State Counsellor discusses literary fiction with University students

The difference is “The Catcher” is about a foreign country and Saya Aung Khin Myint’s book is about a young medical student around 1988-90 periods. Since I’m a medical student, I can feel it better and like it better than “The Catcher.”

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

Look at this in two ways. Literary fiction makes you understand yourself and also makes you understand others. It is not a good reason that you don’t like it because it is different from your situation. It is also not a good reason that you like it because it is similar to your situation.

The literary fiction should resolve both of these reasons. It helps you understand your own culture as well as make you aware of and understand other cultures. If you only read about yourself and your culture, you’ll be too narrow-minded.

Ma Yun Pwint May Thu, Yangon University

The book I like best is “A person like him” by Sayama Journal Kyaw Ma Ma Lay. The message I got from this book is that you don’t need to get out in the front or to be well-known to do what is good for the country. I learnt from the character in this book that you can do a lot for your country without trying to be famous or well-known.

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

“A person like him” is literary fiction and non-fiction (biography). The book depicts political movement and literature of that age. Many like Journal Kyaw Ma Ma Lay’s “Thwaw” (Blood) but interestingly the most famous novel by her “Not because of hate” was not liked by many.

Ma Aye Sundar Aung, National Management Degree College

The theme in “Not because of hate” was being restrictive because of love. It is being too controlling over the other. This breaks everything. Ourselves.

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

Some say it is about different ways of loving. The comparison was in how Wei Wei’s father loved the mother and whether the mother loved the father. For many, the other interesting thing about the book is that it is based on the political movements during the time of Daw Ma Ma Lay (Journal Kyaw Ma Ma Lay). Maung Bo Bo Heim, University of East Yangon “Lover of Lingadipa” by Sayama Chit Oo Nyo is the book that I like most. Normally, Rama is the hero and Demon King Ravana (Datha Giri) is the villain. However, Sayama Chit Oo Nyo changes everything and shows Datha Giri in a more lovable way. If our country is also looked at it from another angle, hatred and ugliness can disappear and there’ll be peace.

I’d like to ask a question whether Auny Su can be a director in a story about our country and make it a better country.

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

A director wouldn’t be able to produce a movie alone. There needs to be actors that are the people of the country. A good movie does not come about because of a good director alone or good actors. Camera men need to be good too. Praising the director too much can create a dictator. So which is more important? The character or the story?

Maung Htat Naing Aung, Yanu Education College

I think character is more important. The book I like most is written by Sayama Khin Khin Htoo about a young teacher who came to a village.

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

I haven’t read that book. But I do read a lot about teachers. I like those very much because I want to encourage education in our country. To be successful in education, we need good teachers very much.

Ma Aye Min Thwe, Yanu Education College

I read everything. As I read a lot since I was young, I look at everything from a better angle. Now I’ve become a teacher. In fact I had no plans to become one. But due to various circumstances, I became one. As I became a teacher, I read books about teachers. Sayama Khin Khin Htoo’s book taught me what sort of mindset a teacher should have.

Maung Zaw Lin Naing, Dagon University

In novels, both the story and characters play their parts. But I think characters are more important. This is because of the character in the book Pollyanna (by Eleanor H. Porter).

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

Pollyanna is (a) famous (book). Interesting thing is that values and outlooks changes as time changes. Pollyanna was once famous and popular. But later, some say it was excessively cheerful and optimistic. This is the change in values and outlooks as time changes.

Hatred seems to have overtaken love and sometimes the era of Pollyanna is gone. But the world would be in trouble if this were so. That is why earlier I discussed about comparing the cultures. We need to compare the culture in “The Catcher In The Rye” and our culture. We have to take lesson.

Whether we want it or not, the world is coming to our country. We’ll have to know how to live with the world. What do you think? How can our discussion on literary fiction support the world, the country and humanity’s progress?

Ma Than Thar Cho The, Yangon University of Medical Technology

For me, literary fiction changed and developed my life. It changed my heart and mind.

Books by Dr. Jose Rizal was important for Philippine’s independence and so were poems and writings of Thakin Kodaw Hmaung for our independence.

State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi

Literary fiction should make people better. Nowadays someone say art is for art’s sake and there shouldn’t be a place for preaching. What do you think about this?

Ma Thin Thin Thaw, Yangon University of Medicine

Literary fiction surely influences people. I read a book about a single mother in a literary fiction and understand well about single mothers. Since then, I have respect for single mothers.

The talk on literary fiction then came to a conclusion after State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi took a commemorative group photo with students who participated in the event.

After the event, State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi had tea together with students who participated in the event and they were joined by Union Ministers, Yangon Region Chief Minister, regional Hluttaw Speaker, Region Government Ministers, Rectors and Pro Rectors of universities and colleges in Yangon, leading authority on library U Thaw Kaung and librarians from universities. Afterwards the State Counsellor signed the visitors’ book. — MNA
U Zaw Htay, Spokesman of the Office of the President: the questions have been raised as to the reasons for the removal of the Facebook accounts and pages associated with Tatmadaw

By Kyaw Thu Htet and Hmwe Kyu Zin

A STATEMENT has been released by the Social Networking company-based in the US that Facebook has removed several accounts and pages associated with the Tatmadaw and other related personnel in Myanmar. It said that Facebook has removed 18 accounts and 52 pages associated with the Tatmadaw, according to the statement.

The Government didn't know beforehand about it

U Zaw Htay, a spokesman of the Office of the President said, “The first thing is that I was at the meeting with local business leaders the whole day, and later found out the statement released by the Facebook team after the meeting. It was said that 18 accounts together with 52 pages had been banned because of the violation of the community standard. When we review the community standards of the Facebook, it is found that there are some screenshots, and the Government didn’t seem to know about it in advance. The second thing is that we have many questions to be raised regarding the removal of these Facebook accounts and pages, such as: why they banned, further details on the reasons of banning, and how can we retrieve these accounts and pages. So it is evident that all procedures and orders released by the President's Office on Facebook. They had removed our pages, and we also asked for the reasons when we were in need of some information and encounter many inconveniences. By the time Vice President of the Facebook arrived in Myanmar, we managed to discuss regarding these issues.

Discussion with Facebook again

“We, especially, made many discussions on information and several agreements between the Government and Facebook Team. But it hasn’t completed it yet. We are going to make discussions with them by the time they come again in Myanmar.”

“Regarding the violation of human rights issues, our government had already mentioned it clearly. The first point is that the government has zero tolerance for human rights violations. The second point is that the government had already said three points beforehand when dealing with the Rakhine issues. First, precautionary measures have to be made for both of Tatmadaw and police force, aiming to abide by the laws and regulations, and not to violate the human rights. If there is any cases against human rights, just give us strong evidence, record and date so that we can undertake the investigation into it.

Moreover we can proceed the procedures that can take legal action against those who break the rules and regulations. We have already formed the Independent Commission of Enquiry to carry out the implementation process.”

Another point is that Fact-Finding Mission (FFM) report is to be submitted on 18 September. The United Nations Security Council hold a briefing on Myanmar on 25 August that is marked the one-year anniversary of the ARSA terrorist attacks in Rakhine State. As far as I can see, this FFM report would issue prior to the meeting. The second point is that FFM was formed with the resolution of the Human Rights Council. Our government has spoken openly to the world that we dissociate the resolution of the Human Rights Council, as a consequence, we haven’t taken part in it and denied it either: We didn’t allow the FFM to enter into Myanmar, that’s why we don’t agree and accept any resolutions made by the Human Rights Council.

As I mention before, a report has been launched and submitted by FFM, thereby they attempted to remove the Facebook accounts and pages. So it is evident that all these situations have inter-relationships with one another. Our stance is clear and I want to say sharply that we don’t accept any resolutions conducted by the Human Rights Council. The second point is that our country has accountability and responsibility framework regarding the human rights issues. Also Myanmar has zero tolerance to any human rights violation, and there is no exception on it.

Carrying out the finding of the investigation commission

The second point is that we shall take into legal action against any violation of human rights. The third point is that we have formed the Independent Commission of Enquiry to response to false allegations made by the UN Agencies and other international communities, and we are aware of it and going to carry out the process according to the findings and report of the Enquiry Commission. Our government has made pledges to tackle these issues by implementing the process.

Regarding the removals of the Facebook accounts, we have made inquiries to the Facebook for further details on the reasons for the ban. We fear of the government’s efforts with regard to national reconciliation and peace process in Myanmar. There may arise some misunderstandings due to the impact of the SMMT. The first point is that the Facebook said it was removing several Facebook accounts, including Commander-in-Chief from the social media websites and pages.

The second point is that there is no government involvement in this case. The third point is that the government is nothing to do with the SMMT. Thus we raised some questions to the Facebook regarding this case.

In the face of mounting criticism and fear among the people, the government also wants to characterize what is going on in the country, and discussions are being made to deal with this issue. There isn’t any branch office of Facebook in our country, but we use it as users in the World Wide Web – www. As for the government, negotiation had been made to sign MoU with the Facebook, and plans are under way to reach the agreements between the government and Facebook Team.

Another thing is that Facebook becomes one of the social media as well as main stream media in Myanmar. Increasingly Facebook has been a useful instrument for those seeking to get information, in a context where for most users Facebook is the Internet. There is no doubt that Facebook has both its pros and cons. As for the government, efforts should be made to enact the Cyber Law in order to safeguard the security and to prevail rule of law for the interests of the people in the long run.

The term "soft power" is widely used in foreign policy debates and is defined as the ability to influence others to do what it wants without force or coercion. Successful states need both hard and soft power – hard power being the ability to coerce others as well as the ability to do what it wants without force or coercion.

Sharing love with the soft power of literary fiction

It was during the days early 1960s when our nation including rural areas saw the first library recession. At that time, there were no enough schools let alone libraries.

To make matters worse, due to the tense situation, peace and stability did not prevail throughout the country. We were brought up in the government that was pro-culture and de-structive elements were playing hide-and-seek with each other in those days. Se-vices exchanges of fire between the government forces and the insurgents were very common to us.

In such a situation, how could we widen our horizon? How could we take in reading? How could we build a learning society? No reading materials. No reading rooms. As for us, we had completely rely much on the monasteries where we pursued monastic education. Members of the Sangha taught us primary education simply because most of us were not able to afford schooling in the government schools – primary, middle, and high schools for various reasons.

Because of the teaching monks, we came to the habit of reading and write. However, we have to move around the school library; we could continue to read and work.

Before long, we could see a silver lining in the dark clouds of those days. It was nothing but a reading revolution that emerged in our land. It was not much more than a reading room known as only a single library called “Lian-shu-taw” (giving an inch of freedom). When I left school, I went to Yangon to work as a junior clerk in the Telecommunication Department (Shan Burmah) in 1967, my office was not far from the Sarpey Beikman Public Library and the National Library. Since then, these libraries have become my treasurehouses. And the librarians also became my mentors who taught me how to use catalogues and helped me to visit the world of books.

Sarpey Beikman Library was a first and foremost public library opened in Yangon University Library and the National Library.

Today, the Sarpey Beikman Library has a long history. The Bernard According to the Global New Light of Myanmar, 29 July 2018, the National Library has a large collection of books, periodicals, manuscripts and other rare books, holding 173,166 books, 455,380 periodicals, 12,522 palm- leaf manuscripts, 345 hand-writt en catalogues, 23,496 rare books and other library materials.

The library and the National Library are a result of the President of the National Library (Nay Pyi Taw) that was launched in 1991. We find this library in the country. Now, we can find the National Library in the country.

On 2 July, 2018, a coordi nation meeting took place from the Presidential Palace in Nay Pyi Taw to discuss the relocation of the National Library to a convenient environment in the commercial hub of Yangon City. The meeting reached an agreement to move the library headquarters to the Yangon City. To be objective, the new location of the National Library will be at No.404/98 Merchant Street, Pabedan Township.

Due to the ups-and-downs of life, the library had to move from one location to other locations before setting in Tamway Township. The library had suffered some damages from the Cyclone "Nargis" in 2008. A result, it was move to Yankin Township which is rather far from downtown. Being a book lover, I took these to new locations before setting in Tamway Township. The library building in Tamway Township was set on fire while the government forces and the insurgents were very common to us.

A PRESENTATION for the Myanmar Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSME) 2017 Survey was held at the Ministry of Planning and Finance building in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday morning, with Vice President U Myint Swe delivering the opening speech.

In his speech, the Vice President said two surveys for the MSME population and two for quality in the production sector will be conducted within the years 2017-2018 and 2019-2020 to aid in establishing the “Myanmar Business Monitoring System” as part of the 2016-2020 Denmark-Myanmar agreement on development implementation with the Danish Government.

The Vice President said Myanmar needs reliable data for setting fact-based policies, prioritized sectors, designing strategic plans and monitoring efforts. He thanked the Danish Ambassador and UNU-WIDER for providing financial and technological assistance.

The MSME Survey includes over 71,000 commodity production businesses and highlights the needs for the development of SMEs and to increase their competitiveness while identifying their difficulties, said the Vice President.

He added that the survey included invaluable data that charts a detailed map of the SME sphere in Myanmar. This survey also included data related to employees that shows the correlation between wages and the demand of the workforce and available skillsets, said the Vice President. From this he sees the need for more training schools to increase the workforce capacity.

The Vice President said technological support was needed for Myanmar SMEs to produce high-quality commodities, as well as encouragement for pioneers, innovation, creativity and exploring new markets. He said only then will the country replace imports with local products and drive up export rates as well. He said Myanmar was implementing the 12-point economic policies which included SME development. He said it was important to change to a ‘from data to policy’ approach so that the private sector was strengthened.

According to the 2015 Myanmar Economic Survey, the manufacturing sector made up the bulk of the economic sector at 40 per cent, while 90 per cent of the businesses in Myanmar were small businesses, said the Vice President. He added that only 2 per cent of businesses in the country employ more 250 more staff.

This clearly outlined how SMEs were the fundamental building blocks for developing Myanmar’s economy, said the Vice President, adding that the SME Development Central Committee and Working Committees were formed to address this objective.

The Vice President said the manufacturing sector created more job opportunities than other trade sectors of the service sector. He said producing high quality products would drive up the manufacturing sector. He concluded by thanking everyone involved in making the MSME 2017 Survey a success.

Next, Union Minister for Commerce Dr. Than Myint explained about the requirements and difficulties faced by MSMEs in their self-development.

This was followed by the Ambassador of Denmark Ms. Dorte Chortsen, officials from UNU-WIDER, department heads, and officials from joint-development organizations, NGOs, humanitarian and civil groups.

PARIS — Rising levels of carbon dioxide in the air threaten to sap wheat, rice, and other staple grains of valuable nutrients, raising the specter of mass malnutrition, researchers warned on Monday.

On current trends, higher CO₂ concentrations could reduce iron, zinc and protein levels in the crops that feed the world by up to 17 per cent by mid-century, they reported in the journal Nature Climate Change. “Hundreds of millions of people could become newly deficient in these nutrients, primarily in Africa, Southeast Asia, India and the Middle East,” lead author Matthew Smith, a researcher at the Harvard TH Chan School of Public Health, told AFP. “These are in addition to the billions of people already deficient that could see their condition worsen.” Protein, along with the minerals iron and zinc, are essential nutrients for normal human growth and development. Zinc deficiency affects the immune system and makes children, particularly, more vulnerable to malaria, lung infections and deadly diarrhoeal diseases. —AFP

Fish oil supplements don’t prevent heart disease in people with diabetes

WASHINGTON — Fish oil supplements do not help prevent heart attacks or strokes in people with diabetes, said a study on Monday that adds to a growing body of research on the ineffectiveness of pills containing omega-3 fatty acids.

More than 15,000 people with diabetes but no signs of heart disease enrolled in the study in Britain, the results of which were published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Half the participants were given a daily capsule of omega-3, while the other half received a placebo pill containing olive oil. The study was randomized and blinded, meaning that participants had no idea which they were taking.

Patients were followed for an average of just over seven years. Among those taking fish oil pills, 4.9 per cent suffered a heart attack or stroke, compared to 9.2 per cent in the placebo group, which was not a significant difference.

“Our large, long-term randomized trial shows that fish oil supplements do not reduce the risk of cardiovascular events in patients with diabetes,” said principal investigator Louise Bowman of the University of Oxford.

“This is a disappointing finding, but it is in line with previous randomized trials in other types of patient at increased risk of cardiovascular events which also showed no benefit of fish oil supplements.”

Bowman concluded: “There is no justification for recommending fish oil supplements to protect against cardiovascular events.”

In January, an analysis of 10 studies involving 78,000 people published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) Cardiology also concluded that fish oil pills did not prevent heart disease among people at high risk.

Some observational studies have pointed to an association between higher consumption of fish and lower risks of coronary artery disease and stroke, but more rigorous, randomized trials have not supported this link. —AFP

Startup delivers groceries in self-driving cars

SAN FRANCISCO — Startup AutoX on Monday announced the Silicon Valley debut of a service that will turn self-driving cars into mobile grocery shops summoned with a touch of a smartphone application.

The service will kick off this month in parts of the California city of San Jose in a partnership with e-commerce company GrubMarket.com which sources food from producers as well as retail shops such as Amazon-owned Whole Foods.

“We’re very excited to launch the first autonomous grocery delivery and mobile store service in the heart of Silicon Valley with self-driving vehicles on the road,” said AutoX founder and chief executive Jianxiong Xiao.

“We believe self-driving car technologies will fundamentally change people’s daily lives for the better.”

The AutoX application can be used to place grocery orders to be delivered in cars designed to keep produce chilled, according to the startup.

Customers uncertain of what they want in advance will also be able to have cars pull up and open windows so they can browse selections, AutoX said. A human back-up driver will be on board as required by local regulations.

AutoX vehicles rely on high-resolution camera gear instead of more costly sensors and laser arrays for navigation.

The grocery delivery and mobile store pilot program will roll out in San Jose, then expand to Google’s home city Mountain View and Palo Alto, where Stanford University is located. —AFP

Zvezda soon to be able to manufacture spacesuit for Mars in 3-4 years

MOSCOW — Russian Research & Development Production Enterprise Zvezda in the future will be able to produce a fundamentally new spacesuit for flights to Mars in three or four years, press service of the company told TASS.

“At the moment, there is no work on the Martian spacesuit. Some time ago, on our own initiative, we worked out a life support system on liquid oxygen and a fundamental new material,” the press service said.

Aussie scientists use gold-plated nanoparticles to detect cancer signals

SYDNEY — A new diagnostic technique, using gold-plated nanoparticles, could make the detection of cancer much cheaper and faster, according to Australian scientists from the University of New South Wales (UNSW) who developed the method.

The scientists are now able to detect very low levels of microRNAs, linked with cancerous tumours and metastasis, in blood samples of significantly lower volumes.

“What this means is the technology has the potential to determine the levels of microRNA just from a finger prick test,” Professor Justin Gooding from UNSW said.

The low levels of sample needed, as well as the efficiency of the process in detecting microRNAs, makes the method much easier than was previously required, as well as financially feasible.

“It could be orders of magnitude cheaper,” Gooding said.

“Our method takes 30 minutes compared with almost 12 hours for quantitative polymerase chain reaction.”

What makes the new method so effective is the use of magnets to attract the microRNAs.

Scientists create gold-coated magnetic nanoparticles which latch onto a high portion of the present microRNAs, and then capture the nanoparticles and newly attached microRNAs with a magnet.

“Because the capture is so effective, we got higher sensitivities and can detect much lower limits,” Gooding said.

“And since we bring them back to the electrode under a magnet, our response time is much faster.”

Gooding said he would expect the technology to be available within three years, pending regulatory approvals.—Xinhua
Mourinho calls for respect as Spurs pile more misery on Man Utd

LONDON — Manchester United manager Jose Mourinho called for respect after suffering the heaviest home defeat of his career as Harry Kane and a Lucas Moura double moved Tottenham joint top of the Premier League with a 3-0 win at Old Trafford.

A second consecutive defeat piles more pressure on the Portuguese coach as United now trail Spurs, Liverpool and Chelsea by six points and stand four adrift of champions Manchester City just three games into the new campaign.

The odds on Mourinho losing his job have been slashed in recent weeks as on top of adverse results, he has clashed with the club’s executive vice-chairman Ed Woodward over a lack of signings.

However, he railed against his critics by citing his record of winning the Premier League three times over two spells at Chelsea.

“I won more Premierships alone than the other 19 managers together. Three for me, two for them. Respect!” a fiery Mourinho raged at reporters on exiting his post-match press conference.

Mourinho stood in front of Old Trafford’s Stretford End at the end of the game to applaud the home fans, who didn’t boo his side at full-time despite the result.

“Today I had the proof the best judge are the supporters,” Mourinho said.

The fans and Mourinho’s response came after a dominant first 45 minutes from the hosts before Spurs took control with two goals in two minutes just after the break.

United, though, were left to rue a series of missed chances by Romelu Lukaku, particularly when the Belgian fired wide with an open goal on 15 minutes.

Second-half surge

Tottenham hadn’t even scored in losing on their four previous trips to Old Trafford under Mauricio Pochettino.

Yet, the Argentine’s half-time words of wisdom made a huge difference as Spurs came out a different side after the break.

David de Gea had already denied Kane and Dele Alli had seen a goalbound effort deflected wide by the time Kane rose highest from Kieran Tripper’s corner to loop a header into the net.

Serena Williams returns in style at US Open

NEW YORK — Serena Williams made a triumphant return to the US Open on Monday, opening her bid for a record-tying 24th Grand Slam title with a 6-4, 6-0 first-round victory over Magda Linette.

Williams, a six-time champion at Flushing Meadows, missed last year’s edition as she gave birth to daughter Olympia on 1 September.

She was all-business on her return under the floodlights on the Arthur Ashe Stadium court, where she has lifted the trophy six times. Linette, the world number 68 from Poland who was facing Williams for the first time, held her own in the early going.

But Williams broke her in the seventh game of the opening set to gain the upper hand and from there the American superstar rolled.

The first set was tight,” Williams, seeded 17th, said. “It was my first match back here in New York so that wasn’t the easiest.

“Once I got settled I started doing what I’m trying to do in practice.

“I think I’m getting there,” added Williams, who reached the final at Wimbledon only to fall short of matching Margaret Court’s all-time record of 24 major titles.

She didn’t face a break point in the 70 minute match, but as her momentum built her emotions burst out with fist-clenched shouts of “come on”.

After Williams held serve from deuce for a 5-3 lead, Linette would hold for the second set in 28 minutes.

Williams easily broke in the second set and cruised to victory.

Nadal sends injured Ferrer into Grand Slam retirement

NEW YORK — World number one and defending US Open champion Rafael Nadal sent his close friend David Ferrer into Grand Slam retirement on Monday when his veteran compatriot was forced to quit their first round match with an injury.

Ferrer, a former world number three but now standing at a lowly 148, called it quits on a hot and humid night on Arthur Ashe Stadium when he led 4-3 with a break in the second set.

Top seed Nadal had taken the opener 6-3.

“This is my last Grand Slam,” said Ferrer who was runner-up to Nadal in the 2013 French Open final.

“I have great memories of this tournament and I am just sorry that I couldn’t finish it tonight.”

Ferrer, 36, will play his last tournament on home ground in Madrid next year.

“I am very sorry for David and sad for him,” said Nadal.

“We are close friends and have shared great moments — the Roland Garros final and Davis Cup wins.

“He is one of the greatest players to have come from our country. He’s a great person and great player.”
