Monetary help for pregnant women, Rakhine State given high priority

Maung Sein Lwin
(Myanmar Alin)

THE Union government announced that it will further expand care for its people by providing monetary assistance to pregnant women, with the people of Rakhine State one of the first states to receive this money.

The department of social welfare has previously implemented projects for the protection of children, the protection of women, the disabled and the aged.

"The State, this year, will perform the tasks of giving monetary subsidies to expectant mothers from the budget of the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement (SWRR), starting in early June, with Rakhine State to be categorised as the 2nd priority area (with Chin State also receiving subsidies early)," said U Ne Win, permanent secretary of the SWRR ministry at a meeting clarifying the tasks to be done linking Union Ministries, region and state cabinets and rules and regulations, held at a meeting room in the Office of Rakhine State government on Tuesday.

"In the present budget year, it has been arranged to support expectant mothers and their newly born babies up to the age of two years with Ks15,000 per month. The programme will be launched starting in Chin State, as of next June, with Rakhine State designated as the second area to receive the funding. Statistics and data will be collected in the third week of May. Following this, expecting mothers will be supported with money starting from June every quarter."

The Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement will increase the giving of subsidies more than ever and expand new projects. For now, the department of social welfare has been implementing 10 projects such as child protection, protection of women, the disabled and the aged, drugs and social protection.

Presently, those above 90 years of age will be subsidised starting in June. Those who turn 90 by the end of March 2017 will be eligible this year. The particulars, including facts and figures, has been given to respective districts and townships in regions and states. The aged in question are required to attach passport photos, national registration cards (original), and form 66 (D) of household registration certificates. Without these documents, recommendation letters need to be collected from ward or village tract administrators and two respectable town-elders at the first stage and then these must be submitted to the township administrator’s office, and then to the offices of respective regions and states.

At the third stage, particular documents must be delivered to headquarters in Nay Pyi Taw. At the fourth and final stage, lists sent after approving the 90-year-old people have to be checked and support will be given. On 8-9 May, heads of the social welfare department of regions and states will conduct training about the process, according to the ministry of social welfare, rescue and resettlement.

changing time and condition, we want to urge you to manage what can be implemented, depending upon the natural resources in the country.”

U Ohn Maung, Union Minister for Hotels and Tourism and secretary of central committee for the development of the national tourism industry, then clarified the systematic development of the tourism industry, followed by discussions by Central Committee Member and Union Minister Lt-Gen Kyaw Swe, Union Ministers U Thant Sin Maung, U Ohn Win, U Thein Swe, U Kyaw Win, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs U Kyaw Tin, Chief Ministers of Regions and States, chairman of federation for Myanmar Tourism Industry, joint-secretary of central committee and responsible officials.

In closing, U Henry Van Thio said the tourism industry in Myanmar can reach new heights of success with a coordinated effort that involves citizens, the private sector and all government ministries.

“Only if the government, entrepreneurs from the private sector and people will co-operate, will the Myanmar Tourism Industry be successful. That is, not only the respective ministry but also related ministries and respective cabinets of regions and states must work hard to achieve success. Community-based tourism is being implemented to increase creation of job opportunities and to earn more income for local people. Myanmar needs to sustainably maintain the acquired good image of our country and to further assure our good image for survival in the international tourism industry market.”

Furniture making courses to open in May

A wood-based furniture making training course 2/2017 will be opened free of charge at the wood-based industrial technology department on Pinlon road, Dagon (North) township, Yangon Region on 2nd May, according to the wood-based furniture entrepreneurs’ association.

The training course is aimed at developing human resources. The three-month training course will be opened by a wood-based furniture entrepreneurs’ association. “The trainees who attend the training course will enhance their ability. The training will widen their scope of knowledge on furniture manufacturing,” said U Nay Lin Aung, the chairman of the wood-based furniture entrepreneurs’ association.

The training course will provide knowledge ranging from cutting to making the finished products. The association is planning to send Myanmar youth abroad to attend wood-based furniture training courses.—200

Cargo ship capsizes near Bargayar Port

THE cargo ship M.V ShweLet-twar that shuttles between Yangon and Sittway capsized from its overloaded cargo near Bargayar Port in Kyunyinlone Township yesterday evening.

“There were two ships anchored at Bargayar Jetty’s boil-lard-and when the other vessel left port this ship began to sink towards in the direction of the bollard from all the cargo over the weight limit. Soon only the front part of the ship was peering above the water. Two cars were included in the cargo,” said Ko Maung Oo, a witness.

The captain and eight other staff members of the ship began their operations around 3pm and the ship began to capsize on its right side around 4pm after water entered the deck until it reached its current sunken state around 6:20pm.

Workers at the port together with responsible officials, firefighters, police officers and social relief groups endeavored to unload as much of the cargo as possible when the ship began to sink.

The ship arrived in Bargayar port on 20 April and was scheduled to sail to Sittway in Rakhine loaded with two cars, foodstuffs, 52-gallon barrels of cooking oil, and other commodities all weighing 450 tons.

No casualties occurred from the mishap but a value of Ks100 million worth of cargo was reported to be lost and security forces are currently working to secure the area of the sunken ship. Port authorities are reported to file a case against the captain of the ship in accord with the law.

Action was being taken to retrieve the sunken ship last night but strong currents are reported to be interfering with the rescue effort.—Zaw Gyi (Panita)

Internet users spend 2.4 hrs a day on ‘net

Digitai media has penetrated Myanmar rapidly in a short amount of time, making traditional print and electronic media less popular. Myanmar has increased the number of digital media users by 52 per cent, according to Kantar TNS research. About 93 per cent of people aged between 15 and 24 have smartphones, followed by those between 25 and 34, according to the survey conducted by LIRNEAsia and MIDO.—200

Tourism booms at U Bein Bridge and Taungthaman Lake

MORE local and foreign travelers are visiting U Bein Bridge and Taungthaman Lake in Amarapura Township, Mandalay District during and after Thingyan festival. Most of the tourists come from Germany, Netherland, French, Britain, Spain, Italy, United States, New Zealand, Thailand, Japan and Korea.

Visitors capture photos and videos of the ancient wooden U Bein Bridge watch the sunset view of Taungthaman Lake by boat. U Bein Bridge was very busy with the families and group visitors, whose tours were arranged by Travel and Tours Agencies based in Yangon. Local and foreign visitors bought souvenirs from U Bein Bridge and sampled the local foods, taking rest in the restaurants of Taungthaman Lake.

U Bein Bridge was built under the supervision of Mayor U Bein and construction started from 1211 ME and was completed in 1213 ME. U Bein was built with 1086 pillars and includes 4 places to take rest and is 1.2 km long. Pillars and floors were damaged overtime by the water and nature. Maintenance works are being carried out under the cooperation of the Ministry of Religious Affairs and Culture, Department of Archaeology and Mandalay Region Government.—200

Export of CMP garment products hit over US$1.8b

THE export of garment products on Cutting-Making and Packing (CMP) basis fetched US$1.836 million in last Fiscal Year 2016-2017, according to the Commerce Ministry.

In the export sector, natural gas and agricultural products individually made up 25 per cent, while the CMP garment accounted for 16 per cent, minerals for eight per cent, fisheries for five per cent and forest, animal products and other products for 21 per cent, it is learnt.

Japan plays a key role in Myanmar’s garment industry. Currently, Japan and European countries are placing the largest orders. Additionally, garment exports also go to Chinese and American markets, it is learnt.

Garment producers are eying Myanmar for investment because of the cheap labour, which sometimes causes conflict between the garment factory employer and labourers, according to the market watchers.

There are currently over 400 garment factories in Myanmar, with over 300,000 workers.—Ko Htet

Gov’t pushing to enhance private sector

THE government is effectively implementing plans to effectuate development in private sectors with five principles stated in Private Sector Development Framework, establishing a public-private partnership in a bid to improve the trade.

During the last fiscal year, export values reached over US$11.6billion, with 32 per cent from the State and 68 per cent from private sector, whereas imports hit over US$11.7billion, with six per cent from the State and 94 per cent from the private sector. The private sector is witnessed to perform better, according to the Commerce Ministry. From 1st April 2016 to 31st March 2017, Myanmar earned over US$2.2billion from agricultural products, over US$10million from animal products, over US$246million from forest products, over US$538million from minerals, over US$581million from fishery products, over US$5.3billion from finished industrial goods and over US$1.5billion from other products.

Meanwhile, the capital goods imports fetched over US$6.9billion, which is down by over US$1.3billion against that of FY 2015-2016 because the import of cement, equipments, tools and machines has decreased.

The import values of raw industrial goods including diesel, petrol and fertilizer were over US$6.1billion, whereas the import of personal goods including palm oil, medicines and beverages fetched over US$4.1billion.—Ko Khant

Weekend bazaar to launch next month

THE weekend bazaar, the special market festival for the month of May, is planned to launch three days a week in People’s Park in Yangon, with several entertainment programmes including an unplugged music show, its organiser said.

The weekend bazaar will take place in the Paukkan Food Court and Night Bazaar inside the People’s Park on every Friday, Saturday and Sunday in May between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m, with plans to sell food as well as handicrafts made by students. “This is a good opportunity for students and young adults wishing to introduce their own product ideas through the bazaar to seek more customers for their products,” said Daw Su Haung Mynt, managing director of the Paukkan Food Court and Night Bazaar.

Inspiring young people to start a business of buying and selling for raising their income during their free time is one of the key objectives of launching the weekend bazaar thrice a week, she added.—200

Hong Kong to help Myanmar set up gold exchange

THE operator of Hong Kong’s Gold Exchange will help Myanmar establish a similar stock exchange for transactions of precious metals, gold and silver in the country, said Haywood Cheung Tak-hay, president of the Chinese Gold & Silver Exchange Society.

“This is the right timing for Myanmar to establish a gold exchange, as the country is very keen on modernising its economy,” Cheung told the South China Morning Post. In addition, Myanmar lies on the path of China’s “One Belt, One Road” project, which enables the country to have access to opportunities of commodities and other forms of trade in the region, he added.

Hong Kong’s exchange has already agreed to provide advisory and technical assistance through the Hong Kong-Myanmar Chamber of Commerce, which will collect a fee. Regulatory approval is still required. The Chamber will find a way to deal with the shareholder structure on the gold exchange.

This is the very first attempt of Hong Kong’s Gold Exchange which was established in 1910, to expand its services into a foreign country. The One Belt, One Road project was introduced in 2013 with an aim at enhancing trade and infrastructure, including roads and railways, to link 60 countries in Asia (including Myanmar) and Europe with China.

Trade with China constitutes 40 per cent of total trade in Myanmar. Small and medium-sized enterprises from Hong Kong can enjoy business opportunities investing in Myanmar, said Albert Oung, the chairman of this Chamber. The price of gold has recently increased. Rising political uncertainties in the country resulted in an increase in gold investors.

Hong Kong is a platform for mainland and international investors to trade gold in different currencies ranging from US dollars and Hong Kong dollars to Yuan, said Jrearz, vice chairman of the Chamber.—Mon Mon
Four ministries hold press conference on one year performance

According to the Human Development Report 2016, Myanmar was at Low Human Development Index Rank in 2015 and was upgraded to Medium Human Development Index Rank in 2016.

Ministry of Information
Union Minister for Information Dr. Pe Myint said today’s press conference is one of the ministry’s performance. Conducting such press conferences is the duty of the ministry. Press conferences were held throughout the year in the presence of the people, the Ministry of Information spoke persons and media to meet and to set up good relationship between the two. This is to set up the culture of meeting between the three pillars and the fourth pillar. As we pass through this year, I can see that this culture has also been fairly established.

Suggestion was made for officials to answer to the media’s question and for the media to publish their findings to the public effectively.

Four ministries jointly held a press conference in Nay Pyi Taw on their performance in the first one-year period.

Ministry of Commerce
Union Minister for Commerce Dr Than Myint disclosed that Myanmar’s agricultural product export is still relying on narrow market of neighbouring countries though the country has seen expanded market.

“Myanmar is facing a decrease in income from export of agricultural products and loss of tax due to illegal export to neighbouring countries, meanwhile its natural resources are being depleted,” said Dr Than Myint.

Meanwhile, illegal import of foodstuff has damaged local and medium businesses and has caused health hazards to local people, he added.

The Ministry of Commerce participated in the 8th World Rice Conference in Thailand and could find 53 new export markets including Africa, according to the ministry.

Since Myanmar received the EU’s Generalised Scheme of Preferences (GSP), the ministry has been working to export its agricultural products to 28 EU countries.

In the 2016-2017 fiscal year, the country saw a decrease of about US$1.4 billion in the natural gas export and US$200 million in the jade and mineral export, though it earned extra US$480 million in the agricultural and fisheries and livestock export sector.

Agricultural products export in the 2016-2017 FY reached more than US$2.9 billion, an increase of US$315 million compared with the previous FY.

Ministry of Education
Due to the National Educa- tion Law, the education period in Myanmar is exactly in line with ASEAN member countries said Union Minister for Education Dr. Myo Thein Gyi.

He said the priority works in the government education sector reform are in providing early childhood education, improving the teaching staff, implementing national curriculum, improving the teachers, teaching methods, textbook, including the English language subjects, temporarily suspending the education of foreign languages and removing the ten teachers requirement from the state universities.

In off-school and life-long education programs, NAY Pyi Taw Council and 50 townships conducted 2080 teaching circles for 205,727 persons, 7 townships in Kayah State conducted 455 teaching circles with 455 teachers for 5,335 persons and 9 townships in Taunggyi conducted 2,596 teaching circles with 2,680 teachers for 26,794 persons.

Ministry of Education, Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock & Irrigation and Ministry of Hotels &Tourism set up Nyan U Shwe Vocational Training Institute (NTTI) and conducted hotel reception basic training, housekeeping training, food and beverage training, training on producing farm and plantation products under the GAP system, training on planting, fish breeding training, training on repair and maintaining single cylinder engine, basic electrical and computer trainings.

According to the ministry, production in the agricultural sector is 10% lower compared with the previous quarter.

Ministry of Industry
U Ko Ko Lwin, Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Industry said Strategic Planning and Research (SPR) in accordance with the norms and standards of the WHO was introduced to pharmaceutical factories of the ministry to manufacture 48 drugs, including 14 APIs in the Good Manufacturing Practice (GMP) and distribute directly to Ministry of Health and Sports and other ministries.

Bogus drugs with BPI trademarks and expired drugs in the markets were investigated, tested, and canceled in September and action taken against the bogus drug makers. In order to prevent production of BPI trademarked bogus drugs and provide a better service, a package of 1, 2, 3 and 4 medical powder, 64 injection vials were produced in new packaging.

Morphine sulfate syrup and morphine sulfate tablets for cancer patients are undergoing stability test and measures are being taken for producing Tenofovir (300 mg) for HIV and Hepatitis B patients. A new production line for packaging equipment and instrument were produced and distributed to Ministry of Health & Sports. Hospital beds and medical equipment were tested and it is being produced under a pilot scheme.

In the agricultural sector, the ministry has innovated farm equipment according to the need of farmers and changes have been made in the hydraulic system and clutch of Zwe tractor, powered tillers, harvesters and small rice mills and sold to the market.

For private sector industrial development, state-owned factories and mills went into partnership with private sector through inviting both local and foreign investments in order to secure technology and capital.

59 out of 118 factories under the supervision of the Ministry of Industry are now running in public-private partnership.

In an attempt to develop financing to small and medium enterprises in Myanmar, 456 business owners were provided with special government loans and 189 business owners were provided with Two Step Loan from Japan. According to the Central Bank of Myanmar Law, repayment period is one year but the repayment period for the special government loan and Japan’s Two Step Loan was set at 5 years for increased circulation of investment.

Approvals were given to 648 business owners to obtain loan. In 2016 only CB bank practiced Credit Guarantee Insurance (CGI) system but discussion were conducted with KBZ Bank and Eamil and Medium Industrial Development Bank (SMIDB) who also wanted to practice the CGI system. Discussions are held with Thailand’s Kasikorn Bank to cooperate in development of Myanmar SME.

Excerpts from the Q and A session of the press conference

Ministry of Education

Deputy Minister U Win Maw Htun from the Ministry of Education answered questions on the National Education Bylaw, granting of licenses to teachers, the expected number of applicants of teachers in the coming year and criticism of giving passing grade for passing in only one academic subject. The Deputy Minister replied that the academic bylaw has been drafted and is being applied according to each sector while teachers will be granted licenses or another form of professional acknowledgement after the Private School Act has been ratified. Approving of new teachers in the 2017-2018 academic year will be dependent on the requirements of each district. As to the complaints of giving pass grade for passing in only one subject, the deputy minister and other officials acknowledged that it is valid only for the final examinations as progress evaluation is carried out throughout the whole ten academic months. There should be increased awareness of the difference between doing well on the exam and actually learning something, which is why the evaluation reports throughout the entire academic year, is added at the end of the 2-hour long final examination.

The Deputy Minister also replied to a question posed on whether universities will move from a central administration system and if the Yangon University Students’ Union (YUSU) will be reestablished, saying that currently universities already have free administration with only the financial sector administrated by the Union Minister, while the budget for the construction of the Ks5.2 billion YUSU building has already been approved.

Ministry of Information

Union Minister for Information Dr. Pe Myint replied to a question regarding the publishing of interviews of one-year performance of the incumbent government in state newspapers saying that every ministry reviewed their functionalities and communications with the media in the on-year period so that they can express their views on politics, commerce and economy as well as confer new year wishes at the same time. This procedure has nothing to do with policies but is just a normal procedure for the ministries to give feedback on the government’s performance while showcasing prominent figures.

Director-General U Myint Hlaing MRTV replied to a question on granting five private companies as content providers saying that the companies were chosen after careful, transparent evaluation on financial stability, legal liability, and ability to follow current and future policies implemented. Only five channels were available for grant and the selection was made based on fair, unbiased judgment.

Dr. Pe Myint replied to a question asking on the National Literature Award saying there are many varieties under National Literature Award and each sector had a subcommittee formed for its evaluation, comprised of well-known literary figures as committee members while working under the rules and regulations of the appointed groups. The Union Minister also replied to a question asking about the code of ethics of news and media personnel saying it is the responsibility of the people working in the media business to uphold their code of ethics.

The Ministry of Information collaborates with concerned organisations as it is the ministry’s duty to promote development of the media. Although the media business has improved in the past 4-5 years there are still areas of weaknesses and to improve the code of ethics it is essential for everybody to work together, stating the Ministry of Information is always ready to extend a helping hand.

The ministry is trying its best to assist in covering news in Rakhine State and majority of news about the Rakhine State covered by the foreign media are one-sided news based on unreliable sources.

With regard to the question about media access to the Rakhine State, the Union Minister replied that the ministry is trying its best to assist in reporting news in Rakhine State and majority of the news about the Rakhine State covered by the foreign media are one-sided news based on unreliable sources.

The report issued by International Crisis Group (ICG) highlights the problems in Northern Rakhine State by interviewing the locals and using the interpreters capable of speaking and understanding local language, be added. The journalists residing in Rakhine State will understand the root-cause of the conflict at that time and the local correspondents failed to report the real situation they faced in Maungtaw District while international media were broadcasting the false and unreliable news, he said.

The print media are struggling to survive in the age of technological advancement as online media industry is booming in the world. He underlined that the move is intended to disseminate information on the latest developments and undertakings being carried out by the incumbent government for the people and the readers at home and abroad in a rapid manner on real time and to implement the goals of the ministry.

Ministry of Industry

Regarding the question on the status of anesthetics production in BPI pharmaceuticals, Permanent Secretary U Ko Ko Lwin of the Ministry for Industry replied anesthetics for cancer patients include the production of morphine and codeine and morphology imported and around 6,500 grams of raw drugs for codeine will be supplied by the Ministry of Home Affairs as agreed upon.

The latest technology is being used in the production for the two drugs and will be sold locally at an affordable price. Meanwhile, production of Tenovifor (300 mg), used in treating HIV/AIDS and Hepatitis B, is being tested in Yangon Pharmaceuticals Factory by using technology from India and is in the process of getting an FDA license for commercial distribution. BPI focuses on high quality, safety and effectiveness in its pharmaceutical productions.

The production status of glass tables incorporating Burmese lacquer ware, kanote drawings and traditional carvings designed by the State Counselor and is mass-produced in the Kyunse Glass Factory with the objective of acquiring a market space for Burmese traditional arts while also using high quality glass. In the six months since production 20 tables have been sold with prices ranging from Ks1 Lakh to Ks2 Lakh depending on the designs. Further production will be carried out according to market demand. —Myanmar News Agency newspaper to be loved freedom of press.

Russia says US missile strike on Syria was a threat to its forces

Moscow — Russian Defence Minister Sergei Shoigu complained on Wednesday that a US missile strike on a Syrian air base earlier this month had posed a threat to Russian troops and was forcing Moscow to take extra measures to protect them. Speaking at a security conference in Moscow, Shoigu restated Russia’s view that the strike — which Washington conducted in response to what it said was a deadly chemical weapons attack by Syrian government forces — was “a crude violation of international law.”

US officials said at the time that they had informed Russian forces ahead of the strikes. No Russian personnel were injured in the attack.

As well as housing Syrian military jets, satellite imagery suggested that the base which was struck was home to Russian special forces and military helicopters, part of the Kremlin’s efforts to help the Syrian government fight Islamic State and other militant groups.

“Washington’s action created a threat to the lives of our servicemen who are fighting against terrorism in Syria,” said Shoigu.

“Such steps are forcing us to take extra measures to ensure the safety of Russian forces.” He did not specify what those measures were.

The Russian Defence Ministry said after the US strike that Syrian air defences would be beefed up, while Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev complained that the attack was just one step away from clashing with the Russian military. — Reuters

Trump administration to brief full US Congress on North Korea policy

WASHINGTON — Tradition so far: a clear strategy for dealing with a major national security threat.

As a standoff escalated over the reclusive Asian nation’s development of nuclear weapons and long-range ballistic missiles, President Donald Trump invited all 100 members of the Senate to attend the session with Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, Secretary of Defence Jim Mattis, Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats and Marine General Joseph Dunford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

While administration officials typically travel to the Capitol building to brief lawmakers on national security issues, on Wednesday they all opted to deal with the Senate in one session where four top officials will meet with them simultaneously.

The same four officials will then go to Capitol Hill to brief the entire House at 5 pm EDT (2100 GMT), a senior House aide said.

“I hope and expect that it is worth the time of the trip and that we’ll hear things we don’t know, and that we’ll come out of it better informed,” he will see,” said Senator Chris Coons, a Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The meeting was set for one day after a North Korean holiday on Tuesday marking the 85th anniversary of the founding of its army, while North Korea has in the past staged nuclear or missile tests to mark the day, this year it conducted a major live-fire exercise.

It also comes as Trump tries to put the best face on his first 100 days in office, a period in which the president signed a variety of executive orders to roll back Democratic policies but has been defined by an absence of any major legislative achievements.

Lawmakers, including some of Trump’s fellow Republicans, also have said they want the early months of his presidency have been marked by a lack of communication with Congress, partly because the administration has been slow to fill key posts and partly because Trump has been slow to develop policy positions.

Although the White House has downplayed the importance of Saturday’s 100-day anniversary, Trump will mark the day with a rally in Pennsylvania.

White House spokesman Sean Spicer said Tillerson and the other officials they hoped the administration would seek to deal with Pyongyang through diplomacy, rather than the use of force.

Republican Senator Lindsey Graham said that if Trump has “red line” on North Korea, he needs to make that clear.

“North Korea will never stop their ambitions to deliver a nuclear weapon to America until the cost of doing so is greater than the benefit.”

And if China and North Korea both believe that President Trump will never allow that to happen, then you have a chance to peacefully solve this,” he said.

Graham and fellow Republican Senator John McCain, both defense hawks who have been Trump critics, discussed North Korea with Trump at dinner at the White House on Monday night and said they were impressed with his resolve. — Reuters

Bulgaria opts for Swedish Gripen combat jets

SOFIA — Bulgaria has decided to start talks with Sweden to acquire eight new Gripen combat jets made by SAAB, interim deputy prime minister Stefan Yanev said on Wednesday.

The Balkan country has picked the Swedish offer ahead of offers to buy secondhand US F-16s from Portugal, equipped with US weapons, and secondhand Eurofighter Typhoon fighters from Italy.

A deal is estimated to be worth about 1.5 billion euros ($836 million).

A special commission for the negotiations is expected to be set up within a week, Yanev said. The talks with Sweden will be held by Bulgaria’s new government, which is expected to take office next week. — Reuters

British PM May’s Conservatives up 6 pct points on 49 pct, matching Thatcher’s 1983 lead — Ipsos MORI

LONDON — British Prime Minister Theresa May’s Conservative Party has increased its lead over the opposition Labour Party and now has 49 per cent support ahead of a 8 June election, a lead equivalent to that held by Margaret Thatcher in 1983, Ipsos MORI said.

The telephone poll of 1,004 adults conducted from 21-25 April put May’s party up 6 percentage points on 49 per cent, Labour down 4 percentage points to 26 per cent, the Liberal Democrats unchanged on 13 per cent and the United Kingdom Independence Party down 2 percentage points on 4 per cent.

Gideon Skinner, head of political research at Ipsos MORI, said May’s lead matched the biggest lead ever recorded for the Conservatives in an election campaign back in 1983. In that election, Thatcher won a majority of 144 seats. — Reuters

France’s Hollande tells ministers to ensure big election defeat for Le Pen

PARIS — French President Francois Hollande told government ministers on Wednesday to do all they can to ensure the biggest defeat possible for far right leader Marine Le Pen in the 7 May vote for the presidency against Emmanuel Macron.

Hollande has asked ministers “to fully commit themselves in the election campaign to ensure that Marine Le Pen has the lowest possible score,” the spokesman, Stephane Le Foll, said.

Hollande, who has urged people to vote for Macron, asked each minister to “totally mobilised in this campaign,” Le Foll added. — Reuters

Sarkozy says will vote for Macron in French election

PARIS — French conservative former prime minister Nicolas Sarkozy said on Wednesday he would vote for centrist presidential candidate Emmanuel Macron.

Sarkozy said in a message on social networks he was doing so because the alternative in the 7 May run-off was Marine Le Pen, leader of the far-right National Front, and that his vote for Macron was not an endorsement of the centrist contender’s programme. — Reuters
Erdogan says Turkey could reconsider its position on Europe

ANKARA — President Tayyip Erdogan told Reuters on Tuesday that Turkey would reconsider its position on joining the European Union if it was kept waiting much longer and if the current hostile mentality of some member states persists.

Erdogan said a decision on Tuesday by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE), a leading human rights body, to put Turkey on a watch list was “entirely political” and Ankara did not recognise the move.

He said he was ready to take the question of EU accession to a referendum and that Turkey could not wait indefinitely after 54 years at the door.

“In Europe, things have become very serious in terms of the extent of Islamophobia. The EU is closing its doors on Turkey and Turkey is not closing its doors on anybody,” Erdogan said in an interview at the presidential palace in Ankara.

“If they are not acting sincerely we have to find a way out. Why should we wait any longer? We are talking about 54 years,” he said.

“The UK asked her people and they voted for Brexit ... They have peace of mind, they are walking towards a new future, and the same thing was conducted by Norway ... and the same thing can be applied for Turkey too.”

It is a critical week for Turkish-EU relations. EU lawmakers will debate ties on Wednesday, while the bloc’s foreign ministers will discuss the issue on Friday and EU leaders are expected to exchange views at a meeting on Brexit on Saturday.

Erdogan said he would be closely watching.

“I am very curious as to how the EU is going to act vis-a-vis this last (PACE) resolution,” he said, criticising EU member states that have called for an end to accession talks.

He said Turkey was still committed to negotiations.

“There is not a single thing that we are not ready to do, the minute they ask for it. Whatever we wish, we do. But still they are keeping us at the door,” he said. Erdogan pointed to the French presidential election, in which far-right leader Marine Le Pen has threatened to take France out of the European Union, and said the bloc was “on the verge of dissolution, of breaking up.”

“One or two countries cannot stop the EU alive. You need a country like Turkey, a different country symbolising a different faith, this would make them very strong,” he said.

“But the EU member states don’t seem to realise this fact. They are finding it very difficult to absorb a Muslim country like Turkey.” — Reuters

Israel grants work visa to Human Rights Watch official after initial denial

JERUSALEM — Israel gave a one-year work visa to a Human Rights Watch researcher on Wednesday after initially denying him a permit and accusing the organisation of engaging in “Palestinian propaganda”, the group said.

The decision in February to deny Omar Shakir a work permit was criticised by the United States. Shakir, a US citizen, received the visa on arrival at Tel Aviv’s Ben-Gurion airport and he will take up his position as the New York-based rights group’s Israel and Palestine director.

“We welcome this opportunity to work in Israel and Palestine alongside vigorous national human rights organisations,” Iain Levine, executive deputy director for programs at Human Rights Watch, said in a statement on the group’s website.

“Israeli authorities do not always agree with our findings, but, in facilitating the ability of our staff to carry out our research and documentation, they have taken an important step to safeguard the principle of transparency and demonstrate their openness to criticism.”

Foreign Ministry spokesman Emmanuel Nahshon said in February that the decision to deny Shakir a work permit stemmed from HRW’s work “at the service of Palestinian propaganda”.

But he also said the application may be reconsidered if an appeal was lodged, and Shakir was allowed to enter Israel on a tourist visa on 6 March for a 10-day stay. Final approval for a one-year permit was given on 20 April, HRW said.

The US State Department said after Shakir was banned that it strongly disagreed with Israel’s characterisation of the group, which it considers a credible human rights organisation.

In its statement, HRW said it has had regular access to Israel and the occupied West Bank for nearly three decades, with staff and offices in Jerusalem, Ramallah, and Gaza for much of this period. It said that since 2008, Israel has refused it access to Gaza, which is run by Hamas Islamists, except for one visit in 2016. — Reuters

Islamic State developing new weapons despite losses — arms monitor

ERBIL — Islamic State militants have developed an improvised explosive device (IED) that can be launched from rifles or dropped from an aerial drone, an arms monitoring group said on Wednesday.

Conflict Armament Research (CAR) said the Sunni militant group was “promoting the development of ‘own-brand’ weapons” to provide its insurgents with otherwise unavailable armaments.

“The (IED) can be thrown, launched from an improvised rifle attachment, or in its most recent phases of development, dropped from a commercial, off-the-shelf unmanned aerial vehicle (UAV) or drone,” CAR said in a report following visits to Mosul in November, February and March.

Iraqi military and elite counter-terrorism forces launched a sweeping, US-backed offensive in October to retake the city, Islamic State’s last major urban stronghold in Iraq seized in a lightning offensive in 2014.

They have retaken most of Mosul, including its half east of the Tigris River, and surrounded the militants in its northwest quarter including the Old City, home to the Grand al-Nuri mosque where IS declared a “caliphate” over parts of Iraq and Syria.

CAR, which identifies and tracks arms and ammunition in war zones, reported in December that IS had been making weapons on a scale and sophistication matching national military forces and that it had standardised production across its realm.

The monitor’s findings suggested IS was centrally managing the design and production of improvised weapons with the ability to test its systems on the field and refine them as well as use new technologies such as drones.

The report said Islamic State was using the battle for Mosul to field-test different types of weapons, an important step in any weapons research and development programme.

“Evidence of research and development by IS forces, compiled by CAR since 2014, suggests that such adaptions are likely to continue and will result in further UAV innovations in the near future, potentially for use in theatres other than Iraq.” — Reuters

South African court rules nuclear plan unlawful, must be set aside

CAPE TOWN — South Africa’s controversial push to build a fleet of new nuclear plants suffered a setback on Wednesday after the High Court set aside the procurement process with a resolution and a promise to review the plan.

South Africa, which has the continent’s only nuclear power station, has asked power utility Eskom to procure an additional 9,600 megawatts (MW) of new capacity as it diversifies its energy mix away from ageing coal-fired plants.

The expansion plan is opposed by environmental and clean-energy groups, while some economists have said the country’s ailing economy cannot afford to build new nuclear plants whose costs are estimated around 1 trillion rand ($76 billion).

Judge Lee Bozalek said any information to kickstart the procurement process was set aside as the decision to deny the application was unconstitutional and unlawful.

In late 2014, then energy minister Tina Joemat-Pettersson signed an Intergovernmental Agreement, with Russia state nuclear company Rosatom, saying the countries would cooperate in reactors with total installed capacity of up to 9,600 MW.

It was not immediately clear whether the government would appeal the ruling.

Both Eskom and the Department of Energy declined to comment on the ruling. — Reuters

Putin points out Russian weapons’ top performance in Syria helped boost exports

RYBINSK — Russia’s weapons export contracts have been growing largely on the effective use of military hardware in the anti-terror operation in Syria, President Vladimir Putin said at a meeting of the military-industrial commission on Tuesday.

Interest towards Russia’s weapons has been growing around the world, which is seen in the volume of contracts, he stated. “This is largely a result of the more effective use of our weapons in real combat conditions, including the anti-terrorist operation in Syria,” Putin said. “This opportunity for gaining a firmer foothold on the world market of armaments should not to be missed.”

“As for the production of various kinds of weapons, our defence companies are almost completely loaded with orders from the Defence Ministry so they have been facing difficulties in fulfilling orders related to military cooperation with other countries,” Putin aid. “I would like additional measures to be taken to ensure general-purpose weapons export,” he added.

According to Putin, if today Russia rejects foreign orders, it may lose prospective partners, as well as its place on the market.

The Russian president also said that the government needed to coordinate the work of the Defence Ministry, the Federal Service for Military and Technical Cooperation and defence companies, so that they could fulfill defence procurement orders on time.

Army requires new types of armaments and reconnaissance systems, Putin said. He suggested discussing on Tuesday a number of major issues, including those that concern the creation of new armaments and military hardware, “first of all for general purpose forces, and for reconnaissance and information support systems.” “Recent events have once again demonstrated that these armaments are much-in-demand in the modern army,” Putin said. He also asked representatives of the military-industrial complex to report how they comply with the requirements set by the Defence Ministry to these and other new generation armaments, what tasks have been set to design bureaus and defence enterprises, and “what will be the time framework for their implementation and how much this will cost the budget.”

Crabs invade Cuba’s Bay of Pigs

BAY OF PIGS, Cuba — Cuba’s Bay of Pigs has been invaded again, this time not by US-backed anti-Castro forces, but by millions of red, yellow and black landcrabs. Each year, after the first spring rains, the crabs march for days from the surrounding forests to the bay on Cuba’s southern coast to spawn in the sea, wreaking havoc along the way.

At dawn and dusk they emerge, scuttling sideways toward the sea, climbing up house walls and carpeting the coastal road that curves around the bay. The stench of crushed crab fills the air and their sharp shells puncture car tires.

“Thirty to 40 can enter without you even realizing it,” said Edio Villariz, who runs a food hut opposite the sea, which does not serve up crab meat. Cubans believe this type is toxic. “We have to always keep the door shut.”

The Bay of Pigs, where in 1961 Cuban exiles landed in a failed attempt to end Fidel Castro’s revolution, lies within a national park where 80 per cent of Cuba’s endemic birds, along with crocodiles and other wildlife, can be observed.

With its deep sinkholes, coral reefs and turquoise waters, the bay is known as one of Cuba’s best spots for diving. Visitors have spiked in recent years, in tandem with the overall tourism boom since the US-Cuban detente.

“It’s very surprising and impressive to see so many crabs in one go and to watch them crossing so quickly,” said 36-year-old French tourist Emile Lannegrand, adding it was “a little heartbreaking” to see so many crushed on the road.

As cars speed by, some swerving to avoid the 10-legged crustaceans, the cracks of carcasses zing through the air.

That does not threaten the survival of the two prolific species, Geacarcinus rusticola and lateralis, which are not endemic to Cuba, said Jorge Luis Jimenez, a science ministry official who works in the park.

Similar crab migrations occur in other parts of Cuba at the same time of the year, as well as in some other special ecosystems such as Australia’s Christmas Island.

At the Bay of Pigs, the adult crabs return to their forest burrows after releasing clouds of eggs and are joined a couple of months later by the baby crabs which hatched at sea, said Jimenez.

For locals, the crab invasion is good business. Ito Molina, 45, said tourists would happily pay $10 for tire repair, a princely sum compared with the average state salary of around $25 per month.

For patches, he applies cornmeal. The unpalatable but useful crabs in Cuba given how cheap and readily available they are. “All the cars pass along this road, and they all get punctures,” he said. “So we stand there and repair the tires.”

Death toll in Venezuela’s unrest rises to 26

CARACAS — Two Venezuelan men died on Tuesday from gunshots at political demonstrations, bringing to 26 the number of fatalities around this month’s protests against President Nicolas Maduro’s socialist government.

The state prosecutor’s office said Orlando Medina, 23, was gunned down on a street in western Lara state during a protest local media identified as anti-Maduro.

Luis Manquez, 52, died in the Andean state of Merida in the early morning after being shot on Monday at a pro-Maduro rally, state ombudsman Tarek Saab said. In more than three weeks of chaos since Venezuela’s opposition launched street protests, 15 people have died in violence around demonstrations and 11 others in night-time lootings, the state prosecutor’s office said on Tuesday.

Political activists and Venezuelan media have reported more deaths, but those have not been confirmed. The ruling Socialist Party accuses foes of seeking a violent coup with US connivance, while the opposition says Maduro is a dictator repressing peaceful protest. With near-daily demonstrations by both opponents and supporters of Maduro, there have been fatalities on both sides, as well as one National Guard sergeant killed during a protest.

“Any death hurts, government or opposition,” chief state prosecutor Luisa Ortega said in a speech. Four fatalities were adolescents and 437 people had also been injured.

The opposition’s main demands are for elections, the release of jailed activists and autonomy for the opposition-ruled legislature. But protests are also fueled by a crippling economic crisis in the oil-exporting nation of some 30 million people.

The unrest is Venezuela’s worst since 2014, when 43 people died in months of mayhem sparked by protests against Maduro, the 54-year-old successor to late leader Hugo Chavez.

Nearly 1,500 people have been arrested, with 801 still detained as of Tuesday, rights group Penal Forum said. Trying to keep the pressure on Maduro, the opposition Democratic Unity Coalition is planning a march on Wednesday toward downtown Caracas. Past attempts to reach that area have been blocked by security forces using teargas and rubber bullets against masked youths hurling stones and Molotov cocktails. “The Venezuelan people will stay in the street until there is an election timetable, a humanitarian aid channel, freedom for political prisoners and independence for public institutions, especially the National Assembly,” said Ismael Garcia, a legislator with opposition party Justice First. Thousands of red-shirted Maduro supporters marched in the state of Falcon on Tuesday, chanting pro-government slogans and denouncing the opposition for violence.—Reuters
US military begins moving THAAD missile defence to South Korea site — media

SEUL — The US military has started moving parts of the controversial THAAD anti-missile defence system into a planned deployment site in South Korea, Yonhap news agency reported on Wednesday, amid high tensions over North Korea’s missile and nuclear programmes.

The United States and South Korea have agreed to deploy THAAD in response to the threat of missile launches by North Korea, but China says it will do little to deter the North while destabilizing the regional security balance.

Trailer trucks carrying parts of the Terminal High Altitude Area Defence (THAAD) system entered the site on what had been a golf course in the county of Seongju in a southern region of South Korea, Yonhap news agency and YTN television reported.

South Korean defence ministry officials and US military officials could not immediately be reached for confirmation.

The United States began moving the first elements of the advanced missile defence system into South Korea in early March after the North test-launched four ballistic missiles.

But the US and South Korean militaries have been reluctant to publicly discuss the progress of the deployment as candidates in a May presidential election debated whether the move should go ahead or be delayed until after the vote.

South Korea has said China has discriminated against some South Korean companies in retaliation against the deployment.

Former Trump adviser Flynn likely broke law with Russia trip — lawmakers

WASHINGTON — Former White House national security adviser Michael Flynn likely broke the law by failing to get permission to be paid for a trip to Russia in 2015, the leaders of a House of Representatives committee said on Tuesday.

During the visit, Flynn, a retired lieutenant general who advised Donald Trump’s presidential campaign, dined with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

“General Flynn had a duty and an obligation to seek and obtain permission to receive money from foreign governments,” Jason Chaffetz, the Republican chairman of the House Oversight Committee, told reporters. “It does not appear to us that that was ever sought, nor did he ever get that permission.”

The oversight panel is looking into whether Flynn fully disclosed payments from Russian, Turkish or other foreign sources.

As a former military officer, you simply cannot take money from Russia, Turkey or anybody else.

And it appears as if he did take that money. It was inappropriate and there are repercussions for the violation of law,” Chaffetz said.

Flynn was forced to resign on 13 February for failing to disclose talks with Sergei Kislyak, the Russian ambassador to the United States, about US sanctions on Moscow and misleading Vice President Mike Pence about the conversations, which occurred in December before Trump took office.

He is a subject in investigations by intelligence committees in the House and Senate, as well as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, into allegations Russia meddled in the 2016 US election. Russia has denied the allegations, which have cast a shadow over the first 100 days of Trump’s presidency.

Representative Elijah Cummings, the top Democrat on the oversight panel, said it also appeared as if Flynn had not fully disclosed the payments after the fact as required, saying a failure to do so would be a felony.—Reuters

Macron’s campaign team confirms cyberattacks, says no data stolen

PARIS — French presidential candidate Emmanuel Macron’s campaign team on Wednesday confirmed it had been the target of at least five advanced cyberattack operations since January, which it said had failed to compromise any campaign data.

“Emmanuel Macron is the only candidate in the French presidential campaign to be targeted,” Macron’s “En Marche!” party said in a statement. “It’s no coincidence if Emmanuel Macron, the last remaining progressive candidate in this election is the priority target.” Macron’s campaign cited as evidence the results of a study by security firm Trend Micro, which said it had found proof that the spy group, dubbed “Paw Storm,” had targeted its campaign.—Reuters

Eighth time lucky: NASA launches super balloon to collect near space data

WELLINGTON — A stadium-sized pressure balloon launched by NASA in New Zealand began collecting data in near space on Wednesday, beginning a 100-day planned journey after several launch attempts were thwarted by storms and cyclones.

The balloon, designed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to detect ultra-high energy cosmic particles from beyond the galaxy as they penetrate the earth’s atmosphere, is expected to circle the planet two or three times.

“The origin of these particles is a great mystery that we’d like to solve. Do they come from massive black holes at the centre of galaxies? Tiny, fast-spinning stars? Or somewhere else?”

Angela Olinto, a University of Chicago professor and lead investigator on the project, said in a statement.

The balloon’s monitoring was only the start of a long quest which would involve a space mission currently being designed by NASA, she added.

The balloon, launched on Tuesday in Wanaka, a scenic spot on New Zealand’s South Island, will collect data from 34 km (21.1 miles) above the earth.

Family ties test the unconventional ‘Guardians of the Galaxy’

LOS ANGELES — After causing havoc in the universe and saving it from destruction, Marvel’s “Guardians of the Galaxy” are back in a new adventure that takes the unconventional group of friends on a quest to discover their family ties.

“Guardians of the Galaxy Vol 2,” which begins its international rollout on Tuesday, sees rogue thief Peter Quill, green-skinned warrior Gamora, the muscle-bound Drax, mischievous Rocket Raccoon and baby tree-alien Groot split up after being pursued by a gold-skinned villain named Ayesha.

The plot centres on Peter’s long-awaited reunion with his father, an ancient god called Ego (Kurt Russell), who is the life force of a planet, and his tense relationship with his adopted father figure, the fin-headed Yondu (Michael Rooker).

“The most compelling way to find out something about a person you’re interested in is to explore their relationships,” Chris Pratt, who plays Peter, told Reuters.

“I can’t think of too many movies or stories on the screen that have honoured that type of relationship, so it’s really kind of cool if you like a contemporary family story.”

Following the catastrophic events of the first film in which Groot sacrifices himself to save the Guardians, the sequel sees the powerful tree alien as a baby sapling, changing the dynamic between the five heroes.

Baby Groot offers up comedic relief during high-stakes scenes, such as a battle with a giant monster in which the tree sapling dances his way through the chaos and delivers tiny roars.

“A family, a family,” said Dave Bautista, who plays Drax.

After spending much of the first film trying to kill each other, warring sisters Gamora (Zoe Saldana) and Nebula (Karen Gillan) find themselves in close quarters in “Guardians Vol 2” and faced with their underlying hatred towards their adopted father Thanos.

“They went through something very traumatic and they dealt with it in different ways,” Saldana said.

Gillan added that the “angry, bitter and twisted” Nebula is more sympathetic in the sequel.

“We start to see the cracks in her exterior and we learn about her bad relationship with her father and her sister and all the layers are chipped away,” she said.—Reuters

Actress Zoe Saldana welcomes ‘Avatar’ sequel filming announcement

LONDON — Actress Zoe Saldana is happy release dates for the long-anticipated sequels to 2009 box office smash hit “Avatar” have been announced, joking she does not want to get “too old” to not be able to do her own stunts in the adventure fantasy.

At the weekend, the official “Avatar” Facebook page posted a photo of director James Cameron with a production team beneath a caption reading: “Great to be working with the best team in the business! Avatar takes flight as we begin concurrent production on four sequels.

“The journey continues on 18 December, 2020, 17 December, 2021, 20 December, 2024 and 19 December, 2025!”

Speaking to Reuters at the London premiere of “Guardians of the Galaxy Vol 2” on Monday night, Saldana welcomed the announcement.

“I’m happy that it’s finally here because...I don’t want to get too old and shoot it because I won’t be able to do my stunts,” the 38-year-old actress, who played Neytiri, said. “If I haven’t warmed up, I can’t do a stunt to save my life.”

Set in 2154 on the magical moon Pandor and offering plenty of visual effects, “Avatar,” which also starred Sam Worthington and Sigourney Weaver, took in some $2.8 billion at box offices worldwide, smashing records.

A sequel had been first eyed for 2014 but was delayed.

‘Star Wars: Episode IX’ gets May 2019 release date: Disney

LOS ANGELES — The final film in the new “Star Wars” trilogy, “Star Wars: Episode IX,” will be released in May 2019, movie studio Walt Disney Co said on Tuesday.

The 24 May release date marked a shift in strategy for Disney, whose two previous new entries in the sci-fi adventure have all been set for release in mid-December, during the winter holidays.

Disney gave no details on “Star Wars: Episode IX,” about which little is known except that it will be directed by Colin Trevorrow.

“Episode IX” completes the trilogy that began after Disney bought George Lucas’s Lucasfilm in a $4 billion deal in 2012. “Star Wars: The Force Awakens,” which reunited the original cast of the first 1977 film, was released in December 2015, and “Star Wars: The Last Jedi” is due to open worldwide on 15 December, 2017.

Disney on Tuesday also announced that another of its blockbuster franchise revivals, a new Indiana Jones movie starring Harrison Ford, had been pushed back by a year to July 2020. The studio gave no explanation for the change in the release date for the as-yet untitled film that had been originally scheduled for July 2019.—Reuters
Madrid show highlights Picasso’s Guernica as abiding symbol of war

MADRID — Eighty years after the bloody air raid on the Spanish town of Guernica that drove Pablo Picasso to paint a masterpiece, a new exhibition in Madrid highlights the enduring relevance of his depiction.

Adolf Hitler sent aircraft in support of Francisco Franco’s nationalistic forces to strike the Basque town on the afternoon of 26 April, 1937, killing as many as 1,600 and wounding hundreds.

The show at the Reina Sofia museum, the painting’s home since 1992, includes newspaper photographs of the destruction which the Spanish artist saw at home in Paris, and drew on in the black-and-white oil painting.

More than 7.5 metres long and 3.5 metres high, “Guernica” was commissioned for the Spanish pavilion at Paris’s World Fair in 1937. Rosario Peiro, Head of Collections at the Reina Sofia, said that while researching she had seen a photograph of an image of “Guernica” on display in the Syrian town of Aleppo.

“It addresses a system of destruction and terror which sadly is very much a part of our lives,” Peiro told Reuters. “It is so hard to fathom, you never really stop thinking about it.”

Versions of the image have been produced at times of conflict in places from Afghanistan to South Carolina, exhibition curator Timothy James Clark said.

“Picasso’s painting seems to live on, indispensably, as a protest against the lie of collateral damage,” Clark said. “It speaks to the horror of death from the air … the lived reality of terror bombing.”

A debate is scheduled on 27 April in the autonomous Basque parliament over a proposal by separatist party EH Bildu to bring the work to Gernika, as the town’s name in the Basque language.

“At a time when it is essential to build a historical memory that recognizes all suffering, the power of this painting and the extent to which it condemns will be multiplied if it is in the town of Gernika on the eightieth anniversary,” EH Bildu wrote in a parliamentary motion.

The Reina Sofia and Spain’s culture minister have so far resisted such requests.

A museum spokesman said the painting needed particular care after having been rolled up 88 times to be shown in more than 30 cities, and was a cornerstone of the museum’s collection.

It might not be moved again. “Just as in many other museums in the world, some works do not get lent,” the spokesman said.

Treasures from Paris’s Louvre museum go on display in Hong Kong

HONG KONG — A selection of artwork from Paris’ world-renowned Louvre museum goes on display in Hong Kong on Wednesday, offering Chinese patrons a rare opportunity to view some of the institution’s cultural treasures on their doorstep. The “Inventing the Louvre: From Palace to Museum over 800 Years” exhibition at the Hong Kong Heritage Museum features some 130 works, including paintings, sculptures, ceramics and tapestries from various periods spanning centuries. It features a statue of French writer Jean de La Fontaine and a fragment of a horse head dating from before 500 BC.

The exhibition is being held to mark the 20th anniversary of the establishment of Hong Kong’s Special Administrative Region (SAR) government after the territory was handed back to China in 1997 following over 150 years of British rule.

It also underscores the importance of Chinese visitors to the Paris museum, according to Pascal Torres, Chief Curator of the Louvre’s department of interpretation and cultural programming. “The most important visitors of (any) foreign country are Chinese,” he told Reuters. “So it was necessary for us to permit some good part of the Chinese public, who will not travel very easily to France or to Paris, to know a little about the Louvre Museum.”

Pure gold replica of Darth Vader mask to be put on sale in Tokyo

TOKYO — A Tokyo jeweler said on Tuesday it will put on sale a pure gold replica of the facial mask worn by Darth Vader, a character in the Star Wars film series, for 154 million yen ($1.4 million). The life-size mask, weighing around 15 kilograms, will commemorate the 40th anniversary of the release of “Star Wars,” the first film in the sci-fi franchise.

Tanaka Kikinzoku Jewelry KK said the mask, 30 centimetres in height and 26.5 cm in width, will be put on sale on 4 May, the day fans celebrate the series due to its iconic line, “May the Force be with you.” It will be displayed at the company’s head office in the upscale Ginza shopping district beginning on Wednesday.

The jeweler will also offer a commemorative plaque featuring three small oval coins made of pure gold and a replica Star Wars poster from the film’s release 40 years ago.

The plaque’s suggested sale price is 1.22 million yen ($11,000). The coins bear designs associated with the film series and the number “1977/52,” indicating on 25 May, 1977, the date of the first film’s release. Tanaka Kikinzoku will sell only 77 copies of the plaque. — Kyodo News
Sports&Edu FC beat Gandamar FC 2-0

The second day of 2016-2017 Women’s National League (KBZ Bank Women’s League) was held at the Aung San Stadium and Sports&Edu FC beat Gandamar FC 2-0.

Sports&Edu FC included the elite players and showed better performances than Gandamar FC during the match. Sport&Edu scored a valuable counter-offensive opener by Shwe Moe Aye at 25 min.

Gandamar FC players tried to equalize in the first half but failed to translate their opportunities and chances into action as a result of Gandamer FC’s defenders.

In the second half, Sport&Edu Education strikers showed their brilliant performances. At 85 min, Wai Wai Aung touched the ball straight to the opponent’s goal net and scored the winning goal for Sports&Edu FC.

The third day match between Zwe Kapin FC and YREO FC will be held today at the same venue.—Kyaw Zin Lin

Sunderland’s Moyes charged by FA over ‘slap’ comment

LONDON — Sunderland manager David Moyes has been charged by the English Football Association for telling a reporter that she “might get a slap even though you’re a woman” during an interview after his side’s goalless Premier League draw against Burnley in March.

FA chairman Greg Clarke has criticised Moyes for his comments.

“It is alleged the Sunderland manager’s remarks were improper and/or threatening and/or brought the game into disrepute, contrary to FA Rule,” the FA said in a statement on Wednesday.

Chelsea extend Premier League lead with 4-2 win over Southampton

LONDON — Buoyant Chelsea extended their Premier League lead to seven points on Tuesday, as goals from Eden Hazard, captain Gary Cahill and two from a buzzing Diego Costa earned them a 4-2 win over Southampton.

It took them less than five minutes to open a lead when Costa controlled a pass from Cesc Fabregas, surged forward and cut the ball back for the advancing Hazard, who angled his shot into the bottom corner of Fraser Forster’s net.

Former Chelsea midfielder Oriel Romeu equalised in the 24th minute, forcing home from close range. But Chelsea, boosted by their FA Cup semi-final win over nearest rivals Tottenham Hotspur at the weekend, took the lead again just before halftime when Cahill headed in from a N’Golo Kante punt into the area.

Costa, who has been misfiring of late, took his chance in the 53rd minute and fired in a header — his 50th Premier League goal — then added a second for good measure in the 89th after a one-two with Hazard.

Dortmund midfielder Sahin signs deal extension to 2019

BERLIN — Borussia Dortmund midfielder Nuri Sahin has signed a contract extension that will keep him with the Bundesliga club until 2019, Dortmund announced on Tuesday.

The Turkey international, who made his Dortmund debut as a 16-year-old and became the league’s youngest scorer at 17, joined Dortmund’s youth structure as a teenager back in 2001 and helped them to the 2011 Bundesliga title.

He left, having been voted player of the season in 2010-11, and joined Real Madrid but returned a year-and-a-half later after also having a brief spell at Liverpool.

“Everyone knows how much I feel in Dortmund, in this club and this stadium with the unusual fans,” said Sahin, a crowd favourite who used to be a ball boy at home games when he was young.

Plagued by injuries for much of his career, the highly-skilled 28-year-old suffered a partial ankle ligament tear in their 3-2 win over Borussia Moenchengladbach on Saturday.—Reuters

Cavani extends PSG contract until 2020

PARIS — Uruguay striker Edinson Cavani has extended his contract with Paris St Germain by two years until 2020, the French champions said on Tuesday.

Cavani, 30, has scored 125 goals in 192 competitive games for PSG, 20 of them in the Champions League — a club record. “It is with a lot of joy that I extend my commitment to Paris St Germain,” said Cavani.

“It has always been clear that my priority was to continue my history with PSG.”
