Return illegal arms, devices, vehicles to police: MOHA

AS Myanmar has enforced an arms holding rule, all arms including air guns and home-made guns need a license to be used. Permits for using arms are granted only after scrutinising applicants by the Ministry of Home Affairs. Similarly, communication machines are permitted to be used only after a license for use is granted by the Myanmar Telecommunications.

While the Myanmar Police Force has been taking measures against using unlicensed vehicles, arms and accessories and illegal communication devices, authorities seized two pistols, ammunition, three communication devices and accessories from three passengers at the Nay Pyi Taw International Airport on 15 October.

22 more telecommunication towers being built in Maungtaw

The construction of MPT telecommunications towers will start this month in Nga Khuya, Khon Taing and Pandawpin villages of Maungtaw district and the project will finish within 50 days, resulting in 80 per cent coverage of the network area, according to U Saw San Htwe, a supervisor of the network area, according to head of Myanmar Telecommunication Enterprise.

Ground inspections for acquiring land for construction of towers are being carried out and construction will start soon. The telecommunication system will also be upgraded for better network connections.

“In northern Maungtaw, only a small number of towers are present. In some places, communication is accessed through the satellite, however connections through the satellite are limited. After tower construction in Nga Khuya and Khon Taing is finished, the connections in those areas will become better. Previously, microlinks were constructed for emergencies and, as the area is mountainous, we have replaced microlinks gradually to get a better result”, said U Saw San Htwe.

Among all the towers in the Maungtaw area, only two can transmit both MPT and Telenor. The others are transmitting only MPT. Huawei was given permission to construct the present towers under the supervision of Myanmar Telecommunication Enterprise.

AN event to disseminate the Myanmar Epilepsy Project conducted by the Ministry of Health and Sports in cooperation with the World Health Organization (WHO) was held at the public hospital of Nyaunglebin town in Bago Region on Tuesday.

Present at the meeting were Dr San Oo, project manager of the Myanmar Epilepsy Project, the deputy township administrator and officials and staff from the township health department.

Dr San Oo from the Department of Neurology said epilepsy is a neurological disorder that can cause sudden unconsciousness because of a surge of electrical activity in the brain. More health educative talks will be conducted with an aim at raising the awareness of epilepsy to the public, as they have little understanding of the disease, which is incurable.

“Eighty per cent of epilepsy cases can be controlled or cured.

Those with a lack of knowledge about the disease regard epilepsy as an incurable disease, but we will endeavour to correct misunderstandings about the disease,” Dr San Oo said.

“The unique point of this project is that we will probably discover people who suffer from epilepsy, and free medical treatment will be provided to them”.

This nationwide project was initiated in 2013 and already covers 10 townships. Nyaunglebin Township will be the 11th township for this project, and the very first township for the epilepsy project in the Bago Region. — Thet Lwin (IPRD) ■

MORE than 10,000 acres of edible oil crops are planned to develop in Mandalay, Magway and Sagaing regions next year, according to a report of Myawady Daily last Sunday.

As pilot projects, 30 acres of edible oil crop in Aunglan and Myingyan townships and 20 acres in Yamethin Township have been cultivated. Yamethin Township is planned to grow up to 100 acres, said U Aung Kyaw Kyaw, the secretary 1 of Myanmar Rice Millers Association.

Eleven kinds of Sinpadatha peanut and Santani peanut (local varieties) are planned to grow in the project acres. In the contract farming system, the businessmen have agreed to give six baskets of pedigree seeds per acre and nine baskets will be returned when the peanuts are harvested.

Vehicle import policy changes increase slip price

May Thet Hnin

The price of a slip for a car is on the rise following an announcement of a change in vehicle import policy. The Supervisory Committee for Motor Vehicle Imports released an official announcement on 16 October that model year 2014 would be the oldest cars allowed for vehicle import in 2018. Also, only vehicles with left-hand drive are allowed to be imported under the new policy.

The announcement hiked up the slip price from Ks11 to Ks14 million.

“Cars with right-hand drive are highly demanded in the market. Importers do not think deeply and bring high numbers of vehicles into the country, which makes the slip price gradually increase. There has been a demand only from those dealers who want to resell the cars. Auto brokers currently stockpile the vehicles”, said car dealer Ko Ayaykyo.

Dr Soe Tun, the managing director of Farmer Auto Company, said the import businesses might come to stop as 95 per cent of imported cars in Myanmar’s automobile market are used cars from Japan.

The new vehicle import policy affects cars imported with a slip as a return of deregistration of old vehicles, cars imported under consignment system, individually imported cars, black-licensed cars, vehicles for religious use, mini-buses, passenger buses, vehicles donated from abroad, fire trucks, ambulances, hearses, state-owned vehicles, machinery which cannot be driven on public road such as excavators, bulldozers, and asphalt finishers.

“I am satisfied with new vehicle import policy, as Myanmar is right-driving country and therefore, vehicles with left-hand drive ensures road safety. As the import model year limit is 2014, the latest-model vehicles will be seen on Myanmar’s roads”, said Ko Ayaykyo.

The vehicle import policy changes will not affect 1350 CC cars, but the price of trucks is likely to rise. The vehicle prices are expected to rise by between Ks2 and Ks3 million.

“Currently, the price is high in the auto market and so is demand”, said Dr Soe Tun. The policy changes might have a negative impact on right-hand importers on a manageable scale and import enterprises.

“Nevertheless, brand new showrooms benefit from the policy changes. Vehicles such as Suzuki and Nissan, which are locally installed and manufactured, get an advantage”, said Ko Ayaykyo.

Paddy price increases Ks100,000 over last year

WITH rice exports to foreign countries increasing, the paddy price this year is up by Ks100,000 compared to that of last year, according to Tuesday’s report of Myawady Daily.

Normally, a basket of paddy weighs 46 pounds, but now, due to the higher grain moisture content, more pounds have been added to the basket. A basket weighing 52-55 pounds now fetches Ks500,000 to Ks520,000. Last year’s paddy price was about Ks400,000 in the similar period.

Annually, rice is harvested in bulk at the end of October and into November. At that time, the price usually tends to decline. But the paddy price this year is reasonable in spite of the fact that the production of paddy decreased. Paddies cannot be harvested because of rain, U Thein Aung, the chairperson of Independent Farmers Association told Myawady Daily.

More than 1.7 million tons of rice have been exported so far this year. Sixty per cent of Myanmar’s rice exports go to China.

Myanmar’s rice has penetrated 44 foreign markets of countries in Africa, Asia and Europe, including Spain, Germany, Japan, Malaysia, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Singapore and Bangladesh. Myanmar already signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Bangladesh to export 300,000 tons of rice to Bangladesh under the government-to-government (G-to-G) system.—GNLM

Mung bean and pigeon peas traded at bargain price in Yangon market

WITH the pulses price declining, pigeon pea (red grams) was recently traded at lower price than set price in Yangon market, according to Tuesday’s report of Myawady Daily. The prices of pigeon peas were decreasing from Ks399,000 to Ks378,500 per ton between 9 and 11 October.

Following the suspension on pea import by India, domestic pulses price plummeted. To control the price, Myanmar Puls'es, Beans and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association and the State contribute Ks50 billion each and shortly thereafter, floor price was officially released. The floor prices are Ks500,000 for a ton of mung bean and Ks400,000 for a ton of pigeon pea. Nevertheless, the peas were traded at lower market price in Yangon market. On 10 October, 25 containers loaded with pigeon peas were traded at bargain price and 30 containers filled with mung beans were also traded at lower price. Similarly, 10 containers of mung bean were traded at Ks405,000 and 25 containers loaded with red grams were traded at Ks380,000 on 13 October.

Selling at a floor price can earn more than market price. Currently, there are also sales with set price and so, trading with bargain price is likely to decrease.—GNLM

High-level UN meeting strengthens civil registration and vital statistics systems in Asia-Pacific

BANGKOK (ESCAP News) — Policymakers and experts are gathering at a United Nations led meeting in Bangkok this week to strengthen civil registration and vital statistics (CRVS) systems in Asia and the Pacific, and improve the health, education, and human rights protections for people in region.

Approximately 135 million children under the age of 5 in Asia-Pacific have not had their birth registered. Without proper legal identity and recognition from the state, these children can face numerous challenges in accessing health care and education, and are more vulnerable, including to statelessness and human trafficking.

Many countries in the region rely on less timely and often costly sources of data, including household surveys and censuses even for critical vital statistics including infant mortality and cause of death as well as basic population counts. Although there is strong commitment from countries to close these gaps, there is still significant work to be done in order to achieve well-functioning, universal and accessible national CRVS systems.

“Following the declaration of the CRVS Decade 2015-2024, the Asia-Pacific region has made tremendous strides toward getting ‘every-one in the picture’ but to complete the picture, stronger data collection efforts are required which will ensure legal identities for all and improved governance,” said United Nations Under Secretary General and Executive Secretary of the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) Dr Shamshad Akhtar.

The third meeting of the Regional Steering Group for CRVS in Asia-Pacific, convened by ESCAP from 18 to 20 October, will provide guidance and comprehensive support to member countries on a wide range of issues from proper collection, production, dissemination and use of evidence through coordination among relevant stakeholders. The meeting will decide on how to support countries to accelerate the progress towards achieving the goals of the Asia Pacific CRVS Decade. This includes determining the modalities of the midterm review of the Decade.

Participants will focus on the link between CRVS, national development and the Sustainable Development Goals, review the region’s current development situation, including strategies and mechanisms driving improvements, as well as the best approaches for utilizing regional and global supports.

“If we want to ensure no one is left behind, we need to make everyone visible through birth registration. Together we can give every child a birthday,” said Ms. Rasy Akbar, Minister of Health and Medical Services, Fiji and Chair of the Regional Steering Group for CRVS in Asia-Pacific.

Twenty-two countries are members of the Regional Steering Group including: Armenia, Australia, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Cambodia, the Cook Islands, Fiji, India, Indonesia, Islamic Republic of Iran, Kazakhstan, Malaysia, Mongolia, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Philippines, Republic of Korea, Thailand, Turkey, United States of America, Uzbekistan, and Vanuatu.

Representatives from the group’s development partners also include: UNHCR, Plan International, World Vision, UNICEF, Bloomberg Data for Health Initiative, World Bank, Brisbane Accord Group, and WHO.

Xi unveils plan to make China "great modern socialist country" by mid-21st century

BEIJING — Xi Jinping on Wednesday unveiled a two-stage plan of the Communist Party of China (CPC) to make China a "great modern socialist country" by mid-21st century.

It was announced in a report Xi delivered to the 19th CPC National Congress at the Great Hall of the People in central Beijing.

This is the first time that the CPC has set forth a post-2020 strategic plan to make China a "great" country. The Party is expected to complete the building of a moderately prosperous society in all respects by 2020.

According to the new plan, the CPC will basically realize socialist modernization in the first stage from 2020 to 2035, before developing China into a "great modern socialist country" that is "prosperous, strong, democratic, culturally advanced, harmonious and beautiful" after another 15 years.

This means the CPC now aims to basically achieve socialist modernization of the country around 15 years ahead of its previous schedule set by the Party's three strategic goals, which were laid out after the adoption of the reform and opening up policy in late 1970s.

The two-stage development plan is the CPC's "strategic vision for developing socialism with Chinese characteristics in the new era," Xi said.

According to the plan, the following goals will have been met by 2035:

China's economic and technological strength has increased significantly. China has become a global leader in innovation.

— The rights of the people to participate and to develop as equals are adequately protected. The rule of law for the country, the government, and society is basically in place. Institutions in all fields are further improved; the modernization of China's system and capacity for governance is basically achieved.

— Social etiquette and civility are significantly enhanced. China's cultural soft power has grown much stronger; Chinese culture has greater appeal.

— People are leading more comfortable lives, and the size of the middle-income group has grown considerably. Disparities in urban-rural development, in development between regions, and in living standards are significantly reduced; equitable access to basic public services is basically ensured; and solid progress has been made toward prosperity for everyone.

— A modern social governance system has basically taken shape, and society is full of vitality, harmonious, and orderly.

Indonesia anticipates return of militants from liberated Philippine city of Marawi

JAKARTA — Indonesia said on Wednesday that it would intensify coordination with the Philippines over possible return of militants taking part in the siege of Marawi following liberation of the southern Philippines city from terrorists' control.

Lauding the defeat of terrorists in Marawi, spokesman of the Foreign Affairs Ministry Armanatha Nasir said Indonesia would continue monitoring the situation, particularly the anticipating wave of Indonesian militant return to the country.

"Indonesia positively welcome the latest results (defeat of terrorists) in Marawi. This is what Indonesia and the Philippines have been attempting for. It is resulted from the trilateral cooperation between Indonesia, the Philippines and Malaysia," Nasir said.

The three Southeast Asian nations have conducted joint patrol to address security threat in southern Philippines waters, mostly from piracy of Philippine terrorist groups.

Nasir confirmed death of Indonesian militants during the battle in Marawi that erupted since May, saying that it had also been verified by the Philippines authorities.

Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte announced liberation of Marawi from terrorists earlier this week after the military killed terrorist groups' leaders Isnilon Hapilon and Omar Khayyam Maute.

The five-month siege over Marawi has claimed 1,000 lives and displaced 400,000 others, reports said.

Viet Nam arrests dissident for attempt to overthrow government

HANOI — Vietnamese police have arrested a dissident accused of attempting to overthrow the government, the communist state's official website said on Wednesday, bringing to at least 17 the number of dissenters arrested this year.

Tran Thi Xuan, 41, was arrested in the northern province of Ha Tinh on Tuesday. The website did not give details of the alleged crime. Reuters was unable to contact her and it was not clear whether she had a lawyer.

Despite sweeping economic reforms and growing openness to social change, the Communist Party tolerates little criticism.

The crackdown on dissent follows changes in the ruling party hierarchy early last year which gave greater influence to the security establishment.

Let our epoch-making genuine efforts be known to the world

Khin Maung Oo

THE Committee for the Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development in Rakhine State has been established as of 17 October 2017. The Committee will carry out the effective provision of humanitarian aid, coordinate the resettlement and rehabilitation efforts, perform regional development and work towards durable peace. As the tasks would be carried out using cash assistance funded not only by the State but also by local and foreign donors, The Committee must arrange for its financial accounts to be audited not only by the Union Auditor-General but also by an international audit firm.

The Committee, “UEHRD” will be chaired by Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, the State Counsellor. This initiative is being launched to implement the things that need to be done in Rakhine State after the coordinated terrorist attacks by ARSA on the 25th of August this year. With regard to criticisms and allegations levelled against our country by certain countries and international organizations. We fully understand that some organizations have an obligation to sing to the tune of their donors. We would only say that our citizens know best about the actual situations on the ground, and no one else or any other person can desire peace and development more than us.

In fact, to work towards a region free from conflicts is one of the long term goals and to work for the development of the Rakhine State is something that needs to be started on an urgent basis. Terrorist attacks and inhumane killings complicated situations and hampered the government’s movements. Whatever it is, what should be done will be performed in accord with the current situations. In the end, concerted efforts that produce progressive results are the best responses to criticisms and allegations. So we must re-double our efforts to make sure that we can produce results in a timely way in the most effective manner.

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi herself said in her Report to the People on 12 October 2017, “For each program there are many tasks. Within our country, entrepreneurs, NGOs, CSO’s and the people, all of them have stated their wish to participate and help as much as possible.”

Presently demonstrations are being held all over the country to show that the majority of the people stand with the Government and the State Counsellor and they denounced the extremist terrorists in foreign countries as well. Moreover, multi-faiths prayers for peace were held in the whole country, at which thousands of people were present, to show that there were religious conflicts and hatred in the nation. We would like the global community to be well convinced of our actual desires and Myanmar’s true characteristics by seeing that we want internal peace, stability and development and we want to live peaceful lives with justice and rule of law.

How Blockchain can Revolutionize Access to Finance

Lotte Schou-Zibell
Technical Advisor (Finance), Sustainable Development and Climate Change Department at Asian Development Bank

If you have not yet heard of blockchain, you will soon. Blockchain is expected to further speed the pace of change in a financial sector already probing new frontiers. This emerging digital technology promises to also further expand financial inclusion to some of the remotest corners of the planet.

Whether it is revolutionizing remittances in the Philippines, empowering smallholder farmers in Myanmar, or providing food safety to chicken farmers in China, blockchain’s dizzying array of possibilities reflects the transformational nature of the change it promises.

So, what is blockchain? Most simply, the technology is essentially an incorruptible digital ledger of transactions—not just financial transactions, but any transaction of value in a system.

Once a transaction is verified, it becomes part of a permanent record that can be shared and updated in near real-time across a group of participants. Each transaction is grouped with other transactions to create a block of information for the ledger. Each block is added sequentially with a timestamp and a link to the previous block, thus creating the chain.

It is a distributed database, meaning that the storage devices for the database are not all connected to a common or centralized processor: As such it is unlikely to be controlled by any single entity or to have a single point of failure. Blockchain is effectively an immutable historical record of all transactions that ever occurred.

Imagine it as a way to cut out the middleman in financial transactions. In other words, to reintroduce peer-to-peer transactions at scale.

By now, most of us are used to sharing information through a decentralized online platform: the Internet. Yet, when it comes to transferring value—money—we are accustomed to old-fashioned financial establishments such as banks.

Even online payment methods, such as PayPal, generally require integration with a bank account or credit card.

Endless Applications
Blockchain potentially changes all of that. It does so by removing the problem of “double-spending” inherent to modern transactions, which require the continued inclusion of a middleman—a bank or insurance company—to ensure their integrity.

It is creating new ways for people to make transactions. It is being used to record transactions, verify identity and establish contracts.

The potential implications are huge.

Worldwide, the financial services market is the largest sector or industry by market capitalization. Replacing even a fraction of this with a blockchain system would not only hugely disrupt the financial services industry, but also massively increase efficiencies.

In the Philippines, blockchain remittance services, such as Coins and Rebit, allow workers to send money home more affordably. In Georgia, blockchain is being used to register land titles in a transparent, nonfraudulent way.

In Papua New Guinea, the central bank is exploring blockchain and cryptocurrency to leapfrog previously insurmountable technological hurdles to widen and deepen the financial services available to its people. Such dramatic advances are not hard to envision—after all, most people are well aware of similar leaps forward that were made possible after cell phones emerged. Other relevant applications include identity and know-your-customer compliance, trade finance, supply chain, and insurance. For example, one hindrance to banks’ broader extension of loans to small businesses, particularly in developing countries, is onerous KYC costs that easily outstrip the modest revenues that such a small enterprise might bring.

This is where blockchain’s incorruptible digital ledger comes into play. Essentially, it promises to reduce the costs to banks of KYC procedures for smaller businesses that in the past would have exceeded promised revenues and constrained lending.

Great change requires great responsibility.
Disruptive technological innovations pose serious regulatory challenges.

Regulatory Sandboxes
With great change, however, comes great responsibility. Such disruptive technological innovations pose serious regulatory challenges.

While the focus needs to be on establishing a dynamic and enabling market, regulators must nonstop strive to strike the right balance between regulatory oversight and innovation, as well as ensure consumer protection.

It is crucial that regulators build and retain trust in the system. They can do this by applying test-and-learn regulatory sandbox approaches, which have proven useful for the fintech industry in various jurisdictions. This sandbox allows a regulator to “endorse” a promising entity so it can test—on a limited scale—a new but perhaps uncertain or unclassified product and then assess the benefits and risks. A wave of central banks across the region has already or will soon launch regulatory sandboxes.

Clearly, blockchain and digital ledger technologies have wide-reaching implications across sectors and industries and around the world. Yet, its promise is perhaps biggest in less-developed regions. As Vitalik Buterin, creator of Ethereum, has said: “Blockchain solves the problem of manipulation. People in the West say they trust Google, Facebook and their banks. But people in many other countries do not trust organizations and corporations that much. Blockchain’s opportunities can help overcome that obstacle.”

Financial sector development differs across developing countries in Asia and the Pacific. This requires calibrated and proportionate approaches that consider country context. Nonetheless, interest is high and innovation is ripe for tailoring digital financial services to expand financial access to more of the one billion unbanked people in the region.

Sagaing Region wants two caves and forest area in Khamti to be designated as natural areas

SAGAING Region government will submit two caves and some forest area in Khamti Township, Sagaing Region to the parliament in order to be set as natural areas, according to yesterday’s report of Myawady Daily.

If forest areas including Htamiian and Htamiisam caves are set as natural areas, a limited gems and jewellery site will be included. Negotiation still needs to be made with the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environment Conservation.

Natural and wildlife habitats are found around those two caves. A natural area designation is needed in order to conserve the wildlife in line with the Protection of Wildlife and Conservation of Natural Areas Law. Also, a new eco-tourism destination could result if the designation is approved.

The caves are about 70 miles away from Khamti town. That Coral cave is 10 feet wide at the entrance and 100 feet long and about 50 meters high. In addition, many bats can be observed dwelling upside down in the caves.—GNLM

Reflections of a Public Health Professional, Volume One, by Dr Myint Htwe comes out

AUTHOR Dr Myint Htwe has published collection of medical articles for the book “Reflections of a Public Health Professional, Volume One.”

The book is a collection of his writings on public health and research done during the author’s 18 years as a member of the health staff under the Ministry of Health from 1976 to 1994 and 16 years of service with the World Health Organization (1994 to 2010) — 34 years in total.

The book is being distributed by the Myanmar Book Centre.

The book is divided into three parts — A, B and C. Part A consists of 21 articles, most of which concern public health. The author presents health problems and how health and development are related. Part B has 10 articles dealing with research on public health. Research is a task that needs to be conducted constantly, so that development can be achieved. In such a time when our country is moving toward a developed and peaceful democracy, health plays an important role for producing our country’s future leaders-to-be, hence the need to do research in every sector, including health. On the whole, it will be of great use for scholars, students and policymakers.

The book proves to be a worthwhile effort of the author, as the readers can acquire a myriad of knowledge in one sitting.—GNLM

Rubbish management in Yangon to be upgraded

THE heavily urbanised Yangon region is producing thousands of tons of rubbish daily, prompting the Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC) to upgrade waste management line with international technology, according to a report yesterday in Myawady’s Daily.

In addition to the increasing urban population in Yangon, the number of industrial plants and factories has also increased.

“Such kind of urbanisation daily results in tons of waste production. We have a plan to tackle this problem using international advanced technology”, said U Saw Win Maung, the deputy head of the Pollution Control and Cleansing Department under YCDC.

In a bid to utilise systematic sanitation for waste produced from industrial zones, a secure and sanitary landfill will be operated with well-engineered facilities. Incineration plants will also be set up.

At present, industrial zone teams are assigned to monitor the factories to ensure they practice systematic waste disposal and obey the rules. If they fail to adhere to rules and regulations, they will receive a warning, and then fines.

There are 29 industrial zones in the Yangon Region, and some factories do not properly dispose of their waste, resulting in pollution, according to the YCDC. Yangon daily produces 2,500 to 2,700 tons of rubbish.—GNLM

British spy chief says Islamist militants can execute deadly attack plans in just days

LONDON — Britain faces the most acute threat ever from Islamist militants seeking to inflict mass attacks, often with spontaneous plots that take just days to bring to execution, the head of the MI5 domestic intelligence agency said on Tuesday.

After four militant attacks this year that killed 36 people in Britain — the deadliest spate since the London 7/7 bombings of July 2005, MI5 chief Andrew Parker said the threat was at the highest tempo he had seen in 34 years of espionage.

“The threat is more diverse than I have ever known: plots developed here in the UK, but plots directed from overseas as well, plots online, complex scheming and also crude stabblings, lengthy planning but also spontaneous attacks,” said Parker.

“Attacks can sometimes accelerate from inception, through planning, to action in just a handful of days,” he said in a speech in central London.

The director general of MI5 rarely gives public speeches. The last was in 2015.

Islamic State militants in Syria and Iraq have been in retreat for two years: They lost their de facto capital in Syria, Raqqa, on Tuesday and have been forced back into an ever-diminishing foothold along the Euphrates river valley.

But as their territory, wealth and swagger decline, the militants have intensified their efforts to attack civilians in the name of Islam across Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

Parker said there had not yet been a large influx of British militants returning home from Syria and Iraq.

Britain has foiled 28 plots in the past four years, with seven Islamist attacks prevented in the past seven months, Parker said. He said there were 500 live operations involving 3,000 people involved in militant activity.

MI5, established in 1909 to counter German espionage ahead of World War One, is tasked with protecting British national security and so takes the lead, along with the police, in countering militant attacks.

But after a suicide bomber killed 22 people at a pop concert by US singer Ariana Grande in Manchester, MI5 began a review of how it handled intelligence on the bomber, Salman Abedi, who was known to the intelligence agencies.

Abedi was not among the 3,000 people currently under active investigation by MI5, although he was one of around 20,000 people known to have some connection to extremism.

“When an attack happens, we are determined, using the harsh light of hindsight, to squeeze out every last drop of learning,” Parker said. “We are constantly evolving to stay ahead.”

MI5, which employs around 4,000 people, says it does not have the resources to monitor every suspicious person. It works alongside the Secret Intelligence Service, or MI6, which operates abroad, and GCHQ, Britain’s eavesdropping agency.

There has repeatedly demanded that Silicon Valley companies do more to suppress extremist content and allow access to online communication.

After British militants rammed a van into pedestrians on London Bridge and went on the rampage through packed bars, stabbing revelers in June, Prime Minister Theresa May said Britain must be tougher on stamping out extremist content and proposed regulating cyber-space.

MI6, which employs safety and serious crimes such as child abuse.

“I am not somehow King Canute trying to hold back the tide of developing technology and wouldn’t wish to be heard that way,” he said. “Technology is not the enemy, indeed it holds many opportunities for us.”

Andy Haldane, a member of the Bank of England’s interest rate-setting committee, said in a speech on Tuesday that the growing use of technology could help improve the economy and provide a better distribution of income.

But asked directly whether Google, Facebook and Amazon were doing enough to prevent communications among militants, he said: “There is a reasonable expectation, I think, from all of us but also from the public at large that these companies would do what they can to help deal with these worst excesses.” —Reuters

ANKARA — Iranian Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei said on Wednesday Tehran would stick to its 2015 nuclear accord with world powers as long as the other signatories respected it, but would “shred” the deal if Washington pulled out, state television reported.

Khamenei spoke five days after US President Donald Trump adopted a harsh new approach to Iran by refusing to certify its compliance with the deal, reached under Trump’s predecessor Barack Obama, and saying he might ultimately terminate it. “I don’t want to waste my time on answering the rants and whoppers of the brute (US) president,” Khamenei said in a speech to students in Tehran quoted by state television.

“Trump’s stupidity should not distract us from America’s deceitfulness...If the US tears up the deal, we will shred it.”

Trump’s move put Washington at odds with other parties to the accord — Britain, France, Germany, Russia, China and the European Union — who say Washington cannot unilaterally cancel a multilateral accord enshrined by a UN resolution.

Khamenei, who has the final say on Iran’s state matters, welcomed their support but said it was not sufficient. “European states pressed their backing for the deal and condemned Trump... We welcomed this, but it is not enough to ask Trump not to rip up the agreement. Europe needs to stand against practical measures (taken) by America.”

Under the deal, Iran agreed to curb its disupted uranium enrichment programme in return for relief from international sanctions that crippled its economy, and UN nuclear inspectors have repeatedly certified Tehran’s compliance with the terms.

Trump accuses Iran of supporting terrorism and says the 2015 deal does not enough to block its path to acquire nuclear weapons. Iran says it does not seek nuclear arms and in turn blames the growth of militant groups such as Islamic State on the policies of the United States and its regional allies. In decertifying the nuclear deal last week, Trump gave the US Congress 60 days to decide whether to reimpose economic sanctions on Tehran that were lifted under the pact. — Reuters

Head of Syrian army brigade besieged in Deir al-Zor dies — media unit

BEIRUT — A Syrian army general who led a brigade besieged for three years by Islamic State in Deir al-Zor city has died, pro-Syrian government media outlets said on Wednesday.

Major General Issam Zahreddine, head of the 104 Brigade of the Syrian Republican Guard, was killed by a mine in the city, a military media unit allied to Hezbollah said. Syrian radio station Sham FM and Lebanese pro-Syrian government TV stations al-Manar and al-Mayadeen also reported his death. Lebanon’s Hezbollah has provided military support to the Syrian government during Syria’s more than six-year-long war. Syrian forces, backed by Russian military and Iran-backed militias, lifted the siege in early September. Islamic State has lost ground rapidly in Syria’s eastern province of Deir al-Zor in recent weeks. — Reuters

Pakistani Talibam suicide bomber rams police truck, kills seven

QUETTA, (Pakistan) — A Pakistani Talibam suicide bomber rammed a car into a police truck in the southwestern city of Quetta on Wednesday, killing at least seven people, police said. The attack killed five police officials and two passers-by on the outskirts of the city of Quetta, police chief Abdul Razaq Cheema said. He said 22 people were wounded, eight of them critically.

Sarfraz Bugti, the home minister of Baluchistan province, of which Quetta is capital, told Reuters: “It was a suicide blast.” Quetta is about 100 km (60 miles) east of the border with Afghanistan.

Bugti said the truck carrying the police officials was on its way to the city to drop them at their posts when the suicide bomber rammed into the vehicle. Television pictures showed the burnt wreckage of the vehicles.

The Pakistani Taliban, an umbrella organisation of various militant groups within Pakistan, and loosely allied to the Afghan Talibam, issued a statement claiming responsibility. Baluchistan province has long been the scene of an insurgency by separatists fighting against the state to demand more of a share of the gas- and mineral-rich region’s resources. They also accuse the central government of discrimination. The Talibam, Sunni Islam militants and sectarian groups linked to al Qaeda and the Islamic State group also operate in the strategically important region, which borders Iran as well as Afghanistan. — Reuters

Russian Guard, police may get electroshock shields for special operations

MOSCOW — The police and the Russian Guard may get universal electroshock shields by late 2018 for use in special operations, a representative of the company that has developed these devices told TASS at the Interpolitex exhibition in Moscow on Tuesday. The electroshock shields have already undergone medical trials, company representative Yekaterina Stolyarevskaya said. “The handle (of the shield) incorporates electronics that helps transmit an electrode and a general electric shock to the shield’s surface. This has been done to ensure that it cannot be wrested away by an aggressive suspect and an attacker can be stopped, if necessary,” she said, stressing that the shield would be used for special operations. “This item is not for operational work at some rallies but for special operations. But these decisions will be made not by us but directly by the heads [of the relevant agencies],” Stolyarevskaya said. According to her, the shield may start arriving for law-enforcement agencies by late 2018. “First and foremost, operative bodies, riot police and units of the Russian Guard have shown interest in it. There are also structures in the Interior Ministry, which could use these items,” she noted. “Now we are waiting for state trials and later on, if everything goes well, the deliveries will be made. We hope that they [the shields] will already be in service with the relevant agencies by late 2018,” Stolyarevskaya said. The 21st International exhibition Interpolitex-2017 has opened on the territory of pavilion No 75 at the All-Russian Exhibition Center in Moscow. The exhibition will last through 20 October.”—TASS

Spain asks Catalan leader to ‘act sensibly’ as direct rule deadline approaches

MADRID — Spain appealed to Catalan leader Carles Puigdemont to “act sensibly” on Wednesday, just 24 hours before a government deadline for the region to renounce a bid for independence.

“I ask Puigdemont to act sensibly, in a balanced way, to put the interests of all citizens first,” Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy said in parliament.

Madrid has threatened Catalonia, which accounts for a fifth of Spain’s economy, with direct rule if Puigdemont does not retract by Thursday an ambiguous declaration of independence he made last week.

The row has rattled financial markets and sent companies scurrying to shift their legal bases in a flight to safer ground.

Seven hundred companies left Catalonia between 2 October – the day after a referendum on independence which Madrid branded illegal — and 16 October, according to Spain’s companies registry and .

Thursday’s deadline is Puigdemont’s last chance to abandon an independence declaration which he made and then immediately suspended on 10 October. Madrid has ridiculed the ambiguity of the proclamation, which remained unclear after a previous deadline expired on Monday.

Bosnia’s Serb region declares neutrality in bid to block NATO membership

BANJA LUKA, (Bosnia) — Bosnia’s Serb Republic on Wednesday declared itself militarily neutral in a move its president said was the first step towards a referendum on joining NATO, which is unpopular among Serbs after its 1995 and 1999 bombing campaigns in Bosnia and Kosovo. The Serb Republic is one of two autonomous regions created in Bosnia after its war in the 1990s during the break-up of the former Yugoslavia. It is tied with the Bosniak-Croat Federation via a weak central government, which is in charge of military issues. Bosnia’s inter-ethnic presidency, its central government in Sarajevo and the Federation dominated by Muslim Bosniaks and Croats have long said joining NATO and the European Union are strategic priorities. But the Bosnian Serbs lean towards closer ties with Russia, aligning their policy with that of war-time patron and ally Serbia where NATO is hugely unpopular after its 1999 bombing campaign to drive Serbian forces out of Kosovo and after 1995 NATO air strikes against rebel Serbs in Bosnia. —Reuters

Japan ruling coalition seen winning around two-thirds majority — Kyodo News

TOKYO — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s coalition is on track for a roughly two-thirds majority in Sunday’s general election, a survey by Kyodo news agency showed, as its conservative rival led by Tokyo Governor Yuriko Koike appeared to lose momentum.

Japanese go to the polls on Sunday to elect representatives for the country’s 465-member lower house, the more powerful of Japan’s two-chamber parliament.

The Kyodo poll, conducted by telephone between 15 and 17 October, showed Abe’s Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) poised to win about 280 seats in the 465-member lower house. Combined with its junior coalition partner Komeito, it is likely to retain about two-thirds of the seats.

Koike said. The ruling bloc held a two-thirds “super majority” before the Chamber was dissolved for a “reformist, conservative” alternative to the LDP has lost momentum since the previous survey, Kyodo said. The Constitutional Democratic Party of Japan (CDPJ), formed this month by liberal members of the Democratic Party, is set to beat out the Party of Hope to become the leading opposition party, at least doubling its representation, Kyodo added.

A Reuters corporate survey published on Wednesday showed Japanese companies overwhelmingly want Abe’s coalition to stay in power but also want it to lose seats, suggesting they want political stability but don’t want to hand him a landslide victory. — Reuters

Philippines arrests militant widow for trying to recruit fighters

MANILA — Philippine law enforcement agents have arrested a woman who tried to spread radical ideas and recruit hundreds of foreigners to reinforce pro-Islamic State rebels occupying a southern city, the justice minister said on Wednesday.

Karen Aizha Hamidon, the widow of a former leader of a small extremist group in Mindanao, was arrested by special agents at her home in a Manila suburb a week ago and has been charged with inciting to rebellion, Vitaliano Aguirre told a news conference.

Hamidon is accused of using social media and messaging apps to call on foreigners to join the siege by an alliance of Islamic State loyalists in Marawi City, a battle that has lasted nearly five months. The military says the conflict, the biggest security crisis in years in the Philippines, is now in its final stages and has killed more than 1,000 people, mostly rebels.

“This is a welcome development in the fight against terrorism,” Aguirre said.

Agents found she had made 296 posts in chatrooms on Telegram and WhatsApp “calling on Muslims in the Philippines, India and Singapore to come to Marawi to establish a province of the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria,” he said.

There were also about 250 names, mostly foreigners, in her phone-book who were suspected of being Islamic State sympathizers.

Dressed in a black burqa, Hamidon was paraded before the media but was not allowed to speak. Her laptop, mobile phones and electronic gadgets were being looked at by experts for forensic investigation.

Hamidon, a Muslim convert, was married to Mohammad Jaafar Maguid, alias Tokhoy, the former leader of radical group Ansar Al-Khilafa. He was killed in a gunfight with police in January.

Aguirre said she was also linked to Singaporean and Australian extremist, both of whom are in detention in their countries.

But counter-terrorism expert Sidney Jones cast doubts about whether Hamidon had been effective. Jones said her presence in chatrooms of Islamic State supporters was not welcomed, her credibility had been questioned and some participants blamed her for the arrests of radicals.

“Everyone hates her and thinks she’s a spy,” Jones said.— Reuters

Hong Kong stocks inch up, gains by developers offset resource firms’ losses

HONG KONG — Hong Kong stocks inched up on Wednesday, with listings in the city of some China-based companies advancing on the first day of the key Communist Party Congress in Beijing.

President Xi Jinping opened the congress on Wednesday with a pledge to build a “modern socialist country” for a “new era”.

Investors are keen for clear direction on economic and financial market reform over the next five years, but history suggests these events can be light on detail. The Hang Seng index added 0.1 per cent, to 28,711.76 points.

The China Enterprises Index, an index tracking major domestic firms listed in Hong Kong, gained 0.5 per cent, to 11,421.95 points.

Sectors performance was mixed, with gains in developers offset by weakness in resources firms. Property and construction firms rose one per cent, led by top developer Sunac with a 6.9 per cent jump, even after Xi said China will maintain the principle that houses are for people to live in, not for speculation.

Material firms dropped 1.6 per cent, tracking mainland peers, amid continued weakness in commodities market.— Reuters

‘Padmavati’ experience extremely exhausting: Deepika

MUMBAI — Actor Deepika Padukone said she feels extremely fortunate to have teamed up with Sanjay Leela Bhansali for the upcoming “Padmavati”, shooting for which has been an “exhausting” experience.

The 31-year-old actor has previously worked with Bhansali in “Goliyon Ki Rasleela: Ram Leela” and “Bajirao Mastani”.

Deepika said playing Queen Padmavati has been one of the most memorable roles of her career. “I feel extremely fortunate to have worked repeatedly with someone like Sanjay Leela Bhansali. Over five years and three consecutive films, back to back, in extremely challenging, empowering and powerful roles that he is known to give women. “Padmavati’ has been an extremely exhausting experience... We shot non-stop for almost seven-eight months. I feel certain characters don’t leave your system,” she said. The period-drama features Shahid Kapoor as Maharawal Ratan Singh, Rajput ruler and husband of Padmavati, played by Deepika. Ranveer Singh, will be seen as Alauddin Khilji, the Delhi sultan, who falls in love with Padmavati.

Deepika was speaking at the launch of veteran actor Hema Malini’s biography “Hema Malini: Beyond the Dream Girl”. Hema recalled shooting for Gulzar’s “Meera” on a minuscule budget, in which she played the titular Rajputi princess who is devoted to Lord Krishna.

Deepika added the budgets have surely increased today but a filmmaker would still need more money to justify his vision completely. “Padmavati’ releases on 1 December. —PTI

George Saunders’ ‘Lincoln in the Bardo’ wins 2017 Man Booker prize

LONDON — American author George Saunders has won the 2017 Man Booker Prize, a high-profile literary award, for his first novel, “Lincoln in the Bardo,”—a fictional account of US President Abraham Lincoln burying his young son.

In his acceptance speech, Saunders, 58, noted that “we live in a strange time,” adding he saw the key question of the era being whether society responded to events with “exclusion and negative projection and violence,” or “with love.”

Saunders was the second consecutive American writer to win the prize, after the rules were changed in 2014 to allow authors of any book written in English and published in the UK to compete.

His novel, set in 1862, a year into the American Civil war, is a blend of historical accounts and imaginative fiction, which sees Lincoln’s son Willie, who died in the White House at age 11, in “Bardo” — a Tibetan form of purgatory.

The judging panel, led by author and member of Britain’s House of Lords Lora Young, praised the “deeply moving” book, saying it was “utterly original”.

Saunders was presented with his award by the Duchess of Cornwall.

Last year, American Paul Beatty became the first American to win the award, for his novel “The Sellout,” a biting satire on race relations in the United States.

Other previous winners have included this year’s Nobel Prize-winning novelist Kazuo Isiguro, Salman Rushdie, Iris Murdoch and Canadian writer Margaret Atwood.

The award was previously open only to writers from Britain, Ireland, Zimbabwe or countries in the British Commonwealth.

The winner receives a 50,000 pound ($65,000) cash prize. —Reuters

'Vanishing village' looks to Japan's LDP for survival

NANMOKU (Japan) — Chikara Imai, 73, is quick to dismiss the new parties in Sunday’s national election in Japan, saying old ties with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe’s Liberal Democratic Party is what the country’s most elderly village needs for survival.

Nanmoku, 107 km (67 miles) northwest of Tokyo, is at the forefront of Japan’s battle against an ageing and shrinking population. Its population has halved over the past 20 years to 1,963, and with a median age of 70.6, Nanmoku is now Japan’s oldest municipality.

Nanmoku and places like it across Japan are a key support base for the LDP, which has been in power for most of the past six decades.

“Rural Japan is no Tokyo. Those people may say something ideal in Tokyo, something like ‘Let’s change Japan’. But here, it won’t strike home,” Imai said.

Sunday’s lower house election pits Abe’s LDP-led coalition against two brand new parties: the Party of Hope headed by popular Tokyo Governor Yuriko Koike; and the centre-left Constitutional Democratic Party of Japan, which emerged from a breakup of the traditional opposition Democratic Party.

But Koike’s “reformist, conservative” challenge doesn’t resonate much in Nanmoku. Most municipalities are shrinking in Japan, so far the only important developed country with a declining population. They look to Tokyo for a life-line.

“For back country dwellers, strong ties with the central government come in handy when we need to ask for help in such times as a natural disaster. This village has no option but to support them,” the 73-year-old Imai said.

Gunma prefecture, where Nanmoku is located, has long been an LDP stronghold and has produced four prime ministers, including Keizo Obuchi, premier from 1998-2000. —Reuters

London art auction raises 2 million pounds for survivors of deadly Grenfell Tower blaze

LONDON — An auction of 31 artworks donated by some of Britain’s most successful contemporary artists has raised close to 2 million pounds for survivors of the Grenfell Tower fire that killed about 80 people in June. Home to a close-knit, multi-ethnic community, the 24-storey social housing block was reduced to a charred ruin by the inferno that engulfed it in the middle of the night.

Many survivors have yet to be rehoused and are still living in hotels.

The charity auction, held at art dealer Sotheby’s late on Monday, included works by A-list artists including Wolfgang Tillmans, Antony Gormley, Tracey Emin, Sarah Lucas, Mark Wallinger and Rachel Whiteread.

The idea came from film producer and art collector Hamish McAlpine and art consultant Katie Heller, who said the emotional impact of the Grenfell tragedy was such that almost all the artists they approached agreed to donate works immediately.

“Grenfell touched their souls,” McAlpine told Reuters at Sotheby’s before the auction. “It’s a very emotive subject for people in London.”

The proceeds, which totalled more than 1.925 million pounds, will be divided equally among 158 surviving families. They will receive the funds before Christmas.

Every single one of the lots on offer sold, making the auction a “White Glove” sale in auctioneers’ parlance, Sotheby’s said. The amount raised was double the pre-auction estimate. The most expensive lot was “Freeschwimmer 193,” a very large green print by the London-based German artist Wolfgang Tillmans, which sold for 392,736 pounds. —Reuters

Myanmar U-19 defeated 0-2 by Japanese team in friendly

Kyaw Zin Lin

In preparation for the 2018 AFC U-19 Championship, Myanmar U-19 national football team played a friendly against Japan's well-known Gamba Osaka football club in Japan yesterday. Myanmar lost the match by a score of 0-2. Myanmar used a different lineup from the friendly match against Hanan University FC that was played recently in Japan. Myanmar played very well against Gamba Osaka throughout the first half, showing good stability in controlling the football. Neither team could convert opportunities into goals in the first half, as all the players did not allow much penetration and played good defense.

Myanmar made several substitutions in the second half in an attempt to change tactics. The match remained a scoreless tie until the late minutes of the second half, when some Myanmar players lost their stamina and allowed two consecutive goals. The game ended with 0-2 result.

“Who is the top? I am sure in the next five league games, our team's confidence is going to be very high. My boys can play with a lot of confidence,” said Myanmar U-19 team current Head Coach U Chit Naing.

Myanmar will play their last friendly in Japan with Hanan University Club on Friday, according to Myanmar Football Federation.
