The United States government is committed to supporting the development of media freedom and professional standards in Myanmar. In line with this commitment, the U.S. government is pleased to announce the launch of a new media training program aimed at enhancing the capacity of local media organizations to produce high-quality, impartial news content.

The program, which is being delivered by the U.S. Department of State’s Bureau of International Information Programs (IIP), will provide hands-on training on a range of topics, including ethics, investigative reporting, and digital media. Participants will also have the opportunity to network with other media professionals and access resources to help them improve their skills.

“Supporting a free and independent media is crucial to ensuring a healthy democracy,” said Ambassador Pyatt. “We are pleased to be able to support the development of media organizations in Myanmar, and we hope that this training will help to build a strong, independent media sector that can serve the needs of the country.”

The program is part of the U.S. government’s broader commitment to supporting media freedom in Myanmar. In addition to funding media training programs, the U.S. government has also provided support for media organizations through grants and other assistance. These efforts are aimed at helping to create a more open and transparent media environment in Myanmar.

The U.S. government is committed to supporting media freedom and professional standards in Myanmar. We believe that a free and independent media is essential to ensuring a healthy democracy and promoting human rights. We look forward to seeing the results of this new program and continue to support efforts to build a strong, independent media sector in Myanmar.
