is vitally important to harness the power of the people. In order to mobilize people’s power, it is necessary for us to make risks and sacrifice ourselves not only for the present benefits of the people but also those of future generations. We assume that the incumbent Government will perform the above-mentioned duties. People and Government should not be viewed separately as “those who govern” and “those who are being governed”. A government should be seen as a body that brings into reality the wishes of the people. Thus, this body that manages people’s affairs on behalf of the people. So, people should join hands with the government so that the government will be able to utilize “people’s power” for the benefit of the whole country. Looking back into history, we have found that people’s power could change the country. Depending upon their depth of political knowledge, the people can assess the performances and achievements of successive governments. People in our country have been under various kinds of regimes. Accordingly, they understand and know about their country’s affairs. That is, they already know to what extent, who took risks, who made sacrifices and who devoted themselves for the people. Now, people have the opportunity to choose their own representatives and monitor in what manner their Hluttaw representatives conduct themselves in various Hluttaws. It is very difficult for the Hluttaw representatives to deceive the people as the Radio, TV and printed media are constantly covering the daily news as it unfolds and presents to the people very effectively using the power of the internet, Facebook and via the smart phones. After gaining Independence, people’s affairs have been managed in different ways, throughout Myanmar history. People know whether various successive governments had worked for the interests of the people and to what extent. Now, it is nearly one year since the NLD-led Government took office. We already know how much the current Government brought about the benefits of the people in such a short period of time.

Keeping Yangon City clean, beautiful and pleasant

Tommy Pauk

According to the GNLM news on 10.02.2017, it is learnt that rubbish collection in the Yangon Region will be handed over to private enterprises. It also added that Yangon Region produces over 2,500 tonnes of rubbish daily. This current news reminds us that we Yangon city dwellers ought to participate in sanitation work. Even then we are responsible for paying monthly refuse disposal fees. Since Yangon is a great metropolis in South East Asia, the successive governments have made concerted efforts in making Yangon clean, beautiful and pleasant constantly. Sustainable hygienic environment, amenity, good system of garbage collection and good drainage system should be maintained at all time in Yangon. The incumbent Government is striving hard for the all-round development of Yangon city as well. Therefore, we, Yangon city dwellers, are responsible for keeping Yangon clean, beautiful and clean in accordance with the government policy. The city dwellers must adhere to the acts of Municipal and help authorities of YCDC with sanitation tasks as well. Likewise, we all must avoid having undisciplined manners such as littering and spitting, chewing betel juice in public area.

Lucky, Yangon has been free from air-pollution such as smog as the factories exist on the outskirts of Yangon. Sunny sky or blue sky is visible over Yangon in day time throughout the year. It is an obligation that all Yangon city dwellers must abide by the discipline and municipal acts for keeping Yangon beautiful. The authority has increased fine for dropping litter in the back yard recklessly. Garbage bins are placed on the every street corner in the Yangon local area for garbage disposal. This is a part of task that is very supportive to city cleanliness and hygienic programme. YCDC’s task of sanitation is carried out day and night with the assistance of city dwellers actively. However, unfortunately, the behaviour of undisciplined street hawkers and betel quid chewers make the city ugly, harmful and detestable. Very recently, the local authorities have designated some places near downtown Yangon for the hawkers to sell things or food within the limited time in the evening. Thus a kind of night hawkers-centre appeared in Yangon and ugliness and harm can be erased effectively. On the other hand, the government of Yangon Region is providing basic amenities and trying to make Yangon cleaner.

The elderly dwellers recount the physical beauty, cleanliness and pleasantness of Yangon known as Rangoon. They say Yangon’s picturesque buildings, religious monuments, lakes, trees, roads, lanes, parks awesomely attracted the visitors in 1950s. The drainage system, regular fumigation in the wards of Yangon, local transport system, local circular train, electric trolley-buses were the ones which served the city dwellers. They also say that Rangoon’s streets and roads were clean and well-lighted even at night time. Public amenities were quite sufficient for the city dwellers in that period. The city’s resident population of Yangon at that period was 600,000. The number of cars was relatively less than the present figure.

During the era of Burma Socialist Programme Party, Yangon city dwellers contributed voluntary service to sanitation work on Sunday mornings in their own wards or streets or townships respectively. In other words, the city dwellers of Yangon participated in a weekend sanitation programme or carried out the sanitation work with city development council willingly and voluntarily. It showed that the city dwellers wanted to sustain the beauty, pleasantness and cleanliness of Yangon. However, that programme could not continue any further due to circumstances. Since then, such regular YCDC sanitation work with public participation cannot be seen until now.

During the SPDC era, the government abolished the old and rickety buildings and reinvigorated the religious edifices as well as the buildings of Yangon heritage in Yangon. Besides, the SPDC government established the gardens and parks and built new satellite towns of Yangon. The SPDC government built some overpasses and planted shady trees in the vicinity of Yangon Airport. Even then, the Government took over the management of condominum and tall buildings have mushroomed in the metropolitan areas in Yangon. The SPDC government established industrial zones in the designated industrial estate on the outskirts of Yangon so that the residents can commute or move easily in the city. These were the tasks done by the SPDC government for Yangon City Development.

The population of metropolitan Yangon has gradually increased because some citizens from various places in Myanmar moved to Yangon. For these situations, Yangon City Development Committee cannot carry out the sanitation work without public participation or without using modern garbage collecting method. Yangon requires modern garbage collecting system, good drainage systems, good sewage system, sewage works to cope with the increasing number of population and modern buildings in Yangon. Yangon does not have skyscrapers, but we must maintain the existing roads, buildings and overpasses regularly. It is our bounden duty to keep Yangon beautiful, clean and pleasant. In addition, we must be able to say that Yangon has a reputation for high standard of discipline. Regular sanitation work, regular fumigation and obeying disciples will portray Yangon to be an attractive metropolitan to international tourists vividly. Let’s create Yangon to be the most beautiful, most pleasant and cleanest city in the world!
National Democracy Democracy Party (Kayah State) presents policy and programmes

U THEAE RAIE, Central Committee Member of All Nationalities Democracy Party.

Policy of the party

Introduction

The Union of Myanmar is home to various nationalities. They have been living in the country sharing weal and woe. The nationalities namely Kayin, Kayah, Chin, Bamar, Mon, Rakhine, Shan, etc. have had own monarchs since time under the feudal lords. Under this rule, they have had contact with one another like brothers and sisters of the same mother and are living till today.

Kayah (Kayinnyi) state, since time immemorial, formed own territories in the time of the feudal lords and under the colonial rule forming an alliance with Myanmar monarchs. Similarly, today, the nationalities living in Kayah (Kayinnyi) state will be living hand in hand with eggs and nests intact with other nationals residing in Myanmar.

Nationalities

Democracy Party is acknowledged by the Union Election Commission of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar under the party registration No 64. The main objective of the party is to strive for emergence of clean and good government in Kayah (Kayinnyi) state. Through this the interests of the state and nationalities will be served and we can work together with other nationalities and the Union Government. Democracy Party will always strive for peace and democracy and emergence of genuine federal union system. To promote political, economic and social rights in Kayah state, the party will seek ways and means together with the Union Government.

Political attitude

The executive, legislative and judicial branch of the state will make discussions with the central government for ensuring appropriate power sharing. The party will eye on resurrection of Kayah formerly known as Kayinnyi Act, in other words, national traditions legally. As the population in Kayah has increased significantly, village tracts and townships have to be expanded for smooth administration. Law enforcement is too weak. People have to suffer a lot as the result of lack of law enforcement. The law must surely protect the people. People are to be informed and responsible persons are to be supervised for ensuring all the people are living under the rule of law with peace of mind.

The Nationalities Democracy Party (Kayah state) will build strong, genuine and eternal peace with full trust. Within 60 years, Kayah state, without peace, is under the poverty line due to the internal strife. People lost their lives due to this internal strife. They had to flee from their places. Therefore, The Nationalities Democracy Party accepts that the peace making process is a must. The 2008 constitution should be amended in line with the changing situations.

The Nationalities Democracy Party (Kayah state) understands that success will be achieved in nationality affairs in Kayah state only through bilingualism because on it has experienced poverty and suffering of the people in the successive eras. It will cooperate with all nationalities living in the Union of Kayah paying respect to them. In that regard, it will make reports to and discuss with the Union government. It will put to the fore the concept of integration of the Union, national solidarity and perpetuation of the sovereignty. The party opines that law enforcement and peace and prosperity are a must for Kayah state.

Procedures

Political procedures

Kayah state is bordering with Shan state to the north, Kayin state to the west and Thailand (Yodaya) to the east. It is home to over 300,000 people. Geographically, the state sits on hill and mountains. Shan, Bamar, Kayin, PaO and other nationalities are living in the state in addition to nine nationalities. In forming a political party it should not be based on local, national and religious cults. As Kayah state is sparsely populated, it is important to form a party of all nationalities which can bring about the condition of the state and conform to lifestyle of the local people. It will contest the general election to be held by the Union Election Commission of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar mainly in Kayah State. The election campaigns will be conducted in the state.

The 2008 constitution, Nationalities Democracy Party (Kayah state) focuses on founding of a clean and good government. We will form an alliance with other nationality parties and serve the interests of the state and the Union. With regard to nationality affairs, the party will strive for self-determination, self-administration and self-manage- ment. As the vision of the party, it will strive for the emergence of a federal union which is desired by the nationalities. We believe that through this process, all nationalities will reach the goal of prosperous new society endowed with equal rights and genuine peace.

Economy

Kayah state sufficiently supports the peace process led by the existing NLD government in the Union of Myanmar. We also supports the Panglong Conference. We wish to see persons, political parties and organizations who should participate in the process to take part after scrutinizing them.

Forestry

Kayah state faces forest depletion due to cutting woods and timber production. We will carry out exploiting minerals, we will focus on systematic extraction. In extracting minerals, we will discuss with the Union government on profit sharing for the people to gain more rights. Negotiating with the Union government, we will focus on increased tax of the state which comes from mining forest and mountain preserved through traditional methods.

In exploiting minerals, we will make sure that there will be no harm to environment and we will focus on systematic extraction. In extracting minerals, we will discuss with the Union government on profit sharing for the people to gain more rights. Negotiating with the Union government, we will focus on increased tax of the state which comes from mining forest and mountain preserved through traditional methods.

With regard to women’s participation, All Nationalities Democracy Party has laid down rules and regulations and incorporated them into the party’s policies, providing assistance to make them have high position as well as to make them have high moral standard. For development of human resources, we will cultivate youths to be strong. Twenty per cent of members of our party must be youths. We will encourage youths to participate in traditional performing arts competitions. We are planning to include youths of 25 and above in the respective committees of the party and arrangements are being made to enable them to be elected to the Hluttaw.

Refugee affairs

There are many Kayinnyi refugees at the border of Kayah state and Thailand. All out efforts are to make them for those who had fled their place while striving for peace. We will try for them for their legal homecoming with dignity. It is important to make arrangements to fulfill their food, clothing and other necessities. Food, clothing and medicines for health care are to be provided.

The above-mentioned are the summary of our party’s policies, attitudes and programmes. Only with the support of the entire people, we will win the elections and we will be able to put our plan into action. Then we can fully serve the interests of the people for the people. Therefore, I would like to urge the entire people to vote for us in the coming bye election to be held on 1 April 2017. I wish all the voters health and happiness.

Following is the unofficial translation of appendix-2 of the press release by the President’s Office on the 29 January shooting at Yangon International Airport.

Republic of the Union of Myanmar
President’s Office
Press Release
15th February 2017

Appendix-2 of the press release of the President’s Office on the shooting at Yangon International Airport

1. The press release 1/2017 on the close-range shooting that occurred at Yangon International Airport at about 5 pm on 29th January 2017, killing U Ko Ni, Legal Adviser to the National League for Democracy on his arrival at the airport was issued on 30th January and its appendix on 3rd February.

2. Ko Ni, 52, who allegedly committed the murder, and Aung Win Zaw, 46, who is suspected of conspiracy to murder, have been detained. Based on information gathered during the interrogation of the two suspects, a combined team comprising members of the Tatmadaw and the Myanmar Police Force are continuing their investigation into the issue in attempts to arrest other suspects who are connected with the murder.

3. During the initial interrogation conducted on Aung Win Zaw, he confessed that his brother, Aung Win Khaing, had hired him to assassinate U Ko Ni; that in July 2016, Aung Win Khaing offered him Ks100 million to murder U Ko Ni; that he gave him Ks10 million as a deposit; that following the offer of Aung Win Khaing, he started to find anyone who could commit the murder; that firstly, he offered Aung Soe, living in Insein, and later, he terminated contact with Aung Soe, giving the reason that the diplomat who would be murdered had returned home; that around September and October 2016, Ko Ni visited him and asked for a job, and he offered Ko Ni from Ks80 million to Ks100 million to kill U Ko Ni and Ko Ni replied that just a car was enough to kill U Ko Ni; that out of Ks100 million offered by Aung Win Khaing, Ks80 million was set aside to be given to Ko Ni and the remaining Ks20 million was set aside to spend on other preparations.

4. Around 16 October 2016, Aung Win Zaw went to Hpa-an, Kayin State, to buy guns and he tried to buy a gun via friends he made when he did antique trading, giving a reason that he would like to give guns as gifts to others as he was doing gold mining in Red Shan areas. He bought one 9mm pistol and 11 bullets at the cost of Ks2.5 million and one five-chambered gun and four bullets at the cost of Ks2.5 million. He spent the Ks10 million deposit from Aung Win Khaing on buying the guns and he lied that he bought the guns from Myint Swe, living in Thailand.

5. On 28th January, Aung Win Khaing contacted Aung Win Zaw by phone, alerting him to be ready with the guns as U Ko Ni would arrive back by air on 29th January. Afterwards, at 9 am on 29th January, Aung Win Khaing contacted Aung Win Zaw again and told him that he would go first to the airport. Around 1 pm, Aung Win Zaw phoned Ko Ni, telling him to come to the airport by taxi. When he arrived at the airport, Aung Win Khaing sent SMS messages to him and let him know the location where U Ko Ni would come out. In the messages, Aung Win Khaing said U Ko Ni “will come out from the exit for ordinary passengers, take care of CCTV, stop phone calls, delete all messages”. Afterwards, Ko Ni shot U Ko Ni at close range. Ko Ni was arrested by the people and the police and he managed to escape by car but was arrested quickly.

6. According to the airport’s CCTV records, it is found that Aung Win Khaing inquired about flight arrival times. Currently, the police are in hot pursuit of Aung Win Khaing. It is assumed that Aung Win Khaing, who is still at large, hired assassins to commit the crime and he had served for the Tatmadaw and he quit the Tatmadaw of his own volition in 2014 when he reached the rank of Lt-Col. The combined team comprising of members of the Myanmar Police Force and the Tatmadaw is investigating the case and hope to expose the crime in attempting to arrest those who are connected with the crime, and further information would be made public.

7. Hence, the people are urged to be fully aware of religious and racial incitements, and attempt to depolarize the situation, and the people are requested to give information related to Aung Win Khaing, who is still at large, and any attempts to destabilize the situation to authority.

New modern postboxes for Yangon

KO MOE
POSTBOXES in the Yangon Region are being replaced with modern versions that take into account the weather and the height of Myanmar citizens, said Myanmar Postal Service (Yangon) Regional Manager U Thaung Nyone Soe.

The new postboxes are highly advanced. Their height has been adjusted with the height of the people of this country in mind, and it utilizes a technology system that protects the letters inside from wayward water or cigarette butts.

Of the 130 postboxes in the Yangon Region, a few have already been replaced and efforts are being made to replace the remaining ones as fast as possible.

"The Myanmar Postal Service has replaced postboxes throughout Nay Pyi Taw and Mandalay Region. Japan’s Ministry of Communication, Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), Japanese media firm Daiwa and the Ministry of Transportation and Communication have collaborated on a three-year project to develop or upgrade 162 post offices throughout Yangon Region, Mandalay Region and Nay Pyi Taw. “The Myanmar Postal Service, with help from Japan, is working on smooth conveyance of ordinary/local mail and express/registered mail. We are also working on making delivery prices more reasonable, ease of access to delivery services, and a postal service based on good quality performance,” said U Thaung Nyone Soe.

Kenyan court frees doctors’ leaders jailed during health sector strike

NAIROBI — Kenya’s Court of Appeal on Wednesday ordered the release from jail of officials from the national doctors’ union so they can negotiate with the government over a strike that has paralysed the public health sector.

The strike has angered Kenyans and turned into a test of President Uhuru Kenyatta’s leadership ahead of an election in August.

The union, which has about 5,000 members, wants the government to implement a deal agreed in 2013 to give doctors a 150 to 180 percent pay rise on basic salaries, review working conditions, job structures and criteria for promotions and address under-staffing in state hospitals.

The seven union officials were ordered to serve a one-month jail term on Monday after a lower court found them guilty of contempt of court in relation to the strike which started in December.

Appellate Judge Hannah Okwengo said the seven officials would be released immediately. She said the parties in the labour dispute had seven days to file their response.

“The applicants, respondents and interested parties undertook to resume negotiations forthwith, with a view to resolving the outstanding issues, in order to restore normalcy in the public health sector,” she told a court packed with doctors.

The government has offered the striking doctors a 40 percent pay rise which the union rejected.

Syrian opposition wants Geneva talks on political transition

BEIRUT — The Syrian opposition wants face-to-face negotiations with the government about a political transition at peace talks that are due to begin in Geneva next week, a leading Syrian opposition politician said on Wednesday.

Salim al-Muslit, spokesman for the High Negotiations Committee (HNC), said there could be no role for President Bashar al-Assad in the transition, saying “the heavy price paid by the Syrian people cannot be wasted if he remained.”

Muslit also said the HNC had yet to receive an agenda for the negotiations that are due to begin on 23 February after initial consultations beginning on 20 February. He said the negotiations should start with discussion of the transition.

“We want direct negotiations, we want to save time, we want a quick end to the suffering of the Syrian people,” he said.

“We want now to get into the essence of the political process — the discussion of the political transition — and what the Geneva 1 communique stipulated about the formation of a transitional body with full powers,” he said.

He was referring to the Geneva communique of 2012 calling for the establishment of a transitional governing body with full executive powers that could include members of the present government, the opposition, and other groups. The communique said it should be formed on the basis of mutual consent.

The HNC, which includes rebel groups and political opponents of Assad, has named a 22-member delegation to the Geneva talks.

Diplomacy has repeatedly failed to make any headway towards ending the war that has killed hundreds of thousands of people.

The latest diplomacy effort was launched with Russian and Turkish support after government forces, led by the Russian air force and Iranian-backed militia, defeated rebels in eastern Aleppo in December — their biggest setback of the war. — Reuters

Suicide bomber kills five outside government office in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD — A suicide bomber blew himself up outside a government office in Pakistan on Wednesday, killing five people, the army said, the latest attack in a new surge in militant violence.

A faction of the Pakistani Taliban claimed responsibility for the attack in the town of Ghalanai in the Mohmand Agency, a northwestern region on the border with Afghanistan.

The attack took place outside the office of the political agent, the most senior government officer in the region.

“One suicide bomber blew himself up once spotted and challenged by security agencies,” the army said in a statement, adding that guards shot dead a second bomber.

The Jamaat-ur-Ahrar faction of the Pakistani Taliban, which claimed responsibility in a statement emailed to journalists, also claimed an attack in the city of Lahore on Monday in which 13 people, five of them policemen, were killed.

The group said the Lahore attack was the beginning of a new campaign against the government, security forces, the judiciary and secular political parties.

Security in Pakistan has improved in recent years but Islamic groups still pose a threat and have carried out attacks despite an army offensive launched in 2014 to push them out of their northwestern strongholds.

Last year, the same militant faction claimed an Easter Day bombing that killed more than 70 people in a park in Lahore. — Reuters

Germany raids apartments of four Turkish imams suspected of spying

BERLIN — German police on Wednesday raided the apartments of four imams suspected of conducting espionage on behalf of the Turkish government against followers of US-based cleric Fetullah Gulen, accused by Ankara of organising a failed coup last July.

The raids, in the states of North Rhine-Westphalia and Rhineland-Palatinate, could further strain relations between the two NATO allies, which need each other to tackle issues ranging from militant Islamist attacks to Europe’s migrant crisis.

The Federal Public Prosecutor’s Office (GBA) said in a statement that the imams had acted on an order issued on 20 September last year by the Turkish-based Diyanet religious authority which said the Gulen movement was behind the putsch attempt.

German Justice Minister Heiko Maas said the four imams were members of Dithar, Germany’s largest association of mosques which brings imams from Turkey to serve the community of some three million people with a Turkish background who live here.

“It is very clear that the influence of the Turkish state on Dithar is big. The association must plausibly disengage itself from Ankara,” Maas said in a statement.

Last month the GBA launched an investigation into Turkish intelligence operations on German soil after a lawmaker filed a criminal complaint. Austria is also investigating whether Turkey has been operating an infiltration network targeting Gulen followers on its soil, via its embassy in Vienna.

Turkey has accused Germany of harboring militants from the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) and leftists of the DHKP-C, which has carried out attacks in Turkey. German officials reject the accusation.

The GBA said Wednesday’s searches were aimed at finding more evidence to link the suspects to espionage activities.

“The suspects are suspected of having collected information about members of the so-called Gulen movement and passed it on to the general consulate in Cologne,” the GBA said.

Turkey’s President Tayyip Erdogan accuses Gulen of masterminding the abortive coup, in which at least 240 people were killed, and wants the United States to extradite him. Gulen denies any involvement in the coup attempt.

Since July Turkey has arrested tens of thousands of people over suspected ties to Gulen in a wide-ranging crackdown criticised by Germany and other European Union nations. — Reuters
Latin America urges UN members to “actively” join nuke ban talks

MEXICO CITY — Latin American countries called on all UN member states to “actively” join talks for a treaty outlawing nuclear weapons when they met on Tuesday to mark the 50th anniversary of a regional nuclear-weapon-free zone treaty.

The call was enshrined in a declaration adopted at a meeting in Mexico City of parties to the Treaty of Tlatelolco, which opened for signature in February 1967 and established the following year a nuclear-weapon-free zone that grew to cover all 33 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean. During the gathering, Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto said the Treaty of Tlatelolco has been the most powerful and vital contributor to the maintenance of peace and stability in the world.

The meeting came just ahead of the start of a UN conference in March to negotiate a first-ever treaty to ban nuclear weapons, with nuclear and non-nuclear states still divided over the issue.

In the declaration, Latin American and Caribbean nations slammed the use and threat of use of nuclear weapons as a violation of the UN Charter and international law and as a crime against humanity. They also said “a world free of nuclear weapons is indispensable” for peace, security and development, while calling for “immediate action” by all UN member states to “actively participate in the United Nations conference to negotiate a legally binding instrument to prohibit nuclear weapons, leading towards their total elimination.”

The declaration appears to be aimed at adding pressure on five traditional nuclear powers — the United States, Russia, China, Britain and France — in the hope they will also support the nuclear ban treaty negotiations.

Mexico has been among the countries that have strongly pursued the start of the negotiations. The UN General Assembly adopted a landmark resolution in December calling for the start of talks to prohibit nuclear weapons.

The resolution drew support from 113 countries, while 35 — including the United States, Britain, France, Russia and Japan — voted against it, with 13 countries, including China, abstaining. Japan remains vague about whether it will join the talks, reflecting its reliance on US nuclear deterrence for protection. Tokyo nonetheless professes to aspire to a nuclear-weapon-free world as the only country to have been attacked with atomic bombs.

The first round of negotiations will take place from 27 to 31 March, followed by a second round of talks from 15 June through July, both in New York.

The Treaty of Tlatelolco was the world’s first agreement to prohibit nuclear weapons in a populated area, a move that emerged against the backdrop of the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis. It came into effect in April 1968.

Alpha Jet trainer pilot seriously injured after ejecting himself off in northeastern Thailand

BANGKOK — A Thai air force pilot was seriously injured after he jettisoned himself from an Alpha Jet trainer plane in northeastern Thailand on Wednesday.

Air force spokesman Pongsak Semachai identified the pilot as Sukhothai Srisomsai, who was found lying on open ground in Loei province, about 520 kilometres northeast of Bangkok. Local villagers scrambled to send the injured pilot to hospital.

Sukhothai, who was flying as the second pilot, instantly ejected himself from the two-seater Alpha Jet plane as he was helping the first pilot, identified as Flying Officer Puri Chulapallop, with a flying exercise aboard the French/German-built trainer aircraft.

However, the trainee pilot stayed aboard and managed to fly the Alpha Jet plane safely back to Air Wing 23 in Udorn Thani province, where both air force officers are based, according to the air force spokesman.

Air force officers at the northeastern air wing are yet to investigate the possible cause which immediately made the trainer pilot jettison himself off, Pongsak said.

Last month, an air force pilot was killed when a JAS-39 Gripen jet fighter crashed landed at Hat Yai airport in southeastern Thailand during an air show watched by hundreds of children on the National Children’s Day.

The pilot, identified as Dilokrit Pathavi, did not jettison himself from the Swedish-made fighter which had immediately swooped down seconds before the crash. — Xinhua
Moscow says an overwhelming majority of Crimeans voted to become part of Russia in a 2014 referendum wanting protection from what the Kremlin cast as an illegal coup in Kiev.

Ukraine says the referendum was a sham held at gunpoint after Russian troops illegally annexed the peninsula, that Russia-friendly President Viktor Yanukovych was ousted by people power, and that Moscow should return Crimea.

“We don’t give back our own territory. Crimea is territory belonging to the Russian Federation,” Maria Zakharova, spokeswoman for the Russian Foreign Ministry, told a news briefing on Wednesday.

The 2014 annexation prompted the United States and the European Union to impose sanctions on Russia, plunging Western relations with the Kremlin to their worst level since the Cold War.

White House spokesman Sean Spicer said on Tuesday that Trump expected and wanted to get along with Russia, but was expecting Moscow to hand Crimea back.

Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov, when asked about Spicer’s comments, said President Vladimir Putin had already explained why Crimea had turned to Russia.

“The theme of returning Crimea will not be discussed … Russia does not discuss its territorial integrity with foreign partners,” Peskov told a conference call with reporters.

Trump had not raised the Crimea issue in a 28 January phone call with Putin, Peskov noted, saying the Kremlin would try to make contacts with the Trump administration to try to improve ties which he said were in “a lamentable state.”

Vladimir Volodin, speaker of the State Duma, the lower house of parliament, told MPs any talk of Crimea’s status amounted to a challenge to Russia’s territorial integrity.

Volodin, a close Putin ally, told the Interfax news agency Trump had promised in his election campaign to work to improve relations with Russia.

“You wait for some first-hand words from the US president,” said Volodin.

France’s Fillon under renewed fire ahead of Sarkozy talks

Paris — France’s scandal-hit presidential candidate Francois Fillon came under renewed attack from within his conservative camp on Wednesday ahead of planned talks with former president Nicolas Sarkozy that Fillon hopes will restore party unity.

Rebel conservative lawmaker Georges Fenech said his The Republicans party had defeated in the April-May election unless it ditched Fillon.

Fenech has been one of the strongest anti-Fillon voices since an official inquiry knocked the ex-prime minister’s campaign off track three weeks ago.

“I’d love to be wrong but I can’t believe any more because I can see on the ground the reaction of the voters. They don’t want to vote for us any more,” Fenech told Radio Classique. He was speaking a day after leading a failed bid to force a meeting of the party’s executive that could have challenged Fillon’s decision to continue his presidential bid.

Fenech referred to a meeting this week between Fillon and his camp as one of “mutual congratulation” in which “nobody wants to tell him the truth — or very few people”.

“With that as a starting point we are going to the wall,” he said. “There are other people in our party who are respectable, young and have the capacity to run the country.” Fillon had been favourite to win the presidency until allegations in a newspaper three weeks ago that his wife Penelope had been paid hundreds of thousands of euros in tax-free payments knocked the ex-prime minister from the race for the election.

Fillon’s place as prime minister during November. Fillon served as prime minister during the Sarkozy presidency of 2007-2012. An opinion poll published on Wednesday by Ifop-Fiducial for Paris Match showed Fillon’s popularity has dropped sharply, with only 26 per cent of people having a good opinion of him compared with 45 per cent a month ago.

Syrian films bring tears and smiles to Berlin Film Festival

BERLIN — One drops you, trapped and powerless, in the middle of a civil war, while the other uses humor to depict what’s it’s like to start a new life in Europe after escaping the same conflict.

“Insyriated” and “The Other Side of Hope” are two films about Syria, and made in Europe, that bring tears and smiles to the Berlin Film Festival.

“The former is shot almost entirely inside the walls of an apartment that becomes like a prison for 8-year-old Yusef, a mother determined to survive a war whose brutality is conveyed mostly through the sounds of bombs and sniper gunfire.

“It shocked people in a very smart way. Westerners saw enough images of destruction on their television screens. But few of them know what Syrians are going through or how they feel being trapped in there,” Iraqi film critic Kais Kasim said.

The film forces viewers to ask themselves how they would act in the same situation.

Belgian director Philippe Van Leeuw said the silence that followed the screening as well as seeing some of his actors and members of the audience in tears at the end made him think: “Mission accomplished.”

“It is hard for me to say I was happy when I saw the film for the first time with the audience,” he said, adding that she had no idea the film would leave people speechless.

“The Other Side of Hope” by Finnish director Aki Kaurismaki uses humor to depict the experiences in Helsinki of stowaway Syrian asylum seeker Khaled, who decides to remain in the country illegally after his application is rejected.

His fate is to meet the main character in the second story of the film, Finnish salesman Wikstrom, who buys a restaurant in the capital where he gives Khaled a job and a bed. Wikstrom and the other Finns in the film are burlesque characters, the source of most of the light-hearted humor that almost obscures Khaled’s ordeal: most of his family died in a bomb in Aleppo and he lost his sister shortly after they arrived in Europe from Turkey.

“It uses comedy to convey tragedy,” said film critic Kasim. “It blends the critical with the comic, leaving people with tears and smiles.”

Justin Timberlake finds his music explicit for son

LONDON — Singer Justin Timberlake says he can’t let his 22-month-old son Silas listen to all his songs as some of them are explicit.

“He can’t play Silas a lot of my music yet because it is explicit,” Timberlake said.

The singer recalled how he called a parent “terrible” as he let his kid listen to “Sexy Back,” reported Digital Spy.

“‘I had a parent come up to me a couple of years ago and say, my eight-year-old loves SexyBack, and I was like: Youre a terrible parent! SexyBack is not meant for your eight-year-old. You should feel bad about yourself!” the 36-year-old singer said.

One song Silas is allowed to listen to, however, is Timberlakes recent hit “Can’t Stop The Feeling”.—PTI

Recovering from memory loss, Kanye West focuses on fashion comeback

NEW YORK Two months after being hospitalized for exhaustion and still recovering from memory loss, Kanye West is expected to make his first major public appearance at New York Fashion Week, his producer revealed.

West, who was hospitalized and abruptly canceling the remainder of his “Pablo” tour following a week of curtailed concerts and rants about politics, is expected to be at Wednesday’s New York presentation of his latest Yeezy collection of high-end athleisure wear for sports brand Adidas.

Music producer Malik Yusef said he has visited with the rapper recently and that West was focused on his recovery and spending time with his two young children with wife, reality star Kim Kardashian.

“His memory’s coming back,” said Yusef, who worked with West on “The Life of Pablo” album that was nominated for eight Grammy awards.

Yusef’s remarks come after West attended the Grammy Awards on Sunday as the rapper debuted his “Pablo” album at Manhattan’s Madison Square Garden alongside the presentation of his Yeezy season 4 collection, which featured a diverse group of models dressed in leotards, tops, leggings and parkas in neutral tones.

West has kept a low public profile in recent months, although he did meet with then-President-elect Donald Trump in New York in January and posed for photos afterward.—Reuters

Rock singer Debbie Harry crowned Style Icon at Elle Style Awards

LONDON — Debbie Harry, frontwoman of rock band Blondie, was crowned a fashion icon at London’s Elle Style Awards, and she thanked her punk influences for defining her style.

“Coming from the punk point of view, which was very deconstructionist, destructive, and disrespectful, you have to find something in yourself that makes you feel a lot of different ways,” she told Reuters at the red carpet event late Monday. “So you have to feel beautiful, you have to feel comfortable. I have to feel sexy.” Harry, who attended the event with Blondie co-founder Chris Stein, playfully wore a crown designed by Vivienne Westwood, while posting for photographers. Harry also wore a Westwood red suit with a black-and-white shirt and shoes.

Blondie, an American punk band famous for hits like “Heart of Glass” and “Call Me” in the late 1970s and early 1980s, is expected to release their 11th studio album, “Pollinator”, in May. “It’s about the ongoing circle of culture and how we all feed off of each other and I think at this particular time...it’s very important to remember that. That we’re all so deeply connected,” Harry said about the new album.

British actress and United Nations Women Global Goodwill Ambassador Emma Watson was given the Woman of the Year award in recognition of her acting career and work for gender equality.

Other winners included French singer-songwriter Christine and the Queens, who won Album of the Year, and Christopher Bailey took home British Brand of the Year award for Burberry. Erdem Moralioglu won British Designer of the Year. — Reuters

Couples marry on Valentine’s Day atop a New York City landmark

NEW YORK — Love was in the air atop the Empire State Building on Tuesday as two couples got married and one couple renewed their vows on Valentine’s Day, the only day of the year when marriages are permitted at the iconic New York City skyscraper.

In back-to-back ceremonies, the couples wed outside on a cold winter day on the 86th floor observation deck, with the Manhattan skyline as a backdrop.

The couples entered an essay contest on why they wanted to be married at the 102-story landmark. The ceremony were small, with family and a small group of friends in attendance.

Krista Owens and Danielle Reno thought it made perfect sense to get married at the iconic spot. "I’m an NYPD officer and I protect the city of New York,” Owens said with confidence.

Owens and Reno began as friends nearly a decade ago and fell in love at the entertainment and restaurant chain Dave and Buster’s. “We just connected; it wasn’t really a conversation,” Owens said about the moment she and Reno, now dressed in a floor-length wedding gown, realized that they were meant to be.

Roetta Collins and Patrick Smith met on a dating website and have been together for three years.

Collins said Smith first caught her eye because his profile picture was of him standing in front of a store window display with a big red heart. For Laura and David DeMuz, their ceremony at the Empire State Building was a chance to renew vows they took 19 years ago.

They fell in love when they were 15 years old. What is the secret to their long and happy marriage? “A lot of patience, being kind, listening and having confidence in your partner,” Laura DeMusz said. “When people make a commitment, they need to stay in that commitment.”

A total of 14 lucky couples were chosen for their big day at the Empire State Building, the city’s third-tallest building after One World Trade Center and 432 Park Avenue.

While other designers demur, Herrera offers to dress first lady

NEW YORK — Fashion designer Carolina Herrera, who has dressed five first ladies and made first daughter Ivanka Trump’s inaugural ball gown on Monday, said she would happily dress the US first lady.

“I don’t have a problem dressing the first lady of this country, whoever it is,” Herrera told Reuters without mentioning Melania Trump by name, when asked at the debut of her fall 2017 collection if she would design for her. “I think it’s out of respect for the United States,” said the Venezuelan-born designer.

The fashion world has been divided on the issue after some couturiers including Tom Ford and Sophie Theallet said they would not work with Trump. Herrera created clothes for former first ladies Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Michelle Obama among others. Trump’s inaugural ball gown was designed by former Herrera creative director Herve Pierre. Barca’s Busquets blames tactics, fitness for Paris nightmare

PARIS — Barcelona midfielder Sergio Busquets has criticised their tactical and physical frailties after a 4-0 thrashing at Paris St Germain in the last 16 left them on the brink of their earliest Champions League exit in a decade.

The five-times European champions were crushed in every aspect of the first-leg clash by Unai Emery’s side, suffering their heaviest defeat in Europe since 2013 and under coach Luis Enrique, who appeared flummoxed in front of the media.

“They (PSG) played much better than us and they overwhelmed us physically,” Busquets told Catalan television network TV3.

“They pressed us harder, they were much better tactically than us, they had a plan and executed it, and how they wanted to and they were the better team.”

The midfielder also appeared to criticise the team’s preparation for the game, adding: “We expected something else but that’s what can happen. We hope to be able to turn things around at the Nou Camp but I can’t lie, it’s very difficult.”

Luis Enrique cut an uneasy figure in an interview with TV3 which he cut short, saying: “Stop looking for more reasons. This is my responsibility and I hope you use the same tone now we have lost as when we won.”

In his news conference, Luis Enrique said his side were utterly outplayed although he rejected suggestions he had not prepared his players properly for the high pressing game PSG carried out to perfection.

“We weren’t surprised at all, we had spoken about their pressing before the game but that doesn’t mean you can overcome it. We lost so many individual duels. PSG played as we expected and played at their best and we did not,” he said.

“It’s pretty simple. Our opponents were better than us with and without the ball. They won battles, they were more effective and the result clearly reflects what happened. I don’t think I have to give a huge explanation to Barca fans.”

Luis Enrique gave midfielders Anthony Martial for the profession- sional and trained hard and he feels his player is ready for the battle against their side, Busquets has also only recently returned from a lay-off while Gerard Pique had just come back after a muscle injury.

“We had players that had just recovered but I don’t want to individualise, now is not the time. I have every confidence in my players, it’s time to talk about coaches and I assume full responsibility for this as always,” added Luis Enrique.

Southgate implores England to learn from rugby counterparts

LONDON — England’s soccer team need to develop and maintain the same ruthless winning mentality as the country’s rugby team, manager Gareth Southgate has said.

The England rugby team are in the midst of an unprecedented run of success under Eddie Jones, who replaced Stuart Lancaster following their early exit in the 2015 Rugby World Cup.

“It’s clear they don’t believe they can be beaten. That plays a huge role,” Southgate told British media after Jones’ side scored a late converted try to beat Wales 21-16 in Cardiff last Saturday to extend their winning streak to 16 games. “You get a sense of the culture that’s there. One of the things I was interested in was that culture,” added Southgate, who has been given a similar task to revive the England soccer team after they crashed out of Euro 2016.

“What are they doing? How do they deliver? Because that’s what we are trying to take into the England team: how do we create an environment that will bring the best out of the players?”

“Confidence plays a part. As a coach you’re working out how to challenge at every moment. That said, how do they deliver? You can be beaten. That plays a huge role.” — Reuters

‘Professional’ Martial impresses Ibrahimovic at Man United

PARIS — Manchester United striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic has heaped praise on team mate Anthony Martial for the professional and mature manner in which the forward has responded to recent criticism from manager Jose Mourinho.

The Portuguese has often singled out Martial following lacklustre displays this campaign but the young Frenchman impressed by scoring one goal and setting up the other in a 2-0 league win over Watford on Saturday.

“When he plays, he is playing well. He isn’t a guy that speaks a lot, he is quiet and very professional. He always tries to do his best, trains hard and that is paying off, just like in this match,” Ibrahimovic told British media.

Despite making an immediate impact following his high-profile transfer from Monaco in 2015, the 21-year-old Martial has found himself on the fringes of the first team this season, having made just 10 league starts under Mourinho.

“I think it depends on every individual and what kind of person they are and their approach, how open he is. It is different for every person,” Ibrahimovic added.

“He is not going around with his head down. He is training hard, he gives a lot of energy and he wants to play, which is normal.”

Sharapova deserves second chance, says Becker

MONACO — Boris Becker believes Maria Sharapova has paid her dues and deserves a second chance when she returns to tennis in April at the end of her 15-month doping ban.

Sharapova, a five-times grand slam champion, failed a dope test for the drug meldonium at the 2016 Australian Open and was suspended for two years by the International Tennis Federation (ITF).

The Russian’s ban was then cut by nine months by the Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS) last October, meaning the Russian is free to return from 26 April.

Becker, a three-times Wimbledon champion, said it was right that Sharapova was allowed to return to the sport and hopes her comeback will not cause problems in the locker room.

“In principal I am all for a second chance,” Becker told Reuters at the Laureus World Sports Awards in Monaco.

Becker, a three-times Wimbledon champion, said it was right that Sharapova was allowed to return to the sport and hopes her comeback will not cause problems in the locker room.

“Everyone has their own choice. Hopefully the atmosphere (inside the locker room) will be good. We can move on and have good women’s champions.”

Sharapova, 29, had called the ITF’s original ruling “unfairly harsh” because she had not intentionally violated anti-doping rules.
