Children hold Tsunami Drill

SCHOOL CHILDREN participated in the first tsunami simulation exercise at Basic Education High School No. 1 in Kungyangon yesterday. A second tsunami exercise will be carried out at Basic Education High School in Letkokkon at 3pm.

These drills are being organised as part of a government of Japan-supported regional project to strengthen the tsunami preparedness of schools in 18 Asia-Pacific countries, which is being implemented by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

In Myanmar, the project is supported by the Relief and Resettlement Department, operating under the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement; the Ministry of Education; and NGO Seeds Asia, which is supporting UNDP in the implementation.—GNLM

AHA Centre inspects repatriation offices

THE ASEAN Coordinating Centre for Humanitarian Assistance (AHA Centre) has handed over a collective donation of humanitarian aid to the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement.

The donation included US$450,000 worth of basic necessities from ASEAN countries and $75,000 worth of kitchen appliances from Singapore. Both donations were made on 14 November, 2017.

The aid is being distributed among Sittway, Buthidaung and Maungtaw townships in Rakhine State by the local government.

Three members from the AHA Centre’s Emergency Response and Assessment Team travelled to Ngakuya Relocation Camp and Hla Phoe Khaung transit centre on 27 and 28 January. The team inspected the technological support and distribution of humanitarian aid in the camp. The visit from the AHA Centre shows the unity of the ASEAN countries and creates awareness about Rakhine State’s rehabilitation process in neighbouring countries. — Myanmar News Agency

Import of capital goods by private sector sees decline

THE import of capital goods by the private sector this fiscal year (FY) reached some US$4.67 billion, down by $195 million against the same period last year, according to figures released by the ministry of commerce.

This time last year, the private sector imported $4.89 billion worth of similar products from international traders.

Between last April and mid-January this year, the government sector bought $565 million worth of capital goods from its trade partners. Despite a decrease in the value of capital goods by the private sector, the import of these products by the government increased by $296 million, compared with the same period last year, according to the ministry.

Union Attorney-General receives UNICEF Resident Representative

UNION Minister Dr. Pe Myint inspected the office of the Information and Public Relations Department (IPRD) and the Myanmar Radio and Television (MRTV) retransmitting station in Kawthoung Township, Taninthayi Region, yesterday.

In the afternoon, the union minister, together with officials, arrived in Kawthoung by air and met with Taninthayi Region Chief Minister Dr. Lei Lei Maw, Region Minister for Agriculture and Livestock U Myint San, Region Minister for Planning and Finance U Phyo Win Tun, Region Hluttaw Representative Daw Yi Yi Cho and other officials to discuss the region’s affairs.

Later, the union minister visited the office and library of IPRD and viewed the mock-up Salon traditional houses and utensils, as well as photographs that were displayed at the mini-museum inside the library. The union minister also urged the officials to collect and keep more traditional utensils and mineral materials, to assure that a variety of regional traditional heritages are collected.

The union minister then greeted and presented toys to pre-school children visiting the children’s reading room.

Also, the union minister inspected the MRTV retransmitting station in Kawthoung, urging officials to collect rain water, prevent fire hazards and to stay alert and maintain the security of the factory.

Additionally, the union minister donated 50 set-top boxes, which were accepted by Myeik District Deputy Commissioner U Lin Ko Ko, for the use of Myeik Township. The group also visited the Zewauoe bird nest production on strand road in Myeik, Bayinnaung Hill and Bayinnaung Cape in Kawthoung Township.

Free medical treatment to be provided to 3,000 people in Buthidaung

A mobile medical team of the Union Enterprise for Humanitarian Assistance, Resettlement and Development in Rakhine (UEHRD) has provided free healthcare to local people in Buthidaung, Rakhine State.

The team comprising nearly 20 specialists, including surgeons, obstetricians, gynaecologists and orthopaedics, as well as paediatricians, physicians and nurses, began their first mission at Buthidaung Township Hospital yesterday.

The mobile medical team will also tour other areas in Rakhine State to give medical care to the local people.

“We have provided medical treatment to the local people without discrimination,” said Dr Win Sithu, chairman of the medical team.

Before giving medical check-ups to outpatients, the team checked the patients at the township hospital yesterday.

According to Dr Win Sithu, two patients needed urgent operations. During its two-day programme, the team will provide medical care to more than 3,000 patients. The Rakhine State Cabinet and Health Department jointly conducted the free medical care programme.

“As healthcare service is essential, our Rakhine State Cabinet has assisted doctors, physicians and professors from Yangon,” said Dr Chan Tha.

The government has also arranged accommodation for patients who come from other areas. —Aung Ye Twin/ Ko Min

Estimated US$ 2 million worth of drugs seized

SECURITY personnel arrested four suspects along with 19,500 stimulant tablets from a row boat near Maungni Village, Maungtaw Township in the Naf River on 26 January.

Similarly, an anti-drug squad raided the house of a suspected drug smuggler in Maungni Village, Myoma Kanyintan village-tract in Maungtaw Township. The force found two suspects in the house and confiscated 1,285,750 stimulant pills from a trawler.

Construction ministry to build RC box culverts on Chauk-Singu-Bagan Road

THE MINISTRY of Construction is currently implementing a project to build reinforced concrete (RC) box culverts near Gangaw Village, Nyaung U Township, Mandalay Region.

The box culverts, which are bridge-like structures, will allow cars, motorbikes and pedestrian traffic to cross over the waterway, while allowing adequate passage for the water.

Funded by the Mandalay Region government, the projects were initiated on 1 December over the two creeks near Gangaw Village to resolve the transport problem for travellers using the Chauk-Singu-Bagan Road, which is prone to frequent flooding.

The government has allocated more than Ks590 million for the project from its budget for the 2016-2017 fiscal year.

The Road Department under the Ministry of Construction and the tender-winning Hi-Tech Land Co have implemented the project, which is now 35 per cent complete, and is expected to be finalised by the end of March.

Concerted efforts have been made by project implementers to complete projects within the set time frame. —Ye Win Naing (NyaungU)
Water quality research in Chindwin River extended one more year

TO get more accurate and thorough details about the water quality of the Chindwin River, which flows through the Sagaing Region, research will be continued one more year, said Dr Win Maung, chairperson of Myanmar Environment Institute (MEI).

“Deforestation occurs in the watershed areas at the upper part of the Chindwin River. There is jade or gold mining and sand digging at the upper reaches of the Uru River, a tributary of the Chindwin River. That’s why the water in the Chindwin River is muddy and more sedimention occurred. Heavy metals might be in the water as well, so we need to continue our research on the water quality in the river,” he said. MEI began researching the Chindwin River’s water quality in 2015, and planned to submit a report over the findings that go up to 2017 to the Sagaing Regional government in early 2018.

Maw Tin Zun Pagoda festival to begin on 1 February

THE Maw Tin Zun Pagoda festival, one of the famous pagoda festivals in Myanmar, will be held for a month from 1 February to 1 March.

For the safety of visitors, boats are arranged at Mawtin and Phoneying Street jetties in Yangon. In addition, a chartered bus service is available that can take visitors to the entrance of the pagoda.

There are 24 new hotels which are now open at all four sides of the pagoda so that visiting guests can stay overnight comfortably. Small display rooms will be opened during the festival in which people can observe the history of the pagoda.

Visitors can also visit Ngwe Taung bathing site and enjoy the beauty of the beach, said a member of the organizing committee of the pagoda festival. —Myanmar Digital News

Vegetable gum karaya market soars higher

THE vegetable Gum Karaya has fetched significantly higher prices last year, and it has become a lucrative crop for farmers who faced a financial crisis after the prices of mung beans, black gram and pigeon peas had plunged dramatically in October 2017.

Top quality gum was being sold for K10,000 per viss (1.65 kilo) in previous years, yet the price has been increasing year by year and now is sold for between K200, 000 and 150,000 per viss.

However, a kilo of the gum is priced at about K200,000 at the market in Shweli, a major border crossing between Myanmar and China. It is 33.33% of the price it’s sold for in other countries.

The main countries producing the gum that comes from a perennial plant are Mali, India, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Myanmar. The quality of the gum from Myanmar is whiter and cleaner than that of other countries. So, Myanmar’s variety of the gum is used for manufacturing food and medicine, while the gum produced from other countries is used as an industrial crop.

Although Myanmar has produced better quality gum, the yield rate is lower than that of other countries. It harvests about 90 tons of gum a year. The regions where the gum is produced the most in Myanmar are Sagaing, Magway and Mandalay regions; these are dry zones in the country.

Myanmar prepared to grow the Gum Karaya in 2004, but instead started in 2007. The production of the gum started in 2011-12 fiscal year. Myanmar exported the gum to its neighboring countries China, India and Thailand in 2014-15 fiscal years.

Local Gum Karaya collectors sold the produce to purchasing centers in Thazi, Meiktila, Magway and Mandalay and Yangon after they bought it at farms where it’s harvested. U Than Aung, a Gum Karaya grower from Aung Chan Thar village in Magwe Region’s Myaing Township, said: “The gum buyers from Mandalay and Magway come to me directly and buy all of the gum I have. I don’t need to go and sell it at a purchasing center in person. Sometimes, two or more buyers arrive at the same time. So I try to sell the gum to all of them, sharing the produce equally.”

He has grown 220 plants of Gum Karaya on two acres of land. The plants are five years old and his annual income is K29 million. The gum harvest time is from May to mid-December.

The quality of the Gum Karaya depends on the weather. It can be grown in hillside areas that have higher precipitation levels, but it is difficult to produce the gum and the quality is lower. The amount of gum produced in dry zones is small, but the quality is the best and buyers are willing to pay a higher price. —Myanmar Digital News

Gov't accelerates loan disbursement for SMEs

May Thet Hnin

MYANMAR government is accelerating its efforts to offer Ks200 billion loans to develop small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

“A proposal has already been submitted to the government. We will start disbursing loans to SMEs only after getting the government’s approval,” said Daw Aye Aye Win, Director-General of the Department of Small and Medium Enterprises Development, Directorate of Industrial Supervision and Inspection (DISI), Ministry of Industry.

The government received Ks700 billion loans from international bodies to develop the country’s agriculture, livestock, SMEs and construction sectors. Of the total, Ks200 billion will go to SME sector.

Loan disbursement process is being operated by the SME Development Central Committee through three newly founded bodies—SME development agency, fund management body and work reviews/reports. Daw Aye Aye Win added, “There may be mistakes when we develop a project urgently. We also learn the lessons from the past to ensure development of the sector. Participants of fund management body will make a detail assessment of applicants from states and regions.”

For the disbursement of loans to SMEs, financial assessment committees will be set up in each state and region very soon. Following the detail assessment, the fund management body will put forward the completed loan proposals to the central body.

At present, the authorities are making continuous efforts to invite SME entrepreneurs to take part in the loan scheme, while the Ministry of Planning and Finance has started awareness-raising activities. Thanks to these efforts, some SME operators in regions and states continue to apply for loans at responsible departments, Daw Aye Aye Win added.

At 13th meeting between Vice-President U Myint Swe and businessmen held in late December, Union Minister for Industry U Khin Maung Cho said: “Arrangements will be made to provide SMEs with loans within a month. Experienced Myanmar citizens from foreign countries have already been appointed as advisors to ensure SME development.”

“Sometimes, we have no enough funds to disburse loans. However, the process is operating with money returned from the businesses which got loans under the JICA’s two-step loan scheme. It will operate well in the future,” Daw Aye Aye Win continued.

Daw Thida Tun, an SME operator and founder of GLORY Natural Juice Production, said: “We want the government to carefully make assessment of loan disbursement to ensure operating SMEs get loans. I contacted several banks for loans. Of them, Myanmar Economic Bank cancelled my complete loan proposal even though I have recommendation from the Department of Small and Medium Enterprises Development. The reason is I cannot put up collateral. I find it difficult to take loans as an SME operator and am hoping for positive changes in the future.”

She continued: “The government should make face-to-face discussions with businesses so as to know challenges and difficulties of SMEs. The SME operators wish the government to pay incentive by reducing tax rate for starters. New loan-disbursement policy should be taken into consideration instead of collateral loan.”

The financial authorities will disburse loans only to SMEs with at least two years of operations, which can show their SME member cards.

There are more than 64,000 registered SMEs in Myanmar. At the present time, the number of SMEs applying for SME member cards has increased significantly.

According to a research conducted by the Central Statistical Organization in 2015, 98 per cent of more than 120,000 registered businesses are SMEs. In the employment sector, of the 21.9 million workers, 83 per cent are working in unregistered SMEs.

Border trade valued at US$ 6.33 billion

THE value of border trade from 1st April 2017 to 19th January this fiscal year increased by US$271 million, compared to the same period last year.

Border trade, measured from 1st April 2017 to 19th January this fiscal year, reached US$633.38 billion, which included US$ 4.07 billion in exports and US$ 2.27 billion in imports, according to statistics from the Ministry of Commerce.

Myanmar’s imports and exports with neighboring countries, including China, India, Bangladesh and Thailand, Si- no-Myanmar border trade is carried out at the Muse, Lweje, Kanpiketee, Chin Shwe Haw and Kawtawg gates, while Myanmar is conducting border trade with India through the Tamu and Reed border crossings. The country’s border trade gates with Bangladesh are Sittway and Maungtaw, and trade with Thailand passes through the Tachileik, Myawady, Kawthaung, Myeik, HteeKhee, Mawtaung and Maese crossings.

Out of sixteen border trade camps, the Muse border trade camp has the largest border trade volume, with a trade value of US$4.45 billion. This was an increase from US$4.22 billion in the same period last year.

Myanmar primarily exports agricultural products, animal products, forest products, minerals, fishery products, manufactured goods and other products, while capital goods, raw industrial materials and consumer products are imported into the country. – GNLM

Myanmar-Australia trade tops FY

TRADE between Myanmar and the Commonwealth of Australia totalled US$128 million in the current financial year, according to the monthly statistics of the commerce ministry.

The total bilateral trade with Australia over the first eight months of this FY included US$ 16.492 million from the exports and US$11.730 million from the imports. In November alone, bilateral trade was US$14.396 million comprising $1.796 million exports and $12.592 million imports. Australia imports crustaceans, fishes, seafood and vegetables from Myanmar and exports wheat, medications including veterinary, paints, varnishes and coal.

The trade of the two countries was $77.673 million in FY2011-2012, $86.009 million in FY2012-2013, $102.063 million in FY2013-2014, $74.012 million in FY2014-2015, $84.635 million in FY2015-2016 and $144.385 million in FY2016-2017. Australia has helped Myanmar promote inclusive economic growth by supporting a policy environment that provides incentives for responsible foreign direct investment, trade and economic reform. —Swe Nyein
“There’s been no trace of threats. The villagers I’ve met did not seem to have any fear so that’s what we saw.”: H.E. Prof. Dr. Surakiart Sathirathai

ADVISORY Board for Committee for Implementation of the Recommendations on Rakhine State led by H.E. Prof. Dr. Surakiart Sathirathai was formed on 14 December, 2017. The committee met with State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, Vice President U Myint Swe, members of the Committee for Implementation of the Recommendations on Rakhine State and visited Maungtaw and Kyaukpyu in Rakhine State.

H.E. Prof. Dr. Surakiart Sathirathai gave an inclusive interview to journalists on 25th January.

Following is the interview with H.E. Prof. Dr. Surakiart Sathirathai.

First of all, the advisory board, ten of us, the international advisors and Myanmar advisors got together and had a full board meeting for the first time on the 22nd.

We’ve had 3 board meetings in the past two weeks and looked at our terms of reference. We talked about our modus operandi and exchanged views of the general situation in Rakhine State.

Yesterday we visited several villages in Rakhine State and we saw villages that were burnt down and villages that were left empty. We also saw preparations for the returnees. I’ve been given the opportunity to talk to the local people; the Buddhists and Muslims, and the Hindus. I’ve inspected the houses being built to accommodate the people who were successfully returning on the 23rd of January but that did not happen. But preparation has been underway and we saw the transit camps. Security has been provided. There’s been no trace of threats. The villagers I’ve met did not seem to have any fear so that’s what we saw.

I think the advisory board hasn’t given any advice yet. We will monitor the situation and have deliberations among ourselves in the days and months to come. I think in two, three months the advisory board will be able to come up with preliminary recommendations as to what else the implementation committee should do and what should be the priorities. We also need to install trust building mechanisms in the villages otherwise the implementations done there will not be sustainable.

We commend the Myanmar government in committing to implement the 88 points recommended by the Kofi Annan’s recommendations. The State Counsellor has emphasized on the rule of law and providing justice to the people in the local communities. I think that is the right way to go.

What I’ve seen from the helicopter is that Rakhine State has a very rich, fertile, agricultural ground and they have plenty of water so there is much potential there. There is much potential for income creation and job creation to train farmers on how they can have better productivity and how they can put more value added into their productions. I can see opportunities for microenterprises and job creations for women, especially in the garment industry.

On the way to Kyaukpyu there is a great opportunity for this special economic zone and there’s great opportunity for tourism in Thandwe. So I think that the idea of the State Counsellor that peace and development have to work hand in hand and the establishment of a Union Enterprise to create a public-private partnership is a good one. I can see a lot of opportunities there after I inspected on the ground myself and after talking to the people.

I think in some way the first trip to Myanmar has been very fruitful and constructive. We have seen what has been developed and we have seen the traces of violence and we have heard how the Myanmar government has endeavored to provide a lot of security.

We have seen the step by step preparation of accepting the returnees. The papers have been sent to the Bangladesh side; they have even prepared a biometric registration for the returnees. I hope the repatriation will take place sometime soon. I hope the international community can be helpful and can understand the local constraints. The international community cannot be helpful if it’s not inclusive.

That’s my reflection of the impact I’ve had on this first trip. The advisory board will have a collective deliberation. We will speak with one voice and our mandate is to give advice to the implementation committee headed by the Minister for Social Welfare. So we expect to come up with recommendations and advice in the next 2-3 months.

Well I have seen the Chinese assistance for the building materials for the offices of the immigration, foreign ministry and security including part of the housing so I think that is to be commended. I think China can play a key role in helping with the repatriation in providing the housing materials to be built and I understand China has been working closely with the Union Enterprise on this.

I think what the returnees need most of all is security. We have seen security provided in 4, 5 villages that we have visited.

Secondly, the returnees need to have a proper place to live and there should be full medical facilities adequately for them to stay temporarily then to be resettled in the villages they are from.

They have given us the evidence of the preparations for food to be provided, electricity in the transit camps, health services and things like that. I also inspected the storage for food and how it could be transported. The place was already provided with electricity by the Myanmar government. I encourage the Myanmar government to continue to provide this kind of media access. I think we’ve had about 20 of us altogether seeing this with our own eyes.

I just like to say one thing if I may. You’ve probably heard the news that former Governor Bill Richardson is no longer with the advisory board. We came with open minds and we speak with one voice to the implementation committee so we should have given ourselves the chance and opportunity to listen to the policymakers, to the officials, to the villagers, to everyone involved in the problem of Rakhine State and the concerted effort to bring peace and development to the area.

Unfortunately, Governor Richardson might have come with the preconceived notion of wanting to do something; that is the release of the Reuters reporters. He did not raise that in the advisory board at all but he raised it with the State Counsellor. It is not in the mandate of the advisory board. The board was not consulted formally in the meeting that we had three times.

My personal view is that if the local government has to be more involved. I think the process has to be more inclusive and I would urge the local parliamentarians in Rakhine State to be consultants. I think the entire consultation process has to begin from the community level before going all the way up to the National Government level.

The implementation of Kofi Annan’s 88 points cannot be done top-down only or bottom-up only; it has to be under the process of constant consultation from the communities to the executive branch and the legislative branch of the State and National government. Of course, the international community can be included in the consultation process and I think that’s how the peace, development and harmony can be sustainable.—Myanmar News Agency
Children’s Literature Festival held for first time in North Okkalapa, Yangon

By Nyunt Ko Ko

A Township –level Children’s Literature Festival was held for the first time in North Okkalapa Township in Yangon yesterday.

The festival was held with the aim of providing good opportunities for the local children to grow their love for literature and develop reading habits. The festival took place at the Oak taraThiri Park, near the North Okkalapa traffic circle in Yangon and was held from 9a.m. to 7p.m.

At the opening ceremony, Deputy Director-General of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Department Dr. San San Aye opened the ceremony and answered some of the questions related to the Children’s Literature Festival.

The following are some excerpts of interviews from people who attended the Children’s Literature Festival.

Ko Sai Thu, In-charge of Youth Social Group

We accumulated our funding and began this festival, which aims at giving a hand to the government and the children. There are many townships like North Okkalapa. This kind of festival is worth celebrating for the children. Children as well as their parents will have a wonderful time together. Some parents also requested to the schools to allow their children to go to our festival. Accordingly, the schools have granted their permissions and the children also can join the festival together with their teachers.

As for the Ministry for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement, they offered to open two booths; one booth is for learning and the other, for counseling services. For the request of Township Information and Public Relations office, they take a room to provide necessary information. Beside North Okkalapa Township, many children from South Dagon, Shwepyitha, Thingangyun and Latha townships participate in this festival. We are planning to open similar festivals in Hlainethaya Township in February, 2018. We aim at nurturing this practice for our next generations.

Daw Khine Hnin Wai, an actress

This festival entertains many interesting activities for the children and adults alike. They will get a chance to study in detail. We arrange many programs like cartoons, games and other amusing activities. Moreover, we share words of encouragement to single mothers and their offspring. Being an actress, I contribute many voluntary services, especially for orphanages and houses for them.

U Kyaw Khaing, unit officer of Township Red Cross Association

Our Red Cross Association aims at promoting health care services, assisting the needy and alleviating their troubles. We are a group of 40 members who are rendering help in the festival. I would like to hold this kind of festival as many places as we can across the country.

Daw Mya Mya Win, Superintendent of Ministry for Information and Public Relations

As for our department, we are conducting to disseminate useful information to the public. That’s why, we cooperate with Youth Social Group in order to open Children’s Literature festival and All-round Youth Development programs here.

6. 702 acres of relinquished farmlands returned to rightful owners in Kalay

A ceremony to return 6.702 acres of relinquished farmlands to the owners took place in Thayargon Village, Kalay Township in Sagaing Region on 28 January.

The farmlands were returned by the Department of Agriculture under the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation. At the ceremony, Sagaing Region Minister for Chin Ethnic Affairs U Lar Htay then said the farmers should operate the returned farmlands beneficially, putting the interest of the state to the fore.

An official from the Department of Agricultural Land Management and Statistics explained the purpose of returning the lands to the farmers. The regional minister presented the temporary land use certificate (Form-3) to the farmers. A village administrator spoke words of thanks on behalf of the farmers.

Different assortment of petrified woods with varying size, color, shape and purity, various sizes of well polished petrified woods, petrified wood products and other semiprecious stones, including quartz and crystals, special petrified woods, animal fossils and other rare semiprecious stones will be exhibited at the museum.—Htay Myint Maung ■
The title is in fact referred to the section 354 of the Constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, 2008. The section is the well-known one. Why? It is described that every citizen shall be at liberty in the exercise of the following rights, if not contrary to the law, enacted for the Union security, prevalence of law and order, community peace and tranquility or public order and morality (A) to express and publish freely their convictions and opinions; (B) to assemble peacefully without arms and holding possession; (C) to form associations and organizations in their language, literature and culture that they cherish, religion they profess, and customs without prejudice to the relations between one national race and another or national races and their faith. Some citizens seem to assume that they can freely enjoy these rights as a matter of course. They think that they have no obligations. In reality, everyone is responsible for not only their rights but also their duties for the benefit of the country.

Now the respective security organizations are making efforts to effectively take action against criminals while we ourselves should cooperate with the Myanmar Police Force as much as possible by living in a high state of awareness and alertness so that we can live in peace, security and comfort.
Trump says he would negotiate Brexit with ‘tougher’ attitude than Theresa May

LONDON — US President Donald Trump would take a “tougher” approach to Brexit negotiations than Britain’s Prime Minister Theresa May, he said in a television interview to be broadcast later on Sunday.

In the interview with British channel ITV, Trump said the European Union was “not cracked up to what it’s supposed to be” and claimed he had predicted the result of the June 2016 referendum in which Britons voted to leave the EU. Trump was elected to the US presidency later the same year.

When asked if May was in a “good position” regarding the ongoing Brexit talks, Trump replied: “Would it be the way I negotiate? No, I wouldn’t negotiate it the way it’s negotiated… I would have had a different attitude.”

Pressed on how his approach would be different, he said: “I would have said the European Union is not cracked up to what it’s supposed to be, I would have taken a tougher stand in getting out.”

May was the first foreign leader to visit Trump after his inauguration in January last year and they were filmed emerging from the White House holding hands. But the “special relationship” between the two nations has since faced several ups and downs, including Trump rebuking May on Twitter after she criticised him for retweeting Britain’s former Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn’s anti-Semitic views.

Trump’s comments on militant attacks in Britain have angered some and he has often exchanged barbs on social media with Mayor of London Sadiq Khan. Trump also said in the interview that he had anticipated the Brexit referendum result because of many Britons’ concerns over immigration — also a key plank of his US election campaign.

Spanish court says Puigdemont must attend parliament in person

MADRID — Spain’s Constitutional Court said on Saturday the former leader of Catalonia, Carles Puigdemont, could only attend a swearing-in session to become regional leader if he was physically present in the parliament and had a judge’s permission to attend. Puigdemont, living in Brussels since October, is wanted in Spain on charges of sedition and rebellion for spearheading an independence movement. He is due to face a vote of confidence as the region’s only presidential candidate on 30 January.– Reuters

Ikea founder Ingvar Kamprad dead at 91

STOCKHOLM — Ingvar Kamprad, the founder of iconic Swedish flat-pack furniture firm IKEA, has died, the company said on Sunday.

“The founder of IKEA and Ilkano, and one of the greatest entrepreneurs of the 20th century, Ingvar Kamprad, has peacefully passed away, at his home in Smaland, Sweden, on the 27th of January,” the company said in a press release. Kamprad was 91.– Reuters

Sample machine for China’s exascale supercomputer operational this year

TIANJIN — A sample machine for China’s new-generation exascale supercomputer is set for launch this year, a researcher said.

“The launch of the sample machine will pave the way for the development of a supercomputer capable of a billion billion calculations per second,” said Zhang Ting, a researcher with the National Supercomputer Center in Tianjin.

The new supercomputer will be 200 times faster and have 100 times more storage capacity than the Tianhe-1 supercomputer, China’s first petaflop supercomputer launched in 2010, Zhang said.

The supercomputer center in Tianjin began developing the exascale supercomputer with the National University of Defence Technology in 2016. According to the national plan for the next generation of high performance computers, China will develop an exascale computer during the 13th Five-Year Plan period (2016-2020). At present, the Tianhe-1 supports various tasks including oil exploration, high-end equipment manufacturing, biological medicine and animation design.

“The Tianhe-1, which performs more than 1,400 tasks each day, is running at full capacity. We need a new-generation supercomputer to replace it,” Zhang said.—Xinhua
Turkish, Russian top diplomats discuss preparations for Syria peace congress in Sochi

MOSCOW — Foreign Ministers Sergei Lavrov of Russia and Mevlut Cavusoglu of Turkey spoke by phone on Saturday, focusing on preparations for the Syrian National Dialogue Congress due in Sochi on 29-30 January, the Russian Foreign Ministry’s press service said on Saturday.

“The ministers shared views on final aspects of organizing and holding the given event,” it says.

The Syrian National Dialogue Congress is due to take place in the Russian Black Sea resort city of Sochi on 29-30 January. The peace conference is expected to bring together about 1,500 participants from the entire spectrum of Syria’s political forces.

Several killed in clashes in Yemen’s southern city Aden

ADEN — Several people were killed and injured as armed groups fought each other in the southern Yemeni city of Aden on Sunday, medical staff at hospitals in the city said.

Gunmen were deployed throughout most districts of the city and there was heavy gunfire, according to reports from residents.

There have been rising tensions between southern separatists, who are allied with the United Arab Emirates (UAE), and the Saudi-backed government of President Abd-Rabbu Mansour Hadi over control of the southern half of the country.

The two groups had been united throughout Yemen’s three-year civil war against the Iran-aligned Houthis in the north, but now their feud could cripple the effort by their Gulf Arab backers to roll back perceived Iranian expansion in Yemen.

The clashes in Aden come as a deadline imposed by the separatists for the government to resign expired on Sunday.

Hadi’s administration nominally controls about four-fifths of Yemen’s territory, but political and military leaders in Aden now want to revive the former independent state of South Yemen.

The southern separatists — the Southern Resistance Forces — last week accused Hadi’s cabinet of corruption and inefficiency and demanded they quit.

Syrian government says Turkish shelling damaged ancient temple

BEIRUT — The Syrian government and a war monitor said on Sunday that Turkish shelling of the Kurdish-held Afrin region of Syria had seriously damaged an ancient temple.

Ain Dara is an iron age temple with remains of large carved basalt blocks and wall reliefs. Pictures circulating online, which Reuters could not independently verify, showed an apparent shell crater in the site.

A statement from the Syrian government’s antiquities department carried by Syrian state media called for international pressure on Turkey “to prevent the targeting of archaeological and cultural sites”.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a Britain-based war monitor, said Ain Dara was exposed to Turkish shelling, causing significant damage but no casualties.

The Turkish military was not immediately available for comment.

Turkey’s operation against the Syrian Kurdish YPG militia in Afrin began a week ago and has included heavy bombardment but limited advances by its army or allied Syrian rebel groups.

The Syrian government of President Bashar al-Assad has condemned the Turkish assault, but it also opposes the YPG and Kurdish aspirations for autonomy in northern parts of Syria.

The country’s civil war, which began in 2011, has led to major damage to many historical remains including widespread destruction in the UNESCO World Heritage sites of Palmyra and the Old City of Aleppo.
Russia’s advanced aerial refueling tanker performs debut flight

MOSCOW — Russia’s latest Ilyushin IL-78M-90A aerial refueling tanker has performed its debut flight, the Ilyushin Aircraft Company told TASS on 25 Thursday January.

“Today, on 25 January, the flight model of the IL-78M-90A perspective aerial refueling plane performed its first flight. The plane was piloted by Ilyushin Chief Pilot, Hero of Russia Nikolai Kuimov,” the company said in a statement.

Vice-President of the United Aircraft Corporation and CEO of the Ilyushin Aircraft Company, Alexei Rogozin said that some foreign partners were showing interest in the latest aerial refueling tanker.

“The today upgraded IL-78M-90A aerial tanker performed its first flight, which lasted 35 minutes. The new plane differs from its predecessor by its modified wing, new engines and the control system, and also has a large lifting capacity and a big volume of fuel carried aboard. The plane has been developed for Russia’s Aerospace Force but some of our foreign partners are also showing interest in the tanker,” Rogozin said.

Russia’s improved aerial refueling modification is derived from the latest IL-76MD-90A military transport plane while its designing, the development of design documentation and its production were carried out using modern digital technologies.

The perspective aerial refueling plane boasts an increased flight range thanks to its four PS-90A-76 new-generation engines, which helps reduce the crew workload and enhance flight safety.

The aircraft is furnished with three hose and drogue air refueling pods: two units on the outer wings and one on the right side of the rear fuselage. The IL-78M-90A will be capable of refueling two frontline aviation planes at a time.

The tail unit allows the refueling plane to be refueled in the air and in aerodrome conditions. The aircraft is equipped with a refueling hose unit, which is housed in the tail unit. If necessary, fire-fighting equipment can be mounted on it,” the company said.

First Russia-assembled IL-78 plane

The Ilyushin Aircraft Company is the principal developer of the new aerial refueling tanker while its producer is Aviastar-SP enterprise.

Serial-produced aerial refueling tankers will be assembled at the Ulyanovsk-based Aviastar-SP where work is currently under way to install a final assembly line for the IL-78M-90A heavy military transport planes and IL-78M-90A refuelers.

The new plane will be the first aerial refueling tanker produced in Russia. Before that, all IL-78 aircraft were assembled in Uzbekistan.

Finland’s president Niinisto tipped for re-election in first round vote

HELSINKI — Polls opened in Finland on Sunday for a presidential election in which incumbent Sauli Niinisto is seen as likely to secure re-election on the first round of voting.

Niinisto, 69, is credited with helping Finland maintain a delicate balancing act between its relations with neighbour Russia and its links with NATO. It is not a NATO member but developed closer ties with the alliance after Moscow annexed Crimea in 2014.

Niinisto heads two of the three candidates looking likely to advance to a run-off on 25 February, according to a poll of polls released on Thursday.

Final polls released on Thursday showed support of 58-62 percent for Niinisto, who is original from the conservative National Coalition Party (NCP), but campaigns as an independent.

His closest challenger, Pekka Haavisto of the Greens of Finland — had the support of 13-14 per cent of respondents, while the option of a direct popular vote in 1994.

“His gruff, down-to-earth manner and facts-based approach truly appeals to Finns,” said Juho Rahkonen, Research Manager at pollster Taloustutkimus.— Reuters
Czech President Zeman re-elected with anti-immigration message

PRAGUE — Czech President Milos Zeman won a second term in a presidential election on Saturday, gaining the backing of voters for his tough stance against immigration and his courtship of Russia and China.

In the run-off against strongly pro-EU European Union academ-ic Jiří Drahos, Zeman scored 51.4 per cent to 48.6 per cent for his challenger. Zeman, 73, is the last prominent figure among active politi-cians from the country’s post-communist transitional period in the 1990s, and has shifted from being a centre-left prime minister 16 years ago to being a president with leanings toward the far-right.

The vote showed Czech voters’ concerns over security despite a period of fast economic growth and rising wages. Immigration was a key issue, more than two years after the European Union first faced a major influx of refugees — almost none of whom ever appeared in the Czech Republic.

The result will also influence the formation of the next Czech gov-ernment, with Zeman one of the few political backers of Prime Minis-ter Andrej Babis, whose minority cabinet lost a confidence vote this month due to fraud al-legations hanging over the billionaire businessman.

Zeman has been a polarising force, public-ly belittling opponents and sniping at intellectu-al elites and the media. He was one of the few European politicians to back Donald Trump in the 2016 US presidential election.

He has upset many with his warm relations with Russian President Vladimir Putin and calls to end EU sanctions against Moscow imposed over its annexation of Crimea.

His stance toward Brussels has been luke-warm. He calls himself a federalist and supports membership of the EU while also favouring holding an in-or-out referendum, like the one that led to Britain’s impending exit.

Speaking to support-ers after claiming victory, Zeman said he would continue travelling the country to meet citizens and hear their worries.

“This is my last political victory, there will be no political de-fates,” he told the crowd, flanked by advisers and the leaders of the far-right, anti-EU and an-ti-NATO SPD party and the Social Democratic party that he once led.

Revolutionary Guards, Islamic State fighters clash in west Iran

BEIRUT — Three members of the Revolutionary Guards and three Islamic State militants were killed in clashes in the west of Iran on Saturday, a top Guards’ commander said, accord-ing to Tasnim news agency.

A team of 21 Islamic State fighters were tracked after they crossed Iran’s west-ern border before being attacked by the Guards, the most powerful military force in the Islamic Rep-ublic, according to Sepah News, the Guards’ official news site. General Moham-mad Pakpour, head of the Guards’ ground forces, said 16 militants were arrested and two fled but were now surrounded, Tasnim agency reported.

In June, Islamic State militants attacked the parliament in Tehran and mausoleum of the Islamic Republic’s founder Ayatol-lah Ruhollah Khomeini, kill-ing at least 18 and wound-ing dozens. The attackers in the June assault were all Iranian Kurds from the Kurdish region of western Iran near the Iraqi border.

Jay-Z makes peace with Grammys as he is honoured at Clive Davis party

NEW YORK — On the night before the Grammy awards, Jay-Z took the stage at a New York dinner attended by music industry titans to discuss his complex relationship with music’s highest honours, where the odds are historically stacked against hip-hop artists winning top accolades.

“Jay-Z, who was honoured by the Recording Academy at veteran music producer Clive Davis’ annual pre-Grammy party on Saturday, spoke about his decision to boycott the Grammy awards in 1998 when rapper DMX did not get any nominations despite having two hit albums out that year.

Jay-Z said he only returned to the awards show in 2004, when Beyoncé, to whom he is now married, was nominated for her breakout solo album.

“The Academy, they’re human like we are and they’re voting on things that they like, it’s subjective ... we care because we’re seeing the most incredible artists standing on that stage and we aspire to be there, so I was like, I have to be here,” the rapper said.

“It’s our duty to make sure that not only are we making the greatest art, that we’re upholding and supporting things that are super real,” he added.

Jay-Z, 48, goes into Sunday’s Grammy awards with a leading eight nominations for his emotional, soul-baring album “4:44,” in which he examines the infidelity that was so scathingly detailed by Beyoncé in 2016’s “Lemonade,” as well as searing commentary on race in America.

The rapper has won 21 Grammy awards over his career, but he is yet to win the top accolades for song, record or album of the year, all of which he is nominated for on Sunday.

In 60 years of the Grammys, only two hip-hop albums have ever won album of the year: Lauryn Hill’s “The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill” in 1999 and Outkast’s “Speakerboxxx/The Love Below” in 2004. Brooklyn native Jay-Z, real name Shawn Carter, made his breakthrough with 1996’s “Reasonable Doubt” and has become one of the best-selling US musicians and respected rap lyricists.

He was honoured on Saturday for not only reshaping rap over his career but also as an entrepreneur, including reshaping the music business with his streaming service Tidal.

Singer Alicia Keys said Jay-Z’s music was “the soundtrack to my life” growing up and she sang a medley of his hits including “Hard Knock Life,” “Encore” and their New York anthem, “Empire State of Mind.” — Reuters

Post-Sundance, female filmmakers find Hollywood dream elusive

LOS ANGELES — Sundance, the premiere US independent film gathering, this week saw a record number of female filmmakers showcased and it has championed women for four decades, but the Hollywood success that so often comes for male directors has proven elusive.

In contrast, women made up 37 per cent of directors represented across the 122 films debuting at Sundance this week.

“The biggest problem is that it is so much harder to convince studios ... that we can also make the bigger movies,” said Hannah Fidell, who wrote and directed “The Long Dumb Road,” debuting at Sundance.

LOS ANGELES — Sundance, the premiere US independent film gathering, this week saw a record number of female filmmakers showcased and it has championed women for four decades, but the Hollywood success that so often comes for male directors has proven elusive.

A study published this month by University of Southern California’s Annenberg Inclusion Initiative analyzed 1,100 Hollywood films from 2007 to 2017 and found that out of 1,223 directors, women accounted for only 4 per cent of honourees.

“The biggest problem is that it is so much harder to convince studios ... that we can also make the bigger movies,” said Hannah Fidell, who wrote and directed “The Long Dumb Road,” debuting at Sundance.

Michael Barker and Tom Bernard, who co-founded Sony Pictures Classics and often usher Sundance movies to Oscar success, said they have produced films by 59 female filmmakers, but that a lot of those filmmakers have struggled to find success elsewhere.

“I don’t think women have been given those opportunities after their experience with us from all these other companies, and I think it’s right to stand up and say they deserve more attention than they were given,” Barker said.

Male directors, such as Quentin Tarantino, David O. Russell, Darren Aronofsky and Damien Chazelle, who all got their starts at Sundance, have gone on to enjoy studio success.

This year’s Sundance festival comes amid the rise of the Time’s Up movement in Hollywood, launched by more than 300 industry figures to fight against sexual misconduct and discrimination in the workplace.

Several panels at the festival focused on the gender gap in Hollywood with actresses such as Octavia Spencer speaking out about pay parity. Spencer said she and Jessica Chastain had teamed up to negotiate five times her asking salary for an upcoming film the two are working on together.

Along with pay issues, many filmmakers are looking for stories that move beyond female typcasts.

Reed Morano first came to Sundance in 2008 as the cinematographer for “Frozen River.” This year, she returned to Sundance with her film directorial debut “I Think We’re Alone Now,” centered on a man (Peter Dinklage) and a teenage girl (Elle Fanning) in a post-apocalyptic world.

“Out of 10 projects I get sent, seven or eight are female protagonistic and that’s not the only thing I’m interested in,” Morano said. “I do think it’s unfair for women who get pitched with creating fare for other women,” she added. After writing and directing two films with strong female leads, Fidell said she purposely chose to center her latest film “The Long Dumb Road” on the story of two boys.— Reuters

Traditional music concert kicks off Chinese New Year celebration in Houston

HOUSTON — A concert featuring traditional Chinese music on Friday kicked off celebrations for the upcoming Chinese lunar New Year at the Chinese Consulate General in the US city of Houston.

Dubbed “Greetings of Spring,” the concert featured traditional Chinese music performed by local Chinese artists, enthralling about 100 guests, including politicians, members of the business community and leaders of social organizations.

Chinese consul general in Houston and host of the event Li Qiangmin said in a speech that music is one of the best ways for cross-border communication, adding that “China will keep interacting with the world to enhance mutual understanding and friendship.” Li said he believed there are more opportunities and cooperation than challenges in future China-US relations.— Xinhua
TOKYO — More people in Japan are living alone but what is particularly alarming is their identity: mainly Japanese men with loose ties to their local communities.

Many are elderly men in isolation, lacking any support, or those of the working generation who have delayed or shunned marriage, only now to find they are facing the unwitting prospect of growing old alone.

Indeed, Japan is in a predicament where it needs to create a social security network that stretches beyond the family as the basic household unit of society.

A Tokyo man in his 90s whose wife died nearly 10 years ago is a textbook example of what can happen to people left to their own devices: he began to show signs of dementia after five or six years living on his own.

Although he was formally recognized as “requiring support,” the man insisted that he be left alone when a facilitator at the local Community General Support Centre recommended he receive nursing-care services.

He refused hospital visits, and even his pacemaker began to malfunction. He stopped attending neighbourhood association meetings and other events he used to when he was healthy.

Having no children to care for him, the man found himself in virtual isolation. He had not taken a bath in years, nor changed his clothes. Because of his erratic dietary habits, he failed to get proper nutrition, leading to a worsening of his dementia. The man finally entered a private residential nursing home last November.

Similar examples can be seen across the nation. Yoko Shimazaki, who is in charge of the man’s case at the Community General Support Center, said keeping tabs on those living alone, especially at night, is troublesome.

“For people living alone, we are in the dark sometimes, especially at night. It is difficult to get a comprehensive view of everything happening with them,” Shimazaki said. Isolation is an issue affecting many, even the working generation. “When I think of getting old all I see in front of me is darkness,” an unmarried man in his 40s who lives in Tottori Prefecture, western Japan, said with a look of gloom.

The man graduated from a prestigious university in the Kansai region but was unable to secure a job at his company of choice during the so-called “employment ice age.” He quit his job after working several years for a small manufacturer.

Afterwards he jumped around in part-time jobs, and he now works as a temporary employee for a local government office. He is seeking marriage, but when he tells potential partners his annual salary he is often rejected. According to a survey conducted by the National Institute of Population and Social Security Research, the ratio of people who have never married before turning 50 — the “lifetime unmarried ratio” — continues to rise, reaching 23 per cent and 14 per cent for men and women, respectively, in 2015.

For people, like the aforementioned man, following the so-called second baby boomer generation (those born from 1971-1974) who went through the employment ice age as young adults, many have not seen income growth, and hence hesitate to marry because of financial difficulties. For the man, the fear of dying alone cannot be ignored. “If I get sick or become unemployed I would be cut off from society. It is scary to live alone but there’s nothing I can do.”

People living alone will make up nearly 40 per cent of all households in 2040, according to a prediction by the same national research institute. Some companies see the rise of elderly people living alone as a unique business opportunity. Venture startup PowerElec based in Nagoya, west of Tokyo, has developed a device already on the market that can gauge power consumption between home appliances, such as television sets, and a Wi-Fi plug. For example, the device detects abnormal patterns in power from a TV that has been left on or off for an extended period, and the data is transmitted to the company’s cloud server. Family members or local government agencies are then notified either via email or with a cellphone app to confirm the person’s safety.

PowerElec says its new internet-of-things (IoT) service was deemed necessary to deal with the social problem of elderly people living alone. The majority of service users are family members living apart from their elderly relatives, but the company of Nagoya has also incorporated the service to check the safety of elderly people living alone in municipal housing, and the service is expanding.

Katsuhiko Fujimori, a chief researcher at Mizuho Information & Research Institute, said that in the future a social network that expands beyond a family will be necessary to cope with the rise in mainly unmarried men living alone as they grow old.

“We won’t be able to rely on families to care for the elderly, unlike up to now. Along with a strengthening of social security with enhanced nursing-care services, it will be necessary that mechanisms be created to promote interaction among housing residents,” Fujimori said.

Jean Paul Gaultier gets into swing of the 60s on Paris catwalk

PARIS — Psychedelic swirls, Beatle-style bobs in vibrant colours and plenty of swishing fringes filled Jean Paul Gaultier’s runway on Wednesday, in a celebration of the 1960s designed in homage to avant-garde French couturier Pierre Cardin.

Black-and-white striped dresses — ingeniously cut to that down the catwalk from the front while revealing a cinched silhouette from behind — mingled with bold pink or yellow pant suits in the collection, unveiled during Haute Couture week.

Fringes on boots, trousers, dresses and sleeves twisted and turned to the 1960-inspired soundtrack as models strutted down the runway.

Some stuck over-the-top poses as they went, like model Coco Rocha, who had spectators swooning as she took to the catwalk with her two-year-old daughter, dressed identically in an asymmetric baby-blue gown.

Ninety-five-year-old Cardin, who gave the self-styled bad boy of fashion Gaultier his first stint as an apprentice in 1970, surveyed the show from the front row, with actress Marion Cotillard and singer Paloma Faith also in attendance.

“It’s my beginning. Why not come back to that funny period that was the 1960s,” Gaultier told reporters after the show, adding that he had been in awe of Cardin’s futuristic, geometric designs when he was still a teenager. “Even before I started with him I was looking at magazines, at TV programmes on what he was doing.”“I was very frightened when he arrived (at the show), I wondered, ‘What will he tell me?’” Gaultier added. “I was like a little student of fashion.”

Gaultier, 65, stopped producing ready-to-wear collections in 2014 to focus on his haute couture line and perfumes. His brand is owned by Spanish perfume group Puig. The couturier, known for his irreverent and playful style, is preparing a musical stage production, the Jean Paul Gaultier Fashion Freak Show, which is billed as a pop extravaganza showcasing eccentric characters and episodes from his life. The show, which will run from October to December at the Folies Bergères music hall in Paris, will feature new Gaultier designs as well as some referencing his most famed creations, such as a conical bra worn by singer Madonna on tour in 1990. —Reuters

Myanmar football teams to contest for 2020 Summer Olympics in Japan

MYANMAR has selected the members for men’s and women’s football teams which will take part in the AFC U23 Championship qualification. Winning the Championship will give Myanmar the chance to enter in the 2020 Summer Olympics that will be hosted in Tokyo, Japan.

The qualification for the men’s team will start in March, 2019.

Three teams will qualify for the Olympics after passing the Final Round of the qualification of the Asia Zone well. The host team will automatically qualify for the Olympics Games.

Meanwhile, the women’s qualifications will be played with three stages set up including the final round. There will be two women football teams in Asia Zone that will qualify for the Olympics.

The association football tournament at the 2020 Summer Olympics will be held from 22 July to 8 August 2020 in Japan.

In addition to the Olympics’ host city of Tokyo, matches will also be played in Ibaraki, Saitama, Sapporo, Sendai, and Yokohama.

Having previously hosted the 1964 Summer Olympics, Tokyo will become the first city in Asia to host the Olympics twice. — Kyaw Zin Lin

Federer fights off Cilic to win sixth Australian Open

MELBOURNE — Roger Federer survived a second set ‘freeze’ and an onslaught from Croatia’s Marin Cilic to claim a record-equalling sixth Australian Open title on Rod Laver Arena on Sunday.

The Swiss maestro wobbled at times in the face of some fierce resistance before winning 6-2, 6-7(5), 6-3, 6-1.

With the stadium roof closed to keep out the withering Melbourne heat, the 36-year-old grabbed the first set in 24 minutes as a 20th grand slam title looked a formality.

But Cilic, who suffered a nightmare in last year’s Wimbledon final against Federer when blisters wrecked his chances, was not going to let his first Australian Open final slide by in a flash. Despite fighting a lone battle against Federer and most of the crowd, he reeled off five consecutive games to extend the champion into a deciding set.
