Myanmar Port Authority advises safe distance between two piers of Yangon-Dala Bridge

By May Thet Hnin

MYANMA Port Authority is not opposed to the Yangon-Dala Bridge construction project, but has just requested the extension of the middle piers for the safety of vessel manoeuvring: U Ni Aung, Managing Director of Myanmar Port Authority.

The Myanmar Port Authority has requested the construction ministry to keep a safe distance between the two piers in the middle of Yangon-Dala Bridge to avoid a possible ship collision and other accidents.

“Those important areas for the construction project are close to the confluence of the three rivers, and so, it is vulnerable to collision. This being so, we have asked the ministry to widen the gap between the two piers and to keep them close to each other. This does not mean that we object to the bridge's construction. We suggested this to the Ministry of Construction to facilitate port handling,” said U Ni Aung, Managing Director of Myanmar Port Authority.

The Ministry of Construction responded that the bridge-tunnel will maximise the cost. If the bridge height is 60 metres, it would be steep, and it will not ensure traffic safety.

The multi-stakeholders in the project agreed to set a height of 49 metres. Currently, the distance between the two piers is only 251 metres. A series of discussions are being made regarding the distance between the two piers.

The construction of the bridge will help enhance the socio-economy of the regions. Ports have been playing a vital role to facilitate the export/import business sectors. The degradation of the Yangon river navigation channel and enhancing of the port facility and activity will also enhance the country’s export sector.

About 60 ships, including 15 container ships, might pass under the bridge every day. Therefore, it is vulnerable to ship collision, said U Ni Aung.

The proposed location of the bridge construction is near Twantay canal, which sees many types of ships such as general cargo vessels, container vessels, coastal ships, inland water barges, and fishing boats, among others. It is prone to collision.

“We requested the authorities to consider the possibilities of collision prior to the completion of the bridge construction. We will also take prevention and precautionary measures if the project is implemented according to the initial plan,” said U Ni Aung.

The Myanmar Port Authority has planned to procure an additional nine, 5,000-HP tug boats to ensure the safe manoeuvring of the vessels along the Yangon river. Currently, they have been assisting the vessels with five tug boats with moderate engine power.

The Yangon-Dala Bridge is a friendship bridge between Myanmar and Republic of Korea. The project kicked off in February 2016 and is slated to be completed in 2020. The ground breaking ceremony was held. The demolishing of the project area, capitalization to the landlords and the rehabilitation works are being carried out.

The four-lane bridge will be 1,900 feet long. It is funded by the South Korea and Myanmar governments, bringing in over US$137 million by South Korea and over $30 million by Myanmar’s government.

MFF to submit complaint of illegal bran, unpurified rice exports

May Thet Hnin

THE Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF) will submit a complaint about illegal bran and unpurified rice exports after compiling the facts, said U Win Kyaiang, secretary of MFF.

Bran, paddy and unpurified rice are not allowed to be exported but illegitimate exports have been reported in the market. This being so, the MFF is investigating illegal trade, after compiling the lists. “Unpurified rice includes bran. Some export a mixture of husk and bran to China,” said U Win Kyaiang.

“Region and state fisheries federations are inspecting this, and they have been asked to submit the complaints not later than 21 June to the MFF,” he maintained.

Last year, it was reported that China had purchased paddy, and MFF submitted this case to the government. The commerce ministry responded by taking action against the exporters.

By-products such as husk, bran, broken rice, sesame oil cake and soybean cake, among others, can be used as aquatic feedstuff for the fish farming industry. China’s purchase results in shortage and high price of the feed, said Dr Thet Hmu, from the Myanmar Aqua Feed Association.

“Agro by-products play a crucial role in the livestock industry. It can harm livestock businessmen. As a consequence, prices will soar. It will also affect the consumers. Therefore, we urge the union and the regional governments to ensure law-enforcement in this case,” said U Win Kyaiang.

The MFF has already submitted a report to the Myanmar Livestock Federation (MLF). They will team up with the MLF to compile the complaints.

The limestone mountain has an area of 36.8 square kilometres and houses 511.13 million tonnes of limestone.

During his visit in May, Vice President U Henry Van Thio urged the local authorities to pay attention to minimising the environmental impacts when the factory is established.

He also urged the local authorities to promote community-based tourism businesses and the agricultural sector, as the agricultural products of Chin State are free of chemicals.

Gov’t eyes promoting tourism through PPP

Citing the example of the ASEAN region travel business development, he noted that international tourist arrivals to the ASEAN region were 115 million in 2016 and 125 million in 2017. There was an 8.4 per cent increase from 2016 to 2017. Of the arrivals, up to 42 per cent was intra-ASEAN travel. Therefore, more efforts must be made to attract intra-ASEAN travellers to Myanmar, said the vice president.

Among the eastern countries, tourists from China, Japan, South Korea and Thailand make up for the top arrivals in Myanmar, while from the west, the top countries were the United States, France, Britain and Germany. “We now need to target the countries with the largest numbers,” he said.

Participation in international travel events plays an important role. Having sufficient funds to participate in such events is also a requirement. As the government was developing all the sectors, it had difficulties in allocating sufficient funds for the travel sector development. The private sector was urged to cooperate and coordinate among themselves for the development of the travel sector.

All the countries in the world were making arrangements to make it easier for visitors to visit their countries through ports, airports, and over the land border by relaxing visa requirements such as reducing visa fees or permitting visa-free entry. At the moment, the entry from European countries was not substantial, but an arrangement to relax the visa requirements to increase visitors from the ASEAN+3 countries of Japan, China and Republic of Korea is being made.

More market promotions must be conducted and international advertisements need to be made for the world to know the country as a travel destination. On the other hand, our hotel and transport rate should not be above the international rates and the service provided should be value-for-money to the visitors.

It was important to have regular visitors and raise the quality of the travel destinations. When new travel destinations were being created, care should be taken to retain our culture and natural resources. When there were more destinations that were attractive and offer much to study and visit, more people would come, stay longer and spend more, he said.

A sustainable travel business was a lucrative business and care should be taken to maintain the peace and stability in the country, as well as the safety of the international travellers. If safety and security were prioritized, it would hinder development, and if the business is prioritized, unnecessary problems could occur. Therefore, arrangements needed to be made and implemented to ensure a balanced development, he stated. All were urged to discuss openly and suggest systematic and realistic programmes for the development of the Myanmar travel destination, and for international and local visitors to visit the country in a better and enjoyable way.

Next, Vice President U Henry Van Thio was presented with a Myanmar Tourism Conference 2018 commemorative gift by Union Minister for Hotels and Tourism U Ohn Maung.

Later, U Henry Van Thio took commemorative group photographs with former President U Htin Kyaw and wife and the attendees at the ceremony.

Following this, the vice president and his delegation viewed travel photographs displayed in international tourism events.

Next, the Myanmar tourism Conference 2018 programmes were continued. The conference was held with the aim to include travel business in the priority economic policy of the state, to showcase the importance of the travel sector, raise and maintain the image of Myanmar, maintain the culture and traditions of the ethnic nationals in the states, protect and conserve the natural environment and share the opportunities in the travel sector with the people.

Everyone should understand complexity of Rakhine issue

T HE Union Government’s firm conviction is that issues of border security and the rule of law between two neighboring countries is an unavoidable issue. The Rakhine issue is complicated, it is not right for the international community to judge or interpret the situation in Rakhine State. The resolution is not in keeping with the needs of both communities.

We do not feel it was in keeping with the needs of the region in which the government is trying to establish harmony and understanding. Brexit law faces crucial UK parliament vote

LONDON — British Prime Minister Theresa May faces a knife-edge vote in parliament on Tuesday on her centrepiece Brexit legislation, despite her last-minute warning that defeat risks undermining her negotiations with Brussels.

MPs in the lower House of Commons will vote on a raft of amendments produced by the upper House of Lords, including one at around 1500 GMT that would give parliament an effective veto over Brexit.

Just hours before the vote, the pressure on May cranked up when a pro-EU junior minister quit the government so he could back the veto proposal.

Philip Lee said a choice between “bad and worse” options was not giving MPs a meaningful vote.

Other flashpoints in the parliamentary votes include proposals to keep Britain tightly aligned with the EU’s economy. May has said a government defeat would weaken its hand in exit talks with the EU.

“We must think about the message parliament will send to the European Union this week,” May told MPs in her centre-right Conservative Party late Monday.

The front pages of Leave-backing British newspapers said accepting the amendments would betray the 52 per cent who backed Brexit in the 2016 referendum.

The Daily Express featured the British flag as its front page with the headline: “Ignore the will of the people at your peril.”

“The time has come for our elected representatives to decide — are you or are you not the servants of the people?”

The Sun had a front page of British ions including Stonehenge, a fish and chip shop, a London bus and a football, saying “Great Britain or Great Brexit.”

“ Remain MPs have a simple choice: trust the people of Great Britain... or trigger a shameful betrayal.”

May’s minority Conservative government relies on the support of Northern Ireland’s Democratic Unionist Party for a slender working majority in the 650-member Commons.

“I am trying to negotiate the best deal for Britain. I am confident I can get a deal that allows us to strike our own trade deals while having a border with the EU which is as frictionless as possible,” she said.

“But if the Lords amendments are allowed to stand, that negotiating position will be undermined.”

No deal scenario

The EU (Withdrawal) Bill is the draft law that would set the legal framework for Brexit and May is worried about the prospect of a rebellion by pro-EU Conservative MPs keen to retain the changes.

Some europhile Conservatives were reported to be backing away, worried that if May was fatally damaged by defeat, it could open the way for a hardline Brexiteer to take over the party and thereby the premiership.

Attention has focused on Tuesday on the so-called “meaningful vote” amendment, which would give parliament the power to decide what to do if it rejects the final Brexit deal.

Lee resigned from the Ministry of Justice to back the amendment, saying parliament should be able to direct the government to change course.

“I cannot support the government’s decision to oppose this amendment because doing so breaches such fundamental principles of human rights and parliamentary sovereignty,” he said.

“A vote between bad and worse is not a meaningful vote.”

Former attorney general Dominic Grieve, a leading pro-EU rebel, has put down a compromise amendment on the meaningful vote, calling for a binding motion to be passed by the Commons setting out how to proceed in the event of a “no deal” Brexit.

“A meaningful vote is not the ability to reverse the decision of the referendum,” Brexit Secretary David Davis told BBC radio.

“The end of March 2019, we leave the EU — full stop.”

On Wednesday, one amendment on joining the European Economic Area — the single market — will likely fall because the main opposition Labour Party is against it.

“One Labour will only vote for a final Brexit deal if it delivers a strong relationship with the single market based on full tariff-free access and ensures no loss of rights and standards,” Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn said on Facebook.—AFP

Hands of the world

SINGAPORE — Donald Trump’s handshake with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in Singapore on Tuesday marked a historic moment — the first meeting ever between a sitting US president and the leader of North Korea.

The US president’s often-awkward handshakes with world leaders have sparked ridicule but many hope the one with Kim — the culmination of months of diplomatic drama — will lead to durable peace on the Korean peninsula.

Here are some other handshakes that shook the world.

On 27 April, 2018, as the world held its breath, Kim Jong Un and Moon Jae-in reached across the Military Demarcation Line that divides the two Koreas and shook hands, the result of a remarkable thaw on the peninsula sparked by the Winter Olympics earlier this year.

Kim then stepped over the border for a summit with the South Korean president, making him the first leader from Pyongyang to set foot in the South since the Korean War ended in an armistice 65 years ago.

The two leaders agreed to pursue permanent peace and the complete denuclearisation of the divided Korean peninsula.

At a memorial service for Nelson Mandela on 10 December, 2013, US President Barack Obama made headlines when he shook hands with Cuba’s Raul Castro, the first such public greeting between leaders of the bitter neighbours after decades of enmity.

Within months there was a rapid thaw. Full diplomatic relations were restored in July 2015, followed by once-unthinkable steps to mend ties.

Obama visited Cuba in 2016 — the first such trip by an American president in 88 years.

Washington also relaxed its decades-long embargo on the communist-ruled island, and US airlines resumed direct flights to Havana in November 2016.

N Ireland: Elizabeth II-McGuinness (2012)

In a landmark moment in the Northern Ireland peace process, Britain’s Queen Elizabeth II met Martin McGuinness, a former top commander in the paramilitary Irish Republican Army during the many years of bloody hostilities with British forces.

The IRA wanted an end to British rule in the province, and for it to be merged with the Republic of Ireland. McGuinness later became one of the figures that helped negotiate an end to the violence.

Then a deputy first minister of Northern Ireland, McGuinness shook hands with the Queen during her 27 June, 2012 visit to the province.

It was a gesture towards reconciliation that would once have been unimaginable, with McGuinness’ militant past and British security operations still a source of anger for many.

Israel, Palestinians: Arafat-Rabin (1993)

After months of secret negotiations in Norway, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat shook in the South Lawn of the White House on 13 September, 1993 to witness the signing of the Oslo Accords.

And then, in one of the most dramatic moments in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, with US president Bill Clinton’s arms stretched around both leaders, Arafat and Rabin shook hands.

The abortive process granted autonomy to the occupied Palestinian territories without creating a separate state.

Rabin was assassinated two years later by a Jewish extremist opposed to the peace process, which faltered in the years that followed.

Egypt, Israel: Sadat-Begin (1977)

In what is widely considered a major turning point in the recent history of the Middle East, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Israel on 19 November, 1977 on a historic visit — the first by an Arab head of state to the Jewish nation.

Images of Sadat shaking hands with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin during the visit were transmitted around the world. The visit led to the first Arab-Israeli peace treaty and the formal end to the state of war that had existed between the two countries for 30 years.

Sadat paid for it with his life: he was assassinated by Islamists in 1981. — AFP
Paris suburban train overtops in landslide

PARIS (France) — A suburban train overturned outside Paris on Tuesday after days of downpours caused an embankment to collapse, slightly injuring seven people including a pregnant woman.

The accident happened just before 5am (0900 GMT) as the RER commuter train was heading for Paris between Saint-Remy-les-Chevreuse and Courcellesur-Yvette, southwest of the French capital.

A spokesman for Paris transport operator RATP said heavy rains caused the collapse of an embankment which led three carriages to derail and tip over.

The line has been closed. "Fortunately, there are only seven slightly injured," Transport Minister Elisabeth Borne told Frenchinfo radio.

France has been battered by strong rains and winds for several weeks, with around half of the country under an orange storm warning until at least Wednesday morning.

"Wednesday should mark the end of hostilities to some extent," national forecaster Meteo France joked. Last week four people were killed in flooding that has caused widespread damage.

Weather monitors counted 180,000 lightning strikes in France last month — triple the 60,000 average.

The flood warnings mostly affect the northern half of the country, and several major roads in the Paris region were closed due to flooding Tuesday.

"The Catholic pilgrimage site of Lourdes in southwest France has warned it is near the point of flooding due to the swelling of the neighbouring Gave du Pau river.

The site has been forced to shut the pools where pilgrims — often sick people praying for a cure — usually bathe.

In the northwest, the city of Nantes is seeing its wettest June on record with 138 millimetres (5.5 inches) of rain so far, according to Meteo France.

The 10-century abbey at Chancelade in the southern Dordogne region has also been ravaged by flooding.

EU tensions flare over migrants as Macron blasts Italy

PARIS — French President Emmanuel Macron on Tuesday accused Italy of "cynicism and irresponsibility" over its refusal to take in hundreds of migrants stranded on a rescue ship in the Mediterranean.

Macron told a cabinet meeting that under maritime law, "in cases of distress, those with the closest coastline have a responsibility to respond," spokesman Benjamin Griveaux said.

"If a boat had France as its closest coast, it could land," Griveaux said. "France has done its bit, but what is unacceptable is the behaviour and political instrumentalisation of the Italian government."

Successful Italian governments have accused their European partners of leaving the country to cope on its own with an influx of 700,000 migrants from Africa since 2013.

But Griveaux accused the new far-right/populist government in Rome of lacking solidarity after it refused to allow the migrant rescue boat Aquarius to land with more than 600 people on board.

"You can't create a precedent that will enable one European country to offload onto other European countries," he continued. "We need to show solidarity which Italy has not shown."

The new Italian government has pledged to deport hundreds of thousands of people living in the country illegally and stop boats carrying migrants from landing on its shores.

Macron has faced criticism from some leftist opposition parties and members of his own Republic on the Move party earlier this month.

"We are a spokesman for the party, not the government, but I can't imagine that France will not play a role in finding a humanitarian solution for this boat," he said. — AFP

China urges 'full denuclearisation' as Kim-Trump meet

BEIJING — China on Tuesday praised the summit between US President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un as historic and called for “full denuclearisation” to resolve tensions on the Korean peninsula.

Beijing also suggested that the United Nations could consider easing sanctions if North Korea fulfils its obligations under resolutions that punished Pyongyang for its nuclear and missile tests.

The fact that the two leaders “can sit together and have equal talks has important and positive meaning, and is creating a new history,” Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi told reporters.

“The crux of the peninsula nuclear issue is a security issue. The most important, difficult part of this security issue is for the United States and North Korea to sit down to find a way to resolution via equal talks,” Wang said.

“Resolving the nuclear issue, on the one hand of course is denuclearisation, full denuclearisation. At the same time, there needs to be a peace mechanism for the peninsula, to resolve North Korea’s reasonable security concerns.”

Foreign ministry spokesman Geng Shuang called on the UN Security Council to “make efforts to support the current diplomatic dialogue, efforts to denuclearise the peninsula, and promoting the process of a political settlement of the Korean peninsula issue.”

Easing sanctions on Pyongyang, Geng implied, could be one area for the organisation to explore, noting that the “relevant resolutions” provided for the easing of the penalties “in accordance with the compliance of... (North Korea) and the development of the situation”.

Beijing is Pyongyang’s sole major ally and main trading partner, but it has backed the UN sanctions.

Despite tensions, the Cold War-era allies have sought to mend ties recently, and Kim borrowed an Air China plane to travel to the landmark summit in Singapore. —AFP

Singapore agreement will end Cold War, S Korea president says

SEOUL — South Korean President Moon Jae-in on Tuesday hailed the outcome of the summit between President Trump and the North’s leader Kim Jong Un as a “historic event” that ended the last Cold War conflict.

“I offer my heartfelt congratulations and welcome the success of the historic North Korea-United States summit”, Moon said in a statement.

“The 12 June Sentosa Agreement will be recorded as a historic event that has helped break down the last remaining Cold War legacy on Earth,” he said.

Moon has made great efforts playing the role of mediator to bring the Cold War foes back to dialogue.

He praised Trump and Kim for their “courage and determination” not to settle for “that outdated and familiar reality but to take a daring step towards change”.

He lionized Trump for achieving “a feat that no one else has ever delivered”, adding Kim would also be remembered as “a leader who made a historic moment by taking the first bold step toward the world”.

“Building upon the agreement reached today, we will take a new path going forward.

“Leaving dark days of war and conflict behind, we will write a new chapter of peace and cooperation. We will be there together with North Korea along the way”, he said.

Moon however cautioned that this was “just a beginning and there may be many difficulties ahead”.

“But we will never go back to the past again and never give up on this bold journey. History is a record of people who take action and rise to a challenge,” he added. —AFP

Malaysian king joins austerity drive with pay cut

KUALA LUMPUR — Malaysia’s king has thrown his weight behind the new government’s bid to slash massive debts inherited from the corruption-plagued old regime by taking a 10 per cent pay cut, royal officials said.

Sultan Muhammad V offered to reduce his salary after being touched by members of the public contributing out of their own pockets to a government fund to cut the debt, they said.

An alliance headed by Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad won a surprise election victory last month, outing the scandal-mired coalition that had ruled the country for six decades.

The new government says the country has debts of over one trillion ringgit ($250 billion) after years of misrule by an administration headed by ex-leader Najib Razak, who is accused of having stolen vast sums of public money while in office.

Najib denies any wrongdoing. The royal palace said late Monday that the king — a relatively youthful monarch at 48 — would be taking the cut from the money granted to him by the government until the end of his term in 2021, but did not say how much he earned.

The current king, known for his fondness for four-wheel driving and other extreme sports, has been on the throne since late 2016.

Malaysia is a constitutional monarchy, with an unique arrangement where the throne of the Muslim-majority nation changes hands every five years between rulers of the nine Malaysian states headed by centuries-old Islamic royalty.

Malaysians have so far contributed more than 56 million ringgit to the official fund set up to pay off the nation’s debts. —AFP

LOS ANGELES — Actor-activist Rose McGowan has defended celebrated chef Anthony Bourdain’s choice to commit suicide, saying taking one’s life may be a horrible choice but it is a personal one.

Bourdain, 61, died of suicide last week while he was in France filming an episode of his Emmy-winning CNN food and travel programme.

In a letter by McGowan, who penned the lengthy note on behalf of the globetrotting chef-writer’s girlfriend Asia Argento, the “Charmed” alum said people should not blame him or her friend for his suicide.

“I know so many around the world thought of Anthony Bourdain as a friend and when a friend dies, it hurts... Many of these people who lost their ‘friend’ are wanting to lash out and blame. You must not sink to that level. Suicide is a horrible choice, but it is that person’s choice,” she writes.

“Top Gun” star Val Kilmer had called Bourdain “selfish” for leaving his friends and fans alone in the world.

Talking about Argento’s relationship with the chef, the actor said it was “instant chemistry” between the two and how both of them supported each other through thick and thin.

“They laughed, they loved and he was her rock during the hardships of this last year. Anthony was open with his demons, he even wrote a book about them. In the beginning of their relationship, Anthony told a mutual friend, ‘He’s never met anyone who wanted to die more than him’. And through a lot of this last year, Asia did want the pain to stop,” McGowan writes.

But in the end, despite all the happiness the couple shared, Bourdain’s depression caught up with him.

“... Over their time together, thankfully, she did the work to get help, so she could stay alive and live another day for her and her children. Anthony’s depression didn’t let him, he put down his armor, and that was very much his choice. His decision, not hers. His depression won,” she adds.

She said despite belonging to “a strong man doesn’t ask for help” generation, the TV show star reached out for help and “yet he did not take the doctor’s advice”.

Priyanka Chopra, Nick Jonas’ plus one at his cousin’s wedding

LOS ANGELES — Priyanka Chopra and Nick Jonas continued to fuel relationship rumours after the actor appeared as the singer’s date for his cousin’s wedding.

They were photographed walking arm-in-arm at Jonas’s cousin’s nuptials near Atlantic City over the weekend, TMZ reported.

“The Quantico” star was wearing a gold dress, the “Jealous” hitmaker looked dapper in a suit with white sneakers, sans socks.

They were also snapped heading to the JFK Airport when they were travelling together for the wedding.

According to the sources, Jonas also introduced Chopra to his older brother Kevin and his wife Danielle.

The duo sparked dating speculations early this month.

Chopra, 35, and Jonas, 25, were photographed for the first time since reports of their alleged relationship went viral on the social media.

They have been spending a lot of time together lately and were seen enjoying multiple dates over Memorial Day weekend.

They first came together when they posed for photos on the red carpet together in Ralph Lauren designs at the 2017 Met Gala.

Chopra and Jonas are yet to comment on their relationship status.

But in the end, despite all the happiness the couple shared, Bourdain’s depression caught up with him.

“... Over their time together, thankfully, she did the work to get help, so she could stay alive and live another day for her and her children. Anthony’s depression didn’t let him, he put down his armor, and that was very much his choice. His decision, not hers. His depression won,” she adds.

She said despite belonging to “a strong man doesn’t ask for help” generation, the TV show star reached out for help and “yet he did not take the doctor’s advice”.
SINGAPORE — Donald Trump and Kim Jong Un hailed their historic summit on Tuesday as a breakthrough in relations between Cold War foes, but the agreement they produced contained few details about the key issue of Pyongyang’s nuclear weapons.

The extraordinary and unprecedented encounter in Singapore saw the leader of the world’s most powerful democracy shake hands with the third generation scion of a dynastic dictatorship, standing as equals in front of their nations’ flags.

Kim agreed to the “complete denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula”, a stock phrase favoured by Pyongyang that stopped short of long-standing US demands for North Korea to give up its atomic arsenal in a “verifiable” and “irreversible” way.

And in a blockbuster press conference after the summit, Trump said the US would halt military exercises with Seoul — something long sought by Pyongyang, which claims the drills are a rehearsal for invasion.

With Pyongyang having declared a moratorium on weapons testing on the grounds its neighbour, which invaded in 1950 in an attempt to reunify the peninsula by force, the US stations around 30,000 troops in security ally South Korea to protect it from the North — something long sought by Pyongyang, which claims the drills are a rehearsal for invasion.

The Singapore summit was a potentially legacy-defining meeting for both men — comparable to president Richard Nixon’s 1972 visit to China, or Ronald Reagan’s 1986 summit with Mikhail Gorbachev in Reykjavik.

Both Seoul and US military commanders in the South indicated they had no idea the announcement was coming, and analysts expressed immediate concern.

Endling the drills “is in excess of all expert consensus, South Korean requests, and even a close reading of North Korean demands”, said Adam Mount of the Federation of American Scientists.

All smiles

The Singapore summit was a potentially legacy-defining meeting for both men — comparable to president Richard Nixon’s 1972 visit to China, or Ronald Reagan’s 1986 summit with Mikhail Gorbachev in Reykjavik.

But many agreements have been made in the past with North Korea that have later fallen apart, and ahead of the meeting, critics expressed concerns that it risked being more about headlines than substantive progress.

It also legitimised Kim, whose regime stands accused of widespread human rights abuses, critics charged.

In the event, the two leaders showered each other with compliments in the sumptuous setting of a luxury Singapore hotel, a marked contrast from their previous rounds of mutual insults, such as “mentally deranged” and “little rocket man”.

Trump said he had formed a “special bond” with Kim, whom he described as “very talented”. As well as abuses at home, Kim is also suspected of ordering the assassination of his brother at a Malaysian airport last year.

After a day filled with smiles and handshakes watched around the world, the US “committed to provide security guarantees” to North Korea, while Pyongyang committed to “work towards” denuclearising the Korean peninsula.

We’ll meet again

“We’ll meet again,” Trump said after the signing ceremony, standing with Kim on the veranda where they first met. “We will meet many times.”

He “absolutely” would be willing to invite Kim to the White House, and would do so when the time was right, he added.

For his part, Kim — who made headlines the evening before the summit with an overnight visit to major tourist sites — said the two Cold War foes had vowed to “leave the past behind”, pledging “the world will see a major change”.

Abraham Denmark of the Wilson Centre in Washington tweeted: “It seems Kim got a huge propaganda win and a metric ton of legitimacy, and the US gave up joint exercises, for little new and nothing in return.”

But he added: “The silver lining is that dialogue will continue, and where there is diplomacy there is hope.”—AFP

Messi the star attraction as Banega trains apart

BRONNITSY (Russia) — Around 400 eager fans turned out at Argentina’s World Cup base camp to catch a glimpse of Lionel Messi and his teammates at an open training session.

A particularly affectionate welcome was reserved for the Barcelona forward, as horde of adoring young supporters chanted “Messi, Messi” on his way out for an hour-long practice on Monday.

After several days of chilly temperatures in the Russian capital, overcast skies gave way to sunshine, with excited locals packing a temporary stand in Bronnitsy, southeast of Moscow, to follow the action.

Injury had already struck Argentina on the eve of their departure for the tournament, with West Ham midfielder Manuel Lanzini ruled out with a serious knee injury.

Enzo Perez was summoned as a replacement for Lanzini, although the status of Ever Banega for Argentina’s first group game against Iceland on June 16 remains uncertain after the Sevilla midfielder trained alone.

The odd Messi mask was spotted in the crowd, while others waved Barcelona flags, as well as those of Argentina.

The five-time Ballon d’Or winner was then mobbed by dozens of youngsters at the end of the session as players stopped to sign autographs.

Ernesto Lagorio, Argentina’s ambassador to Russia, was at the session at the sprawling training centre, used by several Russian national sports teams, on the banks of the River Moscow. “We came to see our national team, it’s the first acquaintance with them, it’s been great,” Lagorio told AFP.

“We’ve already been to Bronnitsy several times, we’ve worked a lot with the authorities and the mayor. He’s helped us a lot, it’s been in the works for several months.” Asked whether he would be attending matches, he replied: “I hope to show up until the final match in July.”—AFP

Chinese companies win commercial rights to 2021-28 AFC tournaments

BEIJING — The Asian Football Confederation (AFC) has entered into an agreement with China’s DDMC Sports International Ltd and Fortis Sports AG for the AFC’s commercial rights, according to the AFC official website on Tuesday.

The contract covers all the 2021-2028 games including the Asian Cup, World Cup qualification in Asia and the AFC Champions League. DDMC is a Chinese listed company whose businesses cover culture, sports and entertainment.

“The new rights agreement will now secure the financial future of our member associations as well as help the AFC further enhance our competitions and development programs,” the AFC President Sheikh Salman Bin Ibrahim Al-Khailfa said.

“It’s the first time that Chinese companies dominate the world’s top sports (intellectual property) IP exclusive media rights and business interests development,” Yi Rentao, chairman of DDMC, said.

Sheikh Salman also reflected on the progress that has been made by Asian football, thanks to the unity of purpose that has existed in the game during the last five years.

He went on to say that with the tournament being played in Russia, it’s an important time for AFC teams to show what they are capable of, especially Saudi Arabia, who will face hosts Russia in the World Cup opener.

“Asian football has made and continues to make giant strides.

With this new commercial rights deal, Asian football will stand proud on the world stage as the continent becomes the focal point for the global game,” Sheikh Salman added. —Xinhua
