State Counsellor calls on businesses to invest in Myanmar, pledges to bring good returns

STATE Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, who is currently in Singapore, delivered a keynote speech at the ASEAN Business and Investment Summit-2018 in Singapore yesterday evening. It was attended by members of the ASEAN Business Advisory Council-ABAC, economists, businessmen and guests.

In her speech, she invited foreign investors to invest in the country’s priority sectors including agriculture and its related services, value-added production of agricultural products, livestock production, breeding and production of fishery products, export promotion industries, import substitution industries, power sector, logistic industries, education services, health care industry, construction of affordable housing and establishment of industrial estates.

This is the second time I have taken part in this event, which provides an excellent platform for the promotion of business and investment in Myanmar and ASEAN at large. The theme of my speech will be simply, “Business and Investment in Myanmar and ASEAN”. I would like to start with some background information on Myanmar’s Economy. The 12-point National Economic Policy of the Myanmar Government aims at fostering sustainable development in our country, development that is inclusive and people-centered. Our investment policy supports the implementation of our National Economic Policy and national economic development.

Reform measures have been undertaken to create a more attractive, investor-friendly environment in Myanmar. As you are perhaps aware, The new Myanmar Investment Law was promulgated by the Union Legislature on 18th October 2016 to create a better environment for investment and to bring our economy in line with international and regional agreements, with the technical assistance of the International Finance Corporation (IFC). The new law aims at creating a fair and more level playing field for both foreign and domestic investors.

The new Myanmar Investment Law contains a number of important provisions that will encourage responsible business, support investors to do business with ease, through transparent, simplified and quick procedures. A permit from the Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) will not be required for every investment project; it is guaranteed that investments will not be expropriated directly or indirectly; income tax exemptions will be granted according to zones and promoted areas; the development gap between the States and Regions will be reduced through power delegation and the establishment of a grievance system.

Subsequent rules were prescribed on 30 March 2017 and the law came into effect on 1 April 2017.

Tenth session of Second Pyidaungsu Hluttaw begins

THE Second Pyidaungsu Hluttaw began the first day of its tenth regular session at the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Hall in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday afternoon, at which time the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker addresses the Hluttaw.

In his address to the Hluttaw, Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker U T Khun Myat first spoke of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw welcoming the five Pyithu Hluttaw and Amyotha Hluttaw representatives who were elected in the recent by-election. He then noted how Hluttaw representatives had returned to their respective constituencies while the Hluttaw was in recess and had learned about the situation among their constituents. Hluttaw representatives were also urged to conduct reforms while performing their duties, and work to achieve a permanent peace and to strengthen democracy.

During the tenth regular session, the remaining draft laws are to be approved and enacted, while each Hluttaw conducts its duties. Recently, not only this tenth regular session, but the schedules for each Hluttaw’s regular sessions in 2019 were published in a notification. It is expected that through this publication there will be more progress and successes in the work. However, due to the work requirements of each Hluttaw, there can be changes in dates and durations, while emergency and special meetings can also be convened by following the laws and rules.

Instructions were made to submit proposals, at the latest on 31 December 2018, to use Pyidaungsu Hluttaw development funds and, to date, 31 townships had submitted proposals, out of which permission was granted to 8 townships. The remaining townships have been notified to submit their proposals on time, said the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker.

2nd Pyithu Hluttaw’s tenth regular session resumes

THE second Pyithu Hluttaw’s tenth regular session started at the Pyithu Hluttaw meeting hall in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday morning. Swearing-in of new Hluttaw representatives

Eight new Tatmadaw Hluttaw representatives and four newly elected Hluttaw representatives were sworn in before the Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker, U T Khun Myat, and signed the swearing-in documents.

Welcoming speech and briefing by Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker

Speaker U T Khun Myat welcomed the new Hluttaw representatives elected in the by-election. He then informed the Hluttaw that 23 bills and ten motions will be debated in the current session, and 120 asterisk-marked questions will be raised. The questions include 119 asterisk-marked questions that were transferred to the tenth session from the ninth session.

“Our legislative pillar, the Hluttaw, has flourished and thrived to reach the tenth session of the second Hluttaw. As a strong and firm legislative pillar, we have to enact laws that are in accord with the time and era. Representatives also need to change their minds and functioning. At the moment, when a democratic system is being formed, all must strive towards achieving the democratic norms that ought to be achieved. Words and actions that create and cause misunderstandings and division should be carefully avoided when raising questions and conducting debates. There will be differences in policies and views among parties, but all are urged to debate and make decisions for national benefit,” the Speaker said.

“We all were elected by the people to perform legislative duties. Now is the time to enact laws for the people that stand up to democratic norms, and enable the transition towards democracy. It can be seen that the administrative pillar is carrying out national reforms in tune with a democratic system. Internal peace is the main challenge towards establishing a democratic federal union.”

The new Companies Law to provide greater flexibility for operating businesses

Reforms have been undertaken in every sector throughout Myanmar. Some are highly visible, some are less obvious. Reforms that seek to strengthen macroeconomic management are absolutely essential for economic stability which, in turn, is a strong magnet for attracting increased investment. Such reforms are not naturally visible to most people, but their impact is substantial and longlasting.

An important recent reform which can be considered “revolutionary” is the modernization of the more than one hundred years old Companies Act to reflect the current business and regulatory environment. The Myanmar Companies Law was enacted on 6 December 2017. It came into effect on 1st August 2018 with the implementation of the electronic registry. As a result of the electronic registry, companies can be registered in Myanmar within a few hours by using the MyCO (Myanmar Companies Online) system. The new Companies Law has transformed Myanmar’s corporate landscape and will make it easier for businesses to be registered as companies. It will provide greater flexibility for companies in their conduct of business and the management of their internal affairs, while at the same time ensuring certainty and stability in corporate regulation.

It will also do much to improve the “starting business ranking” which is a main indicator of the “doing business ranking” of Myanmar. Up to now, as of September 2018, over 14,000 companies are reregistered in our online platform and over 4,000 companies are newly incorporated.

Simple, clear and predictable Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs)

The Myanmar Investment Commission has been re-organized with a new management team led by Union Minister U Thaung Tun. The new MIC team is now reviewing all processes not only within the MIC itself but also within other government agencies with a view to streamlining and then establishing simple, clear and predictable Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs).

We anticipate that this exercise will contribute to the development of a single window system for use by all investors and businesses who may or may not be registered under the MIC. Such a single window system will go a long way toward addressing impediments faced by investors while at the same time, allow us to provide them with not only pre-investment, but also post-investment services.

The main purpose of this procedural streamlining, SOP development and single window system creation is to advance not only a favorable but also a predictable, facilitative and friendly investment environment.

Another success story which highlights the type of positive partnership that can be achieved between our respective public and private sectors is the Thilawa SEZ. I am happy to be able to claim that the Thilawa SEZ has become a crowning success in a very short period of time, receiving a total investment of USD 1.491 billion, a figure that reflects the dollar value of those investments actually entering the economy. Investors from countries such as Japan, the United States, Germany, France, Sweden, Australia, China, India, Singapore, Thailand and Taiwan have invested in the Thilawa SEZ, and there are many more eager to invest in Thilawa SEZ Zone B.

Myanmar’s markets is now in full swing.

Myanmar’s re-emergence comes at a time when the world is facing rising protectionist sentiments, a shift away from multilateralism in favour of bilateralism, and in some cases, even isolationism, and amidst currency and trade tensions between some countries.

Unlike ten years ago, today, Myanmar is exposed to these global macroeconomic shifts in ways never before experienced. Luckily, despite global challenges, the growth outlook for developing Asia in 2018 was recently upgraded to 6 percent, or 0.1 percentage points higher than the rate envisaged in September 2017 by the Asian Development Bank. As part of this developing Asia, Myanmar’s economic trajectory is therefore truly promising.

The opening of Myanmar’s markets is now in full swing. As what has been referred to as Southeast Asia’s final frontier market, Myanmar provides innumerable investment opportunities. Some are plain to see, others are waiting to be found by those with foresight and imagination.

I would like to turn now towards ASEAN business and investments. We, ASEAN Member States are holding together and marching forward to reach our goal with one vision and one identity as one community. For Myanmar, ASEAN plays an important role for economic cooperation. As of September 2018, investments from ASEAN account for about 45 % (US$ 35,507.349 million) of total investments in Myanmar, demonstrating the strong economic ties between our country and other ASEAN Member States.

NRPC holds workshop on capacity building for staff

THE National Reconciliation and Peace Centre (NRPC) organized a workshop on capacity building for its staff in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday. The workshop included sessions on Myanmar’s peace process, providing support to enhance awareness of the peace process, federalism, and peace support structures.

“The workshop aims to provide a comparative lens by discussing peace processes in other parts of the world. In terms of the support work done by the NRPC staff, sessions on diplomacy and protocol, communication, funding for peace, and essentials of presenting minutes and writing executive summaries have been arranged. We have also included a session on understanding the important role of women in Myanmar’s peace process,” said Deputy Minister for the Office of the State Counsellor, U Khin Maung Tin.

“We are confident that this workshop will furnish the necessary tools, skills, and building blocks for career advancement and capacity development. We would like to encourage staff to take ownership of their work and strive for personal excellence. We hope that this workshop will encourage behavioral change, and interest towards strengthening the administrative mechanisms of the government,” said the deputy minister.

The 11-member NRPC was established in July 2016, soon after the current Government took over and is chaired by State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. The Union Government is currently implementing the peace process to reach a political agreement to sign the Union Accord, and to implement steps for establishing a Union based on democracy and federalism.

“Establishing a federal Union and achieving the democratic standards anticipated by the government will take time and can only be done step by step,” said Deputy Minister U Khin Maung Tin. “We are steadfast in achieving the ultimate goal of a democratic federal Union, regardless of the challenges it presents.”

We are grateful for the understanding, trust, and support shown by some countries who appreciate the complexities of the peace process and continue to support us: U Khin Maung Tin

Till now, 51 political agreements have been entered into. The Government has reiterated its commitment to establish a Union based on democracy and federalism, which has been requested continuously by ethnic groups. In his speech, the deputy minister also expressed thanks to the EU for its contribution to and financial support for the NRPC’s aims and goals.

“Implementation of peace is a long-term process as the government, ethnic armed groups, and political groups seek consensus towards drafting a Union Accord. The NRPC will need continuous assistance and cooperation from friendly countries like the EU, both in financial and technical aspects. We are grateful for the understanding, trust, and support shown by some countries who appreciate the complexities of the peace process and continue to support us,” said U Khin Maung Tin.

The EU’s Ambassador to Myanmar, Mr. Kristian Schmidt, also made opening remarks at the session. During the first session of the workshop, Professor Dr. Aung Tun Thet, U Zaw Htay and U Moe Zaw Oo gave talks on the peace process in Myanmar; Dr. Ngn Kyn Lyn spoke on federal systems, U Hla Maung Shwe and U Aung Naing Oo spoke on supporting peace, and Dr. Min Zaw Oo gave a talk on international conflicts.

In further sessions, Deputy Minister for Information U Aung Hla Tun and U Kyaw Myaing of UEHRD will give talks on communication and relations, Dr. San San Aye and Daw Nan Raw will speak on the role of women in the peace process, U Maung Wai and Daw Kaythi Soe will talk about external relations and diplomacy, Daw Su Mon Nyain and Ram Sian Thang will speak about the peace fund, and Daw Moe Thuzar and Daw Khading Myat Chit will give talks on meeting records.—MNA

Muse-Ruili on priority as work on Sino-Myanmar border trade zone begins

By May Thet Hnin

THE development of the economic cooperation zone along the Myanmar-China border has begun, with work on the Muse-Ruili section being given priority, said U Aung Htoo, the Deputy Minister for Commerce. He is also the secretary of the central committee set up to implement the Myanmar-China border economic cooperation zone.

“A series of discussions on the border economic cooperation zone have been conducted. Work will start first on the Muse and Ruili section. China has erected fences around the Kyegaung checkpoint. We will also install fencing around the New Start Light Company in Muse area,” he said.

Government officials from the two countries will hold discussions on the border economic cooperation zone at a trade expo being organized next month on the Sino-Myanmar border, he said. Business-to-business (B-to-B) discussions will also be conducted at the expo, he added.

As part of the plan, trade zones will be set up in Kankinpei in Kachin State, Muse in Shan State, and Chinshwehaw in the Kokang Self-Administered Zone.

“The border trade zone will be set up on the lines of the Thilawa Special Economic Zone implemented by the two governments, which saw participation from entrepreneurs. Invitations for Expression of Interest (EOI) will be soon issued and a feasibility study will be undertaken for the zone,” said U Aung Htoo.

Myanmar and China agreed to establish the economic cooperation zone in the border areas during the State Counsellor’s visit to China in August 2016. The two governments signed a Memorandum of Understanding for setting up the zone in May 2017.

“The trade zone is expected to promote domestic and foreign investments, create business opportunities and jobs, help small and medium enterprises to grow, develop manufacturing power, and improve bilateral trade.

China is working to create the world’s largest economic platform with its One Belt, One Road initiative (the Silk Road Economic Belt and the 21st-century Maritime Silk Road). The new economic cooperation trade zone plan is a part of OBOR, and is included in plans to establish a Myanmar-China economic corridor.

At present, tight controls by China on importation of rice, sugar and corn through the main checkpoint in Muse has halted most trade, with only onions, green gram, and watermelons being traded.

In the last mini-budget period from April to September, Sino-Myanmar trade at the Muse, the Lwejei, the Chinshwehaw, the Kankanpei, and the Kengtung gates was valued at over US$3.3 billion, with exports pegged at $2.42 billion and imports valued at $876 million. The trade value plunged remarkably in the first month of the current fiscal year 2018-2019, owing to the current state of tight controls by China. —MNA

Import surpasses export in bilateral trade with Singapore

BILATERAL trade between Myanmar and Singapore touched US$1.99 billion in the last mini-budget period (from April to September), with the country’s imports exceeding exports, according to statistics released by the Ministry of Commerce.

Singapore is Myanmar’s second largest trading partner in the region, after Thailand. During the last mini-budget period, Myanmar’s exports to Singapore were pegged at just $190.4 million, while imports touched $1.18 billion.

Myanmar exports agricultural products, footwear, textile and clothing, minerals and animal products to Singapore, and imports plastic, fuel oil, capital goods, intermediate goods, consumer products, metals and chemicals.

Myanmar’s bilateral trade with Singapore was pegged at $3.83 billion in the 2017-2018 fiscal year; $2.96 billion in 2016-2017 FY; $4.89 billion in 2014-2015 FY; $3.6 billion in 2013-2014 FY; $2.82 billion in 2012-2013 FY; $3.86 billion in 2011-2012 FY.

Ten Singapore-listed enterprises brought in a capital of over $724 million in the last interim period prior to fiscal year 2018-2019, making the country top on the investment line-up, according to data released by the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

Singapore also tops the list of countries with the largest FDI inflows in the Thilawa Special Economic Zone, with investments of $586 million so far, followed by Japan and Thailand, respectively. —GNLM

Public Transportation means......

By Dr. Minthaw Aung

Public transportation is a vital means of getting around a city. It helps to reduce traffic congestion, improve air quality, and save time and money for commuters. In Yangon, the main public transportation system is the Yangon Public Transportation (YBS) system, which consists of buses and taxis. The YBS system is operated by the Yangon City Development Department (YCDD) under the Ministry of Transport and Communications.

The YBS system serves over 100 routes throughout the city, connecting the major areas of Yangon. The system is divided into four zones, each with its own set of routes and services. The routes are color-coded to make it easy for passengers to identify the correct bus or taxi for their destination.

The YBS system is also known for its efficient and reliable services. The buses and taxis are regularly scheduled, and the system is operated 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The buses are equipped with air conditioning, and some buses have wheelchair access. The taxis are available for hire, and drivers are trained to assist passengers with their needs.

Overall, the YBS system is an important part of Yangon's transportation network. It helps to reduce traffic congestion and improve the quality of life for residents and visitors alike. The YBS system continues to evolve and improve, with plans for expansion and modernization in the coming years.
OJT Program on Irrigation Asset Management, GIS begins

AN On-the-Job Training (OJT) program on Irrigation Asset Management and GIS is being conducted at the Irrigation Technology Center (ITC) Bago Township, from 12 to 17 November.

The OJT is being jointly conducted by the Irrigation and Water Utilization Management Department and Japan’s Agricultural Development Consultants Association (ADCA), under a technical exchange program.

At the start of the program, the Director of the ITC, Bago, Daw Aye Aye Hlaing delivered the opening speech, while Japan ADCA’s Director-General, Mr. Shozo Ohira explained the objective of the training.

As part of the program, Japanese experts will conduct surveys using the GPS system and maintain records of the surveys with the use of the GIS system for maintenance of irrigation systems and water facilities. The training course will include practical sessions at the Bawni irrigation system in Daik-U Township.

The six-day training course has 20 participants from the Irrigation and Water Utilization Management Department.—Tin Soe (Bago) (Translated by Hay Mar)

Apartments from Mya Yee Nanda affordable housing complex to be sold in 2019

THE Mandalay City Development Committee (MCDC) plans to sell nearly 2,000 apartments at the Mya Yee Nanda affordable housing complex to government staff and retired service personnel in the Mandalay Region in 2019, said U Kyaw Hsan Myint, a member of the MCDC.

A total of 312 apartments from the housing complex being constructed in the Channmyathazi Township will be completed in December. There are plans to construct an additional 1,512 apartments in September 2019. The MCDC had sold 672 apartments in the housing complex in August. But, 113 apartment buyers have not paid their deposit yet. Therefore, the MCDC will sell a total of 1,937 apartments, including the 113 apartments for which deposits have not yet been paid, he said.

“The MCDC is making arrangements to sell these apartments to those who will really stay there. Moreover, the MCDC will also upgrade the roads and erect electric lamp posts, for regional development,” he added.

The MCDC has upgraded the roads and drainage systems, installed the water supply system, set up power lines, and planted trees in the Mya Yee Nanda affordable housing compound. The MCDC has printed the documents for owner and plans to hand over apartment to owners in November, said U Kyaw Hsan Myint.

The MCDC will inspect the apartments to check whether the owners are living in those apartment or not, over a five-year period. If the MCDC finds any apartments that have been resold, they will take them back according to regulations.—Min Htet Aung (Mandalay sub-printing house) (Translated by Hay Mar)

Two suspects arrested for robbing fuel company in Ahlon Tsp

A GROUP of masked people entered a company in Ahlon Township in Yangon yesterday evening and forcefully took away the company’s manager in his vehicle. Police managed to arrest two members of the group within a few hours and are taking investigations into the case to apprehend all suspects.

At around 6.50pm yesterday, a group of masked people in a white light truck arrived at an engine oil distribution company on Min Ye Kyaw Swar street in Ahlon Township. The group was armed with sticks and knives, according to the police source.

They tied up two company employees and ransacked the building, removing CCTV cameras in the process.

The suspects then took U Myint Sein, the manager, with them and in his own Landcruiser.

The Myanmar Police Force immediately responded after receiving information of the incident. Police set up blockades and conducted patrols in each township.

Police managed to arrest Thura and Soe Kyaw Kyaw Lwint, two of the suspects who live in Dagon East Tsp, within a few hours.

U Myint Sein was discovered in his Landcruiser in front of Novotel Hotel on Pyay Road around 7:30pm.

Abe to visit Singapore, Australia, PNG to attend regional summits

TOKYO — Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said on Monday he will make a five-day Southeast Asian and Oceanian trip to attend annual regional summits later this week.

Abe said he will take part in annual meetings of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in Singapore and a summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum in Papua New Guinea during his trip from Wednesday.

“As a flagbearer of free trade, I am planning to lead discussions to promote free trade and economic growth in the Asia-Pacific region,” the prime minister said in a meeting attended by senior officials of the government and ruling parties.

In Singapore, Abe is expected to hold talks with Russian President Vladimir Putin, in which a decades-old territorial row between the two countries over a group of islands is expected to be high on the agenda, Russian media reported.

The group of islands off Hokkaido is called the Northern Territories in Japan and the Southern Kurils in Russia. The Soviet Union occupied the islands at the end of World War II and the territorial dispute has prevented the two countries from concluding a postwar peace treaty.

Before flying to Papua New Guinea from Singapore, Abe is scheduled to stop over in Australia to hold his first meeting with Prime Minister Scott Morrison, who took office in August.

Call for open markets as world leaders gather in Singapore

SINGAPORE — Singapore’s prime minister made an impassioned plea on Monday for open markets and warned “political pressures” were driving countries apart, in a swipe at rising protectionism at the start of a gathering of world leaders.

Leaders including Chinese Premier Li Keqiang and US Vice President Mike Pence are meeting this week in the city-state against the backdrop of a months-long trade dispute between Beijing and Washington.

Some of those attending are expected to announce major progress on a massive China-backed trade deal that excludes the US, in a rebuke to President Donald Trump’s increasingly unilateralist approach to international commerce.

Trump is skipping the annual summit — which was regularly attended by his predecessor Barack Obama — in a sign of how far he has withdrawn from attempts to shape the global rules of trade and raising new questions about Washington’s commitment to Asia.

Addressing a business forum ahead of this week’s main meetings, Singapore Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong called for Southeast Asian companies to invest more in others’ markets and be more open to foreign competition.

“The more integrated and open our markets are, and the more conducive our rules and business environments to foreign investment, the larger the pie will grow, and the more we will all benefit,” he said.

The 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) “has great potential, but fully realising it depends on whether we choose to become more integrated, and work resolutely towards this goal in a world where multilateralism is fraying under political pressures”.

The US-China trade dispute has seen Trump slap higher tariffs on roughly half of Chinese imports, and Beijing retaliate with its own levies.

The standoff is having an impact far beyond the world’s top two economies, and leaders at the four days of meetings will be keen to voice their grievances to Pence, who is participating in Trump’s place, and Li.

Many of those attending are expected to send a message in support of free trade by announcing major progress on the China-backed deal, the 16-member Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP).

With the US having pulled out of rival pact the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP), the RCEP is now the world’s biggest trade deal.

The pact — which is less ambitious than the TPP in areas such as employment and environmental protection — groups the 10 ASEAN members plus China, India, Japan, South Korea, Australia and New Zealand.

North and South Korea begin destroying border guard posts

SEUL (South Korea) — The two Koreas began destroying 20 guard posts along their heavily-fortified border on Sunday under a plan to reduce tensions on the border.

Under an agreement made between their generals in late October, North and South Korea agreed to remove 10 posts and preserve one on either side of the frontier.

The militaries on Sunday began destroying the 20 border guard posts in the Demilitarized Zone dividing the two Koreas after withdrawing troops and equipment from them, Yonhap news agency reported, citing Seoul’s defence ministry.

The standoff is having an impact far beyond the world’s top two economies, and leaders at the four days of meetings will be keen to voice their grievances to Pence, who is participating in Trump’s place, and Li.

Under dovish South Korean President Moon Jae-in, Seoul has pursued a policy of engagement with its isolated, nuclear-armed neighbour, in contrast with the US which insists pressure should be maintained on Pyongyang until it denuclearises.

Moon and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un agreed on a broad plan to ease tensions along the border during their third summit in Pyongyang in September.

The two nations technically remain at war after the 1950-53 Korean War that sealed the division of the peninsula and ended with a ceasefire instead of a peace treaty.

But ties improved markedly this year as Moon and Kim took a series of reconciliatory gestures.

Kim and US President Donald Trump also held a historic summit in June in Singapore and signed a vaguely worded deal on denuclearisation, but little progress has been made since then, with the two countries sparring over the exact meaning of the agreement. Planned talks between US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo and one of Kim’s right-hand men, Kim Yong Chol, were also delayed this week. —AFP

Ten ways climate change can make wildfires worse

PARIS (France) — Deadly wildfires such as those raging in northern and southern California have become more common across the state and elsewhere in the world in recent years. AFP talked to scientists about the ways in which climate change can make them worse.

Other factors have also fuelled an increase in the frequency and intensity of major fires, including human encroachment on wooded areas, and questionable forest management. “The patient was already sick,” in the words of David Bowman, a professor of environmental change biology at the University of Tasmania and a wildlife expert. “But climate change is the accelerator.”

Fine weather for a fire

Any firefighter can tell you the recipe for “conducive fire weather”: hot, dry and windy.

No surprise, then, that many of the tropical and temperate regions devastated by a surge in forest fires are those predicted in climate models to see higher temperatures and more droughts.

“Besides bringing more dry and hot air, climate change — by elevating evaporation rates and drought prevalence — also creates more flammable ecosystems,” noted Christopher Williams, director of environmental science at Clark University in Massachusetts. In the last 20 years, California and southern Europe have seen several droughts of a magnitude that used to occur only once a century.

More fuel

Dry weather means more dead trees, shrubs and grass — and more fuel for the fire.

“All those extremely dry years create an enormous amount of desiccated biomass,” said Michel Vennetier, an engineer at France’s National Research of Science and Technology for Environment and Agriculture (IRSTEA). “That’s an ideal combustible.”

Change of scenery

To make matters worse, new species better adapted to semi-arid conditions grow in their place. “Plants that like humidity have disappeared, replaced by more flammable plants that can withstand dry conditions, like rosemary, wild lavender and thyme,” said Vennetier. “The change happens quite quickly.”

Thirsty plants

With rising temperatures and less rain, water-stressed trees and shrubs shed roots deeper into the soil, sucking up every drop of water they can to nourish leaves and needles. That means the moisture in the earth that might have helped to slow a fire sweeping through a forest or garrigue is no longer there.

Longer season

In the northern hemisphere’s temperate zone, the fire season was historically short — July and August, in most places.

“Today, the period susceptible to wildfires has extended from June to October,” said IRSTEa scientist Thomas Curt, referring to the Mediterranean basin.

In California, which only recently emerged from a five-year drought, some experts say there’s no longer a season at all — fires can happen year-round.

More lightning

“The warmer it gets, the more lightning you have,” said Mike Flannigan, a professor at the University of Alberta, Canada and director of the Western Partnership for Wildland Fire Science. “Especially in the northern areas, that translates into more fires.”

At the same time, he noted that 95 per cent of wildfires worldwide are started by humans.

Weakened jet stream

Normal weather patterns over North America and Eurasia depend heavily on the powerful, high-altitude air currents — produced by the contrast between polar and equatorial temperatures — known as the jet stream.

But global warming has raised temperatures in the Arctic twice as fast as the global average, weakening those currents.

“We are seeing more extreme weather because of what we call blocked ridges, which is a high-pressure system in which air is sinking, getting warmer and drier along the way,” said Flannigan. “Firefighters have known for decades that these are conducive to fire activity.”

Unmanageable intensity

Climate change not only boosts the likelihood of wildfires, but their intensity as well.

“If the fire gets too intense” as in California right now, and in Greece last summer — “there is no direct measure you can take to stop it,” said Flannigan. “It’s like sprinkling on a campfire.”

Beetle infestations

With rising temperatures, beetles have moved northward into Canada’s boreal forests, wreaking havoc — and killing trees — along the way. “Bark beetle outbreaks temporarily increase forest flammability by increasing the amount of dead material, such as needles,” said Williams.

Positive feedback

Global forests hold about 45 per cent of Earth’s land-locked carbon and soak up a quarter of human greenhouse gas emissions. But as forests die and burn, some of the carbon is released back into the atmosphere, contributing to climate change in a vicious loop that scientists call “positive feedback.”

Universal sees lots of green as ‘Grinch’ tops box office

LOS ANGELES (United States) — Universal Pictures saw plenty of green over the weekend as its remake of “The Grinch” pulled in an impressive $66 million in North American theaters, industry tracker Exhibitor Relations reported on Sunday.

The three-day estimate put the ever-popular Dr Seuss tale — with Benedict Cumberbatch voicing the small-hearted, ill-tempered, kid-hating title character — well ahead of last week’s No 1 film, “Bohemian Rhapsody,” which slid to second place with a still-healthy take of $30.9 million.

It also put this “Grinch” comfortably ahead of the Ron Howard-directed 2000 version, “How the Grinch Stole Christmas,” which took in $35 million in its opening weekend. The new film also features the voices of Rashida Jones, Kenan Thompson and Angela Lansbury, with Pharrell Williams narrating.

“Bohemian Rhapsody,” with Rami Malek playing Queen lead singer Freddie Mercury, has drawn mixed reviews but has proved a foot-stomping audience favorite. The Fox production has taken $100 million domestically in its first two weeks and $110 million overseas. In third place, at $16.1 million, was Paramount’s new release “Overlord,” a supernatural horror film set against a backdrop of the D-Day invasion. It stars Jovan Adepo and Wyatt Russell. Another seasonal film, Disney’s “The Nutcracker and the Four Realms,” placed fourth, at $9.6 million. It stars Mackenzie Foy as a young girl who travels to a magic land in search of a key to unlock a gift from her late mother. Keira Knightley, Helen Mirren and Morgan Freeman also star.

Fifth spot went to new Sony release “The Girl in the Spider’s Web,” which took in what analysts called a disappointing $8 million.

Claire Foy — a young Queen Elizabeth II in Netflix’s 2016-17 series “The Crown” — makes the not-inconsiderable leap to portraying tough, brooding, street-smart Lisbeth Salander, AKA “The Girl With the Dragon Tattoo.”

Rounding out the weekend’s top 10 were: “A Star Is Born” ($8 million) “Nobody’s Fool” ($6.5 million) “Venom” ($4.9 million) “Halloween” ($3.8 million) “The Hate U Give” ($2.1 million).

Pressure on girls for perfect body ‘worse than ever’, says Orbach

HONG KONG, (China) — Girls and young women are under more pressure than ever to achieve the perfect body in an oppressive social media-driven world that could never have been imagined by 1970s feminists, says psychoanalyst and bestselling author Susie Orbach.

Fourty years after the publication of her seminal book “Fat is a Feminist Issue”, the British writer — who was once Princess Diana’s therapist — said women were commodifying their bodies as they tried to conform to false images peddled by online beauty influencers.

Girls as young as six were being conditioned to think about cosmetic surgery, she added, with a host of industries fueling and profiting from body insecurity.

Faced with the reality of modern life, many women were turning inward, obsessed with diet and fitness or embracing being overweight as a sign of rebellion. “It’s much, much worse than we ever envisioned,” Orbach told AFP on the sidelines of the Hong Kong International Literary Festival, where she was speaking about her new book “In Therapy: How Conversations with Psychotherapists Really Work.”

Orbach has recently been involved in a year-long international campaign to force Apple, Google and Amazon to remove cosmetic surgery apps targeting primary school-aged girls, in which cartoon-style characters can be modified with procedures such as liposuction.

“This is not just a problem related to girls and women, and it’s very, very profitable if you can destabilise people’s bodies,” she said. “There are all kinds of industries both creating and feeding off these insecurities.”

Orbach, 72, said the inevita-ble outcome was the creation of a society where women would divert their energy and focus inward, rather than trying to change the world.

“We’re so self-focused now, we produce our bodies, rather than live from them. Your body is your product.”

She added: “If you just dropped in on any conversation, the amount of mental space that people take up with what they’re eating, what they’re not eating, their yoga routine, is expressive of the level of distress in our society.

Orbach has spoken about the liberation women felt from the late 1960s when they began to challenge beauty pageant objectification and rebel against body expectations.

But the pressures back then started later, not in childhood, she told AFP.

“It happened at 18, it didn’t happen at six. You didn’t have girls and boys saying ‘Have I got a six pack?’ or ‘I’m too fat’ at six and seven. You didn’t have girls throwing up over the toilet bowl at nine.” Reality television shows such as “Love Island”, where sculpted single men and women compete to couple up and win a cash prize, were both a symptom and a cause of pushing body image on impressionable young minds. —AFP

Guitarist Joe Perry recovering after collapsing at NY concert

NEW YORK (United States) — Famed Aerosmith guitarist Joe Perry was recovering in hospital on Sunday after collapsing shortly after performing with rock superstar Billy Joel in New York’s Madison Square Garden.

Perry, who is 68, suffered “shortness of breath and was treated backstage by paramedics who gave the guitarist oxygen and used a tracheal tube to clear his airway,” said a statement from a spokesperson.

It said he was “alert and responsive” on Sunday, but would have to cancel an appearance later in the day at a rock ‘n’ roll fantasy camp in Florida.

“Perry is expected to return to the road later this month,” the statement said.

Perry was playing hit song “Walk This Way,” penned by him and Aerosmith’s Steven Tyler and later covered by hip-hop group Run-DMC, shortly before he collapsed in his dressing room, TMZ reported.

Perry, who has been inducted into the Songwriters Hall of Fame and, with Aerosmith, into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, is ranked by Rolling Stone as one of the 100 greatest guitarists of all time. —AFP
How to drive a robot on Mars

GREENBELT (United States) — Some 78 million miles (126 million kilometers) from Earth, alone on the immense and frigid Red Planet, a robot the size of a small 4x4 wakes up just after sunrise. And just as it has every day for the past six years, it awaits its instructions.

Around 9:30 Mars time, a message arrives from California, where it was sent 15 minutes earlier.

“Drive forward 10 metres, turn to an azimuth of 45 degrees, now turn on your autonomous capabilities and drive.”

The Curiosity rover executes the commands, moving slowly to its designated position, at a maximum speed of 35 to 110 metres (yards) per hour.

Its batteries and other configurations limit its daily drive span, and it now turns on its autonomous drive.

The rover will then send several hundred megabytes of scientific data via large ground antennae to its human masters on Earth.

A miniature lab

On the ground floor of building 34 at NASA’s Goddard Space Flight Centre in Greenbelt, Maryland, scientists pore over Curiosity’s data every day at 1 pm, in a large windowless room full of scientific instruments and computers.

The scientists are looking for any indication of life on Mars.

Inside Curiosity lies a “marvel of miniaturization,” says Charles Malespin, the deputy principal investigator for Sample Analysis at Mars (SAM), a chemist’s lab the size of a microwave oven.

“It’s the most complicated instrument NASA has ever sent to another planet,” said Malespin, who has devoted his professional life to the project since 2006.

SAM analyzes samples of Martian soil by heating them in an oven that reaches 1,800 Fahrenheit (1,000 Celsius).

The hot rocks release gas, which is separated and analyzed by instruments that offer a sample “fingerprint.”

At Goddard, Maelva Millan, a French postdoctoral researcher, compares this chemical fingerprint to experiments carried out on known molecules.

When they look similar, she can say, “Ah, that’s the right molecule.”

It is thanks to SAM that researchers know there are complex organic molecules on Mars.

And SAM has helped scientists learn that the Martian surface — geologically speaking — is far younger than previously thought.

“If you’re going to go to Mars, you don’t want to bring stuff that’s already there that you can use for resources,” such as water, said Malespin.

“If you want to mine the soil and heat it up and release the water, you can bring a big oven with you and you have all the water you want.”

The same goes for various materials that could be used to make rocket fuel, allowing the Red Planet to serve as a future service station for rockets.

Younger than thought?

Around 5 pm Martian time, it will wait for one of NASA’s three satellites orbiting the planet to pass overhead.

Curiosity will then send several hundred megabytes of scientific data via large ground antennae to its human masters on Earth.

Old Master? Cave paintings from 40,000 years ago are world’s earliest figurative art

TOKYO (Japan) — A painting of an animal in an Indonesian cave dates from at least 40,000 years ago, making it the world’s oldest piece of figurative art, new research has shown.

The painting in Borneo, possibly depicting a native type of wild cattle, is among thousands of artworks discovered decades ago in the remote region.

It was only using technology called uranium series analysis that researchers have finally been able to work out just when they were painted.

The discovery adds to a growing body of evidence that cave painting did not emerge only in Europe, as was once thought.

“We can see that figurative art development was more or less at the same time in Asia and in Europe,” researcher Maxime Aubert told AFP.

In 2014, researchers dated figurative art on the Indonesian island of Sulawesi to 33,000 years ago, but some of the paintings examined by Aubert and his team in nearby Borneo were produced at least 5,000 years earlier.

Aubert, an associate professor at Australia’s Griffith University, worked with a team in remote and inaccessible caves in the East Kalimantan area of Borneo to date the paintings.

The team, whose research was published in the journal Nature on Wednesday, looked at multiple layers of artwork painted on top of each other.

“The bottom-most and oldest layer featured paintings of animals, mostly a local type of cattle, as well as hand stencils in a reddish colour.

On top of those artworks were hand stencils in a mulberry colour grouped in patterns and embellished with lines and dots, as well as small stick-like human figures in the same colour. The final layer featured people, boats and geometric designs.”

No joystick

On the other side of the United States, at NASA’s Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California, about two dozen men and women make up the team that drives Curiosity.

“My favorite part of the day (is when) I get to sit down and start looking at the imagery from Mars and understand where the rover currently is,” said Frank Hartman, who has driven both Curiosity and another, older rover.

“Any feeling is that sometimes I’m probably the first person on Earth looking at some of these pictures.” —AFP

5G to be expected on world’s longest cross-sea bridge

GUANGZHOU — The Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao bridge, as the world’s longest cross-sea bridge, is expected to have 5G service in the future, according to Fang Zheng, vice general manager of the WLAN office of ZTE Corp, the bridge’s network operator.

The 55-km Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao bridge that opened last month connects the mainland province of Guangdong with the country’s two special administrative regions, Hong Kong and Macao.

“The Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao bridge now has good coverage of 4G service,” said Fang. “Experts and workers have overcome the difficulties of a complex construction environment and the lack of an optical fiber to provide tailored 4G solutions for the bridge and prepare for the future upgrading of 5G service.”

Experts and workers extended the coverage area of the optical fiber to 20 kilometers, double the conventional maximum onshore coverage of 10 kilometers, to ensure the full coverage of network signal along the bridge, according to the constructors.

“The Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao bridge can be seen as a unique application of wireless technology, highlighting the high-quality products and advanced technology provided by China’s communication sector,” said Fang.

The Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao bridge is now ready for the access of Internet of Things, a major business to be achieved by 5G technology. From the very beginning, the technological base needed for 5G has been considered in the technological base needed for 5G. Guardiola glad as Man City overcome derby ‘fear’ to beat Man Utd

MANCHESTER (United Kingdom) — Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola said his side had to overcome early “fear” before the reigning Premier League champions returned to the top of the table with a 3-1 derby win at home to Manchester United on Sunday.

Goals early in each half at the Etihad from David Silva and Sergio Aguero left City in a commanding position before an Anthony Martial penalty gave visitors United hope of a comeback.

But Ilkay Gundogan put the result beyond doubt four minutes from time with a third goal that crowned a sublime 44-pass move. Victory left City two points clear of Liverpool and Guardiola told the BBC: “We deserved the victory. The first half we played a little bit with fear but football is a game and we didn’t want to lose the ball.”

Asked why his team had been fearful, Guardiola replied: “We wanted to play good in front of our fans and we know how important it is to play in this game. But we did well and that goal from Sergio Aguero helped us a lot after half-time.”

Defeat left United 12 points in time with a third goal that took City’s goals were down to mistakes by his players. “For me zero words against my players, everything is positive,” Guardiola said. “I am with them and they are with me.

“There is a gap, Manchester City start playing from the beginning of the season at a certain level that allows them to get a lot of points.” The Portuguese boss, in a separate interview with Sky Sports, added: “All three goals are our mistakes. Against a team like City, if you make mistakes you will get punished.”

United scored twice in the closing minutes to win 2-1 away to Juventus in the Champions League in midweek while City continued their campaign in European club football’s elite tournament with a 6-0 thrashing of Shakhtar Donetsk on Wednesday. Mourinho, while not blaming United’s defeat on their exertions in Italy, said: “Everybody has to agree, it is one thing to go to Juventus and play against one of the best teams in the world for 90 minutes, another thing to beat Shakhtar Donetsk at home 6-0 and be very relaxed.”

“We arrive in different circumstances.”
