As I continue to state, corruption is the major obstacle for the rule of law and needs to be addressed. Addressing corruption is essential to delivering good governance. It relies on the “tone from the top” and each of you here today must consider yourselves responsible for setting the appropriate tone in a clear and forceful manner and remove opportunities for corruption. Government organizations not only need to cooperate with the Anti-Corruption Commission but also implement E-government functions with great effort. Cleaning up corruption is not a program but a culture. It is a culture that needs collective effort by the government and the public for sustainable development of the country.

VICE PRESIDENT U Henry Van Thio attends GMS-6 in Hanoi, Viet Nam

VICE PRESIDENT U Henry Van Thio, who was in Hanoi, Viet Nam, attended the meeting between leaders of Greater Mekong Sub-region (GMS) countries and the Asian Development Bank (ADB), as well as the opening ceremony of GMS-6, held at the National Convention Centre (NCC) yesterday morning.

Vice President U Henry Van Thio, accompanied by Union Minister U Kyaw Win, attended the meeting between leaders of GMS countries and the ADB Chairman held at the NCC at 8.45 a.m.

After the meeting, the leaders of GMS countries, the ADB Chairman, the ASEAN Secretary General and the World Bank Managing Director took commemorative group photographs at the NCC meeting hall and viewed the 25th GMS anniversary video file.

The ceremony was attended by Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc, Cambodia Prime Minister Hun Sen, China’s Foreign Minister Wang Yi, Lao- tian Prime Minister Thongloun Sisoulith, Thai Prime Minister Prayut Chan-o-cha, the ADB Chairman, the ASEAN Secretary General, the World Bank Managing Director, representatives from GMS member countries, senior officers and other officials.

Chairman of GMS-6 Nguyen Xuan Phuc delivered an opening speech, followed with speeches by leaders of the GMS countries and then the ADB Chairman.

In his speech, U Henry Van Thio commented that the summit theme ‘Leveraging 25 years of cooperation, building an integrated, sustainable and prosperous GMS’ was the most appropriate for the region now.

In the last 25 years, GMS countries have worked together and cooperated to achieve a truly integrated, sustainable and prosperous area within the GMS and aiming to overcome challenges within and outside it.

Myanmar hosted the fourth GMS Summit in 2011, where the GMS Strategic Framework (2012-2022) was endorsed.

Myanmar welcomes the five-year (2018-2022) action plan endorsed at the 22nd GMS Ministerial Conference held in 2017 and the GMS Regional Investment Framework 2022 that will support it, said U Henry Van Thio.

Myanmar believes that funding can be acquired to implement the 226 investment and technical assistance projects, valued at US$66.6 billion, which was included in the regional investment framework 2022, he said.

Furthermore, Myanmar also supports the GMS Transport Sector Strategy (2018-2030) with the aim to achieve “seamless, efficient, reliable and sustainable GMS transport system,” he noted.

Myanmar welcomes the development of the three main economic corridors of GMS that links cities in Myanmar, as well as GMS capital cities, main cities and ports, and the main trading routes. The successes achieved were due to the development partners, especially the financial and technical support of the ADB. Thus, the ADB and international development partners must be thanked for supporting the GMS programme from the start, he said.

Despite the great progress achieved, challenges remain in connectivity, raising competitive capacity and raising the sub-region community. The prospects and opportunities in the sub-region must be availed of through own and shared responsibilities.

“Starting from April 2018, our government is striving towards achieving national reconciliation, peace, and sustainable and all-inclusive economic development. Our main aim is to establish a stable and truly Democratic Federal Republic that guarantees the security, freedom and socio-economic development of the people,” he said.

At the moment, a sustainable development programme for Myanmar with the aim to establish appropriate policies, systems and organizations required for an all-inclusive socio-economic development is being drawn up. The programme will be drawn through discussions with the government, parliament, private sector, international development partners and other relevant entities, he noted.

The Vice President added that implementing the Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan will benefit the people of Myanmar, and support the entities in GMS, as well as other regions.

The rapid development of cities, climate change, natural and man-made disasters, cross-border migration, geopolitical instability and problems are making the challenges bigger and difficult.

Similarly, acts of terrorism and instability occurring in the world today require better efforts for human security through rule of law, peace and security in the region.

To resolve the challenges occurring on the new world stage and create new opportunities based on the successes and challenges, priorities need to be reviewed and adjusted with our strategy, he added.

Furthermore, it is important to recognize regional cooperation and open regionalism while implementing complimentary regional initiatives that includes the GMS, the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) and the Belt and Road initiatives, said the Vice President.

In the opening ceremony, GMS cooperation and the result of the Hanoi Action Plan 2018-2022 and report of the GMS Economic Council on the success of the GMS Private Sector were submitted. The Hanoi Action Plan 2012-2016, the Regional Investment Framework 2022 and the 6th GMS Summit Joint Declaration were approved.

At 6.30 p.m. U Henry Van Thio met with the Prime Minister of Viet Nam at the NCC.

Later, U Henry Van Thio attended the Myanmar-China bilateral meeting.

At the bilateral meeting, matters relating to increasing the bilateral relations and friendship, stability of border area, cooperation for security, cooperation in national reconciliation and peace process, cooperating to increase bilateral trade and investments were discussed and views exchanged.

The Vice President was accompanied by Union Minister U Kyaw Win, Myanmar Ambassador to Viet Nam U Kyaw Soe Win, heads of departments and officials, while the representative group from China was led by Foreign Minister Wang Yi. — Myanmar News Agency

Toddy palm is versatile but people should consider its future

The older toddy palm trunks are now widely used to build houses and stalls in rural and urban areas. In addition, toddy palm trunks are now popular to use for making furniture.

Recently, toddy palm trunks are used for buildings in restaura- nts, tea shops and hotels in urban areas as well as country style buildings to lure people from urban areas. In rural areas, toddy palm trunks are substituted for bamboo and wood for making pillars and beams.

All parts of a robust toddy palm tree are useful, from the fruit to the root. The toddy palm trees should be at least 70 years old before they are cut down and used for buildings and furniture.

The older toddy palm trunks are harder and more durable than other kinds of hard wood. The plank will not deteriorate or decay for many years if they are not damp, a carpenter from Myin Kin village said.

“A house that is built using older toddy palm trunks can last till his grandson’s time,” said the carpenter who is in his 60s.

“When the price of wood is high, local people substitute wood with toddy palm trunks by cutting older toddy palms. When the demand of the toddy palm is higher, the price also goes up,” a local person from Magway Town said.

Previously, a toddy palm was priced around Ks15,000, but the price can reach Ks35,000.

There is a large number of toddy palm groves in some vil- lages near Maungtaw Town such as Oat Phoe, Kan Bya and Zee Gyin villages.

“In Maungtaw Region, villagers used the bottom part of the toddy palm for making chairs. The trunk is used in construct- ing bridges and buildings. Toddy leaves are used for roofs and walls. The stem of toddy leaves are used for making arm chairs,” said U Kyi Khai, a resident from Thae Yin Daw Village.

Steam ed toddy palm trunk parquets, which are manufactured by a factory in the industrial zone in Pakokku Town, are displayed at the MSME Regional Products Exhibition. Entrepre- neur s of local small and medium sized enterprises from Magway Region and Chin and Rakhine states participated in the exhibition that was held in Magway on 24 March.

U San Win, production manager of Sein Soe San Company Limited’s wood factory in Pakokku industrial zone, said: “I worked in the timber industry for 20 years. Now, I arrived at the central Myanmar and got an idea to manufacture value added products by using discarded toddy palm trunks and roots. I manufactured them to export abroad.”

The factory manufactures different varieties of furniture from ash trays, vases, wine goblets and chairs to beds couches, doors and living room furniture.

An ash tray, the smallest product of the factory, is priced Ks3500. The price for a set of living room furniture goes for more than Ks9.4 million, he added.

Meanwhile, villagers in Mandalay, Sagaing and Magway regions are using toddy palms to build roadside restaurants and huts.

The use of toddy palm to construct buildings is good for those who can’t afford wood. However, cutting down massive toddy palm trunks is not a good sign for environmental conservation.

“Manufacturing furniture made of toddy palm is a good idea. The products made of toddy palm trunk are beautiful. And substituting wood today with palm trunk is cost effec- tive for people who can’t afford a large sum of money to construct buildings. But there is a concern for the ecosystem if we cut down large numbers of toddy palms. We need to protect them from being cut down,” a villager who loves the beauty of toddy palm groves and is worried about the ecosystem.

Over 1.1 million employees nationwide have social security numbers

THE number of employees having a social security insurance reached more than 1.1 million nationwide, according to a report in Myawaddy Daily on Saturday.

U Maung Maung Aye, Director-General of the Social Security Board (SSB), said the authorities are now offering healthcare services to unhealthy individuals with social security numbers through nearly 100 clinics, as well as three workers’ hospitals and one traditional medicine hospital. Mobile medical treatment is also being made available to the employees.

The parliament enacted the new Social Security Law in 2012, which came into force on 1 April 2014. This aims to support the development of the country’s economy by helping workers enjoy more security in social life and healthcare, through the collective guaranty of the employer, worker and the country.

Under this law, the SSB is now implementing health and social care insurance system, family assistance insurance system and invalidity benefit insurance system.

The SSB spends more than Ks1 billion to provide social benefits to workers on a monthly basis.

According to a survey, Shwepyitha, Dagon Seikkan, Dagon Myothit (South) townships and Shwelinban industrial zone in the Yangon region and some towns in Mandalay have a large population of workers. —GNLM

Forest product exports continue to decline in current FY

COMPAARED with the last financial year, Myanmar has seen a decrease in the value of exports of its forest products in the current FY, according to the statistical report of the Ministry of Commerce.

As of 23 March this year, the export of forest products amounted to US$201.764 million, recording a decrease of $27.359 million compared with the same period last FY.

The total import value reached $12.594 million through the public sector and $189.17 million through the private sector. The export of forest products by the government sector saw a slight increase in value at $8.772 million, compared with last FY, while the private sector exports of the same products declined by more than $36 million.

This FY, the country earned some $13.8 billion through the export of agro products, animal products, marine products, minerals, manufactured goods and other products.

Myanmar regularly exports a wide variety of forest products to international buyers, including bamboo and other non-wood products, and is planning to boost the production of bamboo-based products in anticipation of healthy exports.

Bamboo products to be showcased to celebrate World Wood Day in Mandalay

VARIOUS types of bamboo-based products will be on display to celebrate World Wood Day in Mandalay in early April, according to a report in Myawaddy Daily on Saturday.

To raise awareness about wood as an eco-friendly, renewable biomass material and demonstrate its key role in achieving a sustainable future, the World Wood Day is planned to be celebrated from 6 April to 8 April at the City Hall in Mandalay.

Dr Win Myint, chair of Myanmar Bamboo Growers Association, said that besides wood-based products, non-wood products, including bamboo plants, bamboo and bamboo-based crafts, soap, shampoo and furniture will be showcased during the three-day event.

A wide variety of bamboo species native to Myanmar will also be seen at the event, he added.

The event will share knowledge about bamboo, which is non-polluting and does not have crusts or parts that can be considered waste. As a natural composite material, bamboo is widely used as a construction material for scaffolding, bridges and houses. It also provides human beings with food, clothes and paper.

According to traders, the country has a great future in bamboo-based handicrafts, with demand even exceeding supply sometimes.

According to the trade record, the country earns some US$1 million yearly through the export of bamboo-based products to overseas countries, such as Singapore and Korea. —GNLM
Oil spill cleanup fire kills two in Indonesia

JAKARTA — At least two people died in a fire as Indonesian authorities tried to cleanup an oil spill off Borneo island on Saturday, an official said.

The blaze was sparked as workers tried to clear the spill in waters near Balikpapan City by burning it.

Two people — believed to be fishermen — were caught in the fire and died, a spokesman of the local search and rescue agency said.

"The fire was quite big, about two kilometres high. It can be seen from Balikpapan city and the smell was all over the place," said Octavianto, a senior official of East Borneo search and rescue agency, who like many Indonesians go by one name.

Authorities have managed to put out the fire but there was still an oil spill in the waters.

It was not known how much oil was spilled or where it came from. A boat carrying coal was temporarily stuck near the fire, Octavianto told AFP, but the search and rescue teams successfully evacuated all 20 crew on board.

Indonesia relies heavily on boats to ferry people and goods around its vast archipelago of about 17,000 islands.

"Boat accidents are common, but oil spill cleanup accidents are rare," Octavianto said.

Thailand says ancient kings were defiled in painting

BANGKOK (Thailand) — The governor of Thailand’s Chiang Mai province has sued a local magazine for posting a “blasphemous” painting of ancient kings — has cemented a culture of self-censorship across the kingdom’s academic, media and arts circles when it comes to royal affairs.

The risks of testing those boundaries were on display on Friday when an English-language magazine faced legal action for posting an image on social media of three statues of ancient kings — a Chiang Mai landmark — in pollution masks. The painting, which was the work of a local high school student, was posted on Citylife Chiang Mai’s Facebook page to promote a rally urging authorities to tackle a toxic haze that plagues the northern city annually. The province’s governor called the artwork a “blasphemous act” and dispatched an official to file charges against the outlet under Thailand’s Computer Crime Act.

The cyber-crime law, which carries up to five years in prison for uploading false content to the web, is routinely used against perceived critics of the monarchy on social media, though it is not as harsh as the lese majeste law that carries up to 15 years per charge. “I assigned my official to file a complaint with police yesterday that the picture may have violated the Computer Crime Act as it’s inappropriate," Chiang Mai governor Pavin Chantraprasart told AFP on Saturday.

"The statues of three kings are very sacred and respected by Chiang Mai residents, they were our ancestors," he added.

In an official letter to police, the governor said the painting "may affect Chiang Mai’s image and tourism, causing the city economic instability”.

Chiang Mai is one of Thailand’s largest cities and a major hub for travellers exploring the country’s lush and mountainous north. But it also struggles with dangerous levels of air pollution during crop-burning season.

Police confirmed they were investigating the case, while the magazine announced that its ‘Right to Breathe’ protest had been cancelled.

Chinese State Councilor says protectionism one-way street leading nowhere

HANOI — Chinese State Councillor and Foreign Minister Wang Yi said on Saturday that protectionism harms others without benefiting oneself and it is also a one-way street that leads nowhere.

Wang made the comments here at the ongoing sixth summit of the Greater Mekong Subregion (GMS) Economic Cooperation.

Openness has been essential to the development of the subregion, he said, adding that without it, it would be impossible to accomplish so much.

Wang called on the subregion to expand openness to secure greater development in the future.

“We must continue to drive trade and investment liberalization and facilitation, support the multilateral trading system and promote an open, inclusive and balanced economic globalization that benefits all,” he said.

The Chinese state councilor also urged an early conclusion of the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) negotiations so as to lead the way for the regional free trade architecture.

“We also need to improve the business environment to energize market entities and enable factors of production to flow more smoothly and efficiently,” he said.

Noting that China has long been an advocate of an open world economy, Wang stressed that China is committed to win-win cooperation in opening-up and firmly opposes trade protectionism. “Protectionism harms others without benefiting oneself. It is a one-way street that leads nowhere,” he said, adding that the right approach to addressing trade disputes is to conduct consultation in line with international rules and as equals.

Singapore says Uber-Grab deal may flout competition rules

SINGAPORE — The sale of Uber’s Southeast Asian business to Singapore-based rival Grab may have infringed competition rules, a Singapore watchdog said on Friday, imposing restrictions on the deal while it carries out an investigation.

The directive announced on Monday ended a bruising battle between the ride-hailing behemoths and marked the US firm’s latest retreat from international markets. But the Competition Commission of Singapore (CCS) said both companies would face interim measures as it probes concerns Grab will have a virtual monopoly on the ride-hailing market — the first time such a directive has been issued in the city-state.

Under rules which take effect immediately, the companies will not be allowed to integrate their operations until the CCS investigation is finished.

They will have to maintain separate pricing and cannot obtain confidential information from each other like costing or customer and driver details.

It is likely to prove a major stumbling block for the deal, under which Singapore-based Grab is set to take over Uber’s ride-sharing and food delivery operations in the region. In return Uber will receive a 27.5 per cent stake in the business, with chief executive of the California-headquartered company Dara Khosrowshahi joining the Grab board. Singapore has a voluntary merger notification regime and the Competition Commission has not received submissions from Uber and Grab as of Friday. Both companies have indicated they intend to file a formal merger notification, the CCS said. Uber and Grab did not immediately comment on the decision.

Japan whalers return from Antarctic hunt after killing 333 whales

TOKYO, (Japan) — Japanese whaling vessels returned to port on Saturday after catching more than 300 of the mammals in the Antarctic Ocean without facing any protests by anti-whaling groups, officials said.

A fleet of five whalers set sail for the Southern Ocean in November, as Tokyo pursues its “research whaling” in defiance of global criticism.

Three of the vessels, including the fleet’s main ship, the Nisshin Maru, arrived in the morning at Shimonoseki port in western Japan, a port official said. The fleet caught 333 minke whales as planned without any interruption by anti-whaling campaigners, the Fisheries Agency said in a statement.

Japanese whalers have in the past clashed at sea with animal rights campaigners, particularly the Sea Shepherd activist group, which last year announced it had no plan to make offshore protests this season. Japan is a signatory to the International Whaling Commission moratorium on hunting, but exploits a loophole necessary for scientific research.

Tokyo says the slaughter is necessary for in-depth knowledge of whale behaviour and biology, but it makes no secret of the fact that whales killed for scientific research.

Flights resume at London Stansted after bus fire

LONDON — Flights resumed at London’s Stansted airport on Saturday after a shuttle bus fire forced the cancellation of flights as the busy Easter long weekend got under way.

The fire outside the terminal entrance started at 4:20pm (1520 GMT) on Friday and was completely extinguished by 5:00pm (1600 GMT). Departures at Britain’s fourth-busiest airport, 30 miles (50 kilometres) northeast of London, were scrapped for the rest of Friday but all flights resumed as normal on Saturday.

The blaze was caused by an electrical fault in the bus engine. The bus was completely destroyed. The driver was the only person on board and nobody was injured.

“In total, around 100 flights were either delayed, diverted or cancelled,” a Stansted spokesman told AFP. Around half of those were thought to have been cancelled and roughly 10,000 people were thought to have been affected.

“Airines are looking to put in some additional flights today to make up for some of the ones that were cancelled, in addition to rebooking passengers onto any available seats today and the rest of the weekend,” the spokesman said. Seen from inside the airport terminal, the blaze looked like a wall of flames, while outside, thick black smoke bellowed into the air.

People inside the building were moved airside away from the fire, meaning passengers who had not gone through security were mixed with those who had. Flights were then cancelled.—AFP ■

Digital economy is sine qua non for our sustainable economy

YANMAR, which has seen a rapid rise in mobile phone services and other digital technologies, has the “unique opportunity” to overcome challenges and to focus efforts towards financial inclusion.

Communications and technology have direct impact on the operations of governments and humanitarian organizations across the world.

Myanmar’s gross domestic product, in relation to its information and communications technology sector, is estimated to increase to US$4.4 billion by 2020 due to the increasing use of smartphones and the internet.

Mobile infrastructure is important to countries such as Myanmar, where 97 per cent of the population lives in rural areas.

As such, the country is drafting the Myanmar Digital Economy Development Master Plan.

To build a digital economy, the country needs to upgrade the existing economic structure, economic infrastructure and human resources, create a better economic environment and attract international investments.

Foreign investment is pivotal to developing the private sector, besides setting rules and guidelines to create competitive, efficient and transparent systems for the profit of the people.

Myanmar has been implementing the 2012 Development Assistance Framework, and has been looking at other countries since the country has become more transparent and open.

Myanmar has recently implemented new laws and as such, it has seen better networking through regulations.

Global business ventures.

The country has also carried out reforms that are aimed at strengthening the tax system, attracting new foreign investment, and securing the market for small businesses and enterprises.

The report notes that promoting sustainable consumption and production patterns will be key to restructuring provision systems, reducing waste and encouraging the use of sustainable goods and services, and mainstreaming throughout the region.

The report identifies seven concrete flagship initiatives that would address gaps and challenges towards the ASEAN Community Vision 2025 and the UN 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

In conclusion, outbreaks of fire threaten the safety of people, loss of property and damage the environment.

Those who use fire recklessly without care could be held accountable.

It is advised that rats tend to cut off the wires. One should always keep them in mind.

It is also recommended that faulty wall switches be fixed by an electrician rather than people who are not qualified.

Russian diplomat comments on Aeroflot plane search conducted by UK authorities

MOSCOW — The British authorities have barred the crew of a Russian Aeroflot plane bound for Moscow from being present during the search of their plane, Russian Foreign Ministry Spokeswoman Maria Zakharova said on Friday.

“The British authorities asked the Russian crew, including the captain, to leave the aircraft. The captain suggested the search be conducted in his personal presence as in line with the instructions he cannot leave the plane. As of now, the Britons have begun the search, keeping the captain inside the cockpit, not letting him be present during the search,” she told the Rossiya-24 television channel.

Russian diplomats are in contact with the British authorities over the search of Russia’s Aeroflot jet at London’s Heathrow airport. Moscow urges London to stop provocative actions:

“Officers of the Russian embassy in the United Kingdom are currently on the way to the airport. The Russian diplomatic mission, the Russian ambassador, Alexander Yakovenko are getting in touch with the local side,” Zakharova stated. “We urge the British authorities to stop provocative actions and get the situation back to the legal framework.” The actions of the British side that searched Russia’s Aeroflot plane in London’s Heathrow airport run counter to the international practice of plane searching, an Aeroflot spokesman told TASS on Friday.

“The UK police and customs officers searched an Aeroflot jet at London’s airport. Aeroflot is baffled over the fact that no reasons for that were provided. During the search, the British side ordered the crew to leave the plane, letting only the captain to stay. However he was isolated in the cockpit. Such actions on the part of the British side run counter to the international practice of conducting such searches,” he said.—Tass

Venezuela to compensate relatives of 68 killed in jail fire

CARACAS (Venezuela) — Venezuela’s government said on Friday it will compensate the relatives of scores of prisoners and a couple of visitors who died this week when a fire engulfed an overcrowded police headquarters’ jail.

The statement by the foreign ministry also said authorities have been ordered to probe the blaze that happened on Wednesday in the state police facility in the country’s third-biggest city of Valencia.

A total of 68 people died in the fire — 66 male prisoners and two female visitors.

A prisoners’ rights group, Una Ventana a la Libertad (A Window on Freedom), said the prisoners had set fire to mattresses in an attempt to break out of the jail.

The foreign ministry statement said “means of compensation” had been agreed for the affected families.

Police sources told AFP on Friday that all but eight of the bodies had been claimed by relatives.

The UN’s human rights office in Switzerland had said on Thursday it was “appalled at the horrific deaths” and called for a complete investigation. It had also demanded compensation be paid to the families.

The government of Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro rejected the “precipitate and disproportional” comments of the UN office. It alleged there was “a multi-faceted assault being deployed against our country making rude and vile use of the issue of human rights.”

WASHINGTON — The White House has instructed the State Department to freeze over $200 million in funds earmarked for “recovery efforts” in Syria, The Wall Street Journal reported on Friday.

The report — which came a day after Trump declared in a speech that the US would be quitting Syria “very soon” — is another indication the president wants to disengage from the country.

Officals told AFP that Trump’s aside in his speech was not a slip, but that for several weeks he had been pushing back against the idea of a long or medium term US commitment to stabilizing eastern Syria.

According to The Wall Street Journal, Trump called for the spending freeze after reading a news report that said the US had committed the funds for recovery efforts in Syria, which has been wrecked by a more than seven-year civil war. The US has more than 2,000 military personnel in eastern Syria as part of international efforts to defeat the Islamic State group, an extremist organization that once controlled swathes of Syria and neighbouring Iraq. Speaking in Ohio on Thursday, Trump indicated that with the war against IS winding down, he wants American involvement in Syria to do likewise. “We’ll be coming out of Syria, like, very soon. Let the other people take care of it now,” he promised.

Trump did not say who the others were who might take care of Syria, but Russia and Iran have sizable forces in the country to support President Bashar al-Assad’s regime.—AFP

Russia says Britain must cut more than 50 diplomats

MOSCOW (Russia) — Britain has to reduce its diplomatic staff in Russia by more than 50 more people, the foreign ministry said on Saturday, following an escalating row over the nerve agent on Saturday, following an escalating row over the nerve agent.

Saudi forces say intercept missile fired by Yemen rebels

RIYADH — Saudi air defence forces on Saturday intercepted a ballistic missile fired by Yemen's Huthi rebels at the kingdom's southern city of Najran, state media reported.

State-run Al-Ekhbariya television gave no further details but did not report any casualties or damage from the missile.

Yemen’s Saba news agency, run by the Iran-backed Huthis, said the missile had been fired at a Saudi National Guard base in Najran, just over the border from Yemen where a Saudi-led coalition has intervened against the insurgents.

Saba said the attack had caused deaths among Saudi forces but provided no details.

The coalition on Thursday said it intercepted another missile fired by the Huthis at the southern city of Jazan — the latest in a series of such attacks that have drawn widespread condemnation.

The UN Security Council this week condemned “in the strongest possible terms” multiple missile attacks launched by the Huthis on Saudi territory, saying they posed a threat to regional security.

In one of the biggest such attacks yet, Saudi forces last weekend said they intercepted seven missiles fired by rebels toward cities including Riyadh, killing one person.

The coalition intervened in Yemen in 2015 to push back the Huthis who captured the capital Sanaa and forced the government into exile.

Riyadh has accused arch-rival Tehran of providing the missiles and threatened retaliation against Iran. Tehran denies the charge.—AFP

American, British soldiers killed in Syria: Pentagon

BEIRUT, LEBANON — Two members of the US-led anti-jihadist coalition — an American and a Briton — were killed by an improvised explosive device in the northern Syrian city of Manbij, US and British officials said on Friday.

Five other coalition service personnel were wounded, the Pentagon said.

The attack in Manbij happened late Thursday — the day US President Donald Trump said he would pull forces out of Syria “very soon.”

“Two coalition personnel were killed and five were wounded by an improvised explosive device in Syria” at around midnight (2100 GMT), the coalition said in a statement which gave no further details about the victims. A Pentagon official, speaking later on condition of anonymity, identified one of them as being American.

Britain’s defence ministry confirmed the second fatality came from within its ranks.

“The individual was embedded with US forces on a counter-Daesh operation when the incident occurred,” the ministry said, using an Arabic acronym to refer to the Islamic State (IS) group. Since 2014, the coalition has provided weapons, training and other support to forces fighting IS jihadists in Syria and Iraq. This latest incident brings the number of US personnel killed in action during the operation to 14. No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack.

The US-led coalition said it was withholding details on the circumstances of the attack pending further investigation.

The Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a Britain-based monitor, said the attack hit a convoy in the heart of Manbij, also wounding four members of the local council. Manbij used to be a hub for the jihadists when their self-styled “caliphate” was at its peak. It was retaken by Kurdish-led forces backed by the coalition.

More than 2,000 US personnel were killed in the conflict but IS was driven from its core territory.

Saudi Arabia arrests 13 Turkish nationals in security-related cases

RIYADH — The Saudi Presidency of State Security announced on Saturday the arrest of 13 Turkish nationals for security-related cases, Al Arabiya news reported.

The authority, which is responsible for state security cases, announced the news on its website.

It highlighted that 12 Turkish residents were arrested on Sunday, while the 13th was arrested on Tuesday, without stating the nature of their cases.

The authority was formed in July last year to counter terrorism and carry financial probes. The formation was part of a royal order, in which all security institutions are now connected to the new body.

The presidency includes the CID, special security forces, emergency forces and police aviation.

The order stated the reason for forming the authority to continue developing the security sector to meet challenges and deal with emergencies with efficiency.

The Saudi-Turkey ties are facing tensions, especially after the supporting stand of the later towards Qatar that Saudi Arabia has been boycotting with other Gulf states for almost a year.

Qatar has been accused of supporting terrorism and interfering in the internal affairs of other countries.

Turkey since then has been providing military and commercial assistance to Qatar, including various consumer products such as milk and food that used to be imported from neighboring countries. —Xinhua

Israeli drone crashes in southern Lebanon

JERUSALEM — An Israeli drone has crashed in southern Lebanon due to a technical malfunction, the military said on Saturday, after Hezbollah media labelled it a “spy” device. The Israeli military said that the drone crash in an open area on Friday night posed “no risk of leaked information.” It provided no further details. Hezbollah television station Al-Manar reported that the “spy drone” fell between Baraachit and Bait Yahoun in southern Lebanon.

It said that “a second spy plane targeted it with a guided missile, which resulted in it being destroyed.”

Russia to create robotized multiple launch rocket system to hit helicopters and drones

YEREVAN — Russia’s Tecmash Research and Production Group plans to develop a small-caliber multiple launch rocket system with robotic elements capable of striking helicopters and drones, Tecmash Deputy CEO Alexander Kochkin said at the ArmHiTec-2018 exhibition on Friday.

The new weapon is intended for use in the Airborne Force, marine infantry and Special Forces, the deputy chief executive said.

“We are setting the aim of creating a system capable of hitting both ground and air targets. It will be capable of striking helicopters and drones in the close proximity of 1.5-2 km and at an altitude of no more than 1 km,” Kochkin said.

The company plans to work out technical specifications jointly with the Defence Ministry for the new multiple launch rocket system in the near future, he said.

“I believe that the Airborne Force, marine infantry and Special Forces that operate in separation from the main military contingent will display interest in [the new weapon]. They need fire support from these systems,” the Tecmash deputy chief executive said.

According to Kochkin, the new multiple launch rocket system will fire specially designed shells and 50-80mm aircraft rockets already accepted for service and will incorporate robotic remote control elements.

The new weapon will also get automated reload and land navigation systems. The robotic multiple launch rocket system will feature an automated multi-channel guidance and fire control system allowing it to effectively hit targets at night and amid smoke and dustiness on the battlefield.—Tass

Argentinean’s Macri backs minister who keeps his millions abroad

BUENOS AIRES — Argentina’s President Mauricio Macri on Friday backed his under-fire energy minister because he lacked faith in the economy.

Macri said Juan Jose Aranguren had made financial sacrifices to take on the job of minister in his center-right government in 2015.

Aranguren had resigned as president of Anglo-Dutch oil company Shell in Argentina, “where he was doing very well, to take charge of the biggest mess that the Kirchnerists left behind — that was a country without energy” and with daily power blackouts, Macri told Cadena 3 radio.

The president was responding to questions about his minister’s public acknowledgement on Thursday that he kept most of his $88 million fortune deposited abroad.

“This has to do with the confidence we have lost in Argentina,” Aranguren said on Radio con Vos.

He said most of the investments and savings he held abroad came from “a bonus I received from my former employer (Shell) in shares of that company that were obviously abroad.”

At a time when Argentina was enforcing exchange restrictions under Cristina Kirchner’s leftist government, “Why am I going to bring it in?” he asked.

“We are working for an Argentina where that does not happen anymore,” said the minister when his interviewer said he kept his own money in the country, Aranguren replied: “You have more confidence in Argentina than I do, I leave you with that virtue.”

“I want to work so that everyone in Argentina can recover that confidence,”

Treasury Minister Nicolas Dujovne, the head of the Federal Intelligence Agency Gustavo Arribas and Central Bank chief Federico Sturzenegger also said they kept most of their money outside the country.—AFP

Louisiana police officer who fatally shot black man is fired

WASHINGTON — The officer who shot dead a black man in the southern US state of Louisiana has been fired, the Baton Rouge police chief told journalists on Friday.

News of the disciplinary measures came days after the state’s attorney general said officers Brian salmononi and Howie Lake — both of whom are white — would not face charges in the 2016 shooting death of Alton Sterling.

Salamoni was terminated effective immediately and Lake will be suspended for three days over his involvement in the incident, Chief Murphy Paul said.

“We are setting the aim of creating a system capable of hitting both ground and air targets. It will be capable of striking helicopters and drones in the close proximity of 1.5-2 km and at an altitude of no more than 1 km,” Kochkin said.

The company plans to work out technical specifications jointly with the Defence Ministry for the new multiple launch rocket system in the near future, he said.

Leftist looms large as Mexico presidential race opens

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO — The campaign for Mexico’s 1 July presidential election officially opened on Friday, with Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador, a veteran leftist promising a sharp break with the past, positioned as the man to beat.

“AMLO,” as he is widely known, has a double-digit lead in the start of the race to succeed President Enrique Pena Nieto, whose popularity has been dented by corruption scandals, a seemingly hopeless war on drug cartels and record-shattering crime that has left a trail of bodies in its wake.

But Lopez Obrador, a sometimes fiery leftist who is making his third presidential bid, has been here before: in 2006, he led for most of the race, then narrowly lost to Felipe Calderon of the conservative National Action Party (PAN).

Two rivals are meanwhile fighting a no-holds-barred battle for second place.

Ricardo Anaya of the PAN is a youthful ex-lawmaker whose bid to campaign as a fresh face has been clouded by accusations of corruption and strengthening his way to his party’s nomination.

Jose Antonio Meade is a respected former finance minister standing for the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) — a long-dominant force in Mexican politics whose popularity is now so low it tapped a non-party member as its candidate.

Running a distant fourth is independent Margarita Zavala, ex-president Calderon’s wife, who quit the PAN in a bitter dispute with Anaya and is now piling away a potentially crucial part of his vote.

Anaya and Zavala kicked off their campaigns with midnight rallies in Mexico City. Lopez Obrador and Meade are saving their first big rallies for Sunday — Easter, a date charged with symbolism in this still very Catholic country.

All hope to draw crowds that day to boost their momentum.

Anything remains possible in the single-round vote, but AMLO looks ever harder to beat, said Mexican political analyst Jose Antonio Crespo.—AFP
TOKYO, JAPAN — One third of central Tokyo could be left under water and nearly four million people affected if a super typhoon strikes the capital causing storm surges, a new study by local authorities has warned.

The Tokyo metropolitan government unveiled its first estimate of the Japanese capital's vulnerability to damage from typhoon-related high tidal waves Friday, as risks of storm damage continue to increase globally.

According to the report, 212 square kilometres (83 square miles), or one third of the capital's central area, could be inundated to a maximum depth of 10 metres (33 feet) if a super typhoon creates high tidal waves.

In particular, Tokyo's eastern zone near Arakawa river would be flooded for more than a week if rising tidal waves at Tokyo Port break through river levees. — AFP

Kim says N Korea to take part in 2020, 2022 Olympics: IOC chief

SEOUL — Kim Jong Un is committed to sending North Korean teams to the Tokyo and Beijing Olympics, IOC chief Thomas Bach said Saturday after a rare meeting with the leader of the nuclear armed regime in Pyongyang.

Bach, the president of the International Olympic Committee, also said the IOC will make a proposal for a “potential joint march” and other shared activities between the North and South Korean teams at the 2020 Games in Japan.

Last month’s Winter Olympics in South Korea saw competitors from the two countries march together at the opening ceremony and field a joint women’s ice hockey team.

The Winter Games triggered a fast-moving rapprochement that will see Kim sit down with the South’s President Moon Jae-in in late April, with a US summit with President Donald Trump planned for May. Bach told reporters after landing in Beijing that his talks with Kim on Friday had been “very open and fruitful”.

“They announced to us that they will definitely participate in the Olympic Games Tokyo 2020 as well as the Olympic Winter Games Beijing 2022” and all editions of the Youth Olympic Games, Bach said.

“And this commitment was fully supported by the supreme leader,” he said.

North Korea’s official KCNA news agency said Kim thanked Bach for helping to bring about a “dramatic thawing” of tensions on the Korean peninsula.

Bach arrived in the country on Thursday and his visit, which concluded Saturday, was the result of an invitation extended by Pyongyang in January.

The isolated regime rarely hosts foreign dignitaries but recent weeks have seen a flurry of diplomacy, with Kim making his first foreign trip as leader to meet Chinese President Xi Jinping and inviting him to visit Pyongyang.

Kim’s Olympic overtures follow Japanese media reports earlier this month of Tokyo exploring the possibility of a meeting between Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and the North Korean leader after the surprise announcement of a proposed summit with Trump.

Tokyo has long maintained a hardline position on negotiations with the North, while Pyongyang in turn has threatened to “sink” Japan into the sea and to turn it into “ashes”, sending two missiles flying over the country last year.

Thai junta vows to lift politics ban in June

BANGKOK, Thailand — Thailand’s junta will lift a near four-year ban on political activity in June, an official said on Friday, as space for debate slowly expands in the kingdom with polls promised for next year.

Political gatherings of five or more people have been outlawed since Thailand’s army grabbed power in a May 2014 coup, booting Yingluck Shinawatra’s elected government from power.

The generals, who have repeatedly backtracked on promised returns to democracy, insist an election will be held “no later” than February 2019.

Yet while parties have been allowed to register in anticipation of the vote, they remain barred from discussing policy or meeting without junta permission.

Politicians have demanded the ban is lifted, while critics accuse the junta of buying time to bolster the chances of new army-linked parties in the upcoming election.

A defence ministry spokesman said the moratorium would soon be lifted, confirming comments from the junta’s number two made to the local press on Thursday.

“The initial plan is that the ban would be lifted in June so that newly set-up parties are ready,” Lieutenant-General Kongcheep Tantrakarn told AFP. — AFP

South Korean musicians arrive in Pyongyang for concerts

SEOUL—K-pop stars led a group of South Korean musicians arriving in Pyongyang on Saturday to take part in the latest set of cross-border cultural performances ahead of next month’s rare inter-Korean summit.

The 120-member group including top girlband Red Velvet flew from Seoul’s Gimpo airport aboard a chartered civilian flight to Pyongyang via the rarely used direct air route between the two Koreas, as a rapprochement on the peninsula gathers pace.

“This performance in Pyongyang will add momentum to inter-Korean exchanges and cooperation that resumed with the Pyeongchang Winter Olympics” in the South, said Culture Minister Do Jong-hwan, who led the group.

They were greeted on arrival at Pyongyang airport by Do’s counterpart Pak Chun-nam as well as Hyon Song-wol, founder of the North’s popular all-female Moranbong band, the South’s Yonhap agency reported.

Under the theme title “Spring is Coming”, the South Korean musicians will perform a concert in Pyongyang on Sunday before a joint show with North Korean artists at the capital’s 12,000-seat Ryugyong Jong Ju Yong Gymnasium on Tuesday.

While in Pyongyang, Do said, he will meet with North Korean officials to discuss further cultural and sports exchanges between the two Koreas that have restarted after a decade-long hiatus.

The two rivals on Friday agreed a date for next month’s inter-Korean summit — the third ever of its kind following 2000 and 2007 meetings — at Panmunjom truce village on the heavily-fortified border on 27 April.

Following the meeting between the North’s leader Kim Jong Un and the South’s president Moon Jae-in, landmark talks are planned between Kim and US President Donald Trump, which could come by the end of May.

The rapid rapprochement was kicked off by last month’s Winter Olympics in the South and comes after a year of heightened tensions over the North’s nuclear and missile programmes, which saw Kim and Trump engage in a fiery war of words.

Together with athletes and cheerleaders, the North sent musicians led by Hyon Song Wol to the South to celebrate the Games.

The shows in the North — the first of which will take place at the 1,500-seat East Pyongyang Grand Theatre on Sunday — will be taped and edited by a South Korean video crew to be made into a joint TV programme for both countries, Yonhap news agency said.—AFP

Animals rights groups scent blood as fashion labels go fur-free

PARIS—Is this the beginning of the end for fur?

With more and more fashion houses going fur-free, San Francisco banning fur sales in the city and British MPs considering outlawing all imports of pelt after Brexit, the signs do not seem good for the industry.

After decades of hard-hitting campaigning against fur, animal rights activists believe they scent victory.

Last week Donna Karan and DKNY became the latest in a flood of luxury brands to say they were planning to go fur-free, following similar announcements by Gucci, Versace, Prada, Michael Kors, Armani and Hugo Boss in recent months.

US-based animal rights group PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals), which is famous for its spectacular anti-fur protests, declared that “2018 is the year that every-
Family, friends bid farewell to Stephen Hawking

LONDON — Friends, family and colleagues of British scientist Stephen Hawking will gather Saturday to pay their respects at his private funeral in Cambridge, where he spent most of his extraordinary life.

Hawking, who died on 14 March at the age of 76, was famously an atheist but his children Lucy, Robert and Tim have chosen the town’s university church, St Mary the Great, to say their farewell.

“Our father’s life and work meant many things to many people, both religious and non-religious. So, the service will be both inclusive and traditional, reflecting the breadth and diversity of his life,” they have said.

Tributes poured in from around the world upon Hawking’s death, from Queen Elizabeth II to NASA, reflecting his huge impact as a physicist and an inspiration, in his refusal to give up in the face of physical disability.

But the service at St Mary church — a short distance from Gonville and Caius College where Hawking worked for more than 50 years — will only be open to those who knew him, followed by a private reception at Trinity College.

A wider audience will attend a thanksgiving service at Westminster Abbey in London on 15 June, where Hawking’s remains will be buried near the grave of another legendary scientist, Isaac Newton.

New photographs revealed

Ahead of the funeral, Gonville and Caius College released new black and white photographs of Hawking taken in 1961 at a summer school for young astrophysicists at a castle in Sussex, southern England, when he was 19.

They showed him playing croquet and in a sailing dinghy, two years before he began experiencing the first symptoms of the motor neurone disease that would later leave him almost completely paralysed.

Fellow students contacted by the college recalled his left-wing views and his mischievous sense of humour, with one describing how he replaced the Royal Navy flag on the castle flagpole with the Communist hammer and sickle.

Hawking defied predictions that he would only live for a few years, although his rare condition — amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) — gradually robbed him of mobility.

He was confined to a wheelchair, almost completely paralysed and unable to speak except through his trademark voice synthesiser. But the illness did nothing to dull his mind, and Hawking became one of the world’s best-known and most inspiring scientists, known for his brilliance and his wit.

His work focused on bringing together relativity — the nature of space and time — and quantum theory — how the smallest particles behave — to explain the creation of the Universe and how it is governed.

But he was also a global star — his 1988 book “A Brief History of Time” was an unlikely worldwide bestseller, and he appeared as himself in TV shows from “The Simpsons” to “Star Trek: The Next Generation”.

Born on 8 January, 1942 — 300 years to the day after the death of the father of modern science, Galileo Galilei — Hawking died in his home in Cambridge on the 139th anniversary of the birth of Albert Einstein.

After taking his undergraduate degree at the University of Oxford, he moved to Cambridge for his doctorate and stayed there for the rest of his career.

Hawking’s family has asked six college porters, many of whom provided support for Hawking when he visited for dinners and other events, to carry his coffin.—AFP
Yangon stays atop by edging Myawady

Kyaw Zin Lin

Well-regarded Yangon United emerged with a narrow 1-0 win over Myawady FC, a team that languishes in the bottom of the league rankings but which played admirably at Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon yesterday in a week-9 match of the 2018 MPT Myanmar National League.

The win keeps Yangon at the top of the league standings. Yangon United lined up with goalkeeper Sann Sat Naing, defenders Zarni Htet, Thein Zaw, Pyae Phyo Zaw, Min Kyaw Khant, Midfielders Kyi Lin, Yan Aung Kyaw, Kosuke, Zon Moe Aung and strikers Emmanuel and Sylla.

Two Myanmar National football stars, keeper Kyaw Zin Htet and striker Aee Soe, stayed in the substitution list for Yangon.

Yangon put the pressure on Myawady from the kick-off, but there were no obvious chances for Yangon to score as Myawady was too tough in the first half.

The first half ended in a scoreless tie as Myawady withstood Yangon’s attacks with stable defensive and midfield play.

Myawady’s power play was significantly better in the second half.

Chances came for Myawady, but some weaknesses of their strikers were evident, and none of the scoring opportunities could be converted.

A single goal was earned by Yangon at the 76-minute mark with the header of Emmanuel over the corner kick support.

The header of Emmanuel was technically scored by Myawady, as the ball changed its direction into the net after hitting Aung Thu of Myawady.

The goal seemed to deflate the spirit of Myawady, who failed to create any further scoring opportunities.

Park, Lindberg surge into ANA Inspiration lead

RANCHO MIRAGE, CALIFORNIA—Park Sung-hyun fired an eight-under-par 64 to thrust herself into contention at the top of the leaderboard at the ANA Inspiration on Friday as she chases a second major after a dazzling rookie season.

The 24-year-old star from South Korea shrugged off an opening bogey to card seven birdies and an eagle on nine under.

Trailing by three States on nine under, Park, who has made a slow start to 2018, with three finishes outside the top 10 and a missed cut at the Kia Classic last weekend, said she had rediscovered the poise that helped her win her maiden major at the US Open last year.

“I was very focused at the US Open, and felt just as focused for today’s round,” she said. “It was a hummer to not make the cut last week and I felt pretty disappointed.

“But I feel like it was a really good comeback today.”

Park’s rise has been all the more remarkable for the fact that she remains one of the few players on tour who does not have a permanent coach.

“I really enjoy the time alone to practice alone,” Park said. “If it comes to the point where I need a coach, I will consider that. But right now, I just feel really good about my game.”

Lindberg meanwhile was happy to be sitting alongside Park after a flawless bogey-free round which saw five birdies.

The 31-year-old said she is thriving after reuniting with caddie Daniel Taylor, who is also her fiance. “He caddied for me for a good five, almost six years, and then we took a break only on the golf course last year when he caddied for a couple of other players,” Lindberg said.

“I felt like it was great for both of us, but I really missed him on the bag. There’s no-one that knows me, my game better than him. I just trust him so much. It was really me kind of begging him to come back on my bag this year.”

With Korda three back from the lead, a pack of four players — English duo Charley Hull and Jodi Ewart Shadoff, Japan’s Ayako Uehara and the USA’s Amy Olson — were tied for fourth place on seven under, five adrift of the lead.—AFP

Top teams step up to semi-finals of MFF Futsal tourney

Four teams - MIC, RDZ, Titans XII and VUC - made the semi-finals of the MFF Futsal Open Cup 2018 after the quarter-final stage matches were played at Thuwunna National Indoor Stadium in Yangon yesterday.

In yesterday’s quarterfinal matches, one of the most famous futsal teams, MIC, cut out GV Athletic by a score of 3-1, while RDZ notch a big win over Best Friends by a score of 7-2.

In other quarterfinal matches, Titans XII beat Shwe Myawaddy by a score of 8-3 while VUC trounced UM by a score of 6-0.

Officials also recognised the standout play of individual players from each game played.

Khin Zaw Lynn from MIC, Hla Myo Oo from RDZ, Htet Wai Nyein Chan from Titans XII and Nyein Min Soe from VUC were recognised as the best players of their respective matches.

The tourney’s semifinal matches will begin play at 12:30 pm on 2 April at Thuwunna National Indoor Stadium in Yangon.—Kyaw Zin Lin
We all know that life is short, but risky. Within this short period of life, we humans have to try and struggle to reach our highest potential and do our utmost as we all tend to possess a care free and perfect life. We all are trying to reach our goal through different methods, doing what we believe. On our way to success, we will have to face challenges, difficulties and problems. Again, we can also be threatened by hidden enemies of today drugs, games and so on. Whatever it is, what is important is that we should not let any condition ruin our life!

It is undeniable that there are so many barriers and obstacles on our way to success. And also, there are so many things that can ruin our belief and then stop us from doing what we believe. At first, we may have inconveniences, problems and challenges in doing what we believe. But we should not give up doing this. Failure is what we will have to encounter in our attempts. Everyone has a failure once in a life time. The difference is “big” or “small”. But, if we don’t let them ruin our belief, when we keep ourselves walking on, it is sure that success will come one day. Look back into history and we could see that there were so many great and glorious persons who shook the world. They walked on and did what they think is right, although they had no end of hindrances. The only answer is that they didn’t let any condition ruin their beliefs. Sometimes, some people will say that it is impossible for us. But we should not believe what they say, as they are only spectators and not “us”. We only can know ourselves, the abilities we have, the vision we hold and our perseverance. We should not drop our belief just because they say something is impossible for us. Also, we should not stop doing what we believe while others are blaming on us about a problem.

Because blaming and interference on a problem is never a good solution! It does not do any good to us and can even make our decision uncertain. If we can keep our head up plus our beliefs when others are blaming on us, then success is at hand. Those who want to stand in the Hall of Fame also need to bear against criticisms of people who are against us. Also, a big challenge which is difficult to overcome always ready to slow down our enthusiasm and speed to grip on success. But, we need to keep ourselves calm and try to continue our steps towards the end.

We must break the barriers that hold us back from achieving our goals. We must also eliminate limiting belief, negative thoughts, negative emotion and inner conflicts in order to reach our highest potential. This also helps our belief not to be ruined because these emotions are destructive enough to do so. As life is composed of both “Triumph” and “Disaster”, we need have a balanced mind which can accept the two conditions properly. All the things which we might have been destroyed within a pitch and toss, but we should not let our belief be ruined. We should try to give feedback, instead of feeling so depressed about this. This is not called “the end” and we have to start it over with perseverance, if necessary. There is a saying which goes, “Rome was not built in one day”, and so we need to be in patience. Also, we should not give up what we believe even if there is only 1% of possibility to success. We should not let any condition ruin our belief! Again, we also have to need to have self-control and self-discipline not to be influenced by bad habits. We must be aware of hidden enemies of today, especially drugs. They are also ready to ruin young and fresh dreams of youths. These drugs can damage a person both physically and mentally. They can cause serious health damage plus no end of problems. They can also influence our emotions as well as our mind set. As a result, our life, combined with strong belief, will be dragged down and ruined. Therefore, we people must have self control and self discipline as well to stand against those hidden enemies. Failure, barriers and obstacles are indeed the stepping stones if we could face them in composure. We must have tenacity, enthusiasm and innovative mind.

Learning from Watching Television

Learning can be received from everywhere and everytime. We can learn from books, from the speech of the grandparents, parents, teachers. We can also learn from the social media what is very popular these days. Among the social media, television is a thing what can give us a lot of knowledge and can entertain us. We can get a lot of precious things by watching television if we can use it in good ways. Some of the people like to watch TV series and movies. Some like to watch Music program and some like to watch traveling program. Some people like to watch cooking program and designing program and so on. There are many interesting programs broadcasting on television channels. People can know many subject matters by just sitting. We can know what is happening around the world by just pressing a key.

Most of the people love to watch television because watching television can entertain them. Most of the people think watching television can just entertain them, but actually, television can be called entertainment as it can give us a lot of knowledge by entertaining with many programs. We can know about places where we cannot reach easily. For example, the foreign countries. When we cannot get some places for our respective works, we can know that place from television. For example, people cannot give their time to observe about the MOGOK 800th anniversary by going there. They, however, can know about that by watching television. Likewise, people can explore their knowledge about underwater or about the planets.

People can also know how to cook by watching cooking programs. The cooks show the recipe of the meals and how to make the meals delicious by showing examples. Therefore, people who are interested in cooking can cook easily by watching television. Moreover, people who are interested in eating can know about the good restaurants and how to get there. They can get these information by watching television.

Moreover, people who want to know what is happening around the world, can fulfill their wish by watching television. If they want to know the local news or international news, they can know about them by just sitting somewhere and watching television. People can also know about the weather forecast or how to prevent the natural disaster before we confront it, by watching television. Or, if people would like to know about the celebrities around the world, they can know by watching television. By these means, television can give us pro.

Besides, people can learn foreign languages what they are interested in, by watching television. The teachers of English language, Japanese, Chinese or Korean etc. are teaching these languages on television. Therefore, people who cannot afford to attend the language proficiency classes, can learn languages by watching television.

In many efficient ways, television is providing advantages to people. On the other hand, people can also rely on the television by using it in good ways. Therefore, what I would like to convey is that we can learn many precious things by watching television.

Not letting any condition ruin our belief

See As we all know that life is not a bed of roses, we must prepare to counter back upcoming problems and challenges. Success seldom comes at once and it comes to us as a result of trial and error. They come straight towards those who have industrious enthusiasm, perseverance plus mental strength. So, it is essential to us not to let any condition ruin our belief.

To sum up, it is accepted that success and perfect life are what we all tend to have. The reason why we people are striving is nothing but because of our hopes and belief. We should not let them to be ruined; as our belief is just like ‘a lantern’ for our life. We can walk on with our belief, yet we have got nothing and no one by our side. But, we cannot continue our journey yet we still have ‘all’ but not ‘belief’. On our way to success, we will have to experience new challenges and problems which are difficult to solve. We need to give feedback to them and should not let any condition ruin our belief. Only then, will we be able to conquer the more seasons to come and ourselves!
Last week, we have discussed about the different “Pillars of Learning” which are appearing according to the time and needs of the conditions. And we have read about the poem “Thu – Si – Pu – Bar – Wi – Li – Thi – Da” by the famous monk-poet his Venerable Ahin Mahar Rahtasara. (Here the author wants to make one correction in the last week writings, that the correct name of the poet is “Ashin Mahar Rahtasara” (not Ashin Mahar Silavamsa))

It shows that the above meaning shows what a learner should do to have effective learning. There are altogether eight steps to do.

A learner should listen to others’ (teachers’) teaching and his speech.
A learner should think by himself.
A learner should ask questions or inquire (if he is not sure or wants to know more).
A learner should discuss or talk about what he has learnt. (so that he can get more from others’ discussions and others’ points of view)
A learner should inquire and think analytically. (Analysis)
A learner should write down what he has learnt or write on his own ideas about what he has learnt. (It is something like “interpretations” too.)
A learner should discuss about or talk about what he has learnt. (so that he can get more from others’ discussions and others’ points of view)
A learner should inquire and think analytically. (Analysis)
A learner should write down what he has learnt or write on his own ideas about what he has learnt. (It is something like “interpretations” too.)
A learner should practice. (Practice maketh a full man.)
A learner should memorize what he has learnt. (Learning by heart)

And more, we have different stages in Learning, higher and higher one after another such as: Knowledge, Comprehension, Application, Analysis, Synthesis and Assessment. For these Learning Stages, we have not “Application, Synthesis and Assessment” steps openly. But, as for a wise man (not only educated but wise), we have already thought of wisdom up to these stages. For the last stage “Assessment” meant not only assess anything or any information as it is, but it means we should differentiate and decide well between what is right and what is wrong, what is true and what is false, what is valuable and what is valueless etc.

Among the Pillars of Education we Myanmar do not openly say about “to Learn to Learn” and “to Learn to Live together peacefully”, just because we Myanmar people loves “Learning” and have the will for our children to continue learning or to go on learning and studying as much as they can. We can see it daringly in our “Five Duties of Parents”, as the very first Duty of parents is “to educate their children”.

And for the Pillar, “to Learn to live peacefully together”, we Myanmar people (here the author means all our nation, all national races) practically do not discriminate among ourselves through all our long historical days. That is why we do not need to pronounce it glaringly about that pillar. As to love peace, and to live in peacefully and friendly and unitedly among all of us is our nature from the depth of our hearts, it is natural for all of us to live together peacefully.

That is why we need not to mention about that Pillar specifically through our days in history.

And our religions (may be Buddhism or others) usually emphasize on “Loving Kindness”. So it is so natural to all of us “to live together peacefully” by nature.

But, as there are changes according to time, development and so on, we have newer and newer Pillars of Education, so we all human beings have “to learn to live” and “to live to learn” these days. (TO BE CONTINUED NEXT WEEK)
The Kadu people, who belong to the Barmar ethnic group, held their cultural festival on a grand scale in Inpin Village, Nant Thar Village-tract, Inndaw Township in Sagaing Region.

At the opening ceremony, the signboard marking of the traditional festival was opened by the Deputy Speaker of Sagaing Regional Hluttaw U Boe Than Nyunt, Regional Minister for Chin Ethnic Affairs U La Bhun Hlaing, Chairman of Katha District Management Committee U Thein Win, Regional Hluttaw Representative U Tha Win and Patron of Kadu National Organization U Pyae Thein.

Afterwards, Speaker of Sagaing Regional Hluttaw U Than pressed the button to open the signboard marking the traditional festival. The regional Hluttaw speaker delivered an address before the regional minister made a speech on behalf of the chief minister.

The Kadu community leaders U Chin Aung from Pinlebu Township, U Win Shwe from Bamauk Township and U Kan Aung from Inndaw Township also spoke words of thanks and presented gifts to the local authorities. Afterwards, the guests were entertained with dance and song by traditional cultural troupes.

The three-day festival was celebrated from March 25-27 and local ethnic communities such as Kanan, Red Shan, Kachin and Kadu participated in the event.

Mr. Three San said, “We want to appoint a minister for our ethnic affairs because we are duty bound to safeguard our race which can be united through thick and thin. For the time being we are in desperate need of unity which can bring success for our race and regional development. That’s why we want to raise awareness of our fellow people that our Kadu race belongs to 135 ethnic races in the country.”

Ko Min Thone, a Kadu ethnic race said, “As far as I know that we Kadu ethnic people are striving to hold National Identity Card. Also the process of taking census is being made to collect data and information for them. According to the census, it was learnt that the total population of Kadu ethnic race is 42791 people including some 731 people from five Kadu villages of Katha Township, some 274 people from 12 Kadu villages of Pinlebu Township, some 15235 people from 31 villages of Bamauk Township; some 25087 people from 35 villages of Inndaw Township respectively. There may remain some Kadu people who do not include in the census taking process.”

A Kadu ethnic lady Daw Cho Hla said, “We want to appoint a minister for our ethnic affairs because we are duty bound to safeguard our race which can be united through thick and thin. We want him to promote socio-economic situation of the region and regional development as well. Moreover we want to teach Kadu language in schools so that we can keep our own language and customs.”

“We also have a committee which can enhance our language and traditions. There are many places where Kadu people are still residing, especially in Pinlebu Township, Bamauk Township and Inndaw Township. Among them, Inndaw Township is known as the place where only a few people can speak Kadu spoken language compared to the rest townships. That’s why we are trying to promote our language and traditions as much as we can”, said U Zaw Myo Tun, one of the committee members of the festival.

Finding of gold accessories in Pyu era shows the high skills and the standards of Pyu people in goldsmith. People in that time were already wearing several types of accessories in gold such as beads, hairpin, rings, earplugs and the bracelets were made in high quality designs.

Among them all, people wore the Makan bracelets in big skill and made them using loads of gold.

The accessories designed and decorated with the shape of Makan creature were rarely found in Pyu era.

Makan head shaped embosses have been found along with the four Buddha statues on the silver hollow tube and on the left and right shoulder edges of the silver Buddha statue along with the throne pillar found at Khin Ba mound in Hmaw Zar village in 1972.

On each side of the bronze pillar in Pyu era found by the cowboys in Kan Oo Village in Pyinma-nar in 2012, was decorated in the shapes of a Galone (Garuda in Thai – the mythical bird officially adopted as the national emblem of Thai) riding on the head of Makan and the other was a posture of nat (a guardian angel) came out from the mouth of Makan.

Apart from that, the other stuffs in Pyu era are rarely found in Makan shapes and were mostly on the bracelets.

Some consider Makan bracelets are made as the arms – ware as they are bigger to be fixed on wrists as the bracelet, so they call it the ‘Bangle’.

There are some skeletons from the findings of the skeletons in Pyu graveyards found wearing the king size stone and bronze bracelets obviously on their wrist.

Gold Makan bracelets in Pyu era are big in size but not that in width. So for me, I consider them as the bracelets as they cannot be fixed on arm but only on the wrist in above reason.

Gold bracelets in Rome and Greece in Europe are found in the similar shapes of Makan bracelets in Pyu era. But they were in the head shapes of lion, ibexes and cheetah facing on the gold bracelets.

Pyu Makan bracelets are more romantic/surrealist in the oriental styles decorated with the fangs, sprouts, wings, flowers and the flower runners. Very first Makan bracelet has found in U Hnaung Gone Village in Myinn Mu Township in 1972 and that was also the completed and finest one.

The head sprouts are decorated in very details with spiral shape. The tail part was curved in lotus and lotus leaf shapes and decorated with the detailed curves and the spiral shapes.

The other one was found in the excavation of cooperative fish pond nearby Ku Me, Myitthar Township in 1980. That one was only head with the body. And that head was the biggest in the findings and elegant with the very detailed decorations.

In 2012, a 16 Kyat Tha (256 g) (*1 kyat tha = 16 g) completed Makan bracelet was found in Lat Khoke Pin Village, Min Buu Township form the excavation of petroleum pipeline.

Those all Makan bracelets are collected and showed at the National Museum and the Zay Gabar Museum got collected a 20 kyat tha (320 g) completed Makan bracelet in 2016.

All those excavations of Pyu Makan bracelets were from the areas in Minn Bu and Myitthar in Mandalay Region, but not from the famous areas of Pyu ancient cities such as Pyi, Hmaw Zar, Taung Twin Gyi, Beikthano and Han Lin Gyi.

Especially, the villages in the Min Buu Township are the areas to find most Makan bracelets in Myanmar and about 7 bracelets have been found from those areas.
