ELECTION UPDATE
The State Law and Order Restoration Council (SLORC) will not hand over power to the parliament elected on May 27. Readers are, therefore, urged to photocopy the following letter or write a similar letter (copies to your government):

To: Mr. Javier Perez de Cuellar, The United Nations, New York

Ref: The Transfer of Power in Myanmar (Burma).

Dear Mr. de Cuellar,

General Ne Win overthrew a freely elected democratic government in Burma on 2 March 1962. In 1988, the Burmese people called for a return to multi-party democracy. Instead, Ne Win called on General Saw Maung to re-establish control. The New York Times reported that at least 3,000 demonstrators were killed by the army.

To appease international criticism, the Saw Maung military regime on 7 November 1988 promised you and the General Assembly of the United Nations that it would hold free and fair elections and hand over power to an elected parliament.

The election process in Burma did not meet internationally accepted minimum standards for free and fair elections. Hundreds of opposition leaders were arrested and are still in prison. However, foreign journalists allowed to observe the May 27 elections confirm that the balloting was 'clean' in most areas.

The National League for Democracy (NLD) won 396 seats out of the 485 contested and the National Unity Party won 10 seats. It is clear that the Burmese people want the Secretary-General of the NLD, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, to lead their nation.

However, it is equally clear from the Saw Maung regime's latest declaration (SLORC No.1/90, 27 July) that it will not fully honour its pledge to the United Nations.

Can the Myanmar regime be allowed to nullify its pledge by imposing additional conditions to render the results of the elections meaningless? Is it right for a member of the United Nations to treat the organization with such contempt?

Your silence, sir, will signal your consent to such high-handed manipulations. We call on you to protest by not recognizing the delegation from Burma to the General Assembly in September. We also call on your good offices to restore peace in Burma.

First, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and other political prisoners must be released immediately and unconditionally. Second, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and the elected parliament must be allowed to form a government. Third, the military must submit to the civilian government and in return the NLD government will pledge that it will not seek revenge by prosecuting military personnel. Only those who carried out criminal acts will be tried by a court of law. We trust that you will uphold the honour of the United Nations and not let the Burmese people down.

Yours respectfully,
WHY PROTEST TO THE UN?
Some argue that protesting to the UN will not achieve anything. This is not true. Contrary to claims made by General Saw Maung, governments are not 'recognized' or given legal status by the UN. Rather, 'Nation-states' like Burma are recognized by the international community and it is assumed that whoever controls Rangoon is the lawful ruler. We need to point out that the Saw Maung regime practically admitted to the UN in 1988 that it does not have the legal right to rule Burma. After the elections on May 27, SLORC has even less right to be ruling Burma than before.

If we keep quiet, governments will take the most expedient route and continue dealing with the Saw Maung regime. For example, Japan has already given the regime a debt-relief grant of Yen 3.5 billion (US$ 23.5 million). This grant cancelled a payment on Japanese loans which was repaid in March. Although Japanese officials say the grant is not a resumption of aid to Burma and an endorsement of SLORC [F900816], the military saw it differently. The grant was received on July 23 and on July 27, SLORC declared that it would not hand over power to the NLD. The Committee for the Restoration of Democracy in Burma (CRDB) and the International Network for Democracy in Burma (INDB) have strongly condemned the Japanese government. Write to: Toshiki Kaifu, Prime Minister, 2-3-1 Nagata Cho, Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo 100, Japan.

ARE ECONOMIC SANCTIONS AND BOYCOTTS RIGHT?
The legislation to ban US imports of Burmese products (see "Alert No.5") is awaiting approval of Congress and ratification by the President. The bill stipulates that if the junta in Rangoon does not take steps to transfer power to a civilian government and release Aung San Suu Kyi by Oct.1, the President must impose punitive sanctions [R900731]. Write: President George Bush, The White House, Washington D.C. 20500.

Thailand's Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan and others, however, argue that the U.S. should drop its 'hostile attitude' towards Rangoon. Thai Deputy Foreign Minister Prapas Limpabandhu has even argued that sanctions against Rangoon are an example of how 'western' countries impose their version of human rights on 'eastern' countries. He argues that contact and economic integration with the world community will encourage political reform in Burma [N900518-19, 28 & N900613].

The Thai position is self-serving and ignores the reality in Burma. Shooting and torturing those who disagree with you and forcing people at gun-point into slavery is a violation of human rights by any standards - East or West. In any case, the call for sanctions and boycotts is not a 'western' one. All pro-democracy Burmese opposition groups are in favour of it. The Thai government is only fooling itself if it thinks that it is influencing Burma to reform by championing SLORC.

In the East European countries, political ideology has influenced conduct. As events prove the ideology to be flawed, reforms have been introduced. Even in China, a reform-minded faction exists within the communist party. In Burma, a political ideology does not exist. Ne Win dominates the whole scene and ideological slogans are used only as window dressing. Ne Win's prime motivation is power and survival, not ideology. Faced with a mass revolt and international condemnation in 1988, he promised elections and opened up the economy. Like a bully, he gives ground only when he meets greater strength. Even then, the economy was opened up only because it gave him a tactical advantage. Therefore, Thailand can never hope to influence Ne Win. He knows that current Thai-Burmese relations are based purely on economics and greed and he will exploit the situation to the fullest extent. Without force, SLORC is unlikely to give up power. Write: Major General Chatichai Choonhavan, The Prime Minister, Government House, Nakhorn Pathom Road, Bangkok 10200, Thailand.
"THE UNION, NATIONAL SOLIDARITY & SOVEREIGNTY"

SLORC has repeatedly stated that the Tatmadaw's objective is: 1) To prevent the disintegration of the Union, 2) To prevent the disintegration of national solidarity, and 3) To perpetuate the sovereignty of the State. How valid are these claims?

1) Disintegration of the Union

In 1962, Ne Win seized power saying that the Union was in danger of disintegrating because the 1947 Constitution was about to be amended. He ignored the fact that amending the constitution is a legitimate constitutional process. If the 'Federal' movement had wanted to break up the country, as implied by Ne Win, there would have been no need to amend the 1947 Constitution. It already provided for the Shan State which led the 'Federal' movement to secede from the Union.

SLORC is now saying that if the Tatmadaw stepped aside, Burma will disintegrate. In reality, the Tatmadaw has aggravated the disintegration process. The minority peoples can testify that the Tatmadaw's indiscipline and excesses have been the most significant factor in their war against the central government. All minority groups are now fighting Rangoon, whereas before 1962, this was not the case.

If the Tatmadaw continues to hang on to power against the people's will, the Union can only disintegrate further with Burmans fighting Burmans more intensively.

2) Disintegration of National Solidarity

A basis for national solidarity was the Panglong Agreement of 1947. For example, when the Mujahids, the Burman communists parties (Red & White Flag) and the People's Volunteer Organizations revolted in 1948, the minorities rallied firmly behind the government. In fact, it relied on the Karen and Kachin Rifles under the command of Lt.Gen. Smith-Dun, a Karen, to re-exert authority because all the Burman units of the Tatmadaw (except the 4th Burma Rifles) had mutinied.

Again later, when the Karennis, the Mons and the Karens decided to fight for their freedom and some Kachin troops under Naw Seng mutinied, most of the minority leaders expressed solidarity with the Union government because of their commitment to the Panglong Agreement. The Tatmadaw did not play a role in their decision.

To have national solidarity, a government must have the goodwill and support of the people. The Union of Burma cannot be kept together by force. If the Tatmadaw is serious about national solidarity, it should hand over power to the NLD.

3) Perpetuating the Sovereignty of the State

To maintain one's sovereignty, sound financial management is a key requirement. But in 28 years of Tatmadaw rule, Burma, which was one of the richest Asian countries has been reduced to a pauper nation – the 4th poorest in the world.

The Tatmadaw is now also auctioning off Burma's natural resources to the highest bidders without regard for the consequences for the people of Burma. Is this protecting Burma's sovereignty? The Tatmadaw is helping others plunder Burma.

The Tatmadaw then, has not and is not meeting any of its own self-defined objectives. Seizing power is, therefore, clearly not in the 'national interest' even as defined by SLORC. It is time for the Tatmadaw to stop pretending to 'save Burma' and return to its constitutional role of defending the people. Write: Senior General Saw Maung, State Law and Order Restoration Council, Ministry of Defence, Rangoon, Burma.
BURMA NEWS:
In April-June 1990, the entire population of Pagan was forcibly relocated by SLORC to transform the site into a 'history park' for tourists. SLORC is also planning other 'history parks' at Ava, Amarapura, Pegu and Toungoo. Although these plans totally contradict UNESCO recommendations concerning the development of historic sites, SLORC may be using funds from UNESCO and the UNDP for the project [Ps900630].

In spite of international criticism, Thailand repatriated 766 Burmese on June 7. Major Mya Maung Htun confirmed that they were being held in Myawaddy [N900624].
