UEC holding elections based on five norms

Union Election Commission (UEC) is holding elections under the five norms of free, fair, transparent, credible and reflecting the will of the people, said UEC Chairman U Hla Thein.

In order to meet these norms, not only the UEC but all levels of election sub-commissions need to do their duties and responsibilities. Election works could not be done alone by election commission but relevant ministries, political parties, civil society organisations, media and voters need to participate together in it.

Thanks are offered to respectable and trusted persons who participated in the election works as volunteers, as they are doing the national duty for the country. When election sub-commissions conduct the election works, most are new members, and so they are required to follow the election law, rules, work procedures and guidelines without corruption and bias in order for the election to reflect the will of the people.

It is also important to conduct the advance voting, voting at the poll stations, counting of the votes and announcing the results in a transparent and a timely manner. Sub-commissions that hold by-elections have to conduct the by-election successfully and sub-commissions that do not hold by-elections are to make preparations for the 2020 General Election, said the UEC Chairman.

Next, Sagaing Region election officer U Aung Myo Lwin explained about election work processes being conducted. Afterwards, UEC Chairman reiterated for sub-commissions that will hold by-election to conduct the by-election successfully, and sub-commissions that do not hold by-election to assist as necessary. He also spoke of studying law, rules and work guidelines in advance for the 2020 General Election to fully understand it. — MNA

Less supply flow affecting freight transport

By May Thet Hnin

STARTING from last week, freight transport has been slow as 30 per cent of highway trucks have halted their transportation service, according to Myanmar Highway Freight Transportation Service Association (MHFTSA). Freight charges for high way trucks from Yangon to Mandalay, Muse, Magway, Ayeayarwady, Pyay and other areas have significantly dropped as volume of shipment is down. Following suspension of truck service, we are discussing with freight forwarders to scale up to 5 to 10 per cent of freight cost, said U Ko Ko Naing, chair of MHFTSA.

“Yearly, goods flow usually moves slow in July, August and September. However, dollar appreciation and high fuel oil price has drastically affected freight transportation”, he said.

At present, China has suspended purchase of goods through border trade channels. Therefore, freight shipment volume has declined. Freight cost has decreased from Ks81,000 to Ks58,000 per ton for Yangon-Muse route and from Ks38,000 to Ks31,000 per ton for Yangon-Mandalay route. Similarly, 30 per cent of transportation service in Magway, Pyay, Ayeayarwady and other places are being suspended. Freight cost of highway trucks depends on volume of shipment.

“We will not completely halt our freight service although we are struggling with current situation. Those suspended trucks will resume their businesses after new freight cost is set. Currently, merchants are also adjusting placing their goods on market, with the US dollar fluctuating. We are running transportation service as suspension will affect earnings of the truck drivers and assistants,” said U Kyin Thein, Yangon-Taunggyi freight forwarder.

At present, frequency of six-wheeled trucks decreased from 10 to 5-6 times a month. Similarly, frequency of ten-wheeled truck has declined from 5-6 to 2 times. Income of freight service has dropped remarkably, due to lower frequency of trucks and decrease in freight cost, said the freight forwarders.

“Only 15 per cent of overall freight charges are left for owners, after deducing fuel oil price, driver and assistant wages, toll charges on road and bridges”, said U Hla Aung, Yangon-Kyaunkasan highway truck owner.

There are two freight services in highway transportation sector, service for general goods and charter truck service for particular single item. The trucks running for various goods are currently suspended. There are 14 main routes for highway freight service, with 70,000 heavy trucks and nearly 200,000 light trucks.

Billboards on pedestrian platforms to be relocated

By Nyein Nyein

IN responding to a question raised by Yangon Region Hluttaw representative U Yan Aung at the eighth-day meeting of the seventh regular session of Second Yangon Region Hluttaw on 24 September, Yangon mayor U Maung Maung Soe said 13 billboards were moved further back outside of the pedestrian platforms, and arrangements were made to move more. In addition to this, the Yangon mayor said, an international tender was called to construct modern bus stops in Yangon. FMI Decaux Co., Ltd. is the tender winning company and the agreement signed includes specification for placing of billboards. Modern bus stops are to be constructed with hundred percent investment of FMI Decaux Co., Ltd. At locations approved by Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA). As per the agreement, billboards were also permitted and income from the billboards will be shared with YCDC (Yangon City Development Committee)

By Nyein Nyein

THE Yangon Region Hluttaw Public Accounts Committee has suggested that work permit of traffic control center project should be transferred to another company, as the two companies — Myanmar Shwe Ying International Co., Ltd. and China Railway 21st Bureau Group Co., Ltd., which succeeded in tender to install advanced traffic light system and construction of the center, remain in limbo.

That was revealed at the eighth-day meeting of the seventh regular session of Second Yangon Region Hluttaw, held on 24 September, when the Public Accounts Committee submitted its report of findings and opinions, according to the Yangon Region Auditor General’s audit report for 2016-2017 fiscal year.

“Yangon Shwe Ying International Co., Ltd. and China Railway 21st Bureau Group Co., Ltd., that successfully bid for traffic control center project, signed with the regional government, pulling in Ks18.938 billion. However, they were given a warning to pay Ks100,000 fine per day as the project failed to meet the deadline on 2 August 2016.

“The government has collected Ks21 million for 210 days and the project is facing delay. Therefore, the government should select new capable company after adjusting the balance”, said U Tint Lwin, chair of the Public Accounts Committee.

Regarding delay of traffic control center project, Yangon Region government mentioned at the press conference of the government’s second-year performance on 24 August that the dispute between Yangon Region government and the companies caused delay.

It is a huge loss for both parties if it is in the state of uncertain situation for a long term. This being so, Yangon Region government had better make a brave decision for that, Yangon Region Hluttaw representative U Nay Phone Latt urged.

“If the project keeps facing delay, it is not profitable to both sides. The regional government should take a brave move to tackle this, depending on report of the Yangon Region Auditor General office. It should make a decision at the earliest time”, said U Nay Phone Latt.

The traffic control center project was implemented during the previous government, aiming to ease traffic congestion and monitor undisciplined driving, and unlicensed vehicles in the commercial hub of Yangon.

Fresh green tea leaf soon to be exported to US market

LOCAL tea leaf suppliers are exploring new export markets and 17 tons of Myanmar’s fresh green tea leaf will be shipped to the US on 28 September, said Daw Uya, director from Rathawati Company in Mandalay.

Myanmar’s fresh green tea leaf has been exported to the US market since 2015. About 17-20 tons of organic fresh green tea leaf are yearly exported. Only 17 tons of tea leaf meet the US’s market standard this year, and it is going to be tested this Friday.

“Previously, tea leaf export occurs in June and July. However, seeking FDA certificate prior to export, delayed the export this year. Fresh tea leaf can bring about many opportunities to this industry, penetrating more international markets. It is exported to foreign markets as raw material without being soaked in cooking oil”, she said.

Myanmar’s fresh tea leaf is placed on markets in San Francisco, California, US. It is getting more export market shares on account of its health benefit.

“We practice corporate social responsibility in supply chain from farm to consumers. We try to offer better services and support to the market”, she continued.

Myanmar’s tea leaves bring a good reputation in the export market. Tea leaves are being showcased in international expos, as only some foreigners have knowledge of fresh tea leaf consumption. It also aims to show off tea custom in Myanmar to guests at international exhibitions.

Daw Nyo Nyo Sein, chair of Myanmar Tea Association said that tea leaves are displayed at some super markets in foreign countries. Foreigners have come to appreciate it, after trying it. The number of tea leaf consumers has increased in US.

Myanmar Tea Association is endeavoring to introduce tea leaf to foreign markets. Myanmar’s tea leaf has penetrated to markets in China and some regional countries, such as Laos, Singapore, etc.

MIGALAR PAR!

FIRST of all, allow me to extend our heartfelt greetings to Pyi-dawu Hluttaw Speaker, Hlut-taw officials, Hluttaw members, Union level dignitaries, repre-sentatives of international or-ganizations, responsible persons from political parties, represent-atives of non-governmental or-ganizations, representatives from civil societies, students and youth, the media, the female and male forces of democratic forces attending this International Day of Democracy and the people held by the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw.

I am Nan Mo Mo Ei, Angpada Hluttaw representative from Kayin State constituency 4. I am highly honored to have the opportunity to talk on behalf of the National League for Democracy on the International Day of Democracy that falls on 13 September 2013. The United Nations design-ated International Day of Democ racy on 13 September 2007 with the intention to encourage and support the democratic sys-tem. Beginning 2011, Myanmar started celebrating International Day of Democracy and it has now observed its 8th anniver-sary.

In shaping the democracy process in Myanmar, the Nation-al League for Democracy has continuously endeavoured in its cooperation activities.

Our party has laid down the campaign slogan, “Time for Change”, with a view to enhanc-ing the democratic system, and committed itself to the 2015 general elections, where the majority of the people will exercise their right to choose the leadership of our country. The achievement was in fact a milestone for our comrades and the people as a whole who struggled in the cause which will never be forgotten in the chronicle of history.

Moreover, the National League for Democracy contin-ued with the slogan, “Together for the Union and with the slogan, “Collective Strength”, with the party con-tinuing with its democratic de-avors. In-strengthening collective par-ticipation and management is much more effective than individual efforts. This year’s dic-tum, “Let us work together for the flourishing democracy”, is very much appropriate with the current situation of Myanmar as we celebrate the International Day of Democracy.

Each and every one knows the ground reality that we need to overcome many hurdles and challenges to reach our expect-ed goal as we are actually on the threshold of the democracy pathway.

The adopted theme across the globe, such as “Let us work together for the flourishing of democracy”, is very much en-couraging for the tasks of check and balance among the three state pillars of the legislative, the administrative and the judi-ciary which is very much appro-priate and suitable on the way towards the peaceful establishment of the law making, representation, and control mechanism of the Union.

Currently, we have reached agreements as part 1 for 37 points at the second Union Peace Conference – 21st Century Panglong meeting, and as part 2 for 14 points at the third Union Peace Conference – 21st Century Panglong meeting in the form of Union Agreement. Therefore, we could lay down the agreements for the important task in build-ing the future Union based on democracy and federal system.

The National League for De-mocracy has obviously consid-ered the forums of collective solu-tion of all relevant groups with multifaceted strength, stability and peace for better advantage and development of the nation.

We believe everybody knows that during the second Hluttaw term, the National League for Democracy has been positively working for the implementation of check and balance for the ad- vantage of the nation with the representatives of the Hluttaw. We would like to update and say that we could carry out in better and effective way with strength, in connectivity between the people and the Hluttaw, under the theme of “Let us work together for the flourishing of democracy”.

As the Myanma Radio and Television is broadcasting di-rec-tly on Hluttaw meetings, the important issues of the general forums, in the con-text of check and balance, prov-ing and saving as legacy to the upcoming new generations.

The democratic reform and transition have been acquired with valuable sacrifices that could never be forgotten in the road ahead, exceeding less level of sacrifice and lighter pace of sacrifice for the future flourishing of democracy. With this pride, we could carry on with the direct path-clone towards the nation, we must stand up on the right path, with the steady pace in the right direction, along with the right thinking and the right situations on the road ahead. We must continue with the theme, “Let us work together for the flourishing of democracy”.

In conclusion, allow me to say that with the essence of this valuable theme, the National League for Democracy pledges courage and votes to set in motion for the good of the nation.

Thank you.

Time is ripe to invest in agro-industries

M INYAR has yet to exploit its full potential in agriculture as it is still far behind its peers in terms of export market volume and farm productivity. At the same time, it displays an important role in boosting our economy and it is also vital for the country’s economic growth. Therefore, the Administration of Commerce has retained restrictions on trade and has been making efforts for promoting smooth training and consumer rights, solving trade disputes and creating job opportunities.

To promote the export sector, it is required to know about agricultural commodities, export market penetration, import/export policies of trade partners, and also, demand and situation of the export market.

As part of efforts to boost the export sector, priority considera-tion would also be given to industries related with agricultural products, jewelries, fruits, vegetables and vegetables.

The country’s agricultural development has been boosted through trading in agricultural products. We believe that export growth of agro products and crops can develop our national economy.

Therefore, the government and private business sector are working together for producing of quality crops and products which have prospects for getting accepted in foreign market.

Myanmar’s trade volume from April to August reached US$ 18 billion, with an increase of US$2.5 billion in comparison with the same period last year. It means our export saw an increase of 1.5 billion in the period.

The agriculture sector plays an important role in our economy. While the economy grows, the agro sector has the highest capacity for jobs and income growth to work together for boosting production of quality crops and products which have prospects for getting accepted in foreign market.

Myanmar saw its export growth hit a record high in the current period of 2018, according to the Foreign Trade Statistics of the Ministry of Commerce. It said the export value of the country reached US$ 17.8 billion from January to August, an increase of US$ 500 million compared to the same period in 2017.

While stemming what looks like unsustainable rural-to-urban migration, Myanmar with the highest capacity for jobs and income growth will continue to boost the exports, given to industries priority consideration. In abandoned villa, Syrian children study on the ground

ALEPPO (Syria) — In rebel-held northern Syria, displaced children sit or lie on the ground of an unfinished villa, bending over their notebooks to apply themselves as they write the day’s lesson. Four teachers instruct around 100 children — girls and boys aged six to 12 — at the makeshift school in an opposition-held area in the west of the northern province of Aleppo.

Between the bare walls of the villa abandoned mid-construction, children sit or lie on sheets or plain carpets, their small backpacks cast by their side. DUBBED “Buds of Hope”, the teaching facility has no desks, library or even working toilets. Instead, the air walls in from beyond the pine trees outside through the gaping windows in the cement wall. Dressed in a bright blue T-shirt and jeans, her hair neatly tied back in a pony tail, bright blue T-shirt and jeans, her shoes neatly by its side. “This isn’t a school,” says 11-year-old Ali Abdel Jawad.

“There aren’t any classrooms, no seats, nothing. We’re sitting on the ground,” he says.

Some sit with their knees drawn on a plastic woven carpet, their shoes neatly by its side. The children — as well as their teachers — have been displaced from their homes in other parts of Syria due to the seven-year war, a teacher told an AFP photographer. Some hail from Eastern Ghouta outside Damascus, a former rebel stronghold that fell back under regime control in April after a blistering offensive and surrender deals. Others come from the central provinces of Hama or Homs. —AFP

EU announces legal entity to maintain business with Iran

UNITED NATIONS (United States) — The European Union said on Monday its members would set up a payment system to allow oil companies and businesses to continue trading with Iran in a bid to evade sanctions after the US withdrew from a nuclear agreement.

Iran and the European Union announced their defiance towards US President Donald Trump's administration after high-level talks at the United Nations among the remaining members of the accord.

The countries said in a statement that they were determined “to protect the freedom of their economic operators to pursue legitimate business with Iran.”

With the United States and the dollar dominating so much of global trade, the statement said the new mechanism would “facilitate payments related to Iran’s exports (including oil) and imports, which will assist and reassure economic operators pursuing legitimate business with Iran.”

EU foreign policy chief Federica Mogherini, speaking at the United Nations alongside Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, said the countries were still working out the technical details.

She said that the remaining members of the so-called Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action — Britain, China, France, Germany and Russia — would also maintain their commitments to support Iran on civilian nuclear energy.

“The participants recalled that these initiatives are aimed at preserving the JCPOA, which is in the international interest,” she said.

Pressure on Iranian economy

In line with findings of UN inspectors, Mogherini reiterated that Iran has been in compliance with the nuclear agreement — under which Tehran drastically scaled back its nuclear programme in exchange for relief from sanctions.

The agreement was sealed in 2015 in a signature achievement for then US president Barack Obama.

ADDIS ABABA (Ethiopia) — When Ethiopia released thousands of prisoners earlier this year, Hannah Tesemma hoped her three siblings and cousin, seized from the streets 24 years ago, would be among them.

They were not, so Hannah and her sister took a banner calling for their release to a rally for new Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed, sticking around even after a deadly grenade attack disrupted the gathering in the capital Addis Ababa.

“We aren’t living, so why should we hide?” Hannah told AFP, tears in her eyes. “Why do we have to suffer like this?”

Enforced disappearances

The EPRDF took power in 1991 after defeating the Derg military junta, establishing itself as the sole ruler in Africa’s second most-populous country.

Hannah’s brother Menelik Tesemma, 19 at the time, was active in an opposition party, the All-Amhara People’s Organization. Not long after giving a forceful speech at a party meeting in 1994, plainclothes security agents in an unmarked car intercepted Menelik and his cousin. That evening Hannah’s other brothers, twins aged 21, went out looking for the pair after neighbours told them about the arrests. Security agents seized them too. None has been seen since: there were no court appearances, no police records.

Once, Hannah secured a meeting with a government official who listened to her story before dismissing it, saying, “Our government would not do such things.” But in the early 1990s, as the EPRDF consolidated power, the enforced disappearance of opponents was an explicit strategy, said Fisseha Tekle, a researcher with Amnesty International.

Having survived the Derg’s bloody purges against his Ethiopian People’s Revolutionary Party (EPRP), 47-year-old Berhanu Egiyu was arrested by plainclothes police in 1994.

It was months before his brother Gebeyehu Ejigu was told he could visit Berhanu in a jail cell. But when he got there, the man they showed him was not his brother.

“There are fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, wives and husbands, loved ones waiting,” Fisseha said. “Every one of those records closure.” Gebeyehu said. He believes his brother is one of tens of thousands of disappeared, but Fisseha says the exact number is hard to know. “You can count the allegations, but you can’t find out the number of people who have been disappeared” (under this kind of government), he said. — AFP

Trump pulled out of the agreement in May, describing it as a “disaster” and quickly moving to reimpose sanctions on Iran. Despite the protests of the European Union, a number of business including French energy giant Total and carmakers Peugeot and Renault as well as Germany’s Siemens and Daimler have already suspended operations in Iran for fear of triggering US sanctions.

With Iran’s economy already feeling the pinch, US national security adviser John Bolton earlier Monday vowed to impose “maximum pressure” on Tehran, while insisting that Washington was not pushing for regime change.

US Arab allies Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates as well as Israel have long sought for Washington to work to curtail non-Arab and predominantly Shiite Muslim Iran’s influence in the Middle East, including in war-torn Syria.

The EU move comes a day before Trump and Iranian President Hassan Rouhani separately address the UN General Assembly, with the US leader expected to take a hard line on Iran.

CARACAS — The Venezuelan government announced on Monday it was investigating the collusion of Chilean, Colombian and Mexican diplomats in the failed assassination attempt on President Nicolas Maduro on 4 August.

Communication and Information Minister Jorge Rodriguez said on Sunday that Venezuelan authorities obtained testimonies from persons implicated in the attack who stated that personnel from the Colombian, Chilean and Mexican embassies allegedly helped or were willing to help with the attack. On Monday, Venezuela’s foreign ministry issued a press release confirming that the testimonies “were unsubstantiated.”

“The tone and arguments used by the governments of Colombia, Chile and Mexico are questionable. Instead of clarifying the circumstances made by the confessed terrorists, they employ diplomatic restraint,” the news release said. It also said the reactions of the three countries allow Venezuela’s extreme right to feed supported and protected.

The news release said the Venezuelan government expected “coherent and transparent international cooperation of these countries in order to conduct the necessary investigation.”

“Venezuela’s Bolivarian government will continue to objectively investigate the grave event that occurred on 4 August, 2018 and will continue to present to both the national and international audiences the definitive results that are discovered,” said the release. The government has arrested 28 individuals in connection with the failed assassination attempt. — Xinhua

No respite for relatives of Ethiopia’s disappeared

“Are we not living, so why should we hide?” Hannah said of her decision to openly challenge the popular prime minister in public. Still, she has received no word on their whereabouts. Since taking office in April, Abiy has pursued an aggressive reform agenda that includes trying to right some of the wrongs committed by his party, the Ethiopian People’s Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPRDF).

He has released scores of jailed dissidents and publicly admitted that the security forces tortured detainees.

But he has yet to bring closure for Hannah and many other Ethiopians whose friends and family opposed the EPRDF and were never seen again.

“Our family has been torn apart,” Hannah told AFP, tears in her eyes. “Why do we have to suffer like this?”

Speaking a day after Washington activated tariffs on $200 billion in Chinese goods, vice commerce minister Wang Shouwen said China is open to negotiations but that the two sides must treat each other “equally and with respect”.

“Now that the US has adopted this type of large-scale trade restrictions, they’re holding a knife to someone’s throat. Under these circumstances, how can negotiations proceed?” Wang told a news conference.

US Secretary of Commerce Wilbur Ross on Tuesday said China is open to negotiations but that another $267 billion of its goods, roughly half of China’s exports, must be added to the US list of goods hit with tariffs.

Wang met US officials in Washington in August but there have been no high-level meetings between the world’s top two economies for months.

He said Tuesday the US measures “have made it impossible for the negotiations to proceed” and blamed the US for abandoning a consensus on trade that was struck in May, but was quickly followed by new US tariffs.

Support for exporters

The US, China’s largest trading partner, has been heavy-handed in its trade strategy, prompting Beijing to announce it will slap retaliatory tariffs on another $75 billion in US goods.

Indonesian teen rescued after seven weeks adrift at sea

JAKARTA — An Indonesian teenager survived seven weeks adrift at sea after his tiny fishing trap lost its moorings and ended up some 2,500 kilometres (1,500 miles) away in waters near the Pacific island of Guam, his family said on Monday.

Aldi Novel Adilang’s harrowing tale began in mid-July when the 18-year-old was working solo on a fishing hut anchored about 125 kilometres (77 miles) off Indonesia’s Sulawesi island.

His job was to keep the vessel’s lamps lit to attract fish. Its owner would reportedly come by weekly to drop off food, clean water, fuel and other supplies.

The floating fishing trap, known as a rompong, had no engine or paddles and was anchored to the seabed with a long rope, but heavy winds knocked it off its moorings and sent Adilang out to sea, local media said.

Rompongs are traditionally used to trap fish in Indonesia, but are often unmanned, secured by buoys and ropes.

Local media reported that the owner of Adilang’s rompong had as many as 50 moored in the surrounding waters.

“She told me that he went missing,” Adilang’s mother said.

Aldi’s mother Net Kahiking told AFP her son, who survived by catching fish with a fishing net filled with pepper mint oil, pig hides and condoms, was rescued by a Japanese vessel on August 31 and was due to arrive home September 31, according to the Post.

“Alo was rescued by the Japanese vessel...”

The malnourished teenager eventually changed the frequency on a portable radio and his distress call was picked up near Guam by a Japan-bound Panamanian-flagged vessel on August 31, according to the Post.

Eighty-four days after being adrift, Adilang’s family were contacted by Japanese coast guard officials after receiving the teen’s radio distress signal.

Committee follows up on progress in Thai-Chinese high speed rail project

BANGKOK — The committee for the Thai-Chinese high speed rail cooperation project held its year’s first meeting on Monday to follow up on progress of the project.

Transport Minister Arkhom Termpitayapaisith chaired the meeting of the Administrative Committee for the Thai-Chinese Rail Cooperation Project at the Ministry of Transport’s headquarter.

The committee took into account the progress of the high speed rail project which has been designed to link Bangkok with Nong Khai in northeastern Thailand which borders Laos via Nakhon Ratchashima and several other provinces along the way.

The committee discussed setting up a special organization to supervise the implementation of the high speed rail project, an institute for research and development of rail technology and technology transfers as well as improving public transport systems in support of the rail project.

The panel also considered setting up a subcommittee to coordinate and conduct surveys and a feasibility study on the planned economic development of urban and other areas on either side of the high speed rail route between Bangkok and Nong Khai.

The subcommittee, chaired by Deputy Transport Minister Pailin Chuchottaworn, will draft a masterplan for town planning and commercial development of the real estate in the neighborhood of railway stations. —Xinhua
New York seeks to claw back ‘Big Oyster’ past

NEW YORK — One sunny morning in New York, a dozen biologists and volunteers stand in knee-deep water, chucking net sacks of oyster shells down a human chain, before planting them in containers on the riverbed.

The goal? To restore a billion oysters by 2035 to America’s largest city — not as a delicacy for the dinner table but in an environmental bid to clean up the notoriously filthy harbor water and generate greater biodiversity.

Dressed in waders, the group battles under the hot morning sun on the Brooklyn shoreline, the Statue of Liberty and iconic skyscrapers of New York’s Financial District rising up on the horizon.

The net sacks contain empty oyster shells, or ones that have been assiduously cleaned or “cured” — then inserted with oyster larvae and placed into containers planted on the seabed that will form a reef.

“This was the Big Oyster before it was the Big Apple,” jokes Mike McCann, an urban marine ecologist with the non-profit group The Nature Conservancy.

“That’s a history that has been forgotten by a lot of New Yorkers and this project brings it back,” explains the 32-year-old.

The Dutch colonists who followed knew today’s Ellis Island and Liberty Island as the Island of the Little Oyster and the Island of the Great Oyster.

“They are ecosystems engineers and they build (a) three-dimensional reef habitat,” explains Katie Mosher, restoration manager of the Billion Oyster Project (BOP), which was set up in 2014.

“Immediate improvement”

“It’s full of different shapes and sizes of oysters that other species love to hunt in and live in and to search for prey,” she adds.

Oysters also filter and clean the water when they breathe, making it clearer.

The molluscs also recycle nutrients and nitrogen, and can even mitigate the energy of large waves, reducing flooding and preventing erosion from storms or hurricanes.

But New York’s original oyster population was almost extinct by the dawn of the 20th century, a victim of overfishing, industrial age pollution and sewage.

The waters of New York became too toxic for oysters to remain, until the Clean Water Act of 1972 prohibited the dumping of untreated wastewater and garbage. Since then, life has slowly returned.

The waters of New York became too toxic for oysters to remain, until the Clean Water Act of 1972 prohibited the dumping of untreated wastewater and garbage. Since then, life has slowly returned.

“I had no idea there were oysters in New York City!” exclaims Emma Latham, 22, one of the volunteers and recent ecology graduate from Princeton University.

“I think it’s just great that we are able to take any small piece of land and make it do more, because there’s such a dire environmental impact by having so many people in such a small space with so much concrete.”

The BOP works with dozens of partners, schools and hundreds of volunteers to build oyster reefs throughout the five boroughs of New York, and is already reaping the first rewards.

In just four years, they have already created 28 million oysters, estimating that the harbor waters have never been better in 150 years.

“We definitely noticed an improvement when we put oysters down on the bottom,” said Mosher.

The reefs have also fueled a growth in wild oysters. Every so often a whooper is found, such as one measuring 20 cm (8 in) in August — the largest known oyster in the city in a century — on Pier 40, in the Hudson River at Greenwhich Village.

Not for eating

In some areas, oyster larvae are so plentiful that all that’s needed is to offer them something to which they can cling and survive, explains Mosher.

Over the next three years, the organization will return again and again to the same Brooklyn reef to study the oysters and their impact on biodiversity.

“We are interested in just the basics. Are these oysters growing? Are they surviving? Are they reproducing and creating a sustainable population?” says McCann.

They will also study the quality of the water, how many nutrients it offers, if there are predators or diseases, and if biodiversity has widened.—AFP

K-Pop stars at UN urge world’s youth to ‘just speak yourself’

UNITED NATIONS — K-Pop sensation BTS brought their star power to the United Nations on Monday, telling the world’s youth to listen to their inner voice and resist pressure to conform.

“No matter who you are, where you’re from, your skin colour, your gender identity, just speak yourself,” group leader Kim Nam-joon told a packed hall at the launch of a UNICEF youth campaign.

Dubbed “Generation Unlimited”, the campaign to promote education, training and employment kicked off during the annual gathering of world leaders at the United Nations. Wearing business suits and ties, the septet joined UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres, World Bank president David Malpass and Rwandan President Paul Kagame for the event — that was oddly devoid of screaming fans. Kim Nam-jun, who also calls himself RM, spoke of growing up in Ilsan, South Korea, imagining he was a superhero and being “just a normal little boy” until self-doubt settled in at the age of nine or ten. “I think that’s when I began to worry about what other people thought of me and started seeing myself though their eyes,” he said. “I tried to jam myself into the moulds that other people made.”

The lead singer of the world’s most popular boy band said there were times when he wanted to quit music but he overcame his insecurities by listening to the “small voice that said, wake up man, and listen to yourself.”

“I have many faults and I have many more fears but I am going to embrace myself as hard as I can and I am starting to love myself,” he said. Among South Korea’s best known and most lucrative musical exports, BTS made music history this year by becoming the first K-Pop group to top the Billboard 200 music charts. “BTS has become artists performing in huge stadiums and selling millions of records right now, but I am still an ordinary 24-year-old guy,” said Kim Nam-jun. “We have learned to love ourselves, so now I urge you to ‘speak yourself!’”

Richard Madden eyes Bond role

LONDON — “Game of Thrones” star Richard Madden wants to be the next James Bond, the actor’s father said.

Richard Madden Sr said his son may not be making a big deal about being interested in essaying Agent 007 when Daniel Craig steps down as the suave spy, but he is eager about playing the part.

“I'm quite sure he does want that to be on his CV one day but he's not making a song and dance about it. Whether it’s Bond or any big role, Richard has ideas about things he’d like to do. It’s probably best whatever his desires or thoughts are to keep it to himself,” Madden Sr told The Mirror newspaper.

The actor’s father said in spite of “GOT” success, Richard’s journey has not been easy.

“It's not all been plain sailing. He’s had disappointments. You have to be in the right place at the right time,” Madden Sr said.

Post “GOT”, the actor appeared in drama series “Medici: Masters of Florence” and Netflix’s “Sacred Games” and “Ghoul”, positioning her as the right time,” Madden Sr said.

I like to live on the edge: Radhika Apte

MUMBAI — With three consecutive Netflix projects and one Bollywood blockbuster to her credit Radhika Apte is on a roll, but the actor says she does not let the success get to her and likes to live on the “edge”.

The actor started the year with R Balki’s comedy-drama “Padman” and featured in “Lust Stories”, “Sacred Games” and “Ghoul”, positioning her as streaming giant’s India favourite. “The content that’s coming my way is great, but something really needs to challenge and throw me off, completely shake me. I like to live that. It has its downside too, but I like to live on the edge. “The year has been great but there’s much more I want to do, which will give me the kind of satisfaction that I’ve been looking for. I don’t think it’s that year,” Radhika told PTI.

She said she is currently experiencing gratefulness and insecurities in equal parts.

“I am grateful for all the work but it’s also confusing because you are doing so much work that you don’t have time to breathe. It produces a lot of insecurities about whether you continue to work like that or not. Or what is the next thing that I’m going to do. It worries me.”

The actor was speaking at the launch of True Roots Botanical Hair Tonic. Radhika’s upcoming projects are Saif Ali Khan’s “Baazaar” and Bollywood filmmaker Michael Winterbottom’s “The Wedding Guest” along with Dev Patel. The actor said it is important for her to surprise her viewers hence she always tries to pick diverse characters. “You get a one-off opportunity and if you manage to sustain that or not is very crucial. It’s very important to come up with new things, to reinvent yourself,” she added. —PTI

Google tunes search for prescence and pictures

SAN FRANCISCO — Google unveiled changes on Monday aimed at making the leading search engine more visual and intuitive to the point that it can answer questions before being asked.

Artificial intelligence and machine learning are core drivers of how Google will pursue its mission to organize the world’s information and make it accessible to anyone, search vice president Ben Gomes said at an event in San Francisco.

The search engine focused strongly on mobile use and appeared to be growing more like Facebook, encouraging users to linger and explore topics, interests or stories with growing emphasis on photos and videos. Results will be increasingly personalized.

“Search is not perfect, and we are under no illusions it is,” Gomes said.

“But, you have our commitment that we will make it better every day.”

He described the latest changes as shifting from answers to journeys, providing ways to target queries without knowing what words to use and enhancing image-based searches.

Searching with pictures

Google Images was redesigned to weave in “Lens” technology that enables queries based on what is pointed out in pictures.

New Activity Cards will let users pick up searches where they left off, eliminating the need to retrace online steps.

The search engine will also let users create Collections of online content, and suggest related material that might be of interest.

A Google feed used by more than 800 million people monthly is getting a new name, Discover, and increased ability to offer people relevant information they are likely to want but haven’t thought to ask for yet.

The feature was described as “Google search helping you discover new things without a query.”

Google said it is also testing out an improvement to its job-related search results that will figure out what skills are needed for such posts and information about how to acquire them.

“Information and language are core to what we are as human beings,” Gomes said.

SAN FRANCISCO — US leading tech company Microsoft on Monday unveiled a series of new enhanced security tools that help its users remember fewer passwords but better secure their accounts of Microsoft’s cloud service.

The US software giant is introducing the new Microsoft Authenticator app that will replace user passwords with a more secure multi-factor sign-in that combines users’ phone and their fingerprint, face, or PIN.

Microsoft announced the new measures at its Ignite 2018 conference, an annual gathering of technologists and business leaders, which opened on Monday through 28 September in Orlando, Florida.

“Nearly all data loss starts with compromised passwords, and so today we are declaring an end to the era of passwords,” Rob Lefferts, Microsoft Corporate Vice President of Security wrote in a blog post.

The Microsoft Authenticator app will support password-less logins for hundreds of thousands of Azure Active Directory-connected apps on its cloud platform.

“No company lets enterpris eliminate more passwords than Microsoft,” Lefferts said, adding that the adoption of a multi-factor-sign-in method will reduce compromise by 99.9 percent.

Lefferts said Microsoft is declaring an end to the era of passwords as the Microsoft Authentication app guarantees its users a simpler but more secure experience by eliminating passwords.

For enterprise users, the company launched Microsoft Secure Score, an evolution from its Office 365 Secure Score, which provides a continuously updated security rating that reflects its more powerful threat intelligence.

The service helps businesses assess their security situation and possible changes to be taken in response. Lefferts described Microsoft Secure Score as the only enterprise-class dynamic report card for cybersecurity, which cuts the possibility of a breach by 30 times.

He said the Redmond, Washington-based company will expand the Secure Score service to cover all of Microsoft 365 starting on Monday.

Establishing Moon base key opportunity for Australian space agency: CSIRO

CANBERRA — Australia’s space agency has the capability to help establish a human base on the Moon, according to the nation’s peak scientific body.

In its industry roadmap for the space exploration sector released on Monday, the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organisation (CSIRO) said that Australia’s domestic space industry could be worth 12 billion Australian dollars ($7 billion US dollars) by 2030.

“Our space roadmap charts a course for economic growth using space, and champions a new era of space exploration to inspire our children with the power of science to make the ‘impossible’ possible,” CSIRO chief executive Larry Marshall said in a media release.

“Our existing space industry is built on a foundation of trust earned 50 years ago when we enabled the world to see mankind touch the Moon.

“That kind of inspiration is a key ingredient in supercharging growth in new industries, new jobs, new science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) talent and developing a dynamic nation where the sky is no longer the limit.”

The report, “Space: A Roadmap for unlocking future growth opportunities for Australia,” found that Australia’s “unique strengths and geographic advantages” would “increase Australia’s share of the international space sector.” It said that “Australian space sector support for the lunar challenge would be an opportunity to grow our existing relationships with global partners, including international space agencies.” —Xinhua

Overlooked signal in MRI scans reflects amount, kind of brain cells: study

CHICAGO — Analyzing overlooked data from an MRI scan by a new technique developed by US researchers surprisingly reveals how many and which brain cells are present, and shows where cells have been lost through injury or disease.

The researchers at Washington University School of Medicine in St Louis analyzed the background data on an MRI scan and found a signal, which they called R2*, that remained largely unchanged when people performed tasks but varied across parts of the brain.

They compared the R2* signal with data from the Allen Human Brain Atlas, which maps genes active in various areas of the brain, and found three sets of gene networks that tracked with the R2* signal.

These groups of genes, as it turned out, reflected the different kinds and numbers of brain cells, and the extent of connections between them.

In other words, this quick new MRI scan gave the researchers all they needed to know to determine how densely packed and interconnected the neurons are in any part of the brain.

The information could also help the researcher understand how a person’s brain develops and changes from infancy to old age, and how human build memories and learn. It could also give clues to brain illness or injury.

“We did some studies on traumatic brain injury where we found some areas of the brain are already losing neurons even though the standard scans show nothing,” said Dmitry Yablonskiy, professor of radiology at the university’s Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology. —Xinhua
Modric ends Ronaldo-Messi era to be crowned world’s best

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Luka Modric ended Cristiano Ronaldo and Lionel Messi’s decade-long domination of football’s individual awards by being crowned FIFA’s best player of the year on Monday. The Real Madrid and Croatia midfielder starred for both club and country as Madrid won a third straight Champions League, and he inspired Croatia to reach the World Cup final for the first time.

“The emotion is huge because it is thanks to the work of everyone. So many people have come together and so many have supported me,” said Modric.

Ronaldo turns to Juventus challenge after FIFA best player snub

MILAN — Cristiano Ronaldo turns his focus back to Juventus’ quest for a treble this season after losing out in the FIFA’s best player of the year award. Five-time Ballon d’Or winner Ronaldo skipped the awards ceremony in London on Monday as his former Real Madrid teammate Luka Modric beat him for the award.

The 33-year-old Portuguese star also lost out to Liverpool’s Mohamed Salah for the Puskas Award for the best goal.

He had been nominated for his superb overhead bicycle kick for Real Madrid against Juventus in last season’s Champions League quarter-final, which even drew a standing ovation from Juventus supporters in Turin.

Juventus coach Massimiliano Allegri had backed Ronaldo – who has scored three goals in his last two league games – for the award, as he led the way in the Champions League with 15 goals to help Real to a third straight title. “With no offence to Luka Modric, I’d give the Ballon d’Or to Ronaldo for what he did last season. I think he deserves it,” said Allegri.

After Wednesday’s game against 18th-placed Bologna, who shocked Roma 2-0 at the weekend, Juventus play Carlo Ancelotti’s Napoli in a top-of-the-table clash on Saturday.

Juventus have had a perfect start to the season with five wins and 15 points — three points ahead of Napoli.

Allegri’s side also play Swiss club Young Boys in the Champions League quarter-final, which even drew a standing ovation from Juventus supporters in Turin.

“At the end of the year when the points are counted the matches like the one in Frosinone you don’t remember immediately, but you know how important they were,” said Allegri. — AFP

Inter’s Spalletti gets ban for wild goal celebration

Spalletti was sent to the stands for screaming towards the television camera after Croatia’s World Cup runner-up Marcelo Brozovic scored a 94th minute winner against Sampdoria on Saturday.

An official match note said that the coach showed “a controversial attitude towards the fourth official”.

Spalletti had already been warned after the game for “offensive expressions” to the referee.

The sending-off against Sampdoria, however, did not lead to an automatic disqualification, it was a decision of the sports judge.

Inter have appealed and hope to have Spalletti back on the bench Tuesday at the San Siro against Fiorentina, as the appeal should be discussed before midday. “I’m sorry for what happened but I don’t want to add anything else,” Spalletti told a pre-match press conference on Monday and argued that the ban had set a “difficult precedent”. — AFP
