Ayeyawady dolphin found dead with tail chopped off

An Ayeyawady Dolphin was found dead with tail chopped off floating in the Ayeyawady River in Singu Township on 28th April.

The 6-ft long body of the dolphin was washed up on the shore of the river near Myitkangyi Village by a villager.

“We have already informed the death of the dolphin to a local Fisheries Department,” said U Maung Maung Lay who found the fish.

The dwindling numbers of Ayeyawady dolphins, which are facing extinction, is attributed to electrocution fishing and becoming trapped in fishing nets.

A total of 72 dolphins were counted in 2011 and 2014, whereas only 60 dolphins were found in previous years.

According to 2016 February data, there were 65 dolphins in Mandalay and Bhamo towns, three died within 2016.

Ayeyawady dolphins can be found in rivers, lakes and seas across southern Asia, from the northwest Bay of Bengal, in India, to the south of Indonesia.

On this stretch of river in Myanmar the animals have developed a deep bond with local fishermen, who they work with in a generations-old partnership that has become the stuff of local folklore.

With careful choreography, locals call the animals using a throaty purr, splashing their ears and tapping on the side of the boat.

The dolphins signal they are ready to begin with a flick of a fin, before driving the fish towards the fishermen's boats where they are scooped up by waiting nets. — Aung Than Khaing

Deforestation worst in forest with valuable wood

DEFORESTATION is the worst in the forest, which have the valuable wood in the most. The authorities concerned and Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) will co-operate to be able to take legal action against those who are extracting timbers illegally, said an official from the environmental conservation CSO.

Unscrupulous elements are extracting Tamalan and other heard wood from the forests which are near the border areas to exported them chiefly to China, Bangladesh and India.

Deforestation in Myanmar is getting worse year by year on account of illegal timber extraction. The forestry department, local authorities and CSOs are finding effective ways to prevent the deforestation and conserve the forest, said an official from a CSO called Green Homeland Development Association.

There are nearly 180,000 square km of forest reserve in Myanmar. Among them, 27 per cent are high-quality forests whereas over 50 per cent are low-quality forests. There are also around 50,000 square km of forest buffer; 60 per cent are high-quality forests while 20 per cent are low-quality forests. The deforestation mostly occurs in forest buffers.

Action to be taken if prohibited food found for sale

THE Food and Drug Administration (FDA) will take legal action against those who use prohibited medicines during the FDA license application process. The FDA has extended by three months the period for applying for licences for the food retailers and wholesale sellers so that a convenient time can be found for all who wish to apply for a license, said an FDA official.

Previously, the application deadline was 31 March. But small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) are still selling food at the market during the FDA license application period. There were still inconveniences among the local SMEs, so the FDA extended the application period for three months 30 June.

“SMEs can manufacture their products. But I want them to request to apply for the FDA license. We will also try to finish the license applications period in time. The FDA will permit the selling of the products during the license application period. We will also inspect the market during the application process. If we find the shopkeepers selling the dyed food, the germinat food and the food dissolved in formalin, we will take action against them,” said Dr. Than Htut, the director-general of the FDA.

Malaria, wiped out in US, still plagues American travelers

WASHINGTON DC — US public health officials declared victory over malaria in 1951, but the mosquito-borne disease continues to vex American travelers, a new study shows.

From 2000 through 2014, more than 22,000 people with malaria were hospitalized in the US, including 182 who died from it, according to estimates published in the American Journal of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene. Last year, 492,000 cases of malaria were reported, researchers said in an email.

Many had contracted the disease in Southeast Asia and parts of South America. The US public health system has been successful in stopping imported malaria cases from spreading, but clearly could be accessed more regularly those who were exposed as infants and at younger ages.

A majority are black, most likely foreign-born individuals who travel to and from their countries of origin, where they often fail to realize they are no longer immune to the deadly parasitic disease, lead author Diana Khuu said in a phone interview.

“We need to encourage travelers to seek pre-travel advice and to use protective measures against mosquitoes and antimalarial medications when they travel to malaria-endemic countries,” said Khuu, an epidemiologist at the University of Pennsylvania.

“Insecticide-treated bed nets have been credited with spurring a 41 per cent drop in worldwide malaria incidence and a 62 per cent drop in worldwide malaria deaths over the past 15 years. Despite the progress, malaria infected an estimated 212 million people and killed an estimated 429,000 in 2015. Nearly 90 per cent of cases were in children under age 5 in Africa, where malaria claims a child’s life every two minutes, according to a statement from the National Institutes of Health this week on World Malaria Day on 25 April. Meanwhile, the number of imported malaria cases has steadily increased in the US.

Dr Stephen Gluckman of the Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia sees six to 10 patients a week who travel to malaria-endemic areas in Africa, India, Southeast Asia and parts of South America.

He attributes the increase in US malaria cases to an increase in Americans traveling to developing parts of the world where the disease continues to thrive.

He advises patients traveling outside the US to consult a ‘bona fide’ travel clinic before departing. “There are several options and significant nuances in advice for preventing malaria,” he said in an email.

Checking the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention website for travelers (bit.ly/2k3q4Dq) also can be helpful, but Gluckman was not involved with the study, believes individualized advice is superior.

He warned that people infected with malaria might carry the disease for months or years before falling ill. In the meantime, an infected pregnant woman could pass malaria to her unborn child, and a mosquito could bite an unsuspecting infected person and pass malaria on when it bites another person.

Moreover, Dr Gluckman warns, there is “a very-large group of at-risk people who rarely get screened.”

“These people grow up in developing parts of the world but now live in the US,” he said. “When returning to visit their country of origin, they very rarely seek any prevention advice because they grew up in a community that did not have access to prevention.”

“They are difficult to reach but clearly could be accessed by the proper public health programs in the communities where they live in the USA,” he said.

People who grew up in malaria-endemic areas, especially those who were exposed as children, do gain some natural protection, but they still can get malaria and therefore need to take preventive steps. In addition, spending long periods in a malaria-free area, like the US, can reduce immunity and render people more susceptible to infection.

“When you develop immunity,” Khuu said. “But after you move away, that immunity wanes. If they go back to visit, they might not use the preventive measures because they might think they’re still immune.”

And why do men appear more vulnerable, comprising 60 per cent of the US cases? Khuu believes they are less likely to seek pre-travel advice, less likely to use mosquito repellent and take anti-malarial medication, and their sweat might be more attractive to mosquitoes.—Reuters

Russia to import Myanmar mango next month

POTENTIAL buyers from the Russian Federation will come to Myanmar in the second week of May to purchase the popular variety of mangoes, according to the Myanmar Mango Growers and Exporters Association.

The vice chairman of the association said that Russian buyers are mainly interested to import Seintalone (Diamond Solitaire) mango produced in the country.

The Seintalone mango is one of many mango varieties available in Myanmar and it has been regarded as the best mango in the country because of its delightful aroma, sweetness, juiciness and non-fibrous nature. This kind of mango has become highly popular in the global market since last year. The association’s spokesperson said that technical assistance is required for enhancing the quality of mango product and the association has shared techniques of nurturing the fruit to the mango growers.

The yields of Seintalone mango plantations continue to drop in the country due to untimely weather occurrences this season. Despite bad yield, exporters expect that the price of mango to reach Ks2.4 million per ton owing to high foreign exchange rate. The Seintalone mango mostly goes to China, Singapore and Thailand. According to the local exporters, the export price of a ton of Seintalone mango was between Ks1.2 million and Ks1.5 million last April. The mango prices have increased to Ks2 million per ton this year.—200

LONDON — North Korea’s decision to test-fire a ballistic missile represents a grave threat to Japan, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said in London on Saturday, calling on the United States and China to keep up pressure on Pyongyang.

North Korea test-fired a missile shortly after US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson warned that failure to curb Pyongyang’s nuclear and ballistic missile programmes could lead to “catastrophic consequences”.

“Despite strong warnings by the international community, North Korea today wields its ballistic missile launch. It is a grave threat to our country. This is absolutely not acceptable. We will maintain a high state of alert. We’d like to be water-tight to ensure safety for our citizens,” he said.

Trump has praised Chinese President Xi Jinping for his role in trying to calm the situation in North Korea. Abe welcomed Trump’s engagement with Xi and said the role of China was extremely important.

As prime minister I am focusing on China’s response,” he said. “China, I hope, will play a constructive role. It is my high expectations that China will perform its role properly.”—Reuters

MANILA — Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte on Saturday called on United States to show restraint after North Korea’s latest missile test and to avoid playing into the hands of Jong Un, who “wants to end the world”.

Duterte said the Southeast Asia region was extremely worried about tensions between the United States and North Korea, and said one misstep would be a “catastrophe” and Asia would be the first victim of a nuclear war.

The United States, Japan, South Korea and China, he said, were sparring with a man who was excited about the prospect of firing missiles.

Duterte is current chairman of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and was due to speak by telephone to US President Donald Trump later on Saturday. He said he would urge Trump not to get into a confrontation with Kim.

“There seems to be two countries playing with their toys and those toys are not really to entertain,” he told a news conference after the ASEAN summit in Manila, referring to Washington and Pyongyang.

“You know that they are playing with somebody who relishes letting go of missiles and everything. I would not want to go into his (Kim’s) mind because I really do not know what’s inside but he’s putting something up, the planet to an edge.”

North Korea test-fired a ballistic missile on Saturday shortly after US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson warned that failure to curb Pyongyang’s nuclear and ballistic missile programmes could lead to “catastrophic consequences”.

US and South Korean officials said the test appeared to have failed, in what would be the North’s fourth straight unsuccessful missile test since March.

Duterte said it was incumbent upon the United States as the responsible country to not rise to Kim’s provocations. He said he was sure Trump had cautioned Kim not to allow the situation to spiral out of control.

“Who am I to say that you should stop? But I would say Mr. President, please see to it that there is no war because my region will suffer immensely,” Duterte said.

“I will just communicate to (Trump), ‘just let him play... do not play into his hands’.”

He added: “The guy (Kim) simply wants to end the world, that is why he is very happy. He is always smiling. But he really wants to finish everything and he wants to drag us all down.”—Reuters

Independence push threatens Hong Kong’s autonomy, says Beijing official

HONG KONG — The legal chief of Beijing’s representative office in Hong Kong said on Saturday growing calls for independence could make the territory’s current “one country, two systems” constitutional framework unsustainable.

Chinese leaders are increasingly concerned about a fledgling independence movement or secessionist movement in the former British colony of Hong Kong, which returned to mainland rule in 1997 amid promises that would have “respect and awe” for (China’s) sovereignty.

“The more Hong Kong fails to actively defend (China’s) sovereignty, national security and development interests in accordance with the law, the more wary the country will be about Hong Kong’s high degree of autonomy and the two systems. There would be less room for its autonomy,” Wang said.

He said Beijing was also “dismayed” at the prospect separatists might enter the Hong Kong establishment or education system.

“If the two systems have been severely disrupted or even been used to damage one country, (China) will feel very unsafe...If one’s own existence has become a problem, no nation will continue the arrangements of ‘two systems’,” he said, according to footage of the same speech carried on government funded RTHK.

China has promised Hong Kong’s capitalist system would remain unchanged for 50 years, but it has not made clear what will happen in 2047. Some in Hong Kong fear Beijing may look to impose mainland rule on the territory before then.

Last year, China’s parliament intervened in a Hong Kong court case by passing a ruling on the Basic Law, as the territory’s mini-constitution is known. It was one of Beijing’s most direct interventions into Hong Kong’s legal and political system since the 1997 handover. Washington previously said on Friday that Hong Kong should have “respect and awe” for China’s system, to which it would have to adapt, government funded RTHK reported on Friday.—Reuters
N Korea test-fires ballistic missile, appears to have failed — S Korea

SEUL — North Korea test-fired a ballistic missile on Saturday from a region north of its capital, but it appears to have failed, South Korea’s military said, defying intense pressure from the United States and the reclusive state’s main ally, China.

An official at South Korea’s Joint Chiefs of Staff confirmed the launch but did not immediately have any further information. Yonhap news agency said the missile appeared to have blown up a few seconds into flight.

The test came as US Secretary of State Rex Tillerson warned the United Nations that failure to curb North Korea’s nuclear and ballistic missile programs could lead to “catastrophic consequences.”

US President Donald Trump told Reuters in an interview on Thursday a “major, major conflict” with North Korea was possible over its nuclear and ballistic missile programs.

Trump praised Chinese leader Xi Jinping for “trying very hard” to rein in Pyongyang.

But both China and Russia rebuffed Washington’s threat of military force at a meeting of the UN Security Council on the matter.

Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi told the 15-member council it was not only up to China to solve the North Korean problem.

“The key to solving the nuclear issue on the peninsula does not lie in the hands of the Chinese side,” Wang told the council in blunt remarks that Tillerson later rebuffed.

Tensions on the Korean peninsula have been rising as North Korea has conducted a series of nuclear tests and launched ballistic missiles. Washington has sought to pressure Pyongyang to halt its nuclear and missile programs.

In a show of force, the United States is sending the USS Carl Vinson aircraft carrier group to waters off the Korean peninsula, where it will join the USS Michigan, a nuclear submarine that docked in South Korea on Tuesday.

South Korea’s navy has said it will hold drills with the US strike group.

Strong earthquake hits off Philippines, no major impact seen

MANILA — A strong earthquake measuring 7.2 struck off the coast of Mindanao island in the Philippines on Saturday, and the country’s seismology agency advised people to stay away from coastal areas but expected no major damage.

There were no immediate reports of destruction or casualties, but witnesses said the quake was very strong and shook the ground and walls.

The Pacific Tsunami Warning Centre said there was a risk big waves could spread 300 km (190 miles) away from the epicentre, reaching as far away as Indonesia.

The Philippines Institute of Volcanology and Seismology (Phivolcs) said no tsunami warning was issued after a quake it had measured at 7.2. The US Geological Survey downgraded its own assessment of the magnitude to 6.8.

The Philippines is on the geologically active Pacific Ring of Fire and experiences frequent earthquakes, particularly in the south, although there were several last month in Batangas on the main island of Luzon, felt also in the capital Manila.

The earthquake was about 57 km (35 miles) southwest of Sarangani province, the southernmost part of Mindanao, the biggest island in the south of the archipelago nation.

“It was so strong, you could hear the ground shaking for almost 10 seconds,” Jenifer Bugtay, who works at a beach-front resort in Sarangani, said by telephone.

“This is the strongest earthquake I have experienced,” she said. “The wall looked like it would fall.”

Phivolcs head Renato Solidum said there was no need to evacuate the area. The quake was at sea, and deep, although the public had been advised to stay away from the coast in the south for the next few hours.

Solidum said no major damage was anticipated.

“Many of our southern cities are far from the epicenter so we are not expecting much damage,” he told news channel ANC.

“We have had some aftershocks, we expect that.”

Janet Bongolan, tourism officer at the Tuka Marine Park in Sarangani province, said people spilled out of their homes and into the streets during the earthquake, but most had returned and there was sign of panic.

“There’s no news here that there will be a tsunami. But we are watching out for aftershocks. We are careful here,” she said by telephone.

Russia backs Chinese proposal to resolve N Korea issue

MOSCOW — Russia said on Saturday it supports China’s “double suspension” proposal to help resolve the crisis on the Korean Peninsula by getting North Korea to halt its nuclear and ballistic missile programs in exchange for the United States and South Korea suspending their large-scale joint military exercises.

The Russian Foreign Ministry, in a statement, said the support was conveyed in a UN Security Council ministerial meeting on the North Korea issue held in New York on Friday, at which Moscow was represented by Deputy Foreign Minister Gennady Gatilov.

Speaking at that meeting, Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi said the “suspension for suspension” proposal aims to get all parties back to the negotiation table and is just a “first step” toward the eventual goal of denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula and building a peace mechanism there. “The dual-track approach aims to promote parallel progress in the denuclearization of the peninsula and the establishment of a peace mechanism in a synchronized and reciprocal manner, ultimately achieving both goals together,” Wang explained.

On Friday, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Geng Shuang said China’s proposal “is gaining understanding and support of more and more countries.”

But the United States and South Korea both rebuffed the proposal just hours after Wang first made it in early March.

US Ambassador to the United Nations Nikki Haley said then, “We have to see some sort of positive action by North Korea before we can take them seriously,” while her South Korean counterpart Cho Tae Yul said, “This is not the time for us to talk about freezing or dialogue with North Korea.”

China deports US citizen convicted of espionage

SHANGHAI — China has deported a US citizen who was convicted of espionage this week after being held without trial for two years, removing a source of friction between Washington and Beijing.

Sandy Phan-Gillis was arrested in March 2015 while about to leave mainland China for the colony of Macau. A court on Tuesday ordered her deportation after sentencing her to three-and-a-half years in prison for espionage.

She left China on Friday from the southern city of Guangzhou and arrived in Los Angeles on the same day, her husband said in a statement. The Chinese government has not released details of the charges against Phan-Gillis. Her lawyer told Reuters on Tuesday she could not reveal details of the case because it involved “state secrets”.

Her husband, Jeff Gillis, said China had accused Phan-Gillis of visiting the country twice on spy missions in 1996 and working with the US Federal Bureau of Investigation to capture two Chinese spies in the United States and turn them into double agents.

The deportation comes at a time of warming China-US relations after US President Donald Trump praised him for his efforts to press North Korea to give up its development of nuclear weapons and long-range missiles. Negotiations to secure the release Phan-Gillis intensified when Secretary of State Rex Tillerson visited Beijing in March. China had accused Phan-Gillis of spying on the United States and taking classified documents.

Myanmar pushes through with investment reforms

Reforms to legislation governing investment in Myanmar, including streamlined procedures and strengthened investor rights, aim to reverse a downward trend in foreign direct investment (FDI) seen in the previous fiscal year.

While the most recent full-fiscal-year FDI total was higher than the $5bn initially forecast, it was also around 30% lower than the previous 12-month figure. This decrease took place against a noticeable shift in the sector make-up of Myanmar’s FDI portfolio, with the energy industry’s contribution falling from 50% of foreign inflows in FY 2015/16 to 36% in the last fiscal year. Many other sectors, however, saw their contributions rise, including the transport and telecommunications industry, which achieved $3.08bn of FDI in FY 2016/17, an increase of 60%, bringing its contribution to the total from 29% to 40%.

Streamlining processes, levelling playing fields

To reverse the overall decline in FDI inflows, Myanmar is implementing a series of reforms to foreign and domestic investment legislation. Foremost of these initiatives is the new Myanmar Investment Law (MIL), enacted last October and progressive implementation of the law is expected to continue through this year.

The MIL is aimed at streamlining the approval processes for investments and providing a clearer, more predictable investment environment that were not available under the previous laws.

These include tax breaks for approved projects, opportunities for subsidiaries, and Customs duties exemptions for approved imports and re-exports. To support an investor-friendly environment, companies will be allowed to use the new Investment Law instead of the old one, for some time to come. Similarly, for a limited time, foreign investors will be allowed to use old investment approval processes for projects that are already in the pipeline.

Getting in line with international standards

The new Investment Law includes all the major features of international investment agreements that have been signed by Myanmar, including investor-state dispute settlement mechanisms.

According to Charles Schneider, senior operations officer at the International Finance Corporation (IFC), the Bank of the World Bank, the MIL will not only contribute to levelling the playing field for all investors, but will also help to reinforce aspects that foreign and local investors seek.

“Many are putting in place a clearer framework for the protection of investments,” he said. “The new law has a comprehensive investment protection regime, which will put all companies in line with international standards.”

By the time it was approved in October, the by-laws had yet to be issued. PwC, however, will be supporting the transition period with some domestic investors to ensure that their investment licenses are granted sooner.

More reforms in the pipeline

Expected to be ratified later this year, the MIL is also in line with Myanmar’s long-standing commitment to the principles of international investment law.

Under the proposed reforms, Myanmar’s investment regulatory regime will be overhauled, having eliminated the cumbersome and time-consuming administrative processes and procedures.

The new law will significantly level the playing field, it will not only contribute to levelling the playing field for all investors, but will also help to reinforce aspects that foreign and local investors seek.

EU leaders united on Brexit demands — for now

BRUSSELS — European Union leaders endorsed a stiff set of divorce terms for Britain at a summit on Saturday, rejoicing in a rare show of unity in adversity but well aware that may start to fray once negotiations begin.

Meeting for the first time since British Prime Minister Theresa May formally triggered a two-year countdown to Brexit in late March, the 27 other EU leaders took just a minute as they sat down to lunch in Brussels to approve 8 pages of negotiating guidelines hammered out by their diplomats over the past month.

“Guidelines adopted unanimously,” EU27 firm and fair political mandate for the Brexit talks is ready,” summit chair Donald Tusk tweeted. Leaders applauded, officials said, after formally adopting unmodified the text drafted by their aides.

Those will bind Michel Barnier, their chief negotiater, to seek a deal that secures the rights of 3 million EU expats living in Britain, ensures London pays tens of billions of euros Brussels thinks it will be owed and avoids destabilising peace by creating a hard EU-UK border across the island of Ireland.

“We are ready,” Barnier said. “We are together.”

They also rule out discussing the free trade deal May wants until they see progress on agreeing those key withdrawal terms.

“Before discussing the future, we have to sort out our past,” Tusk said in comments echoed by German Chancellor Angela Merkel, who said “substantive issues” must first be settled.

In a mark of how last year’s Brexit vote has called into question the unity of the United Kingdom itself, leaders will also offer Irish Prime Minister Enda Kenny a pledge that if Northern Ireland, which voted against Brexit, ever unites with his country, it will automatically be in the EU.

The leaders may spend more time in discussions, including with Barnier, on what criteria they may use to judge, come the autumn, whether he has made sufficient progress to warrant a start on trade talks. They may also talk about how to manage a transition, after Britain leaves in 2019, to a new relationship likely to take many more years to finalise.

That decision on what is “sufficient” is the kind of debate that can poison relations as the 27 seek to protect national interests. Also contentious will be which countries scoop the prizes of hosting two EU agencies set to be moved from London.

With most of the 27 offering to house the European Medicines Agency (EMA) and several wanting the European Banking Authority (EBA), Tusk and EU chief executive Jean-Claude Juncker will propose criteria for making the choices to avoid uneasy rows.

“We are remarkably united,” one national leader will be at the table told Reuters. “But then it’s always easy to be united on what you want before you start negotiating.”

Belgian Prime Minister Charles Michel warned against falling into a “trap” where Britain divided the bloc to its advantage.

Among possible differences, the priorities of poor, eastern states are to secure residency rights for their many workers in Britain and British money for the EU budget; Germany and others set store by a smooth transition to a new free trade agreement.

Unwonted unity has been forged by the shock of Brexit; it breaks a taboo and raises fears of further break-up at the hands of nationalists like French far-right leader Marine Le Pen.

She will contest her country’s presidential election run-off on 7 May, though few expect her to beat centrist Emmanuel Macron. The EU sees it as vital that Britain not be seen to profit from Brexit to dissuade others from following suit.

However, some officials are also voicing concern that the process of weaving maximalist demands into the negotiating text could risk souring the atmosphere with May, who expects to start talks shortly after the UK election she has called for 8 June.

Senior officials in Brussels believe the risk of a breakdown in talks that could see Britain simply walking out into chaotic legal limbo in March 2019 has diminished since May wrote to Tusk on 29 March in terms recognising a need to compromise.

Merkel, facing her own election in September, warned Britain last week against lingering “illusions” of how much access it can get to EU markets. And some diplomats fear the tone of EU demands sounds too aggressive and may create a popular backlash in Britain that might make it hard for May to strike a deal.

“These are legally solid arguments,” one said, noting for example a demand Britain not only lose the EMA and EBA but also pay the moving costs. “But we don’t want to sound too punitive.”

Luxembourg Prime Minister Xavier Bettel said: “They are maybe not any more in our family but they are still our neighbours so we should have respect for each other.”—Reuters
Notorious Afghan warlord calls for peace in first public speech

MEHTAR LAM (Afghanistan) — In his first public speech since signing a peace deal with the Afghan government, one of Afghanistan’s most notorious warlords on Saturday called for the Taliban to stop fighting and begin negotiations.

“I invite you to join the peace caravan and stop the pointless, meaningless and unholy war,” Gulbuddin Hekmatyar said to a gathering of his followers and Afghan politicians in Laghman province, east of the capital, Kabul.

In February the United Nations Security Council agreed to drop sanctions against Hekmatyar, paving the way for him to return openly to Afghanistan.

The Afghan government requested the move as part of a peace deal with Hekmatyar and his militant group, Hezb-i-Islami, in September.

“I want a free, proud, independent and Islamic Afghanistan,” he said on Saturday.

The deal has been criticised by some Afghans and human rights groups for the pardon it granted to Hekmatyar and many of his fighters. Hekmatyar’s return “will compound the culture of impunity”, Human Rights Watch researcher Patricia Gossman said of the deal, calling it an “affront” to victims of abuses.

A controversial figure from the insurgency against the Soviets in the 1980s and the civil wars of the 1990s, Hekmatyar is accused of ordering his fighters to bombard Kabul, leading to many casualties, besides other abuses.

His faction of Hezb-i-Islami has played a relatively small role in the current conflict, in which the Taliban have a leading role in battling the Western-backed government in Kabul.

In hiding for nearly a decade and a half, Hekmatyar had been designated a “global terrorist” by the United States, which has been leading an international military mission in Afghanistan for the past 15 years.

American and other Western leaders praised the deal with him, however, hoping it could help lead to wider peace in Afghanistan. —Reuters

Syrian rebels fight each other in besieged Damascus enclave

BEIRUT — Fighting between rebel groups in the biggest insurgent stronghold near the Syrian capital Damascus entered a second day on Saturday, while government forces pressed an offensive against the besieged enclave, a war monitor said.

The clashes broke out in part of the densely-populated rural area east of Damascus known as the Eastern Ghouta which has been besieged by Syrian government forces since 2013.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said it had documented the deaths of at least 38 fighters in the first 24 hours of fighting between rebel groups. It also reported civilian casualties.

Jaish al-Islam is pitted against the Failaq al-Rahman group and fighters from an alliance with links to al-Qaeda, rebels, activists and the Observatory said.

Fighting between the groups killed hundreds of people last April before a ceasefire was agreed in February. Government, which is backed by Russian air power and Iranian-backed militias, launched an offensive against Qaboun and neighbouring Barza, which are believed to contain supply tunnels for the besieged enclave, in February. Government forces advanced slightly in Qaboun on Friday, the Observatory said.

Islamic State claims car bombing in Baghdad, four police killed

BAQHDAD — Four Iraqi traffic policemen were killed on Friday when a suicide car bomb detonated outside their station, close to a street where several foreign media have offices in Baghdad, a security spokesman said.

Five people were also wounded by the blast on Abu Nawas Street, the spokesman said. The street runs alongside the east bank of the Tigris River and the French Embassy is located in the area. Islamic State claimed the suicide attack on its Amaq news agency. The hardline Sunni group has controlled parts of Iraq and Syria since 2014. —Reuters

Libya captures two oil-smuggling tankers after firefight

TRIPOLI — Libyan naval forces captured two vessels suspected of smuggling oil from the North African country after gun battles lasting several hours west of the capital Tripoli, a spokesman for the service said on Friday.

Libyan forces frequently capture vessels smuggling oil and arms off the coast and the North African state has become a haven for migrant smugglers who take advantage of the country’s turmoil to ship people across to Europe.

Ayoub Qassem, a spokesman for the Libyan naval forces, said Ukraine-flagged tanker Route and a vessel with an unspecified African nation’s flag named Stark were captured early Friday.

“Clashes lasted for three hours, but the two tankers were successfully seized,” Qassem said.

The incident occurred in the Sidi Said area west of Tripoli. Qassem did not report any casualties or give details on what happened to the crew of the vessels or their nationalities.

Six years after the fall of Muammar Gaddafi, Libya is still caught in turmoil among rival military factions who once fought against the former leader but then turned against one another in a multi-sided power struggle.

A UN-backed government in Tripoli is struggling to assert control since arriving in Libya more than a year ago. Libya’s oil infrastructure is also often targeted by fighting or blockades as rival groups seek to gain wealth or leverage. —Reuters
Russia checks Aerospace Force for readiness to defend facilities against advanced weapons

MOSCOW — Russian Tupolev Tu-160 and Tu-95MS strategic bombers and about 50 other aircraft and helicopters have taken part in a control check of Aerospace Force units and formations, Aerospace Force Commander-in-Chief Colonel General Viktor Bondarev said on Friday.

“The control check of units and formations of the Aerospace Force has confirmed the readiness of all armed service branches for effectively performing their tasks within the established time limits and defending our facilities against existing and future aerospace attack means,” the commander said.

As part of the combat readiness check, the crews of Tu-95MS strategic missile carriers practiced re-deployment to operational aerodromes and simulated launches of airborne cruise missiles while Tu-160 bombers performed flights at supersonic speed.

As the Russian Aerospace Force commander-in-chief said, the crews of Sukhoi Su-27 fighter jets intercepted aerial targets while helicopters launched rockets and airborne munitions against ground targets at a practice range.

Also, air defence teams practiced detecting, tracking and notionally destroying enemy aircraft whose flights were initiated by the crews of Long-Range, Military Transport, Tactical and Army Aviation.

“Overall, the check involved more than 50 aircraft, about 100 weapon systems of antiaircraft missile forces and radio-technical troops (the S-400, S-300, Pantsyr-S air defense missile complexes and radars),” Bondarev said.—Tass

First Britain-China direct freight train arrives back in China

YIWU, (China). — The first freight train to run from Britain to China arrived in the city of Yiwu in eastern China on Saturday, completing its 12,000-km (7,456-mile) journey.

The train was greeted by traders and shipping company officials when it arrived at Yiwu West station after departing London on 10 April carrying items such as vitamins, baby products and pharmaceuticals.

The first freight train from China arrived in Britain in January.

Operated by Yiwu Timex Industrial Investment, the Yiwu-London freight service makes London the 15th European city to have a direct rail link with China after the 2013 unveiling of the “One Belt, One Road” initiative by Chinese President Xi Jinping.

“This freight train is a reflection of the achievements of trade,” Yiwu Timex Chairman Timmy Peng told Reuters Television.

After leaving London the bright red train passed through seven countries — France, Belgium, Germany, Poland, Belarus, Russia and Kazakhstan — before arriving in Yiwu.

For Britain, the train is part of an effort to strengthen trade links with the rest of the world as it prepares to leave the European Union in two years’ time.—Reuters

French amphibious carrier visits Japan ahead of Pacific show of power

SASEBO — As tension spikes on the Korean peninsula, a French amphibious assault carrier sailed into Japan’s naval base of Sasebo on Saturday ahead of drills that risk upsetting China, which faces US pressure to rein in North Korea’s arms programmes.

The Mistral will lead exercises next month near Guam, along with forces from Japan, the United States and Britain, practicing amphibious landings around Tinian, an island about 2,500 km (1,553 miles) south of the Japanese capital of Tokyo.

The drills, involving 700 troops, were planned before Saturday’s test-firing of a ballistic missile by North Korea, in defiance of world pressure, in what would be its fourth successive unsuccessful missile test since March.

Japan and the United States are worried by China’s efforts to extend its influence beyond its coastal waters and the South China Sea by acquiring power-projecting aircraft carriers, a concern shared by France, which controls several Pacific islands, including New Caledonia and French Polynesia.

Even as they seek stronger economic ties with China, both France and Britain, which has two navy helicopters aboard the Mistral, are deepening security cooperation with Japan, a close US ally that has Asia’s second-strongest navy after China.

The Mistral forms part of an amphibious task force mission, the Jeanne d’Arc, that is “a potent support to French diplomacy,” the country’s defence ministry said in a statement. Officials and children’s welcome dances greeted the Mistral in Sasebo, on the western island of Kyushu, a major naval base for Japan’s Maritime Self Defense Force (MSDF) and the US Navy.

The Mistral, which left France in February, can carry up to 35 helicopters and four landing barges, besides several hundred soldiers. It will stay in Sasebo until 5 May.

This month China launched its first domestically-built aircraft carrier. It joined the Liaoning, bought from Ukraine in 1998, which led a group of Chinese warships through waters south of Japan in December.

China’s military ambitions, however, have been overshadowed in recent weeks by tension on the Korean peninsula as Pyongyang conducts long-range missile tests, and prepares for a possible sixth nuclear test.

“We did not expect the start of our visit to coincide with a North Korean missile launch, France’s ambassador to Japan Thierry Dana said on the Mistral’s bridge. “Cooperation between our four nations in upholding laws, peace and stability in the region will display our readiness to deal with North Korea,” he added.

In a show of force, the United States has sent the USS Carl Vinson aircraft carrier group to nearby waters, where it will join the USS Michigan, a guided missile submarine that docked in South Korea on Tuesday. The Carl Vinson entered the Sea of Japan on Saturday, where it completed naval drills with two Japanese warships dispatched from Sasebo, an MSDF spokesman said.—Reuters
Venezuelan opposition activists march to Leopoldo Lopez’ jail

LOS TEQUES (Venezuela) — Hundreds of activists marched on Friday to the hilltop jail of Venezuela’s best-known detained opposition leader Leopoldo Lopez in the latest of a month of protests against the socialist government.

Security forces blocked access to the decrepit-looking penitentiary next to a slum in Los Teques, an hour’s drive from the capital Caracas, as the demonstrators shouted “Leopoldo!” and held signs reading “No To Dictatorship!”

This month’s wave of protests against President Nicolas Maduro’s government has led to at least 29 deaths in the worst unrest since 2014 rallies championed by Lopez, who was arrested then and convicted of instigating violence.

Venezuela’s opposition is demanding elections, autonomy for the legislature where they have a majority, a humanitarian aid channel from abroad to alleviate an economic crisis, and freedom for more than 100 jailed anti-Maduro activists.

Supporters say Lopez, the US-educated leader of hardline Popular Will party, and others are political prisoners who symbolize Maduro’s lurch into dictatorship.

Maduro says all are behind bars for legitimate crimes, and calls Lopez, 45, a violent hothead intent on inciting violence.

Some inhabitants of a nearby slum came out of their homes to cheer as the protesters marched by.

“We would never have marched here before because it was very dangerous and pro-Chavista,” said demonstrator and marketing consultant Kailee Shima, 36, referring to the ruling “Chavista” movement named for Maduro’s predecessor Hugo Chavez.

Elsewhere, relatives of imprisoned activists and supporters turned up at other jails, including the Caracas headquarters of the state intelligence service Sebin.

“All are innocent and fighting for a democratic country,” said联动的best-known detained activist, opposition leader Leopoldo Lopez in the latest of a month of protests against the socialist government.

UN Security Council backs new Western Sahara talks attempt

ALGIERS — The United Nations Security Council has unanimously backed the UN chief’s attempts to restart negotiations to end the Western Sahara conflict and extended its peacekeeping mission for another year.

The resolution late on Friday came after the UN mission confirmed the Polisario Front, which fought a war over the region until a 1991 ceasefire, to enter new negotiations that would include proposals from both sides.

“Together with the earlier withdrawal of Moroccan elements... this action should improve the prospects of creating an environment that will facilitate early implementation of Mr. Guterres’ determination to relaunch the negotiating process,” the UN spokesman said in a statement confirming the Polisario withdrawal. A vast desert area bordering the Atlantic Ocean, Western Sahara has been contested since 1975 when colonial Spain left. Morocco claimed the region, but Polisario fought a guerrilla war for independence until the UN-backed ceasefire.

UN talks have long failed to broker an agreement on how to decide self-determination. Moroccan forces crossed beyond the earthen wall in Guerguerat near the Mauritania border and Polisario responded by dispatching troops to the area.—Reuters

China’s first androgynous all-girl pop band challenges ideal of femininity

BEIJING — China’s all-girl “boy band”, FFC-Acrush, had more than 749,000 followers on social networking site Weibo even before any of their music was released. Sporting short bobs, loose T-shirts and barely there makeup, Acrush’s androgynous look is bucking centuries-old norms in a society where girls strive to look feminine and act demurely.

Marketed by sports brand Fantasy Football Confederation (FFC), the five women — aged 18 to 24 — held their first news conference in Beijing on Friday as their first single “Action” was released.

“We want the girls to break the mould,” the band’s agent, Zhou Xiaobai, told Reuters.

The letter ‘A’ in the band’s name is a reference to the god Adonis - the archetype of youthful male beauty in Greek mythology.

In 2005, a boyish-looking Li Yuchun briefly won fans with her style. She also sparked debate about how women should dress in a conservative society.

Last year, Zhejiang Huati Culture Communication, an entertainment startup backed by Tencent Holdings, was looking to create a girl band when the idea of an androgynous act came about.

“It was rather a coincidence. We happened to see many ‘handsome girls’ during the auditions, and people thought they looked quite all right. Then it hit me that now is the time,” Zhejiang Huati’s chief executive Wang Tianhai told Reuters.

Acrush is one of several bands under the FFC brand, which aims to be a pioneer in sports entertainment by mixing sports with music and dance.

All FFC bands - including Acrush - must learn how to play soccer.

Soccer is backed President Xi Jinping, and the sport is expected to boom into a $5 trillion yuan ($725 billion) business by 2025.

“It is a new adventure for us and also for the Chinese pop music market,” said Min Junqian, a member of Acrush.

“I will just be me, a handsome girl.”— Reuters

Bad Boy Records family reunites for Sean Combs documentary

NEW YORK — Rappers Faith Evans, Lil’ Kim, Mase and French Montana turned out in a mini Bad Boy Records reunion to celebrate the Sean “Diddy” Combs documentary, “Can’t Stop, Won’t Stop: A Bad Boy Story.”

Combs, who founded the record label in 1993, gave the filmmakers a raw and exclusive behind-the-scenes look at his efforts to reunite the Bad Boy family for a 2016 concert in New York. He said it morphed into a story about family, tragedy and perseverance.

“It’s a piece of my life ... My whole life might have to be a ten-part miniseries or something like that. But you know this is a good slice of my life to let people kind of see who Sean is,” Combs told reporters on the red carpet at the Tribeca Film Festival on Thursday.

“It feels surreal but also I feel proud ... I’m so New York, you know, and to be at the Tribeca Film Festival it’s beyond your dreams,” added Combs, 47, who was born in Harlem.

The screening was followed by a concert in which Lil’ Kim, Mase and other label members performed some of their biggest hits.

The film will be launched on Apple Music on 25 June.

Comedy series ‘Roseanne’ could be latest US television comeback

LOS ANGELES — “Roseanne,” the hit 1990s television comedy about a working-class American family, could be on its way back. Hollywood trade publications reported on Friday, marking the show in a trend for revivals of 20-year-old shows.

Variety and Deadline.com reported that a revival with original cast members Roseanne Barr, John Goodman and Sara Gilbert was being shopped around broadcast networks and streaming services.

Reuters could not independently confirm the reports.

The original “Roseanne” was broadcast from 1988–1997 and was the most watched TV show in the United States in 1989 and 1990. It featured a blue-collar family, with overweight parents, who were struggling to get by in the fictional town of Lanford, Illinois. The show was praised for being a realistic portrayal of a working-class family.

Deadline.com said the intention was to include other principal original actors, such as Laurie Metcalf and Johnny Galecki, in the reboot.

In an appearance on March 23 on daytime talk show “The Talk,” which is co-hosted by Gilbert, Goodman was enthusiastic about bringing back the show.

“Roseanne” would be the latest hit show from the 1980s and 1990s to get a revival. “Will & Grace,” a comedy that helped bring gay men and women into mainstream pop culture, is returning to NBC with 12 new episodes within the next year, while supernatural crime “Twin Peaks” is coming back in May some 27 years after it was first shown.

There have also been revivals or sequels to popular American TV series “Gilmore Girls” and “Full House” in the past two years.— Reuters

Russia ready to provide Hitler’s skull to scrutinize its authenticity

MOSCOW — The Russian State Archive is ready to furnish the skull of Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler for any examination to prove its authenticity, its director Larisa Rogova told TASS on Friday.

“An English company contacted us a short while ago. They said they had found Hitler’s nephew who is ready for genetic tests,” Rogova said.

She added that the examination should be carried out by Russian specialists if the Investigative Committee grants permission.

A slew of conspiracy theories circulating suggest that Hitler did not commit suicide in 1945, but rather fled to South America or elsewhere and that the skull is not authentic.

“The skull is genuine, it has been proven,” Rogova said, adding that the skull is put on display from time to time."

Moscow - The Russian State Archive is ready to furnish the skull of Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler for any examination to prove its authenticity, its director Larisa Rogova told TASS on Friday.

"An English company contacted us a short while ago. They said they had found Hitler’s nephew who is ready for genetic tests,” Rogova said.

She added that the examination should be carried out by Russian specialists if the Investigative Committee grants permission.

HIGASHIMATSUYAMA

A gallery in a Tokyo suburb has launched a fundraising campaign to preserve its main exhibit — a series of large panels depicting the horrors of the 1945 atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki — in the face of damage caused by insects, ultraviolet rays, as well as grit and dust.

Marking the 50th anniversary of its establishment on 5 May, the Maruki Gallery for the Hiroshima Panels also plans to set up archives to collect documents about Irri and Toshi Maruki, a husband-and-wife team which created the 15 panels, to make the art work, which has been shown around the world, more accessible to the public.

“We now face difficulties in keeping the Hiroshima Panels, a representative painting of the 20th century," said Yukinori Okamura, a curator of the gallery. “It is a great challenge to hand down the common heritage of mankind to the next generation, looking ahead to the next 50 years," he said.

"Preparing the archives is also necessary to allow people to further understand the background to the creation of the painting," he added. "The archives will include publications on the Marukis, their letters and other documents. We plan to launch a multilingual website to open them globally." The panels — each standing 1.8 metres by 7.2 meters — were created over 32 years from 1950 based on the experiences of the Marukis, who visited Hiroshima shortly after the 1945 atomic bombing. The couple opened the gallery in 1967 in Higashimatsuyama, north of Tokyo, to house them.

The panel series starts with “Ghosts,” which depicts people walking like ghosts with their arms extended in front of them, after their clothes were burned off and skin peeled by the A-bombing.

They also include “Death of American Prisoners of War,” focusing on American POWs who were killed by the A-bombing or by Japanese captors, as well as “Crows,” which illustrates discriminatory treatment of Korean A-bomb victims and survivors.

Of the 15 panels, 14 are displayed at the Maruki gallery, while “Nagasaki” is owned by the Nagasaki Atomic Bomb Museum.

The Marukis also dealt with other tragic incidents, such as the Nanjing Massacre, the Auschwitz concentration camp, the Battle of Okinawa and the Namata mercury-poisoning disease, before Irri died in 1995 at the age of 94 and Toshi passed away in 2000 at 87. They were nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize in 1995.

Aiming to raise 500 million yen, the gallery hopes to build a new facility in five years’ time, equipped with a humidity and temperature management system, to preserve and exhibit the panels, according to Okamura.

Since its establishment, the gallery has not financially relied on public subsidies or corporations so it can operate independently, and it uses solar power to generate enough electricity to provide power to the whole facility.

“We will maintain these current management frameworks in operating the new facility to demonstrate that culture can survive through the support of individual citizens,” Okamura said.

The panels have achieved worldwide recognition, traveling to more than 20 countries, including exhibitions in China and the United States, as well as nations in Europe and South Africa. In 2015, some of them were displayed in the US capital for the first time prior to their exhibitions in Boston and New York. The events at the three sites attracted more than 10,000 visitors.

Okamura also said the significance of the gallery itself has been enhanced since the March 2011 nuclear disaster at the Fukushima Daiichi complex.

“More and more young artists have displayed their works at this gallery, which shows the nuclear threat, and visitors to this gallery have followed their subsequent paths,” he said. “I think we have contributed to fostering both artists and audiences.”

Wenger says Arsenal, not Spurs, are north London’s No 1

LONDON — Arsene Wenger believes Arsenal will remain the major force in north London even if Tottenham Hotspur overtake decades of dominance to finish above the Gunners in the Premier League this season.

Arsenal have never ended below Tottenham in Wenger’s 21 years at the club although the gap has been narrowing, and last season they only leapfrogged Spurs into second spot on the final day of the season.

Victory at White Hart Lane on Sunday would almost certainly ensure that second-placed Spurs finish above Arsenal for the first time since 1995, but Wenger said a one-off achievement could not outweigh a long run of success.

“Let’s be honest. I’ve answered that question about a shift in power over (many) years,” he told British media on Friday. “Nothing changes in that.

“But Spurs have to do more over a long period of time? I think so. You cannot say that the weight of one year has the weight of 20...”

“For the pride and the continuity of our achievements, yes we want to fight to be in front of Spurs. (But) we have to focus on what is really important to us at this moment, which is to finish in the top four.”

The Tottenham-Arsenal derby is one of fiercest in English football with less than five miles separating the clubs who first played each other in 1887. Arsenal have posted 80 victories to Tottenham’s 61, with 51 matches drawn.

Bayern sign Coman on permanent deal, extend Thiago contract

MUNICH — Bayern Munich activated a clause to make winger Kingsley Coman’s transfer from Juventus permanent at the end of the season and extended midfielder Thiago Alcantara’s contract to 2021, the German club said on Friday.

The 20-year-old France international, who joined Bayern on a two-year loan deal in 2015, will sign a contract until 2020.

“He is a player with huge potential,” Bayern CEO Karl-Heinz Rummenigge said. “We’re convinced that he will be of great help to us in the coming years.

“He is a very young player who already plays regularly for the French national team and who has gathered experience at the European Championship. Coman, a former Paris St Germain player, has scored eight goals in 58 games for Bayern. Rummenigge also heaped praise on 26-year-old Thiago, who signed a two-year extension that will keep him in Munich until 2021 and has arguably played his best football at Bayern this season.

“Thiago is one of the best and most sought after midfielders in Europe,” Rummenigge said. “We are happy to have tied him to the club on a long-term basis.”

The Spanish international is the latest stalwart to sign up to 2021 following — among others — Jerome Boateng, Mats Hummels, Thomas Mueller, Robert Lewandowski and keeper Manuel Neuer as Bayern look to retain key players.

Wenger suggested another victory for his team on Sunday might even kick-start a winning run towards a third-placed finish in the league.

But he acknowledged that Spurs, 14 points and four places above his side, would start as favourites as they seek a ninth successive league win.

“Victory would also silence talk among Arsenal supporters of St Totheggin’s Day, the moment each season when they celebrate the mathematical certainty of finishing above Spurs.

“It is certainly one of the few times where, if you look at people’s opinions, Spurs are favourites,” said Wenger.

“I think we have shown persistence, tenacity and desire to win and keep going at any cost. You could see what it means to the squad when we scored a 1-0 victory against Leicester (in midweek).

These qualities will of course be very important.”

Wenger reported positive injury news on Friday as defender Laurent Koscielny likely to return and Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain, who missed the midweek 1-0 victory, definitely fit.

“He will be fit enough to start because it was more precautionary to leave him on the bench (against Leicester),” said Wenger, “I didn’t want to take the gamble with him.”

Real rotation vital but there’s no A or B team, says Zidane

BARCELONA — Real Madrid coach Zinedine Zidane said on Friday he had no A or B side and needed to call on every member of his squad to cope with a grueling fixture list, as a debate about his team selections was played out in the Spanish media.

The question of whether Zidane’s periphery players perform better than his first-choice starting 11 resurfaced after a Los Blancos side with nine changes blitzed Deportivo La Coruna 6-2 on Wednesday.

The coach rested heavyweights Luka Modric, Cristiano Ronaldo, Toni Kroos, Karim Benzema and Keylor Navas, who played in last weekend’s 3-2 defeat against Barcelona, and was without Gareth Bale through injury and Sergio Ramos through suspension.

Not for the first time this season, Real’s squad players seized the opportunity, with James Rodriguez, Marco Asensio, Alvaro Morata and Isco enthusiastically taking up the mantle to keep their team on the heels of Barcelona in the title race.

Losing manager Pepe Mel said Real’s second string were harder to play against than their first-choice XI, while sports daily AS declared: “Plan B is a great plan”.

Arguing that some clubs’ second-string players get no time on the pitch at all, Zidane told a news conference on Friday: “I have immense respect for my players and I have to choose who plays but I’m not unfair...

“Some people may think that in some games the same players always play and in other games another team plays and call that an A or B team, but it’s not like that for me.

Real host Valencia on Saturday looking to temporarily go three points ahead of the Catalans, who top the table due to their superior head-to-head record against Los Blancos but have played one game more.

Zidane also said players who performed well against Deportivo would hold no hard feelings against him should they find themselves on the bench against Valencia.

“I don’t just drop players, I speak with them and explain my thinking and we move forward together,” he added.

“I understand this debate but now I’m the coach of Real Madrid, I have to decide, and I’m always thinking about what’s best for Real Madrid as a family.

“I know I have an extraordinary squad and everyone is committed ...We all want to follow the same path.”

Bale is still suffering from a calf injury while Ramos returns to their superior head-to-head record against Los Blancos but have played one game more.
