Paddy husk-fired power plant opened in Nay Pyi Taw

VICE President U Henry Van Thio attended the opening of a paddy husk-powered plant held in the compound of the Myanmar Agribusiness Public Corporation (MAPCO) in Maesalgion Village, Pyinmana Township yesterday morning.

At the ceremony, Union Minister Dr Aung Thu said that the demand for electricity in Myanmar is estimated to increase to 3,100 megawatts in 2017, meaning 244 megawatts of power are still needed. The government’s current electricity generation capacity is only 2,856 megawatts.

The rural areas will have access to electricity if the paddy husk-fired plants are built in the areas where many rice mills are located. He pledged that the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation would provide necessary assistance for similar projects in accordance with rules and regulations.

Paddy husks are the hard protective coverings of grains of rice that are removed during processing. In addition to protecting rice during the growing season, rice hulls can be put to use as building materials, fertilizer, insulation material, or fuel.

Chairman of MAPCO U Chit Kyaw said that the electricity generated by the power plant will be used in operating rice mills under MAPCO and steps will be taken to distribute surplus electricity to nearby areas. Matters on generating power and reducing environmental impact were clarified in detail by officials from Yannan, the Japanese company that manufactures diesel engines and rice-planting machines.

Union Ministers Dr. Aung Thu and Dr. Than Myint, MAPCO Chairman U Chit Kyaw and officials from Yannan cut the ribbon to formally open the paddy husk-powered plant. The Vice President and party unveiled the stone plaque of the plant and sprinkled scented water on it, a Myanmar tradition. The Vice President also toured the inside of the plant and heard reports on working processes presented by the officials.

Arrangements are being made to construct paddy husk-fired power plants in Ayeyawady, Bago, Sagaing and Yangon Regions. It is learnt that construction of a paddy husk-fired power plant in Kyatitla Township is expected to generate 2.2 megawatts of electricity in Ayeyawady Region is 99 per cent complete. The newly inaugurated paddy husk-fired plant constructed with the use of state-of-the-art technology from Japan will be capable of generating 0.5 megawatts of electricity.—Myanmar News Agency

MPs discuss New Yangon City project

SPECIFICS on the New Yangon City project were discussed at the 2nd Yangon Region Hluttaw 4th Regular Meeting yesterday.

In the coming 2017-2018 fiscal year, priority will be given to the New Yangon City project, but it is being advised that details of the project should be submitted in full to the Region’s Hluttaw before initiating its development.

“I agree with the policies on the new city development plan for Yangon, but there is a change in the way of investment for the plan’s development. Representatives should know who is investing where, who is contributing to which sector, and which part of the plan will be initiated first,” said Daw Sandar Min from Seikkyi/Khaungmaung constituency (1).

This was part of a discussion by six Hluttaw representatives on the 2017-2018 Bill concerning Regional Development Plan for Yangon. It is reported that 51 per cent of the investment will be made by the Region’s government and 49 per cent by Construction Businesses, forming a public company for the project’s achievement.

“The Regional Government and businesses should specify to the Hluttaw about which sector they will be involved in. There will be losses if the government is unable to manage business and this will result in loss of the national budget. It is not natural for the government to include a business person in the board of directors because the government is unable of managing business,” said Daw Sandar Min.

A number of Hluttaw representatives voiced their opinion that the regional government should only carry out a project if there is firm evidence of the possibility for success.

“The latest news is that there will be investment by the regional government and new companies as well as three companies from the previous government administration. They should really submit the full details for the project instead of giving us unclear reports after some progress has been made. We cannot do anything with inadequate information,” said Yangon Region Hluttaw representative U Kyaw Zayya from Dagon constituency (2).

The New Yangon City project was added after Yangon Region Minister for Planning and Finance U Myint Thaung submitted the Bill for Yangon Regional Project in 2017-2018 Fiscal Year at the 2ndYangon Region Hluttaw on March 20. The project’s location is the 7,200 hectares of land on the opposite shore of Tontay, Kyimyindaing and Seikkyi/Khaungmaung townships. The three companies already listed are Yangon North-West Region Development Company, Shwe Poppa International Construction and Business Capital City Development Ltd.

Rubber yield in Mon State dropped by 25 per cent this year

Despite the good price, rubber production in Mon State this year was found to have declined by 25 per cent compared to last year, said the chairman of the Mon State Rubber Planters and Producers Association.

Rubber farm owners were faced with a shortage of skilled labourers, forcing them to hire inexperienced workers from other regions. Additionally, old rubber trees, of which there are many, cannot produce much latex.

Also, rubber farmers battered by the low price over the past four years cut down many trees and sold the wood, resulting in a decreased number of rubber trees.

This year, rubber prices hit a high of Ks1,200 to Ks1,300 per pound. As a result of the appealing price, the rubber growers who were forced to suspend their business in the low price resumed their businesses this year.

During this Fiscal Year, rubber trees were planted on 15,500 acres in Ye Township, 81,000 acres in Kyaikmaraw, 70,100 acres in Thanbyuzayat, 60,000 acres in Mudon, 35,000 acres in Kyaiakto, 45,000 acres in Tha-ton, 21,200 acres in Bilin, 17,000 acres in Paung, 2,225 acres in Mawlamyine and 5,926 acres in Chaungzon in Mon State.—Tin Hlaing (Mekshla)

Nearly 1.5 million tonnes of rice exported as of mid March

THE volume of rice exports as of the middle of March was up against that of last year, with nearly 1.5 million tonnes of rice shipped to foreign partners.

Concerted efforts are being exerted by government and private sectors in a bid to boost the rice export volume up to 2 million tonnes in the next fiscal year, according to the Myanmar Rice Federation.

China is the main buyer of Myanmar’s rice, and the rice exports mainly go through border trade rather than the normal trade. Myanmar is currently in discussions with China about having a quota of 100,000 tonnes of rice through normal trade. With concerted efforts exerted by the government and private sectors, rice and broken rice included in agricultural products attained new international markets like Africa, shipping around 600,000 tonnes of rice to the foreign trade partners through normal trade.

The country’s export sector is depending more on the agriculture and industrial products of small and medium sized enterprises, while lessening its reliance on natural resources such as natural gas, jade. The export of natural gas and the crude oil was battered by the low price.

The export from 1st April to 10th March this FY fetched US$10.65 billion, which is up by over US$400 million when compared to that in the similar period of last FY, with export values of US$2.65 billion from agricultural products, US$9.19 billion from animal products, US$525.98 billion from marine products, US$685.865 billion from minerals, US$220.457 billion from forest products, US$4.94 billion from industrial finished materials and US$1.43 billion from other products.—Mon Mon

Sunken South Korean ferry slowly emerges three years after disaster

SEOUL — A South Korean ferry that sank nearly three years ago, killing 304 people, most of them children on a school trip, slowly emerged from a grey sea on Thursday, a sombre reminder of a tragedy that traumatised the country.

The ferry, the Sewol, was structurally unsound, overloaded and travelling too fast on a turn when it capsized and sank during a routine voyage off the southwest coast on 16 April, 2014. Bereaved families have been calling for the ship to be raised and for a more thorough investigation into the disaster. Officials also hope to find the last missing bodies.

“We can’t help but feel stunned seeing the ship being raised,” Lee Kim-hee, whose daughter Cho-Eun-hwa was one of the nine, told reporters.

“My Eun-hwa has been in that dirty place. My poor Eun-hwa. It’s been heart-breaking, how cold she’s been there,” Lee said in tears.

The sunken ferry Sewol is raised during its salvage operations on the sea off Jindo, South Korea, in this handout picture provided by West Regional Headquarters Korea Coast Guard.

Salvagers started to bring up the vessel, which has been lying on its side at a depth of 44 metres (144 feet), late on Wednesday, and worked through the night.

Television pictures taken from the air early on Thursday showed the white 140-metre (460-foot) long hull, coated in mud and sediment, breaking above the surface, flanked by winching barges. “The work needs to be done very cautiously,” Lee Cheol-jo, an official at the Ministry of Ocean and Fisheries, which is in charge of the operation, told a briefing. A Chinese salvage company has fitted 33 beams beneath the hull with 66 hydraulic jacks inclining the ship up.

Salvage workers in orange overalls and white hard-hats clambered over the hull fixing cables. The name Sewol could just be made out through the grime.

Lee said the ferry would be raised as high as 13 metres (42 feet) above the sea and then moved onto a semi-submersible vessel. That operation was expected to take until Friday and it would then be taken to a nearby port, but that could take up to 12 or 13 days, he said.—Reuters

Daily cyberattacks more than double to all-time high in 2016: police

TOKYO — The daily average number of cyberattacks or suspected threats swelled to a record 1,692 in 2016, more than double the previous year’s rate, police said Thursday. The figure surged as home appliances and electronic devices became more connected through “Internet of Things” technology.

In 2015, the daily average number of cyberattacks or threats detected by censors installed at Internet access points nationwide by the National Police Agency totaled 729.3. The agency started compiling data in 2010. As malware has spread overseas attacking IoT devices owned by companies, the agency is increasing its monitoring of potential hacking or preparatory acts at its 59 relevant facilities.

Meanwhile, the number of targeted emails containing a computer virus totaled 4,046 — the highest since 2013 and up 5.7 per cent from 2015.—Kyodo News

Peace in Rakhine State crucial to peace throughout the country

Tha Sein

The situation in Rakhine state is complex and challenging and this sensitive situation could be prevented from getting worse by the exercise of foresight and caution. It does not make sense to accuse the government of in-perceptions to the plight of the people of Rakhine and it is time that we pause to take an objective look to separate truth from fiction.

With a view to collecting divergent views, the Maungtaw Investigation Commission the other day met with villagers in the Cox’s Bazaar refugee camps in Bangladesh to fulfill their mission through a complete and thorough investigation. Their aim is to submit suggestions, pragmatic solutions and assessments to the Union Government. This will be a historic milestone and an important step towards the search for a peaceful solution to the conflict in Rakhine State and spur efforts to achieve a just and lasting peace throughout the country.

As national reconciliation and peace in the Rakhine State is crucial to peace and stability throughout the country, the commission is working to revise its report submitted recently to make sure that the incident is not a racial or religious conflict but simply an act detrimental to the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Myanmar, worsened by propaganda and misinformation.

As a matter of fact, the number of violent attacks has dropped due to increased security measures, however, the level of attempted violence seems to be high, and fabricated news are more to blame for the unrest. People should realize that more attacks have been foiled at the planning stage, as the connection between domestic and foreign terrorist groups has grown deeper. Along with the show of force, authorities should roll out tough measures, from daily patrols to hefty rewards for tips.

It may be observed that a series of mistakes have been made over the years, resulting in fear and distrust among the Rakhine communities, compounded by chronic underdevelopment. So, the Union Government is working closely with relevant organizations to address the issue of underdevelopment through the Central Committee for Implementation of Peace, Stability and Development of Rakhine State. Only then will the region be enjoying peace and prosperity all the more.

Fintech Deals in South East Asia Hit Record Numbers in 2016

Jonathan Nieh

The total number of venture-backed deals to fintech companies in South East Asia (i.e. Indonesia, Malaysia, Myanmar, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, and Vietnam) reached record highs in 2016 according to data released by CB Insights recently.

Deals Up, Dollars Down

2016 saw 71 total deals in the region as compared to 55 the previous year, a 29% increase.

However, the dollar amount raised fell from $177M in 2015 to $158M in 2016 suggesting the increase in the number of deals was spurred more by smaller early stage funding (e.g. seed and angel rounds). In fact, early stage funding as a percentage of the total number of deals increased from 55% in 2015 to 62% in 2016. This decline was somewhat representative of what was happening around the rest of the world but the increase in early stage funding was interesting as some other regions saw growth in more mature companies and not so much in early stage rounds.

Notably, the region saw its first Series D funding for fintech companies when 2C2P, a merchant payment platform based in Bangkok, Thailand, raised $8M in a Series D near the end of the year.

The biggest deal of the year for Southeast Asia? Momo, a mobile payments platform, led the pack with a Series B funding round that came in at $28 million. The Momo funding round saw the participation of big name investors Goldman Sachs and Standard Chartered. Payments have been a hot sector in the past 12 months.

Players like Alibaba have become more acquisitive as they look to expand their reach in other regions. As for the most active country, Singapore topped the list – something that should come as no surprise. The country has been loudly proclaiming its interest in dominating Fintech in Southeast Asia – if not the entire world. Singapore hoovered up 52% of the Fintech deals in 2016. The island nation was followed by the Philippines, a country that captured just 14% of the Fintech investment activity.

VC firm East Ventures led the group of most active investors followed by 500 Startups and Golden Gate Ventures. Investing in Fintech is really a global activity with venture firms kicking the tires of companies around the world more intent on uncovering promising technology and regional potential.

More importantly, the numbers are promising for Fintech companies in South East Asia as there has been tremendous growth year over year since 2012 when only 9 deals were closed for a total of $11M. www.crowdfundinsider.com

British police arrest seven in probe into attack on parliament

LONDON — Police arrested seven people in the investigation into a lone-wolf attacker who killed three people and injured 40 before being shot dead by police near parliament in London, Britain’s most senior counter-terrorism officer said on Thursday.

Mark Rowley said there were four dead including the attacker and 29 people still being treated in hospital, seven of whom were in a critical condition.

Police had said on Wednesday that the double stabbing toll was five in the worst such attack in Britain since 2005. The attacker sped across Westminster Bridge in a car, mowing down pedestrians and a policeman before being shot dead.

Authorities have said they are working on the assumption that the attack was inspired by Islamic State. Britons have been shocked by the fact that the attacker was able to cause such mayhem in the heart of the capital equipped with nothing more sophisticated than a hired car and a knife.

“The police and agencies that rely on for our security have forestalled a large number of these attacks in recent years, over a dozen last year,” said defence minister Michael Fallon.

“This kind of attack, this lone-wolf attack, using things from daily life, a vehicle, a knife, are much more difficult to forestall,” he told the BBC.

Police believe they know the identity of the attacker but have not named him.

“We’re dealing with an enemy, a terrorist enemy, that is not making demands or taking people hostage, but simply wants to kill as many people as possible. This is a new element to international terrorism,” Fallon said.

The terrorist attack in the mid-40s and a man in his mid-50s. The fourth dead was the assailant.

Three French high-school students aged 15 or 16, who were on a school trip to London with fellow students from Brittany, were among the injured.

French Foreign Minister Jean-Marc Ayrault was expected to arrive in London to visit them at hospital, French media reported.

There were also five South Koreans among the injured, South Korea’s foreign ministry said in Seoul.

A minute of silence to honour the victims will be held at 0933 GMT in parliament, outside police headquarters at New Scotland Yard, and in the Scottish parliament in Edinburgh.

Prime Minister Theresa May was due to make a statement to parliament on the attack at 1030 GMT.

A vigil was planned in London’s Trafalgar Square and in Paris on Thursday.

Marine Le Pen also drew fire from the political establishment for her comments about immigration, saying that events in London highlighted the importance of protecting national borders and stepping up security measures.

Fierce clashes persist in Syria ahead of renewed peace talks

BEIRUT — The Syrian army and rebels, including jihadist groups, fought in the capital Damascus and north of Hama on Thursday after the insurgents’ biggest offensive for months, underscoring the bleak prospects for peace talks which resume later in the day.

The offensive seems unlikely to reverse 18 months of steady military gains by the government, culminating in December’s capture of the rebel enclave in Aleppo, but it has shown the army’s difficulty in defending many fronts simultaneously.

Increased fighting in recent weeks despite a ceasefire brokered in December by Russia and Turkey casts further doubt on peacemaking efforts in Geneva, where talks resume on Thursday after making little progress in recent rounds. “We hope to see some serious partner on the other side of the table,” said a link, saying that events in London highlighted the importance of protecting national borders and stepping up security measures.

UN aviation agency urges balance of security risk, safety in electronics ban

MONTREAL — The United Nations’ aviation agency on Wednesday urged regulators to weigh security and safety, after the United States and Britain imposed restrictions on several carry-on electronic devices on planes coming from certain airports in Muslim-majority countries.

A news statement published by the International Civil Aviation Organization stressed a balance between security “risk” and safety concerns, because “incidents involving devices containing lithium batteries may be more easily mitigated in the cabin than in checked baggage.”

On Tuesday, the US Department of Homeland Security said passengers travelling from 10 airports in the Middle East and North Africa could no longer bring devices larger than a mobile phone such as a laptop into the main cabin, following reports that militant groups want to smuggle explosive devices inside electronic gadgets.

A spokesman for Britain’s Prime Minister Theresa May later said there would also be curbs requiring electronic items to be transported checked as checked baggage on flights from six countries in the Middle East.

The carry-on ban, while addressing security concerns, has some authorities worried about technical safety risks, such as lithium-powered goods catching fire in the hold.

“Finding an effective balance between safety and security approaches is always a priority in global aviation,” the ICAO statement said.

While Montreal-based ICAO cannot impose rules, it sets safety and security standards for international aviation that are usually followed by the organization’s 191 member countries.

In 2016, ICAO announced a prohibition on shipments of lithium-ion batteries as cargo on passenger planes. Industry experts are now working to develop new and improved packaging standards that could be used to safely transport these batteries on planes.

While lithium-powered consumer items like laptops are permitted in checked baggage, some ICAO staff have shared safety concerns with countries that are implementing or considering the electronics carry-on ban, said a source close to the aviation agency.

ICAO has not decided whether to propose turning the carry-on electronics ban into a global standard, a second source said.

Both sources spoke on condition of anonymity because they are not authorized to talk to the media.

“ICAO and its member states will continue to review the evolving aviation security environment in the coming weeks,” the statement said.— Reuters

Ministry of Electricity and Energy

MOGE is a state-owned enterprise which is responsible for the upstream oil and gas sector under the Ministry of Electricity and Energy (“MOEE”) of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar. MOGE intends to establish a joint venture with an internationally proven service company in onshore seismic acquisition services. The main goals are to strengthen MOGE’s technological know-how, upgrade its workforce, gain access to financing, adopt international best practices and widen market access.

MOGE had initially launched a public invitation for interested parties to submit a Letter of Expression of Interest (“LEO”) for a Joint Venture in Onshore Seismic Acquisition Services with MOGE in June 2014. MOGE is now launching this Request for Proposal (“RFP”) in the form of an open tender to interested parties, including but not limited to MOGE respondents from the LEO exercise conducted in June 2014, to submit a response to this Request for Proposal (the “Application”). In this context, MOGE intends to select a suitable internationally proven seismic acquisition services company as the “Joint Venture Partner” through a step-by-step process: Phase 1: Request for Proposal; Phase 2: Evaluation Process; and Phase 3: Negotiations and Signing.

Interested parties are required to submit an Application no later than 3 PM, local time (Nay Pyi Taw, Republic of the Union of Myanmar), on April 24, 2017 to the following address: MOGE Tender Committee for Joint Venture Establishment in Petroleum Services (Seismic), Complex 44, MOGE Office, Nay Pyi Taw, Republic of the Union of Myanmar.

Idina Menzel happy to ‘Let It Go’ for world tour

LOS ANGELES — Broadway star Idina Menzel says she has not yet grown tired of singing her big hit “Let It Go,” even as she embarks on a 50-city world tour.

Menzel, the star of musicals “Wicked” and “Rent,” said she gets to see new nuances in the Oscar-winning theme song from Disney’s 2013 animated film “Frozen.”

“I do that with ‘Let It Go,’ and I also use it as a time to connect with the young people in my audience and have them sing along,” Menzel told Reuters Television.

“I have a 7-year-old boy, so as a mom it’s such a great message of empowerment and teaching our kids to really be themselves so I’m just really proud of it.”

Menzel, 45, said she prefers singing to acting on stage, film or television.

“I’m the most myself, the most free when I’m singing, when I’m performing. I don’t hide behind anything. I guess I just use music to tell my story,” she said. Menzel, whose “A Christmas Carol” runs arts-based projects for children in urban areas, spoke out against US President Donald Trump’s proposed cuts in arts funding in his administration’s first budget.

“It’s sad when other people don’t realize how important it is for us as a people. We just have to do the most we can to keep it around and give money when we can,” she said.

Menzel’s tour starts in Japan on 29 March and will take her to Europe and North America through 3 September.—Reuters

Barber-turned-rapper crowned ‘Afghan Star’ in talent show

KABUL — A barber-turned-rapper has been crowned the winner of an Afghan talent show that offered its audience some relief from daily stories of insurgents and suicide bombs.

Sayed Jamal Mubarez, from Afghanistan’s long-marginalised Hazara ethnic minority, won viewers over with lyrics capturing both the hope and despair of young people living through a war against Taliban militants now in its sixteenth year.

“Afghan Star”, modelled on singing contests popular across the world, is in its 12th season on Afghanistan’s biggest private television network Tolo.

This year’s edition stood out after a female - 18-year-old singer Zulala Hashimi from the deeply conservative east of the country - reached the final for the first time, defying widespread attitudes against women performers.

But Mubarez emerged the winner later on Tuesday, looking every bit the budding rapper with his tilted red baseball cap and razor-trimmed beard.

“I am so happy...I would have been happy if Zulala had won it because in Afghanistan women are living in a restricted situation,” the 23-year-old said after accepting his award at a television studio house behind wire-topped blast walls in Kabul’s diplomatic enclave.

The solo breadwinner at his home in the northern city of Mazari-Sharif, Mubarez said he discovered rap in Iran and sprys lyrics while cutting hair.

The contest has been held inside a fortified compound for the last two series after the Taliban last year killed seven Tolo employees in a suicide attack on a staff minibus.

Newer musicians can struggle to make it big in Afghanistan, where the Taliban once banned music and many disappear for Western-style popular culture, and artists often seek the safety and freedom of a life abroad.

Mubarez told Reuters he intends to turn professional if he can find financial support, and would otherwise return to his barber shop while rapping on the side.—Reuters
CAIRO — On a desert track in eastern Egypt, camel races across the sand, urged on by their young jockeys and a convoy of cars speeding alongside them. The race is part of an annual camel festival outside the city of Ismailia, which has attracted participants from 13 Arab countries this year, as well as enthusiasts from France, Germany, Italy and Austria.

While the prize money is modest — 100,000 Egyptian pounds ($5,300) split between the winners of several races — competition among bedouin tribes is strong.

Organisers hope international interest is growing, pointing to the presence this year of Europeans who came to see how the festival was organised, though they did not take part in the races.

“It’s the first time they have come,” said Sheikh Suleiman Abu Shukri, whose tribe extends from Egypt’s Sinai peninsula into neighbouring Saudi Arabia.

Around 150 camels competed in races ranging from the relatively short 3 km (2 mile) course to a 15 km race, or three laps of the 5 km circuit.

The jockeys were mostly small children aged 11 or under.

Japanese doll ‘Licca-chan’ reflects trends at 50th anniversary show

TOKYO — Fifty years on, Japan’s beloved dress-up doll “Licca-chan” continues to captivate fans, with a new exhibit in Tokyo a reminder of how the doll has grown from being a mere toy to reflecting changing fashion.

Licca-chan was introduced in 1967 by a toymaker now known as Tomy Co. produced in 1967 by a toymaker Tomy Co. and sold as a gift from my mother when I was little, it has earned itself to me,” said Izumi, who lives in Tokyo.

The number of Licca-chan’s siblings grew and the father was portrayed as taking on a more active role in parenting such as by taking a paternal leave.

Rika Izumi, a 30-year-old woman who visited the exhibit with her mother, was one such fan. “We had the same name, and as I always received one as a gift from my mother when I was little, it has earned itself to me,” said Izumi, who lives in Tokyo.

Brook to take on Spence in Sheffield title tilt

LONDON — Britain’s Kell Brook will defend his IBF welterweight world title against mandatory American challenger Errol Spence Jr. at Sheffield United’s Bramall Lane ground on 27 May.

“It’s long been a dream of mine to fight outdoors at Bramall Lane and I’m pleased to do that in the biggest fight in the welterweight division,” the 30-year-old told reporters on Wednesday.

Brook has returned to the welterweight division after the previously unbeaten fighter was bludgeoned by Kazakhstan’s Gennady Golovkin in a one-sided WBC and IBF middleweight title bout in London last September. Texas-based Spence, 27, has won all his 21 fights, 18 by knockout.

“I saw many people talk about how I would avoid Errol Spence,” said Brook, who has won 36 of his 37 fights and will be making his fourth defence of a title won in 2014. “They don’t know me, they don’t know what I’m about.

“I’m going to show the world that I’m the best welterweight on the planet and I’m going to do it right before my people’s eyes.” — Reuters

Southgate impressed by adaptable England despite Germany loss

DORTMUND — England manager Gareth Southgate has praised his side for adapting well to his new system despite losing 1-0 to Germany in a friendly at Dortmund on Wednesday.

England, who host Lithuania at Wembley in Sunday’s World Cup qualifier, played with a 3-4-3 formation at Dortmund in Southgate’s first game in charge since being appointed full-time manager in November.

Southgate believes the squad at his disposal is comfortable switching formations to counter the opposition’s style.

“We have to reflect on a very positive performance,” the former Middlesbrough manager told BBC Radio 5 live.

“It was a good way to impose ourselves on them, to have attacking positions which could cause them problems and that’s how it panned out.

“We have exciting wide players if we want to play with wingers, and it’s very much horses for courses. We can see the strengths and weaknesses of the opposition.”

Liverpool midfielder Adam Lallana said the new system brought more balance to the team, saying it allowed the players to "express themselves.""Ultimately, Sunday is the most important game and we will have a good game-plan to attack that game," Lallana added.

“There is a lot for me to improve on, I enjoyed the system. It allowed individuals to express themselves in areas of the pitch where they felt comfortable.”

Asian Cup berth in 2019 essential for India — coach

NEW DELHI — Qualifying for the 2019 Asian Cup final is essential for India if football in the country is to continue to develop in the wake of the success of the Indian Super League, coach Stephen Constantine told Reuters.

India, currently ranked 132nd in the world, have never played in the World Cup finals and kick off the latest phase of their attempt to qualify for the Asian Cup on Tuesday when they take on Myanmar in Yangon. They last qualified for the Asian Cup in 2011 but, with the country due to host the under-17 World Cup later this year, Constantine believes booking a spot in the FIFA world rankings, which has seen players such as Nicolas Anelka and Diego Forlan come out of retirement to play.

But while the game has been showing signs of growth, the national team has achieved little.

India’s qualification for the 2011 Asian Cup in Qatar came after the country won the AFC Challenge Cup, a tournament for the lowest ranked nations in the continent.

That was their first appearance since 1984 and while they are still the dominant force in South Asia, Indian football remains a long way behind the likes of Japan, Australia, South Korea, Iran and Saudi Arabia. — Reuters
