Protect endangered species

There are over one million species of birds and animals including insects in the world. Myanmar is one of the countries with the richest biodiversity in Asia. Out of 144 endangered species in the world, nine can be found only in Myanmar.

Golden deer that include in the nine species are being protected in Chatthin Sanctuary in Sagaing Division. Though three kinds of species of the golden deer are found in South East Asia, there are now only Myanma golden deer left.

Moreover, the population of tigers worldwide gradually declines. Tiger species can be found only in 13 countries. That is why efforts are being made for establishment of 5,000-mile-long tiger protection corridor for endangered tigers in cooperation with eight Asian countries including Myanmar.

Geographical conditions in Hukaung Valley create a suitable place for survival of the tigers. There are only one hundred tigers in Myanmar. Tiger conservation is being undertaken in Hukaung Valley by Forest Department in cooperation with Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS).

Too much extraction of wildlife, plants and fish, establishment of plantation after clearing the natural forests and pollution endanger the existence of biodiversity in the long run. Therefore all of us need to conserve the environment.

Protection of land and marine resources is our concern. Cutting down trees indiscriminately, hunting and trading of wildlife products are to be controlled systematically. All the people are to participate in the tasks for conservation of rare birds and wildlife.

As more species have been in danger, ecosystems have become unstable or collapsed. People all over the world have to exert greater efforts to protect endangered species.

Iraqi FM says UK troops “doing nothing” in Basra

LONDON, 19 March—Iraq’s Foreign Minister poured scorn on British forces in southern Iraq on Monday, saying they were “doing nothing” and had allowed the city of Basra to be overrun by militants.

Hoshiyar Zebari, speaking in an interview with Britain’s Channel Four news, said foreign troops needed to stay engaged if Iraq was to be stabilized after five years of “rivers of blood”.

Zebari said British troops had “disengaged” in Basra, the country’s second largest city and major port, and that “the militia, the organized crime, is actually making havoc in the city”. Asked if Britain needed to re-engage, he said:

“In my view they do. They should not just sit there and do nothing. There are certain responsibilities, especially at least until the end of this year,” he said.

Britain has around 4,500 troops based in southern Iraq, almost all of them hunkered down on a fortified encampment at Basra air base just outside the city. A garrison of around 500 troops was stationed at a palace in the centre of the city until late last year and tried to maintain order, but came under daily attack from militants.

They were pulled back to the air base on the urging of Iraqi commanders who said their presence in the city was causing more problems than it was solving.

Russia, US fail to agree on missile shield

MOSCOW, 19 March—Russia and the United States failed on Tuesday to agree on US plans to deploy parts of a missile defence shield in Eastern Europe, an issue that has helped drive their relations to a post-Cold War low.

Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said he had agreed with US Secretary of State

Condoleezza Rice at talks in Moscow to study further US proposals that are aimed at allaying Russian concerns about the shield.

But negotiations on those proposals have already been underway for almost six months and time is running out to reach a deal before US President George W Bush’s Administration leaves office in under a year.

“On the matter of principle the positions of our two sides have not changed,” Russian Defence Minister Anatoly Serdyukov said after taking part in more than six hours of talks with Rice, Lavrov and US Defence Secretary Robert Gates.—MNA/Reuters

Armenian MPs tighten law on rallies

YEREVAN, 19 March—Armenia’s Parliament imposed restrictions on holding rallies on Monday, fearing clashes between police and the opposition after a state of emergency expires on Friday.

President Robert Kocharyan declared the 20-day emergency rule in the capital Yerevan on 1 March following mass protests against a 19 February presidential election, which the opposition says was rigged. Eight people were killed and more than 100 were injured in the clashes between police and protesters. “The events in Yerevan on 1 March demonstrated that the existing law (on rallies) has a number of drawbacks which need to be addressed. This is prompted by the lesson we learnt,” Deputy Rafik Petrosyan told Parliament.

Russian demonstrators say US must pay crash victim

VLADIVOSTOK (Russia), 19 March—Members of a pro-Kremlin youth group demonstrated outside a US consulate in Russia’s far east on Monday to support Alexander Kashin, a local man paralyzed in an accident involving a US diplomat’s car.

Kashin, wheelchair-bound since his car was in collision with the vehicle carrying former US consul general Douglas Kent in 1998, has asked for 10 million US dollars compensation for his injuries.

Kashin had previously declared a hunger strike to attract attention to his case, and has said a 100,000-US-dollar compensation offer from the US State Department was “a miserly pittance”.

Holding signs saying ‘Democracy American style is all about money’, a small crowd from the Molodaya Gvardiya (Young Guards) youth group stood for about 30 minutes outside the Vladivostok consulate with Kashin until police ordered them to leave.

Wen deeply worried about world economy

BEIJING, 19 March — Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao said Tuesday he was deeply worried about the world economy, vowing to take flexible and prompt measures amid the changing economic environment.

"I myself watch very closely the development in the world economy and the US economy, and I'm deeply worried," said Wen at a Press conference after the annual session of the National People's Congress (NPC), the top legislature.

He attributed the recent fluctuations of world stock markets to the US sub-prime crisis, which led to the depreciation of the US dollar and interest rate cuts by the US Government, as well as high international oil prices.

"What concerns me now is that the US dollar is depreciating continuously, when the US dollar will reach the bottom in this depreciation process, what kind of monetary policy the US Government will adopt and where the US economy is heading," said Wen.

He said China's monetary and fiscal policies were based on the country's own reality but the government would keep close eyes on latest world economic trends and make flexible, prompt reactions to future changes.

Venezuela wins asset freeze case against Exxon

LONDON, 19 March — A 12-billion-US-dollar freeze on Venezuelan assets awarded to US oil major Exxon Mobil should be lifted, a UK court ruled on Tuesday.

Exxon convinced a court in January to freeze the assets of Venezuela's state oil company so cash would be available if it won arbitration over an oil field which was lost in President Hugo Chavez' nationalization drive.

But after hearing Petroleos de Venezuela's arguments, the judge ruled against Exxon.

"The injunction granted against the defendant, Petroleos de Venezuela, should be discharged," Justice Paul Walker told the court.

The world's largest non-government controlled oil company by market value, Exxon has the right to appeal but its lawyers declined to comment immediately on whether they would do so.

PDVSA's lawyers also declined immediate comment.

Venezuela's Ambassador to Britain, who arrived shortly after the ruling, answered with just one word when he heard the result: "Excellento".

TOKYO, 18 March — Japan and Peru held their first summit in nine years on Monday as the two countries began to defrost ties long chilled by recriminations over former Peruvian president Alberto Fujimori.

Those who are like a certain person in the tale

An Observer

Myanmar is now working step by step for ensuring smooth transition to democracy. The people will have an opportunity to approve the draft of the State constitution of the Union of Myanmar in a referendum due to be held in coming May.

In the past, Myanmar approved and exercised two constitutions—the 1947 constitution and the 1974 constitution. Now, the two constitutions no longer conform to the prevailing situations of the nation, and they have been defunct.

After taking up State duties on 18 September 1988, the Tatmadaw laid down the four primary tasks. With a view to accomplishing one of the four primary tasks: successfully holding multi-party democracy general elections, the Elections Holding Commission was formed on 21 September 1988.

On 27 September 1988, Political Parties Registration Law was promulgated. The government granted permission to form political parties in accordance with the law for holding elections on a grand scale. The number of registered parties stood at 235.

On 23 February 1990, the government promulgated an order on the rights to gather people and canvass for votes to enable the candidate political parties and independent candidates to canvass for votes by presenting their policies, stances and work programmes to the public.

Of the 235 parties, 102 dissolved themselves of their own accord, three were dissolved due to their contacts with the Burma Communist Party, six were dissolved due to their failure to stand for election in at least three constituencies, and 31 were prorogued for neither dissolving themselves nor standing for election, totalling 142.

The remaining 93 parties presented their policies and stances to the people in the electoral campaigns. According to a survey, of the remaining parties, seven said that they would exercise the 1947 constitution with some amendments, whereas 31 said that they would draw a new constitution, and 44 were expected to favour drawing a new one.

The purpose of my recounting those past evidences is to point out some facts that Myanmar is now in need of a constitution, the people are willing to transform the nation from Socialism and planned economy into democracy and market economy. And in compliance with the wishes of the people, it was impossible to exercise the 1947 constitution or the 1974 constitution with amendments.

So, the National Convention was convened with representatives of national races, representatives of political parties, representatives-elect, representatives of the people from all strata of life, and representatives of national race peace groups, and the fundamental principles and detailed basic principles were adopted with one voice and then the State constitution (2008) was drafted.

Before laying down fundamental principles and detailed basic principles, the National Convention delegates studied the constitutions of over 100 countries and worked hard to ensure an international standard constitution in the interests of the nation and the people, taking lessons from the defects and loopholes of the previous constitutions.

The 1947 constitution is made up of 14 chapters and 234 sections, the 1974 constitution, 16 chapters and 209 articles, and the forthcoming constitution, 15 chapters and 457 sections.

The 1947 constitution carried 23 sections on citizenship, fundamental rights and duties of citizens, the 1974 constitution, 26 articles, and the draft constitution, 50 sections.

Regarding the rights of national races, the 1947 constitution prescribed only four states namely Kachin, Kayah, Kayin and Shan states. The 1974 constitution prescribed three more states—Chin, Mon and Rakhine states. The draft constitution enumerates one self-administered division and five self-administered zones in addition to seven states.

These are not all. National races will have the rights to establish region and state hluttaws, governing bodies, and region and state high courts.

Similarly, the self-administered division and self-administered zones will be vested with the right to form respective leading bodies and to exercise legislative and executive powers. The draft constitution also stipulates the rights for ethnic minorities who have not got a region, state or self-administered division or zone yet.

Every national race which constitutes 0.1 percent of the population of the State, will have the rights to make law by representing respective national races at the region or state hluttaw concerned. The representatives will become ministers for national races affairs of the region or state governing body concerned. Every national race, which is upwards of at least 10,000, will have the right to represent the national race concerned as leading body member in the self-administered division or self-administered zone where they reside.

Studying what I have presented, a citizen can visualize the democracy essence of the draft constitution (2008), with which the people will be able to approve their rights themselves. Now, the experimental period has elapsed and a prosperous future is ahead of the nation and the people.

By the way, I would like to present a tale. One day, two travellers set out together. On the way, they found bundles of grass by chance, and took some of them just in case they would need them later. They proceeded and again found bundles of paddy ears unexpectedly. The first person left grass bundles and took some bundles of paddy ears, whereas the other continued to carry only grass bundles with the attachment that the grass bundles were the things he had carried for long.

At one place on their way, they again found gold blocks. Then, the first one gave up bundles of paddy ears and took gold bars, while the other also continued to carry grass bundles with the attachment to the things he had been carrying along the route. The tale gives the readers a lesson “to make a correct choice”.

I recently read an article “BCP constantly committing acts posing danger to the nation”, which says that Burma Communist Party UGs and leftist politicians are instigating the people not to vote for the draft of the State constitution.

I would say that in Myanmar, there are the sort of people who are like the second person in the tale.

Iraqi crisis fuels rise in asylum seekers

GENEVA, 19 March — A five-year downward trend in asylum applications in industrialized countries reversed in 2007, largely due to an increase in the number of Iraqi asylum seekers, the UN refugee agency said Tuesday.

Some 338,000 new applications for refugee status were submitted last year in 43 industrialized countries, a 10-per-cent rise compared with 2006, which saw the fewest number of applications in 20 years, said the UN High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) in a statement.

“The overall downward trend in asylum applications was offset last year by a large increase in the number of asylum seekers from Iraq,” the Geneva-based agency said.

According to the agency, Iraqis topped the list of asylum seekers in the world’s industrialized countries for the second year running. The number of Iraqis applying for asylum almost doubled in one year, from 22,900 in 2006 to 45,200 last year.

However, the number represents only 1 per cent of the estimated 4.5 million Iraqis uprooted by the domestic conflict, the UNHCR added.

Those include more than 2.5 million people displaced within Iraq and another two million in neighbouring countries such as Syria and Jordan.

The United States was the main destination for asylum seekers of all nationalities in 2007, with an estimated 49,200 new asylum claims, accounting for 15 per cent of all applications in industrialized countries.

Misbehaving British teens to be hit with “baby ASBOs”

LONDON, 19 March — Troubled teenagers as young as 10 would be hit with anti-social behaviour orders under a government plan unveiled on Tuesday to fight youth crime.

About 1,000 of the country’s “most challenging” children will be forced to sign good behaviour contracts under the 218-million-pound programme, Children’s Secretary Ed Balls said.

Under the expansion of the Family Intervention Projects, failure to abide by the contract will lead to a criminal record, or a so-called “baby ASBO”.

Critics have said such orders do not properly tackle anti-social behaviour, as many teenagers view them as a “badge of honour”.

The announcement comes just days after a senior Scotland Yard officer called for a national child DNA database to stamp out youth crime.

Panamanian police arrest 3 suspected of money smuggling

PANAMA CITY, 19 March — Panamanian police said Monday that they had arrested three people suspected of trying to smuggle 11.9 million US dollars to the country.

The arrested were Enrique Silva from Nicaragua, Indian Ashock Ladhara and Panamanian Alcibiades Moreno, police said, adding they were chasing another Indian suspect who was still at large.

Mexican authorities seized the money during an inspection of a Liberia-flagged ship bound for Panama and which was anchored in the northeast port of Mexico.

The arrests were made after an investigation launched by Mexican police showed that the cash could be connected to a money-laundering scheme involving a company based in Panama’s Colon free-trade zone, police said.

Floods displace thousands in east Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, 19 March — Floods triggered by torrential rain have forced more than 7,000 people from their homes in eastern Sri Lanka, with some taking shelter in schools and mosques, officials said on Tuesday.

Flooding and ensuing mass displacement are common in Sri Lanka, often fuelled by monsoon rains.

The latest flood victims included families living in basic camps, who had already been displaced by renewed war between the state and Tamil Tiger rebels.

“A total of 7,200 people have been displaced in Batticaloa due to the heavy rains,” said Keerthi Ekanayake, national coordinator at the National Disaster Management Centre.

“Of those there are about 600-700 people who were in IDP (internally displaced) camps who were already displaced by battles,” he added.

Israeli, Palestinian negotiators meet to resume peace talks

JERUSALEM, 18 March — Israeli and Palestinian negotiating teams met on Monday in an effort to resume peace talks, local daily Jerusalem Post reported on its website.

Ahmed Qurei, chief Palestinian negotiator, said he downgraded the meeting to unofficial as a protest against the Israeli construction plans.

Prior to the meeting, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert said during a joint Press conference with visiting German Chancellor Angela Merkel that Israel would continue to build homes in the east Jerusalem neighbourhood of Har Homa, calling Har Homa an “inseparable” part of Jerusalem.

“We completely reject the building, not only one room, but also one brick in any of the Israeli settlements in the West Bank and east Jerusalem,” Qurei was quoted as saying.

Only Qurei and Israeli Foreign Minister Tzipi Livni attended the two-hour meeting, Livni’s spokesman Arye Mekel said.

French police make arrests in Paris suburb raids

PARIS, 19 March — Hundreds of French police raided homes in a Paris suburb on Monday and arrested 16 people after an incident earlier this month in which four officers were injured, authorities said. Nine minors were among those arrested in the early morning raid, which involved up to 200 police in Grigny, south of Paris.

The four officers were hurt on 2 March after being confronted by a group of people gathered near a baker’s shop that had been vandalized. Three officers were hit in the face by lead shot and a fourth was hit in the leg by shot and nails.

Interior Minister Michele Alliot-Marie stressed in a statement her “strong determination not to leave unpunished attacks on the forces of order, particularly those committed with fire-arms”.

The police raid, which was accompanied by journalists and television cameras, followed a similar operation last month in which more than 30 people were arrested on suspicion of involvement in violent clashes with police in the suburb of Villers-le-Bel in November.

Venezuela’s Navy plans to build torpedos, mines

CARACAS, 18 March — Venezuela plans to build its own torpedoes to arm submarines and frigates, the navy on Monday, the latest move by President Hugo Chavez to modernize the military.

Chavez, a relentless critic of the United States, rattled nerves earlier this month when he briefly ordered tank battalions to the border in a spat with Colombia during a diplomatic crisis.

The Venezuelan Navy said on its website it was developing a project to design and build heavy torpedoes for two submarines and lighter missiles for its frigates.

It also plans to build underwater mines, radar and sonar systems as part of a project to modernize its small fleet.

Venezuela has bought Russian-built fighter jets and other weaponry in recent years to strengthen its Armed Forces.

Chavez, an outspoken critic of the United States who accuses Washington of plotting to overthrow his government, says the arms purchases are needed to replace aging equipment. —MNA/Reuters

“While Ms Sebire’s physical deterioration deserves compassion, under French law the judge must reject the request.”

New technique holds promise for rare eye cancer

CHICAGO, 19 March — An experimental technique for a rare eye cancer has saved some children from losing their eyes and even restored vision in a few cases, US researchers said on Monday.

After threading a catheter through the body to the eye, doctors delivered a drug directly to retinoblastoma tumours through an artery in the eye. This allowed them to administer a much larger dose of the chemotherapy drug melphalan, made by GlaxoSmithKline under the brand name Alkeran, than is normally given intravenously, they said.

Dr Pierre Gobin of New York-Presbyterian Hospital/Weill Cornell Medical Centre in New York, said the technique offers a “tremendous advance” in treating retinoblastoma, which often involves removing the eyes to keep the cancer from spreading. “It allows many children to keep their eyes and—in some cases—restores vision,” Gobin said in a statement.

Study sees more overlap in US news coverage

NEW YORK, 18 March — The US news media, whittled down after a year of extensive layoffs at newspapers and television outlets, focuses on a far narrower band of news despite audience demand for a variety of information, according to a study released on Monday.

In its fifth annual study titled the “State of the American News Media”, the Washington-based Project for Excellence in Journalism found US audiences still most interested in news from well-established outlets such as the New York Times or Washington Post as they read more on the Internet.

But as those organizations cut jobs to contend with declining advertising and circulation, the pattern that emerges is a stronger focus on a handful of headline topics.

“Even with the revolution of information, we may have no wider ... a news agenda than we used,” Tom Rosenstiel, the PEJ’s director, told Reuters.

“Although it is fragmented across traditional media, the staff at any one of these news organizations tends to be shrinking,” he said. —MNA/Reuters

Brazil destroys 7,000 coca crops in Amazon region

RIO DE JANEIRO, 19 March — The Brazilian military has burned out 7,000 coca crops found last week in Tabatinga in the northern state of Amazonas state, the military said on Monday.

This was the first time that an Andean species of coca has been detected in Brazil’s territory, where only another species, the “epadu,” had been registered and has a smaller capacity to produce cocaine, according to the Eighth Jungle Infantry Regiment. The plantation where the destroyed coca plants grew was tracked by satellites in the forest, near the Peruvian border, and occupied an area of two hectares.

Previously, military authorities said the plantation had a total area of 100 to 150 hectares.

The plants were almost ready to be harvested. A laboratory equipped with all the necessary devices to produce cocaine was also discovered at the site.

Experts said that coca plantations in Brazil might be part of a plan designed by drug-trafficking cartels in Colombia to transfer coca-growing plantations to other areas in order to escape fumigations in their home country. So far coca plantations have mainly been found in countries neighbouring Brazil, such as Colombia and Bolivia.

WHO says TB killed 1.7 million globally in 2006

WASHINGTON, 19 March — The rate of tuberculosis incidence fell slightly worldwide for a second straight year in 2006, but there were still 9.2 million new cases and the disease killed 1.7 million people, the UN health agency said on Monday.

The rate decline of 0.6 per cent in 2006 compared to 2005 was so modest that the increase in the world’s population meant there were actually more TB cases globally, the World Health Organization said in its annual report on tuberculosis.

And WHO officials cited worrisome trends suggesting that recent progress was stalling, while saying more money is needed to fight TB, which trails only AIDS as the world’s leading killer among infectious diseases.

By region, Africa had the highest TB rates while Asia had the most cases. By nation, India had the most cases, followed by China, Indonesia, South Africa and Nigeria, according to the report based on data from 202 countries and territories.

The data came out a month after another WHO report showed that TB cases that defy existing drugs were occurring globally at the highest rates ever, with nearly 490,000 cases in 2006. Parts of the former Soviet Union were particularly vulnerable.

US denies Indonesia’s allegation on bird flu samples

JAKARTA, 18 March — The United States has flatly denied allegations it was producing biological weapons from bird flu samples sent by Indonesia to the World Health Organization, the English daily The Jakarta Post reported Monday.

Michael H Anderson, counselor for Public Affairs at the US Embassy in Indonesia, has explained the US has undertaken “not to develop, produce, stockpile, or otherwise acquire or retain microbial or other biological agents or toxins of types and in quantities that have no justification for prophylactic, protective, and other peaceful purposes, as well as weapons and means of delivery”.

The US is a party to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, which entered into force on 26 March, 1975.

However, Indonesian senior biodefense researcher Isro Samihardjo said the US could use bird flu virus samples from Indonesia to develop weapons at the Los Alamos Laboratory.

Isro was speaking at a meeting about Health Minister Siti Fadilah Supari’s newly released book here Saturday. In her book It’s Time for the World to Change, Divine Hands behind Bird Flu, Siti writes of her suspicions about a conspiracy between the US and the WHO.

S Africa to spend over $3.7b on World Cup

JOHANNESBURG, 19 March — South Africa will spend around 30 billion rand (3.7 billion US dollars) on hosting the 2010 World Cup, according to a report released on Tuesday.

"This report shows we have complied with literally every guarantee we have made, we even went beyond that," Sports Minister Mike Stofile told the SAPA news agency.

About 20 billion rand had already been made available for infrastructure investment, added Stofile at a ceremony to hand over the 2010 mid-term government report to the country's deputy president.

South Africa is spending billions to build new stadiums and upgrade others but there has been concern high levels of violent crime and construction delays might cast a cloud over the finals.

There have also been fears South Africa's power crisis might black out the World Cup although officials have said all stadiums will have power for the tournament.

Feyenoord beat NAC 2-0 to reach Dutch Cup final

ROTTERDAM (Netherlands), 19 March — Feyenoord reached their first Dutch Cup final in five years with a 2-0 win over NAC Breda thanks to second-half goals by Michael Mols and Denny Landzaat on Tuesday.

Feyenoord went ahead nine minutes after the interval when captain Giovanni Van Bronckhorst recovered the ball in midfield and set up 37-year-old Mols to open the scoring.

A brilliant piece of skill from Landzaat set-led the match 15 minutes from time when he rounded a defender before beating NAC goalkeeper Ten Rouwelaar with a superb lob.

Paris St Germain reach French Cup quarters

PARIS, 19 March — Two goals by Boris Arnaud gave Paris St Germain a 2-1 win over Ligue 2 side Bastia on Tuesday and a place in the French Cup quarterfinals.

The 20-year-old Arnaud was the brightest player in a mostly inexperienced home team and opened the scoring after 18 minutes only for Pierre-Yves Andre to equalize for the Corsicans with a stunning 25-metre volley five minutes later.

However, the PSG striker netted the winner when he latched onto a Sylvain Armand cross from the left in the 67th minute. The win is a morale boost for PSG, who are 17th in Ligue 1, ahead of a tricky trip to leaders Olympique Lyon on Sunday. — MNA/Reuters

Krankl says Austria need luck to progress at Euro '08

VIENNA, 19 March — Co-hosts Austria will be lucky to get past the group stages of Euro 2008, former coach Hans Krankl said on Tuesday.

"There is always the chance with a little bit of luck, and if they are successful in their first game, something which we believed would not have been possible might happen," he told reporters.

"But one should be realistic, if they survive the group stage this would be a great, great success," said Krankl, who coached the team from 2002-05.

Dortmund beat Jena to reach German Cup final

BERLIN, 19 March — Bundesliga side Borussia Dortmund beat 10-man Carl Zeiss Jena of the Second Division 3-0 in a German Cup semifinal on Tuesday.

They will play the winners of Wednesday's semifinal between Bayern Munich and VfL Wolfsburg in next month's final in Berlin.

Brazil midfielder Tinga headed in a rebound in the 13th minute for Dortmund, who last won the Cup in 1989, after Jena's Belarus goalkeeper Vasili Khomutovski batted away a Mladen Petric shot.

Jena -- which had reached the semifinals by knocking out Bundesliga sides VfB Stuttgart, Nuremberg and Arminia Bielefeld -- put up a brave fight in the rain at Dortmund before a Cup record crowd of 80,708.

But Jena were reduced to 10 men when playmaker Jan Simak was sent off with two yellow cards for complaining about a foul in the 51st minute.

Diego Klimowicz tapped in a rebound off a Florian Krings shot in the 70th minute and Petric got the third goal three minutes from time.— MNA/Reuters

Aberdeen dump holders Celtic out of Scottish Cup

GLASGOW, 19 March — Aberdeen knocked holders Celtic out of the Scottish Cup 1-0 thanks to a second-half goal by Darren Mackie at Celtic Park on Tuesday.

Mackie latched onto a knockdown by substitute Lee Mair inside the penalty area after 69 minutes to fire a low shot under Celtic's Polish goalkeeper Artur Boruc.

Aberdeen will meet Second Division Queen of the South in the semifinals on the weekend of 12 and April 13.

Celtic's Australian striker Scott McDonald had come close in a scrappy first half when he fastened onto a fine back-heeled pass by Dutchman Jan Vennegoor of Hesselink only to swerve his 10-metre low shot narrowly around the far post after 39 minutes.

Aberdeen hit back five minutes later when Celtic skipper Stephen McManus's poor backpass allowed Ricky Foster to charge in on goal but Boruc raced out to block. However, there was nothing the Pole could do to stop Mackie firing home the winner.

St Mirren suffered a 3-1 home defeat against Second Division St Johnstone in their quarter-final replay.

St Johnstone had the tie wrapped up inside the first half hour as Rocco Quinn rifled a marvellous 18-metre volley into the top corner for the opener after 13 minutes.

Striker Andy Jackson cracked the second high into the net after 20 minutes and eight minutes later Peter MacDonald rifled a shot from 25 metres into the bottom corner.

St Johnstone's Paul Sheerin had a penalty saved by goalkeeper Chris Smith five minutes after the break before Billy Mehmet pulled a goal back for St Mirren 20 minutes later.

St Johnstone's semifinal opponenets will be Rangers or Second Division Partick Thistle, who play on Wednesday.

Spacewalk complete, Canadian robot tooled up

HOUSTON, 19 March — Dextre the handyman space robot now has the tools of his trade and is ready for work.

Astronauts from the shuttle Endeavour outfitted the International Space Station's newly installed robotic maintenance man with tools and cameras during a spacewalk that ended early on Tuesday.

Veteran spacewalker Richard Linnehan and rookie Robert Behnken were back in the station after an outing of almost seven hours.

“It’s a pretty awesome view just looking down on everything,” Linnehan commented at one point as the duo floated in space over 200 miles above the planet.

It was the third of five spacewalks scheduled for Endeavour's busy 12-day visit to the orbital outpost. It was not all smooth sailing.

The astronauts battled to secure a science experiment outside of Europe's Columbus laboratory and in the end took it back to the shuttle's payload bay.

The Canadian-built robot, dubbed Dextre, was assembled during the mission's second spacewalk. It resembles a humanoid stick figure with gangly 11-foot (3.4 metre) arms.

NASA says it will save astronauts from much of the routine maintenance they currently do on arduous and potentially dangerous spacewalks, enabling them to devote more time to the experiments and other scientific activities.

Tigers kill six Bangladeshis near Sundarbans

KHULNA (Bangladesh), 19 March — Tigers stalking into Bangladesh villages around Sundarbans mangrove forests have killed six people and mauled 12 others over the last two months, forest officials said on Tuesday.

In the latest incident a fisherman was killed on Monday at Satkhali Village near the vast swampy forest some 500 kilometres (312 miles) southwest of the capital Dhaka.

The Sundarbans is a UNESCO World Heritage site and home to the Royal Bengal tiger.

The victims were attacked while they were either fishing or farming near the forests.

A tiger was trapped alive by people at Goripur Village and handed over to Forest Department to return it to the swampy forest.

In December a Royal Bengal tiger, an endangered species, was killed in a confrontation with villagers at a village. Four people were also injured in the confrontation.

Forest officials said tigers sneaking into villages mainly at night has increased following the deadly cyclone that hit Bangladesh coasts late last year.

“The straying of tigers has increased in recent months. Maybe they are coming out of forests in search of food,” a senior forest official said.
