Congress looks at ways to help women facing hardships

THE Nationwide Women's Work Committees Congress continued yesterday in Nay Pyi Taw, with the means to address the hardships of women in Myanmar as part of its agenda.

At the congress, held by the National League for Democracy, Central Women Work Committee Chair Dr May Win Myint invited reports from the Myanmar womenfolk about their hardships and requirements, as the work committees at different levels were always ready to offer any legal or social help.

The work committees will discuss means to help solve the hardships of women, she said, and added that women's work committees have already been formed at all levels from the region and state levels to the ward and village levels. The congress serves as a forum for the systematic harmonisation of the office functions and procedures of the bodies, she said. Speakers, including U Ye Min Oo, Central Information Committee member, gave talks on office management, Daw Khin Thanda Min (a female writer) on the development of speaking skills, and MP of Amyotha Hluttaw U Aung Kyi Nyunt on the policy and rules of the party after the work committee members read out the reports. The congress continues today at the Myanmar International Convention Centre II (MICCID).—MNA

Public to be permitted to visit first floor of Bogyoke Aung San Museum after Martyrs’ Day

THE public will not be allowed to visit the first floor of the Bogyoke Aung San Museum on Martyrs’ Day, which falls on 19 July, as the historic house cannot withstand the crowds expected on the day.

“ Myanmar Engineering Association suggested that crowds should not be allowed inside the Bogyoke Aung San Museum, following an inspection conducted by engineers from the association. They said that the historic displays on the first floor should be screened on an LED board in the compound of the house,” said Union Minister for Religious Affairs and Culture Thura U Aung Ko on Saturday.

However, the public will be permitted to visit the first floor of the museum after Martyrs’ Day. As the building was built only for the family of Bogyoke Aung San and the building is already 97 years old, the first floor was found structurally weak to support a large number of visitors.

On one single day during last year’s 70th Anniversary of Martyrs’ Day, there were 72,268 visitors and such large number would be too much for the structure to bear. As suggested day of the Myanmar Engineering Association, only the ground floor of the museum will be opened to the public during this year’s Martyrs’ Day period, and the displays on the first floor will be shown through an LED board in the compound instead.

Bogyoke Aung San Museum has seen an increase in number of visitors on Martyrs’ Day every year.

Sangyoung pedestrian bridge nearly complete

A pedestrian bridge being built near the Pyay Road, in front of No.2, Basic Education High School in Sangyoung Township, Yangon, is 86 per cent complete.

Construction of the pedestrian bridge began on 1 March and is scheduled to be open to the public in September. The 91 ft long, 20 ft high bridge has 10 ft wide pedestrian walkway. Two escalators will be installed on each side of the bridge, said Ko Myo Thant Aung, the in-charge of the construction company.

Previously, the area where the pedestrian bridge is being constructed is crowded with vehicles and is a dangerous place for passers-by. Upon completion of the bridge, not only residents in Sangyoung but also pedestrians who use the Pyay Road will be able to cross the street safely.

Only working in unison can benefit all

If you wish for the country to be developed and prosperous, all of the country’s resources — financial, natural and human — have to be used together for the equal development of all races.

If the Bamar does what it wants, if the Kachin does what it wants, if the Shan, Kachin and Chin do not all cooperate, there will be no benefits for anyone. Only when you try working in unison will you know its benefits.

Slow business at Monywa poultry farming special zone

THE number of poultry breeders has gone down after the second outbreak of H9N2 in 2016 at the poultry farming special zone near Kyauk-sittauk Village in Monywa Township, Sagaing Region.

The H9N2 avian influenza virus hit a poultry farming zone in Monywa for two consecutive years. Moreover, the inability to invest is also a reason for the decline in the number of poultry farmers. Only breeders who love to raise poultry chickens and those who are working on a manageable scale are still involved in the poultry farming business, said U Nyunt Shwe, chair of Monywa poultry farming special zone supervision committee.

Eggs produced at 110 farms owned by 56 poultry farmers operating in the Monywa poultry farming special zone are sent to Monywa depot. One egg fetches Ks 100. Even the current poultry farmers are struggling to keep operating their businesses. Biosecurity should be regularly practiced to prevent the spread of H9N2.

Those who are engaged in the whole supply chain in the Monywa poultry farming zone need to put forth concerted efforts, said Dr Ei Ei Aung, head of Monywa Township Livestock Breeding and Veterinary Department.

Of the over 400 farms at the Monywa poultry farming zone, only 110 farms with around 50,000 chickens are producing eggs.—Wio Oo (Zeyartine)

CCTV installed in major areas in Mandalay

CLOSED-CIRCUIT televisions have been installed in major areas of Mandalay, said Mandalay Mayor Dr. Ye Lwin.

In order to reduce traffic violations and have motorists follow the rules of the road, the CCTVs were employed.

“CCTVs will be used at traffic lights and the cameras will automatically capture vehicles running red lights and immediately send the recorded video to the Road Transport Administration Department (RTAD). The software the CCTVs use has an alarm system built into it which will act as a warning device for vehicles that may potentially commit a traffic violation” he added. If there are vehicle accidents where CCTVs are located, the recorded video can determine who is at fault. This will make any legal action easier to negotiate.

“Cameras have been equipped in six major areas throughout Mandalay. The RTAD will receive all video records. In addition, there are road signs telling motorists to slow down at approaching intersections, pictorial signs that tell motorists to yield to all pedestrians and various other road signs that drivers must abide by. I don’t like to see road and traffic signs knocked down by reckless drivers or intentionally vandalized by hooligans”, said a dean of the Department of Building and Central Stores from Mandalay City Development Committee.

A total of 117 CCTVs have been installed at 32 traffic lights which use the SCATS system. “There are over 100 people and who were involved in accidents and who wanted to review the recorded video. However, only 50 people had access to the recorded video of their accident. It’s easier for people to view CCTV records if they can recall the exact time and location of the accident they were involved in. Those who want access to CCTV video records must fill out an application form”, said an official from Central Traffic Control. The installed CCTVs are full HD and operate 24/7. When power cuts occur, the cameras will use a UPS backup system.—Myanmar Digital News

Search attempts for missing Thai children continue in Myanmar side

A search operation for missing thirteen Thai children who are believed to be trapped in Tham Luang Cave in Chiang Rai near Myanmar-Thailand border in Mae Sai continued for the third day in some caves in Tachilek Township, Shan State, in Myanmar on 30 June.

The Myanmar government has already instructed the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Shan State government to join with Thai authorities in search for the missing group. The missing children aged between 11 and 16 led by their 25 years old coach, went missing after they entered the Tham Luang Cave in Mae Sai on 23 June.

Thai authorities requested Myanmar officials to participate in the search and rescue attempts as they believed that the missing youths may still be trapped in the cave. Under the supervision of the district/township management committee, a Myanmar rescue team consisting of firefighters, policemen, members of the Myanmar Red Cross Society, social organizations and local authorities started the search and rescue activities on 28 June in some caves in Tachilek but no one has been found. Four dead, hundreds evacuated as torrential rains hit Romania

BUCHAREST (Romania) — Days of torrential rains in Romania have claimed four lives and forced more than 250 people to flee their homes, local authorities said Sunday.

High waters swept away two men and a woman, while a fourth person was crushed when flooding caused her home to collapse.

An embankment gave way in the hard-hit central Covasna region, swamping several villages including Bacel and Lunca Marcusului.

“Firefighters and paramilitary police have been deployed,” said emergency situations spokesman Marius Tolvaj. “Work is ongoing to rebuild the dike so that we can empty the water from the flooded houses.”

More than 250 area residents have fled the rising waters, he said.

Swift excavation underway to rescue boys, coach trapped inside cave

SEARCH teams are now planning a swift excavation programme for 12 youngsters and their coach, who are trapped in ThamLuang Nang Non cave, amidst their continuous search operations inside the cave complex in Mae Sai, Thailand.

They are practising a swift excavation programme involving helicopters and first aid treatments.

Moreover, oxygen tanks have been installed at 25-metre junctures for divers to use, and a water pumping machine has also been deployed. Authorities, in cooperation with social organisations, are laying rocks at the portal and inside the cave as a way of facilitating transport.

For now, divers continue to work at the mouth of the cave, and drilling is underway at several points inside the cave complex, primarily to relieve the flooding.

At the press meet held in connection with the incident, the Chiang Rai province governor explained the search and rescue plans.

The boys, all from the Wild Boars soccer team and aged 11 to 16, have been missing together with the coach since 23 June when a park officer spotted bicycles at the entrance of the off-limits cave complex.

China speeds up price reduction on cancer drugs

BELIJNG — In a bid to reduce the price of cancer drugs, China has included 15 more clinically effective yet expensive cancer medicines into its list of medical insurance reimbursement, according to China’s state medical insurance administration.

The list currently covers a majority of the most frequently used and clinically effective cancer drugs, the administration said.

China has exempted all cancer drugs from import tariffs since May 1, as a move to further open the market to boost their accessibility.

However, since drug inventory imported before May 1 has not been affected by the new tariff policy, prices of imported cancer drugs have not experienced a substantial decline in the short term.

The administration said it will cut the price of cancer drugs on the list via public bidding and procurement.

Medical insurance institutions will negotiate with pharmaceutical enterprises to add cancer drugs into the system that are currently not on the list.

Since 2016, the government has reached agreements with pharmaceutical companies on the prices of 39 drugs — including 17 cancer medicines — on the medical insurance list, with drug prices marked down by over 50 percent on average.

War on plastic leaves manufacturers clutching at straws

PARIS — For decades, plastic straws have been essential props for cocktails lovers, smoothie lovers and fast food addicts.

But that may be starting to change, thanks largely to vigorous environmental campaigning.

Under pressure from activists, the European Union, Britain, India and even fast food giants like McDonald’s have all made some headway towards bringing the use of plastic straws to an end.

And with public pressure growing on governments, particularly in Europe, to ban single use plastics, manufacturers are feeling the heat.

According to peer-reviewed US journal Science magazine, eight million tonnes of plastic are dumped into the Earth’s oceans and seas each year — 250 kilograms (550 pounds) every second.

For years, the focus of environmentalists has been on plastic bags. But plastic straws have now come into the spotlight, thanks in part to images that have gone viral on the internet.

One online video about the danger posed by seemingly innocuous straws shows a sea turtle rescued off Costa Rica getting one removed from its nostril.

Baby steps

The British government in April said it planned to ban the sale of single-use plastics including straws. The European Union followed suit in late May.

In India’s commercial capital Mumbai, Burger King, McDonald’s and Starbucks were fined for violating a ban on single use plastics, an official said earlier in June.

India’s Prime Minister Narendra Modi has pledged to make his country free of single use plastic by 2022. Some corporations are also taking steps.

In the UK and Ireland, McDonald’s has pledged to complete a transition to paper straws by 2019. In France, the burger giant is testing alternatives.

In the UK and Ireland, McDonald’s has pledged to complete a transition to paper straws by 2019. In France, the burger giant is testing alternatives.

The Hilton hotel giant in May vowed to remove the offenders from its 650 properties by the end of 2018. “Laid end to end, the straws saved each year in (Europe, the Middle East and Africa) would exceed the length of the River Seine,” the hotel chain said in a statement.

Pasta and bamboo sticks

There are alternatives to plastic straws, but they are much pricier. The five-star Monte Carlo Palace hotel in Monaco has introduced biodegradable straws.

Others are using raw pasta and bamboo sticks. The United States is resisting change while Europe takes the lead with biodegradable plastics made either from fossil fuels or crops such as potatoes and corn.—AFP

‘Livid’ UK minister tears up PM May’s favoured Brexit customs plan

LONDON — Britain’s Environment Secretary Michael Gove ripped up plans for possible future customs arrangements with the EU, according to reports on Saturday, as tensions within the cabinet over Brexit continue to surface.

Gove was reportedly “livid” and tore up the papers detailing Prime Minister Theresa May’s preferred option for a future customs partnership with the European Union, after concluding his concerns about the proposals had been downplayed, the reports said.

Gove, a leading proponent of Brexit, “physically ripped it up to show he wasn’t prepared to accept the document as a summary of their discussions,” The Sun newspaper reported.

The account of the incident was later confirmed by the BBC, citing aides to the minister.

May will gather together her warring ministers for a key Brexit summit on Friday to thrash out Britain’s plans for issues including trade and customs after it leaves the EU next year, as pressure intensifies for them to agree to a unified stance.

The cabinet, which has been publicly disagreeing on various aspects of Brexit, is in deadlock over two options for customs arrangements after the 29 March, 2019 withdrawal date.

A “maximum facilitation” model proposes using trusted-trader arrangements and technology to avoid border checks, while a “customs partnership” system would see Britain collect tariffs on behalf of the EU for goods heading to the continent.

Two groups of cabinet members have been looking at each of the plans. Gove was reportedly among the ministers examining the partnership model, largely opposed by Brexiteers, and was reacting to a summary report of their supposed position on it prepared by civil servants.

European Union president Donald Tusk issued a “last call” on Friday for Britain to explain what it wants from Brexit, as the blue warned time was running out and stopped up preparations for the prospect of no deal.

The Independent newspaper said on Sunday EU leaders had given up hope of reaching an agreement by the next summit in October, as originally envisaged by both sides.

Meanwhile, in another blow to May’s authority, the Daily Telegraph reported new US National Security Advisor John Bolton bypassed Downing Street and held a secret meeting on Brexit with senior Conservative euro Skeptic lawmakers while in London last week. The aide to Donald Trump reportedly used the meeting to stress the US president’s enthusiasm for Britain’s withdrawal from the EU and his belief that the two countries can agree a trade deal within two years of its departure.

No government officials were present at the meeting, and Downing Street was not informed about it, the paper said.

Speculation is growing that Trump will decide to meet Tory Brexiteers privately when he visits Britain on 13 July, further undermining May, it added.

Downing Street declined to comment on the reports.

Italy’s far-right League holds conference in buoyant mood

ROME — Italy’s far-right League will begin its annual conference on Sunday with party head and hardline Interior Minister Matteo Salvini in triumphant mood after declaring the country’s ports closed to NGO migrant ships.

Salvini, attending his fifth party conference in the northern port of Pontida, said the League goes into its annual meeting “stronger and more organized than ever”.

Around 50,000 people from around Italy are expected to attend the event. Salvini, 45, who is co-deputy prime minister as well as interior minister, has thrived as the migrant issue has become central to the European agenda. He announced on Friday that Italian ports would be closed “all summer” to NGO ships which rescue migrants trying to cross the Mediterranean from Africa to Europe.

“The NGOs will only see Italy on a postcard,” Salvini quipped.

Anti-immigration hardliners accuse NGO rescue boats of exacerbating the situation in the Mediterranean, where migrants try to cross the sea on rickety boats.

‘Italians First’

The party’s strength “depends above all on the continuity of Matteo Salvini’s communication strategy in relation to the electoral campaign, a strategy based on a precise choice of sensitive topics in Europe, and also on his aggressive stance towards political leaders,” in particular President Emmanuel Macron of neighbouring France, the paper said. Last weekend Macron called for financial penalties to be levied against EU nations that refuse to accept migrants.

Salvini’s co-deputy prime minister and head of the anti-establishment Five Star Movement, Luigi Di Maio, has been eclipsed by the League’s leader:

Italy’s new anti-establishment government took power on 1 June, ending months of deadlock that saw the eurozone’s third largest economy narrowly avoid snap elections after a last-gasp coalition deal.

New Prime Minister Giuseppe Conte, 53, was sworn in at the head of the first populist government in an EU founding member, forged by the Five Star Movement and the far-right League. Salvini had taken the helm of the League in 2013, when it was a northern secessionist party on the brink of collapse with four percent of the popular vote.

His “Italians First” slogan has helped bring about a triumphant nationalist transformation for the party.

His previous mocking of southern Italians has been forgotten and for Sunday’s party conference there will be people travelling up in their hundreds from Campania, Calabria and even Sicily.—AFP

Cyclone barrel towards Japan’s Okinawa

TOKYO (Japan) — Okinawa residents braced for large waves and violent winds on Sunday after weather authorities warned of a fierce cyclone approaching the southern Japanese island.

Typhoon Papiroon was closing in on Okinawa’s capital Naha on Sunday afternoon while packing gusts of up to 144 kilometres (90 miles) per hour, according to the Japan Meteorological Agency. It was expected to draw close to the Okinawa island Sunday night through to the next morning before veering towards southwestern Japan and the Korean peninsula, the agency said.—AFP

Russia destroys drones near Syria airbase: report

MOSCOW – Russian military shot down several drones near an airbase in Hmeimim, Syria, a media report said on Sunday.

The air defense system detected a group of unknown small unmanned aerial vehicles in the northeast of the base late Saturday and destroyed all of them, the Sputnik news agency reported, citing a representative of the base.

Rumours are circulating in the media that these drones have been delivered by the US to Syria. The spokesperson of the Russian Defense Ministry denied this.

The US military is said to be deploying new drone systems to Syria in order to establish “no-fly zones” in the country.

The representative said that Russian military authorities are investigating these reports.

44 dead in bus crash in northern India: police

DEHRADUN(India) — At least 44 people were killed in northern India on Sunday when a passenger bus careened into a gorge in the Himalayan state of Uttarakhand, police said.

“44 people have died in the accident. At least 3 others are injured. The rescue work is still ongoing,” Deepesh Chandra Kala, a disaster management officer from Fauji Garhiwal district where the accident occurred, told AFP.—AFP
Suicide bombing wounds 19 at Iraqi ballot warehouse

KIRKUK (Iraq) — A suicide bombing on Sunday targeting a warehouse in Kirkuk where ballot boxes from Iraq’s May elections were stored wounded 19 people, days before a vote recount, a security source said.

“Nine policemen, six members of a counter-terrorist unit and four civilians were wounded when a car bomb driven by a suicide bomber exploded at the main gate of the warehouse,” the source said. The building was damaged by the blast but the ballot boxes were unaffected, said Rakan al-Juburi, the governor of Kirkuk north of Baghdad.

Iraq’s supreme court has ordered a manual vote recount in polling stations where results from the May legislative elections were contested following allegations of fraud.

The ballot was won by populist Shi’ite cleric Moqtada Sadr’s electoral alliance with Communists, as long-time political figures were pushed out by voters seeking change in a country mired in conflict and corruption.

The vote recount is expected to begin on Tuesday in the Kurdish provinces of Arbil, Sulaymaniyah and Dohuk, as well as in Kirkuk, Nineveh, Salahaddin and Anbar, the spokesman of the electoral commission said on Saturday.—AFP

UAE announces pause in offensive on Yemen’s Hodeida

ABU DHABI — The United Arab Emirates on Sunday announced a pause in the offensive it is backing against Huthi rebels in Yemen’s port city of Hodeida, to give a chance to UN peace efforts.

“We welcome continuing efforts by UN Special Envoy, Martin Griffiths, to achieve an unconditional Huthi withdrawal from Hodeida city and port,” UAE Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Anwar Gargash said on Twitter.

“We have paused our campaign to allow enough time for this option to be fully explored. We hope he will succeed.”

The announcement comes after Griffiths met with President Abedrabbo Mansour Hadi, whose troops are battling the Huthi rebels for control of the Red Sea port city, earlier this week.

Hadi demanded a full rebel withdrawal from the city, which has been the target of a weeks-long military offensive by the Yemeni government and its regional allies, led by the UAE on the ground.

Diplomatic sources have said Griffiths has been pushing for the Iran-backed Huthis to cede control of the port to the United Nations and there have been some reports they have agreed.

The Huthis have controlled the western city of Hodeida, and its port, since 2014, when they drove the Hadi government out of the capital and seized large swathes of northern Yemen.

On 13 June, the UAE and its allies, including Saudi Arabia, launched a massive military operation — dubbed “Golden Victory” — to drive the rebels out of the Hodeida port.

Some 70 per cent of imports to Yemen, where eight million people face imminent famine, flow through the port of Hodeida.

Nearly 10,000 people have died in the Yemen war since 2015, when Saudi Arabia and its allies joined the government’s fight against the Huthis.

Saudi economy escapes recession in first quarter

RIYADH — Saudi Arabia’s economy pulled out of recession in the first quarter of 2018, thanks to rising oil prices and a surge in the non-crude sector, authorities said on Sunday.

The kingdom’s economy grew by 1.15 per cent in the first three months of the year compared to the same period last year when it shrank by 0.84 per cent, according to the General Authority for Statistics. The body attributed the growth to a 2.7 per cent jump in the non-oil sphere and a 6.62 per cent rise in the oil sector, which contracted by nearly 2 per cent in the first quarter of 2017.

Oil prices have been steadily rising since early 2016, when OPEC and non-OPEC producers struck a deal to cut output.

The cut in oil revenue — which accounts for 70 per cent of government income — pushed the OPEC kingpin’s economy into negative territory last year for the first time since 2009, a year after the global financial crisis.

The reports of growth come as Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman pushes a package of sweeping economic and social reforms in the kingdom.

As part of his Vision 2030 plan, the heir to the throne plans to reduce Riyadh’s dependence on oil, boost tourism and massively invest in the underdeveloped entertainment sector to increase domestic spending.

Crude prices have remained strong even after oil producers said last week they plan to increase output starting in July.

US President Donald Trump said Saturday that Saudi Arabia’s King Salman had agreed to his request to ramp up oil production by up to two million barrels per day.

Riyadh has posted a budget deficit for the past four years, borrowing from domestic and international markets and hiking fuel and power prices to finance the shortfall.

It also introduced a five percent value-added tax at the start of 2018. Since 2014, Saudi budget deficits have totalled $260 billion and the government is projecting a 2018 shortfall of $52 billion.—AFP
Thai divers advance as cave search for lost boys gains ground

MAE SAI (Thailand) — Rescue divers inched closer to a spot in a flooded cave where 12 boys and their football coach have been missing for more than a week after days of bad weather beset the grueling search. The children, aged 11 to 16, and their 25-year-old assistant coach have not been heard from since they ventured into the recesses of the Tham Luang cave in northern Thailand on Saturday and were blocked by heavy rains.

But the clouds parted on Sunday and with the help of water pumps divers were able to establish a forward operating base inside the twisting chambers, raising hopes that the “Boars”, as the team is known, could be located soon.

“Today is a bright day for me and our team. We have sunlight today; roads are easily walkable,” Narongsak Osottanakorne, governor of Chiang Rai province, told reporters on Sunday afternoon. He said water levels in the cave had decreased and that almost 60 foreign and Thai divers were involved in the rescue effort.

“Today what we have to do is to rush to the kids,” Thai Navy SEAL commander Rear Admiral Apakorn Yookongkaew said earlier at the site. “We will not stop until we find them.”

Responders are placing extra oxygen tanks, strong ropes and LED lights along the cave’s walls in hopes they can provide a path to an airy chamber called Pattaya Beach where officials believe the 13 are taking refuge because of its elevation.

Rescuers have advanced 600 metres from the base towards the Pattaya site, while heavy drilling at separate chimneys outside the cave has started in an attempt to establish communication with the boys.

The upbeat attitude comes after a week of heavy rains pounded the area near the Myanmar and Laos borders, making it difficult to reach deeper into Tham Luang.

“I’m feeling happy like I’ve never felt in a long time. Many good signs,” the football team’s head coach Nopparat Kanthawong, 37, told AFP on Sunday.

“The rain has stopped and rescue teams have found potential ways to reroute the waterway”, diverting its flow so no more enters the cave, he said. “The families are feeling much better too.”

PARIS (France) — A notorious career thief who was once France’s most-wanted man pulled off a daring jailbreak on Sunday, fleeing a prison in the Paris region.

Ten bodies were found in a northeastern suburb of the French capital, they said, adding that a police search has been launched across the entire Paris region.

It is the second time Faid has pulled off a spectacular jailbreak — in 2013, he blasted his way out of a prison in northern France using dynamite.

He had been in prison since mid-2011 for breaking the terms of his parole after past convictions for bank robberies and brazen heists of cash-in-transit vehicles.

Armed with a pistol, he briefly took four guards hostage before escaping in a waiting getaway car. All the hostages were released unharmed. Faid was eventually recaptured six weeks later at a hotel in an industrial area on the outskirts of Paris.

A woman working at the hotel told AFP at the time that Faid’s accomplice had paid for the room in cash and that the two men had been there for several days.

Prior to the 2013 escape, Faid had been released from a previous stint of a decade behind bars after convincing parole officials that he regretted his criminal past and was determined to start afresh.

Faid, who grew up in tough immigrant suburbs outside Paris, has made several television appearances and co-authored two books about his delinquent youth and rise as a criminal in the Paris suburbs. He said his life of crime was inspired by American films such as “Scarface” and “Heat”.—AFP

Notorious thief flees French jail by ’copter

NEW DELHI — Eleven members of a family, including seven women, were found dead in a house under mysterious circumstances in north Delhi’s Burari on Sunday morning, the police said.

Ten bodies were found hanging and blindfolded, while a 75-year-old woman’s body was found on the floor. Two of the deceased are minors, they said.

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal and Delhi BJP Chief Manoj Tiwari visited the spot.

According to police, they were initially informed by a neighbour that six to seven people have committed suicide.

But upon reaching the spot, it was found that 11 members of a family had died.

The family was into plywood business and they were staying in the locality for the last 20 years, the locals said.

The police said that they were probing all angles and have not ruled out the possibility of foul play in the incident.—AFP
Chasing dinosaurs in northern Myanmar

MYITKYINA, (Myanmar) — “Amber hunters” on a quest for a Jurassic Park-style discovery of dinosaur remains sift through mounds of the precious resin in Myanmar — a lucrative trade that captivates palaeontologists.

The morning amber market on the outskirts of Myitkyina, the capital of Kachin state, throngs with traders using torches and magnifying glasses to scrutinize pieces of the honey-coloured fossilised tree sap. Some sell rough-edged uncut chunks. Others tout finished products: pendants, necklaces and bracelets made from carefully polished pieces.

The jade and ruby industries dwarf the largely artisanal amber trade, but the resin can still fetch big sums. In Myitkyina’s market there is money to be made, says trader Myo Swe.

His speciality is “inclusions”, sap that has trapped parts of plants, animals and even dinosaurs before hardening into amber — history suspended inside the resin. Find the right buyer and he could pocket up to $100,000 a piece in a shady industry that sees most amber smuggled across the border to China.

“Even if it just contains an ant or a mosquito — every piece is interesting,” the 40-year-old told AFP. “I value every one of them.”

Dinosaur tales

Amber, historically coveted as jewellery by nobility from China to ancient Greece, enjoyed a revival in popular culture thanks to the 1990s hit movie “Jurassic Park”, set in a theme park where dinosaurs before hardening into amber — history suspended inside the resin. Find the right buyer and he could pocket up to $100,000 a piece in a shady industry that sees most amber smuggled across the border to China.

“There's no better place than Myanmar.” Lida Xing shot to fame among fellow palaeontologists in 2015 when he brought back part of a feathered dinosaur tail to China from Myanmar that dated back some 99 million years.

Ex-Malaysia PM Najib’s deputy takes over his party

KUALA LUMPUR — Ousted Malaysian leader Najib Razak’s party has chosen his former deputy as its new leader, party officials said on Sunday, after a shocking May election loss broke its decades-old political reign.

Ahmad Zahid Hamidi, 65, was elected president of the United Malays National Organization (Umno) after defeating two former ministers.

Official results saw Ahmad receive 78 nominations from the party’s 191 divisions while Khairy Jamaluddin won 53 and Tengku Razaleigh Hamzah was handed 28 nominations.

Ex-premier Najib’s long-ruling coalition, long dogged by corruption allegations, lost the 9 May elections to a reformist alliance headed by Mahathir Mohamad.

Najib quit as Umno president days later, and now faces an anti-graft probe over allegations that billions of dollars were looted from sovereign wealth fund 1MDB. Both Najib and the fund have denied any wrongdoing.

The coveted presidency of Umno once meant a clear path to becoming prime minister.

But Umno, which led the former ruling Barisan Nasional coalition, saw key allies desert after the polls with a number coalescing up to Mahathir’s Pact of Hope alliance.

However, it remains the multi-ethnic country’s single largest political party, boasting some three million members and 52 MPs. Penang Institute political scientist Wong Chin Huat said he did not believe that Ahmad’s win would improve Umno political chances.

“(Ahmad’s) victory signals a reluctant, opportunistic and combative opposition which will not change itself,” he told AFP.

“(It) only hopes to change everything else including voters’ perception.” —AFP
Actress Vanessa Paradis marries French director: report

PARIS — Actress and singer Vanessa Paradis has married French director Samuel Benchetrit, according to a report by magazine Le Parisien.

Wearing a cream-coloured ruffle dress with flowers in her blonde hair, Paradis married Benchetrit at the town hall in Saint-Simeon, east of Paris, the report said.

Photographs on the website of Le Parisien showed a smiling Paradis leaving the town hall arm-in-arm with Benchetrit, wearing a navy suit, as wedding guests threw confetti over the couple. The small ceremony was attended by a few dozen guests, including Paradis’ 19-year-old daughter Lily-Rose Depp, born during her 14-year relationship with American actor Johnny Depp which ended in 2012, the report said.

Paradis and Benchetrit, both 45, made their relationship official in August 2017. The French singer and actress began her career as a model before becoming a huge film and music star in France.

Stop self-doubting ladies, we have enough people doing that to us, says Priyanka

LOS ANGELES — Priyanka Chopra says women have “always been treated as second-class citizens” and unlike men, they are forced to adhere to certain standards of beauty.

The 35-year-old star believes rather than submitting to the societal norms, women should focus on loving themselves and being confident in their own skin.

“We’ve always been told that only one of us can win and only the best one will get the cutest boy and only the best one will get the job, that we spent so much time elbowing each other out of the way, pulling each other down.

“But we for a second, love ourselves and say, ‘do not need all of these magazines to tell me how to lose the weight or how should I starve because I wanna please a man?’” Priyanka said in an interview with Allure magazine.

The actor said people have always doubted women’s capability, so they should stop berating their own selves.

“So the next time you see yourself doubting yourself or you look at a picture of yourself and you say, ‘Oh my God,’ or you wake up in the morning and you say: ‘Wow, why do I look like that?’... Whatever that instant might be, the next time you do that for yourself, recognize it,” she said.

“Start with just recognizing what you’re doing. That’s called self-hate, self-doubt, you’re berating yourself. I mean, we have enough people doing that to us anyway. Why do we need to do it to ourselves?” —AFP

Brad Pitt always wanted to be a ‘great dad’

LOS ANGELES—Hollywood star Brad Pitt is in better spirits as he is getting to spend more time with his children.

The actor, 54, will soon be in London, where ex Angelina Jolie is currently filming “Maleficent 2”, to see his children for a second time in recent weeks.

The visit comes after a judge presiding over the former couple’s divorce proceedings established a detailed schedule for him to spend time with Pax, 14, Zahara, 13, Shiloh, 12, and nine-year-old twins Vivienne and Knox.

“Having kids was always very special to him. He wanted kids for years before he met Angie. He was dreaming about being a dad. And he has always been a great dad. Very involved and present.

He talks about the kids non-stop now. He brought gifts back to England,” a source told People magazine.

The court papers stated, “The children not having a relationship with their father is harmful to them,” and that Jolie, 43, could lose full custody of the kids if she does not allow them to grow their relationships with Pitt. —AFP

Drake smashes streaming record with new album

NEW YORK—Drake has smashed streaming records with his new album “Scorpion,” with Apple Music and Spotify both reporting unprecedented listenership in its first day.

Apple Music said on Instagram that the Canadian hip-hop superstar’s fifth studio album was streamed 170 million times in the 24 hours since its release Friday.

The worldwide figure is the highest ever reported by any streaming service for an album over one day and comes even though Apple Music significantly trails industry leader Spotify in total users.

Drake has a lengthy relationship with Apple, which heavily promoted “Scorpion.” The hotly anticipated album inexplicably appeared two hours late on Spotify. But “Scorpion” also set a record on Spotify, which heavily featured the album after it went alive. The site Spotifycharts, which tracks listening data, said that Spotify users streamed the album’s 25 songs more than 132 million times over the first day.

Drake has found massive success releasing sprawling albums and mixtapes of danceable tracks online without consideration to physical formats.

“Scorpion” features a post-humous duet with Michael Jackson, a collaboration with rap great Jay-Z and an admission that Drake secretly had a son with Sophie Brussaux, a French actress in pornographic films. —AFP
UNESCO lists Korean mountain Buddhist temples as World Heritage sites

MANAMA — Seven ancient Korean mountain temples, which typify the way Buddhism in the country has merged with indigenous beliefs and styles, were listed as UNESCO World Heritage sites on Saturday.

The seven mountain temples — Seonamsa, Daeheungsa, Beopjusa, Magoksa, Tongdosa, Bongjeongsa, Buseoksa — were all established during the Three Kingdoms period that lasted until the 7th century AD.

UNESCO made the announcement at a meeting in the Bahraini capital Manama.

“These mountain monasteries are sacred places, which have survived as living centres of faith and daily religious practice to the present,” UNESCO said in a press statement.

Buddhism was imported to the Korean peninsula in the fourth century and accepted by the ancient kingdoms of Goguryeo, Baekje and Silla, establishing it as the national religion for more than 1,000 years.

During the religion’s heyday in the fifth and sixth centuries many houses of worship were built under strong state patronage, accelerating the importation of Buddhist culture, architecture and style.

Over time elements of traditional Korean beliefs merged into the religion, forming the Tong Buddhist doctrine, meaning consolidation or integration, and temple architectural layouts followed suit.

Buildings were constructed in supposedly auspicious locations and many temples set up in hilly areas, in line with traditional Korean reverence for mountains and the Zen focus on meditation in a calm environment. Temples were built on high positions protected by hills and commanding an open view over other mountains.

A typical mountain temple has a long winding entrance path up the slope, buildings laid out in a square with an inner courtyard in the middle. The most important hall is on the highest level at the back, and halls for meditation, everyday living areas for monks, and a pavilion form the other three sides.

But Buddhism’s influence began to wane after the Chosun dynasty, which took over in the 14th century, adopted Confucianism as its ideology and launched an extensive and enduring crackdown on the religion.

It forced many urban temples to close, leaving only those in remote hills to survive.—AFP

Cellist brings sounds of ‘peace, coexistence’ to ruins of Iraq’s Mosul

MOSUL — Iraqi cellist and conductor Karim Wasfi has played a concert for “peace and coexistence” amid the ruins of Mosul, almost a year after Iraqi forces ousted the Islamic State group from the capital of its self-declared “caliphate.”

Dozens of people attended on Friday as Wasfi, in full concert dress, played on a makeshift stage among the most iconic religious monuments of Iraq’s second city. The venue lay between the Catholic church of Our Lady of the Hour with its famed clock tower and the remains of the iconic Hadba (“hunchback”) leaning minaret next to the Nuri Mosque, destroyed during the battle for the city.

Wasfi was joined by the violinist, guitar and oud players of local band Awtar Nerkal. “This music is a message from Mosul to the whole world, of the concepts of security, peace and coexistence,” said Wasfi. The dual Iraqi-US national is former conductor of Iraq’s National Symphony Orchestra and has been nicknamed “Iraq’s Rostropovich” after the Russian maestro cellist.

The music was “a call for companies, investors and organisations to come and take part in the reconstruction of the city, especially its destroyed Old Town”, the bearded and bespectacled artist said. The impromptu concert came in the same week that Iraqi authorities finally launched clean-up operations in the city that jihadists held for three years until their ouster in July 2017.

Ritual sacrifice draws crowds to Indonesia volcano

PROBOLINGGO (Indonesia) — Thousands of locals and tourists climbed Mount Bromo early Sunday for a lavish religious ceremony that involves throwing ritual offerings into the smouldering crater of an active volcano in Indonesia’s tribal hinterlands.

Each year people from the Tengger tribe gather from the surrounding highlands to cast fruit, vegetables, flowers, and even livestock such as goats and chickens into Mount Bromo’s smoking crater as part of the Yadnya Kasada festival.

Other villagers — not members of the Tengger tribe — try to catch the offerings before they disappear into the billowing smoke using nets and sarong. This is not technically part of the ritual but reflects local frugal urges not to waste the offerings.

The month-long Yadnya Kasada festival harkens back to the 15th century legends of Majapahit kingdom princess Roro Anteng and husband Joko Seger. Unable to bear children after years of marriage, the couple begged the gods for help.

Their prayers were answered and they were promised 25 children, as long as they agreed to sacrifice their youngest child by throwing him into Mount Bromo.

Legend has it this son willingly jumped into the volcano to guarantee the prosperity of the Tengger people.

The sacrifice tradition continues to this day — though the Tengger sacrifice their harvest and farm animals instead of humans.

Dancers in elaborate traditional costumes and tourists were up before dawn to take part in this year’s ceremony.

Crowds have swelled at Mount Bromo in recent years as the local government promotes the festival as a tourist event.

Akinfeev stars as Russia stun Spain on penalties

MOSCOW — Russia captain Igor Akinfeev saved two penalties in a dramatic shootout as the World Cup hosts dumped title contenders Spain out in the last 16 following a 1-1 draw.

Venerable Russia centre-back Sergei Ignashevich gifted Spain the opening goal on 12 minutes in Moscow when he unwittingly turned into his own net after grappling with Sergio Ramos.

Russia hit back just before the interval as Artem Dzyuba nervelessly converted a penalty awarded for a handball by Gerard Pique. Spain controlled the game as expected but struggled to create genuine chances, with Akinfeev sharp on the few occasions they did before saving from Koke and Iago Aspas to seal a 4-3 win on penalties. “We are having a fantastic World Cup,” said Akinfeev.

“Not just our fans, but the fans of other countries got a sense of this atmosphere and understood that Russians really know how to play football and want to play football.”

Russia will meet either Croatia or Denmark for a place in the semi-finals, as Spain’s rotten run against hosts nation at major tournaments continued. Fernando Hierro made the bold decision to drop Andres Iniesta for Koke in central midfield, with Marco Asensio handed his first start of the competition. Russia boss Stanislav Cherchesov left out leading scorer Denis Cheryshev, opting for three central defenders in a conservative 5-3-2 formation.

It was Nacho, in for Dani Carvajal at right-back, who won the free-kick that led to Spain taking the lead as he was caught by Yury Zhirkov to the right of the penalty area.

Asensio, who made two brief substitute appearances in the group stage, whipped in dangerously late in the first half, flying to his left to pluck the ball looped in off an unsighted Ignashevich as he tussled with Ramos. Spain dominated the first 30 minutes, pressing Russia heavily as the hosts struggled to advance beyond the halfway line in humid conditions.

Aleksandr Golovin carved out their first chance of note, starting a move with a jinking run before bending just wide of David de Gea’s left-hand post.

Isco produced a series of regal touches with Spain’s King Felipe VI among those in the crowd at the Luzhniki Stadium, but Russia equalised shortly before half-time.

Pique penalised

A deep corner was met by Dzyuba, whose header struck the outstretched arm of Pique, with referee Bjorn Kuipers contemplating his decision before pointing to the spot.

Dzyuba calmly sent De Gea the wrong with his penalty to join Cheryshev on a team-leading three goals.

Akinfeev snuffed out an opening for Diego Costa on the stroke of half-time as the Spaniard tried to latch onto a through ball.

The Russia goalkeeper was again involved early in the second half, flying to his left to pluck a spinning Jordi Alba effort from the air. Cherchesov introduced Cheryshev for Alexander Same流 before the hour, a move greened by a deaening roar from the home support.

Iniesta replaced David Silva, while Costa was withdrawn for Aspas, and the two substitutes went close to winning it late in regulation time.

A low 20-yard drive heading towards was palmed away by at Akinfeev at full stretch, with the angled follow-up from Aspas also pushed to safety. Aspas nearly picked out Carvajal with a cut-back seconds into the start of extra time, which saw Aleksandr Erokhin come on as Russia’s fourth sub — the first time the rule has been applied at the World Cup.
