Myanmar, Thailand negotiate to solve migrant labour issue

In an attempt to solve the growing problem of undocumented Myanmar migrant workers in Thailand who are returning to their homeland out of fear of a new labour decree, the two countries are negotiating on issuing official documents to workers, but the talks are still ongoing and incomplete, said Union Minister for Labour, Immigration and Population U Thein Swe at a news conference in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

The number of migrant workers who returned to Myanmar reached 34,069 as of yesterday morning, according to the ministry. The influx has overtaxed social agencies and border crossings, officials said.

“Workers should avoid seeking employment through brokers and they should seek job opportunities with official agencies and should go the neighbouring country only when they get an official letter offering a job,” said the Union Minister.

Earlier this week, Thailand’s junta delayed full enforcement of a new labour law aimed at regulating the foreign workforce after the decree sparked panic and prompted more than 60,000 foreign workers to flee from the country, many of them from Myanmar, Laos and Cambodia.

The new decree would have imposed heavy fines on employers and employees who do not have work permits, a senior official said.
The Secretariat building will be opened to the public on Martyrs’ day on 19 July and this year marks the 70th anniversary of the assassination of the martyrs along with Bogyoke Aung San. For the first time the Parliament House, located within the Secretariat compound and the Cabinet Meeting Room will be opened to the public.

Daw May Thandar Win, a spokesperson from the Secretariat’s Preservation Group said this is the first time the public can access the original parliament building of Myanmar and the room where the assassination of Bogyoke Aung San and his six cabinet colleagues took place. The original furniture that was in the room during the time of the assassination will be borrowed from the National Museum for display to the public. There will be an art exhibition to honor the sacrifice of the martyrs and a religious ceremony to share merits with the martyrs. A Facebook page has also been launched for those keen to follow the events on Martyrs’ Day.

Students between the ages of 10 and 14 were invited to participate in art competitions to mark the history and sacrifice of the martyrs. Out of 270 who participated, 40 were chosen to be put on display in the gallery of the Secretariat building.

The Parliament House was used as the nation’s parliament from 1935 to 1962 and the early drafts of the country’s constitution were drafted there. When Myanmar first got independence the Union Jack of UK was replaced, and the flag of the Union of Burma was raised for the first time on the flagpole in front of the Parliament House.

The Cabinet Meeting Room situated in the Secretariat’s west wing was used by various administrations since 1905 and was also the office of Bogyoke Aung San.

The Secretariat will be opened to the public on 19 July from 8am to 4pm.—Ko Moe

Minister of State for Foreign Affairs visits Morocco

The Myanmar delegation led by U Kyaw Tin, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, paid an official visit to the Kingdom of Morocco to attend the First Meeting of Myanmar-Morocco Bilateral Consultations convened on 3 July in Rabat, Morocco. The meeting was held between Myanmar delegation led by Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation H.E. Mrs. Mounia Boucetta. At the Meeting, the two sides welcomed the establishment of the Bilateral Consultations Mechanism and expressed their common desire for expanding the ties of friendship and economic cooperation, enhancing trade and investment between the two countries. They also discussed on commemorating the 40th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations in 2018 and enhancing cooperation at the regional and international fora. Minister of State U Kyaw Tin briefed on Myanmar’s efforts on its democratization process, national reconciliation and peace process including recent developments in Rakhine State. Secretary of State Mrs. Mounia Boucetta also briefed on political developments of Morocco. They also exchanged views on regional and international issues at the working lunch hosted by Secretary of State of Morocco.

During the visit, the Minister of State U Kyaw Tin and the Secretary of State Mrs. Mounia Boucetta signed the Memorandum of Understanding between the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation of the Kingdom of Morocco on Bilateral Consultations and the Agreement between the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and the Government of the Kingdom of Morocco on the exemption of Visa for diplomatic, official, service and special passports. Minister of State U Kyaw Tin and Secretary of State Mrs. Mounia Boucetta then held a joint press conference and briefed the highlights of discussion at the Bilateral Consultations. The Minister of State also made a study tour of the Moroccan Academy for Diplomatic Studies at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation in Rabat. —Myanmar News Agency

Only working in unison can benefit all

If you wish for the country to be developed and prosperous, all of the country’s resources — financial, natural and human — have to be used together for the equal development of all races. If the Bamar does what it wants, if the Kachin does what it wants, if the Shan, Kachin and Chin do not all cooperate, there will be no benefits for anyone. Only when you try working in unison will you know its benefits.

KBZ wins Best Bank in Myanmar from Finance Asia

In the ceremony for the best banks of 2017 from different Asian countries held by London based Finance Asia on 29 June, KBZ bank won the Country Awards for Achievement 2017: Best Bank in Myanmar, making it the second year in a row.

Deputy General Manager of KBZ Bank Ltd. Daw Phyu Phyu Sein accepted the award and gave an appreciation speech at the ceremony held in Four Seasons Hotel in Hong Kong.

Finance Asia said KBZ was selected as the recipient of the best bank in Myanmar for their great service in finance and the banking sector, having the largest market share in the largest trade volume of all Myanmar’s land ports of entry.

As of 23 June, border trade value was $1 billion at Muse, $56.7 million in Lweje, $126 million in Chinswehaw, $40.6 million in Kapiketee, under $1 million in Kengtung, $19.2 million in Tachilek, $177 million in Kayah and $10.27 million in Reed.

Myanmar’s main exports include agricultural products, forest products, minerals, fishery products, manufactured goods and other products which while capital goods, industrial raw materials and consumer products are mostly imported into the country.—GNLM

Border trade volume on track to top last year

Border trade from 1 April to 23 June this financial year was estimated at US$1.66 billion, representing a $117 million increase compared to the same period last year.

Exports increased $48 million and imports increased by $69.35, according to the official statistics of the Ministry of Commerce. Myanmar’s main trading partners include China, India, Thailand and Bangladesh.

Myanmar’s trade with China primarily takes place at Muse, Lweje, Kapiketee, Chinswehaw and Kengtung ports of entry. Myanmar’s Indian trade primarily takes place at Tamu and Reed, Thai trade at Kawkhaung and Myawady, and Bangladeshi trade at Sittway and Maungtaw.

The increase in export through border trade is due to the major increase in trade volume at Muse, which experienced the largest trade volume of all Myanmar’s land ports of entry.

As of 23 June, border trade value was $1 billion at Muse, $56.7 million in Lweje, $126 million in Chinswehaw, $40.6 million in Kapiketee, under $1 million in Kengtung, $19.2 million in Tachilek, $177 million in Kayah and $10.27 million in Reed.

Myanmar rice to be exported to Philippines

Myanmar Rice Federation plans to export Myanmar rice to the Philippines with a tender system. Dr. Soe Tun, the vice chairman of Myanmar Rice Entrepreneurs Association, told the Global New Light of Myanmar.

“We have decided to export Myanmar rice to the Philippines with tender system. Previously, representatives of the governments of Myanmar and the Philippines have signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) for the export of Myanmar rice to the Philippines,” said Dr. Soe Tun. “But, the Philippines were not willing to pay the proposed price. Therefore, we could not export Myanmar rice then. If they win the tender now, we will send the rice.”

The Philippines offered quotation for Myanmar rice to the Philippines through their embassy in Yangon. Myanmar Ministry of Commerce officials intend to make a counter offer in the third week of July. China is currently the main buyer of Myanmar rice followed by other Asian nations, African countries and Europe. Myanmar exported over 400,000 tonnes of rice this year and plans to export a total of 2 million tonnes by the end of the year, said Dr. Soe Tun.

Garment sector earned nearly US$400 million

Myanmar earned nearly US$400 million from garment sector exports in the past three months, according to the official figures of the Commerce Ministry.

This represents a $100 million increase over the same period last year.

Following the lifting of European and American economic sanctions, Myanmar’s garment industry is growing. Currently, Japan and European countries are placing the largest orders for garment shipments. Additionally, garment exports are also supplying South Korea, China and America.

Myanmar’s garment industry is focused on “cutting, making and packing,” which is a basic contract garment assembly system that allows international garment companies to reduce their labour costs. Myanmar labour leaders and policymakers are hoping to transition the domestic garment industry into a more modern system.

FMI to increase Myanmar’s infrastructural investment

By Ko Moe

First Myanmar Investment Co., Ltd (FMI) is planning to increase its investment in Myanmar’s infrastructure development sector: “Infrastructure sector development is of vital importance to the country and we will scale up our investments into this. We will closely cooperate with both local and foreign organisations for this,” said U Tun Tun, Executive Director of FMI.

FMI will also pursue Myanmar’s tourism sector opportunities, he added. During last FY2016-2017, FMI made investments in its core businesses, including financial services, real estate and health care, earning a profit of Ks14.9 billion.

Those profits came primarily from Yoma Bank, Pan Hlaing Hospital and housing development businesses, said U Tun Tun. Yoma Bank’s earned revenues through fee payments on loans, financial management services for businesses, remittance services and microfinance loans for farmers.

FMI is a conglomerate and one of Myanmar’s largest public companies, and one of four listed on Yangon Stock Exchange (YSX) since 2016. FMI has more than 3,000 shareholders.

Myanmar sesame oil prepping for export to America next year

MYANMAR sesame oil has attracted the interest of international consumers and investors, including Americans, according to a report of Myawady Daily newspaper yesterday.

According to the report, preparations are underway to export a small amount of Myanmar sesame oil to America next year for use in processed snack foods.

Myanmar sesame oil is expected to fetch a good price due to its quality, said U Saw Naing, a sesame oil producer to Myawady Daily. Nearly 200,000 tonnes of sesame oil are exported to foreign trade partners each year. Myanmar sesame oil is currently sold in China, South Korea and Japan.—GNLM
Yangon’s economy—the strength of the nation

Nandar Win, Myat Sandi

YANGON REGION is a place where most of the income of the nation earns. All the goods are also flowing into the region from every corner of the country. Economic development in this region will surely bring about development of other regions and states. The following is the views of economic experts on development of Yangon:

Economic Researcher U Khin Maung Nyo (Economics)

“Yes, they are doing out of their goodwill. But I think Yangon is shouldering a great burden. Whatever they say, people have very high hope on them. It is just like the saying ‘Nothing bears out in practice what it promises incipiency.’ My opinion is that a well planned and brilliantly executed idea is needed. Nature of the economies proves the fact that the fewer the rules the better for carrying out the economic activities. But there may be differences based on the different types of economy. Some say it is a good time for doing business but some think differently. It is because of the type of the business. A year ago, some said that construction works were bad, but now it seems pretty good.”

U Thurein Aung (Vice President, Myanmar Japan Thilawa Development Ltd.)

“Yangon is a very important region as it is an economic hub of the country. Projects implemented and policies laid down in Yangon can have great influence on other parts of the country with good prospects. I would like to say that whatever decision is made, it will have a great impact on the whole country.”

U Wai Phyo (Vice President, UMFCCI)

“Yangon’s economic situation is good but there are many difficulties and limitations. Industrial zones and roads are expanded because only when Yangon sees development, will the whole nation be prosperous. There has been a great migration from all parts of the country to Yangon to find good jobs and as a result the city became a big city.

Consumer goods and food prices are high in Yangon and other parts of the country follow suit. Commodity prices needs to be controlled to become a wealthy nation. As long as the prices cannot be controlled, the middle class cannot improve itself.

Increase the salary is not the answer because this will end up in spending and the nation will not develop.

There will be no wealth. Every country has a problem of the economy proves the fact that the fewer the rules the better. My opinion is that a well planned and brilliantly executed idea is needed. Nature of the economies proves the fact that the fewer the rules the better for carrying out the economic activities. But there may be differences based on the different types of economy. Some say it is a good time for doing business but some think differently. It is because of the type of the business. A year ago, some said that construction works were bad, but now it seems pretty good.”

U Thet Lwin Toe (Vice Chairman, Myanmar Tourism Federation)

“With a great tradition, Yangon lies on sea, land and air routes. Regarding tourism industry, Yangon needs to preserve its cultural heritages and create tourist attractions which have no impact on environment. Yangon is a place for human resource development and it is a strategic point for national security. The city is being expanded, and its economy is also expanded. It has only one waterway, Yangon River. Therefore it is important to maintain the watercourse through discussions with experts. Master plan is needed for the long run.”

U Thardu (Chairman, Myanmar Arts and Crafts Association)

“Currently, we have to struggle on our own. I believe there will be more good opportunities for the people as the government has entered into the second year term. I saw weakness in cooperation with government departments. I would like to suggest the government to give support to those who deserve, I mean, government should support the businesses that will bring benefit to the nation and its people.”

Daw Ohnmar Maw (Executive Director, Awards Logistics Co., Ltd.)

“It is expected to see development not only in major business but in small and medium enterprises due to great interest of big international companies as well as SME entrepreneurs around the world. At this juncture, government’s support for local entrepreneurs is of great importance to be able to compete with foreign firms in every business sector. Only when the country doubles its efforts, can it be able to compete with ASEAN countries and abreast of international communities.”

Today’s Yangon and food prices

Maung Maung Htwe

At home, my better half loves to watch me having my meals heartily as I prefer tea than a heavy meal and I used to have a small serving of food. But, delicious curry gives me a good appetite.

So, to satisfy me, my wife usually plans a good menu but later she used to say about the menu that becomes habitual to her. She said, “Do you know how much does this five fishes cost? Three thousand kyat!”

Although she does not mention the price every time I have my food stuck in my throat when I heard the price of the dish during my meal time.

“Well, our Yangon Region mostly relies on other regions and states for food and it is not too bad to get five fishes for three thousand kyat because one fish cost just 600 kyat for which we cannot catch.”

Though my words intend to comfort my wife, I am so scared of hearing the daily price escalation in Yangon.

Not just in this moment, but throughout history prices have escalated constantly and never drop in Yangon.

Around 1938, money was rare but foods were plenty in Yangon. A family with the earnings of just one hundred kyat can stand easily. A wife of a senior division clerk who earned 200 kyat per month could go shopping twice a day.

At that time, people turned their backs on fish of cheap price but preferred the expensive ones. Meats were also cheap and those who could spend just one kyat were from the upper class.

In 1970s, food prices were not too high because if you buy cramps for baits worth one fourth of a kyat you can get a lot. As for our parents who had grown up in the British colonial era it was too much for them.

After 1980, prices in Yangon showed the sign of skyrocketing. Then, the 88 uprising broke out due to hardships faced by the general public including escalated prices. After the crisis, market oriented economic system was introduced but the price escalation continued.

Famous writer Thawdar Swe wrote an article with the heading “May consumer price fall” in April 1989 in a magazine.

At that time it cost a housewife just 30 kyat for a viss of pork, 65 kyat for chicken and 35 to 40 kyat for fish.

Today, it is very rare to see the meat price under ten thousand kyat.

While having dinner at home, my wife asked me in advance what I want to have for the next day.

“Fried fish with a traditional soup, please.”

“What! Do you know the price of that fish? Two thousand kyat for fish.”

“Oh! My goodness!”

Ma Ma Naing

As I was late one morning, I rushed to the bus stop and before boarding the bus I kept 200 kyat note in my hand and jostled against crowded people to get onto the bus. Jostling again, I reached the back of the bus. At that time, the driver shouted “Put the bus fare into the box, there is no conductor.” It was difficult for me to turn to the front of the bus. It was rush hour and there were many office staff on the bus. It was hard to imagine how many of them were not familiar with the YBS system which should be aware of.

For the convenience of commuters, YBS buses were installed with air-conditioners, but crowded with people a young lady vomited up all she had eaten as she could not reach a plastic bag kept on the bus for this purpose. Air-conditioned buses are the goodwill of the responsible persons but above-mentioned incident is the example of a commuter who was not familiar with the YBS system which should be aware of. Commuters are to board the YBS buses from the front door and step out from the back door.

YBS buses compete against each other and thus the commuters have no idea where they will be going to make a stop. So they need to run to take the bus at the place where it is making a stop. According to my experience many thoughts came into my mind: if there is a timer at the bus stop to control the running of the buses; if drivers get equal salary; if there is no competing against each other; and so on. If something went wrong with realizing the objectives of the responsible persons regarding the YBS, it is time to find out solution to the following questions: system error?; drivers’ or conductors’ faults? the commuters’ mistakes? Earth’s wildernesses are disappearing, and not enough of them are World Heritage-listed

James Allan, James Watson

EARTH’S Last intact wilderness areas are being rapidly destroyed. More than 5 million square km of wilderness (around 10% of the total area) have been lost in the past two decades. If this continues, the consequences for both people and nature will be catastrophic.

Predominantly free of human activity, especially industrial-scale activities, large wilderness areas host a huge range of environmental values, including endangered species and ecosystems, and critical functions such as storing carbon and providing fresh water. Many indigenous people and local communities, who are often politically and economically marginalised, depend on wilderness areas and have deep cultural connections to them.

Yet despite being important and highly threatened, wilderness areas have been almost completely ignored in international environmental policy. Immediate proactive action is required to save them. The question is where such action could come from.

In a paper published in Conservation Biology, we argue that the United Nations’ World Heritage Convention should expand the amount of wilderness included in its list of Natural World Heritage Sites (NWHS). Wilderness areas are underrepresented among the 203 sites currently on the list. The World Heritage Committee’s meeting in Poland this week offers a good opportunity to redress the balance.

Whither wilderness?

The World Heritage Convention was adopted in 1972 by UNESCO (the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) to conserve the world’s most valuable natural and cultural sites – places of exceptional importance to all of humanity and future generations. Each one is unique and irreplaceable. Currently, 193 countries (almost the entire world) are parties to the convention, which has inscribed 526 natural sites around the world.

World Heritage Status is granted to places with “Outstanding Universal Value”, which is defined based on three pillars. First, a site must meet one of the four criteria for listing as natural World Heritage (aesthetic value, geological value, biological processes, and biodiversity conservation). Second, a site must have “integrity” and “intactness” of its values (in other words, it must be in excellent condition). Finally, a site must be officially protected by the national or subnational government under whose jurisdiction it falls.

Wilderness areas can be associated with all four of the natural criteria, as well as the integrity and intactness requirements. What’s more, a wilderness by definition cannot be recreated once it is lost. The argument for protecting wilderness areas by adding them to the NWHS list is therefore compelling.

We created the most up-to-date maps of terrestrial wilderness using recent maps of human pressure and assessed the World Heritage Convention’s current coverage of wilderness areas. We found that some 777,000 square km (around 2% of the total) are already protected in 52 Natural World Heritage Sites.

For example, more than 90% of the World Heritage-listed Purnululu National Park in the Kimberley region of Western Australia can be defined as a wilderness area. Similarly, the Okavango Delta in Botswana features more than 18,000 square km of wilderness, containing many of the world’s most endangered large mammals.

Wilderness boosts heritage value

In these cases, wilderness areas are likely contributing to the Outstanding Universal Value of these World Heritage Areas – which as explained above is a key consideration in how they are managed and protected.

One way to strengthen this protection further would be to redraw the boundaries of natural World Heritage Areas to include more wilderness. This would help to preserve the conditions that allow ecosystems and other heritage values to thrive. Our study identified broad gaps in wilderness coverage by the World Heritage Convention. Some places are already protected by national governments and could therefore be added to UNESCO’s list, such as the Hukaung Valley Tiger Reserve in Myanmar, which contains 4,000 square km of wilderness, and the Eduardo Avaroa Andean Fauna Reserve in Bolivia, which has 9,000 square km.
Earth’s wildernesses are disappearing, and not enough of them are World Heritage-listed

The places we have identified, and others, could potentially be designated as new Natural World Heritage Sites if they meet the other strict criteria for Outstanding Universal Values and integrity.

The World Heritage Convention could benefit from new objectives and make a substantial contribution to the conservation of wilderness areas by doing these four things:

1. formally acknowledge the Outstanding Universal Values of wilderness areas
2. strengthen the current protection of wilderness within WHS
3. expand or reconfigure current WHS to include more wilderness, and
4. designate new WHS in wilderness areas.

It’s up to national governments to submit sites for inscription as WHS, and we urge them to consider wilderness when doing so. This will strengthen their applications, and provide wilderness areas with the extra protection they need.

The UNESCO World Heritage Committee’s meeting in Poland this week will consider two sites with significant wilderness areas for World Heritage status: Qinghai Hoh Xil Nature Reserve in China and Los Alerces National Park in Argentina. We urge the committee to approve these sites, and use this to spur further opportunities to raise the profile of wilderness conservation worldwide. It is an obvious win-win.

The clock is ticking fast for our last wilderness areas and the biodiversity they protect. Immediate action is needed.

Immigrant fatally stabbed in Maungtaw Tsp

An undocumented immigrant who was visiting his wife in Maungtaw was stabbed to death yesterday by several attackers, according to Myanmar News Agency.

Muster Armurt, who was illegally staying in Zawmatet village in Maungtaw Township, was attacked by five men armed with knives in a field in the village at about 4am and suffered stab wounds in his neck, back and right leg. He was pronounced dead at a local hospital at about 5am.

Two villagers missing in Maungtaw

Two men from Thaechaung Village in Maungtaw Township have been missing since Sunday, according to local police.

Naing Win, also known as Jiaman, and Anu Hamad left in a car belonging to Naing Win at 10am on Sunday and did not return home. During a search for the two men, family members found the car abandoned near a football ground. The two men are still missing and an police investigation is continuing.—Myanmar News Agency

Myanmar, Thailand negotiate to solve migrant . . .

The original decree was issued in part to tackle human trafficking concerns raised by the international community, Deputy Prime Minister Wissanu Krea-ngam told reporters on Tuesday.

Despite the delay of the decree, undocumented workers are still returning to their home countries in droves.

Even as more and more migrant workers return home due to harsher law enforcement by Thai authorities, Ranong border gate officials allow only 100 people per day to cross the border. This has caused many Myanmar migrants to struggle to find enough food and lodging while waiting to cross back into Myanmar.

It is estimated that about 5 million Myanmar nationals are working in Thailand and of them, about 2,200,000 have proper documents, Union Minister U Thein Sein said. Meanwhile, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Mr. Filippo Grandi held talks with Union Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Dr Win Myat Aye in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday over accepting the Myanmar migrant workers who returned of their own volition from Thailand.

For those undocumented Myanmar workers who remain in Thailand, churches and affiliated organisations have been helping those who face difficulties returning home.

The Diocesan Social Action Center (DISAC) in Phuket is providing assistance to Myanmar migrant workers who want to go home but cannot.

DISAC is sending Myanmar migrant workers who do not have an employment permit to Ranong through Phuket. The association then sends them to Kawthoung in Myanmar, said an official from the DISAC.

Currently, DISAC has already sent about 400 Myanmar migrant workers to the Kawthoung through Ranong as of yesterday.—GNLM (Kyaw Soe (Kawthoung) also contributed to this story)
Singapore, Malaysia to award tender for high-speed rail in December 2018

SINGAPORE — Singapore and Malaysia aim to award the tender for the development of a high-speed rail linking them in December next year, according to company officials who attended an industry briefing organized by authorities from the two countries on Wednesday. Nearly 400 participants from 163 international and local firms attended the one-day briefing in Singapore, Malaysia’s MyHSR Corp and the Land Transport Authority of Singapore said in a joint statement at the end of the briefing which they organized. They included a consortium of 10 Japanese companies, including East Japan Railway Co (JR East) and the Japan Bank for International Cooperation, Japanese sources told reporters. The 360-kilometre high-speed rail linking Singapore with Kuala Lumpur — a bilateral initiative of the Singapore and Malaysian governments — is expected to start operating by December 2026, reducing travel time between them to just about 90 minutes from 4 to 5 hours now by road.

Ngien Hoon Ping, chief executive of the LDA, said there was “strong interest from companies all over the world” in the briefing and reaffirmed a tender will be called by the end of this year. “We look forward to receiving quality bids from various consortia,” he said.

Some participants told reporters that the tender will be opened in December this year, with the deadline for submission of tender applications slated for June next year, and the award to be announced in December next year. The sources said the participants included those from Japan, China, South Korea and Europe.

One company official speaking on condition of anonymity said, “I think it will be China versus Japan in the finals,” although he also saw South Korea as a possible dark horse.

Some executives from local firms from Singapore and Malaysia have also expressed interest in joining the consortia formed by the bigger players for a slice of the pie in the multibillion dollar project.—Reuters

China invites foreign experts to help treat ailing dissident Liu

BEIJING — China invited medical experts from the United States and Germany to help treat dissident Nobel laureate Liu Xiaobo for cancer, a local government announced on Wednesday, in a softening of its stance ahead of an upcoming summit in Germany.

Liu, 61, was jailed for 11 years in 2009 for “inciting subversion of state power” after he helped write a petition known as “Charter ‘08” calling for sweeping political reforms. He was recently moved from jail to a hospital to be treated for late-stage liver cancer.

The hospital, in the northeastern city of Shenyang, made the decision at the request of the family and in consultation with the doctors already treating him, the Shenyang Bureau of Justice said in a short statement on its website.

The hospital, in the northeastern city of Shenyang, made the decision at the request of the family and in consultation with the doctors already treating him, the Shenyang Bureau of Justice said in a short statement on its website.

It provided no other details. Officials who picked up the telephone at the hospital said they were unaware of the case.

A source close to Liu’s family said the invitation was a positive step that greatly increased transparency around Liu’s illness and the chance that he would receive the best possible treatment available.

“The fact that they specially chose the US and Germany suggests that the authorities are considering allowing Liu to travel to one of these two countries,” the source said, although there were still questions about how the doctors would be chosen and what access they would have.

Asked if the move would lead to Liu leaving the country, Foreign Ministry spokesman Geng Shuang told a regular briefing, “We hope other countries can respect China’s judicial sovereignty and not meddle in China’s internal affairs.”

Rights group Amnesty International said the move appeared in part “an attempt to limit international criticism” even as the government continued to refuse to allow Liu to be treated overseas.

“Time is running out for Liu Xiaobo,” said Salil Shetty, Amnesty’s secretary general. “It is not too late for the authorities to end this cruel farce. They must let Liu Xiaobo and his wife, Liu Xia, travel abroad to get the medical treatment he so desperately needs.”

The US embassy in Beijing declined to comment. Newly appointed US Ambassador to China Terry Branstad said last week the United States would like to see Liu treated elsewhere for his cancer.

The German embassy also declined to comment.

The move comes ahead of President Xi Jinping’s attendance at a summit of the Group of 20 nations in the German city of Hamburg on Friday and Saturday, where Xi will seek to project Chinese leadership on issues such as climate change and free trade.—Reuters

Austria laments “misunderstanding” with Italy on border controls

VIENNA — A dispute between Italy and Austria over possible controls on their shared border was a “misunderstanding”, Austrian Chancellor Christian Kern said on Wednesday, assuring Rome that his army had not put tanks at a crucial frontier crossing.

Austrian Defence Minister Hans Peter Doskozil said in remarks published on Tuesday that he expected controls to be imposed “very soon” at the border with Italy, prompting a furious response from Rome.

An official from his ministry added that four armoured vehicles and 750 troops were ready to be deployed if necessary.

“One must clear up misunderstandings like the ones that have evidently arisen with Italy,” Kern told a joint news conference with Doskozil, adding that Austria was preparing to introduce controls at the important Brenner crossing if there were a surge in migrant arrivals there, but there was no need to at present.

“We are not deploying tanks at Brenner and I can emphasise again that cooperation with Italy is really good,” Kern said, adding that there was no indication Italy was not in control of the situation on its southern flank, where there has been a surge in the number of migrants crossing the Mediterranean.—Reuters

Russian nuclear sub test-launches cruise missile in Barents Sea

MURMANSK — Russia’s Smolensk nuclear-powered submarine has conducted a successful test launch of a cruise missile that hit the designated target in the Barents Sea, the Northern Fleet’s press service said on Wednesday.

“From the underwater position, a Granit missile was fired against a combined seaborne target at a distance of about 400 kilometres,” a fleet spokesperson said. “The target was successfully hit.”

The launch was carried out as part of a scheduled combat training.

Northern Fleet Commander Vice Admiral Nikolai Yevmenov, the crew “demonstrated high professionalism and naval skills” during the launch.

The Smolensk is a Project 949A Antey-class submarine built in 1990. The submarines of this class displace 24,000 tons, have an underwater speed of 32 knots and a crew of 107. They are armed with 24 launchers of Granit cruise missiles with a range of about 500m km and six torpedo tubes.—Tass

Seven die in downtown Johannesburg building blaze

JOHANNESBURG — Seven people died in a high-rise apartment block fire in Johannesburg on Wednesday including a man who jumped to his death to escape the flames, emergency services said.

Emergency workers said there could be more bodies inside the Cape York building in South Africa’s commercial capital and that they had launched a search operation.

Fifty people were rescued from the building and some were being treated for smoke inhalation, emergency services spokesman Nana Hadebe said, adding that the fire had been contained.

Residents made ropes from sheets to get out through their apartment windows to flee the blaze, witnesses said on Twitter.

Hadebe said the cause of the fire, in an impoverished downtown neighbourhood near the Ellis Park rugby stadium, as well as the tourist district of Maboneng, was not immediately known.

Johannesburg Mayor Herman Mashaba told local media the building was illegally occupied and such “hijacked” buildings now posed a crisis in the city.

“The tragedy at Cape York in the Inner City is a narrative all too familiar. Residents live in squalor and pay with their lives,” Mashaba tweeted.

In 2013 a fire killed four people in the same building, which had no running water or electricity at the time, South Africa’s Sunday Times reported, but occupants moved back in soon afterward.—Reuters

Merkel takes aim at US “winners and losers” policy before G20

BERLIN — German Chancellor Angela Merkel sharply criticised US policy under President Donald Trump on Wednesday, two days before they are due to meet at the G20 summit, for being based on a “winners and losers” view of the world rather than cooperation.

Merkel will host the two-day meeting of G20 leaders that starts on Friday in Hamburg. Along with Trump, others attending include Russian President Vladimir Putin and Turkey’s Tayyip Erdogan.

The talks are expected to be tricky as the agenda includes divisive issues such as free trade and climate change.

“As G20 president, it is my job to work on possibilities for agreement and not to contribute to a situation where a lack of communication prevails,” she told Die Zeit weekly.

However, she added that differences should not be pushed under the table.

“We while we are looking at the possibilities of cooperation to benefit everyone, globalisation is seen by the American administration more as a process that is not about a win-win situation but about winners and losers,” she said.

She said comments from a Trump security advisor that the world was an arena, not a global community, contradicted her views.

Germany wants everyone to benefit from economic progress rather than only a few, she said.

Europe must pool its energy, she said, adding that ideas of an economic government for the euro zone and of a European finance minister, put forward by new French President Emmanuel Macron, were “two important thoughts”.

Tens of thousands of protesters are expected to march in the city this week against globalisation and what they say is corporate greed and a failure to tackle climate change.

Merkel said she respected peaceful demonstrators in Hamburg but “anyone who gets violent spurns democracy”.

UN survey finds cybersecurity gaps everywhere except Singapore

Geneva — Singapore has a near-perfect approach to cybersecurity, but many other rich countries have holes in their defences and some poorer countries are showing they should be done, a UN survey showed on Wednesday.

Wealth breeds cybercrime, but it does not automatically generate cybersecurity, so governments need to make sure they are prepared, the survey said. The United States came second in the ITU’s Global Cybersecurity Index, but many of the other highly rated countries were small or developing economies. The rest of the top 10 were Malaysia, Oman, Estonia, Mauritius, Australia, Georgia, France and Canada.

The survey said: “There is still an evident gap between countries in terms of awareness, understanding, knowledge and finally capacity to deploy the proper strategies, capabilities and programs,” the survey said.

The United States came second in the ITU’s Global Cybersecurity Index, but many of the other highly rated countries were small or developing economies. The rest of the top 10 were Malaysia, Oman, Estonia, Mauritius, Australia, Georgia, France and Canada.

The ranking was based on countries’ legal, technical and organisational institutions, their educational and research capabilities, and their cooperation in information-sharing networks. “Cybersecurity is an ecosystem where laws, organizations, skills, cooperation and technical implementation need to be in harmony to be most effective,” the survey said.

“The degree of interconnectivity of networks implies that anything and everything can be exposed, and everything from national critical infrastructure to our basic human rights can be compromised,” the survey said. The crucial first step was to adopt a national security strategy, but 50 per cent of countries have none, the survey said.

Philippine troops arrest Marawi militants’ ‘main financier’

Manila — Philippine security forces arrested on Wednesday the main financier and logistics supporter of the pro-Islamic State militants who have been fighting government troops for control of a southern town, the army said.

The militants from a faction known as the Maute group, seized the town of Marawi on 23 May and are resisting daily assaults by government forces using aircraft and artillery, and with help from allies the United States and Australia.

Security forces raided a village not far from Marawi and detained three suspects found with ammunition and material for making bombs, an army spokesman, Brigadier-General Gilbert Gapay said. One of those detained was an important supporter of the Maute group who Gapay identified as Monaliza Romoto, alias Monay.

The woman is a niece of the matriarch of the Maute clan, whose men- filesystem and organisational infrastructure to everything can be exposed, implies that anything and everything can be exposed, and everything can be exposed, and everything can be exposed, and everything can be exposed.

Priyanka Chopra becomes Academy member, praises diversity push

LOS ANGELES — Priyanka Chopra is one of the newest members of the Academy of Motion Picture of Arts & Sciences (AMPAS) and the actress has praised the ongoing push for racial and gender equality.

Following two years of sharp criticism and back-to-back ceremonies with an all-white slate of acting nominees, AMPAS last week invited a record 774 new members from 57 countries around the world to join the organisations ranks, reported Entertainment Weekly.

“While the numbers have their own story to tell, I think it’s important to recognise that progress is being made. It’s going to take some time to correct, but continuous efforts always help,” Priyanka said.

The 34-year-old Indian actress, who made her foray into the West with TV series “Quantico”, said the Academy should move beyond a single award for foreign language films and include them in other major categories.

“It’s interesting that though (past Indian) winners were Indian, it was for their work in international films? largely about India, but not made by India. For a global community like India to be represented on a larger scale, I think it will have to move beyond a single award for all foreign language films.

“It is very rare to see foreign language films represented in the other categories,” she said.

Apart from Priyanka, other Indian stars who have been invited to join the Academy and vote in the Oscars include the likes of, megastar Amitabh Bachchan, Aamir Khan, Aishwarya Rai Bachchan, filmmakers Goutam Ghose, Buddhaabed Dasgupta, Salman Khan, Irrfan Khan and Deepika Padukone.

Priyanka said the class of 2017 “does have a very diverse collection, including a few from my country, and one hopes that we all work together to push the larger picture’. I’d like to see more opportunities for foreign films to be represented at the Oscars.”

Actor Phyllicia Rashad, Rinko Kikuchi, Aldis Hodge, Sanaa Lathan, Terry Crews, Colman Domingo, and Anna Deavere Smith, and Colombiant filmmaker Patricia Cardoso have also accepted the AMPAS invitation. —PTI ■

Lagerfeld parades Chanel models under mini Eiffel Tower

PARIS — Karl Lagerfeld presented Chanel’s haute couture collection under a scaled-down version of the Eiffel Tower on Tuesday.

Haute couture fashion week is open to an exclusive club of designers who make bespoke collections by hand and includes Chanel, Dior and Jean-Paul Gaultier.

Lagerfeld has a history of eye-catching set designs for his runway shows and models have previously weaved through an airport departure lounge, a supermarket and a busy brasserie.

This season it was back to basics with the mock-up tower straddling a catwalk inside the Grand Palais.

Models paraded in demure A-line skirts, hooded coats and wide-legged jumpsuits in classic Chanel tweed.

They were crowned with matching bowler-style hats in keeping with the collection’s vintage feel, although their transparent low block heels added a modern twist. Another of Lagerfeld’s labels, Fendi, is set to close the Paris fashion week on Wednesday.—Reuters ■

Tove Lo wants to pursue acting

LONDON — Swedish singer Tove Lo says she is eyeing a career in Hollywood and is dreaming of working with director Quentin Tarantino.

The 29-year-old singer, who has become a huge star in her native Sweden, says she would love to move into acting in the coming years, reported Femalefirst.

“I definitely want to do more. Anything by director Quentin Tarantino I would want to be a part of. That’s my big dream. That would be amazing,” Tove says.

The songstress is known for her controversial on-stage antics, but insists she can be a good role model for young children. “Usually the question is, ‘Don’t you feel you should be ashamed for setting a bad example to young girls?’ singing bluntly about sex, drugs and everything...”

A lot of my fans come up to me and say ‘you make me feel better about me just as me.’”, she says.—PTI ■

Korean drama stars Song Joong Ki, Song Hye Kyo to wed in October

SEUL — South Korean soap opera fans across Asia and beyond woke up Wednesday to the surprise announcement by stars Song Joong Ki and Song Hye Kyo that they will get married in October, despite their having flatly denied rumours of an off-screen romance.

The 31-year-old actor and 35-year-old actress played the leading roles as a soldier-doctor couple in the 2016 TV drama “Descendants of the Sun,” which became immensely popular not only in South Korea but also elsewhere in Asia.

The two stars will tie the knot on 31 October, their agencies said, explaining that they had previously denied the relationship because “the situation demanded caution as marriage is a joining of not just two people but of two families.”

Song Hye Kyo won fame in dramas such as “Autumn in My Heart” and “All In,” while the “Descendants” series shot Song Joong Ki to mega stardom.

The actor will also star in the upcoming film “The Battleship Island,” which depicts the story of an attempted escape by forced coal mine labourers on the island of Hashima during the Japanese occupation-era. The movie is scheduled for release in July.—Kyodo News ■

LONDON — Squeezed into a small and sweaty East London nightclub at 3 a.m., the Slew Dem Crew spits bars to a raucous audience revelling in the fast-growing musical obsession.

Grime, developed from garage and rap, has been enjoying a breakout period since British artist Skepta launched the genre his way last year. British artist Skepta's garage and rap, has been musical obsession.

In the small nightclubs, cafes and independent radio stations in the capital, the accolades and recognition are drowning out the critics who say the music glamorizes violence.

"To those critics I would say you haven't listened to enough grime music because there's so many creative people in the scene for someone to belittle us with that statement," Rage, 32, a member of the Slew Dem Crew, told Reuters.

"Grime is now being accepted all over the world. We are seeing people of all races and genders actively listening to, buying and making grime music." The grime artists do tackle drugs, money, respect, turf wars and other gritty topics, all set over a tempo of 140 beats per minute. "A lot of us come from dark backgrounds and deeper struggles so the real lyrics we write may have violence in them but it's just a form of expression," said Clipson, another member of the Slew Dem Crew.

Peru reveals replica of face of ancient female ruler

LIMA, PERU — She died in her twenties some 1,700 years ago, and is believed to have ruled over a desert valley in ancient Peru where her elaborately tattooed body was buried with weapons and gold objects.

But a glimpse of the former priestess, the Lady of Cao, can now be seen in a replica of her face unveiled by culture officials and archaeologists on Monday.

Using 3D imaging technology and forensic archaeology, the replica was based on the Lady of Cao's skull structure and ethnoarchaeological research and took 10 months to create, Peru's culture ministry said.

Lima, Peru — Replica of Cao, a female mummy found at the archaeological site Huaca El Brujo, a grand pyramid of the ancient Moche pre-hispanic culture, is seen at the Ministry of Culture in Lima, Peru on 4 July 2017. PHOTO: REUTERS

The goal, said Culture Minister Salvador del Solar, was to bring the world closer to one of Peru's best archaeological finds and remind Peruvians of their rich cultural heritage.

"Its relevance is really incalculable," del Solar said of the oval-shaped face with high cheekbones on display under a golden crown. "We can now show the world her face, a face that Peruvians see ourselves in."

The discovery of the Lady of Cao's mummified remains in 2005 shattered the belief that the ancient Moche society, which occupied the Chicama Valley from about 100 to 700 AD, was patriarchal. Several Moche female mummies have been found since in graves with objects denoting a high political and religious standing.

Archaeologists believe the Lady of Cao died due to complications of childbirth but otherwise lived a healthy life. Her arms and legs were covered with tattoos of snakes, spiders and other supernatural motifs. Discovered near her funerary bundle was a strangled baby, who might have been a sacrifice to guide her into the afterlife, according to the museum at the El Brujo archaeological site where she was found.

The Lady of Cao is a reminder of the complex societies that thrived in what is now Peru long before the Inca empire dominated the Andes or Europeans arrived in the Americas.

The Moche built irrigation canals to grow crops in the desert and were known for their ceramics and goldwork that have been looted from their gravesites.

The replica of the Lady of Cao, a collaboration that included archaeologists, the Wiese Foundation and global imaging company FARO Technologies Inc, will be displayed in Peru's culture ministry in the capital Lima through July 16. It will later be shown at the museum at El Brujo.

Messi set for bumper new deal at Barcelona

BARCELONA — Barcelona forward Lionel Messi is set to sign a new contract to keep him at the La Liga club until 2021 with the option of a further one-year extension, according to media reports.

The five-times Ballon d'Or winner has been at Barcelona for close to two decades, rising through their youth system to become one of the most successful and recognisable footballers in the world.

The Argentina international is expected to officially sign the deal when he returns to the club for pre-season training and the talisman's new release clause is reported to have risen to 300 million euros ($340.65 million).

One of the biggest names in sport, the 30-year-old is the all-time top scorer for club and country. His expansive list of honours includes eight Spanish league titles and four Champions League trophies with Barcelona since his senior debut in 2003.

We are preparing from the start of this month as we have to compete in Group F qualifier matches. We will compete and have a great respect to our opponents in the matches said Australian Coach Josep Gombau.

All the national teams have been divided into 10 groups and Myanmar is included in Group-F together with Australia, Singapore and Brunei. The group winners will also be joined by five best second-place finishers and host China in the final round of the competition scheduled in 2018 January.

Myanmar U-23 national team also features many players who were part of the 2015 U-20 World Cup hosted in New Zealand.

Myanmar will face Singapore in the opening match on 19July, followed by Brunei on 21 July and Australia on 23 July respectively.

Chelsea’s Abraham joins Swansea on a season-long loan

LONDON — Chelsea striker Tammy Abraham has joined Swansea City on a season-long loan deal, the Welsh club said on Tuesday.

Abraham, who also signed a new five-year contract with his parent club, scored 26 goals in 48 games on loan at English Championship side Bristol City last season.

He also scored once in four games as England’s under-21 side reached the semi-finals of the European Championship last month. The 19-year-old will join Swansea boss Paul Clement, who worked as a coach at Chelsea between 2007 and 2011.

Pacquiao backs call for review of Horn decision

MANILA, PHILIPPINES — Manny Pacquiao has backed a call asking the World Boxing Organization (WBO) to review the controversial points decision that saw Australia’s Jeff Horn capture the Filipino great’s welterweight world title in Brisbane on Sunday.

Horn improved his unbeaten record to 17-0-1 after the judges scored the bout 117-111, 115-113 and 115-113 in the 29-year-old’s favour but many observers questioned the outcome, saying the officials had made a “hometown decision”.

While Horn dismissed criticism of his win, the regulatory body of professional sport in the Philippines, the Games and Amusement Board (GAB), requested a “thorough review” of the fight on Monday and Pacquiao has backed their demand.

“WBO should take appropriate action on the letter sent by the Games and Amusement Board (GAB) so as not to erode the people’s interest in boxing,” eight-division world champion Pacquiao said in a statement on Wednesday.

“On my part, I had already accepted the decision but as a leader and, at the same time, fighter, I have the moral obligation to uphold sportsmanship, truth and fairness in the eyes of the public.”

“I love boxing and I don’t wanna see it dying because of (an) unfair decision and officiating.”

On Tuesday, the WBO said that the decision could not be reversed and highlighted the rematch clause in both fighters’ contracts.

“The discretion of a referee or judge cannot be reversed, except in a case of fraud or violation of laws which is not the case in Pac vs Horn,” the organisation said on their Twitter account.
