Perpetrators exploiting mountain range in Rakhine apprehended

THE eighth regular session of the second Pyithu Hluttaw convened its seventh-day meeting yesterday.

During the session, U Oo Tun Win of Kyauktaw constituency posed a three-part question: (i) whether the demolition of the historically significant mountain range near Daungtawyo Village in the east of Kyauktaw Township, Rakhine State, would be prohibited, (ii) if the excavation businesses that had sprung up near the discontinued railway project were legal, (iii) how has the income generated from excavation businesses been used for the country and the people since 2010?

Deputy Minister for Home Affairs Maj-Gen Aung Soe replied, on behalf of the Rakhine State government.

He said the Rakhine State Peace and Development Council had leased 20 acres, along with 10 acres of grazing land from the Taungpaukgyi mountain range to state departments and the state police force, respectively, in 2003 for use as agricultural land. The police officers were reportedly using only 3 acres of the leased land, while the remaining 7 acres were left unattended. He explained that in the 2008-2009 period, while working on a project to build a railway line through the mountain range, the Myanmar Railways had discovered laterite rocks during the demolition process. It then contracted with a private company to excavate the rocks, and on 17 December 2013, it contracted with a local resident to continue with the excavations.

The railway project was discontinued on 4 April 2014 after residents protested against the demolition of the ancient capital Dhanyawadi and Mrauk-U, which are cultural heritage zones. However, the excavation of laterite rocks continued, and the concerned village administrators and excavators were given final warnings on 4 March 2017, following which the excavation businesses were not allowed to continue operating in the area.

However, a state police investigation revealed that the 7 acres of leased land that had been left unattended by the police force were being used for excavation businesses, with permission from the Kyauktaw Township police chief. Further, legal action was taken against all involved parties, and the trial held on 26 January 2018. As no legal businesses were permitted after the railway project was discontinued, the government has not accrued any income, explained the deputy minister. The grazing land in Taungpaukgyi mountain range is under the management of the Kyauktaw Township General Administration Department.

By Aung Ye Thwin (MNA)

Lawmakers of the Amyotha Hluttaw discussed the forest bill sent by the Pyithu Hluttaw, making suggestions for transparency and public notification when forest reserves are established. At the seventh day meeting of Amyotha Hluttaw yesterday in Nay Pyi Taw, U Soe Win of constituency-12 of Rakhine State made a suggestion to add a clause to the bill which guarantees negotiation and ensures transparency with the local people when reserved forest and protected public forest are designated in paragraph 6 of Chapter-3 titled “Establishing reserved forest and Designating protected public forest”.

The MP also suggested a clause that wooded areas two miles from villages, pagodas, monasteries, schools, ponds, lakes and farmland which are used by local people should be designated as forest reserves.

The MP also suggested the wording “announcements shall be made in many ways to let the local people know …” be added in paragraph 7 of the same chapter when the entire forest reserve or a part of the forest reserve is reestablished or is abolished or is reestablished as protected public forest.

In sub-paragraph (b), paragraph 7, he suggested to amend the clause “entire forest reserve or a part of the forest reserve which no longer needs to be reserved shall be abolished,” as “if … are abolished, a part of the forest reserve with farmland shall be abolished and announcements shall be made to let the local people know these issues.”

U Zaw Hein of constituency-7 of the Taninthayi Region suggested deletion of the requirement that people shall seek recommendations from a forest official in Section 23 (A), saying that the bill will cause hardships.

He continued to say that anyone who smuggles teak or banned hardwood to foreign countries, or those who involve in the smuggling shall get a minimum ten-year prison sentence and a fine of at least Ks5 million.

The new forest law should include a penalty of at least a three-year prison sentence and a fine of Ks2 million to those who are involved in charcoal smuggling to foreign countries.

Agro exports down by $53 million

THE export of agriculture products from 1 April to 18 May in the current six-month transitional period for the 2018-2019 fiscal year was valued at US$394 million, decreasing slightly by some $53 million compared to the same period in the 2017-2018 FY, according to trade figures released by the commerce ministry.

The decrease in agro exports is attributed to the low demand from China. Chinese buyers are currently watching the market. Additionally, mung bean and pigeon pea markets have not fully recovered yet, following India’s restrictions on the importation of mung beans and pigeon peas.

In the export sector, the agriculture industry performed the best, along with natural gas exports. The main export goods in the agriculture sector are rice and broken rice, pulses, corn and rubber. Fruits and vegetables, sesame, dried tea leaves, sugar and other agro products are also exported to foreign countries.

The commerce ministry is striving to help deal with the challenges faced by farmers, such as high input costs, procurement of pedigree seeds, high cultivation costs and erratic weather problems. – Mon Mon

Prices of quality rice varieties high, market remains cool

By May Thet Hnin

THE prices of quality rice varieties are up by Ks3,000 per bag, but the market continued to remain cool. Prices saw an increase of Ks5,000 per bag last week. However, prices slipped slightly in the last few days, decreasing by Ks1,000-Ks2,000 per bag.

“The salary increase for civil servants in April prompted them to buy and stock goods, to tide over possible high prices. Retail shops were also stockpiling their goods, thus hinking up the price. Some sellers manipulate the price. However, the demand is not as high as expected. The market is still cool, with prices on the higher side,” said U Than Oo, secretary of Bayintnaung rice depot. Prices of quality rice varieties, which are consumed domestically, have been rising, cooling the trade, said U Hla Win, a rice producer from Labutta Township, Ayeyawady region.

“The prices increased last week, and though they dipped slightly, they are still above the previous market prices. Every year, rice prices decrease around this time, although I am unable to pinpoint the particular reason,” he added. The prevailing market prices of rice increased from Ks21,000 to Ks46,000 per bag for the Pawsan variety, Ks21,000 to Ks21,000 for the Aemaha variety, Ks19,500 to Ks21,000 for Ngasain, and Ks22,000 to Ks32,000 for Mee-done.

The prices are on the higher side, compared to prices in early May, according to statistics provided by Wardan commodity depot. ■

A brief study on the book “The Lady, U Aung San Suu Kyi and Affairs of State”

By Sinpyooky Than Tun

Thura U Shwe Mann rang the bell to open the first plenary session of the second Hluttaw. He was the Speaker of the First Hluttaw (2012-2013) and convener of the Second Hluttaw meetings. The convenor of second Hluttaw was the most crucial task at a time of critical condition in the country. It could be termed as a decisive act for the country.

As far as I could remember, the last session of the First Pyalaungla Hluttaw was convened in January 2016. The Speaker, Thura U Shwe Mann expressed as follows.

He said that the sovereignty of the nation belongs to the people and that whoever holds the sovereignty of the state under any circumstances entrust the power back to the people.

It was mentioned on page 52 of the book. The writer of the book, Daw U Aung Su Kyi expressed the same view. She (Daw Aung San Suu Kyi) seemed to be very happy which reflected on her face. I took the liberty in sharing the interesting events in my mind that it would be worth to record if one is interested in Myanmar politics or person hunting for information on his interests.

The interesting book in the content of the book in the period between 2014 and 2018 which were in fact worth to study. A simple thought in mind that it would be useful for the readers if some of the book matters are highlighted and concisely stated. The book in its entirety is, however, rich with a lot of useful information. EU’s new data protection rules come into effect

BERLIN — The European Union’s new data protection laws came into effect on Friday, with Brussels saying the changes will protect consumers from being like “people naked in an aquarium”.

The EU’s so-called General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) has been blamed for a flood of spam emails and messages in recent weeks as firms rush to request the explicit consent of users to contact them.

Even though the rules were officially adopted two years ago, with a grace period until now to adapt to them, companies have been slow to act, resulting in a last-minute scramble this week.

Britain’s data protection watchdog, the Information Commissioner’s Office (ICO), said that its site had experienced “a few interruptions” as the deadline loomed, but said that “everything is working new”.

Brussels insists that the laws will become a global benchmark for the protection of people’s online information, particularly in the wake of the Facebook data harvesting scandal.

“The new rules will put the Europeans back in control of their data,” said EU Justice Commissioner Vera Jourova.

“When it comes to personal data today, people are naked in an aquarium.”

Companies can be fined up to 20 million euros ($24 million) or four per cent of annual global turnover for breaching the strict new data rules for the EU, a market of 500 million people.

Explicit consent

The law establishes the key principle that individuals must explicitly grant permission for their data to be used.

The new EU law also establishes consumers “right to know” who is processing their information and what it will be used for.

People will be able to block the processing of their data for commercial reasons and even have data deleted under the “right to be forgotten”.

Parents will decide for children until they reach the age of consent, which member states will set anywhere between 13 and 16 years old.

The case for the new rules has been boosted by the recent scandal over the harvesting of Facebook users’ data by Cambridge Analytica, a US-British political research firm, for the 2016 US presidential election.

The breach affected 87 million users, but Facebook said Wednesday it has found no evidence that any data from Europeans were sold to Cambridge Analytica.

Facebook chief Mark Zuckerberg said in a hearing at the European Parliament on Tuesday that his firm will not only be “fully compliant” with the EU law, but will also make huge investments to protect users.

Zuckerberg said he was “sorry” for the Cambridge Analytica breaches, but also for its failure to crack down on election interference, “fake news” and other data misuses.

Big platforms like Facebook, WhatsApp and Twitter seem well prepared for the new laws, while smaller businesses have voiced concern.

But EU officials say they are initially focusing on the big firms, whose business models use a goldmine of personal information for advertising, while offering smaller firms more time to adapt.

Meanwhile Brussels has expressed impatience with the eight countries — out of the EU’s 28 — that say they will not have updated their laws by Friday.

EU Commissioner Jourova said the new rules are setting “a global standard of privacy”.

Many Americans who once criticised Europe as too quick to regulate the new driver of the global economy now see the need for the GDPR, EU officials insist.

“I see some version of GDPR getting quickly adopted at least in the United States,” Param Vir Singh, a business professor at Carnegie Mellon University, told AFP in an email.

Japan, South Korea, India and Thailand are also drawing “some inspiration” from Brussels as they debate or adopt similar laws, another EU official said. —AFP

Experts preserve dinosaur footprints in Beijing

BEIJING — Experts from China and Greece have recently started their first joint preservation work on more than 170 fossilized dinosaur footprints discovered in a suburb of Beijing.

The team has started to clean the surface of the fossils and apply a special reagent to prevent them from weather damage.

The footprints, unearthed in a geological park in Yanqing County in 2011, are the first dinosaur traces to be found inside the city.—Xinhua

Catholic priest ‘infected with Ebola’ in DR Congo

MBANDAKA (DR CONGO) — A Catholic priest has been quarantined after being infected with the Ebola virus in the town of Mbandaka in the Democratic Republic of Congo, medical sources said Thursday.

“We have quarantined a priest from the diocese of Mbandaka-Bikoro who tested positive” for the Ebola virus, a medical source told AFP on condition of anonymity. Religious authorities could not be immediately contacted.

DRC health officials launched a small, targeted vaccination campaign this week to help rein in the latest Ebola outbreak in the country, which so far has claimed 27 lives.

Kinshasa announced on 8 May that there had been cases of the notorious haemorrhagic fever in a remote northwestern district called Bikoro.

Last Thursday, the first case was reported in a city—Mbandaka, a transport hub located on the Congo River. According to a World Health Organization count, 58 cases have been identified since early April. It was not possible to establish on Thursday whether the priest was among them.

Meanwhile, UNICEF said Thursday it was committed to helping schools and children in the fight against the spread of the virus.

The charity’s DRC representative Gianfranco Rotigliano told AFP if a student becomes infected, he or she would be promptly taken care of.

In Mbandaka, several families have installed buckets of water and soap at the entrance of the house for hand-washing, a health agency placed a ‘spy’ in Trump campaign, or otherwise failed to follow appropriate procedures and protocols,” the Democrates said in a joint statement. Trump’s lead lawyer counseled him to not shake hands with people and stop playing with their friends in games that would cause contact between them,” Claude, a father of several children, told AFP. —AFP

No evidence of ‘spy’ in Trump camp, Democrats say after intel brief

WASHINGTON — US intelligence agencies offered no evidence to back President Donald Trump’s claim that the FBI planted a “spy” in his campaign, congressional Democrats said Thursday after a closed-door briefing.

The Department of Justice and the FBI held two classified meetings with leaders of the Senate and House of Representatives and the heads of the chambers’ intelligence panels, after the president demanded a probe into allegations of infiltration into his team, a potential scandal Trump has branded “SPYGATE.”

US media have reported that the FBI sent an informant to gather possible evidence that Trump campaign advisors had suspicious contacts with Russia. An initial Thursday briefing at the Department of Justice was intended to be only for Republicans, including House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes. But after outcry from House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, the panel’s top Democrat Adam Schiff was allowed to attend.

The action then shifted to the US Capitol where Federal Bureau of Investigation director Chris Wray, Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein who oversees the Russia investigation, and Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats helped brief the so-called Gang of Eight.

The intelligence grouping consists of Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, House Speaker Paul Ryan, Pelosi, Senate Intelligence Committee chairman Richard Burr, top intelligence Democrat Mark Warner, and Schiff.

Democrats said the meetings were conducted in part to assure lawmakers that no intelligence sources or methods were exposed while probing whether an FBI informant spoke with Trump campaign advisers in 2016.

“Nothing we heard today has changed our view that there is no evidence to support any allegation that the FBI or any intelligence agency placed a ‘spy’ in the Trump campaign, or otherwise failed to follow appropriate procedures and protocols,” the Democrats said in a joint statement. Trump’s lead lawyer countering Special Counsel Robert Mueller’s Russia probe, Emmet Flood, and White House Chief of Staff John Kelly were also allowed to attend the opening of both briefings, a move Democrats decried as a disturbing breach of protocol.

“I’ve never seen a Gang of Eight meeting that included any presence from the White House,” Warner told reporters, clarifying that the individuals left before classified substance was discussed.

North Korea open to US talks ‘any time’ despite Trump axing summit

SEUL — North Korea said Friday it is willing to talk to the United States “at any time” after President Donald Trump abruptly cancelled a summit, prompting China to urge both sides to show restraint as a pall of uncertainty settled over the turbulent Korean peninsula once more.

Trump blamed “open hostility” from the North Korean regime for his decision to call off the planned talks with Kim Jong Un, and warned Pyongyang against committing any “foolish or reckless acts”.

In a personal letter to Kim, Trump announced Thursday he would not go ahead with the 12 June summit in Singapore, following what the White House called a “trail of broken promises” by the North.

China, Pyongyang’s sole major ally, urged the two foes to “show goodwill” as regional powers braced for the possible diplomatic fallout.

“Stay patient, show goodwill, move in the same direction and continue to stay committed to promoting the denuclearisation of the peninsula,” foreign ministry spokesman Lu Kang told a regular press conference.

So far Pyongyang’s reaction to the sudden U-turn has been conciliatory.

First Vice Foreign Minister Kim Kye Gwan called Trump’s decision “unexpected” and “regrettable”. But he left the door open for talks, saying officials were willing “to sit face-to-face at any time”.

Just before Trump announced the cancellation of the meeting, North Korea declared it had “completely” dismantled its nuclear test site in the country’s far northeast, in a carefully choreographed goodwill gesture ahead of the summit.

But the chances of success for the unprecedented face-to-face had recently been thrown into doubt as threats were traded by both sides.

“Sadly based on the tremendous anger and open hostility displayed in your most recent statement, I feel it is inappropriate, at this time, to have this long-planned meeting,” read Trump’s letter to Kim.

But he said talks could still go ahead “at a later date”.

‘Shocking’
The decision blindsided treaty ally South Korea, which until now had brokered a remarkable detente between Washington and Pyongyang.

South Korean President Moon Jae-in called the move “shocking and very regrettable” but his government vowed to push ahead with improving ties with the North.

UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres urged the parties to keep talking, as did host Singapore, while Russia’s President Vladimir Putin held out hope that dialogue would resume and the talks would eventually take place.

However, Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe backed the US president’s move.

Politically, Trump had invested heavily in the success of the planned summit. But as the date drew nearer, the Gulf in expectations between the two sides became apparent.

Washington has made it clear it wants to see the “complete, verifiable and irreversible denuclearisation” of the North.

But Pyongyang has vowed it will never give up its nuclear deterrent until it feels safe from what it terms US aggression.

The White House viewed Trump’s decision to cancel the summit could have “knock-on effects, especially among allies already rattled by Trump’s unpredictability.”

In a contest of who can be the most erratic leader, President Trump beats Kim Jong Un hands-down,” Joel Wit, founder of the respected 38 North website which monitors North Korea, wrote on Twitter.

But others said Trump’s willingness to walk away could extract further concessions from Pyongyang. “North Korea will have to propose more detailed plans for denuclearisation if it wants to talk in the future,” Go Myong-hyun, an analyst at Asan Institute of Policy Studies, told AFP — AFP

Cuban authorities find second black box of crashed plane

Havana — Cuban authorities found the second black box containing flight data of the Boeing 737-200 plane that crashed near the Havana international airport on 18 May, a civil aviation official told state TV on Thursday.

Armando Daniel Lopez, president of Cuba’s Institute of Civil Aviation and Aeronautics (IACA), confirmed that the black box was identified on Thursday in the disaster area, almost a week after the accident.

Lopez said the discovery of the second black box was made possible thanks to experts’ analyses of videos shot around the crash site, recollections of witnesses and nearby residents, as well as an investigation into the local topography.

According to the official, American and Mexican specialists working to support the investigation also helped identify the data recorder.

The ill-fated passenger plane belonged to the Mexican company Damojh and was on lease to Cuba’s Cubana de Aviacion airlines.

The plane was carrying 113 people on board. Altogether 111 people died in the incident, including 100 Cubans, five foreigners and all the six crew members from Mexico. — Xinhua
Two killed in fresh Nicaragua clashes after talks collapse

LEON (NICARAGUA) — At least two people were killed and 50 wounded as clashes flared in Nicaragua after protests between the government and opposition collapsed, the Red Cross and victims’ relatives said Thursday.

Since protests began on 18 April, 76 people have been killed and more than 800 wounded, according to a preliminary report of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights submitted before Wednesday’s clashes. Initially triggered by now-aborted reforms to ease the burden of groceries and medicine, the unrest broadened into a rejection by many Nicaraguans of Ortega’s rule, his wife, Rosario Murillo, seen as autocratic.

The latest clashes broke out late Wednesday between opposition demonstrators and pro-government groups, with the worst occurring in Leon, northwest of the capital Managua. A 31-year-old man, Manuel Chevez, was shot dead when government-linked groups tried to evict students and residents from a barricade on the main road to Leon, the man’s aunt Justa Ramirez told AFP. A second man, identified as Luis Diaz and belonging to the pro-government group, was allegedly struck by a homemade mortar bomb, local Red Cross director Marcio Ocon told AFP. During the clashes, which lasted about five hours, 54 people were wounded by a mixture of gunfire, rubber bullets and blunt instruments, according to the Red Cross.

Rejection of early elections

Chevez’s aunt said he had been shot by a rifle. “He was shot with an AK, because it is a shot from an AK that he has on his forehead,” she said. Clashes also occurred in other Nicaraguan cities. The unrest came after the week-long church-mediated talks between the government and opposition forces to quell a month of violence broke down late on Wednesday. “Since there was no consensus today between the parties, we in the bishops’ conference regretfully are shutting down the... national dialogue,” church officials said after eight fruitless hours of mediation at a Managua seminary.

The biggest major stumbling block is the government’s rejection of early elections. “That would be dismantling constitutional order and the democratically elected government,” Foreign Minister Denis Moncada said. On Thursday Moncada reaffirmed the government’s readiness to dialogue, saying it is “essential to resolve and agree on the elimination of all the barriers” on the roads, to avoid “violence in all its forms and to guarantee the right to work.”

The leader of the opposition Broad Front for Democracy, Violeta Granera, said the dialogue had given her “a level of hope” to find a solution to the crisis.

“Now what we have left is to let ourselves be unfocused and to be bolder, more creative and stronger with the protests.”

Ortega “wants time to win with impunity... It is already clear that his days in power are numbered,” she said.—AFP

Models, actresses, employees: the women speaking out against Weinstein

WASHINGTON—Dozens of actresses, models and ex-employees have come out to accuse veteran producer Harvey Weinstein, 66, of harassment, abuse and rape dating as far back as the 1990s. With Weinstein expected to surrender to authorities in New York on Friday to face possible criminal charges, here is a look at the list of his accusers:

The first complaints

The scandal unfurled with the testimonies of eight women published in The New York Times on 5 October last year. The women who spoke out were anonymous ex-employees of the director, known for his work on films including “The King’s Speech,” as well as actresses Ashley Judd.

The newspaper also revealed other cases of harassment, including actress Rose McGowan and model Amber Battilana Gutierrez, who reportedly received settlement from Weinstein following the incidents.

The New Yorker magazine carried out its own 10-month investigation, published 10 October, which featured accusations from 13 women — including three of rape from actresses Asia Argento and Lucia Evans, and another anonymous young woman.

Revelations from a string of superstars — including Rosanna Arquette, Gwyneth Paltrow, Angelina Jolie, Cara Delevingne and Lea Seydoux — prompted other less famous women to speak out, although the focus remained on the celebrities.

Asia Argento

Argento, the Italian actress who has said she was raped by Weinstein at the Cannes film festival, made an emotional speech at this year’s edition, the first since the scandal about his behavior erupted.

“This festival was his hunting ground,” the 42-year-old star told the festival’s award ceremony, where she presented the best actress prize.

Argento says she was 21 when she was attacked by Weinstein in his hotel room in 1997.

He was seated among you... But things have changed. We are not going to allow you to get away with it,” she added.

Rose McGowan

McGowan, who accuses Weinstein of raping her at the Sundance Film Festival in Utah, also in 1997, is one of the most prominent advocates in the #MeToo movement against sexual harassment.

In a public speech around the time the scandal broke, McGowan decried what she called a pervasive culture of sexual misconduct in Hollywood, and urged women to fight back.

“I have been silenced for 20 years. I have been shut-shamed. I have been harassed. I have been maligned, and you know what? I’m just like you,” said McGowan, 44.

She hit the headlines again for criticizing Meryl Streep in a since-deleted tweet over plans for actresses to wear black to January’s Golden Globes in a silent protest against sexual assault.

“YOUR SILENCE is THE problem. You’ll accept a fake award breathlessly & affect (sic) no real change. I despise your hypocrisy,” McGowan tweeted. Streep denied McGowan’s claims that the 68-year-old triple Oscar-winner had turned a blind eye to Weinstein’s behavior.

Danny Boyle to direct new Bond film out in October 2019

LONDON—Oscar-winning filmmaker Danny Boyle will direct the next James Bond film, with actor Daniel Craig returning for the fifth time as the legendary British spy, the movies’ producers announced Friday.

The 25th as yet untitled film in the storied 007 franchise will begin production later this year and hit cinemas in Britain first, on 25 October 2019, EON Productions and Metro Goldwyn Mayer Studios (MGM) said in a statement.

“We are delighted to announce that the exceptionally talented Danny Boyle will be directing Daniel Craig in his fifth outing as James Bond in the 25th instalment of the franchise,” said producers Michael G. Wilson and Barbara Broccoli.

Production will start at Britain’s Pinewood Studios in December with Universal Pictures the international distributor, they added.

Boyle, 61, who won an Academy Award in 2009 for “Slumdog Millionaire”, will partner again with screenwriter John Hodge on the new Bond film.

Boyle, who also directed 2015’s “Steve Jobs” and “28 Days Later” in 2002, had previously said he was working on “a great idea” for a James Bond script but was unsure if it would be made.

The film is expected to be Craig’s last time playing the spy, having previously starred in “Casino Royale”, “Quantum of Solace”, “Skyfall” and “Spectre”.

KARACHI—Pakistan has imposed a temporary ban on the exhibition and screening of Indian and other foreign language films during Eid in response to demands by the domestic film industry which faces stiff competition from Bollywood and Hollywood films during the holiday season.

According to a notification issued by the ministry of information and broadcasting, the exhibition and screening of Indian and foreign films will be banned from two days before the Eid to until two weeks after the holidays.

An official in the ministry said the step had been taken on the requests by the Pakistani film exhibitors, distributors and production houses.

Under this ban no cinema across Pakistan will be allowed to show Indian movies during the Eid holidays which usually run for four days and bring in big business for the new Pakistani, Bollywood and Hollywood films.

Another official from the Pakistan Film Exhibitors’ Association confirmed they had received the notification.

“The notification says that the temporary ban is being imposed in order to promote local movies on the festivals, a time when usual than larger audience is attracted towards cinemas,” he said.

He said the notification was also applicable for the Eid-ul-Adha holidays which will fall around late August or September.

Pakistani film producers and artists have been complaining for the last two years that their new films face stiff competition from the Indian and Hollywood movies and due to the limited number of screens in the country they are not able to do good business and in some cases even recover their invested money in the films.

This Eid also a number of new Pakistani films are due for release but it was not clear which Indian films are slated for release during the holidays in India and elsewhere.—PTI
Serbian street artists make football the beautiful game

BELGRADE — Graffiti or street artists in Belgrade are playing out a football rivalry on the city’s walls in a development far from the image of ultranationalism and violent Balkan fans.

Fan groups attached to Partizan Belgrade go by the nick-name ‘the Gravediggers’, and include the graffiti artist Derox, who is also part of the Grobarski (gravediggers) Trash Romantizam (GTR) art group.

When AFP meets him Derox has been working without break repainting 35 highly impressive mural paintings with the acronym GTR.

The two giants of Yugoslav and Serbian football were founded at the end of World War II.

GTR, an “artistic movement linked to football”, says what he does is a poke in the eye for those whom “people who watch football are described as idiots”.

And “there is the word ART in the name: PARTizan”, he says.

Orwell, Morrissey, Strummer

The club was founded three years later in fact. Other GTR works feature the British writer George Orwell and musicians Morrissey, Joe Strummer and Eddy Grant. “Eddy Grant is really a Partizan supporter,” says Lovric who is studying English literature. He recalls a song, where the reggae singer offers to put on an “invisible hat” to “visit Belgrade”: “Relax and I’ll take you to where it’s at.”

As for Strummer, continues Lovric, before becoming the frontman of the Clash he was a gravedigger. Morrissey was chosen because GTR liked his lyrics contained in a Smiths song: “To die by your side is such an heavenly way to die.”

What about Orwell? Lovric is convinced that “he had everything needed to be a Partizan fan”. Also he contributed to the American Trotskyists magazine “Partisan”, he says.

“Our way is art”

Launching GTR in 2012 “we did not have any doctrine or plan. We just wanted to do something for the love of our club,” says Ivan Sarajcic, a bearded 47-year-old IT programmer. —AFP

Lucasfilm planning ‘Star Wars’ spin-off on Boba Fett: reports

LOS ANGELES — “Star Wars” fan favorite Boba Fett is set to get his own spin-off movie in Lucasfilm’s epic space franchise, US entertainment media reported on Thursday. “Logan” and “Cop Land” director James Mangold has been tapped to write and helm the standalone movie, according to the Hollywood Reporter, following spin-offs “Rogue One” (2016) and “Solo,” which hits theaters this weekend.

Boba Fett, who has developed something of a cult following, has been played by various actors, starting with Jeremy Bulloch, who also appeared in several James Bond films in the 1970s and 80s. The bounty hunter’s first film was “The Empire Strikes Back” (1980), although he has subsequently been worked digitally into the original movie, “Star Wars: Episode IV — A New Hope” (1977). Fett was seen careening into the deadly Great Pit of Carkoon — home to the many-entacled, sharp-toothed “sarlacc” monster on the desert planet of Tatooine — in “Return of the Jedi” (1983). He then appeared in George Lucas’s much-maligned prequel trilogy, and his story is picked up in the animated television series “Star Wars: The Clone Wars.” He turns up, apparently having survived his scrape with death on Tatooine, in much of the “Star Wars Legends” fan fiction which is no longer considered canon. “Some sources close to the project stress that the Boba Fett movie is in development, and not yet greenlit or dated. As they have before, things could always change,” Entertainment Weekly said. Josh Trank (“Fantastic Four”) was developing a Boba Fett spinoff in 2015, but dropped out, citing the enormous pressures of being involved with the franchise.

Disney-owned production company Lucasfilm reportedly has several other “Star Wars” projects in the pipeline, including an origin story on Luke Skywalker’s mentor Obi-Wan Kenobi, with Stephen Daldry (“Billy Elliot,” “The Crown”) in talks to direct. The studio has not made any official announcement on release dates for the Boba Fett movie or the other projects and didn’t respond to a request for comment. —AFP

Lyon blow Wolfsburg away in extra time to retain Champions League title

KIEV — A stunning burst of goals in extra time allowed Lyon to come from behind and beat Wolfsburg 4-1 as the French side made history by winning a third straight women’s Champions League title on Thursday.

Amandine Henry, Eugenie Le Sommer and Ada Hegerberg all scored in a crazy first period of extra time to stun Wolfsburg, and substitute Camille Abily later made sure of the victory.

The German champions had taken a 93rd-minute lead courtesy of their Danish star Pernille Harder, only for influential midfielder Alexandra Popp to be sent off almost immediately after.

Lyon are the first side ever to lift the women’s trophy three years running, and also set a new record by winning the tournament for the fifth time overall.

All of those titles have come since 2011, and the dominant side in the European game overtook Frankfurt’s record of four titles.

It has already been a glorious first season at the helm for coach Reynald Pedros, with Lyon having won a 12th consecutive French league crown — they can still make it a treble with the French Cup final to come against Paris Saint-Germain.

The extra-time drama came after a tense 90 minutes in the third final confrontation between these two sides in six seasons.

In 2013, Wolfsburg triumphed 1-0 in London for their first back-to-back Champions League titles. Lyon gained their revenge in 2016, emerging victorious in a penalty shoot-out. This encounter was watched by a crowd of more than 14,000 in the leafy setting of Kiev’s Valeriy Lobanovskyi Dynamo Stadium, just 48 hours before Real Madrid and Liverpool clash in the men’s final across the Ukrainian capital.

Lyon have almost become the women’s equivalent of Real, with the Spanish side also going for a third successive Champions League crown on Saturday.

Yet after needing penalties to beat the same opponents two years ago, and against PSG last year, it looked like Lyon might be taken all the way once again.

They had enjoyed the better of the chances in normal time, but then fell behind as the game opened up completely in extra time.
