Renewable energy sector likely to improve in 2020s

By May Thet Hnin

MYANMAR’S renewable energy sector will improve in 2020s, said Chief Engineer Dr Maung Maung Kyaw of Electric Power Generation Enterprise under the Ministry of Electricity and Energy. He revealed that at the 2nd Myanmar-German Renewable Energies Symposium held at Rose Garden Hotel on Thursday: “Renewable energy sector will grow gradually in late 2020s. It should be enhanced. However, we cannot rely on only one energy source, such as wind and sunshine. We need to implement all energy sources proportionally”, said Dr Maung Maung Kyaw.

Government is enhancing renewable energy sector in cooperation with international organizations and production is expected to increase from 8 per cent in 2020 to 12 per cent in 2025. Myanmar will receive technical sharing from foreign companies which have proposed to be engaged in renewable energy sector.

Solar energy will be primarily generated among many renewable energy resources. Second, wind energy source will be utilized. Solar power projects are also seen in Minbu, Wundwin and Myingyan.

In order to carry out wind power project, power purchase agreement is also being prepared. In a bid to enhance renewable energy sector, related department is drafting to formulate legislation, said Dr. Maung Maung Kyaw. “Myanmar has natural resources. However, the foreign investors still cannot enjoy investors’ rights and protections, including tax incentive, owing to lack of law and by-law related to renewable energy. Law is needed to monitor the investment businesses and give investors opportunities to enjoy tax relief. Investors will not make investments unless there is tax incentive. Therefore, our department has started to develop a draft”, he pointed out.

The government has started to implement the development of renewable energy sector. With technical support of international organizations, possible renewable energy resources will be explored.

At present, only 40 per cent of Myanmar’s households receive electric supply. And, 60 per cent of the country’s electric power is from hydropower; while gas and coal also contribute to energy resources in small amount. According to the National Electrification Plan, all households will have access to electricity by 2030.

Local and foreign INGOs, such as the World Wide Fund for Nature, are also providing solar power to some far-flung villages.

Public opinion survey report on YCDC issued

By Nyein Nyein

ALIN Saetamarn Library and Resource Centre issued a public opinion survey report on Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC) at a media conference at Orchid Hotel on Saturday.

The survey was conducted by civil society organisation ALIN Saetamarn Library and Resource Centre in March 2018 at 33 townships of Yangon City, which are under the jurisdiction of YCDC. ALIN Saetamarn surveyed 1,205 members of the public across Yangon, including 310 people from East District, 132 from West, 203 from South and 590 from North.

Ma Ohnma, who runs the ALIN Saetamarn Library and Resource Centre, said the survey was conducted with an aim to know the public’s point of view over the services of YCDC, and to know the public needs interests and opinions over decisions made.

Further aims for the local government to implement essential reforms through awareness of public requirements and electing of representatives who truly represent the public in a democratic regional municipal election to provide more public services, she added.

“After the survey was conducted, we notified and discussed with the Hluttaw, the government and MPs from the four districts. Although municipal law is enacted, our service (survey) is more related to the rules. Even if the enactment of rules are delayed for any reason, we want the government to conduct essential work processes as quickly as possible,” she said.

The survey found that 11 percent of the people are satisfied, while 46 are not with garbage collection system. 15 percent are and 64 percent are not with the drainage system, 13 percent are satisfied and 65 percent are not with cleaning of platforms (sidewalks) and roads.

Most importantly the people are willing to pay more service charges if municipal services improve, said Daw Mya Nandan Thin, executive director of New Myanmar Foundation.

When asked if communications channels, like a Call Center, for the public to contact YCDC is required, 93 percent of the people surveyed said yes.

Suggestions received from the survey covers eleccting YCDC members, budget, public services and general matters.

Suggestions on public services include establishing call centers in every township for residents to report problems or make complaints, advance notice of the garbage collection schedule or inform the public of arrangements made, modify garbage bin system, improve garbage collection system in schools, markets and densely populated areas, improve public toilet system, improve and provide proper drainage system, provide adequate car parking spaces, paving roads to new towns to be coordinated between (Yangon) Region government and YCDC to avoid duplication, coordinating and discussing with local residents in paving, maintaining and repairing roads in wards, setting up enough lamp poles along main roads and side roads, and having a clear procedure in providing license for trishaws.

Illegal fish ponds need permit to operate

By May Thet Hnin

Illegal fish and shrimp ponds are soon to get a chance to turn to a legal status, according to Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF).

Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr. Aung Thu announced that at a meeting with entrepreneurs at MFF’s office on Tuesday.

Mandalay Region government has imposed a fine of Ks1 million per acre of illegal fish farms. Payment for the fine can be made in three installments, according to August 23 notice of Mandalay Region government.

This notice prompted MFF to report to the Union Minister that businesses persons face hardships from this.

The Union Minister responded that the ministry has issued a notification to respective regions and states regarding illegal fish farms, for which owners must seek permission. However, Mandalay Region government misunderstood the notification and fined illegal fish farm owners.

The ministry will negotiate with Mandalay Region government concerning this matter.

When illegal fish and shrimp ponds apply for permit to get a legal status, village, township, region-level farm monitoring committees will screen and review forms for work permit of those fish farms and later, it will be submitted to national-level farm monitoring central committee.

The Union Minister stressed that region and state governments cannot separate impose fine as they wish. Only the Union can officially impose fines, U Win Kyawing, general secretary of MFF described.

“On the other hand, the government is a great support to us, encouraging us to grow our businesses,” Mr. Kyawing maintained.

“If fines are set too high that fish breeders cannot afford to pay, they are obliged to go to a court only. Sure, they want to cooperate with the government, instead of facing legal action. We want the growth of our businesses under the guidance of the government,” he added.

According to 2012 Farmland Law, farmlands are authorized to do only farming rather than do others. If farmers want to utilize them for other purposes, they need to seek land use certificate Form-7. They were not granted permission despite submitting applications, and they continue to stay under illegal status, said U Win Kyawing.

Of the 400,000 acres of fish and shrimp farming acres in the country, only 130,000 acres are authorized for fish farms.

The investment government has allowed illegal fish farmers to apply for Form-7. They need to provide Environmental Impact Assessment and Social Impact Assessment documents when they submit their application, the Union Minister addressed. The government mentioned that those owners executing illegal fish ponds will be fined a reasonable amount, if needed; however, the amount of fine per acre has not been announced yet.

Prior to 1988, there were only 70,000 acres of fish farms. Farmland acreage has increased up to over 400,000 acres under the military government period. Fish breeding businesses were supported then, but there were no permits issued for those applying for it. This led to a series of problems in the past and current government periods.
Foreign investors eye Myanmar to open petrol retail stations

By Nyein Nyein
FOREIGN investors are interested in exploring Myanmar’s petrol station market, said U Than Aung Kyaw, deputy director general of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

“Those who are enthusiastic are discussing with officials concerned regarding rules and regulations. Foreigners show their interest in opening petrol retail stations”, said U Than Aung Kyaw. Potential investors need to seek approval from the Ministry of Electricity and Energy to invest in petrol sector, according to the DICA.

“Opening retail stations needs the ministry’s approval. The ministry screens investor companies’ experience, international background and technology. They also check the companies whether or not they can comply with the country’s rules and regulations. After screening process, the ministry gives a green light to invest”, U Than Aung Kyaw maintained.

At present, Thailand’s oil and gas conglomerate, PTT Company, is preparing to open retail outlets in Myanmar. Multinational companies, such as PUMA and Shell are also prepping to team up with local companies to open retail stations in 2019.

About 95 per cent of the fuel oil is imported into the country. Domestic fuel oil price depends on the import price as well as the dollar exchange rate, described U Win Myint, secretary of Myanmar Petroleum Trade Association.

Myanmar imports fuel oil primarily through Singapore, with a monthly figure of 200,000 tons of gasoline and 400,000 tons of diesel. There are around 70 fuel oil importer companies in Myanmar, with over 2,000 petrol stations.

General Secretary Salai Wom Za Pyaung of Chin League for Democracy presented the party’s policy, stance and work program on radio and television on 16 September.

Following is a translation of the presentation:

Respected and esteemed people,

Allow me to extend my heartfelt greetings with the words Mingalar Par for the physical and mental wellbeing of all people.

I am General Secretary Salai Wom Za Pyaung (Salai PP) of Chin League for Democracy (CLD) Party. I will present the policy, stance and work program of Chin League for Democracy.

Respected and esteemed people,

Even before subjugation under the British, Chin nations have had the opportunity for self-determination and had administered the homeland independently. When the land was under the British rule, it was administered by The Chin Hills Regulation - 1896.

Representatives headed by Bogoke Aung San and the leaders of Chin, Kachin and Shan nations signed the Panglong Agreement on 12 February 1947 for the establishment of the Union of Myanmar. Since the Chin nations had signed the historic Panglong Agreement, they are among the nations that jointly founded the Union of Myanmar, and therefore, they have the responsibility for non-disintegration of the country.

Respected and esteemed people,

The aspiration and essence of the Panglong Agreement by leaders of the nations has not been incorporated and integrated in the 1947 Constitution of the Union of Burma, and the Constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar (2008).

Ethnic armed groups and the civil war were born together with the independence of the country, and the conflict has existed for 70 years. It is due to this reason that the aspiration mentioned in the Panglong Agreement for a federal union system could not be implemented, there is an absence of self-determination of the nations, non-existence of guarantee to protect suppression over the minority nationals. Therefore, it is necessary to implement the non-disintegration of the Union, to forge the unity of all the nationalities, to end the civil war in the country, to realize the national reconciliation, to build the country where nationals have equality, and to have self-determination of all the nationalities.

The Chin League for Democracy has been constituted and founded with the objective to build a federal union and to exercise self-administration system. Moreover, it is formed with the aim and objective to represent and stand by the Chin nationals, where all nationals have the rights to exercise in the legislative, administrative and judiciary sectors. Moreover, among broader context of the Chin nationals, the minority Chin tribes must never be suppressed, influenced and humiliated, but treated with equality and fairness.

It is therefore, at a time when the constitution is amended or modified, integration and incorporation is inevitably needed for a federal union system and self-determination. Implementation of development projects is the obvious duty of the government, and no matter what government comes into power, development tasks are to be carried out, and it is appropriate and more important for nationals in building a federal union.

For the second part, I would like to say that the Chin nationals were deprived of political, economic and social rights, as it was only given Chin special area division instead of Chin State, despite the fact that the Chin nations were part of the Union of Myanmar in accordance with the Panglong Agreement. With the backdrop of denial of rights for self-determination, Chin nationals need to endeavor within the bound of law to get the rights for self-determination.

At the third point that I would like to say is that the Chin State is the poorest area throughout successive eras, as it was not treated with equal and fair development projects. Now is the time that the Chin nationals must attempt to get the full rights for the political, economic and social tasks.

The fourth point is about the fact that Myanmar has already signed the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (commonly abbreviated as the CRC) agreements. Moreover, the country has also signed the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Therefore, it is necessary to ensure that full rights for the children are secured, that the women are protected from violence, that gender equality be granted, that religious freedom prevails, and that the minority rights is guaranteed. Therefore, the Chin League for Democracy would try its best in getting the rights for all nationalities, including the Chin nationals. The Chin League for Democracy has been formed to work for the stability and perpetuation of the country along with the nationalities and also stand on the side of Chin nationals in accordance with the law.

The fifth part that I would like to present is that to protect the minority Chin tribes and interests of the Chin nationals, and to enact basic and adequate laws for them.

Another point is that the Chin nationals are residing not only in the Chin State but also have spread out and stayed outside the state, such as in Rakhine State, Sagaing, Magway and Yangon regions. Moreover, Chin nationals can be seen in many countries around the world.

The leaders of the Chin Party have decided to serve the interest of each Chin national to enable to enjoy rights according to law. Regarding politics, economics and social matters, the Chin nationals will be able to have the rights on a par equal to other nationals. As the Chin nationals happens to be minority people, adequate protection would be provided according to law.

Lastly, I would like to say that Chin State has only a population of 500,000. If added with other Chin nationals residing outside of the Chin State, the number may come up to one million people. With that setting, it is necessary to avoid acts that may create division and disparity, and by all means we need to unite to the best of our ability.

Chin nationals and Chin tribes may not be the same in their attitude and perspective over different themes and cases, but we must discuss, negotiate and compromise with mutual understanding.

In implementing this plan and objective, we have to endeavor for unity and join hands with other political parties, organizations and individuals that are also stepping ahead for a genuine federal union and for self-determination similar to Chin League for Democracy.

The Chin League for Democracy has joined and participated in the Union Peace Dialogue Joint Committee (UPDJC) as a political party representative in 2015. Moreover, it took part in the political discussion framework, and furthermore, the party participated in the initiative role in the Union Peace Conference held from 12 to 16 January 2016. Based on the result of the by-election, the party has the desire to actively participate in the upcoming Union peace process.

The by-election is scheduled to be held on 3 November 2018, and the Chin League for Democracy candidate Salai Aung Lynn will compete for the Chin State Hluttaw from Matupi Township constituency 1. Candidate U On Khaw Htan (a) U Chit Maung of the party will compete for the Sagaing Region Hluttaw from Tamu District, Tamu Township constituency 2. I urge voters to vote for our candidates.

In conclusion, I wish all the best, success, health and prosperity for all the people.

Thank you.
Are we there yet? No bottom in sight for China stocks

SHANGHAI — Shanghai is the world's worst-performing major stock market this year despite respectable corporate earnings, a disconnect which is feeding growing talk that Chinese equities are now a screaming buy.

Not so fast, say brokers and analysts, who warn shares have further to fall due to US-China trade squabbling, slowing Chinese economic growth, and a government crackdown on debt that is drying up liquidity.

Despite China's still enviable economic growth of over six percent, the Shanghai Composite Index is down 19 percent this year and flirting with levels not seen since late 2014.

As a result, share valuations in relation to earnings are the most attractive in years, down as much as 50 percent compared to 10-year averages in some cases. Investors are waiting to pounce “like lions and leopards lurking in the grass,” said Zhang Qun, chief market strategist with Citic Securities. “Looking at historical data, valuations are definitely appropriate (for buying),” he said.

“But they could stay low for a while.” Nervy authorities have begun repeatedly stressing the market's overall attractiveness, and a report last week by China's top state think tank touted the “historically low” valuations. “Value has emerged in the stock market,” it said.

Anticipation of a rebound has also been fed, brokers told AFP by major listed firms snapping up their own shares, viewing them as undervalued compared to the companies’ fundamentals.

Show me the money

But the market is unconvinced: sluggish trading volume last week hit its lowest levels in two years. 2018 wasn’t supposed to be this way.

The government began the year on guard against excessive share price increases, and optimism was fuelled by the June introduction of hundreds of Chinese companies into MSCI’s global equities indices.

The move is expected to eventually lure billions in foreign investment into Chinese shares.

The government also outlined plans to entice emerging domestic tech giants to list shares in China rather than abroad, after first-generation champions like Alibaba and Tencent went overseas. But 2018’s declines are by no means irrational, said Brock Silvers, managing director of Shanghai-based investment advisory Kaiyu Capital.

“The economy is slowing, inbound investment is declining, credit is worsening, the trade conflict is expanding, the yuan is weakening, and global interest rates are rising,” he said.

“There’s little hope for positive momentum until China’s economy revives or it reaches a trade truce.”

Securities giant Nomura said it expects China's economy and exports to weaken, has trimmed forecasts for key China share indices, and was shifting money away from Chinese equities into cash.

There are potential trade-war bright spots, Nomura added, saying well-known Chinese consumer brands could benefit from patriotic, “buy domestic” sentiment.—AFP

Central bank says Latvia needs to increase productivity

RIGA — The Latvian economy needs to increase productivity and use smarter methods in organizing production processes, the central bank of Latvia said on Friday.

“The only long-term solution is to increase productivity. It needs investment and smarter methods when organizing production processes, which in turn requires knowledge and qualifications,” vice-president of the Bank of Latvia Zojra Rasmusa told a press conference here.

She said that growth of wages currently exceeds that of productivity, and that may harm development in the long term.

To achieve the same level of well-being as in Western Europe, Latvia needs to significantly increase spending for science, research and development, the vice president of the Bank of Latvia noted.

“Our level of spending for research and development at the moment is the lowest in the European Union, and it is truly alarming in the perspective of future development,” Rasmusa noted.—Xinhua

Platform registers 94 million online loans

BEIJING — Online loans worth 116 billion yuan (16.97 billion U.S. dollars) had been registered by the end of August on a unified platform operated by an industry association in China, amid a nationwide campaign to reduce financial risks.

The volume was up 18 percent from a month ago, the National Internet Finance Association (NIFA) has said.

The platform, established in June 2017, had recorded 94.31 million lending deals submitted by 66 online agents, which involved a total of 3.5 million borrowers.

NIFA wants all intermediary financing agents to register the deals they have brokered on the single platform, to ensure the records of all loans will still be available in case an agent goes bankrupt.

Unified registration will help regulators improve supervision and raise the awareness of P2P lending platforms to properly disclose information, NIFA said, adding that the platform would eventually be available to investors.

Chinese financial regulators have rolled out strict rules to toughen supervision over P2P lending, as a fast-growing, loosely regulated online financing sector has increased risk and posed a threat to market order.—Xinhua

US stocks end flat amid worries over Fed, trade

NEW YORK — Wall Street stocks finished essentially flat on Friday, with worries about higher interest rates and the US-China trade fight weighing on sentiment.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average ended slightly higher at 26,154.67. The broad-based S&P 500 rose less than 0.1 percent at 2,904.97, while the tech-rich Nasdaq Composite Index slipped 0.1 percent to 8,010.04.

After a positive open, stocks veered into negative territory at midday following a report that President Donald Trump still planned to go ahead with new tariffs with China, despite another effort at negotiations with Beijing launched by Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin.

However, stocks later worked themselves back towards the flat-line, the latest sign investors are taking Trump trade threats with a grain of salt.

“This is part of the president’s negotiating playbook and should not be a surprise for the market,” said Quincy Krosby, chief market strategist at Prudential Financial.

Analysts also pointed to unease after the yield on the 10-year US Treasury bond hit 3.0 percent before declining a bit, with investors fearing that interest rate hikes could pinch consumers.—AFP

Unlimited freedom of expression can create chaos

By Tommy Paik

These days, citizens from every society are given heaps of freedom of expression on politics, their grievances, disagreements, discontentment, poor administrations and difficulties in their livelihoods. They have the right to express what they want or what they want the authorities or any government to do or to complain about their government’s inappropriate actions. This sort of expression may be called a demonstration, a hunger strike, a concert or a public rally. Normally, people take to the streets and express their complaints by building placards or shouting their demands. Basically, all demonstrators march in the streets or around public areas. The procession must not hinder the traffic and create congestion on the streets, and security police are to be stationed along the route of the procession. Instead of marching, some demonstrators go on a hunger strike. These are the patterns of key venues of expression, which can be often seen in the public world.

How much freedom of expression is there in the world? Sometimes, due to unlimited or extreme freedom of expression, chaotic situations or trends between demonstrators and the police squad occur in some societies. All societies should exercise freedom of expression as demands are settled or fulfilled by concern authorities. In other words, the requirements of the general public should be fulfilled by the government properly. Nevertheless, the government is responsible to provide a secure environment and attentively to fulfill the wants and needs pertaining to the freedom of expression. In a nascent democratic state like Myanmar, citizens are given the right to gather in the streets, public areas or specific areas across designated by the concerned authority to express their bitter feelings or strong disagreements towards the administration or protest against the government.

The principle of freedom of expression is one of the fundamental democratic states, like the US, UK, France, and citizens know well enough how to express their voices or disagreements or grievances to the government. Likewise, citizens usually listen to the voices of the government and administrators in their countries. Thus, freedom can be exercised calmly and collectively. In other words, key venues of expression appears whenever an administrative body monitors or misappropriates or monitors and controls the public complaints or citizens, when they exercise freedom of expression beyond limit. There are also many democracies in the world which are facing the risks created by internal and external factors, such as terrorism.

Dealing with these problems, it is necessary to make a law to consider freedom of expression in each society. However, some people are恐怕有限. As a nascent democracy, it is going through a rough and dangerous path amid turbulent storms. However, there is not only risks from being pulled apart from democracy but also the people’s suppression of a single political force. Therefore, the nation entirely needs to be aware of the dangers of bogs democracy, occurring at present, by practising “Oversight”, the theme of this year’s International Day of Democracy, so as to maintain and strengthen the country’s democratic path.

Why is English so important?

By Arakan Sein

People often talk about English as a global language or English in the world. More than two billion people around the world speak English as a first language and more than 110 million people-speak English as a second language. There are many countries where English is spoken as the official language or is used as a second language. English is the most commonly spoken language in the UK, the USA, Canada, Australia and New Zealand and widely spoken in many countries, such as Nigeria, South Africa and South Asia. It is a co-official language of the UN, the EU and many other world and international organizations.

According to a survey published in 2007, 11% of EU citizens speak English as their native language and another 20% of EU citizens state that they have sufficient skills in English to have a conversation, so the total reach of English in the EU is 31%. That is why English is becoming the most useful language to connect different language groups in Europe and other countries. It is a living language, and it’s also developing and changing. Several times over the years, it has been decided that the only way to preserve English is to preserve a living language. Several research papers have confirmed that reading, writing, learning and teaching, grammar and pronunciation – are all found in English. It is the language of science, technology, diplomacy, art and formal education. Several skills – listening, speaking, reading, writing, learning and teaching, grammar and pronunciation – are all found in English. In India and Myanmar

India gained independence from the British in 1947, whereas Myanmar gained independence from the British in 1948. Government officials promote English in Myanmar, but the public have little interest in English. Therefore, the difference in democracy is to be a real concern. It is clearly seriously cautious of those democratic states, the Asian and African regions. Police arrest protesters at new Istanbul airport site

ISTANBUL — Turkish police on Saturday arrested at least 20 people as they broke up a protest against work-related deaths and poor conditions at the construction site of Istanbul’s third airport, touted to be the world’s largest airport when completed.

The security forces moved in to break up the protest by dozens of people following a wave of arrests on Friday.

Among those held by police on Saturday was AFP photographer Bulent Kilic who was covering the event. He was released after two hours in custody.

In total some 500 people have been arrested during protests at the site of what is one of President Recep Tayyip Erdogan’s mega development projects, according to Turkey’s Revolutionary Union Confederation (DISK).

Security forces had on Friday dispersed a demonstration by hundreds of workers outside the new airport, which was due to be completed in October, the private DHA news agency reported.

The protesters complained of work-related deaths and accidents as well as poor on-site living and labour conditions.

The opposition daily Cumhuriyet quoted live-in workers complaining about fleas and bed bugs. The airport construction and operating company Istanbul Grand Airport, issued a statement saying management had met the workers and pledged to take measures to resolve the issues quickly. A spokesman for IGA refused further comment on Saturday.

The hashtag supporting the workers, “we are not slaves” (#koledegiliz) was trending strongly in Turkey on Saturday.

Dozens of security forces, backed by armoured vehicles, controlled access to the site on Saturday. AFP journalists said.

When the first plane landed at IGA in June, Erdogan said the new airport will be the biggest in the world with a first phase capacity of 90 million passengers a year going up to 150 million in 2023. Some 35,000 people are employed on the project including, 3,000 engineers and administrative staff. Twenty-seven workers have died at the construction site — 13 in work-related accidents, the transport minister said during a press visit to the airport last April.

However, several workers, asking not to be named, told AFP on Saturday that the ministry figures were far too low and that accidents were very common at the site. —AFP

Egyptian court orders arrest of 2 sons of ousted President Mubarak

CAIRO — An Egyptian court ordered on Saturday the arrest of Gamal Mubarak and Alaa Mubarak, the sons of former President Hosni Mubarak, and two other defendants over charges of stock market manipulation, official Ahram news website reported.

According to the report, the Cairo Criminal Court has also set the date of the trial at Oct. 20. The prosecution charged the defendants with profiteering from selling the National Bank and obtaining illegal financial gains of over 468 million Egyptian pounds (27.6 million U.S. dollars) by allowing a Cyprus-based company to get the bank’s shares.

The two sons of Mubarak, who ruled Egypt for almost 30 years, had been released pending trial in June 2013. Alaa and Gamal Mubarak were put on trial over a number of corruption charges in the wake of the January 2011 uprising that led to the fall of their father’s regime. —Xinhua

Libyan tribal elders demand UN-backed gov’t disarm militias in capital

TRIPOLI — The Libyan Tribal Forum, held in the city of Tarhuna, some 80 km southeast of the capital Tripoli, on Saturday demanded the government disarm all militias in Tripoli within three days.

“The Libyan tribes felt the gravity of the general situation, following violation of its sovereignty, the suffering of its children, loss of its capabilities, and deprivation of its political will because of control of the armed gangs, which legitimized themselves and dominated sources of decision-making,” a joint statement by 1,800 Libyan tribal elders said.

The statement also demanded the militias in the capital ‘Tripoli hand over all their weapons and dissolve all parallel bodies after being disarmed.

“A joint force must be formed from all Libyan cities, consisting of regular army and police to secure and protect’ the capital,” it added.

Tripoli recently witnessed violent clashes between government forces and the “7th Brigade” militia from Tarhuna, killing at least 78 and injuring 210 others.

The UN Mission in Libya brokered a cease-fire between the fighting parties in the capital. However, the 7th Brigade threatened to break the truce and resume fighting to “eliminate crime and gangs in Tripoli.”

The UN-backed government last week rejected the threat of the 7th Brigade, and confirmed its keenness to maintain security and stability in the capital.

The UN mission also called on the parties of the peace agreement to “refrain from issuing provocative statements.”

Residents of hurricane-hit US town start to pick up the pieces

NEW BERN (Etats-Unis)—With rain still falling and no electricity, residents of New Bern, North Carolina are starting to pick up the pieces after devastating flooding caused by Hurricane Florence.

The wind was quite strong, some branches went down. But we were mainly affected by the flooding. The water started to rise even before the hurricane was here,” Baras said.

She shows photos taken the day before on her phone: “Do you see the red car over there? It was here,” Baras said.

Debris litters the ground around their modest red brick home and neighbors have left wet mattresses and sofas on the sidewalk, but the young couple had time to climb upstairs before the water came.

“We’re now waiting for the power to come back to give it a deep clean,” said Hawkins.

“We can’t really stay in at the moment, the smell is just too bad.”

‘Dry up and clean up’

Sheltered from the rain by the porch of the imposing family home, Laurie Eudy, the fourth generation to occupy the premises, takes time to update her journal: “There’s a lot to write about,” she says. An entry in her neat handwriting reads: “That was an adventure!”

She heard “a loud bump” in the middle of the night when the waters of the Neuse River swept up the street: “I first thought it was a tree, but when I opened the door; I saw a boat knocking at the front of the house.”

British PM ‘irritated’ by leadership speculation

LONDON—British Prime Minister Theresa May said Sunday she was “irritated” by speculation about a leadership contest as she slammed former foreign secretary Boris Johnson, seen as her most likely challenger.

The centre-right Conservative Party’s leader said she was focused on securing a Brexit deal rather than her own future, in a BBC television interview marking the six-month countdown to Britain’s departure from the European Union. May blasted Johnson for using “completely inappropriate” language when he described her Brexit blueprint as putting Britain in a “suicide vest”.

Asked about her plans to stay in the job, she said: “I get a little bit irritated but this debate is not about my future—this debate is about the future of the people of the UK and the future of the United Kingdom. That’s what I’m focused on and that’s what we should all be focused on.” The leader added it was important to ensure “we get that good deal from the European Union which is good for people in the UK, wherever they live in the UK”. Johnson, who quit the cabinet over May’s proposals to keep Britain close to the EU on trade, is the bookmakers’ favourite to succeed May, ahead of interior minister Sajid Javid, environment minister Michael Gove and Foreign Secretary Jeremy Hunt.

May’s Conservative minority government contains a sizeable bloc of hardcore Brexiteers headed by Rees-Mogg and would likely need the support of the left-wing main opposition Labour Party, or a chunk of their MPs, to get her Brexit proposals through parliament.

Keir Starmer, Labour’s Brexit spokesman, said any EU deal must meet Labour’s key Brexit tests, which include delivering the “exact same benefits” as Britain currently has inside the single market and customs union, to win their support.

In a letter published by The Sunday Times, he said they also could not back a loosely worded agreement: “A vague political declaration would not meet those tests. Labour will not—and cannot—vote for a blind Brexit.”

The five assailants opened fire with rifles and handguns shortly before 10:00 pm Friday (0200 GMT Saturday) as the downtown plaza was filled with partiers enjoying the September 16 Independence Day weekend celebrations.

 Investigators later found 60 empty bullet casings on the ground.

“There are five people who have died in the Plaza Garibaldi incident. Three men died at the scene and two women while in hospital,” a prosecutors’ statement said, further revising a death toll initially given as three, and then four.

The shooters fled aboard three motorcycles, the Mexico City prosecutor’s office said.

Music and partying continued until after the city’s chief of public security, Raymundo Collins, showed up at the crime scene, video footage broadcast on TV showed. Collins described the attack as a targeted hit. No details were released on the identity of the foreign victim.

Investigators have not given a motive for the shooting, but did say that two of the slain men, ages 36 and 46, had been previously convicted for robbery.

The shooting eventually emptied the plaza — one of Mexico City’s most popular attractions — and the restaurants and bars in the nearby streets.

Moon seeks to break nuclear deadlock at Pyongyang summit

SEUL — South Korean President Moon Jae-in travels to Pyongyang this week for his third summit with Kim Jong Un, looking to break the deadlock in nuclear talks between North Korea and the United States.

Moon — whose own parents fled the North during the Korean War — flies north on Tuesday for a three-day trip, following in the footsteps of his predecessors Kim Dae-jung in 2000 and mentor Roh Moo-hyun in 2007.

No details of the programme have been announced, but Pyongyang is likely to pull out all the stops to create a good impression, with tens of thousands of people lining the streets to welcome him.

The visit comes after the North put on its “Mass Games” propaganda display for the first time in five years.

The new show featured imagery of Kim and Moon at their first summit in April in the Demilitarized Zone that divides the peninsula — prompting the unusual sight of tens of thousands of North Koreans in the May Day Stadium applauding pictures of Seoul’s leader.

One diplomatic source predicted the visit would see “Kim and Moon together receiving the same sort of applause”.

But while the Panmunjom summit was high on headline-grabbing symbolism, with Moon stepping briefly into the North and the two sharing an extended one-to-one woodland walk, pressure is mounting for substantive progress.

Brokering the historic summit between US President Donald Trump and Kim in Singapore in June, when Kim backed denuclearisation of the “Korean peninsula”.

But no details were agreed and Washington and Pyongyang have sparred since over what that means and how it will be achieved.

At the same time the US and South have sometimes moved at radically different speeds in their approach to the North.

Moon will try again to “play the role of facilitator or mediator”, said his special advisor on foreign affairs Moon Chung-in.

“He believes that improved inter-Korean relations have some role in facilitating US-DPRK talks as well as solving the North Korean nuclear problem,” he told reporters, using the North’s official acronym.

Last month, Trump abruptly cancelled a planned visit by Secretary of State Mike Pompeo to Pyongyang, after the North condemned “gangster-like” demands for what it called its unilateral disarmament.

Washington has been adamant that the North carry out a “final, fully verified denuclearisation” first, while Pyongyang is demanding a formal declaration from the US that the Korean War is over.

But Kim has since sent Trump a letter seeking a second summit and held a military parade for his country’s 70th birthday without showing off any intercontinental ballistic missiles, prompting warm tweets from the US president.

Special guests

North Korea will want to exploit Trump’s eagerness to declare progress before the US midterm elections in November to secure concessions, said Go Myong-hyun, an analyst at the Asan Institute of Policy Studies, and will view “every meeting as a viable political opportunity” towards that goal.

But whether Pyongyang is willing to offer something concrete in return has yet to be seen.

Moon may try to convince the North Korean leader to verbally commit to providing a list of the country’s existing nuclear programme, said Shin Beom-cheol, another analyst at the Asan Institute.

“It won’t be South Korea that inspects and verifies so if we can get something out of Kim Jong Un’s mouth, that will be significant,” Shin said, adding the next step could be a summit between Kim and Trump sometime in October.

Despite the deadlock in denuclearisation talks, since the Panmunjom summit the two Koreas have sought to pursue joint projects in multiple fields. But North Korea is under several different sets of sanctions for its nuclear and missile programmes, hampering efforts to revive cross-border economic schemes.

The dovish South Korean president has invited the heads of the country’s largest conglomerates — including Samsung Electronics and Hyundai Motors — to accompany him to Pyongyang.

“He is sending a message to the North to speedily complete denuclearisation, conclude talks with the US so that South Korea can begin full-fledged economic cooperation,” said analyst Go.

And special advisor Moon Chung-in added that the South Korean president could look to convince Kim to come up with a “somewhat radical and bold initiative”, such as dismantling some nuclear bombs, and press the US for reciprocal measures.

“And the United States should be willing to come up with major economic easing of economic sanctions,” he said.

Uzbek attend first electronic music fest by ravaged Aral Sea

MUYNAK (Uzbekistan) — Beats pumped and strobe lights beamed across the desert in ex-Soviet Uzbekistan into the early hours of Saturday as festival-goers danced beside rusting boats beached miles from the shrinking Aral Sea.

The event, called Shtia Elemeent in Russian, was the first electronic music festival ever held in the Central Asian state, which has recently moved to open up to international tourism.

It was staged in an area of desert caused by one of the world’s largest man-made environmental catastrophes, the shrinking of the Aral Sea that borders Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan, caused by Soviet irrigation projects that diverted its tributary rivers.

“Its fills the Aral Sea with an ocean of sounds. If we cannot fill it with water right now, let’s start with the sounds,” implored Otakba Suleimanov, one of the organizers of the festival that ran overnight from Friday.

The venue for the festival, Muynak, was once a fishing town on the shores of the sea, formerly the world’s fourth largest freshwater lake, known for its “graveyard” of beached boats.

The rare music event drew DJs from across the former Soviet Union and Europe as well as 60 foreign tourists and around 7,000 locals, according to organizers.

Perhaps more notably, it did so with the blessing of Uzbekistan’s authoritarian government and the conservative mainly Muslim population in this dust-swept patch of the Central Asian country.

“I wanted to witness the concert and the light show,” said Gulzoda Turakulova, a 25-year-old nurse who works at Muynak’s state hospital.

“This is the first time I have seen anything like this. I really want my Muynak to become a place that attracts people again,” she said.

Her generation has lived with the after-effects of the Aral Sea disaster including lost livelihoods from fishing and tourism.

“My father tells me stories about the sea, about how they used to fish and swim here,” Turakulova told AFP.

At the heavily-policed festival, a mock-up lighthouse loomed over revellers as a reminder of the receding sea, close to where a real lighthouse once stood.

Now, each year, tens of thousands of tons of salt-laced dust blow from the dried-up seabed, much of it contaminated by pesticides, affecting health.

This May one such storm blew across the region and into neighbouring Turkmenistan, seriously damaging crops and according to international media reports that were not confirmed by the secret government in Ashgabat. —AFP

African tourism alarmed by rhino, elephant losses

CAPE TOWN — Animal conservation in Africa has suffered several setbacks in recent months prompting experts at an African tourism conference this week in Cape Town to warn about the cost to the travel industry.

"Obviously it's negative," said the African Tourism Association's (ATA) managing director Naledi Khobo, who spoke at the inaugural event organised by Airbnb. "Whether it's people or animals, you see them being killed or slaughtered in such a terrible manner — it has a negative impact." Khobo was thrust into the conservation spotlight when an effort to move endangered black rhinos between national parks, launched with great fanfare in June, left 11 of the animals dead.

"It's very clear it was not managed well by my officers — and we took action on that," said Kenya's Tourism Minister Najib Balala, who was the public face of the project. Balala insisted that tourists considering visiting would not be deterred by the incident but industry experts have warned that such setbacks could hurt the continent's appeal.

"It does impact the overall pan-African perception as well, which in turn has a negative impact on tourism," added Khobo.

Paris, Brussels call for car-free day in Europe

PARIS—Europe should hold an annual car-free day in a bid to ease air pollution, the mayors of Paris and Brussels said Saturday on the eve of a vehicle-free day in their cities.

The call came in a joint statement by Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo and her counterpart in Brussels, Philippe Close, in which the two pointed to “the urgency of climate issues and the health impact of pollution”.

Both capitals will on Sunday hold their annual car-free day as part of the European Heritage Days 2018, a weekend of cultural events staged every year in countries throughout the bloc.

In Paris, City Hall had on Friday said six areas at the heart of the capital would remain traffic-free on the first Sunday of every month, including Île de la Cité and Île Saint-Louis, Louvre, Opera, Chatelet and the Marais.

The plan will kick in from October 7, with cars only allowed on the major roads crossing these neighbourhoods.

Between 2017 and 2018, car traffic in central Paris fell by 6.0 percent, which reduced air pollution “by a comparable proportion,” City Hall said, describing it as a “record” drop.—AFP

Victoria Beckham debuts at home to celebrate decade in fashion

LONDON—Untested in the fashion world, Victoria Beckham launched her VB label in 2008 in New York, across the Atlantic from her native Britain.

A decade on, she will exhibit at London Fashion Week for the first time on Sunday, in a triumphant homecoming of sorts for a now widely-respected designer and entrepreneur.

The ex-Spice Girls singer oversees an empire comprising four clothing lines, more than 400 retail outlets in over 50 countries and offices in London and New York.

At the outset Beckham, a longtime fashionista, faced a daunting challenge: convincing a competitive and demanding industry that she could make a lasting impression on fickle fashion fans.

Seizing the opportunity to surpass her status as a pop star and the original footballer’s WAG—meaning wives and girlfriends and the support of her family—her success is a tireless work ethic and the support of her family—football superstar husband David and their four children.—AFP

‘Game of Thrones’ back at Emmys for duel with ‘Handmaid’s Tale’

LOS ANGELES—Hollywood’s A-listers gather Monday to honor the best in television at the Emmy Awards, with record-breaking fantasy epic “Game of Thrones” back in the competition and once again looking to slay its rivals.

But winter could come early for HBO’s blood-splattered smash hit if it fails to snare the coveted best drama series prize, with last year’s winner “The Handmaid’s Tale” hotly tipped to defend its crown.

Both shows have already picked up some Emmys hardware: “Game of Thrones” won seven statuettes in technical categories at last weekend’s Creative Arts Emmys, while “The Handmaid’s Tale” scooped up three.

And both are likely to add to their hauls, as peak TV settles into middle age, half-hour comedies are television’s red Corvette,” Thompson said—a shiny new toy for viewers.—AFP

Non-coding RNA regulates genes in developing brain: study

CHICAGO—Researchers at Northwestern University (NU) Medicine have identified how an RNA sequence called Evf2 regulates genes over an unprecedented distance in the genome, during a key process of embryonic brain development that affects adult seizure susceptibility and other neurological diseases.

In the study, the researchers described for the first time the complex process through which Evf2 affects the 3-D chromosomal structure, revealing how Evf2 directs a DNA element to four target genes over an unprecedented distance in the genome, revealing how Evf2 directs a DNA element to four target genes over an unprecedented distance of 30 million bases.

The study demonstrated in a mouse model that the presence of Evf2 reduces seizure susceptibility; adult mice lacking Evf2 were susceptible to more frequent and more severe seizures, due to impaired GABA function.

“Understanding embryonic mechanisms of gene regulation that affect brain function in the adult can lead to the development of novel therapies for early intervention,” explained Ivelisse Cajigas, research assistant professor of pediatrics at the university and first author of the study. In addition, the researchers discovered that Evf2 regulates the expression of a serotonin receptor through repression of an enzyme called aldo-keto reductase in developing neurons.

“It’s a novel pathway that allows for a whole new avenue of research into neuronal activity, and possibly mood disorder and seizure susceptibility treatment,” said Jhumu Kohtz, research professor of pediatrics at NU. Evf2, discovered by Kohtz’s laboratory in 2006, is a long non-coding RNA that regulates transcription factors critical for the development of interneurons that produce GABA. Kohtz’s team demonstrated that loss of Evf2 during early development results in GABA defects in adult mice, suggesting the significance of the non-coding RNA in neurological disorders. LOS ANGELES—NASA’s most advanced space laser satellite blasted off Saturday on a mission to track ice loss around the world and improve forecasts of sea level rise as the climate warms.

Cloaked in pre-dawn darkness, the $1 billion, half-ton ICESat-2 launched aboard a Delta II rocket from Vandenberg Air Force base in California at 6:02 am (1302 GMT).

“Three, two one, liftoff!” said a launch commentator on NASA television. “Lifting ICESat-2 on a quest to explore the polar ice sheets of our constantly changing home planet.”

The launch marks the first time in nearly a decade that NASA has had a tool in orbit to measure ice sheet surface elevation across the globe. The preceding mission, ICESat, launched in 2003 and ended in 2009.

The first ICESat revealed that sea ice was thinning, and ice cover was disappearing from coastal areas in Greenland and Antarctica. In the intervening nine years, an aircraft mission called Operation IceBridge, has flown over the Arctic and Antarctic, taking height measurements of the changing ice.

But a view from space—especially with the latest technology—should be far more precise.

An update is particularly urgent since global average temperatures have climbed year after year, with four of the hottest years in modern times all taking place from 2014–2017.

“Loss of things like the sea ice that covers the Arctic ocean affects our weather, and loss of ice that covers Greenland and Antarctica raises sea level,” said Tom Wagner, cryosphere program scientist at NASA.

He added that the satellite should reveal new insights into the ice in the deep interior of Antarctica, which is area of mystery to scientists.

Potent laser

The new laser will fire 10,000 times in one second, compared to the original ICESat which fired 40 times a second. Measurements will be taken every 2.3 feet (0.7 meters) along the satellite’s path.

“The mission will gather enough data to estimate the annual elevation change in the Greenland and Antarctic ice sheets even if it’s as slight as four millimeters—the width of a No. 2 pencil,” NASA said in a statement. —AFP

Barcelona fight back to beat Real Sociedad, Real held in Bilbao

MADRID — Barcelona came from behind to beat Real Sociedad on Saturday as Real Madrid lost ground in La Liga after a 1-1 stalemate at Athletic Bilbao.

Real, unbeaten after three games, fell behind to Iker Muniain’s 32nd-minute goal on a counter-attack.

Athletic keeper Unai Simon held Real, who opened their Champions League campaign against Roma at the Santiago Bernabeu on Wednesday, at bay until Isco headed in Gareth Bale’s assist after the hour.

Bay until Isco headed in Gareth Bale’s assist after the hour.

Sooced in the 34th minute.

Atletico rallied too, Borja Garcés equalising with virtually the last kick of the game, but there were no celebrations at the Wanda Metropolitano.

Garcés’ strike was enough only to rescue a 1-1 draw for Diego Simeone’s side, who had looked on course for defeat when Elías’s Enrigh bundled home in the 87th minute.

Barcelona might easily have dropped points too had their opponents been more clinical.

Mikel Oyarzabal and Theo Hernandez both could have made it 2-0 after half-time but the former blazed over and the latter was denied by Barça keeper Marc-Ange ter Stegen.

Within minutes, they were behind, as two crosses caused havoc in Real Sociedad’s defence, with Suarez and Dembele perfectly placed to pounce.

Barca coach Ernesto Valverde had made the surprise decision to omit Sergio Busquets from his starting line-up, presumably with Tuesday’s Champions League opener against PSV Eindhoven in mind.

But it was testament to the hosts’ performance that Busquets was called upon in the second period after Philippe Coutinho had also been introduced at half-time.

“In the first half they closed us down well but Phillipe coming on in the second half helped changed the dynamics,” Suarez said.

Simeone might also have liked to keep one eye on their Champions League game against Monaco on Tuesday, but a victory was much-needed following defeat to Colta Vigo two weeks ago.

Antoine Griezmann and Diego Costa, however, were both sloppy in the final third and Elba might even have scored earlier, twice denied by the woodwork.

It means Atleti have now recorded their worst league start since 2009.

“I would worry if we had not created those chances to score,” Simeone said. “The team also showed a reaction after their goal. We continued to push forward and managed to take a point.”

Sarri wants more goals from hat-trick hero Hazard as Chelsea go top

LONDON — Chelsea manager Maurizio Sarri hailed Eden Hazard as the best player in Europe after his virtuoso display against Cardiff.

Hazard struck twice in seven minutes just before half-time to cancel out Sol Bamba’s early shock for the hosts at Stamford Bridge before completing his hat-trick from the penalty spot to take his tally for the season to five goals in just three starts.

But Sarri wants his star man to spend more time closer to the opposition goal rather than dropping deep to get attacks started.

“Hazard can improve more. I think he can spend less energy than now at 30 or 60 metres from the opposition goal,” added the former Napoli boss.

“I told him... for me you can score 40 goals but you have to spend less energy. You have to play in the last 25 metres.”

And Hazard hailed the freedom Sarri’s set-up has offered him to get forward and try to improve on his best ever tally of 19 goals for a season in English football.

“(He) just wants us to play and to find space between the lines so then Jorginho, Mateo Kovacic, Cesc Fabregas can find us,” said Hazard.

“We have freedom on the pitch, and at the moment we can try to score, it’s coming off.”

Unlikely title challenge
Chelsea rebuffed interest from European champions Real Madrid for Hazard after the player himself declared an interest in moving on after the World Cup.

And that resilience could yet yield an unlikely title challenge after finishing 30 points adrift of Manchester City last season.

William’s triumphant strike for Chelsea’s fourth edged the Blues ahead of Liverpool at the top of the table on goal difference with City just two points further back. But Sarri insists last season’s champions and Champions League finalists remain the benchmark for his side.

“My target is to be his best in team England, but not in one month. Maybe one season, maybe a little more but our target is this. “At the moment, for me, in my opinion, Liverpool and Manchester City are better than us.”

The feeling of being out-classed is one Cardiff may become accustomed to, having failed to significantly strengthen over the summer on their return to the top flight. — AFP

Munguia batters Cook to retain light-middle crown

LAS VEGAS — Mexico’s Jaime Munguia successfully defended his WBO light-middleweight crown for the second time on Saturday, battering outclassed Canadian Brandon Cook to score a one-sided knockout win.

The talented 21-year-old from Tijuana swarmed all over the outmatched Cook from the start of a one-sided undercard contest at the T-Mobile Arena.

Munguia had Cook in trouble with a flurry of punches at both the end of the first and second rounds before unloading in the third.

A series of shots to the body and head as Cook crouched on the ropes forced referee Benjy Esteves to step in to prevent further punishment.

Munguia is one of the division’s brightest prospects and is seen as a potential future opponent for middleweights Gennady Golovkin and Saul “Canelo” Alvarez, who fight in the main event later Saturday.

Munguia improved to 31-0 with 26 knockouts following the victory as Cook slipped to 29-2.

“With each fight you will see me getting better,” Munguia said afterwards.

“I just want to show that I can get better and that I want to face the best, so I can show that I am the best.”

Cook meanwhile complained of being hit with low blows that went unpunished.

“He kept hitting me in the hip and a lot of low blows, which surprised me because the referee is experienced and didn’t give Munguia a warning,” he said.

“He’s tough, and it is what he is, and I hope to come back soon.” — AFP
