President U Win Myint sends message on occasion of 51st Anniversary of founding of ASEAN

When ASEAN was established on 8 August 1967, there were skepticism about the continued existence of the Association as countries in the region were unique in its diversity and faced with a myriad of challenges. Nevertheless, it is the spirit of ASEAN as well as shared aspirations and strong commitments which have made ASEAN more united, vibrant and stronger than ever. The spirit of mutual respect, trust and cooperation which Member States have forged since 1967 has been the basis for a consensus-based approach that contributed to regional peace and stability we have greatly enjoyed today.

As we celebrate today’s achievements, we should not forget the vision of the Founding Fathers of ASEAN who signed Bangkok Declaration that paved the way for a promising regional organization since 1967. We should applaud their wisdom, vision and courage, and use them as a source of ASEAN’s future inspirations.

Esteemed Citizens,

ASEAN has common desire and strong commitments to enhancing peace, security and stability in the region, building vibrant, sustainable and highly integrated economies and uplifting the living standards of its people.

ASEAN, 51 years after its inception, has successfully transformed from a loose regional grouping into a rules-based organization with its own Charter and legal personality. ASEAN has been moving forward progressively to a politically cohesive, economically integrated, socially responsible, and truly people-oriented, people-centered and rules-based ASEAN Community.

ASEAN has been growing steadily and emerging as one of the world’s fastest-growing markets. It is the sixth largest economy in the world and aiming at becoming the fourth largest single market by 2030. Furthermore, ASEAN has the world’s third largest labour forces which provide a greater opportunity for trade, investment and regional prosperity.

ASEAN is now forging together towards realization of ASEAN Community through ASEAN way, which is based on equality and mutual respect, shared commitments and responsibility, consultation and consensus and peaceful settlement of disputes. ASEAN also underlines the importance of complementarities between ASEAN Community Vision 2025, which was endorsed by ASEAN Leaders in 2015, and the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development to uplift the living standards of the peoples of ASEAN.

Despite attaining many tangible achievements in community building efforts, ASEAN today is facing with emerging challenges of traditional and non-traditional issues. In addressing the issues of common concern such as trans-national crimes, terrorism, cyber-security, climate change and environmental degradation, food and energy security, ASEAN has been able to demonstrate the collective strength and resilience that lie at our core and more united in the face of these challenges. In this regard, it is most timely and relevant that Singapore, Chair of ASEAN has selected “Resilience and Innovative ASEAN” as a theme for this year which strengthens our efforts to meet future challenges.

Esteemed Citizens,

With a view to realizing an inclusive, united, resilient and innovative ASEAN Community, ASEAN is working together in improving the quality of lives of its people including through the implementation of various cooperative activities in education, health, human resource development, environmental protection, disaster management and sustainability of natural resources. ASEAN is also placing high priority in the promotion of cultural cooperation and people-to-people engagements in order to forge a stronger sense of identity towards ASEAN.

Myanmar, as a responsible member of ASEAN, has been in full cooperation with other Member States in the implementation of ASEAN Community Blueprints, regional integration and community building. On this auspicious occasion, I would like to encourage all our citizens to redouble our efforts in promoting socio-economic development and actively participating in the ASEAN Community building process that will contribute peace, stability and prosperity of our region and beyond.

Myanmar Making Access Possible findings discussed in Yangon

By May Thet Hnin

FINANCIAL sector stakeholders, representing Myanmar government, private sector, and development partners, held a meeting in Yangon on 6 August to discuss the findings of a nationwide financial sector diagnostic, Making Access Possible (MAP).

The nationwide MAP research operation was jointly implemented by the DaNa Facility, funded by UK government’s Department of International Development, United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF) Myanmar and Financial Regulatory Department, under the Ministry of Planning and Finance.

The 2018 diagnostic found a significant increase in financial inclusion growth from the MAP 2013 findings, based on a comprehensive survey of 5,900 rural and urban households.

The workshop participants planned on a proposed multi-focused strategy for the 2018 to 2022 national financial inclusion roadmap, aiming at empowering poor to low-income individuals by improving their access to appropriate and affordable financial services.

At the workshop, U Zaw Naing, Director General of the Financial Regulatory Department of the Ministry of Planning and Finance, highlighted the need for inclusive, impactful, and equitable financial services through the nation: “While financial sector growth is encouraging, it is of little value unless it makes a meaningful and lasting difference at the personal level nationwide.” Adults with access to at least one formal financial product increased from 30 per cent in 2013 to 48 per cent in 2018. Moreover, informal financial service access fell by 30 per cent from 10 million to about 7 million adults, over the past five years. Consequently, the nation’s formal financial sector has broadened due to increased private bank deposits, as well as on strong growth in the microfinance and cooperative sectors.

The workshop was organized and led by the Myanmar government’s Financial Regulatory Department and supported by UNCDF and the DaNa Facility. The Central Bank of Myanmar played a key role in the forum, while the private sector was represented by the Myanmar Bankers Association, the Myanmar Micro-Finance Association, the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry, mobile network operators, digital payment providers, and other contributors to financial inclusion within the marketplace.

The MAP meeting was also held in Nay Pyi Taw on 19 June. After the Yangon MAP meeting, another MAP meeting will be held in Mandalay.

“MAP 2018 findings are scheduled for final release later this year with a companion Financial Inclusion Roadmap framework to guide Myanmar’s financial sector development in the coming years,” said Paul Luchtenburg, country coordinator of UNCDF.

THE Archaeology Department of Mandalay University is studying the lifestyle of rural dwellers who lived more than 800 years ago in Bagan region, Mandala, said Dr Pyae Phyo Kyaw, a lecturer at the Department of Archaeology, Mandalay University, Myanmar.

The department is studying the lifestyle of Bagan rural dwellers, because the lifestyles of elite groups, such as the royalties, commanders and the rich of that period are known only.

The research will be conducted for five years between 2017 and 2023.

“When we study the culture of ancient Bagan, we only found the record of the lifestyle of elite groups. Therefore, we will now study the life of rural dwellers that supported the urban elite of that period. The five-year project will research how they lived, where they obtained water for agriculture, what they ate, etc.”

The five-year research project is being conducted with the assistance of the officials and local staff of the Archaeology, National Museum and Library Department under the Ministry of Culture and Religious Affairs. As per the archaeology practice, the researches were conducted based on ancient evidences.

“We don’t expect much output from this five-year project within a year, and the public wouldn’t be interested in it. However, we will be able to find out the basics about Bagan and its system,” he added.

The project expects to uncover the socio-economic and customs of the people living in Bagan region 800-900 years ago. Research results presently in hand were based on literature and stone inscriptions, so the evidences and proofs would be a bit weak. The research will conduct two field trips a year and the research findings will be published once a year. The 2017 research findings were already issued, it is learnt. —Khine Set Wai

Contemporary youths and their pursuit of 21st-century education

By Dr. Aung Aung Min

We all accept the fact that making investment in feeding children is very important for sustainable development. We have been feeding children for a large number of years. The Ministry of Education and World Food Program will work together to launch a national-level school feeding program in Nay Pyi Taw on 1 August.

Myo Thein Gyi in his opening remarks at the National School Feeding Lesson Learned and Way Forward Workshop in Nay Pyi Taw on 1 August. This workshop is aimed at improving feeding in different areas. The workshop is significant as it will contribute to the betterment of feeding education.

The most important is that education and health for our children is also for the future of our country. Only when they are healthy, can they learn and enjoy the benefits of education.

Ministry of Education and World Food Program will work together to launch a national-level school feeding program. We all accept the fact that making investment in feeding children is very important for sustainable development.

Feeding is a fundamental right for children. It is found that the majority of young adults, who were born after 1988, have high aims and a sense of commitment, but they are weak in keeping their conduct, ethics and discipline. Though they tend to obey their elders and parents, they don’t like being controlled by others. Moreover, they possess a nature of free will, passing bold decisions. But they need to live and develop in the value of truth. As for the parents, they should leave a legacy of knowledge and wisdom for their new generation.

It is of crucial importance for the young adults to abide by ethics and discipline, so that they can make a thorough decision on what is right and wrong.

Young professionals should empower young adults to the right of ownership of their own learning. They can contribute to the interventions of the country. Although the majority of the young adults know how to dream big, they are weak in fulfilling their dreams. Only when they are healthy, can they learn and enjoy the benefits of education.

There are many emerging challenges of the 21st century; a century will be an era of knowledge, information, technology, and communication. Globalization and youth learning are on the rise. The need of pursuing an integrative component of lifelong learning that has a crucial role to play in this new era is an effective tool to enhance the life and development of a new generation.

As for authorities concerned, there is a need to improve feeding programme and take care of fresh feeding items for a large number of students. There is a need to supply fresh feeding items for a large number of students. There is a need to supply fresh feeding items for a large number of students.

To the authorities concerned, efforts should be made to create opportunities for this generation by conducting vocational training classes, assembling material resources for teachers, and locating employment opportunities with affordable salaries. Young adults tend to upgrade their professional level of vocational education due to the increasing demand by employers in various fields.

Youths of today and 21st-century education

With the support of government entities, efforts are being made to open many vocational training schools across the country, aiming to focus on developing the creativity of young adults. Authorities concerned should be supported with innovative and entrepreneurship-related skills and knowledge. So that they would not only come to study in technical and engineering universities but would also stay to enrich these institutions with their valuable skills.

Thanks to globalization and information technology, many rapid advances have been made to meet the requirements of human activities. Yet, there are still many challenges in the path to educational changes. Young adults should take up their respective roles to provide information technology, language proficiency skills and soft skills. Soft skills, on the other hand, are interpersonal skills, communication skills, critical thinking, ethical behavior, networking, decision-making, problem-solving and societal responsibility.

Russia’s sole aircraft carrier to be upgraded to carry generation 4+ fighter jets

MOSCOW — Russia’s sole aircraft carrier Admiral Kuznetsov will be upgraded to carry deck-based generation 4+ MiG-29K/MiG-29KUB fighter jets, Head of the Nevskoye Design Bureau (the developer of the warship’s modernization project) Sergei Orlov told TASS on Monday.

"MiG-29 K/MiG-29KUB, Su-33 planes and some types of helicopters will be based on the warship. Some adjustments will be made precisely to accommodate MiG-29K/MiG-29KUB aircraft. Pilots want something with something better and more reliable. Actually, the entire aircraft and technical compound of shipborne systems will be modernized," he said.

In April 2018, a contract was signed for the aircraft carrier’s repairs and upgrade. The Nevskoye Design Bureau is Russia’s sole institute designing aircraft-carrying and amphibious assault ships of various classes. The repairs and upgrade of the aircraft carrier will last two years and a half. Head of the Nevskoye Design Bureau Orlov said.

After that, the carrier’s delivery/acceptance contract is planned, which envisages “an impressive set of trials likely to last seven months,” he said.

Russian Navy Deputy Commander-in-Chief Viktor Burkov earlier said that repairs on Russia’s sole aircraft carrier had started in May this year and the Fleet expected to get the upgraded warship back in 2021.

During its upgrade, the aircraft carrier Admiral Kuznetsov is expected to be armed with the latest seaworthy Fantazy air defense missile systems. PHOTO: TASS

No special metro for neo-Nazis rallying in Washington

WASHINGTON — Washington’s metro service will not provide separate trains or cars for far-right demonstrators heading to a rally in the nation’s capital on Sunday, after plans had been floated to separate them from counter-protesters.

"There will be no special cars, no special trains for anyone next Sunday or, for that matter, at any time," Metro Board Chairman Jack Evans told the local ABC affiliate.

"We are a public transportation organization. We are open for whoever wants to get on and ride Metro."

The subway service’s largest union, ATU Local 689, said in a statement last week it had learned that a far-right group associated with the Ku Klux Klan was going to be allocated three private Metro rail cars and a police escort for the ‘Unite the Right’ rally.

According to rally organizers, the marchers will gather at a suburban metro station and ride the underground to the Foggy Bottom station in the downtown area and then walk the short distance to the White House between 5:30 pm and 7:30 pm.

The rally is to take place exactly a year to the day after a ‘Unite the Right’ rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, in which a far-right sympathizer plowed his car into a crowd of anti-fascist demonstrators, killing one woman and injuring dozens of other people.—AFP

Tanker truck explodes sending deadly fireball across Italy motorway

ROME — At least one person was killed and more than 60 others injured on Monday when a tanker truck crashed into a lorry and exploded, sending a fireball across a busy motorway in the northern Italian city of Bologna.

The blast, which occurred in the early afternoon in the Borgo Panigale area, close to Bologna airport, caused a partial collapse of the flyover, where the explosion took place, onto another road below, filling the scene with flames and black smoke.

A video released by the police shows the moment the tanker ploughed into the back of the lorry, immediately catching fire as another lorry crashed into the back of the blazing tanker, and oncoming traffic screeched to a halt.

The three vehicles, covered by the blanket smoke, were reduced to little more than ash by a massive explosion that swept across the motorway and could be heard throughout the city.

“I was here (at a nearby restaurant) for work... at a certain point we heard a violent blast, I thought it was a terrorist attack,” Marco Rosadini, whose car is trapped under the flyover, told the daily La Repubblica.

“After the explosion the roof of the restaurant started to collapse. I looked outside and I felt like I was looking at a wall of fire.”

It took firefighters nearly two hours to extinguish the fireball, which spread to vehicles parked in a nearby lot of a car dealership.

Then rescue workers began the delicate task of looking through the burnt out debris to find any victims.

Italian media quoted the Bologna prefecture as saying that two people had been killed, but when asked for confirmation by AFP, a spokeswoman said that the official toll remained one dead, with 68 injured.—AFP
Singapore cyber attack may be state-linked: minister

SINGAPORE — The biggest ever cyber attack to hit Singapore was carried out by highly sophisticated hackers typically state-linked to foreign governments, a cabinet minister said on Monday, but did not give names.

Hackers broke into a government database and stole the health records of 1.5 million Singaporeans, including Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong who was specifically targeted in the “unprecedented” hack, the government has said.

“We have done a detailed analysis of this attack and have determined that it is the work of an advanced persistent threat (APT) group,” Minister for Communications and Information S. Iswaran said Monday.

“This refers to a class of sophisticated cyber attackers typically state-linked who conduct extended, carefully planned cyber campaigns to steal information or disrupt operations,” he told parliament, which discussed the issue.

Iswaran said the APT group “was persistent in its efforts to penetrate and anchor itself on the network, bypass the security measures and illegally access and exfiltrate data”.

While the attack fitted the profile of “certain known APT groups”, Iswaran said he would not publicly give any names for reasons of national security.

Hackers used a computer infected with malware to gain access to the database between June 27 and July 4 before administrators spotted “unusual activity”, authorities have said.

The compromised data includes personal information and medication dispensed to patients, but medical records and clinical notes have not been affected, according to the authorities.

Security experts had also earlier pointed to state-actors as the likely culprits, citing the scale and sophistication of the hack.

Healthcare data is of particular interest to hackers because it can be used to blackmail people in positions of power, Jeff Middleton, chief executive of cybersecurity consultant Cyntium, told AFP last month.

Medical information, like personal data, can also be easily monetised on criminal forums, said Sanjay Aurora, Asia Pacific managing director of Darktrace, a cyber security firm.

Iswaran, who is also the minister in charge of cyber security, has convened a committee of inquiry to look into the hack.

“We will do our utmost to strengthen our cyber security. But it is impossible to completely eliminate the risk of another cyber attack,” he said.

“This is an ongoing battle with potential cyber attackers who are constantly developing their capabilities and seeking out new vulnerabilities,” Iswaran said the attack will not derail the affluent and highly-wired city-state’s ambitions to become a “smart nation” through the extensive use of technology in daily activities and transactions.—AFP

Two Koreas agree on list of family reunion participants

SEUL (South Korea) — The two Koreas have finalised a list of families separated by the Korean War whose members will be briefly reunited this month after decades of separation, Seoul said Monday.

The two nations agreed in June to resume the reunions of families torn apart by the 1950-53 war, after a landmark meeting between North Korean leader Kim Jong Un and the South’s President Moon Jae-in in April.

A total of 93 people from the South will travel to the North’s Mount Kumgang resort to meet their relatives, while 88 citizens of the North will meet their southern kin in a separate reunion at the resort, Seoul’s unification ministry said.

The reunions will be held from August 20-26, with those in their 80s accounting for more than half of the participants, according to the ministry. It will be the first such reunion for three years.

Millions of people were separated from family members during the conflict that sealed the division of the two Koreas, which technically remain at war.

Most died without the chance to see or hear from their relatives on the other side of the border, across which all civilian communication is banned.

Officials from both countries last month exchanged a preliminary list of those hoping to see their family members, before carrying out checks to see whether relatives across the border were still alive.

There are only about 57,000 people still alive who are registered with the South Korean Red Cross to meet their separated relatives. Many of those yearning for a reunion die before succeeding.

For the lucky few chosen to take part, the experience is often hugely emotional. They have just three days to make up for decades apart, followed by another separation -- in all likelihood a permanent one.

The reunion programme began in earnest after a historic inter-Korean summit in 2000 and the reunions were initially held annually, but strained cross-border relations have made them rare.

However a approach on the Korean peninsula was triggered earlier this year when Kim decided to send athletes, cheerleaders and his sister as an envoy to the Winter Olympics in the South in February.

Diplomatic efforts have gathered pace since then, leading to a summit between Kim and US President Donald Trump in Singapore in June.—AFP

Earth risks tipping into ‘hothouse’ state

TAMPA (United States) — The planet urgently needs to transition to a green economy because fossil fuel pollution risks pushing the Earth into a hothouse state decades ahead, researchers warned on Monday. If polar ice continues to melt, forests are slashed and greenhouse gases rise to new highs — as they currently do each year — the Earth will pass a tipping point. Crossing that threshold “guarantees a climate 4.5° Celsius (7.9 Fahrenheit) higher than pre-industrial times, and sea levels that are 10 to 60 metres (30-200 feet) higher than today,” cautioned scientists in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

And that “could be only decades ahead,” they said.

What is ‘Hothouse Earth’?

“Hothouse Earth is likely to be uncontrollable and dangerous to many,” said the article by scientists at University of Copenhagen, Australian National University and the Potsdam Institute for Climate Impact Research in Germany. Rivers would flood, storms would wreak havoc on coastal communities, and coral reefs would be eliminated — all by century’s end or even earlier.

Global average temperatures would exceed those of any interglacial period — meaning warmer eras that come in between Ice Ages — of the past 1.2 million years.

Melting polar ice caps would lead to dramatically higher sea levels, flooding coastal land that is home to hundreds of millions of people. “Places on Earth will become uninhabitable if ‘Hothouse Earth’ becomes the reality,” said co-author Johan Rockström, executive director of the Stockholm Resilience Centre.

Where is the tipping point?

Researchers suggest the tipping point could come once the Earth warms to 3.6 Fahrenheit (2°Celsius) over pre-industrial times. The planet has already warmed 1.2°C over pre-industrial times, and is heating up at a rate of 0.17°C per decade. “A 2°C warming could activate important tipping elements, raising the temperature further to activate other tipping elements in a domino-like cascade that could take the Earth System to even higher temperatures,” said the report. This “cascade ‘may tip the entire Earth system into a new mode of operation,’” said co-author Hans Joachim Schellnhuber, director of the Potsdam Institute for Climate Impact Research.

Experts also worry about phenomena like wildfires, which will spread as the planet gets hotter and drier and have the potential to accelerate carbon dioxide buildup and global warming.

How they calculated this

The “Perspective” article is based on previously published studies on tipping points for the Earth.

The scientists also examined conditions the Earth has seen in the distant past, such as the Pleistocene period five million years ago, when CO₂ was at 400 ppm like today. During the Cretaceous period, the era of the dinosaurs some 100 million years ago, CO₂ levels were even higher at 1,000 ppm, largely due to volcanic activity. To state that 2°C is a no-return threshold “is now,” said Martin Siegert, co-director of the Grantham Institute at Imperial College London, who was not involved in the study.

The study authors “collated previously published ideas and theories to present a narrative on how the threshold change would work,” he said.

How to stop it

People must immediately change their lifestyle to be better stewards of the Earth, the researchers said. Fossil fuels must be replaced with low or zero emissions energy sources, and there should be more strategies for absorbing carbon emissions such as ending deforestation and planting trees to absorb carbon dioxide. Soil management, better farming practices, land and coastal conservation and carbon capture technologies are also on the list of actions.—AFP

Robert Redford retiring from acting at 81

LOS ANGELES (United States) — Robert Redford, the screen legend and Oscar winner, has announced that he’s retiring from acting at the grand old age of 81, with upcoming movie “The Old Man & The Gun” his last gig in front of the camera.

The actor, director and founder of the Sundance Institute and its film festival began his career on stage 60 years ago, before moving into TV and film, and eventually into directing.

“Never say never, but I pretty well concluded that this would be it for me in terms of acting,” he told Entertainment Weekly. “(I’ll) move towards retirement after this cause I’ve been doing it since I was 21,” he said.

“I thought, well, that’s enough. And why not go out with something that’s very upbeat and positive?”

When asked if his prospective retirement would extend to directing, Redford was tight-lipped and his agent did not elaborate.

“We’ll see about that,” Redford told Entertainment Weekly.

In “The Old Man & The Gun,” directed by David Lowery, the California native plays Forrest Tucker, the real-life career criminal whose bank robbing spree and multiple escapes from prison lasted more than 60 years.

“To me, that was a wonderful character to play at this point in my life,” Redford told Entertainment Weekly.

The film, set for release in the United States on September 28, also stars Oscar winners Sissy Spacek and Casey Affleck.

Lowery told Empire magazine that he felt the “weight” of directing Redford in his final screen role.

“He mentioned that right before we started production,” Lowery told Empire.

“I think the movie is as much about (Redford) as it is about this character. It’s about someone in the twilight of their life, doing something they love,” he added.

“There’s an inevitability to the character that is impossible to separate from Mr Redford himself, and an inherently bittersweet quality.”—AFP

Pink cancels Sydney shows after being hospitalized

SYDNEY — American pop star Pink has been forced to cancel several Sydney shows on her Australia tour after being hospitalized with a virus and dehydration.

The singer of ‘Just Give Me a Reason’ and ‘Get the Party Started’ cancelled a performance on Friday due to illness but battled through a Saturday show before her trip to the emergency room the next day.

“Pink was admitted to hospital in Sydney on Sunday night, suffering from dehydration. She had treated and discharged. She was readmitted to hospital (Monday) and diagnosed with a gastro virus,” her promoter Live Nation said.

The statement gave no indication of when the singer would return to the stage.

Monday and Tuesday concerts were “postponed” but tickets for the next concert slated for Thursday are still on sale, according to the Live Nation website.

While some fans were disappointed, most sent their well-wishes.

“Get well soon Miss Pink! I have tickets for Sunday’s concert and want you to know we’ll totally understand if it’s postponed — you’ve got to look after yourself!” one fan said to Pink’s tour Facebook page.

The pop sensation took to social media on Friday to defend that night’s cancellation after she was snapped by photographers relaxing on an Australian beach with her family.

“I scheduled this tour meticulously, trying to do what was best for my children, while also putting on the best and most physically demanding and beautiful show of my life,” she said in an Instagram post.

Pink said her children had also been ill, and that “parasite paparazzi” had failed to capture her multiple visits to the doctor.

“You can think whatever you want, it’s your right, but I have never taken advantage of any one in my entire life,” she said, defending the Friday postponement while she was at the beach.

It prompted fellow star Justin Timberlake to come to her defence.

“I’m here to tell you that you won’t find a harder working, more authentically talented, and more thankful for her place on that stage and her fans than that woman,” he said on Instagram.—AFP

Japanese casino tycoon arrested in Hong Kong: ex-firm

TOKYO (Japan) — Controversial Japanese casino tycoon Kazuo Okada has been arrested in Hong Kong over alleged unspecified “corruption-related” offences, his former company in Tokyo said on Monday.

Universal Entertainment Corporation said the Hong Kong Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC) had arrested Okada and released him on bail.

Contacted by AFP, the ICAC was not able to confirm the information immediately, citing a policy on not commenting on individual incidents.

“Upon receipt of a corruption complaint and should there be sufficient information to pursue, the ICAC will follow up on it in accordance with the law and established procedures,” the organisation said in a statement.

Okada was sacked from running Universal Entertainment in 2017 after the firm accused him of a series of “fraudulent acts ... for his own personal benefit.”

The firm and its former boss are now embroiled in lawsuits and Universal Entertainment stressed in its statement that Okada “has no further connection with us whatsoever.”

Universal Entertainment pledged to assist ICAC with its investigation.

According to Forbes, Okada is the 16th richest person in Japan, with a net worth that currently stands at $2.1 billion.—AFP
Women more likely to die of heart attack if doctor is male

TAMPA (United States) — Women suffering heart attacks in hospital emergency rooms in the United States are more likely to die if their doctor is a man than a woman, warned a study on Monday.

The study was based on more than 500,000 patients admitted to hospital emergency departments for acute myocardial infarction — a medical term for heart attack — in Florida between 1991 and 2010.

Researchers at Harvard University found a “stark” difference in survival according to whether the patient’s and doctor’s gender matched. Namely, when women were treated by female doctors, “there was a significant and positive effect” on survival, said the study in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Almost 12 percent of patients die when rushed for emergency treatment for a heart attack.

Matching female doctors to female patients “reduced the probability of death by 5.4 percent, relative to this baseline,” it said.

By another way of looking at the data, “female patients treated by male physicians were 1.52 percent less likely to survive than male patients treated by female physicians.”

Previous studies have shown that women are more likely than men to die of heart attacks. But why? Some experts have suggested it may be because women’s symptoms are different than men’s, or that they tend to delay treatment more often than men.

This study offers a new explanation for why gender inequality in heart attack mortality persists.

“Most physicians are male, and male physicians appear to have trouble treating female patients,” said the report. Researchers found that the more women a male doctor treated in his life, the less likely his female patients were to die.

However, this presented a “catch-22” because it suggests a certain number of women must die so that the doctor could learn from his mistakes.

“This decrease may come at the expense of earlier female patients,” said the report.

One problem is that most doctors are male, so matching female doctors to female patients just isn’t possible much of the time.—AFP

Chinese astronomers discover giant star rich in lithium

BEIJING — Chinese astronomers have discovered the most lithium-rich giant star ever known and it could shed new light on the evolution of the universe.

With 3,000 times more lithium than a normal star, it was found in the direction of Ophiuchus, on the north side of the galactic disk, at a distance of 4,500 light years from Earth.

A research team, led by astronomers from National Astronomical Observatories of China (NAO) of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, made the discovery with the Large Sky Area Multi-Object Fiber Spectroscopic Telescope (LAMOST) located in NAO’s Xinglong Observatory, in north China’s Hebei Province.

The results of the study were published in the latest issue of Nature Astronomy.

China to establish national commission for quantum computing standards

JINAN — A Chinese national technological commission for quantum computing and measurement is under construction to promote industrialization of quantum technology.

The commission will be built by Jinan Institute of Quantum Technology, and Shandong Bureau of Quality and Technical Supervision. Preparation for the commission is estimated to take six months.

Quantum computing, measurement, and telecommunication have developed fast in recent years. Despite this, the quantum industries still lack official standards.

Quantum communication uses quantum entanglement of photons to make sure nobody taps into the line, which can corrupt the signal and potentially allow sensitive information to be leaked.

Jinan, capital of Shandong Province, has established a quantum telecom network, providing a secure connection for communication between the Communist Party and government bodies.

The city unveiled a plan to build a quantum valley in May this year. By 2025, it aims to have an industry cluster worth over tens of billions of dollars.

A 2,000 km quantum communication line in China known as the Jing-Hu (Beijing-Shanghai) Trunk Line, connects Beijing, Jinan, Hefei, and Shanghai. The line is the world’s first trunk line for secure quantum telecommunication.

It is connected to the world’s first quantum satellite, which was launched by China in August 2016. The satellite is nicknamed “Micius,” after a fifth century B.C. Chinese philosopher and scientist who has been credited as the first person to conduct optical experiments.—Xinhua

TOKYO (Japan) — Technology is a tool that helps us to create. It is available to us today to ensure that we can build a better world in the future.

As we strive for a society where men and women have true equality, we can see that the critical area of computer education remains a male-dominated field in many countries.

The problem was examined in a 2017 report by Britain’s Royal Society, which found that “computing in the UK is a male-dominated subject and actions need to be taken to improve the gender balance.” [1] The report found that the gender imbalance remained even after the U.K. made computer programming a compulsory area of study for all students in 2014.

The report found that after completing their compulsory education, the ratio of young women seeking to pursue university or college studies in Information and Communications Technology (ICT) was just 39%, and only 20% sought to go into computing. These numbers were far lower than the 49%-50% who chose mathematics, physics or chemistry. This disparity exists even though girls proved themselves to be superior students in computing classes, proportionally outsourcing boys in the top three grading levels of A+, A and B.

At the same time, the report said that girls appeared to be more confident about studying computing and computer science when not competing directly with boys. It found that 12.3% of students at girls’ schools chose to study computing, much higher than the 3.4% ratio at mixed schools. It stressed that government and industry-funded IT support programs for teachers must prioritize changing the gender balance in computing.

History Shows A Way Forward

Looking at history, it is clear that there is no practical reason for this male dominance, with women making some of the landmark achievements in computing. Computer scientist Margaret Hamilton led the MIT team that developed on-board flight software for NASA’s Apollo Space Programme. More than 100 years earlier, it was another woman, English mathematician Ada Lovelace, who created the first algorithm to be carried out by a machine, becoming what is seen today as the world’s first computer programmer. “I was kind of nerdy and so I got into computers,” says Haiyan Zhang, Innovation Director at Microsoft Research Cambridge in the UK. Her work includes developing technology for the medical and educational fields, as well as for disabled people. She notes that during her time in high school, very few female students took computer classes.—AFP
LONDON (United Kingdom)— Chelsea goalkeeper Thibaut Courtois did not report to training with the Premier League side on Monday, casting further doubt over his future after being linked with a move to Real Madrid. The 26-year-old Belgium international was granted an extended rest after his country finished third at the World Cup, but he was scheduled to return to training following Chelsea’s 2-0 loss to Manchester City in the Community Shield.

Courtois joined Chelsea from Belgian side Genk in 2011 and spent the next three seasons on loan at Atletico Madrid before dislodging Petr Cech as first choice at Stamford Bridge. He has repeatedly stated his desire to move closer to his two children in the Spanish capital, and with just a year remaining on his contract Chelsea risk losing him for a reduced fee in January or for free next summer.

Eden Hazard, whose deal expires in 2020, has also long been the subject of speculation over a move to Real, but the forward was present at the club’s Cobham training base on Monday. Chelsea boss Maurizio Sarri, who replaced Antonio Conte last month, admitted on Friday he was unsure whether Courtois would stay.

At the moment Courtois is the goalkeeper of the club, of Chelsea,” Sarri said. “I don’t know in the future. It depends on the club. It depends especially on him, I think. “But, I hope that Courtois will be our goalkeeper. It’s very important for us to keep the top players.”—AFP

Former heavyweight champ
Parker in school visit row

WELLINGTON (New Zealand)— Former heavyweight boxing champion Joseph Parker’s latest fight has him not be there.

The school claimed it was the Park-er camp that requested a restricted audience with board member Piri Cribb saying it was an opportunity to work with a section of students who were less engaged. “It’s not a separatist movement and it’s not an elite strategy,” she said. “It is simply an opportunity to capitalise on the cultural similarities that this man has with our young men.” But Parker insisted he wanted all pupils to have the chance to hear him and was disappointed in how the event had been planned.

“I’m even more disappointed the school would claim that they had done this at my request — when that is clearly untrue,” he said.

“If we go down to see the kids we’d like to see everyone,” Parker added in Auckland at his first media conference and was disappointed in how the event had been planned.

Man City’s fast start
a pleasant surprise for Gundogan

LONDON—Manchester City midfielder Ilkay Gundogan was pleasantly surprised by how quickly the English champions settled back into their stride by beating Chelsea 2-0 to win the Community Shield in an ominous performance for the rest of the Premier League.

Pep Guardiola’s men begin their title defence at Arsenal on Sunday, looking to back-up a record-breaking campaign that saw them amass 100 points to win the league by a 19-point margin from Manchester United. “I was curious the way we would start the game and how it would go,” German international Gundogan told the club’s website. “I wouldn’t say that it was necessary to give us confidence, but the first weeks when the season starts, the important games start, you never really know what to expect. You don’t really know 100 percent on which level you are. “It was a great test for us, a last test before the Premier League season. At the end we feel ready right now and we can’t wait for the season to start.”

Guardiola could even afford the luxury of leaving Kevin De Bruyne, David Silva and Raheem Sterling out of his matchday squad at Wembley after their World Cup exertions. However, Sergio Aguero showed no hangover from Argentina’s early exit in Russia by scoring twice to take his tally for the club to 201. “We feel very lucky to have Sergio in our team, a striker like him,” added Gundogan. “On top of that even Gabriel (Jesus) with his ability and his quality We have two great strikers and feel very, very happy.”—AFP
