Nearly six months after cyclone Nargis, survivors are still without water, food or shelter. The SPDC continues to use the situation to extort money and exploit survivors for their labor. Activists criticize the UN/ASEAN/SPDC joint PONJA report for ignoring misappropriation of aid and human rights violations.

UN Sec-Gen Ban Ki-Moon’s voices dissatisfaction over the SPDC’s failure to heed UN recommendations. He conditions his next Burma trip on the SPDC making tangible progress on democratic reform and the release of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.

On 24 October, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi marks 13 years under house arrest. UN, EU, and US renew calls for her release.

The number of political prisoners continues to increase. There are 2,123 political prisoners, up 78% from the UN figure of 1,192 in June 2007.

In October, the regime arrests 13 dissidents and sentences 27 to prison terms. Since January, the SPDC has arrested 420 opponents and jailed 85.

The SPDC crackdown on monks continues. The SPDC deploys armed guards at pagodas, raids monasteries, and detains devotees.

A new report reveals the SPDC’s offensive in Eastern Burma has displaced 66,000 more people in the past year.

Vietnam, Thailand, Singapore, India, and Bangladesh sign new trade and energy deals with the regime.

KEY STORY

Cyclone Nargis cleanup

Nearly six months after cyclone Nargis, survivors continue to suffer shortages of basic necessities and suffer human rights abuses by SPDC authorities.

Water is becoming scarce with the onset of the dry season. Despite clean-up efforts, water in collection ponds is still undrinkable due to salt contaminated soil.¹

¹ Times (UK) (01 Oct 08) Aid and water dry up in cyclone fear zone
Housing: The emergency housing provided by aid agencies is largely tarpaulin with a lifespan of six to 12 months. Some of the plastic sheeting is already deteriorating and tearing. UN Habitat estimated 112,500 vulnerable households immediately need raw materials to rebuild their homes. The SPDC has continued to prevent local aid donors from visiting displaced survivors living in the camps outside Labutta. They have also begun demolishing shelters built along the main road. On 23 October, the SPDC appealed for more funds for rebuilding schools in the delta. Despite earlier claims that all children returned to school in July, the SPDC admitted that 1,091 schools were still closed.

Food: The World Food Program (WFP) has reduced food distribution and survivors are concerned that food aid will soon be discontinued. While the regime claims that 97% of rice paddies in the delta were replanted, scientists from the International Rice Research Institute reported rice cultivation was down 25% in the worst-damaged areas. This was due to shortages of labor, infrastructure, equipment, and draft animals. A successful harvest in those areas that were replanted is threatened by rising costs, especially fertilizer, which is 40% more expensive in the delta.

Unmet funding: The UN’s first emergency appeal for cyclone aid was generously supported. However, a second call for $481 million in aid has been only half met. Many donors have been discouraged by reports of SPDC’s corrupt practices in the distribution of aid and the diversion of aid funds for personal benefit. In October, the SPDC arrested the chairman of the NLD Cyclone Relief Committee. [See below, Arrests]

Corruption: Reports continue of local SPDC officials extorting money from villages in Kachin and Shan States on the pretext of “cyclone relief donations.”

Forced labor: SPDC Army units demanded that cyclone survivors perform work on construction projects as a condition for receiving aid. Such projects included a road construction project in Labutta Township. In Bogale, SPDC officials forced residents to work on reconstruction projects or pay daily fines of up to 5,000 kyat. In Shwe Paukan Township, Rangoon Division, the SPDC ordered each household to provide one worker for cyclone reconstruction, which forced families to abandon their own recovery efforts.

On 16 October, regional advocacy network Burma Partnership released a report that provided an assessment of the response to cyclone Nargis. Burma Partnership found that the UN/SPDC/ASEAN’s earlier Post Nargis Joint Assessment (PONJA) ignored issues such as the blocking and misappropriation of aid and mistreatment of cyclone survivors in relief camps. In addition, Burma Partnership stated that the PONJA report failed to mention numerous cases of human rights violations including incidents where the SPDC recruited orphan children as soldiers, forced survivors to do reconstruction work, and confiscated farmland. ASEAN Sec Gen Surin Pitsuwan was scheduled to attend the launch of the Burma Partnership report in Jakarta but cancelled at the last minute.

While many international and local agencies continue to struggle to deliver aid, other international experts appear to be out of touch with the situation on the ground. On 28 October, at a meeting of UN agencies, ASEAN disaster experts and members of the SPDC in Bangkok concluded that the next step in cyclone Nargis recovery was to improve early warning systems and disaster preparedness. International Crisis Group (ICG) also published a report in October. The ICG report suggested that “rather than shunning the authorities, the best way to help the people is to involve government officials at all levels and enlist their cooperation and support”. The report admits to problems in aid delivery, but minimizes these as “restrictions and intrusiveness” that exist “as in many developing countries.”

21 October: SPDC Army soldier San Hlaing killed a Corporal from Light Infantry Battalion 550 in Chin Let Wa village, Paletwa Township, Chin State. The Corporal had earlier beaten San Hlaing for sleeping on duty. An SPDC Army source claimed the rate of killing of superiors by private soldiers had increased and many army officials expressed concern over their security. SPDC Army privates earn around 22,000 kyat (less than US $20) per month.

Military offensive in Karen State

As the rainy season came to an end, the regime and its allies intensified military operations in Eastern Burma. From 1-11 October, Democratic Karen Buddhist Army (DKBA) troops from battalions 907, 906, and 333 attacked several villages in Karen State’s Dooplaya District. DKBA troops burned homes, destroyed food, and laid landmines. More than 200 villagers were displaced as a result of the attacks. On 3 October, DKBA troops killed Saw Daw Naw Poe, a villager from the Meh Klawn Khee area.

Schools and clinics in villages of Kawkareik Township, Karen State, were also forced to close following joint operations launched by the SPDC Army and the DKBA in late September.

Bombs

- 18 October: A small bomb exploded in Rangoon’s Yankin Township. No casualties were reported. Police said they defused a second bomb on the same day.
- 18 October: A bomb exploded at a police station in Tachilek, Southern Shan State. No one was injured.
- 19 October: One man was killed in a small bomb blast in Rangoon’s Shwepyithar Township. On 21 October, the state-run newspaper New Light of Myanmar identified the victim as Thet Oo Win, a former monk who participated in the Saffron Revolution. The junta’s mouthpiece alleged that Thet Oo Win died while trying to make the bomb.

At the monasteries

Following marches commemorating the Saffron Revolution [See September 2008 Burma Bulletin], security remained tight around monasteries, especially in Akyab, Arakan State. SPDC officials in Akyab deployed additional armed personnel around pagodas, prevented outsiders from staying overnight at monasteries, and monitored devotees. SPDC intelligence officers on motorcycles followed monks carrying out morning food collection. Security officers conducted numerous raids on monasteries in Akyab and Maungdaw. Relatives of monks in hiding were detained for questioning and remained under surveillance.

Akyab’s annual Thadingyut festival on 14 October was observed amid an atmosphere of oppression. SPDC authorities restricted attendance by one third and refused to allow normal festivities. The SPDC also collected the personal details of every monk invited to the festival. The following day, SPDC local authorities deployed 400 uniformed soldiers and army trucks at monasteries and public places.

Chin food crisis

Food shortages caused by the rat plague in Chin State have reportedly led to 100 deaths, mostly children and the elderly. Local SPDC authorities banned food supplies from foreign countries from being transported to Chin State. On 13 October, SPDC authorities refused permission for the local NGO Country Agency for Rural Development (CAD) to deliver emergency food aid to 1,000 starving villagers around Haka Township.

WFP sought funding for a work-for-food project, but acknowledged the difficulties they faced in negotiations with the regime. “They are as bad as the government in North Korea, with a bunch of old generals sitting high in their newly built capital,” said WFP spokesperson Paul Risley.

Melamine still on sale

Even though the World Health Organization advised countries to begin testing milk products for melamine on 22 September, the SPDC delayed issuing warnings to the public for eight days. Even then, it wasn’t until 10 October that the SPDC banned the import and distribution of nine melamine-contaminated dairy products. It took another four days for the SPDC to order the removal of the products from store shelves. Discounted Chinese milk powder continued to be sold on street stalls in Rangoon.

HUMAN RIGHTS

The number of political prisoners in Burma continues to increase. On 5 October, the Assistance Association for Political Prisoners and the US Campaign for Burma said that there were at least 2,123 political prisoners, up 78% from the UN figure of 1,192 in June 2007.

In October, the regime arrested 13 dissidents and sentenced 27 to prison terms. Since January, the SPDC has arrested 420 opponents and jailed 85.

Arrests

- 1 October: SPDC authorities in Rangoon’s South Okkalapa Township arrested former journalist and Mandalay NLD elected MP Ohn Kyaing. Ohn Kyaing, 64, is also the chairman of the NLD Cyclone Relief Committee and actively participated in cyclone relief work.
- 4 October: Police in Bhamo Township, Kachin State, arrested two abbots from Tagontai Monastery in Mandalay.

• About 10 child prisoners are being detained in Hintainglay prison camp in Kale Township, Sagaing Division. Medical facilities in the camp are reported to be inadequate and SPDC authorities regularly confiscate food and money given to prisoners by their family members.

Freedom of information

On 22 October, Reporters Sans Frontiers (RSF) released its annual report on press freedom worldwide. Burma ranked 170th out of the 173 countries in the study. RSF said that over the past year the regime arrested or threatened dozens of journalists and that the SPDC’s censorship activities had been “relentless.” In October, reports continued on the SPDC’s restriction on media:

• 1 October: The website of the exiled Burmese news agency Mizzima came under attack by pro-regime hackers. On 9 October, the Mizzima website was again made inaccessible due to several hacking attempts.

• 8 October: The SPDC Censorship Board suspended publication of the Action Times and True News weekly journals for one and two months respectively. Action Times received the suspension for publishing the news of the release of Win Tin and referring to him as Sayagyi [Great Master]. True News was ordered to suspend publication for writing an unapproved caption alongside a photograph of a child working on a construction site in Thailand.

• 20 October: It was reported that the SPDC Censorship Board suppressed several poems from the October issue of humor magazines Kalyar, Cherry, Myanmar Thit, and Mahaythi.

Ojea Quintana’s report

On 8 October, the UN Special Rapporteur on human rights in Burma Tomás Ojea Quintana presented his first report to the General Assembly. Quintana proposed four core human rights elements that the SPDC should implement before the 2010 elections:

• Amend domestic laws that limit freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, and association.

• Release of more than 2,000 political prisoners.

• Review the authority and powers of the armed forces, including ending the recruitment of child soldiers and the use of landmines.

• Establish a fully independent and impartial judiciary that can guarantee due process of law and create a mechanism to investigate human rights abuses.

Ojea Quintana failed to recognize that over the past 18 years the regime has constantly ignored the recommendations made by his four predecessors. In a statement that defied reality, he described regime officials as “ready to learn and apply international human rights standards.” The Special Rapporteur also refused to carry out his mandate by “criticizing and not cooperating” with the junta.\textsuperscript{85}

DISPLACEMENT

66,000 new IDPs in 2008

According to the Thai Burma Border Consortium’s latest report, between July 2007 and June 2008, 66,000 civilians were forced to flee their homes in Eastern Burma due to widespread and systematic violations of human rights and humanitarian law.\textsuperscript{86} The regime refused to give aid workers access to displaced persons and the humanitarian situation deteriorated.\textsuperscript{87} The report also draws attention to the impact of development projects in Eastern Burma. These projects have led to increased troop presence, forced labor and political persecution.\textsuperscript{88}

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Ban dissatisfied with SPDC

During his August trip to Burma, UN Special Advisor on Burma Ibrahim Gambari told NLD leaders that UN Sec-Gen Ban Ki-moon planned to visit Burma in December. [See August 2008 Burma Bulletin] However, on 7 October, Ban said he would drop plans to visit to Burma unless the SPDC showed tangible progress in implementing democratic reforms, which includes the release of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other political prisoners.\textsuperscript{89}

On 20 October, in a report to the UN General Assembly, Ban Ki-moon reiterated dissatisfaction that the SPDC had failed to take up UN proposals to democratize Burma.\textsuperscript{90} Ban stressed that the release of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other political prisoners would be key to the resumption of all-inclusive, substantive, and time-bound dialogue.\textsuperscript{91}

ECONOMY

Energy deals

On 21 October, Arakan Oil Watch released a new report, “Blocking Freedom,” that documents the consequences of China National Oil Corporation (CNOOC)’s project on Rambree Island.\textsuperscript{92} The report found that the project has resulted in land confiscation and polluted waterways in the surrounding areas. CNOOC partners in the Rambree oil venture are two other state-owned Chinese oil-service firms, and junta crony Steven Law’s Golden Aaron and Asia World.\textsuperscript{93}

New energy deals signed in October included:

- 3 October: Two Vietnamese companies, Petrovietnam Exploration Production and Vietsovpetro, Burmese privately-owned Eden Group, and the Myanmar Oil and Gas Enterprise (MOGE) signed a contract for exploration, drilling, and production of oil and gas in offshore block M2 in the Gulf of Martaban. • Exim Bank of India revealed that it had agreed to extend a US$82.07 million line of credit to finance transmission lines and an aluminum factory in Burma. Eighty-five percent of the goods and services will be supplied by India.\(^{96}\)

• On 16 October, India and the SPDC announced measures to enhance border trade, including the opening of a new border trading depot at Awakhung-Leshi, between India’s Nagaland and Burma’s Sagaing Division, and to increase the number of eligible trade goods from 22 to 40.\(^{97}\)

• India and the SPDC inaugurated a Centre for Enhancement of IT Skills established in Rangoon with US$2 million funding from India.\(^{98}\)

Bangladesh trip

From 7 to 11 October, Vice Sr Gen Maung Aye led a 55-member delegation, including seven SPDC ministers, to Bangladesh.\(^{99}\) Talks included the expansion of trade, maritime boundaries, energy cooperation, contract farming and military cooperation.\(^{100}\) Junta crony Tay Za and his business team were also on the trip and participated in talks on improving trade relations.\(^{101}\)

Rice trade and prices

As part of the deals signed in Bangladesh, the SPDC agreed to export 100,000 tons of rice from Burma, and signed a contract leasing 50,000 acres of paddy fields in Arakan State. The agreement sparked concern from communities affected, who believe that the lands will be confiscated from their owners, and fear rice scarcity in the coming season.\(^{102}\) Traders noted that land trade to Bangladesh is increasing after a temporary drop in trade after cyclone Nargis. [See Table]\(^{103}\)

Farmers in Arakan State and other rice producing areas are under pressure to produce high yields to make up for shortfalls in the Irrawaddy delta. In Pegu, the SPDC set the price of rice at 20% below last year.\(^{104}\) In Kale Township, Sagaing Division, SPDC soldiers began inspection of farmland to calculate the amount they intended to confiscate for soldiers’ rations after the harvest.\(^{105}\)

In Rangoon markets, the price of low quality rice has increased around 20%. Only about one-third of the normal rice stock was coming into the market following the export of low-quality rice to Bangladesh and China in September.\(^{106}\)
