Strive in concert for increasing cultivation capacity

The government is dedicated itself to improving the living conditions of the people in pursuance of the national goal of building a peaceful, modern and developed nation. With favourable weather pattern and geographical features, Myanmar has been an agro-based nation since time immemorial.

The majority of the nation’s working population are farmers. Therefore, development of agriculture as the base and all-round development of other sectors of the economy as well is a practical task. At present, the government is working hard to beef up exploitation of natural resources, reclamation of fallow and virgin lands for agricultural purpose and cultivation capacity.

In the message sent by Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council Senior General Than Shwe on the occasion of the Peasants Day (2009), it was stated that the agriculture is booming, and the transforming of the country from conventional farming to mechanized farming is on target in terms of manufacturing farm equipment and machinery; that therefore, the nation’s food supply has met the demand for the future population of 100 million, far more than the supply for the present population of over 50 million, and our country is contributing towards the food supply for the world people.

At present, there are 190 dams, 29 sluice gates, 322 river water pumping stations, 7974 underground water tapping stations and 658 small rural dams in the nation. As a result of the emergence of a large number of new irrigation facilities, the nation’s total sown acreage has increased, and the cultivation capacity has jumped.

At such a time, the farmers in cooperation with the entrepreneurs are to set up agricultural zones and reclaim fallow and virgin lands for the success of mechanized farming. And they are to extensively engage in cultivation of high yield crops applying modern agricultural methods. Only then, will the cultivation capacity increase and the agricultural sector improve.

Iraqi Shiites protest local vote in tense province

BAGHDAD, 2 March—

About 2,000 Shiites staged their first significant street protests against provincial election results Sunday, marching in tense Diyala Province.

The demonstrators in the Shiite enclaves of Muqdadiyah and Khalis claimed Shiites were the victims of fraud and were denied seats on the influential provincial council. Under heavy guard, the protesters—waving Iraqi flags and chanting “No to sectarianism”—also demanded the election commission be replaced, alleging a Sunni bias.

The rural province holds a mix of Iraq’s main sectarian and ethnic groups—Sunni Arabs, Shiites and Kurds—and has been a flashpoint for bloodshed among them and attacks on US forces and Iraqi police.

Medvedev wants specific US missile proposals

MOSCOW, 2 March—

Russian President Dmitry Medvedev is expecting specific US proposals on missile defence, one of the main bones of contention between Moscow and Washington, to discuss at his first meeting with President Barack Obama.

The new US administration has said it wants to “press the reset button” on relations with Russia after ties between the two countries sank to a post-Cold War low during the presidency of George W Bush.

Russia, still smarting from what it sees as years of gains by Washington and NATO at its expense in the former communist world, has reacted cautiously.

In particular, Moscow wants to see what the United States will do with the Bush administration’s plans to station systems in NATO allies Poland and the Czech Republic to detect and shoot down hostile missiles.

Russia says this threatens its security.

Medvedev said in an interview given to Spanish media he had received signals from the Obama administration that it wanted to approach the issue of anti-missile weapons in a “more creative and cooperative” way than its predecessor.

Israel threatens painful response to Gaza rockets

JERUSALEM, 2 March—Prime Minister Ehud Olmert threatened a painful response to Palestinian rocket fire menacing southern Israel, suggesting Sunday that the blistering offensive against Gaza Strip militants fell short of its goals.

The prospect of heightened hostilities in Hamas-ruled Gaza cast a pall over a week of crucial diplomatic activity, including an international conference designed to drum up billions of dollars to rebuild the heavily damaged territory. With a new Israeli government to take office within weeks, however, it wasn’t clear how sweeping the country’s response to the rockets would be.

More than 110 rockets and mortar shells have exploded in Israel in the six weeks since it ended its air and ground onslaught against Gaza, which was meant to end the rocket threat and stanch the flow of arms into Gaza. So far, Israel has responded to the rocket fire mainly with airstrikes targeting underground tunnels used to smuggle weapons and other goods into Gaza from Egypt.

On Sunday, Olmert told Gaza’s Islamic militant rulers to expect a severe response if the attacks don’t stop.

The rockets “will be answered with a painful, harsh, strong and uncompromising response from the security forces,” Olmert said at the start of the weekly Cabinet meeting.—Internet

A federal police press statement issued late Saturday said that suspect Primitivo Ramirez Chavez testified that “a pit was dug in order to bury Claudio Conti Bonetti, because during his captivity he was ordered killed.”

But the Public Safety Department did not say who had ordered the killing, if it had been carried out or if officials had located the pit.

At the hand-over cer-eemony, Italian Pre-sident Giorgio Napo-litano handed Medvedev a key to the church, media reports said.

Chang’e-1 was launched into space on 24 Oct, 2007, and sent the first full map of the moon’s surface back to China one month later.

A dozen performance tests were carried out while Chang’e-1 was in orbit to find out its orbit adjustment capability.

Israel allows industrial fuel, cooking gas into Gaza

GAZA, 2 March—The Israeli authorities allowed on Sunday through Nahal Oz depot between eastern Gaza and Israel more amounts of industrial fuels to operate Gaza power station and cooking gas, Gaza officials said.

Mahmoud al-Khozondar, deputy chief of petrol associations in Gaza told reporters that Israel allowed 110 tons of cooking gas, and about half a million litters of industrial diesel used to keep main Gaza power plant operating.

It is the first time that Israel allows such bigger amounts of industrial diesel and cooking gas into the Gaza Strip since the end of a 22-day military offensive on the enclave on 18 January though a tight blockade still imposed on the enclave.

However, al-Khozondar said that “although Israel has increased the amounts of fuels, mainly the cooking gas, but these amounts are still not enough at all for the popula-tions’ daily consumption.”

Since the end of the Is-raeli offensive on 18 Janu-ary, Israel has been par-tially re-opening the commercial crossings on the borders with the Gaza Strip, and only allowing humanitarian aids of food, fuels and medici-nes.

Cambodia’s ex-king cites progress against his cancer

PHNOM PENH, 2 March — Cambodia’s former king Norodom Sihanouk says he is showing progress in his most recent fight against cancer, according to a royal letter posted on his website.

The 86-year-old, who left for Beijing in July last year to receive medical treatment for other illnesses, said in late December that his Chinese doctors had found a new cancer in his body.

Sihanouk said in a letter dated 27 February that after treatment, “today I went to hospital to have it checked with modern equipment (PET Scan) and saw that this cancer has shrunk.”

However he added that he needed to prolong his stay in Beijing for further treatment.

Sihanouk was first diagnosed with B-cell lymphoma, a cancer affecting blood cells crucial to the immune system, in 1993.

The cancer began in his prostate and recurred in 2005 in his stomach.

Hero of flight 1549 must complete testing

Capt Chesley Sullenberger, who safely landed US Airways Flight 1549 in New York’s Hudson River, must retrain before getting back to work, rules say.

The New York Post reported Sunday that, according to Federal Aviation Administration regulations, Sullenberger will only be allowed to pilot airline flights once he has completed three takeoffs and landings.

The takeoffs and landings must all be completed with a 90-day period, but can be conducted in a flight simulator or a real airplane. “He’s going to probably lose his 90-day currency, so he’ll have to come back and train in the simulator,” said Capt James Ray, a US Airline Pilots Association spokesman.

Sullenberger, 58, said following his successful Hudson River landing on 15 Jan that he plans on returning to US Airways at some point. His union informed the Post the pilot’s next scheduled flight is sometime in March.

Researchers find safer way to make stem cells

London, 2 March— Researchers said on Sunday they had found a safer way to transform ordinary skin cells into powerful stem cells in a move that could eventually remove the need to use human embryos.

It is the first time that scientists have turned skin cells into induced pluripotent stem cells or iPS cells — which look and act like embryonic stem cells — without having to use viruses in the process.

The new method also allows for genes that are inserted to trigger cell reprogramming to be removed afterwards. Stem cells are the body’s master cells, producing all the body’s tissues and organs. — Internet

Vegetable-based drug could inhibit melanoma

Washington, 2 March — Compounds extracted from green vegetables such as broccoli and cabbage could be a potent drug against melanoma, according to cancer researchers.

Tests on mice suggest that these compounds, when combined with selenium, target tumors more safely and effectively than conventional therapy.

“There are currently no drugs to target the proteins that trigger melanoma,” said Gavin Robertson, associate professor of pharmacology, pathology and dermatology, Penn State College of Medicine.

“We have developed drugs from naturally occurring compounds that can inhibit the growth of tumors in mice by 50 to 60 percent with a very low dose.”

Robertson and his colleagues previously showed the therapeutic potential of targeting the Akt3 protein in inhibiting the development of melanoma.

The search for a drug to block the protein led them to a class of compounds called isothiocyanates.

These naturally occurring chemicals found in cruciferous vegetables are known to have certain cancer-fighting properties. — Internet

Sydney, 2 March— Nearly 200 whales and several dolphins are stranded on a beach in the southern Australian island state of Tasmania, the latest in a string of beachings in recent months. Rescuers were headed Monday to Naracoopa Beach on Tasmania’s King Island to try to save some of the 194 pilot whales and half a dozen bottlenose dolphins that began beaching themselves on Sunday evening. Some had died by Monday morning, said Chris Arthur from Tasmania’s Parks and Wildlife Service.

“While there are animals alive, there is always hope,” Arthur said.

It was not clear why the animals had beached on the island, halfway between Tasmania and mainland Australia. The Examiner, a Tasmanian newspaper, reported that the animals were caught by a very low tide.

Strandings happen periodically in Tasmania as whales go by during their migration to and from Antarctic waters. However, Arthur said it was unusual for whales and dolphins to get stranded together. — Internet

Indonesia’s psychedelic fish named a new species

Jakarta, 2 March — A funky, psychedelic fish that bounces on the ocean floor like a rubber ball has been classified as a new species, a scientific journal reported.

The frogfish — which has a swirl of tan and peach zebra stripes that extend from its gills to its tail — was initially discovered by scuba diving instructors working for a tour operator a year ago in shallow waters off Amboin island in eastern Indonesia.

The operator contacted Ted Pietsch, lead author of a paper published in this month’s edition of Copeia, the journal of the American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists, who submitted DNA work identifying it as a new species.

The fish — which the University of Washington professor has named “psychedelica” — is a member of the antennariid genus, Histiophyra, and like other frogfish, has fins on both sides of its body that have evolved to be leg-like.

But it has several behavioral traits not previously known to the others, Pietsch wrote.

Each time the fish strikes the seabed, for instance, they push off with their fins and expel water from tiny gill openings to jet themselves forward. That, and an off-centered tail, causes them to bounce around in a bizarre, chaotic manner.

Mark Erdman, a senior adviser to the Conservation International’s marine programme, said on Thursday it was an exciting discovery. — Internet

Scientists modify smallpox vaccine to fight H5N1 bird flu

Hong Kong, 2 March — A team of scientists from the University of Hong Kong and the United States on Sunday said they have developed a new vaccine strategy against the H5N1 bird flu virus by genetically modifying a smallpox vaccine.

The new vaccine is potentially a sound solution in case of an H5N1 bird flu pandemic, which many scientists have been worried about, said Malik Peiris, a microbiologist and bird flu research authority at the University of Hong Kong.

Peiris said that the new vaccine has proven safer in experiments on mice and that “a single vaccine dose will provide rapid protective immune responses.”

It is also expected to enable fast mass production thanks to the possibility of using cell-culture methods, which could help avoid potential production bottlenecks as eggs will have to be used in the production of vaccines currently on offer.

And the existing facilities used for the production of smallpox vaccines can be used to produce the bird flu vaccines without much trouble, which can help reduce the costs, said another member of the research team, adding that alternative strategies available involving genetic engineering methods have been typically expensive. — Internet

Wales midfielder Jack Collison scored the only goal of the game as West Ham United beat visitors Manchester City at Upton Park on Sunday to edge closer to a possible UEFA Cup spot.

The Wales midfielder struck his third goal of the season in the 71st minute to continue the Hammers’ resurgence under boss Gianfranco Zola. However, another defeat for the inconsistent City could turn up the pressure on their manager Mark Hughes as they still have not won away from home in the league since August.

Former Hammers striker Craig Bellamy, roundly boooed by the home fans, failed to score against his old club and was hauled off at the 66th minute. The result moved West Ham up to seventh in the English Premier League table on 36 points, while Manchester City drop to 11th spot, four points behind the east London outfit.—INTERNET
