Coastal areas need balance between development and conservation

Vice President U Myint Swe has called for negotiation and cooperation between development and conservation groups when infrastructure is built in coastal areas and in other parts of the country.

He made the remark in his address at the fourth meeting of the national level Central Committee for the Administration and Management of Natural Resources in coastal areas held at the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

“When we build infrastructures for sustainable development in coastal areas, we should go through ‘negotiation’”, said Vice President U Myint Swe.

He also called for carrying out Environmental Impact Assessments on the country’s coastal areas, which stretch up to 2,832 kilometers, abounding with important natural ecosystems in the environs of the Indian Ocean, and to draw up plans based on the findings of the assessment.

The development work being carried out in coastal areas should be in conformity with the rules drawn for conservation of the coastal areas, he added.

CONFISCATED LAND WAS relinquished and returned to its original owners at a ceremony yesterday in Kanbalu Sagaing Region, the third such event in recent weeks. A total of 4,932 acres of confiscated land was returned to 528 farmers, marking the third-highest return of confiscated land among all states and regions, said Vice President U Henry Van Thio, the Chairman of the Central Committee for Reviewing Confiscated Farmlands and Other Lands. The Vice President made these remarks in his opening speech at a ceremony in Kanbalu in Sagaing Region yesterday for returning land to its original owners.

The Vice President said departments, companies, and private businesses are allotted property and easement for their projects that involve building roads, infrastructure, and plantations, but the military for various reasons confiscated farmland, resulting in losses for the people. He said relevant organizations have been setting policies, conducting reviews, and returning the confiscated lands to their original owners. The Vice President said Deputy Ministers from the union level have formed four teams to scrutinize confiscated land and are conducting field reviews on the state and regional levels. He said the Union Government was working to establish contract farming for farmers to grow, package and trade their produce.

Pyithu Hluttaw MPs to debate Mobile Payment System

By Aye Aye Thant

THE second Pyithu Hluttaw's eighth regular session held its third-day meeting at the Pyithu Hluttaw meeting hall yesterday, where U Sai Oo Kham of Hsenwi constituency tabled a motion urging the Union Government to use the mobile payment system for the ministerial departments, the public, business enterprises and other relevant sectors.

Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker U T Khun Myat announced the Hluttaw’s decision to discuss the motion.

U Sai Oo Kham mentioned that using technology was an effective tool to enhance the country’s social, education, healthcare and business sectors, besides improving its productivity sectors. “We can overcome difficulties rapidly, if we can apply the mobile payment system and e-Government using ICT (information and communication technology), and can speed up the mechanism of the government and public services at the same time. In this regard, technology plays a vital role to enhance clean government and good governance, and ensure transparency and mastery of the respective fields. Mobile payments can reduce costs; gain the public’s trust; provide better services; reduce malpractices; eliminate bribery and corruption; reduce the troubles in keeping personal files, data and documents; increase transparency, openness and accountability; create social, education, healthcare and employment opportunities; and accelerate the state mechanism.

The use of the mobile payment system has many benefits and advantages such as creating job prospects and economic opportunities, promoting the economic development of the state, facilitating the socio-economic status of the people, and helping with poverty alleviation for people across the country. A Hluttaw representative supported the motion and Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker U T Khun Myat announced that the motion had been accepted for discussion. The fourth-day meeting of the second Pyithu Hluttaw’s eighth regular session will be continued on 17 May.

Amyotha Hluttaw discusses aquatic exports and use of alluvial land

U AUNG KYI NYUNT of Magway Constituency (4) raised a question asking about the Union Government’s plan to remedy the trade sanction imposed on the country which greatly affects the export of aquatic products to Saudi Arabia, the US and the EU.

Deputy Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation U Hla Kyaw replied that the Ministry of Environment, Water and Agriculture in Saudi Arabia is temporarily halting imports of aquatic products from Myanmar, Viet Nam, Bangladesh and India starting from 1 April. The reason for this is due to an announcement from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in Saudi Arabia on 30 January claiming that aquatic imports from Southeast Asian countries carry two strains of diseases, one of them being the white tail disease. Saudi Arabia has referred to the quarterly aquatic animal disease report and has submitted a report to the OIE (World Organization for Animal Health).

The Deputy Minister also said they have contacted the Saudi Arabian Embassy to notify them that, according to the OIE report, the white tail disease only affects freshwater prawns and not any species of fish. They have requested the Embassy to review the sanctions to resume trade of aquatic products. He said they are preparing to invite representatives from the Saudi Arabian FDA to come and inspect the prawn farms and factories in Myanmar.

The Deputy Minister said the US had permitted the Generalized Scheme of Preferences (GSP) to Myanmar on 13 November 2016, but Myanmar has been exporting aquatic products to the US even before the GSP permit. The National Marine Fisheries Services (NMFS) halted imports of aquatic products due to the accidental killing or injuring of marine mammals, which violates the US Marine Mammal Protection Act (MMPA). The Deputy Minister said they have sent an email to the NMFS which explains Myanmar’s protections in place for marine mammals and conservation efforts for aquatic resources.

Deputy Minister U Hla Kyaw replied that they have petitioned to the state government to include the re-fortification of the embankment wall that eroded in 2017. He said the estimated cost is Ks15 million, and approval for the re-fortification will depend on whether funds will be allotted.

U Win Maung of Magway Constituency (6) raised a question asking whether the land boundaries will be redrawn for alluvial land in accordance with either the India ground survey or military maps.

The Deputy Minister replied that agricultural land administration departments have been conducting ground surveys since 2012 in accordance with the Farmland Bylaw Article 108 and Article 109. He also said that dividing up alluvial land does not concern land boundaries and therefore a specific survey does not need to be carried out.

Afterwards, Amyotha Hluttaw Bill Committee member Daw Nwe Nwe Aung read the committee’s report on the Forestry Bill sent with amendment from the Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker Mahn Win Khaing Than then asked MPs wishing to discuss the bill to register their name.— Aung Ye Thwin

Myanmar has been implementing the National Residue Monitoring Plan (NRMP) since 2014 to export aquatic products to the EU. He said they are upgrading technology to produce high-quality finished products for exporting and also working for aquatic resource conservation, food safety, and development of the fishing industry.

U Maung Maung Latt of Sagaing Constituency (9) raised a question asking whether construction of an embankment wall along the canal of Tawetchaung weir in Temu Township in Sagaing Region is approved.

Our country is still in poverty with necessities in every sector; which is why we need to carry on our struggle and work hard in all sectors. In the international arena, we are facing pressure, criticisms and misunderstandings. The challenges and difficulties our country and our people are facing today are many. Although every issue cannot be solved easily, we will have to make utmost efforts to solve these issues according to each priority sector.

More than 4,900 acres returned to farmers in Sagaing Region

By doing so, farmers will not need to sell their land for money, but can maintain their fields for generations to come he added.

The Vice President said that Myanmar used to be the top exporter of rice, but gradually became one of the lesser exporters. But in fiscal year 2017-2018, rice exports reached a record high of 3.58 million metric tons, the highest in 73 years. Fiscal year 2017-2018 saw exports from agricultural products reaching US$3.08 billion, of which 37 per cent was from rice exports generating US$1.14 billion.

The Vice President urged local residents to register their vacant and virgin land at their respective state or regional Vacant, Fallow and Virgin Lands Management Committee. He said that if their lands were registered, when agricultural production becomes stable, their lands could be converted into farmland, according to Farmland Law.

The Vice President requested all officials involved in reviewing and scrutinizing confiscated land to have patience as resolving these issues could be complicated and take long periods of time. He then expressed his gratitude to the Ministry of Defence, Sagaing Region Government and regional ministries, on behalf of the Central Committee for Reviewing Confiscated Farmlands and Other Lands and urged the farmers to use the lands returned to them for their personal benefit, their region's benefit, and the nation's benefit.

Afterwards, Chairman of Sagaing Committee for Reviewing Confiscated Farmlands and Other Lands Sagaing Chief Minister Dr. Myint Naing explained how they handled the process for returning the relinquished confiscated lands.

Next, the Chief Minister, Regional Hluttaw Speaker, and Regional Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation U Kan Zar Mone conferred the temporary farmland license to the local residents of Kanbalu District, Dabayin Township, Katha Township, and Daze Township.

Next, Deputy Ministers Rear-Admiral Myint Nwe, Maj-Gen Than Htut, and U Soe Aung and Permanent Secretary U Tin Myint of the Ministry of Home Affairs transferred 347.11 acres of Kanbalu District farmlands, 1,186.13 acres of Monywa District farmlands, 1,692.44 acres of Katha District farmlands, and 1,935.04 acres of Shwebo District farmlands to their respective District Administrators.

Present at the ceremony were Sagaing Region Chief Minister Dr. Myint Naing, Regional Hluttaw Speaker U Than, Deputy Minister for Defence Rear-Admiral Myint Nwe, Deputy Minister for Border Affairs Maj-Gen Than Htut, Deputy Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement U Soe Aung, regional ministers, Permanent Secretaries, MPs, authorities from states, regions, districts, townships, ward, and village administrations, and the local residents.

The Ministry of Defence has planned to return about 5,160 acres in total including more than 340 acres in Kanbalu District, more than 1,180 acres in Monywa District, nearly 1,700 acres in Katha District and more than 1,900 acres in Shwebo District to the State.— Myanmar News Agency

An explosion occurred between the Mayan and Namti railway stations in Mogauung Township, Kachin State at 11:25 pm on 15 May, damaging the track and the Advanced Passenger Train (APT) running between Myitkyina and Hopin.

The No. 247 northbound train was forced to reduce its speed as it was crossing Bridge 662 between Htopu and Mogauung stations at 11:50 pm as the train operator discovered the damage on the railroad and the bridge.

The No. 247 train arrived at Mogauung Station at 12:15 am on 16 May and informed the situation to an officer of the Mogauung Station.

Following the report, officials inspected the damages. Similarly, the No. 55 northbound train became stranded at Moehnyin Station en route from Mandalay to Myitkyina due to explosions that damaged the railroad tracks between Mayan and Htopu villages.

Local authorities transported more than 118 passengers by car to their destinations starting at 12 am. Similarly, the No. 37 northbound train to Mandalay and the No. 57 northbound Myit-sone-Mandalay train were also forced to stop at Hopin Station short of finishing their routes due to explosions on the tracks of the Myitkyina-Mandalay Railway.

The explosions were intentionally set, officials said. Stranded passengers from both trains were transported by car to Myitkyina.—Myanmar News Agency

Flower growers face losses due to unstable market

LOCAL flower growers from Pyin Oo Lwin Township, Mandalay Region, are facing losses because of the unstable flower market, according to a report in the Myawady Daily yesterday.

“The cultivation cost of flowers is Ks27,000 per frame. Flowers are produced on a 3x30 feet area. The planted area can cultivate 270 flowers and produce 30 bouquets. One bouquet is sold for Ks1,000. One planted area of flowers brings in Ks5,000 as profit. Some 2,400 planted areas can be cultivated on one acre and can earn a profit of Ks1,2 million. However, when we subtract the labour wages, there is no profit in hand,” said a local flower grower from Pyin Oo Lwin Township.

Local farmers are still growing flowers because it is their family business. They also grow vegetables together with flowers, he added.

Since 2014, flowers from other countries have been entering the local market. Some 10,000 tonnes of flowers are entering the market from foreign countries without paying any tax. To stabilise the flower market, the local flower cultivators formed a Flower Producer and Exporter Association. The association has invited experts from the Netherlands and Norway to provide knowledge about cultivation methods to local growers. The association will buy flowers after fixing a price depending on their quality.—GNLM

Stock trading value on YSX increases 37.6 per cent

STOCK trading on the Yangon Stock Exchange (YSX) is up 37.6 per cent after the matching times were increased to four from two per day, said U Min Thu, senior manager of YSX, at a press conference on 15 May.

However, its monthly trading is still on the decline compared to last year. Earlier, shares valued at Ks39 million were traded per day.

After increasing the matching times to four per day, Ks57 million worth of shares were traded. The situation is far from satisfactory, U Min Thu said.

Shares of five listed companies — First Myanmar Investment (FMI), Myanmar Thilawa SEZ Holdings (MTSH), Myanmar Citizens Bank (MCB), First Private Bank (FPB) and TMH Telecom Public Co. Ltd (TMH) — are being traded on the YSX.

Last month’s stock trading volume of the five listed companies on the YSX was some 153,166 shares, valued at Ks875 million, which showed a slight decline compared to the same period last year, according to the historical data of YSX online.

The YSX’s stock trading was valued at Ks70.7 billion in 2016, whereas the value in 2017 dropped more than three times to Ks22.1 billion.

The stock trading is still lacklustre in 2018. The trading by the listed companies in February 2018 registered an all-time record low of Ks746 million, according to official figures.

Poor economic climate, low income and the lack of awareness about the stock market contributed to the steep drop in stock trading, said an official from YSX.

Officials from the YSX, under the guidance of the planning and finance ministry, are conducting awareness campaigns about the stock market in Yangon and other towns, in cooperation with securities companies to draw public interest. They are reportedly preparing for a Listing Promotion seminar next month.

Online stock trading gradually improved, following awareness campaigns by the securities companies. The Securities Exchange Commission of Myanmar granted approvals for online trading to the following securities companies — Myanmar Securities Exchange Centre Co., Ltd. (MSEC), KBZ Stirling Coleman Securities Co., Ltd. (KBZSC), CB Securities Ltd. (CBS) and AYA Trust Securities Co., Ltd. (AYA Trust).

Investors, who are interested in trading online, need to sign up with the securities companies, in accordance with the trading rules.

They can then start online trading using the applications of the related securities companies.—Htet Myat

MR to offer Yangon Central Railway Comprehensive Development project in 2 MYANMA Railways will offer the contract to upgrade the Yangon Central Railway Comprehensive Development project to the tender winners within two months, according to a report in the Myawady Daily yesterday.

The estimated cost of the project is $2.5 billion. This was MR’s second attempt at calling for tenders, after an initial attempt in 2014 had to be cancelled due to the lack of suitable applications.

MR made the second call for tenders in mid-2015. It received some 18 applicants from 14 countries. Among these, MR shortlisted 15 potential developers.

Amyotha Hluttaw deputy speaker receives officials from NDI

Ms Sandra Ratzow, bureau chief of South East Asia, Australia and New Zealand regions of ARD German Radio & TV, interviewed Deputy Minister of Information U Aung Hla Tun at his office in Nay Pyi Taw at 10 a.m. yesterday.

She asked the progress of the repatriation process of those who had fled to Bangladesh and matters concerning the recent trip of the UN Security Council delegation to Myanmar.

In answering the questions, the Deputy Minister said that those who had fled had not been able to return as Bangladesh had not sent them back although Myanmar has done all it can to make the repatriation process ready. Nobody should take any political advantage for their own interest out of this issue, he said.

He requested Bangladesh, the international community and the international media to cooperate with Myanmar in order to make the repatriation process succeed as soon as possible since Monsoon was just around the corner.

He also stressed the importance of the cooperation by the international community and media for Myanmar’s smooth and successful transition to democracy.

He said some international media were very biased in reporting about Myanmar. They often oversensationalize in reporting sensitive issues and try to set agendas.

Myanmar has been seriously affected by the unethical reports of some international media since the international community tends to rely on the reports by the international media in adopting important policies on a country, he added.

He then explained the media trips to Maungdaw region to help journalists witness the real situation on the ground.

Coastal areas need balance between development and conservation

Local authorities and local people in the coastal areas are urged to cooperate with each other in carrying out environmental conservation to prevent damage to the ecosystems, which include mangrove forests, coral reefs and marine grasses.

The central committee was formed on 30 November 2016, with 19 members.

It made 23 resolutions related with conservation of coastal areas in its previous three meetings. Out of the 23 resolutions, eight have been implemented.

The country’s mangrove resources are declining because of the proliferation of fish farms and because the mangrove trees are being used as firewood, according to environmentalists.

There are over 500,000 hectares of mangroves along the coast of Myanmar.

According to the 2014 census, half of the population of Myanmar are living in coastal areas and depend on the coastal ecosystems which serve them in many ways through marine products and environmental services, said the Vice President.

“The lack of systematic management of coastal ecosystems can lead to deterioration of the ecosystem due to extra extraction of the natural resources and it would result in decreasing marine products and environmental services,” said U Myint Swe.

The meeting was also attended by Union Ministers U Ohn Win, U Aung Thu, Joint Secretary-2 of the committee Director-General of the Fisheries Department U Khin Maung Maw, chief ministers of regions and states connected with coastal areas and other officials.

UN chief throws weight behind EU to salvage Iran nuclear deal

BRUSSELS — The United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres on Wednesday threw his weight behind the European Union (EU) in salvaging the landmark Iran nuclear deal.

“We fully support the efforts the European Union is making in order to rescue the JCPOA,” said Guterres at a joint press conference with European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker in Brussels.

The visiting UN chief made the remarks following separate meetings with Juncker and the college of the European Commission.

Noting “for the first time in many decades the non-proliferation regimes...are put into question,” Guterres lamented that “we have the cold war back”.

To make matters worse, “there are not today the mechanisms that existed in the past cold war of dialogue, of contact, of control, to make sure that things would not spiral out of control by any kind of incident,” Guterres said.

“It is absolutely essential to preserve two things: multilateral governance institutions and the rule of law in international relations,” he proclaimed.

Guterres lavished praise on the EU for its role in upholding multilateral regime, vowing that the UN would lend support to the EU to create conditions for a world “in which peace, security, sustainable development and climate action are in the front line of its activities and our common cooperation.”

Juncker, for his part, reiterated the EU’s resolve to keep the Iran deal alive “because of primary importance for maintaining peace in the region, and also for peace in the whole world.”

US President Donald Trump declared on 8 May in a televised speech that the United States would withdraw from the deal, a landmark agreement signed in July 2015 by Iran and the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council — Britain, China, France, Russia and the United States — plus the European Union (EU) and Germany.

Trump claimed that the deal, formally known as the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), had failed to prevent Iran from developing nuclear weapons or supporting terrorism in the region. Under the deal, Iran agreed to freeze its nuclear programs in return for the lifting of most international sanctions.

According to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) in Vienna, Iran has so far complied with all of the conditions established under the deal.

Merkel defends German military spending goals

BERLIN — German Chancellor Angela Merkel defended plans by her federal government to increase defense spending in Germany on Wednesday.

Speaking during ongoing budgetary consultations in the federal parliament (Bundestag), Merkel hit back at opposition criticism of a scheduled rise in military funding from 38.5 billion euros (45.5 billion US dollars) in 2018 to 41.5 billion euros in 2019.

“This is not a matter of participating in an arms race, but simply ensuring the availability of adequate equipment,” the chancellor said, referring to long-standing complaints by the government’s official armed forces commissioner.

Following widespread reports of the poor state of the German armed forces, Berlin has a responsibility to provide soldiers with a “much broader range of material and equipment” to ensure they can fulfill their international missions.

Defense spending is currently the second largest item on the German government’s 2018 budget, but trails far behind planned labor market and social expenditure (139 billion euros). The appropriate level of military funds has become the subject of heated discussion in the governing grand coalition, with defense minister Ursula von der Leyen demanding a further increase to at least 1.5 per cent of annual gross domestic product (GDP) or around 60 billion euros.

Finance minister Olaf Scholz has so far rebuffed such calls by his cabinet colleague, arguing that higher spending does not automatically translate to a better defense strategy.

Even though Germany is set to continue to fall significantly short of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) defense spending target of 2.0 per cent of GDP, Merkel emphasized on Wednesday that Germany’s commitment to responsibilities it shoulders as part of the military alliance remained a priority for Berlin.

“One country alone cannot guarantee security,” Merkel told delegates in the federal parliament.

While reiterating earlier criticism of US President Donald Trump’s decision to withdraw from the Iran nuclear accord, Merkel however argued that close transatlantic relations in this context retained value regardless of recent disagreements between the European Union (EU) and the Trump administration.

Japan enacts law to promote women’s participation in politics

TOKYO — Japan’s Diet enacted a law Wednesday to promote women’s participation in politics amid efforts by the government of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe to address the low political representation of women in Japan.

But it is unclear whether the legislation will immediately boost the number of female politicians and narrow the disparity between men and women, as it is non-binding legislation and does not penalize its violators.

The new law urges political parties engaging in national and local elections to “make efforts” to set numeral targets for women candidates among other steps.

According to the Inter-Parliamentary Union, a Geneva-based organization of national parliaments, women accounted for only 10.1 per cent of lawmakers in the House of Representatives, ranking Japan at 158th among countries.

While the government has been aiming to raise the proportion of women candidates in national elections to 30 per cent by 2020, the figure stood at 17.7 per cent in the lower house election last October.

Among the 19 ministers of the current Cabinet, there are only two women — internal affairs minister Seiko Noda and Justice Minister Yoko Kamikawa.

Women’s representation is equally low in Japan’s local assemblies.

Protests over sexual harassment have been held in Japan following the resignation of Junichi Fukuda as vice finance minister for allegedly making sexually suggestive comments to a TV reporter.

Finance Minister Taro Aso also drew criticism for saying the former top ministry official may have been entrapped.

Plastic waste is becoming one of the biggest concerns in the world today. Every year, millions of tons of plastic waste end up in oceans, rivers, and landfills. This not only affects marine life and ecosystems but also poses a threat to human health. Plastic waste can contaminate water sources, harm wildlife, and even end up in the food chain.

The issue of plastic pollution is not new. In fact, it has been a growing concern for several decades. However, with the increase in global plastic production and consumption, the problem has worsened significantly. The Plastic Waste Agreement, signed in 2018, aims to address this crisis by committing to reducing plastic waste and promoting its recycling.

In many countries, people are starting to take action. Governments are introducing laws to restrict single-use plastics, and individuals are taking steps to reduce their plastic footprint. For example, in the United States, there is a growing trend towards bringing your own reusable bags, water bottles, and coffee cups. These small actions add up and can make a significant impact.

However, there is still much work to be done. We need to raise awareness about the harmful effects of plastic waste and encourage people to make sustainable choices. Governments and businesses must also take responsibility by implementing effective waste management systems and reducing their plastic use.

Plastic waste is not the only problem we face. We also have to deal with other types of pollution, such as air pollution, water pollution, and noise pollution. These issues are interconnected, and addressing one will help us tackle the others.

In conclusion, the fight against pollution is a long-term battle. It requires the collective effort of individuals, governments, and businesses. Let’s work together to create a cleaner and healthier planet for future generations.

Hostile attitude towards Myanmar will not contribute to peace and harmony

The international community, including the United Nations, should work together to create an environment conducive to restorative peace, harmony and development for all people in Rakhine State. Hate narratives that promote deep-rooted mistrust should and must stop.

Plastic waste is becoming one of the biggest concerns in the world today. Every year, millions of tons of plastic waste end up in oceans, rivers, and landfills. This not only affects marine life and ecosystems but also poses a threat to human health. Plastic waste can contaminate water sources, harm wildlife, and even end up in the food chain.

The issue of plastic pollution is not new. In fact, it has been a growing concern for several decades. However, with the increase in global plastic production and consumption, the problem has worsened significantly. The Plastic Waste Agreement, signed in 2018, aims to address this crisis by committing to reducing plastic waste and promoting its recycling.

In many countries, people are starting to take action. Governments are introducing laws to restrict single-use plastics, and individuals are taking steps to reduce their plastic footprint. For example, in the United States, there is a growing trend towards bringing your own reusable bags, water bottles, and coffee cups. These small actions add up and can make a significant impact.

However, there is still much work to be done. We need to raise awareness about the harmful effects of plastic waste and encourage people to make sustainable choices. Governments and businesses must also take responsibility by implementing effective waste management systems and reducing their plastic use.

Plastic waste is not the only problem we face. We also have to deal with other types of pollution, such as air pollution, water pollution, and noise pollution. These issues are interconnected, and addressing one will help us tackle the others.

In conclusion, the fight against pollution is a long-term battle. It requires the collective effort of individuals, governments, and businesses. Let’s work together to create a cleaner and healthier planet for future generations.

Putin calls to prepare S-500 missile system for mass production

SOCHI — Russian President Vladimir Putin said on Tuesday further efforts are needed to improve anti-precision warfare tools and called to prepare S-500 missile systems for mass production.

“One of the key tasks is to improve anti-precision warfare means. It is necessary to develop and build up technological groundwork in the area of air defense, to continue modernization of Pantsir systems, to finish the development and preparations for mass production of the S-500 newest systems capable of hitting targets at super-high altitudes, including near-the-earth space,” he said at a meeting with Russia’s top brass and executives of defence-sector enterprises.

The meeting with Armed Forces commanders and defence industry executives was attended by acting Defence Minister Sergei Shoigu, Chief of General Staff Valery Gerasimov, Deputy Defence Minister Yuri Borisov and other officials.

Putin also called for continuing modernization of the strategic nuclear forces and rearming 14 regiments with Vars intercontinental ballistic missile systems before the end of December.

Strategic nuclear forces have key significance for defense and security,” he said. “Pursuant to provisions of the state program for armaments, we’ll continue replacement of the outdated Topol missile complexes with the newest Vars systems and will put them on the tables of equipment at fourteen missile regiments.”

The Russian president also said that Russia’s nuclear triad will be boosted with modernized Tu-95MS and Tu-160 strategic bombers, carrying advanced X-101 and X-102 strategic cruise missiles. He added that the construction of five Borey-class strategic nuclear submarines must continue on schedule.

“In recent years, we have been doing a lot to boost the armed forces,” Putin said. “Their structure and numbers have been optimized, snap checks are being carried out regularly in all military branches, military units receive new weapons and equipment on a regular basis.”

The Russian leader added that this year Russia rolled out advanced weapons systems, unmatched by foreign rivals.

“We know that they are at various degrees of completion. We will keep an eye on those issues,” Putin said.

While delivering his State of the Nation Address to the Federal Assembly, Putin announced the development and tests of new strategic weapons, including the Sarmat intercontinental ballistic missile, the Kinzhal hypersonic complex, a nuclear cruise missile, as well as an underwater drone capable of carrying both conventional and nuclear weapons.—Tass

Ecuador spied on Assange at London embassy

LONDON — Ecuadorian President Rafael Correa, the paper reported, added that it has since been wound down under the country’s new leader Lenin Moreno who took power last year. The security team recorded Assange’s daily activities and his interactions with embassy staff and visitors, including fellow hackers, activists and lawyers. They stayed in a rented flat near the embassy at a cost of £2,800 (US$3,772) a month, the paper said.—AFP

Tick tock: Study links body clock to mood disorders

LONDON — Messing with the natural rhythm of one’s internal clock may boost the risk of developing mood problems ranging from garden-variety loneliness to severe depression and bipolar disorder, researchers said on Wednesday.

The study cannot say conclusively that body clock disturbances are what caused the mental risk, instead of the other way round.

The leads held true even when the potential impact of factors such as old age, unhealthy lifestyle, obesity, and childhood trauma were taken into account, they reported in The Lancet Psychiatry, a medical journal.

Early research had suggested that disrupting these rhythms can adversely affect mental health, but was inconclusive: most data was self-reported, participant groups were small, and potentially data-skewing factors were not ruled out.

The volunteers wore accelerometers that measured patterns of rest and activity and had this record compared to their mental history, also taken from the UK Biobank. One of the most complete long-term health surveys ever done — on 91,105 people aged 37 to 73. The volunteers wore accelerometers that measured patterns of rest and activity and had this record compared to their mental history, also taken from the UK Biobank. The scientists found that “Owls” and “Larks” were more at risk of major depression and bipolar disorders, than “Middle-of-the-Night” people.

Individuals with a history of disrupting their body’s natural rhythm — working night shifts, for example, or suffering repeated jet lag — also tended to have a higher lifetime risk of mood disorders, feelings of unhappiness, and cognitive problems, the researchers found.

The study cannot say conclusively that body clock disturbances are what caused the mental risk, instead of the other way round.

But the findings “reinforce the idea that mood disorders are associated with disturbed circadian rhythms,” said Lyall. Measurements of people’s rest-work cycles could be a useful tool for flagging and treating people at risk of major depression or bipolar disorders, the researchers concluded.

One limitation of the study was the average age of the trial participants — 62.

“Seventy-five percent of people with major depression disorders start before the age of 24 years,” said University of Oxford researcher Aiden Doherty, commenting on the paper.

“The circadian system undergoes developmental changes during adolescence, which is also a common time for the onset of mood disorders,” he added.

Humans have been shown to be either “owls” or “larks,” corresponding to so-called genetic “chronotypes” that determine whether we function better at night or during the day.

Last year, the Nobel Prize for medicine was awarded to three US scientists who pioneered our understanding of how the circadian clock ticks.

HERAT, Afghanistan: Afghan commandos and the US air force have driven the Taliban to the outskirts of Farah, officials said on Wednesday (May 16), after a day-long battle to prevent the insurgents from seizing control of the western provincial capital.

The US carried out more drone strikes overnight and the Afghan army is still clearing the city, Afghan and NATO officials said. Shops, offices and schools remain closed, with residents frightened to leave home after hours of heavy fighting.

A NATO spokesman warned there could be more fighting on Wednesday.

“The Taliban have retreated from the city and positioned their forces in the outskirts,” provincial council member Daudullah Qani told AFP from Farah on Wednesday.

Fighting continued late into the night, he said. “The city is still closed as people are in fear.”

With internet and mobile network patches, casualty figures were difficult to verify. On Tuesday, the defence ministry said four soldiers and “dozens” of insurgents had been killed.

Reinforcements including special forces were rushed in from Herat and Kandahar as the fighting began late Monday.

Aref Rezaee, a spokesman for the Afghan army’s 207th Corps, said that with their help the Taliban were forced from the city at around midnight, some 24 hours after residents told AFP the initial assault began.

“We have started a clearing operation. (NATO’s) RS (Resolute Support mission) forces are also deployed in Farah airport. They were involved in providing air support,” he said.

A Resolute Support spokesman said the fighting had been “subdued” overnight but was likely to pick up again on Wednesday.

“We conducted a number of additional drone strikes throughout the night and continue to enable the (Afghan military), who remain squarely in the lead,” Lt Col Martin O’Donnell told AFP.

“The 207th Corps commander is leading operations on the ground and the city remains in government control.”

There had been reports that the militants were hiding in homes, meaning that the clearing operation was likely to be slow.

People remained fearful. “I want to open my shop today but they have planted land mines in some parts of the city,” Abdul Samad said.

Afghan forces, their numbers sapped by killings and desertions, have been struggling to hold back the resurgent militant group since the withdrawal of NATO combat forces at the end of 2014.

The assault on Farah is the latest in a series of attempts by the Taliban to capture urban centres. Kunduz, Afghanistan’s fifth largest city, fell briefly to the insurgents in 2015.

Farah province, a remote poppy-growing region that borders Iran, has been the scene of intense fighting in recent years, and there have long been fears that the city of Farah is vulnerable.

The Taliban, along with the Islamic State group, have also stepped up their attacks in the capital Kabul, which the UN says has in recent years become one of the country’s deadliest places for civilians.—AFP™

Kuwait inks 23.8 mln USD loan deal to finance Kenya’s highway project

KUWAIT CITY — The state Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development (KFAED) has signed on Tuesday a loan agreement worth 7 million Kuwaiti dinars (23.8 million US dollars) with Kenya to finance a major highway in the African country. The loan, the sixth of its kind to Kenya, was in line with Kuwait’s initiative during the Arab-African summit in November 2013, KFAED said in a statement on Wednesday.

Kuwaiti Emir Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad Al-Jaber Al-Sabah decided to provide 1 billion dollars of easy loans for development projects in Africa in five years at the summit.

The fund said the 156-km-long highway project would support economic and social development in northeastern Kenya, as well as improving transport efficiency between the country and its neighbors.—Xinhua™
North Korea threatens to cancel US summit

SEOUL — North Korea threatened on Wednesday to cancel the forthcoming summit between leader Kim Jong Un and President Donald Trump if Washington seeks to push Pyongyang into unilaterally giving up its nuclear arsenal.

It also cancelled high-level talks due Wednesday with Seoul over the Max Thunder joint military exercises being held between the United States and South Korea, denouncing the drills as a “rude and wicked provocation”.

It is a sudden and dramatic return to the rhetoric of the past by Pyongyang, after months of rapid diplomatic rapprochement on the peninsula.

“If the US is trying to drive us into a corner to force our unilateral nuclear abandonment, we will no longer be interested in such dialogue,” first vice foreign minister Kim Kye Gwan said in a statement carried by state media.

In that case, he added, Pyongyang would have to “reconsider” its participation at the summit, due in Singapore on 12 June.

The North’s arsenal is expected to be at the top of the agenda of the historic talks, but Pyongyang has long insisted it needs the weapons to defend itself against invasion by the US. Washington is pressing for its complete, verifiable and irreversible denuclearisation. But so far the North has not given any public indication of what concessions it is offering, beyond euphemistic commitments to denuclearisation of the “Korean peninsula”.

Pyongyang had “made clear on several occasions that precondition for denuclearisation is to put an end to anti-DPRK hostile policy and nuclear threats and blackmail of the United States”, minister Kim said.

In the past, Pyongyang had demanded the withdrawal of US troops stationed in the South to protect it from its neighbour, and an end to Washington’s nuclear umbrella over its security ally.

It was a “sinister move to impose on our dignified state the destiny of Libya or Iraq”, he said. “I cannot suppress indignation at such moves of the US, and harbour doubt about the US sincerity.”

The North has long said it needs nuclear weapons to protect itself against a US invasion. After giving up his atomic programme, Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi was killed in an uprising backed by NATO bombing.

Minister Kim also dismissed offers by US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo — who has visited Pyongyang twice in recent weeks, coming back the second time with three released US detainees — for US economic aid if the North denuclearises. “We have never had any expectation of US support in carrying out our economic construction and will not at all make such a deal in future,” Kim said —AFP
Indonesia hit by another attack after deadly suicide bombings

REKANBARU, Riau province, Indonesia — Four men were shot and killed as they staged an attack on a police headquarters that left one officer dead and two wounded, Indonesian authorities said on 16 Wednesday May, after a wave of deadly suicide bombings claimed by the Islamic State group.

The latest assault in Pekanbaru on the island of Sumatra saw a group ram a minivan into a gate at the station and then attack officers with samurai swords, according to the country’s national police.

It was not clear if Wednesday’s incident was linked to the earlier attacks which saw two families who knew each other and belonged to the same religious study group stage suicide bombings at churches and a police station in Surahaya, Indonesia’s second biggest city.

The attacks have put Indonesia on edge as the world’s biggest Muslim majority country starts the holy fasting month of Ramadan from Thursday.

This week’s bloody violence is putting pressure on lawmakers to pass a stalled security law that would give police more power to take pre-emptive action against people suspected of planning terror attacks. Indonesia — which is set to host the Asian Games in just three months and an IMF-World Bank meeting in Bali in October — has long struggled with Islamist militancy, including the 2002 Bali bombings that killed over 200 people — mostly foreign tourists — in the country’s worst-ever terror attack.

On Wednesday, police said they shot dead four of the attackers at the Sumatra police station and later arrested another who had fled.

Indonesian media said one attacker may have had a bomb strapped to his body but police did not immediately confirm the reports.

No group has yet taken responsibility for Wednesday’s attack.

‘Better organized’

Indonesia’s security forces have arrested hundreds of militants during a sustained crackdown that smashed some networks, and most recent attacks have been low-level and targeted domestic security forces.

Last year, a suicide bombing at a bus station in Jakarta killed three police officers.

But on Sunday, a family of six — including girls aged nine and 12 — staged suicide bombings of three churches during morning services in Surabaya, killing 13.

All six bombers were killed, including the mother who was Indonesia’s first known female suicide bomber.

The next day, members of another family blew themselves up at a police station in the city, wounding 10.

The coordinated church attack was a sign local extremist groups were becoming more proficient, and stirs concerns about an uptick in extremism as hundreds of Indonesians who flocked to fight alongside Islamic State in the Middle East return home.

“They were better organized...and suggest a higher level of capacity than what we have seen in recent years,” said Sidney Jones, director of Jakarta-based Institute of Policy Analysis for Conflict.

The church bombing family were in the same religious study group as the two other families linked to the attacks, police said.

“They had the same teacher and they regularly met for Koran recital every week,” said East Java police chief Machfud Arifin, adding that police were pursuing the teacher for questioning.

The families have been linked to the local chapter of Indonesian extremist network Jamaah Ansharut Daulah (JAD), which police said was behind the attacks.

The radical group supports Islamic State, whose ambitions have been reined in after losing most of the land it once occupied in Iraq and Syria.

Police have said the church and earlier police station attacks were motivated by the arrest of JAD leaders, including jailed radical Aman Abdurrahman.

US blocks call for independent Gaza inquiry at UN: diplomats

UNITED NATIONS — The United States on Monday blocked the adoption of a UN Security Council statement that would have called for an independent probe of deadly violence on the Israel-Gaza border, according to diplomats.

The violence on the Israel-Gaza border erupted as the new US embassy in Jerusalem was opened.

“The Security Council expresses its outrage and sorrow at the killing of Palestinian civilians exercising their right to peaceful protest,” read a draft of the statement, a copy of which was seen by AFP.

“The Security Council calls for an independent and transparent investigation into those actions to ensure accountability,” read the text.

In the bloodiest day in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict since a 2014 Gaza war, at least 55 Palestinians were killed in the clashes and more than 2,400 Palestinians wounded.

They erupted before Israeli officials and a White House delegation including President Donald Trump’s daughter Ivanka formally opened the embassy in Jerusalem, and and the bloodshed continued throughout the day. The dead included eight children under the age of 16, according to the Palestinian envoy to the United Nations. The Gazan health ministry provided the overall death and injury toll.—AFP

Johnny Depp ‘keen to star’ in J M Coetzee adaptation

PARIS — Johnny Depp may be about to work with the acclaimed Colombian director Ciro Guerra, whose new film “Birds of Passage” is one of the hits of the Cannes film festival.

The “Pirates of the Caribbean” star has “reached out” to Guerra, a hot arthouse talent who won a rake of awards for “The Enrapture of the Serpent”, Screen magazine reported on Monday.

Depp will “possibly” star in Guerra’s next film based on a novel by South African Nobel laureate J M Coetzee, which already features Mark Rylance and Robert Pattinson, it added.

Shooting on Guerra’s first English-language feature, based on Coetzee’s own adaptation of his breakthrough 1980 novel “Waiting for the Barbarians”, is scheduled to begin in autumn in Morocco.

It will tell the story of a magistrate in a colonial town who is accused of conspiring with the enemies of a fictional empire, modelled on apartheid South Africa.

Once Hollywood’s highest paid actor, Depp has seen his stock slip in the past few years, dragged down by a messy divorce from actress Amber Heard replete with domestic abuse allegations.

Angry Harry Potter fans had called for his lead role in “Fantastic Beasts” to be recast alongside “Twilight” star Pattinson, who got his first big break in “Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire”, according to Screen.

Heard’s claims after the pair reached an out-of-court divorce settlement.

‘Some Like It Hot’ headed to Broadway in 2020

LOS ANGELES — A musical adaptation of Marilyn Monroe’s film “Some Like It Hot” will bow out on Broadway in 2020.

The show, based on Billy Wilder’s 1959 comedy, will feature a score by Marc Shaiman, Variety reported.

The iconic film’s stage interpretation is headed to the Broadway more than six decades after the movie’s release.

“Some Like It Hot” show will be directed and choreographed by Casey Nicholaw, who also led Broadway version of “Mean Girls”.

Playwright Matthew Lopez has adapted the script for theatre. The play comes from The Shubert Organization and will be produced by Craig Zadan and Neil Meron, who acquired the rights to the iconic movie from MGM.

“We are grateful to MGM for allowing us to tackle the challenge of translating the film’s singular energy and magic to the stage,” Zadan, Meron, Philip J Smith and Robert E Wankel said on behalf of the Shubert Organization in a statement.

Jonathan Glickman, president of MGM’s motion picture group and head of live stage theatrical productions added, “‘Some Like It Hot’ is one of the crown jewels of MGM’s library. Craig, Neil and the Shubert Organization have assembled a world-class creative team and we can’t wait to see it on Broadway.”

The film also starred Jack Lemmon and Tony Curtis.—PTI

Jane Fonda would work with Tarantino ‘in a blue minute’

CANNES — Veteran actress Jane Fonda says she would agree to work with filmmaker Quentin Tarantino without wasting any time.

The 80-year-old star, who was paired as guests with Michael Madsen on L’Oreal’s Worth It stage on Cannes’ Croisette, asked the “Kill Bill” star to put in a “good word” for her.

According to Variety, asked if Fonda would work with the director, she replied, “Yeah, in a blue minute I’d work with Quentin. Not a director like Quentin – I’d like to work with Quentin.

She also asked Madsen if he could introduce her to Tarantino, with whom he has worked in four films - including director’s debut “Reservoir Dogs”, “Kill Bill - Vol 1 and 2” and “The Hateful Eight”.

“Would you put in a good word for me? Oh my God, I’ll bring you to a party tonight if you’ll get me into a Tarantino film,” the Hollywood veteran asked.

To this Madsen quickly replied, “As long as we’re in it together.”

Fonda, who dubbed herself a feminist activist first then an actor, did not address Uma Thurman’s charges of abuse on the “Kill Bill” sets that she was subjected to by Tarantino.

Madsen, however, alluded to them and talked about the post Harvey Weinstein sexual harassment scandal. Weinstein was Tarantino’s longtime producer.

The actor said like many others, he also knew about the producer’s misconduct and he agrees with the current change in the current as he is “all for equality”.

“I think that it’s good that there is a tremendous awareness now of some bad behaviour and things that were considered to be normal and ‘Well, that’s just the way he is’ attitude.

“I would never say that I didn’t know about it because I did, but the thing is, who are you going to talk about it for? Are you going to call CBS and tell them? It became a fear much more for the girls than for the men because we would just go, ‘Oh those dumb broads,’ but it’s an egotistical male ideal and there’s two sides to the story...” he said.—PTI
Two Sherpas break Everest summit records

KATHMANDU — Two Nepali Sherpas broke their own world records for the most Everest summits by a man and a woman Wednesday, reaching the world’s highest peak for a 22nd and ninth time respectively.

Kami Rita Sherpa, a professional guide, and Lhakpa Sherpa, who works in a supermarket in Connecticut, reached the summit from opposite sides of the 8,848 metre (29,030 feet) mountain.

Kami Rita, 48, was one of six Sherpas who took seven clients to the summit from the Nepali side, Mingma Sherpa of Seven Summits Treks, who organised the expedition, told AFP.

A guide for more than two decades, he broke the previous record of 21 summits that he shared with two other Sherpas.

Kami Rita first reached the top of Everest in 1994 when working for a commercial expedition.

“I did not start climbing to set a world record,” he told AFP last month before setting out for the mountain. “It wasn’t for any competition.”

Lhakpa Sherpa, 44, reached the peak for a ninth time via the northern, Tibetan route, his brother Mingma Gelu Sherpa said.

The US-based Lhakpa has repeatedly broken her own record for the most Everest summits by a woman. The next most accomplished female Everest climber is American Melissa Sue Arnot, who has reached the top six times.

The daughter of a yak herder, Lhakpa worked as a porter and kitchen hand on trekking and mountaineering expeditions, before becoming a climber herself.

She moved to the United States 16 years ago and says she plans to continue climbing, while keeping her job in the supermarket.

“I keep going to encourage other Nepali women to climb,” the 44-year-old told AFP last month.

The twin records come on the heels of Australian Steve Plain becoming the fastest person to summit the highest mountains on all seven continents.

He completed the seven climbs in 177 days — nine days quicker than the previous record — after reaching the top of Everest Monday. Hundreds of climbers are on Everest attempting to reach the summit during the narrow window of good weather in May. But the mountain is also highlighting its risks.

A Sherpa guide has been missing on Everest’s southern side in Nepal since Monday, said Mingma of Seven Summits.

“They are searching for him on the way down,” he said of the team that has just summited.

On the Tibet side a team was forced to retreat from just below the summit when at least 11 of their bottled oxygen systems failed. “Multiple teams using the same device have experienced similar oxygen system failures. There are no reported injuries,” Alpenglow Expeditions said in a statement.

Climbers use supplementary oxygen to combat altitude sickness. Air at the top of Everest contains less than a third of the oxygen at sea level.—AFP

Kyoto vegetables served at Vatican Museums for promotion

VATICAN CITY — Vegetables grown in Kyoto were served at a banquet Monday in the Vatican Museums to about 300 guests including cardinals and ambassadors to promote Japanese dishes.

Dishes using ingredients such as “Kujo-Negi” scallion, “Kamo-Nasu” eggplant and “Manganji Togarashi” pepper prepared by Yoji Satake, lead chef at the 300-year-old Kyoto cuisine restaurant Takeshigero, were served at the event organized by the Kyoto unit of the Japan Agricultural Cooperatives group.

The menu also included wagyu beef and Uji green tea from Kyoto, and a tea ceremony serving matcha was also held before the banquet.

“We’ve brought traditional Kyoto vegetables, which were grown with great care. We will promote the culture, agriculture and cuisine of Kyoto,” JA Group Kyoto Chairman Yasuhiro Nakagawa said.

The group has hosted similar banquets featuring Kyoto vegetables at famous sites around the world including the Palace of Versailles in the suburbs of Paris and the Topkapi Palace in Istanbul, Turkey.

Chinese volunteers emerge from virtual moon base

BEIJING — A group of Chinese volunteers has emerged from 110 days of isolation in a virtual “lunar lab”, state media reported Tuesday, as the country pursues its ambition to put people on the moon.

The official Xinhua news service streamed images on its website of the would-be astronauts emerging from their temporary home, a self-contained environment simulating conditions which future explorers will face on the moon’s surface.

In the video, students wearing masks and blue tennis shirts emerge from the pod carrying baskets of fruit and vegetables, including carrots and strawberries, grown inside the module.

A win in 2nd AFC Zonal Semi-Finals is not enough for Yangon United to go Finals

EVEN though Yangon United won 3-2 over the Philippines’ football club Ceres Negros in the AFC Cup 2018 zonal semi-finals at Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon yesterday, the Myanmar team did not advance because the Philippines team had a higher goals total.

In the first leg of the tournament, Ceres Negros beat Yangon United by a score of 4-2. Combined with last night’s results, the team from the Philippines scored one more goal than the team from Myanmar, resulting in an end to the tournament for Yangon United.

In yesterday’s match, goals for Yangon were scored by its star players Kosuke Yamazaki, Aee Soe and Sekou Sylla, while the goals for the team from the Philippines were scored by Manuel Ott and Bienvenido Marañón.

Both teams played hard right from the start, resulting in the opening goal for Yangon in the first minute of play with a strong kick into the net by Yangon’s attacker Kosuke Yamazaki.

Ceres came back with an attack, and at 8 minutes, Manuel Ott equalised for his team.

With the game tied, the match heated up, with both teams attacking back and forth. Just before the end of the first half, Sylla made a nice pass to teammate Ikechukwu Emmanuel, but Emmanuel could not convert and the scoring chance was gone.

AFC Football Coaching Certificate course concluded in Yangon

A conclusion ceremony of an Asian Football Confederation (AFC) Grade (C) certifying course was held at the head quarter of Myanmar Football Federation in Yangon on Tuesday.

The ceremony was attended by the General Secretary of the Myanmar Football Federation U Ko Ko Thein and officials, Technical Director U Tin Myint Aung and attendees.

The AFC ‘C’ Coaching Certificate course aims at training coaches and developing their basic techniques and skills in football said an official.

At halftime, the score remained knotted at 1-1. At the 46-minute mark of the second half, Sylla appeared ready to make a brilliant score, but the keeper came out and palmed the ball away. Mg Mg Lwin was able to control the ball that had bounced back from the keeper, but Mg Mg Lwin’s kick went over the post.

At the 56-minute mark there was one more chance for Yangon when Mg Mg Lwin made a supporting pass to Kyaw Zin Oo, who was in goal area. Kyaw Zin Oo attempted to head the ball into the goal, but the attempt was not strong enough to score.

Ceres Negros made the go-ahead goal at 78 minutes by its experienced trio of Jordan Pickford, Jack Butland and the uncapped Nick Pope will feature in a competitive international, whilst Butland’s only feature in a competitive international was in contention despite an injury-ravaged season. LONDON — England manager Gareth Southgate will name his 23-man World Cup squad on Wednesday with some experienced figures such as goalkeeper Joe Hart expected to miss out.

The BBC and Sky Sports reported on Tuesday that 75-times capped Hart won’t be included among Southgate’s three goalkeepers after a poor season on loan at West Ham from Manchester City.

Hart, who has been England’s first choice goalkeeper for the last three major tournaments, was backed by Southgate after being deemed surplus to requirements by Pep Guardiola at City as the 31-year-old remained first choice during England’s unbeaten qualifying campaign.

However, Hart started only half of West Ham’s Premier League games this season and conceded 39 goals in his 19 league appearances.

Hart’s omission means the experienced trio of Jordan Pickford, Jack Butland and the uncapped Nick Pope will be Southgate’s options between the sticks.

Pickford has also yet to feature in a competitive international, whilst Butland’s only two competitive starts came in qualifying dead rubbers against Lithuania in 2015 and 2017.

Jack Wilshere is also set to miss out despite an impressive end to the season with Arsenal.

Wilshere was initially included in Southgate’s squad for March’s friendlies against the Netherland and Italy, but was forced to pull out with a knee injury that cost him for March’s friendlies against the Netherlands and Italy, but was forced to pull out with a knee injury that cost him the opportunity to make his case.

Liverpool’s Adam Lallana is in contention despite an injury-ravaged season. Lallana made his latest comeback in Sunday’s 4-0 win over Brighton, but made just one Premier League start all season.
