Speaking at the ceremony, the President said during the 2012 by-election period I was crisscrossing this area by motor-cycles, cars and boats. I would like to take this opportunity to tell you all that what is firmly etched in my mind is the memory of the trips and people’s welcome, encourage and support me during that time.

Only when the roads and bridges are good and there is smooth transportation between the people will there be more friendly relationships that would make the region develop.

Ayeyawady Region is a delta area and is the rice bowl of Myanmar as well as the region that supplies water related products. In the past, the region relies on its waterways for transport but nowadays, its products can be speedily delivered at ease by road. In addition to that, it had abundance natural resources as well as beautiful beaches that attracts local and foreign visitors. The Shwethaungyan Bridge opened today would greatly benefit the local population of Ayeyawady Region. With development of travel business, the region’s socio-economy will be improved. Businesses and local populace are to maintain and protect the natural environment and resources from any damages because it will be beneficial for generations to come.

You all should not look at the short term benefits for yourselves only but look for the long term benefit for all. Local populace and businesses are required to follow the rules, regulations, instructions and guidelines set by the local authorities. Only then can the beach areas will exist for long. Retaining the beauty of the beaches and natural environments are to be conducted in coordination between the local populace, businesses, departmental organisations and civil service organisations. Notices, posters, billboards and warnings are to be setup for the safety of the visitors too.

Dear ethnic brethrens,

During the more than two years when our government took over the responsibility of the country, we were able to improve the road transportation by constructing many roads and bridges. During the remaining period of our term, we plan to construct more than 400 bridges. Ministry of Construction was also able to inspect, maintain and upgrade the roads and bridges for the safety of the people. Every year there’ll be construction, repair and upgrade of rural roads that by 2030, 90 percent of the people living in 89 percent of the rural area will be able to use it all around the year.

Local populace and relevant authorities need to cooperate and work together to prevent wastages of public funds in the construction of roads and bridges and project works. Projects using public funds must benefit the region. Furthermore relevant authorities and departments are cautioned to strictly adhere to tender rules and regulation issued by the President Office when assigning project works. I would like to emphasize that if there were any circumstances of public funds being divided and used up for personal gains without benefiting the people, strict action according to the law will be taken regardless of who that person may be.

Instructions were given to conduct quality control without fail for construction works and basic infrastructure works including roads and bridges. Relevant responsible person(s) will have liabilities if failures that should not happen with the exception of unforeseeable circumstances, exceeding of set load limit and set time limit occurs and affects the public. All are urged to ensure in caring for the long term sustained existence of such basic infrastructure that were established with public funds. Development of agriculture sector in which the majority of the country’s population relied upon is important for the development of our country. Technology and investment required for its future generations to use the land that they manage and work on 2012 farmland law and 2012 vacant, fallow and virgin land management law were being amended accordingly.

Our government had released a total of 63,417 acres of confiscated farmlands and 13,091 acres were returned to the farmers while 50,326 acres were returned to relevant ministries, states/regions. Assessments are being carried out to return the remaining confiscated lands back to farmers as soon as possible.

I would like to put on notice again that action will be taken against any personnel or officials who hinder and obstruct the work of the relevant committees in assessing, reviewing and returning confiscated lands back to the farmers and permitting to work on it. Compensation and reparations are to be determined fairly as well as to reflect the situation on the ground. Both sides must not stand on impossible stances and accept a win-win situation for all. Fairness is a right that all must have. Practicing fairness is strengthening the society as well as establishing democracy.

Dear ethnic brethrens,

Now is the transition period from an old system of an old era to a new system of a new era in accordance with the democracy practice. This is only the beginning of the democracy transition period and the democracy goal is not reached yet. For this transition to be smooth and successful it is required to change and reform the mindset and habits of the people and public servants. Actions are being taken against departmental organisations that are slow in this transition. We are strengthening the judiciary sector with the responsible persons. We are eradicating corruption with increasing momentum. Human rights violations were increasingly prevented. Actions against drugs were taken increasingly. Systematic and basic infrastructure are being put in place to prevent losses and wastage of public funds. Returning of confiscated lands, payment of compensations and reparations were made in accordance with the law.

In conducting the transition to democracy, officials and personnel are to follow the laws and rules while the public are to support by following the existing laws.

Those responsible for administrative sector are to strive toward establishing an administrative mechanism that ascertain a democracy system, administer fairly and in accordance to the law, establish an administrative system that protect the freedom and security of the people and ensure that the administrative system is not oppressive or a burden to the people.
Future infrastructure development

* Negotiations have been made in cooperation with the IFC of the World Bank Group for the development of the Yangon elevated road project in 2019, with a view to address the traffic issues in Yangon. Such development is being pursued with the expectation of not only addressing traffic issues but also to create job opportunities.

* During the next two and a half years, construction of over 10,000 rooms are planned, out of which over 4,000 rooms are to be constructed through different PPP models and over 6,000 rooms by private companies.

* Urban projects in 33 cities across the country have been implemented and planning for additional urban projects are being developed in cooperation with state and regional governments.

* Urban projects and industrial cities are being developed in some big cities like Yangon and Mandalay within three years for systematic development of urban housing.

The government will prioritise and obtain the force of the people in transforming the administrative mechanism to reach a status where there is rule of law, corruption is eradicated and trust of the people is obtained. The desired goal will be achieved only with an understanding that democracy transition is beneficial for all as well as their following generation’s physical and mental safety and when the government, officials from departmental organisations and the public part take and work together in a balanced way. All need to note that for our country to be peaceful, modern and developed, much will depend on how much we can change our set thoughts, believes and habits.

Public servants are urged to part take with full trust by putting the people at the forefront, respect and serve the people according to the democracy practice, to have a good and clean government in governing the people and the public servants are capable to change on their own.

In conclusion, the people are requested to maintain and preserve the long term existence of infrastructures including roads and bridges for which much funds were spent by the State for the development of region and for the country to have all round development. Create a society that is free of corruption, just and fair. Protect the natural environment from damage and deterioration.

Tagaung may be over 2000 years old: Expert

A PROMINENT traditional architect suggested a search for more evidences to prove Tagaung has existed since 2000 years ago.

The previous belief was that Tagaung may not be earlier than King Anawrahta who ruled Bagan in the 11th century. But the discovery of a 40-foot building with Pyu decorations dated back to the period between the 5th and 7th centuries in the southern corner of the zone has changed the historical value of Tagaung.

“The Department of Archaeology, National Museum and Library has officially announced the discovery. So, it is clear that Tagaung is much earlier than King Anawrahta, and even if Taung did not exist during the lifetime of Buddha as said in the legends, its existence might be as earlier as the 1st century or over 2000 years ago. We need financial assistance to do more research," said Tam-pawady U Win Maung, who is a traditional architect.

The geographical conditions show that human settlement first began in the norther part of the zone. — Min Htet Aung (Mandalay Sub-printing House) ■

Drill, a culture of preparedness

Myanmar is an earthquake-prone country due to its geographical location lying on major fault lines. If we do not ready ourselves to handle an earthquake, it may cause damage and casualties. We witnessed devastating earthquakes in the recent past, which led to loss of life, assets, livelihoods and heritage structures. The Myanmar Earthquake committee made studies of the interior of the Kalah fault in concert with international experts last year.

To monitor earthquakes and alleviate earthquake-related danger, the Kalah-Aye Earthquake Observation Center was set up in 1901, the Mandalay center in 1907, the Birma center in 1944 and the Dawei center in 1981. After a big earthquake, there can be dangerous tremors, fires, landslides and tsunamis. It is crucial to undertake quick and effective activities for relief and support during the disaster.

In Myanmar, drills are being conducted to make ourselves effective in a disaster, and accumulation energy is important for ensuring an immediate emergency response, which includes creating a precise and strong system. In order to have focus access to information and communication, we must step up our efforts and plan well and invest public resources wisely with reducing disaster risk as a goal and promote a culture of safety.

Unpresent time is regarded as digital age in which information has become a leading role and is quickly and widely disseminated and easily available through the use of information technology. Nowadays, people use mobile phones, radio and television for getting their information. Mass media acts as a bridge of understanding, as a means of transmitting to provide information with a speedy flow of communication to us in a split of seconds. Nevertheless, one of the major challenges is that the public should fully understand and be aware of the sources of media that conveys basic information. If they cannot be fully understood about it, there will be many consequences for all of us.

However, we are weak in checking the authenticity of news, we can fall prey to the hate-speech that stimulate our emotional distress.

Sometimes most of the people are not able to accurately distinguish fake real news and the spread of misinformation on the social media due to disbeliefs and ignorance. Similarly, we have to keep in mind that the news is not the main posts mainly due to lack of computer skill and IT knowledge and journalism. In the present day world, it is found that disinformation is one of the key modern threats and it is of great importance to the online users ensuring their aim to be effective use of social media and information. Disinformation is the interactive process of communicating knowledge to target audiences so that it may be used to lead to improve the accessibility of desired knowledge products by those they are intended to reach. The Global Media and Information Literacy Week, initiated in 2012 and were led by UNESCO, raises diverse actors committed to promoting media and information literacy (MIL) as a way to foster social inclusion and intercultural dialogue which takes place from the time of birth to age 24.

Eleven reported dead as gunman attacks US synagogue

PITTSBURGH (United States) A gunman opened fire on Jewish worshippers at a synagogue in the US city of Pittsburgh on Saturday, leaving 11 people dead according to US media, in what appeared to be one of the worst anti-Semitic attacks in American history.

The shooter — identified by media as a 46-year-old white man — reportedly yelled anti-Jewish slurs as he launched the attack at the Tree of Life synagogue during a baby naming ceremony.

The suspect was taken into police custody and transferred to hospital. Dozens of people were gathered during Sabbath services at the time of the attack, which federal investigators were treating as a hate crime.

President Donald Trump hit out at a climate of “hate” in America and beyond — while his daughter Ivanka, a convert to Judaism, denounced a “depraved” attack and Vice President Mike Pence called it “an assault on our freedom of religion.”

“There must be no tolerance for anti-Semitism,” the president told supporters at a campaign event for next month’s midterm elections. “This wicked act of mass murder is pure evil, hard to believe, and, frankly, something that is unimaginable.”

“Our nation and the world are shocked and stunned by the grief.”

As police cars, ambulances and a SWAT team surrounded the synagogue in the historically Jewish neighborhood of Squirrel Hill, Wendell Hissrich, Pittsburgh’s public safety director, confirmed “multiple fatalities” and at least six people injured including four police officers whose condition was not immediately clear.

The Washington Post and the local CBS affiliate said 11 people were dead.

“The scene is very bad inside,” Hissrich said. “It’s a very horrific crime scene, one of the worst that I’ve seen, I’ve been on plane crashes. It’s very bad.”

A woman on site told CNN her daughter was with others who ran down the stairs and barricaded themselves in the basement of the synagogue after hearing shots.

“They’re safe, but they kept hearing them firing and everything else,” she told the television network. Multiple US media identified the shooter as Pittsburgh resident Rob Bowers, whose online posts were reportedly rife with anti-Semitic comments. — AFP

The German killer nurse who took himself for God

BERLIN — The man accused of being post-war Germany’s most prolific serial killer was known to colleagues as a “nice guy” who did little to raise suspicion until well into his murder spree.

Prosecutors say Niels Hoegel, 41, a heavy-set, second-generation caregiver, was drunk on power over his ailing patients, whom he picked off at random out of “boredom”.

Hoegel has admitted to injecting patients with drugs that cause heart failure or circulatory collapse so he could then try to revive them and, when successful, shine as a saviour before his medical peers and superiors.

The dangerous game left more than 100 patients dead.

The trial beginning on Tuesday is Hoegel’s third since 2015 related to the deaths at clinics where he worked. He was found guilty in two earlier trials and sentenced to 15 years in prison, but investigators have pressed on with toxicology tests on dozens more exhumed bodies.

Hoegel has admitted to around another 30 murders and 60 attempts but investigators insist the toll is higher still. Hoegel has expressed no remorse.

‘Pretty normal’

Local daily Nordwest Zeitung plunged into a character study of the defendant whose crimes stunned the country.

Talking to his former teachers and classmates, “friendly”, “helpful” and “fun” were words that came up again and again to describe him.

“In no way someone from the fringes”, the paper quoted another person who had known him since adolescence as saying.

A teacher called him “a pretty normal student” who was more interested in football than in his classes. Born on 30 December, 1972 in the coastal town of Wilhelmshaven, Hoegel grew up in a Catholic family he described as “warm and stable”.

At 16, he began training at the main hospital in his hometown as a nurse, his father’s vocation. He failed to make a strong impression, but colleagues and superiors remember him as “nice” during the few years he spent at the clinic. — AFP

Helicopter crashes near UK football stadium: police

LONDON (United Kingdom) A helicopter on Saturday crashed near the football stadium in the central UK city of Leicester, police said.

Sky Sports broadcast pictures of what it said was the helicopter on fire, reporting it belonged to Leicester City Football Club’s Thai owner Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha.

The crash took place hours after Leicester drew 1-1 with West Ham in a Premier League match at the King Power Stadium.

Sky Sports said the helicopter took off from the pitch between 8.30pm-8.45pm local time (2130-2145 GMT) but developed problems shortly afterwards with its tail rotor and crashed in a nearby car park. Leicestershire Police tweeted: “We are dealing with an incident in the vicinity of the King Power Stadium. Emergency services are aware and acting. The ambulance service also tweeted: “We are also in attendance and will update when possible.”

Pittsburgh synagogue attack ‘blind anti-Semitic hatred’: Merkel

BERLIN (Germany) — German Chancellor Angela Merkel denounced the deadly shooting rampage at a synagogue in the US city of Pittsburgh on Saturday as “blind anti-Semitic hatred”.

“We all have to stand up against anti-Semitism, everywhere,” she said, in a brief statement posted on Twitter by a German government spokesman.

Eleven people were killed and six injured in the shooting, the city’s public safety director Wendell Hissrich said, an attack the FBI is investigating as a federal hate crime.

Merkel, who faces a resurgence of antisemitism in her own country, said her thoughts were with the victims’ families and expressed the hope that those injured would make a full recovery.

Japan PM Abe invites Modi to resort near Mt Fuji

YAMANAKAKO (Japan) — Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe invited his Indian counterpart Narendra Modi to a scenic resort by Mt Fuji on Sunday for a luncheon as a token of gratitude for accommodating him in the Indian leader’s home state during last year’s visit.

After sitting down for lunch in a hotel at the foot of the mountain, Abe and Modi, who is on a three-day visit through Monday, were scheduled to visit a factory of industrial robot manufacturer Fanuc Corp, in Yamanashi Prefecture, west of Tokyo, before moving on to the Japanese premier’s vacation home nearby. It is the first time that Abe has invited a foreign political leader to his holiday home in the village of Narusawa in the prefecture.

Since 2006, Japanese and Indian prime ministers have held summit talks almost annually. Abe and Modi have held bilateral talks 11 times to date.

In September last year, Abe paid a visit to Ahmedabad in Modi’s home state of Gujarat in western India and attended a ceremony to mark the beginning of construction of a new high-speed railway employing Japanese bullet train technology to link the city and Mumbai.

Modi’s latest visit to Japan began a day after Abe held talks with Chinese President Xi Jinping and Premier Li Keqiang. During the first official visit to Beijing by a Japanese political leader in nearly seven years, Abe and the Chinese leaders agreed on the principle of moving from “competition to cooperation” in a new era of relations between Asia’s two biggest economies.

Abe and Modi will hold a formal summit on Monday in Tokyo, during which strengthening bilateral security and economic cooperation is expected to be high on the agenda.

China is a strategic and economic rival of India. New Delhi has been apprehensive about Beijing’s “One Belt, One Road” initiative to build ports and other infrastructure around the Indian Ocean linking Asia with other parts of the world and its naval expansion in regional waters.

Abe and Modi will likely confirm their cooperation to realize a “free and open” Indo-Pacific, an Abe-led concept aimed at promoting peace, progress and prosperity throughout the Indo-Pacific region and beyond.” —Kyodo News

Senior N Korean diplomat arrives in Russia, maybe in prep for summit

MOSCOW — A North Korean delegation led by a deputy foreign minister on Saturday arrived in Russia to possibly prepare for a summit between the two countries.

Vice Foreign Minister Sin Hong Chol’s departure from Pyongyang comes as speculation grows that North Korean leader Kim Jong Un may make an official trip to Russia in the not-so-distant future.

According to the Russian Embassy in North Korea, talks between Sin and Igor Morgulov, deputy minister of foreign affairs, are slated to be held on Monday.

The delegation was seen off by Russia’s ambassador to North Korea, Alexander Matsegora, at Pyongyang’s airport.

Upon his arrival at Beijing’s international airport, Sin was tight-lipped when asked about the purpose of his trip to Russia.

Russian President Vladimir Putin has invited North Korean Vice Foreign Minister Sin Hong Chol to visit Russia.

Kim for a formal meeting, as denuclearization negotiations between North Korea and the United States have stalled. A diplomatic source in Beijing said Kim may visit Russia sometime in November.

Lion cub found in French garage

MARSEILLE — French customs agents have discovered a lion cub in a car garage in the southern city of Marseille, they said on Friday — days after another was found in the Paris suburbs. The tiny cub, weighing just a few kilos, was found on Wednesday inside a pet’s travel cage in a garage to the city’s north.

She is believed to be between one and two months old, Bruno Hamon, deputy chief of Marseille’s customs office, told AFP.

A garage employee, who was temporarily detained by customs agents, said only that he had taken the cub from a Marseille building after its former owners said they were overwhelmed by the situation. The animal was handed to the SPA animal protection charity who have passed her on to a specialist NGO which works to shelter wild animals, customs officials said in a statement.

The discovery came just a day after French police seized a six-week-old lion cub from an apartment in the Paris suburb of Valenton on Tuesday, arresting its owner, a 30-year-old man known to police.

The female cub was discovered in a child’s bed and was in good health.

A source close to the investigation said the cub was likely stolen and that the suspect appeared to have intended to resell her.

Police had been alerted to the cub by videos circulating on social media, in which a man offered her for sale for about 10,000 euros ($11,470).

There have been a string of such cases around France in recent years, including a half-starved cub rescued from an apartment in Noisy-le-Sec, east of Paris, last year.

A small abandoned cub was also found in a cage in a field outside the Dutch city of Utrecht earlier this month. —AFP

Aussie cops to the roo-scue as kangaroo caught in surf

SYDNEY (Australia) A kangaroo that hopped into the sea for a dip at a Melbourne beach had to be rescued by Australian police and brought back to life with CPR, officers said on Sunday.

Officers said they were called to Safety Beach in Melbourne on Saturday afternoon amid reports the native animal was struggling in the water.

When they arrived, the roo had already made its way back onto dry land and was on the sand covered with a blanket by a beachgoer.

But as they approached, it suddenly turned around and bounded back into the waves.

“IT began to swim but got into difficulty in the swell and breaking waves and went under water a couple of times,” Victoria Police said in a statement.

Two officers jumped into the water and managed to bring the marsupial, by now unconscious, back to a grassy area and resuscitate it using compressions. They did not use the “kiss of life” — mouth-to-mouth resuscitation — a Victoria Police spokeswoman told AFP.

The wild animal was then brought to a police station and after an assessment...
Japan’s home of Halloween looks to cultivate the creepiness

TOKYO—Halloween celebrations in Japan have become famous around the world for being a night of debauchery, with young people congregating in city hot spots and theme parks to snap selfies in outrageous outfits and ghoulish get-ups.

In recent years, a giant street party has drawn people dressed in uber-graphic costumes like sexy zombies, stabbing victims or as the eccentric animal skin-clad viral star Pikotaro to Shibuya's famous scramble crossing, making movement nearly impossible as thousands of revelers mingle in a heaving mass.

"From about four years ago, people started going out on the streets rather than enjoying Halloween events in clubs or bars," Shibuya Ward Mayor Ken Hasebe said at a recent press conference ahead of the annual celebration on 31 October. But where did all the wicked wackiness get started?

According to locals, the history of Halloween in Japan can be traced back to the 1970s, when a bookstore in the nearby pop-culture hub of Harajuku began selling Halloween paraphernalia and organizing costume parades for the first time. "How we absorbed Halloween culture reflects post-war history in Japan," a spokesperson for toy and bookstore operator KIDDY LAND Co, said.

In 1959, the store's predecessor—Hashidate Shoten—opened in Harajuku, where many facilities were built for US military personnel after World War II. To meet demand, the store started to sell foreign books and high-quality Japanese toys. Foreign customers who lived in the area began asking about how they could get their hands on Halloween items. "The staff at the time were asked by foreign customers why we don't carry Halloween stuff," she said. Staff members from the store traveled to the United States to learn about the Halloween tradition and later started hosting children's costume parades in front of the store around 1983.

The event, which saw about 100 participants at the start and attracted more and more people each year, spread from foreign customers to Japanese.—Kyodo News

Russia’s Yakutia kicks off two-week car tours to Arctic coast

YAKUTSK—Visit Yakutia, an East Siberian tour company, has launched two-week car tours on Arctic winter roads from Yakutsk to Tiksi, Russia’s fourth northernmost township, to the Laptev Sea coast, its director Bolot Bochkarev said on Tuesday.

"The Yakutsk-Tiksi expedition that we are organizing for the first time this year will cross four Yakutian districts,” Bochkarev stated.

"I think tourists will be really interested in visiting the sites of former Soviet forced labor camps (GULAG),” he added. The expedition participants will also meet with deer breeders, take a ride on the azure ice of the Adycha River, go ice fishing on Lake Emanda.

Director Mike Leigh eyes present day woes in new historical drama ‘Peterloo’

LONDON (United Kingdom)—British director Mike Leigh first turned his hand to historical drama with “Mr Turner” in 2014.

Now, the 75-year-old Leigh—feted for films such as “Secrets & Lies”, “Vera Drake” and “Abigail’s Party”—is returning to the 19th century with a retelling of Britain’s Peterloo massacre.

Leigh believes his latest film holds lessons for the present day—in everything from austerity and apathy to authoritarianism and Brexit. The Oscar-nominated film-maker said “Peterloo”, depicting the deadly and tumultuous 1819 assault on pro-democracy protesters at St Peter’s Field in the northern city of Manchester, remains relevant in our “worrying times”.

“Given the speed with which chaos has been ensuing not only in the UK... in this period... it does resonate,” Leigh told AFP on Friday ahead of the movie’s release in Britain next month.

“People were protesting about the vote but also about their living conditions, and we know that’s got parallels (with today),” he added.

Nonetheless Leigh is eager for audiences to make their own minds up on the lessons to be learned from “Peterloo”.

“I’ve never made films that say ‘think this’, what I’m doing is inviting you to reflect” he said. “The audience can only decode and deal with the film in terms of your 21st century life — there’s no other currency you can convert it into.”

The social movement centered movie, set for release outside Britain next year, hits screens as the #MeToo campaign continues to flourish — something Leigh is celebrating. “It’s astonishing that these things are only just being confronted now,” he said. “It’s outrageous and it’s great that finally people... get in there....”

The film-maker added that his 19th century time travellers might also recognise aspects of their political world in today’s Brexit-dominated landscape.

“It’s a rambling, shambling mess, and to some degree... the situation 200 years ago was also a rambling shambling mess,” Leigh said. He sees particular peril for the film industry in Britain’s departure from the European Union next March—from no access to grants to fewer continental collaborations.

“European cinema has an identity which I am very passionate about being part of,” he said. “It will become very difficult.”

The veteran director, who recently became a grandfather for the first time, is also concerned by a host of other global issues, from the treatment of migrants to overpopulation.

The 75-year-old said that landmark, paired with making a drama set 200 years ago, had forced him to take a long view.—AFP
New drugs, test offer TB hope for millions

THE HAGUE (Netherlands)—Thousands of scientists, activists and disease survivors on Saturday wrap up a global conference on lung health dominated by the announcement of several breakthroughs in the battle against tuberculosis. The following is a round-up of developments in how doctors and aid workers are tackling the world’s deadliest infectious disease.

Miracle drug

Some strains of TB—a severe lung infection that can spread to the brain—are resistant to antibiotics and have been historically extremely difficult, and painful, to treat.

Several countries including South Africa, which has among the highest tuberculosis burden in the world, announced that a new drug had shown astonishing success against multidrug-resistant TB. Bedaquiline, which in countries such as Belarus cured 80 per cent of patients, was hailed by experts as a “game changer”, and can replace months of excruciating and often ineffective injections for sufferers.

First vaccine in 100 years

In terms of prevention, major headway has been made on a new vaccine against TB, the first in almost a century. GlaxoSmithKline showed in a trial in three African nations that its vaccine had a 54 per cent effectiveness in subjects who already have TB but are yet to become sick with it. “Such a level of efficacy could really provide an impact on global health,” Marie-Ange Demotie, who leads the vaccine development for GSK, told AFP.

New test for children

In a last minute announcement, scientists at the conference unveiled a revolutionary new way of screening children for tuberculosis.

They say the new technique, which involves analysing stool samples of infants, will prevent hundreds of thousands each year from contracting the disease.

The only current way of checking a child for TB involves a painful procedure and usually a stay overnight in hospital, rendering it out of reach for many in rural areas.

650 children with TB die every day, the vast majority of which never get treatment.

Targeted treatment

An innovative approach to getting to at-risk children showed remarkable success in four African countries.

Israel scientists develop method to produce fuel from olive waste

JERUSALEM—Israeli researchers have discovered a method to turn the waste generated by olive oil production into fuel used by vehicles, the news website Ynet published on Friday.

During the olive oil production process, every 1,000 kg of olives squeezed in the olive press, only 200 kg of olive oil are produced. The rest becomes solid waste. About 6 million tons of olive waste are produced every year worldwide, of which about 30,000 tons are in Israel.

The new study, led by the University of Haifa in northern Israel and financed by the state’s Ministry of Environmental Protection, shows a technique that will enable the transformation of solid waste into ethanol.

Several kinds of engines are fueled with ethanol. Even a regular gasoline engine can operate normally with up to 10 per cent ethanol.

One of the advantages of using biofuels, such as bioethanol, is to reduce the dependence on fossil fuels such as coal, oil and natural gas, whose reserves are decreasing, use of which generates extensive emissions of greenhouse gas such as carbon dioxide.

Early fish evolve in shallow seashores before spreading to ocean

WASHINGTON—British and American scientists identified that the evolution of the major groups of fish that we recognize today actually took place in shallow waters, close to the seashore, which completed a missing link in our evolutionary story.

The study published on Thursday in the journal Science revealed where those first vertebrates on Earth that appeared around 480 million years ago were hiding since the fish fossils were rarely discovered until 420 million years ago.

“Instead, our work shows that almost every major vertebrate division, from the earliest armored jawless fish all the way up through sharks and our own ancestors, all started out right near the beach, far inshore of the reef,” said Sallan.

The wave action of the shallow ocean area is more likely to blast fossils into tiny fragments, so few early fish fossils have ever been found intact, according to the study.
Thai football clubs eye striker Aung Thu

THAI professional football clubs are eyeing striker Aung Thu who is playing for Yadanarbon of Myanmar and Police Tero of Thailand Utd FC of Myanmar and is possible for Aung Thu to move to other Thai clubs.

Klopp hails Liverpool’s ‘20-point win’ over Cardiff

LIVERPOOL (United Kingdom) — Jurgen Klopp, manager of Liverpool, claimed victory felt like it was worth “20 points” as a 4-1 win over Cardiff City at Anfield on Saturday moved his Liverpool side back to the top of the Premier League, for 48 hours at least.

The Liverpool manager insisted holding first place this early in the season mattered little but, with only two points separating the top five heading into this weekend’s games, he did not underestimate the importance of this latest win.

“The difference between 23 and 26 feels like 20 points, but it is only three. It is really important to keep on track. “It is unbelievable that five clubs have such a big number of points. It makes it more intense, good for the people and the supporters of the clubs. For us it is just the next step.”

Liverpool dominated the first half but had only managed a goal from Mohamed Salah — his fourth in three games — by the interval.

Sadio Mane doubled the lead after 65 minutes, four minutes after Klopp had felt it necessary to bring on playmaker Xherdan Shaqiri. But Callum Paterson pulled a goal back for Cardiff in the 77th minute. That marked the first league goal Liverpool had conceded at Anfield in 918 minutes, a run dating back to a 4-1 win over West Ham in mid-February.

Liverpool ‘more chance’ in Champions League

But six minutes from time, Shaqiri finished clinically from a dozen yards and, two minutes later, Mane completed the scoring, lifting the ball over goalkeeper Neil Etheridge after a one-two with Salah.

“He played four games nearly 90 minutes in a row now — both international games for Switzerland, then Huddersfield and Belgrade for us,” said Klopp, explaining why Shaqiri started on the bench.

“We don’t know how he reacts. Sometimes you have to protect players until you know them a bit better.”

Cardiff have now faced — and lost against — all five of the division’s leading teams, leaving manager Neil Warnock to make an interesting title prediction.

“I think Liverpool have got more of a chance in the Champions League, if I’m honest, or the Cups,” he said.

“I just think Man City have got that little bit more, week in, week out, in the league. But I think Liverpool are the most improved team with the signings he (Klopp) has made and heaven knows what happens if he makes one or two for next season.”

They (Liverpool) are back in the real big time here. But it was eerie at 2-1 because it was so quiet around the place. If we had hung on for another five minutes it would have been interesting but they were just too good for us.” — AFP

Myanmar to host second round qualification of 2019 AFC U-16 Women’s Championship

MYANMAR is going to host second round qualification of 2019 AFC U-16 Women’s Championship, said a source of Myanmar Football Federation (MFF).

Asian Football Confederation (AFC) will hold second round qualification of AFC U-16 Women’s Championship from 23 February to 3 March in 2019. The MFF asked for permission from the AFC to allow Myanmar to host the group of second round qualification in which Myanmar includes. The AFC allowed Myanmar to host the group of second round qualification.

In the first qualification round, Myanmar, Australia, China, Iran, Bangladesh, Viet Nam, Philippines and Laos qualified for the second round.

The second round qualification will be divided into two groups of four teams. Top teams from two groups will enter to join the final tournament of AFC U-16 Women’s Championship to be held in Thailand. —Htut Htut (Twantay)
