The comments by Mohamed ElBaradei, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, came in an interview with an Arab television station aired a day after US officials said they believed recent large Israeli military exercises may have been meant to show Israel’s ability to hit Iran’s nuclear sites.

“In my opinion, a military strike will be the worst ... it will turn the Middle East to a ball of fire,” El Baradei said on Al-Arabiya television. It also could prompt Iran to press even harder to seek a nuclear programme, and also could prompt Iran to burn if Iran attacked, he said.

El Baradei says Mideast could burn if Iran attacked

Dubai, 22 June — The UN nuclear watchdog chief warned in comments aired Saturday that any military strike on Iran could turn the Middle East into a “ball of fire” and lead the country to a more aggressive stance on its controversial nuclear programme.

The comments by Mohamed ElBaradei, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, came in an interview with an Arab television station aired a day after US officials said they believed recent large Israeli military exercises may have been meant to show Israel’s ability to hit Iran’s nuclear sites.

“In my opinion, a military strike will be the worst ... it will turn the Middle East to a ball of fire,” El Baradei said on Al-Arabiya television. It also could prompt Iran to press even harder to seek a nuclear programme, and force him to resign, he said.

Iran on Saturday also criticized the Israeli exercises. The official IRNA news agency quoted a government spokesman as saying that the exercises demonstrate Israel “jeopardizes global peace and security.”

Storms spark dozens of fires in California

Sacramento (Calif), 22 June — Thunderstorms sparked as many as 75 wildfires in a wilderness area in far Northern California on Saturday as officials farther south got close to containing a blaze that destroyed several homes and forced thousands to evacuate.

Storms overnight Friday were responsible for the large number of fires in Shasta-Trinity National Forest, near Redding. Those fires range in size from less than an acre to more than 750 acres.

None immediately threatened homes, Forest Service spokesman Michael Odle said. Teams moved in Saturday on the two largest fires.

South of San Francisco, a fire that burned homes and closed a stretch of highway was 90 percent contained and could be surrounded by the end of the day, according to officials of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. It had charred 630 acres, or less than a square mile.

“We made some good progress over the evening and hope to have the same today,” said department spokesman Paul Van Gerwen, a battalion chief.

However, evacuation orders remained in place Saturday for the roughly 2,000 people who fled their homes Friday. Some evacuees spent the night at an emergency shelter set up at a local school.

Manila, 22 June — A Philippine passenger ferry capsized during a typhoon with more than 700 people on board, triggering a frantic search on Sunday for survivors.

Most of the 626 passengers and 121 crew are missing and the vessel’s owner, Sulpicio Lines, said it had lost contact with the ferry, which was en route to Cebu from Manila, at around 12.30 pm (5:30 am British time) on Saturday.

The coast guard finally reached the area where the MV Princess of Stars sank 3 km (two miles) from Sibuyan island in the centre of the archipelago. It had been forced to abort a previous rescue mission on Saturday because of high seas. Residents from a coastal village said only the ferry’s bow was visible above the waves.

Local mayor Nanette Tansingco told radio that three survivors had been found in remote villages.

“We are sending people to get them but they have to walk to get there because the roads are impassable,” she said.

At least four others aboard are known to have died.

Brazil to invest oil revenues in education

RIO DE JANEIRO, 22 June — Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva will invest revenues from the recently discovered deep-water oil reserves off the country’s southeastern coast in education, Brazil’s Chief of Staff Dilma Rousseff said on Thursday.

Rousseff said Lula believed oil revenue must benefit the entire population of the country through massive investment in education, including research, innovation and technology, the local daily O Globo reported.

Rousseff added the way in which the investment will take place has yet to be decided and Lula has initiated an internal debate on the matter among his ministers.

Brazil’s state-owned oil and gas giant Petrobras will participate in the discussion, and the government is considering hiring an international consulting firm, the minister added.

Rousseff said Petrobras has yet to quantify the revenues that could be generated from the new oil fields.

Petrobras has announced several discoveries of oil and gas deposits in deep waters off Brazil’s southeastern coast in recent months. Since then, the company has been drilling to measure the size of the oil fields as well as their commercial potential.

I happened to read an article “In Myanmar, surprising recovery” featured in 17-6-2008 issue of the International Herald Tribune Newspaper Website. It said that about six weeks after the outbreak of the Cyclone Nargis the medical doctors and staff of INGOs, who had given health care in the storm-hit areas, on their return disclosed the situations in the areas were not as bad as expected.

Regarding the storm, the media of the West bloc made various accusations against Myanmar. So did high-ranking officials of certain western countries. Of the two major accusations, the first said that tens of thousands of victims lost their lives due to the fact that in the aftermath of the natural disaster, foreign aid (foreign warships) were not allowed to enter the nation and rescue tasks could not be carried out in time.

The other was that millions of victims would die of hunger because the Myanmar government did not take care of the storm victims, nor did it provide food or health care. And tens of thousands of victims would die of dysentery and diarrhoea due to consumption of unsafe water.

When the government refuted the accusations, they accused the government of inventing news and imposing a news blackout. However, in the article sent from Yangon, some foreigners who had made trips to the storm-affected areas said that the accusations were untrue. Charge d’ Affaires ai Ms Shari Villarosa of US Embassy to Myanmar said, “I’m not getting the sense that there have been a lot of deaths as a result of the delay.”

The US defense secretary said that the Myanmar government delayed accepting international assistance at the cost of tens of thousands of lives. He accused the government of committing crimes of neglect. In fact, the accusations were based on news from unreliable sources. In a news story, doctors, rescue workers and diplomats said that storm victims did not die of hunger before they met rescue workers because they were farmers and fishermen who were resistant enough to harsh weather. And they survived, eating coconut, fish and wet rice.

I have much knowledge about the Ayeyawady delta where the people can catch fish at home when female fishes migrate upstream for spawning in the beginning of the rainy season. So, in an article, I wrote that Ayeyawady dwellers could survive even if they did not have chocolates from international community, thereby attracting criticisms from West media groups, especially from Myanmar national staff of the media groups. I wonder what they will respond to the words of the foreign doctors and diplomats who said that storm victims continued to survive, consuming the fishes they caught.

I also learnt from that news that foreigners were surprised by Myanmar people’s high resilience. Leader Frank Smithuis of Medecins Sans Frontieres for Myanmar said that hundreds of thousands of people were dead or missing during the storm, but the survivors were not injured or sick seriously. He said, “You were dead or you were in OK shape”.

The survivors, who needed medical operations, had already received health care given by Myanmar doctors from the regional hospitals and dispensaries. Therefore, Merlin voluntary medical team from Britain cancelled the plan to call surgeons as they were not necessary.

As regards possible spread of infectious diseases, according to the report that said Medecins Sans Frontieres for Myanmar gave health care to some 30,000 patients in six weeks, the majority of the patients suffered from light injuries, cold, cough and respiratory diseases and diarrhoea. The patients suffering from cold, cough and diarrhoea were not in a serious condition, and the rate of outbreak of those diseases was normal. Myanmar doctor Myat Myat Win of Medecins Sans Frontieres for Myanmar said that during the period of 25 days, on average, she gave treatment to about 25 patients a day, and the spread of diarrhoea was not serious.

Here, I would like to rebut the accusations that the health conditions of the victims were shocking because the Myanmar government did nothing in that regard. If Myanmar doctors, medical staff and members of Defence Services medical units did not give treatment to the patients who went to see doctors soon after the catastrophe, I wondered if Merlin medical team needed to cancel the plan to call surgeons. And if Myanmar doctors and medical staff did not give diarrhoea vaccine or chlorinate the water in advance, it was food for thought that why didn’t the victims suffering from diarrhoea go to see the doctors of Medecins Sans Frontieres for Myanmar en masse.

After reading the article, I noticed that the doctors, rescue workers and diplomats were surprised by the fact that unlike other fellow regional countries, Myanmar did not receive much international assistance, but Myanmar victims recovered from the disaster in a short time. So, the article was titled “In Myanmar, surprising recovery”.

Indeed, it was no wonder that they were surprised. The reason why they were surprised was that developed countries especially western countries have a wrong belief that without their assistance, the peoples of developing countries do not know how and what to do in times of emergency.

In practice, the situations of Myanmar were not as bad as they thought. Some international aid organizations and Myanmar staff of those organizations had been stationed in the country before the storm Nargis. Medecins Sans Frontieres, for example, has been in Myanmar since 1993, and it has over 1000 staff. Merlin medical team of Britain had trained 547 health staff two years before Nargis that hit the western part of the delta.

When the storm hit Myanmar, Medecins Sans Frontieres sent 48 Myanmar doctors and over 250 Myanmar rescue workers to the storm-hit areas. Moreover, half of the health staff trained by Merlin medical team contributed services to the health care services.

With respect to the medicines and medical equipment, UNICEF had stored water purifying tablets and other medical equipment in Yangon. So, it delivered tablets and medical equipment as soon as the natural disaster abated. World Food Programme (WFP) had been stationed in Myanmar. So, it purchased and distributed domestic rice as soon as possible. It distributed about 15,000 tons of food.

That was why international organizations that had been already stationed in Myanmar managed to carry out rescue tasks effectively with the use of competent Myanmar workers although it did not have many foreign staff.

Another root cause of Myanmar people’s quick recovery was the internal strength. Concerning the internal strength, foreign diplomats praised the generous donations of individuals and organizations.

Second Secretary Ms Ruth Bradley Jones of the Embassy of the United Kingdom said that the performances of local organizations, medical teams and some entrepreneurs were very encouraging. Really, they were heroes in the rescue tasks, she said. However, under the undeclared rule of the western media, the article did not feature anything to praise the Myanmar government.

Anxiously, owing to the close supervision of the Prime Minister over the rescue works that were launched even on 3 May when the storm occurred, combined efforts made day in, day out by hundreds of thousands of servicemen, service personnel and members of social organizations headed by a minister in a storm-hit township, close supervision of the Head of State and the Deputy Head of State, rescue and rehabilitation tasks were materialized in a short time. That was a tangible proof.

Similarly, the government provided foodstuff, clothes, health care, transportation services, choppers, chopping hoes, blankets, mats, shelter boxes, paddy seeds for cultivation, fishing nets, fishing boats, fertilizers, power-tillers and draught cattle. Besides, it constructed embankments, sheltering hillocks, and emergency roads, spending billions of kyats. If one views that with positive attitude, one will see as they really are.

Doctors and rescue workers from international community and diplomats have witnessed and accepted the prevailing situations, as the saying that goes, “Seeing is believing”. As for some Myanmar staff from certain media who said that what was worse than the storm Nargis was the danger of blacking out the news, if they are still self-opinionated, they will not be in a position to realize the prevailing conditions of the nation because they are blackening the truth and misleading others into misunderstanding things, and they are still under delusion.

I am very fond of listening to the radio. In my spare time I tune in Myanmar and English programmes broadcast by various broadcasting stations worldwide. I listen to not only the broadcasts of England, the US, India, China and Thailand but also religious broadcasts. I do not listen to one particular broadcasting station. Listening to various broadcasts is like having a particular food cooked differently. The meat is the same but the taste is different. I noticed that the stations broadcast the same news story but listeners can make it out different in meaning. Here is an example.

A broadcasting station of the west broadcast something like Myanmar government staged the show of the destruction of narcotic drugs in connection with the news of destruction of narcotic drugs in the presence of the diplomats in Myanmar. Other news agencies broadcast the same news with correct goodwill. The broadcast violates the press ethics in a deceitful way regardless of the fact that the news and opinion must be reported separately. I noticed their ill will.

When I listen to the news broadcast by the news agencies, I vividly realize the attitudes of those broadcasting stations towards our country. If one sometimes eats bread with fungus, it cannot harm his life. However, if he always eats the unwholesome food, he may know only when the disease reaches level 2 or 3 and may die. Broadcasting is an electronic media and I also notice that there are few chances to think while listening to the radio but there is ample time to think while reading a newspaper (print media). Radio can widely influence the opinion of the people at low cost. Listening to the radio does not cost much. There are less restraints on time and place for the listeners in comparison with other media. Everybody can listen to a broadcast at ease.

No matter how much other media technology develops, the developed nations cannot relinquish radio broadcasting service. They have extended their services because it is a job that can gain many advantages at low cost. Radio Free Europe broadcast news to the East European nations for many years. RFE stopped its broadcasting service when the Soviet Union collapsed. They no longer spent money on the broadcasting as their objective of pulling down the countries had been accomplished.

The various broadcasting stations broadcast news with certain targets in order to serve their interest.

As a listener, I realize the targets of the various broadcasting stations of the west in comparison with others. In the event of important developments in Myanmar, the attitude to wield their influence on others has become obvious. The broadcasting stations continuously aired the news criticising the National Convention held to lay down the basic principles for drafting the constitution. They also opposed the process of approval of the constitution in various means. They reported various programmes in order to incite the people to vote against the constitution in the referendum. As their goals were not achieved their broadcasting time was extended. It is time they should know that Myanmar people would believe the broadcasts with reasoning power and are not that naïve.

Castro blasts EU condition on lifting sanctions

HAVANA, 22 June — Former Cuban president Fidel Castro, showing renewed vigor in recent days, lashed out on Friday at the European Union’s decision to lift sanctions against Cuba while demanding the island nation improve its human rights record.

The ailing 81-year-old, in a brief but biting column released on the Internet, accused the 27-nation bloc of “enormous hypocrisy” and called its actions “disparaging.”

“At my age and in my state of health, one never knows how much time they will live, but from now on I want to put in writing my contempt for the enormous hypocrisy that surrounds the decision,” wrote Castro, who has been mostly on the sidelines since surgery almost two years ago.

While the EU nations say Cuba must improve its performance on human rights and release political prisoners, they mistreat illegal immigrants from Latin America by using “brutal methods” to expel them, wrote Castro, who remains head of the island nation’s Communist Party.

From Cuba, in the name of human rights, they demand impunity for those (dissidents) that try to deliver... the homeland and the people to imperialism,” he said, referring to the United States.

Typhoon “Fengshen” kills at least 59 in Philippines

MANILA, 22 June — Typhoon “Fengshen” has killed at least 59 people as it has been rampaging through central Philippines since Friday night, said Philippine officials on Saturday.

The death toll from “Fengshen” in Mindanao, southern Philippines, has risen to 17 so far, said local officials of the southern Philippine regions.

Heavy floods and landslides forced thousands of residents on the islands of Samar, Panay, Negros and in northern Cebu in central Philippines to take to evacuation centres, while at least 30,000 were stranded by flood in the central city of Iloilo after a local dam overflowed, said local officials.

Strong winds also toppled trees and electric poles in several provinces in central Philippines, resulting in the death of at least three people and frequent power interruptions. Meanwhile, “Fengshen” was still intensifying and continuing its course in a northwest direction towards southern Luzon’s Mindoro Province on Saturday afternoon, state weather forecasters said.

The Philippine Atmospheric Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA) said the typhoon packed maximum sustained winds of 160 kilometres per hour (kph) near the centre and gustiness of up to 195 kph, and was moving northwest at 11 kph.

Bird flu mistaken as dengue, typhoid in Indonesia

KUALA LUMPUR, 22 June — Some cases of human bird flu in Indonesia have been variously misdiagnosed as dengue fever and typhoid, resulting in the late administration of drugs, a leading doctor in the country said on Friday. Indonesia has had the highest number of human H5N1 cases in the world and while mortality rates are around 60 percent in other places, the figure is highest, or at 81 percent, in Indonesia.

Sardikin Giriputo, director of the Sulianti Saroso Infectious Disease Hospital in Indonesia, told the hospital that misdiagnoses and the late administration of drugs were partially responsible for the high mortality rates.

“It (H5N1) is misdiagnosed initially as dengue, bacterial pneumonia, typhoid and upper respiratory tract infection because of similar clinical features (symptoms),” Giriputo said. — MNA/Reuters

Three dead, 30 wounded in North Lebanon clashes

Tripoli (Lebanon), 22 June—At least three people were killed and 30 wounded on Sunday in sectarian clashes in Lebanon’s second largest city Tripoli, security sources said.

Explosions and machinegun fire rocked the city as Sunni Muslim supporters of the government and Alawite gunmen close to the Hezbollah-led opposition battled on the outskirts of the mainly Sunni Muslim port.

Lebanese army units deployed in the area and tried to end the fighting and local leaders held talks to contain the conflict. Dozens of families fled the scene of the clashes that tapered off after both sides agreed a ceasefire, the sources said.

Several homes, shops and cars were damaged in the clashes that left the streets of the city largely deserted.
