State Counsellor receives Thai Minister of Foreign Affairs

Natural Strategic Partnership, Myanmar migrant workers, second Friendship Bridge among issues discussed

DAW Aung San Suu Kyi, State Counsellor of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar, received H.E. Mr. Don Pramudwinai, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Thailand at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Nay Pyi Taw on 14 August at 15:00 hrs., during his visit to Myanmar to attend the 9th Meeting of Joint Commission for Bilateral Cooperation between Myanmar and Thailand, and the 70th Anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

During the meeting, the State Counsellor and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Thailand discussed various issues ranging from promoting bilateral relations, economic and socio-cultural cooperation; enhancing the bilateral relations between Myanmar and Thailand to the “Natural Strategic Partnership”; doubling the current bilateral trade volume by 2022; working continuously for the legal employment of Myanmar migrant workers and their due entitlements; opening of the 2nd Myanmar-Thailand Friendship Bridge for better connectivity; strengthening the exchanges between the Provinces/States and Regions along the border; implementing of modern villages project based on agriculture, livestock and farming to contribute to the efforts of the Myanmar Government for the development of Rakhine State; promoting people-to-people contacts and tourism with agriculture, livestock and farming; and exploring possible ways to further expand the multi-faceted cooperation in both bilateral and regional contexts. — MNA

Second Pyithu Hluttaw’s ninth regular session holds ninth-day meeting

By Aye Aye Thant (MNA)

THE Second Pyithu Hluttaw’s ninth regular session held its ninth-day meeting at the Pyithu Hluttaw meeting hall yesterday morning. At the meeting, asterisk-marked questions were answered by Deputy Minister for Education U Win Maw Tun and Deputy Minister for Construction U Kyaw Lin. Also at the meeting, a motion was tabled and a report read.

Questions and answers

During the asterisk-marked question session, U Myo Win of Thanatpin constituency first raised a question on plans to open an AGTI (Associate Government Technical Institute) and a Teachers’ Training College in Bago. Deputy Minister for Education U Win Maw Tun said the Ministry of Education is coordinating among its departments on opening an AGTI in Bago, if land is available.

If land is obtained at the Department of Higher Education, Bago University, for the AGTI (Bago) plan, budget allocation for the building, furniture and teaching aids will be included in fiscal year 2018-2019 and implemented when necessary.

As for teachers’ training, education colleges were already opened in Taungoo and Pyay cities, in Bago Region, where D.T.Ed. (Diploma in Teacher Education) and PPTT (Pre-Service Primary Teacher Training) courses were conducted, producing about 300 D.T.Ed. teachers and 600 PPTT teachers (annually). Furthermore, teacher to student ratio in Bago Region is from 1.24 to 1:19 in primary level, showing that sufficient number of teachers was already employed in Bago Region. Therefore, there is no plan at the moment to open a teachers training college in Bago, said the Deputy Minister.

Replying to a question raised by U Aung Kyaw Oo of Mongton constituency on the reason for the seemingly sudden plan to change question formats in the matriculation examination during 2018-2019 academic year and whether it would be more appropriate to first change the question format in grade ten this education year, Deputy Minister for Education U Win Maw Tun replied that the main aim of changing the question format is to promote critical thinking over rote learning.

But more importantly, the question formats are not changed entirely, as there will be questions in rote learning format as well as in meaningful learning formats, only with the exception that there will be more questions on meaningful learning formats. The questions will cover the entire syllabus with questions balanced in easy, moderate and difficult levels so students who had covered the entire syllabus wouldn’t find much difficulty in sitting the examination, said the Deputy Minister.

Furthermore, the new question formats are being published in state-owned media and internet websites of Ministry of Information and Ministry of Education for students to study, while trainings, talks and discussions with high school teachers were conducted for new question formats, explained the Deputy Minister.

Questions raised by U Saw Thalay Saw of Shwegyin constituency, U Sein Aung of Paletwa constituency, Daw Nan Moe of Mongton constituency, U Min Thein of Taungdwingyi constituency, U Kyaw Myint of Taikkyi constituency, U Nyunt Aung of Monywa constituency, U Khin Maung Myint of Yangon Region constituency and U Yan Kyin Kan of Künstlond constituency, Daw Thandar of Emme constituency and Daw Khin Saw Wai of Yathedaung constituency were also answered by Deputy Ministers U Win Maw Tun and U Kyaw Lin.

Motion urging the government to provide research grants to researchers

Next, Dr. Hla Moe of Aungmyaythazan constituency tabled a motion urging the government to increase the development momentum of Myanmar education by establishing a good research environment and providing research grants to researchers.

After the Hluttaw decided to discuss the motion, Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker announced for Hluttaw representatives who want to discuss the motion to enroll their names.

Bill committee report on literature and art copyright bill

Afterwards, Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker informed the Hluttaw of the receipt of Literature and Art Copyright Bill, approved and sent with amendments by the Amyotha Hluttaw.

The Bill committee report on the bill was then read and submitted by a Bill Committee member, after which the Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker announced for Hluttaw representatives who want to table an amendment motion to enroll their names.

The Second Pyithu Hluttaw’s ninth regular session will hold its tenth-day meeting on 17 August, it is learnt.
Myanmar, Thai mark 70 years of diplomatic relations

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi delivers a speech at the ceremony to commemorate the 70th Anniversary of the Establishment of Myanmar-Thailand Diplomatic Relations in Nay Pyi Taw.

The ceremony was also attended by Union Ministers U Kyaw Tint Swe, U Thaung Tun, U Thant Sin Maung, U Thein Swe, U Ohn Maung and U Kyaw Tin, Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman Dr. Myo Aung, Deputy Ministers, Ambassadors of Myanmar to Thailand U Myo Myint Thain, Ambassador of Thailand to Myanmar H.E. Mr. Juk Boon Long, Directors-General from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, special guests and officials.

In her opening speech, the State Counsellor said, “His Excellency Mr. Don Pramudwinai, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Thailand, Excellencies, Distinguished Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen, Good evening. It is a great pleasure for us to jointly celebrate with Thailand the auspicious occasion of the 70th Anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between Myanmar and Thailand. I am happy and honoured that H.E. Mr. Don Pramudwinai, Foreign Minister of Thailand is present here today. I thank all our guests for joining us in our celebration of a long and valued friendship.

Thailand has always been one of our most important regional partners as well as a close neighbor of Myanmar. We share 2416 km long border, and we have been cooperating in various areas since the establishment of diplomatic relations on 24 August 1948. Throughout the 79-year journey, our two countries have resolved issues, large and small, through amicable dialogue and consultations, based on friendship, mutual understanding and mutual respect. Thailand was the very first country outside Myanmar on which I set foot after I was released from house arrest in 2010. Thailand was also the first country I chose for my first official visit abroad after the assumption of my official duties in our new Government. I felt the warmth of friendship, kindness and hospitality extended by the Government and people of Thailand during both visits. During my official visit to Thailand in June 2016, I had very constructive discussions with Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-Cha and felt that the good relationship between our countries had been further cemented.

I do not think it is an exaggeration to say that the relations between our two countries is better than it has ever been. The cordial and close engagement between our Governments, as well as through various bilateral cooperation mechanisms, have added new dimensions to an already existing understanding and trust.

Thailand is hosting millions of Myanmar migrant workers, providing employment opportunities, as well as experience for them. In return, Myanmar workers have been contributing to the development of the Thai economy. Our two countries have been coordinating and working together to ensure security, economy and mutually beneficial arrangements. We thank the Government of Thailand for the understanding and support offered to us and we are confident that the cooperation between Myanmar and Thailand will continue to become stronger and more comprehensive.

We always stand ready to help each other in times of need. Thailand provided technicians and necessary assistance when we had to cope with the assistance to the flood victims of Myanmar. We thank Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-Cha and the Government of Thailand for the donation of 3 million Bahts in humanitarian assistance for those affected by the recent floods in Myanmar. It was with genuine metta that Myanmar; in our turn, offered volunteers and assistance to Thailand with regard to the rescue operation of the 13 young students trapped in a cave. Such understanding and goodwill between us is a vital part of our special, neighbourly relationship. We believe that what helps one helps the other. Our people have always appreciated the consistent support that Thailand has rendered to us in our efforts to achieve peace and national reconciliation.

We have also forged a very strong partnership in the contexts of ASEAN and in the international community in general. Positive Myanmar-Thailand relations contribute to regional progress and stability. We can now see the true potential of our relations and what it means for our two countries. By facing the challenges together, we find the best way of overcoming them.

I wish to congratulate once again, His Excellency Mr. Don Pramudwinai and through you, the people of Thailand, on the very successful 70-year journey that we have walked together.

We are gathered here this evening with our close friends and colleagues to cherish and to remember the achievements that our two countries have accomplished together over the last seventy years. We are determined to continue along the path that will brighten the friendship between Myanmar because, we believe as close neighbors that the security of Myanmar is the security of Thailand. We share more than just the border … we share everything else and this is most apparent nowadays when we work together in all aspects, not just only in a regional ASEAN basis but most evidently in our bilateral relations,” he added.

The Thai Foreign Minister also expressed his delight for the Myanmar counterpart who are willing to engage with Thailand delegation in all aspects from the peace issue of the 21st century Panglong Conference, down to the issue of labour between Myanmar and Thailand.

“We share the border, we are very much alike, we feel almost exactly the same, we feel considerate at all times towards others. And more importantly, we know we are working towards the same destination, so we should feel natural with one other. So, this is the first time that Thailand has introduced this terminology of a natural strategic partnership with another country,” said Don Pramudwinai.

“We have chosen this country as our first natural strategic partnership and I hope this is a great movement for Myanmar. But for us, we know that it is more than just special, it’s something that would really underscore the future of a new generation; the future of Thai and Myanmar,” said Don Pramudwinai.

The Foreign Minister also underscored the relations between Thailand and Myanmar which have been stable and very firm, saying that today is even more so because the two countries were able to forge both countries and bilateral relations with people to a new height.

Afterwards, State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Thailand H.E. Mr. Don Pramudwinai, Union Ministers and guests had dinner together.

During the dinner, Myanmar-Thailand cultural troupes performed traditional dances and songs and State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Thailand H.E. Mr. Don Pramudwinai presented floral baskets to the Myanmar-Thailand cultural troupes.

Shan’s pineapples selling at a loss in Ruili

PINEAPPLES produced in Shan State are sent to Shweli (Ruili) in Yunnan Province, China, through Muse border gate at a loss on cost price.

Pineapples fetched a good price during the harvest time, and growers hoped to get a high price during the closing season. But now, they are sold at a loss.

“A truck carrying 650 to 700 pineapples were previously offered over 3,000 yuan. Now, pineapples are being sold at a lower price. Unlike merchants from China, Myanmar’s growers are individually selling them at a price offered. They cannot earn truck fare and custom export duty,” said Daw Khin Saw Myint, a seller from Singin Village.

Last year, pineapple growers faced losses. They were offered a good price during harvest time and forced to sell the stocks at a loss on cost price, as they couldn’t return the fruits to town. A truck loaded with pineapples costs over Ks200,000. A single pineapple is sold for only Ks300, resulting in loss. There is no organization to regulate the pineapple market. Therefore, the price depends only on China’s purchase price, said U Zaw Hmine, a pineapple grower.

China purchases pineapples produced in Singin, Konethar and Hsipaw towns. Pineapples from Kyaukme are directly sent to Yangon. 100 Chinese yuan to Myanmar kyat is estimated above Ks20,000. Therefore, a truck carrying 700 pineapples is offered at 1,200 Yuan or over Ks240,000. China allows fruit import only through Wangtein gate. China’s ban on three wheelers of Myanmar merchants in China’s border area is also related to sales drop in pineapple market, somehow. Pineapples are exported to China through Muse starting from early June. The pineapple growers this year are facing with a great loss due to fruit damage with the use of artificial ripen method and delay caused by transportation difficulties. — Than Htike

Muse border gate shows increase of trade values since April

MUSE land port of entry saw trade values increase by US$320 million from 1 April to 3 August, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

The Muse gate is Myanmar’s busiest border trade point. Border trade at Muse was estimated at $2.65 billion, with exports worth $1.46 billion and imports valued at $589 million.

Five border gates are opened for trading with China: Muse, Lwejel, Kampikete, Kengtung and Chinshwehaw. Sino-Myanmar trade over the past four months, during the six-month interim period prior to next fiscal year 2018-2019, amounted to $2.31 billion, an increase of $262 million, compared to same period last year.

Myanmar’s exports to the most populous country, China, surpassed its imports. Rice, various kinds of peas, sesame seeds, corn, vegetables and fruits, dried tea leaves, fishery products, rubber, minerals and animal products are exported to China, whereas machinery, plastic raw materials, consumer products and electronic tools flow into Myanmar. — Mon Mon

Myanmar sculpture market cool in Bagan this year

MYANMAR sculpture market is cool in Bagan area this year and tourists are also asking sculptors to give a recommendation letter when they buy the sculptures, said a sculptor from Bagan area.

“Most of the tourists visit Bagan. When they visit Bagan, they keenly observe the sculptures, one of the artwork of Myanmar, and purchase them. This year, they asked us to write a recommendation letter that the sculptures they bought were owned and produced by us,” said U Aung Sint, a sculptor from Shwezigon Pagoda.

“I’ve been working in the sculpture business for more than 25 years. In this trade, there are two different lines, Myanmar traditional and modern. I’m in Myanmar traditional sculpture line, producing Buddha and Nat (spirit) statues. We use any wood with which we can make good sculptures. We focus on carving statues and arabesque designs. The prices of our sculptures range between Ks 1,500 and Ks 2 million, depending on the design and quality,” he added.

Although most of the tourists are interested in purchasing statues, many don’t, because they have difficulties in taking them back to their country and just end up simply observing the sculptures at work. Sculpture business doesn’t make much money for local people this year. — Kyaw Kyaw (Mahlaing)

T HE provision of a wide-array of farming-related information to the peasants in real-time is most basic requirement for the development of the agricultural sector of Myanmar. But the work of choosing an information sharing system in a developing country like Myanmar is indeed a challenging one.

When we study the experiences of other developing countries in doing this job, we have found cell phones as the most effective tool for sending information to farmers. As Myanmar is experiencing the era of cell phones, we should seriously take into consideration the model of applying those gadgets as a tool in distributing information all over the country.

It is our ambition to fulfill this national requirement, the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation organized a workshop with the participation of the Myanmar Agriculture Network MAN as its partner in the project of sharing knowledge on farming. In 2013, the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation formed the MAN with the involvement of local and foreign business organizations in addition to the relevant departments and universities to participate in all its mem- bership and activities and the involvement of the organizations is striving for general food-related oppor- tunities and increasing investments in the country.

Myanmar attending Asia Cross Country Rally (AXCR) 2018 as observer

SEVEN members from Myanmar Motor Sports Organization, led by Asia Cross Country Rally Myanmar representative Daw Mya Thaung Wai left Yangon International Airport on the morning of 11 August to attend Asia Cross Country Rally (AXCR) 2018 as observer.

The Asia Cross Country Rally (AXCR) event for 2018 will start from Pattaya, Thailand on 12th August and finish at Phnom Penh, Cambodia on 18th August.

At the event, cars, motorcycle and motorcycle sidecar will compete. The Asia Cross Country Rally will be participated by eight countries including Japan, Thailand, Malaysia, Taiwan and Cambodia. The organization leader Daw Mya Thaung Wai said that they will participate in this Asia Cross Country Rally with two vehicles as a preparation to host Asia Cross Country Rally (AXCR) in Myanmar in 2019.—Myo Min Thura

High tide floods low-lying areas

The high tide also pushed the Yangon River over its banks and caused flooding in Dala Township and in low-lying areas along the Strand Road in Yangon since two days ago.

Due to the high tide in Dala Township, water rises up to more than 4 ft. in Khaunag Ywama village near the mouth of the river. Water entered into some houses, and a bridge over the Kama Aung creek was also inundated.

During the months of monsoon, and during high tide periods water rises to record levels but it usually subsides, it is learnt. —GNLM

Trump signs $716 bil. defence bill to modernize military

WASHINGTON — US President Donald Trump on Monday signed into law a $716 billion defence spending bill to modernize the military and increase service people's salary.

The spending for fiscal 2019 starting in October “is the most significant investment in our military and our warfighters in modern history,” Trump said as he signed the bill at the US Army’s Fort Drum base in New York.

It authorizes spending for 77 F-35 fighter jets, 13 new battle force ships and other assets, as well as an increase of 13,600 troops across the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, according to the White House.

Trump said the United States is carrying out “a major upgrade” of missile defence and spending “a tremendous amount of money” to modernize the nuclear arsenal.

“We will replace aging tanks, aging planes and ships with the most advanced and lethal technology ever developed,” he said.

“And hopefully we’ll be so strong we’ll never have to use it. But if we ever did, nobody has a chance.”

The measure will also boost military pay by 2.6 per cent, the largest increase in nine years, the White House said.

Former Brazil finance minister charged with corruption

BRASILIA (Brazil) — Former Brazil finance minister Guido Mantega was indicted on Monday on money laundering and other charges as part of the corruption scandal that has rocked the country’s business and political elites.

Mantega, 69, is accused of taking money from construction giant Odebrecht in exchange for helping to advance legislation that benefited the company, Judge Sergio Moro wrote.

It is the first time Mantega has been charged in the so-called “Operation Car Wash”, a vast probe of a pay-to-play relationship between Brazilian companies and politicians centered around the state oil company Petrobras. Mantega was finance minister during the second term of former president Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva, and continued to hold the post under Lula’s successor Dilma Rousseff.—AFP

Text-messaging FBI agent Peter Strzok fired: lawyer

WASHINGTON (United States) — FBI agent Peter Strzok, who was removed from the probe into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election after it was revealed he had exchanged anti-Trump text messages with his lover, has been fired, his lawyer said on Monday.

Alia Goelman, Strzok’s attorney, said the 21-year veteran of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was fired by FBI deputy director David Bowdich on Friday.

Goelman said Strzok was dismissed despite the fact that the disciplinary office had decided he should face a demotion and a 60-day suspension.

He described the move as “a departure from typical bureau practice.”

“This decision should be deeply troubling to all Americans,” Goelman said in a statement.

“The decision to terminate was taken in response to political pressure, and to punish Special Agent Strzok for political speech protected by the First Amendment, not on a fair and independent examination of the facts,” he said.

“In fact, in his decades of service, Special Agent Strzok has proved himself to be one of the country’s top counterintelligence officers,” Goelman said.

The decision to terminate professional conduct in response to political pressure, and to punish Special Agent Strzok for political speech protected by the First Amendment, not on a fair and independent examination of the facts,” he said.

It is a decision that produces only one winner — those who seek to harm our country and weaken our democracy,” the attorney said.

Strzok, 48, and his lover, former FBI lawyer Lisa Page, exchanged text messages during the 2016 election campaign which were critical of Republican nominee Donald Trump.

Following the public revelation of the messages, Strzok was removed by Special Counsel Robert Mueller from the investigation into Russian meddling in the 2016 election.

Trump has seized upon the messages to bolster his claim that the Special Counsel’s probe is a political “witch hunt” by biased prosecutors.—AFP

Cubans to join public debate on new constitution recognizing private enterprise

HAVANA (Cuba) — Cuba called on its citizens on Monday to join a series of public debates on a new constitution that will recognize the role of market forces and private enterprise in the Communist island’s economy.

A referendum will be held in February 2019 on the new post-Cold War constitution, and the one-party state called on its citizens to join debates to be held in universities and workplaces between 13 Monday August, and 15 November this year.

For the first time since the 1959 revolution, the 1.4 million Cubans living abroad, were also invited to participate in the discussion.

The timeline for the debates was set in honour of the revolution’s late leader, Fidel Castro, who was born on 13 August, 1926 and who died on 25 November, 2016.

The draft of the new constitution recognizes the role of the market and of private enterprise in the economy, but still under the supervision of the Communist Party, which will remain the only political party legally allowed on the island. The draft was approved by parliament in July.

President Miguel Diaz-Canel, who succeeded Castro’s younger brother Raul in April, said that during the public consultation process, “every Cuban can freely express their opinion.” The new constitution maintains the offices of president and vice president and also creates the position of a prime minister. It will limit the age limit for presidential candidates to 60 years. The president will serve for a five-year term and can run for a second consecutive term.

It also opens the door to same-sex marriage, a major demand of Cuba’s LGBT community.—AFP
Myanmar climbers eye Hkakabo Razi — the peak conquered only once

HPA-AN (Myanmar) — A two-week jungle trek followed by a sheer climb up avalanche-prone slopes to a jagged ridge of icy pinnacles awaits three Myanmar mountaineers planning to take on Hkakabo Razi, a peak so treacherous it has been conquered only once.

Believed to be the highest in Southeast Asia, the mountain stands at an estimated 5,881 metres (19,294 feet) in the northern tip of Myanmar near the border with China and India, a Himalayan cap of the largely tropical nation.

The formidable route to the top starts with a gruelling 240-kilometre (150-mile) slog by foot through Kachin state’s dense jungle, filled with venomous snakes and bloodsucking leeches.

But it is the challenging climb itself that has thwarted nearly all of the handful of attempts to reach the summit, one of which resulted in a deadly rescue attempt.

“The difficulty level of the mountain is extreme,” Zaw Zin Khine, 32, told AFP during a break from a training session on a limestone karst cliff in eastern Kayin state. The team will have to negotiate precarious faces of loose scree, frequent avalanches and a choice between ridges spiked with towers of rock and shrouded in snow and ice.

“There is a risk we won’t come back alive,” the climber added.

He and his two partners Pyae Phyo Aung, 36, and Aung Khaing Myint, 32, aspire to make history as the first all-Myanmar team to summit the mountain.

They also hope to settle a decades-long dispute over whether Hkakabo Razi or the nearby Gamlang Razi — also in Myanmar — claims the honour as the region’s highest.

‘Makes Everest look easy’

The three climbers, now waiting for the right window in the weather to start their expedition, have been in intensive training for months, including a trip to Nepal and sessions in a Yangon gym, wearing masks to simulate low-oxygen levels at altitude.

Team member Pyae Phyo Aung is one of only two people from Myanmar to have summited Mount Everest but he says Hkakabo Razi’s isolation and lack of infrastructure makes it far more perilous.

“Even if you’re 70 years old, you can get to the top of Everest if you have the money to pay people to pull you up,” he says.

“They maintain the routes from the base camp to the summit have lots of porters and it’s easy to find people by air if they’re missing. That’s not the case on Hkakabo Razi.”

The first known attempt to scale the mountain was by British explorer and botanist Frank Kingdon-Ward in 1936.

In his book “Burma’s ‘Icy Mountains”, he describes how the peak “utterly defeated” him, forcing him to turn back a vertical kilometre below the top.

It took another 60 years before Japanese mountaineer Takashi Ozaki and his Myanmar climbing partner Nyima Gyaltsen prevailed on their third attempt. Ozaki, the first-ever climber to successfully tackle Mount Everest’s north face, reportedly described the peak as “one of the most difficult and dangerous mountains in the world”.

Two separate expeditions in 2014 both met with costly failure. One local Myanmar team never returned, a tragedy magnified when a rescue helicopter crashed, killing one pilot. The other ill-fated ascent is the subject of a National Geographic documentary.

The expedition ground to an icy halt on what team member Emily Harrington remembers as a “nightmare ridge” that dropped off for hundreds of feet on either side, leaving them “depleted on all fronts”.

“We kinda assumed it would be like Nepal and Pakistan where the culture is centred around the mountains,” the 31-year-old told AFP from California. “But it’s not. They’re not used to people coming here to trek so we had to take more on ourselves.” — AFP

Tunisia anti-litter activist takes up 300-km, 30-beach challenge

TUNIS (Tunisia) — Bin bags at the ready, “long-distance activist” Mohamed Oussama Houjij moves methodically along a beach in Tunisia’s Mediterranean town of Nabeul, scooping up all kinds of trash as he goes along.

The 27-year-old sanitary engineer set out in July to walk a 300-kilometre (185-mile) stretch of coastline in northern Tunisia and clean up 30 beaches along the way.

He hopes the two-month trek will help convince authorities, holidaymakers and average Tunisians alike that the sea should not be used as a giant garbage tip.

With a sturdy pair of boots and a hat to shield him from the summer sun, Houjij began his journey in the central coastal city of Mahdia and plans to finish in Solimane, 40 kilometres (25 miles) from the capital Tunis.

The trip will take him through crowded hotspots like Daar Chaabane in Nabeul, but also along secluded coves and shores.

“I believe in citizen mobilization and I chose to act... and to raise awareness about the problem of pollution on our beaches,” the activist told AFP.

The Facebook page of his “300 kilometres” campaign has more than 13,000 followers and is entirely independent, he boasted.

“No political party is welcome... 300 Kilometres is a free citizen initiative and will remain forever,” the activist wrote on the page.

Drop of water

But while Houjij may be a dreamer, he is also realistic. “The 300 Kilometres action is not really about cleaning... I know I’m just a drop of water in the ocean,” he said.

“I want to raise public awareness and get people thinking: ‘Wait, it’s not normal, all these bottles, these caps... all these plastic bags!’”

Since Tunisia’s 2011 revolution, the proliferation of waste has steadily worsened across the country — in big cities, rural areas and beaches alike.

One contributing factor has been the absence of elected municipal councils.

Between the fall in 2011 of longtime dictator Zine El Abidine Ben Ali and local polls held in May 2018, town halls were managed by “special delegations” that often neglected issues like littering and waste management.

But there is also a lack of environmental awareness among Tunisians, Environment Minister Riadh Mouakher said in mid-2017 as he announced the launch of a special “green police” unit to combat the North African country’s industrial pollution “from one extreme to another”, he said.

The authorities do not take the problem of pollution in Tunisia seriously,” said Houij.

The environmental activist is also frustrated with holidaymakers who treat him as a “zabell” (rubbish collector) and don’t hesitate to ask him to pick up their waste.

Travelling with nothing but a rucksack and a guitar, on lucky nights he is offered shelter and a bed. Most nights, though, he sleeps rough.

Reactions from those he meets along the way range “from one extreme to another”, he said. “There are people who are very active, who encourage you and who help you clean up... but others kill your desire to work for the cause,” he added. “Each day brings enough trouble of its own, but the will is there... there’s no reason for me to stop.” —AFP

Sleeping rough

From plastic bottles and soiled diapers to commercial refuse, Oussama says he’s seen “all forms of pollution” seeping into the sea.

“I’ve seen a wide array of pollution, from the personal pollution of people who come to the beach to the industrial pollution” of local and public companies, he said.

The authorities do not take responsibility for pollution in Tunisia seriously,” said Houiji. The environmental activist is also frustrated with holidaymakers who treat him as a “zabell” (rubbish collector) and don’t hesitate to ask him to pick up their waste.

Typhoon Bebinca, forecast to hit northern Viet Nam soon

HANOI — Bebinca, the fourth typhoon to hit Viet Nam so far this year, is likely to make landfall in its northern region from Quang Ninh province to Nam Dinh province on Friday morning, according to the country’s National Centre for Hydro-Meteorological Forecasting on Tuesday.

On Friday, within a radius of some 90 km from the typhoon’s eye, strong winds will blow at speeds of 40-75 km per hour. From Wednesday night to Friday, Viet Nam’s northern region and the northern part of the central region are forecast to have heavy rain, said the centre.

Vietnamese localities are maintaining close contact with captains and owners of sea-going vessels and cruise ships, keeping strict surveillance on dykes and reservoirs, and organizing evacuation of local residents in low-lying, coastal, and landslide-prone areas, according to Viet Nam’s National Steering Committee for Natural Disaster Prevention and Control.

Natural disasters, mainly typhoons, flash floods and landslides, killed or left missing 78 people and injured 64 others, destroyed over 740 houses, damaged 18,100 other houses, and damaged 12,600 hectares of rice and other crops, causing property losses of around 1,468 billion Vietnamese dong (63.8 million US dollars) in the first seven months of this year, said Viet Nam’s General Statistics Office.

‘Queen of Soul’ Aretha Franklin ‘gravely ill’: reports

DETROIT (United States) — Music legend Aretha Franklin is “gravely ill” and surrounded by family and friends in Detroit, reports said on Monday, as prayers and well wishes poured in for the Grammy-winning ‘Queen of Soul.’

The 76-year-old Franklin — who influenced generations of pop divas with hits such as “Respect” (1967), “Natural Woman” (1968) and “I Say a Little Prayer” (1968) — was said to be at a Detroit hospital and has asked that details of her condition not be made public.

Franklin cemented her place in American music history with her powerful, bell-clear voice that stretched over four octaves — in her decades-long career, her hits spanned the genres, from soul to R&B to gospel.

She was the first woman to be inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1987.

Franklin’s serious condition was first disclosed on the Showbiz 411 website late Sunday by Roger Friedman, a reporter and family friend. He wrote that she was “gravely ill in Detroit. The family is asking for prayers and privacy.”

Local television stations later confirmed Franklin’s illness.

“I actually got a chance to talk to Miss Franklin about an hour ago,” WDIV journalist Evrod Cassimy said during the station’s noon newscast, describing himself as a “close friend.” “I’ve been speaking with her family members,” he added. “They have not only asked for prayers during this time, but they have also asked for their privacy.”

Robert Smith, the current pastor at the New Bethel Baptist Church in Detroit where Franklin’s father was the revered, told AFP that Franklin’s representatives asked him Monday to “keep praying for her.” “Everybody’s fearful,” Smith said. “I really don’t know what it would be like not to have her.”

Artists from across the musical spectrum offered well wishes to the legendary singer who has lived in Detroit — the Motor City, home of Motown music — most of her life. “My prayers are with Aretha Franklin and her family during this difficult time,” tweeted rapper Missy Elliott. “WE MUST CELEBRATE the Living Legends while they are here to see it. So many have given us decades of Timeless music.”

Boy George said: “This is sad news. Aretha Franklin, what a voice.” And, Mariah Carey tweeted simplified: “Praying for the Queen of Soul.”

Beatles’ Indian hideaway comes together, 50 years on

RISHIKESH (India) — Fifty years after the Beatles came to India, the bungalows where the Fab Four lived, the post office where John Lennon sent Yoko Ono postcards and the giggling guru’s house are all ruins. Maharishi Mahesh Yogi’s ashram, where the world’s most famous group sought refuge and spirituality in 1968 and wrote much of their seminal “White Album”, fell into disuse in the early 2000s.

But thanks to the efforts of a group of locals, the site has been reclaimed from the jungle and tourists now roam where tigers and snakes were until recently the most common day trippers.

“Before, people used to sneak in, which could be dangerous,” said local journalist Raja Gustin, instrumental in rescuing the area overlooking Rishikesh in northern India.

“There used to be leopard paw marks and elephant dung,” he told AFP on a tour of the site. “Now we have erected a fence to stop animals getting in from the tiger reserve next door.”

By 1968, following the death of Beatles manager Brian Epstein the year before, fissures worsened between the bandmates as McCartney left after five weeks. Asked the reason for his evident desire to make music, they were not haughty or arrogant, they were not haughty or arrogant, they were not haughty or arrogant, he told AFP on a tour of the site. “We MUST CELEBRATE the Living Legends while they are here to see it. So many have given us decades of Timeless music.”

“I felt like I actually was a feather floating over a hot-air pipe,” McCartney recalled later of one session. “And I reported that to Maharishi, and he giggled: ‘Yes, this is good!’ One local old enough to remember is Ajit Singh, the owner of a music shop — still open — in the nearby town of Dehradun, who fixed Lennon’s guitar and performed at Harrison’s 25th birthday. Tuned, thin and with a croaky voice, the 86-year-old Singh recalls with twinkling eyes the band wandering into the store one day, pursued by a crowd outside, and him “inviting them home for tea.”

“They were very polite with me, they were not haughty or something,” he told AFP in his shop. “I always said to people that they were good people.”

After a while though, relations worsened between the Beatles and the Maharishi, the atmosphere soured by the yogi’s rumoured sexual advances and his evident desire to make money from his famous new pupils. McCartney left after five weeks and Harrison and Lennon after two months. Asked the reason by the yogi, Lennon is reputed to have told the guru, “If you’re so cosmic you’ll know why.”

Lindsay Lohan apologises for criticising #MeToo movement

LOS ANGELES — Actor Lindsay Lohan has apologised for her comments about #MeToo where she had said that women look weak by speaking out about sexual misconduct.

The 32-year-old actor said she is apologising because she understands how her statements may have caused hurt.

“I would like to unreservedly apologize for any hurt and distress caused by a quote in a recent interview with The Times,” Lohan told People magazine.

“The quote solely related to my hope that a handful of false testimonies out of a tsunami of heroic voices do not serve to dilute the importance of the #MeToo movement, and all of us who champion it. However, I have since learned how statements like mine are seen as hurtful, which was never my intent. I’m sorry for any pain I may have caused,” she added.

The actor said she had “utmost respect and adoration for women who chose to speak about facing harassment. Their testimony has served to protect those who can’t speak, and give strength to those who have struggled to have their voices heard,” she added.

In an interview to British newspaper The Times, Lohan had termed those who spoke out as “attention seekers”. “If it happens at that moment, you discuss it at that moment. I make it a real thing by making it a police report. I’m going to really hate myself for saying this, but I think by women speaking against these things, it makes them look weak when they are very strong women,” she had said.

200-million year old Pterosaur ‘built for flying’

PARIS (France) — Scientists on Monday unveiled a previously unknown species of giant pterosaur, the first creatures with a backbone to fly under their own power.

Neither dino nor bird, pterosaurs — more commonly known as pterodactyls — emerged during the late Triassic period more than 200 million years ago and lorded over primordial skies until a massive space rock slammed into Earth, wiping out land-dwelling dinosaurs and most other forms of life more than 65 million years ago.

The newly discovered member of the family, identified through remains found in northeastern Utah, had a wing-span of 1.5 metres (five feet) and 112 teeth, including fang-like spikes sticking out near the snout.

A jawing lower jaw suggests a pelican-like pouch, perhaps to scoop up fish and unsuspecting small reptiles.

“They are delicately framed animals that are built for flying,” said Brooks Britt, a paleontologist at Brigham Young University in Utah and lead author of a study in Nature Ecology & Evolution.

Caelolestiventus hansenii — roughly, “heavenly wind” — is probably the most complete skeletal remains of a pterosaurs ever found.

“Most pterosaurs bones look like road kill,” Britt told AFP, noting that there are only 30-odd specimens in the entire world from the Triassic period.

By contrast, the new specimen left behind dozens of intact bones and teeth, along with an entire brain casing.

The remains are still encased in sandstone, but scientists generated accurate 3-D images and models of each fossil using CAT scan technology.

The site where C. hansenii was unearthed, known to fossil hunters as Saints & Sinners, reveals a dramatic story of survival and local extinction in the face of climate change, the researchers said.

The rocks it was found in were part of an oasis in a two-million square kilometer (775,000 square mile) desert covered with giant sand dunes.

“During droughts, large numbers of animals — including pterosaurs, predatory dinosaurs and crocodylomorphs — were drawn to the pond in the middle of the oasis, where they died as water dried up,” said Britt.

The result was a treasure trove of more than 18,000 bones from dozens of water-starved animals.

C. hansenii is not the biggest pterosaur ever found, but was likely the largest of its era, especially for a desert environment.

It also predates other desert-dwelling specimens by about 65 million years. The other pterosaurs from the same period found so far came from coastal areas in what is now Europe and Greenland.

That the high-flying creatures were spread across much of the globe may have helped them survive — some 201 million years ago — the end-of-Triassic mass extinction, which wiped out half of the species on land and in the sea. —AFP

SpaceX vows manned flight to space station is on track

LOS ANGELES — Tech magnate Elon Musk’s SpaceX vowed on Monday to send its first astronauts into orbit on Russia’s Soyuz spacecraft — at a cost of some $80 million a seat.

A US government report released in July said it was unlikely that SpaceX would be able to send astronauts to the ISS next year.

Shotwell said however the mission would go ahead as soon as SpaceX was “ready to fly these folks safely.”

“Next in line we want to make sure not only that we get these folks up and back safely but that’s reliable and a mission that we conclude,” she added.

“We want to hit all the boxes do everything we need to do, to demonstrate that this vehicle is capable of taking astronauts up from US soil as often as NASA will allow us.”

SpaceX unveiled its astronauts, all clad in blue overalls and smiling proudly in front of the module that will transport them to the ISS, to answer questions from the media.

“Being able to fly as a first flight a vehicle as a test pilot is a ‘once in a generation’ type of opportunity, so obviously I’m very thankful for it,” said Hurley.

“But I would also say that we’ve got a lot of work left to do.” —AFP

Apple postpones FaceTime group chats feature from iOS 12

SAN FRANCISCO — Apple on Monday removed the long-anticipated Group FaceTime feature from the first public version of iOS 12 and macOS Mojave betas, which were released earlier in the day.

“Group FaceTime of iOS 12 and macOS Mojave were designed mainly to allow a maximum of 32 people to chat in group sessions at the same time, a feature that had been available in iOS 12 and macOS Mojave since the first betas became available in June.”

“Group FaceTime has been removed from the initial release of iOS 12 and will ship in a future software update later this fall,” Apple said in its latest developer release posted by Apple developer Guilherme Rambo on Twitter.

Apple announced the new feature of iOS 12 during its annual Worldwide Developers Conference (WWDC) held in San Jose, northern California, two months ago, when more than 1,000 engineers and developers attended the high-tech giant’s grand gathering.

Senegal attacker Keita Balde returns to Italy with ambitious Inter

ROME (Italy) — Inter Milan on Monday continued their strong summer transfer window ahead of the start of the Serie A season, announcing the return to Italy of Senegal international Keita Balde on loan from French Ligue 1 side Monaco.

Ambitious Inter, who have been busy in the transfer market after finishing fourth in Serie A last season and qualifying for the Champions League for the first time since 2011, have brought in the 23-year-old former Lazio striker for a reported initial five million euros ($5.7 million).

The fee will rise to 39 million euros should the Serie A club exercise an option to buy next summer, according to Italian media.

“The forward Keita Balde Diao is a new Nerazzurri player. The Senegalese has signed for Inter from Monaco on a year-long loan with an option to make the deal permanent,” Inter said in a statement.

Balde rose to prominence at Lazio in 2016-17, when he scored 16 goals in 31 league appearances — 10 of which were from the bench — before sinking into a contract row at the start of last season and leaving for France.

Last term he scored eight goals and provided five assists in 23 Ligue 1 appearances as Monaco finished second behind champions Paris Saint-Germain.

Balde joins fellow Inter newcomers Radja Nainggolan, signed from rivals Roma, promising Argentine attacker Lautaro Martinez and Dutch international centre-back Stefan de Vrij.

They have also brought in right-back Sime Vrsaljko, who started in six of Croatia’s seven matches in their run to the World Cup final, on loan from Atletico Madrid.—AFP

Federer ‘anxious’ ahead of return in Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (Ohio) — Roger Federer on Monday said he is eager to make his start at the Cincinnati Masters as the world number two begins his delayed summer hardcourt season.

With the US Open a fortnight away, the 37-year-old Swiss is keen to test his form prior to the 27 August kick-off of the last Grand Slam of the season.

The 20-time major winner skipped Toronto last week to pace himself with the tournament at Flushing Meadows followed by the Laver Cup in Chicago in mid-September.

“I’ve trained hard, I’m anxious. I chose to skip Toronto for the health of my body,” the seven-time Cincinnati champion said. “I don’t want to be hurt, there is too much to play.”

But the Swiss admitted that sitting out competition is difficult.

“Watching from afar is tough,” said Federer, who will start against Peter Gojowczyk after the German beat Portugal’s Joao Sousa 2-6, 6-4, 7-5. “But that’s part of growing older, you’ve got to take care of the body.”

“It’s nice to be back and I hope to have a good tournament.”

Federer last played a match on hardcourt 141 days ago, when he lost in the Miami second round to Thanasi Kokkinakis before skipping the clay season and returning on grass.

He said that while he would prefer not to take weeks away, he has now become a necessity in prolonging his fabled career.

“You’ve got to keep it all in perspective, it’s easier now for me to take time away. I wish I could play everything but it’s not possible.”

“I’m more relaxed about my schedule now. I have more time for the family, which is important for me,” the father of two sets of twins said.

“The hectic part of my life has passed. Even when I have to take time away, I still get something out of it.”

Federer did express regret that Rafael Nadal, the Toronto champion, had to withdraw from Cincinnati in order to ease the strain on his body after a solid, if demanding, week of success.

Emery needs time to rebuild Arsenal — Petr Cech

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Arsenal goalkeeper Petr Cech pleaded for patience after Unai Emery’s first match as Arsene Wenger’s successor ended in a 2-0 defeat to Manchester City.

The Gunners were largely outclassed by the Premier League champions on Sunday and struggled to implement some obvious changes demanded by Emery in the off-season.

Cech nearly scored an embarrassing own goal and looked uncomfortable in trying to play out from the back as City pressed high.

After a series of risky passes, a long clearance by Cech was met with huge cheers from the Arsenal fans, but the veteran called for Emery’s methods to be given time.

“I think they have to understand that when you start building a new team with a new manager and a completely new way it may take time,” said Cech, who kept his place in goal ahead of new signing Bernd Leno.

A tough start for the Spanish coach continues next weekend against Cech’s old club Chelsea at Stamford Bridge. Cech’s new boss Maurizio Sarri did get off to a winning start in his Premier League debut at Huddersfield.

But Cech believes Arsenal can take heart from Chelsea’s own struggles to cope with City in losing the Community Shield 2-0 last weekend.

“Next week we have another big game but we will be better prepared because we have this game behind us. I believe we pushed them more than Chelsea did in the Community Shield,” he added.

Many of the concepts Emery wants to implement at Arsenal are similar to what Pep Guardiola has mastered in raising the bar at City.

And the difference between a project now into its third season under Guardiola and Emery’s early days was obvious on the opening weekend of the season.

“We try and build the team and create our own way of playing,” said Cech.

“Obviously we have been doing that for five weeks, they have been doing that for three years now so obviously they have a big advantage.” — AFP
