WHO WE ARE

Southern Monitor is an independent research group that monitors socio-economic, peace, and human rights issues in Tanintharyi Region of Myanmar. This report is based on primary data collection from the field, and secondary data sources which include news from mainstream and local media. We also monitor social media pages of strike committees, student unions, civil society organizations, humanitarian support groups, and local people's defense forces operating in the region. This report is prepared by a technical team, in consultation with local partners and field monitors.

BACKGROUND

Tanintharyi Region is located in Southeastern Myanmar, bounded by Mon State to the north, Thailand to the east and south, and the Andaman Sea to the west. Tanintharyi Region, formerly known as Tenasserim Division, is a long and narrow strip of land along Myanmar's coastline and has a distinct positioning among the regions in Myanmar due to its proximity to the border with Thailand. The region was previously divided into three districts: Dawei (Tavoy), Myeik, and Kawthoung. Dawei and Myeik are the significant economic, political, and social hubs of the region.

According to government statistics, Tanintharyi Region has a population of 1,426,426, with 76% of the population living in rural areas.² The region is sparsely populated given that the land consists of mountainous terrain. Most rural populations live near the coast, or along one of the rivers and tributaries. The fishery sector is a main livelihood of the region, alongside rubber and palm oil plantations, and tourism. Despite the absence of frequent armed clashes in Tanintharyi Region, local populations have endured several decades of displacement, as a result of military operations, land confiscation, and commercial investment projects. Land confiscation and arbitrary taxation allegedly carried out by both the Myanmar military and the KNU were the major drivers of displacement in Tanintharyi Region. Despite the relative stability compared to other regions in Southeastern Myanmar, the large-scale rubber and oil plantations have prevented segments of the local population from residing in their desired locations.

A vast area of Tanintharyi Region is considered as Mergui-Tavoy (Myeik-Dawei) District, under the administration of KNU Brigade 4, although the map of the area endorsed by the KNU does not correspond directly with official government boundaries³. The KNU's territorial control has been historically scattered along areas bordering Thailand. The New Mon State Party (NMSP)'s operational area is limited to the northern parts of the region in Yebyu Township near the official border with Mon State. The Karen National Liberation Army (KNLA) and the Karen National Defense Organisation (KNDO) are strategically significant, especially after the military coup on February 1, 2021. KNLA and KNDO territories have provided: refuge for political dissidents, a home for the influx of resistance groups, and safe passage for displaced populations.

³ This refers to the official government boundaries recognized by the NLD government. The administrative divisions of Tanintharyi Region (Tenasserim Region) of the state government are made of Dawei District, Myeik District, and Kawthoung District. The State Administration Council designated Bokpyin to be a district after the coup.

Non-violent Movements in February 2023

Tanintharyi Region has continued to be one of the strongholds for non-violent movements, marking two years of military rule with “silent strikes” across all districts in the region on 1 February 2023. Meanwhile, the SAC extended the state of emergency in Myanmar and announced martial law in a total of 37 townships across the country, including Palaw and Tanintharyi townships of Tanintharyi Region.

Due to the presence of silent strikes, the number of non-violent movements reported in February 2023 increased, compared to previous months. A total of 50 non-violent movements were reported, with the majority in Launglon Township. Streets in cities across Tanintharyi Region were quiet after protesters urged local populations to stay indoors during business hours (9am-5pm). Although the protesters asked businesses to close in the previous silent strike, in most places, they did not ask the businesses to do so this time in order to avoid retaliation by the junta forces against the business and shop owners. The silent strikes were considered to be a prominent form of demonstration that defied the coup regime, State Administration Council (SAC)’s attempt to normalize the situation. Night protests were reported on the day in Launglon Township; members of the local PDFs and the local protesters assembled in the township, going mobile on their motorbikes and chanting anti-coup slogans.⁴ Similar protests in which members of the local PDFs and local protesters jointly staged the protests to mark the second anniversary of the coup were reported in Tanintharyi Township on 2 February 2023.⁵

In addition to the protests staged to mark the anniversary of the military rule, local protesters led by Dawei District Democracy Movement Strike Committee had also organized demonstrations in Launglon township on the subsequent days.⁶ On 7 February 2023, members of the Democracy Movement Strike Committee commemorated the 2nd anniversary of the establishment of the strike committee. Local protesters, students and women took part in the protests marking the anniversary in Launglon Township. The members of the strike committee pledged that they will strive to extend non-violent movements to other parts of the region and gain a greater momentum of unarmed resistance of the local populations in the region. The strike committee consisted of township chapters of the strike committee, Basic Education Students' Union (BESU) and Rose Color Women Movement committee among others.⁷ Rose Color Women Movement Committee has been active not only in collaborating with other local strike committees but also leading additional protests in Launglon Township on 26 February 2022.⁸ On 28 February 2022, protesters gathered in a high school in Launglon township to commemorate the 2 year death anniversary of four local protesters during the crackdown on demonstrations by the junta forces in Dawei District.⁹

CONFLICT TRENDS

The number of armed clashes between local resistance groups (People's Defense Forces)¹⁰ and junta forces during February 2023 have slightly increased, compared to January 2023. A total of 37 clashes erupted across Tanintharyi Region, including Bokpyin Township, where there were no or few numbers of clashes reported in the previous months. In this month, a significant increase in offensives by junta forces, troop reinforcements and use of heavy weaponry were reported across Tanintharyi Region, especially in Palaw and Tanintharyi Townships, where the State Administration Council (SAC) declared martial law on 2 February 2023. Similar to the conflict trends reported last month, the majority of the clashes between the local PDFs and junta forces erupted following remote violence attacks on junta outposts; these attacks were launched by the local PDFs. The local PDFs based in Palaw, Dawei, and Launglon Townships continued to gain momentum in armed resistance, through the use of remote violence, ambushes on junta outposts, and targeted killings. The junta forces heavy-handedly responded to the attacks by launching heavy artillery targeted towards residential areas in villages and towns.

The SAC declared martial law in a total of 37 townships across the country, including Palaw and Tanintharyi Townships of Tanintharyi Region. Subsequently, there were increased troop reinforcements and fortified military operations in those townships, resulting in heightened tensions between the junta forces and local resistance groups in Palaw and Tanintharyi Townships. According to local sources, approximately 400 junta troops were deployed to the areas where the clashes were reported. In Palaw town of Palaw Township alone, there were more than 200 junta soldiers deployed during the first week of February 2023.¹¹ In fact, intensified clashes reportedly erupted consecutively during 7-10 February 2023 in Palaw Township. Increased junta troop reinforcements and military operations, as well as supplies of ammunition and rations, were also observed by the local sources in Palaw, Tanintharyi, and parts of Myeik Township. The junta forces launched heavy artillery strikes during and after clashes with the local PDFs.

¹⁰ According to data collected by Southern Monitor, there are more than 35 local people's defense groups, and dozens of anti-coup resistance groups that have emerged in the region. Under the guidance of the National Unity Government (NUG), People's Administrations and People's Defense Forces were established in almost all townships of Tanintharyi Region.

The incidence of civilian casualties has continued to rise in Tanintharyi Region. Some casualties were due to the junta forces' targeted killings against members of the local resistance groups and any civilians whom they suspected to be involved in, or supporting, the anti-coup movement. The other were the results of targeted killings by the local resistance groups against military-appointed administrators and alleged members of the pro-regime militia, Pyu Saw Htee group. A total of 34 civilians were killed and another 10 civilians sustained injuries due to attacks targeting civilians were reported in February 2023. In February 2023, there were incidents and attacks targeting civilians which no groups had claimed responsibilities for.

Additionally, in both urban and rural settings, the junta forces continued to enforce draconian laws and stringent regulations on a wide scale, making local populations even more vulnerable. Enforcement of these regulations has led to more indiscriminate shooting, arrests, detention, confiscation of motorbikes, and fines of both small and large sums. Local sources stated that they observed an increased presence of junta soldiers and police across major towns including Dawei, Myeik, and Kawthoung. As a result, civilians are at high risk of being fined by junta soldiers and traffic police, even when there is no apparent breach of laws and regulations. As the grassroots populations in major towns struggle to make their ends meet, the fines cause even bigger strain on their finances.

Local Karen ethnic civil society organizations in Tanintharyi Region called on the conflict between Karen Nation Union (KNU) and its breakaway armed faction, Kaw Thoo Lei Army (KTLA) to be resolved by meetings between high-level leaders of both sides. The local CSOs urged that the two groups remember civilians' sufferings due to the conflicts in the past and they must choose positive negotiations to resolve the conflict.¹² The International Karen Organization (IKO), a network of Karen expatriates had also urged the KNU Brigade 4 and Kaw Thoo Lei Army to cease fighting, as the tensions between the two groups heightened in the recent months.

Armed Clashes

From April 2021 to February 2023, there were a total of 358 clashes reported in Tanintharyi Region. A total of 33 armed clashes erupted in Tanintharyi Region in February 2023. The clashes were reported in all townships across the region except Kyunsu and Bokpyin townships.

Major Incidents in February 2023

Myeik District

Palaw Township

- A clash between local PDFs and junta forces erupted near the junta-controlled General Administration Department (GAD) building in Palaw town and Tan Shin Village on 3 February 2023. The local PDFs and junta forces exchanged fire for an hour before the local PDFs withdrew their troops. Afterwards, the junta forces continued launching heavy artillery towards Tan Shin and Thin Gan Taw Villages in Palaw Township.¹³ Frequent clashes have erupted in the area since December 2022.

The junta forces' artillery strike after the clash killed a 65-year-old woman and injured a child in Tan Shin Village on 3 February 2023.¹⁴ The junta forces launched artillery shells at the villages in the area, even when there was no active conflict.

- Another clash was reported in Palaw town on 7 February 2023; two clashes between the local PDFs and junta forces were reported in two residential wards near To Village in Palaw town. The junta forces launched artillery shelling during and after the clashes.¹⁵
- On the following day on 9 February 2023, additional clashes were reported in To, Pi Tat, Mya Daung, and Pa Wut Kone Villages and incidents of junta forces burning down houses were reported.¹⁶ A clash between an alliance of local PDFs led by the Karen National Defense Organization (KNDO) and the junta forces erupted on 9 February 2023. The junta forces' artillery strike towards Pa Wut Kone Village during the clash injured a 15-year-old boy, likely leading to limb amputations.¹⁷ (Field Monitor Notes)
- Increased troop reinforcements of junta forces led to clashes between the junta forces and the local PDF in Ka De Village in Palaw Township on 15 February 2023. The junta forces' disproportionate manpower and use of heavy weaponry forced the PDFs of Myeik District Battalion (1) to retreat from the village, which has been one of their strongholds in the township.¹⁸ The SAC's Information Team stated that the junta forces rescued a total of 13 civilians detained by the Palaw-based PDFs on 16 February 2023. According to the statement, a veteran, a teacher, and other civil servants were among the 13 civilians detained by the local PDFs.¹⁹

The junta soldiers burned down civilians' houses on 16 February 2023: almost all civilians' houses in the village were destroyed in the fire. The junta forces withdrew their forces from Ka De Village to Thin Gan Taw Village. However, the junta forces continued to launch heavy artillery in the area. According to a local source, civilians were not in the village at the time of the incident. They had fled their homes in fear of frequent clashes and tensions between local PDFs and junta forces in the village and nearby areas. Local PDFs also warned the local populations to leave their homes and seek refuge in relatively safer areas of the region, prior to the development of armed clashes in the area.²⁰

- On 19 February 2023, fighting between local PDFs and junta forces resumed in Nan Taung Village of Palaw Township, where there has been no active conflict for the past 5 months. Junta forces fired rounds of heavy weaponry towards Nan Taung Village. Nan Taung is one of the villages in the eastern part of Palaw Township, where the junta forces have restricted the transportation of rations for more than a year.

Tanintharyi Township

- A local PDF under the command of Kaw Thoo Lei Army (KTLA) ambushed a junta convoy of 5 vehicles at the intersection of Mawtaung-Kawthoung in between Yay Phyu and Hton Khar Village in Tanintharyi Township on 13 February 2023. The junta forces exchanged fire with the members of the local PDFs and fired rounds of heavy weaponry.²¹ The SAC has increased troop reinforcements and military operations in Tanintharyi Township, one of the 37 townships where martial law was declared by the SAC.
- On 18 February 2023, a clash between local PDFs and junta forces erupted in Ban Law Village of Tanintharyi Township. Since the junta forces had been firing rounds of heavy artillery in the area one day prior to the clash, the civilians fled their homes on 17 February 2023.²² In the areas of Tanintharyi Township affected by conflict and forced displacement, most displaced populations often return to their homes when they observe relative (temporary) stability in their villages. The artillery strike damaged school buildings and residential homes in Ban Law Village, likely depriving some local populations of adequate shelter upon their return to the village.

Myeik Township

- Following an attack launched by a local PDF on a junta outpost in Tone Byaw Village on 17 February 2023, the junta forces fired rounds of heavy explosive weapons targeted towards the village.²³ Although Tone Byaw Village falls within the bounds of Myeik Township, it is in close proximity to Tanintharyi Township, where martial law was declared by the SAC this month.

Dawei District

Dawei Township

- An alliance of local PDFs and Kaw Thoo Lei Army (KTLA) launched an attack on a local police station in Pa Kar Ri Village in Dawei Township on 10 February 2023. The local PDF and junta forces exchanged fire for about 1.5 hours. The junta forces responded by firing rounds of heavy artillery towards Pa Kar Ri Village. The majority of residents dug bomb shelters in the vicinity of their houses in the village.²⁴
- Following a remote violence attack on a junta convoy near Thet Kel Kwat Village on Ye-Dawei Road on 12 February 2023, the road was blocked by the junta forces, causing trucks and passengers on the road to be stranded for a few hours.²⁵
- Additional clashes between local PDFs and junta forces were reported in Wa Kone Village in the eastern part of Dawei Township (Ah Shey Taw area) on 17 February 2023.²⁶ A local source stated that civilians in Wa Kone Village fled their homes on 14 February in fear of increased military operations and troop reinforcements in the area. Although there were alleged accounts of junta forces burning down houses in the village, it has not been independently verified.

Launglon Township

- A local PDF, namely Launglon People's Defense Force (LLPDF) and junta forces exchanged fire in a residential ward in Launglon Township on 4 February 2023. This was following an incident in which the local PDF set the township-level forestry department ablaze. The clash erupted in an urban setting in Launglon Township, which was just 0.5 mile away from a local police station and a junta-controlled General Administration Department (GAD) building, where junta forces are currently stationed.²⁷ Launglon Township has become one of the major hotbeds for both armed resistance and non-violent movements.

Yebyu Township

- An alliance of Yebyu-based PDFs attacked junta forces stationed at the construction site of an above-ground military bunker at a deep sea port in Na Bu Lel area in Yebyu Township on 6 February 2023. The local PDFs and junta forces exchanged fire at the site which is at the entrance of the Dawei Special Economic Zone (Dawei SEZ). Given that the navy and army bases of the junta regime are located in close proximity to the area, troop reinforcements of junta soldiers were sent to the area quickly.²⁸ That was not the first time the local PDFs attacked a junta outpost near the deep sea port; a similar incident was reported in December 2022.

Kawthoung Township

- A clash between a local PDF and junta forces erupted in Wine Dinn village, Kha Mauk Gyi town in Kawthoung Township on 21 February 2023, causing a displacement of 100 people from the village. The displaced people fled their homes and crossed the Thailand-Myanmar border to a palm oil plantation in Ranong District of Thailand. The Thai authorities reportedly provided humanitarian assistance to the displaced population.²⁹

Remote Violence

Local people's defense forces (PDFs) employed the tactic of remote violence to attack convoys of junta forces, troop columns, office buildings, and the commercial facilities of the military regime and its associates. During April 2021 to February 2023, there were a total of 243 remote violence incidents, with more than half of the attacks targeted at the junta convoys, police force, and pro-regime militias (Pyu Saw Htee). The remainder of remote violence incidents involved attacks targeted at the office buildings of the military junta: the telecommunication towers, and showrooms of military-owned Mytel, and prisons. In addition, there were more than 9 incidents in which the houses of policemen, local administrators, and alleged informants were attacked. There were some accounts of collateral damage involving young children and women due to explosions.

During February 2023, a total of 7 remote violence attacks were reported across Palaw, Dawei, Thayetchaung and Launglon Townships. The highest number of remote violence attacks were reported in Palaw Township, with a total of 59 remote violence incidents during April 2021 - December 2022. In Palaw Township, the exchange of fire between local PDFs and the junta forces subsequently followed the local PDFs' attacks against junta columns and convoys, using remote-detonated explosive devices. (See Armed Clashes) Despite the fact that local PDFs and some news sources stated that the attacks against the junta security forces and pro-regime militias resulted in varying numbers of casualties, it is difficult to independently verify the exact figures.

Major Incidents in February 2023

Myeik District

Palaw Township

- Palaw-based KPDF stated that on 9 February 2023, the local PDF attacked the junta outposts in Pa Wut Kone and Nan Taung Village using drones, for a total of 5 times.³⁰ The KPDF had often attacked the junta outposts in Palaw Township using drones.

Dawei District

Yebyu Township

- An explosive device exploded at the residential house of the Head of the township-level Education Department within the government housing compound on 6 February 2023.³¹
- A passenger vehicle was attacked by a local PDF using a remote-detonated explosive device on 6 February 2023. The passenger vehicle was carrying a Buddhist monk and an additional 7 civilians at the time of the incident. The monk and a female passenger were killed due to the attack. The remaining 6 civilians also sustained injuries.³² The local PDF, Yebyu People's Defense Force (YPDF), issued an apology letter on 8 February stating that they had mistakenly targeted the passenger vehicle for another passenger vehicle allegedly carrying the members of junta forces in plain clothes.

Kawthoung District

Bokpyin Township

- A passenger vehicle was attacked using a remote-detonated explosive device near Han Ka Pyu Village in Bokpyin Township on 31 January 2023. The vehicle was reportedly carrying military officers and the incident took place near a military base in the township. No groups claimed responsibility for the incident.³³

Kawthoung Township

- A junta convoy of two vehicles, carrying a total of 60 junta soldiers, was attacked by a local PDF using remote-detonated explosive devices in Kha Mauk Gyi town on 2 February 2023.³⁴

Attacks targeting civilians

A total of 34 civilians were killed and another 10 civilians sustained injuries due to attacks targeting civilians were reported in February 2023. Local PDFs have also increasingly targeted alleged military informants, members of a Pyu Saw Htee network, and junta-appointed local administrators. Local PDFs, in most cases, claimed responsibility for the incidents. In this month, there were killings against civilians including five children and no groups had claimed responsibility for the incidents.

Major Incidents in February 2023

Palaw Township

- A total of 7 family members of a junta-appointed local administrator, including five children with the youngest one a 2 years old, were shot and killed in Nyaung Shin Kone village, Kyauk Lone Gyi Village Tract, Palauk town on the night of 11 February 2023. No groups had claimed responsibility for the incident. Myeik District People's Defense Force had also denied the allegations that local PDFs committed the brutal murder. A local source stated that the local PDFs do not usually have their operations in the part of Palauk town and there were no previous records of killings targeted at military informers or members of pro-regime militias in the village. He further speculated that the incident may be the attempt of the junta forces to frame the local PDFs of the brutal murder.

Launglon Township

- A local source stated that junta forces shot and killed a 50-year-old man in Min Yat Village in Launglon Township on 4 February 2023. The local source further stated that the victim was not known to be involved in politics or the anti-coup movement. The reason behind the killing of the man remains unclear. The junta forces fired gunshots when they entered the village on the night of 3 February 2023.³⁵

Attacks targeting alleged members of pro-regime militias and military informants

Dawei District

Thayetchaung Township

- An alleged member of a pro-regime militia, Pyu Saw Htee, and local administrator of Pein Taw Village in Thayet Chaung Township was shot and killed on 1 February 2023. The local PDFs in Thayetchaung Township had warned the alleged members of pro-regime militias and military supporters to refrain from supporting the SAC's endeavors to collect data and conduct measures related to the upcoming elections.³⁶

- Another alleged member of a pro-regime militia, Pyu Saw Htee group, was shot and killed in Nyaung Zin Village in Thayetchaung Township on 3 February 2023. The deceased was a 50-year-old man, who was alleged to be a member of a pro-regime militia and a close associate of ultranationalist Buddhist monks in the region. On the same day, the junta forces entered Nyaung Zin Village and reportedly burned down the high school building in the village. The high school had been closed for months since teachers and students refused to resume attending the high school. The junta forces also launched a heavy artillery strike in the village.³⁷

Arbitrary Arrests and Detentions

Junta forces arrested at least 33 civilians in Dawei District during 28 December 2022 - 31 January 2023. An information officer of the regional chapter of the National League for Democracy (NLD), Mya Yadanar Htet and her husband were among the detainees who were arrested by force on that day. Her husband was later released after being detained for two days.³⁹ In addition, a total of 7 civilians were arrested in Kyet Sar Pyin ward in Dawei town on 2 January. Local sources noted increasing accounts in which the junta forces arrested not only people they suspected to be involved in, or supporting, anti-coup movements, but also their parents and other family members.⁴⁰ There were also additional accounts of arrests and confiscation of food items transported from Dawei town to other villages. A total of 3 men were arrested in Thayet Chaung Township during 18-21 January 2023.⁴¹

Junta forces also arrested a total of 15 civilians in Shat Pon Village during 18-19 January 2023 in which soldiers burned down civilians' houses and fired rounds of heavy artillery shells, despite the absence of armed clashes in the area on 19 January 2023. Following the arrests and burning down of civilian houses, the majority of village residents fled their homes to safety. Junta forces continued stationing in Shat Pon Village, and the remaining residents faced threats of arrests, arson attacks, and artillery shelling. Similar incidents were reported in Kin Shey Village in Thayetchaung Township on 26 January. A total of 20 civilians were arrested by the junta forces during their search for a former village administrator who the junta regime suspected of supporting the local PDFs with rations. According to a local source, the civilians were released on 27 January.⁴²

Burning Civilian Houses

Increasing numbers of civilians' houses burnt down by the junta forces have been reported in Launglon, Dawei and Palaw townships in Tanintharyi Region; the incidents had also led to additional displacement and overall heightened sense of insecurity in the affected areas. In Palaw township alone, more than 200 houses were burned down this month. According to the local sources, the houses of the civil servants who joined the Civil Disobedience Movement (CDM) and those of the members of local PDFs or supporters of the anti-coup movement have often been specifically targeted during the junta forces' arson attacks.

- More than 60 houses were burned down by the junta forces in To village of Pala town in Palaw Township during 8-12 February 2023, according to a local source. Following a clash between local PDFs and junta forces on 8 February 2023, junta soldiers burned down a total of 3 houses in To village. Despite the absence of clashes between the local PDFs and junta forces in the subsequent days, the junta forces continued their presence in the villages in Pala town and continued burning down more houses in To village.⁴³ Continued presence of junta troops led to further difficulties in assessing the figures of the burnt houses.

- Furthermore, the junta forces burnt down houses in Wa Kone village in Dawei Township on 14 February 2023. The number of houses damaged in the arson attacks have not been verified since the local populations only witnessed the fire from afar.⁴⁴ Frequent clashes, arson attacks and heavy artillery shelling by the junta forces have forced local villagers in Wa Kone village to flee their homes and seek refuge in relatively safer areas in other villages. The junta troops burned down more than 15 houses and a plantation in Wa Kone and Thin Gan Taw Village in Dawei Township, and also looted properties from civilians' houses.

- According to local sources, on 16-17 February 2023, junta soldiers burned down a total of 165 civilians' houses in Ka De Village, following junta forces' occupation of Ka De village which was formerly known to be one of the footholds of the local PDFs in Palaw Township. Other infrastructures including a monastery, a high school as well as motorbikes, automobiles and community-owned ambulances were also damaged during the arson attack.

IMPACTS OF VIOLENT CONFLICT

Current Situation of Internally Displaced People (IDPs)

Due to intensified armed clashes and fortified presence of junta forces in Tanintharyi Region in February 2023, the figures of displacement in the region have been estimated to be around 28,000 people.⁴⁵ Increased numbers of displacement have been reported in Palaw and Tanintharyi townships, which included among the total of 37 townships where the junta forces declared martial law starting this month. The junta forces continued to heighten offensives and indiscriminate shooting with the use of heavy weaponry even when there was no presence of active fighting between the junta forces and the local resistance groups.

The displaced populations in Palaw Township have been estimated to be more than 10,000 people. There are a total of more than 2600 internally displaced people seeking refuge in camp-like settings in Palaw Township. Many more have fled to seek shelters in Myeik town. While some are able to seek temporary refuge in their relatives' homes or rent houses in Myeik town. The remaining populations do not have access to such shelter, often having no choice but to flee to the jungle and reside in their own makeshift shelters. Recent incidents of arson attacks on civilians' houses in To, Tan Shin, Thin Gan

Taw , Shat Pon and Ka De villages caused additional displacements as well as unabled the displaced populations to return to their homes. According to a local source, there were some accounts in which some civilians among the displaced populations were detained by the junta forces en route to the shelters in Myeik town. Also, household inspections and further intimidation by the junta forces in Myeik town were increasingly targeted at the displaced populations who had just recently fled their homes in those affected villages in Palaw Township.

Similarly, in Tanintharyi Township, the displaced population returned to their home since the situation became relatively stable compared to the previous month. Numbers of displacement may fluctuate due to uncertain situations and difficulties in accessing precise figures. Additional figures of displacement were reported in Dawei Township of Dawei District in Tanintharyi Region; displacements were the aftermaths of the junta forces' offensives, burning down of civilians' houses, reported use of civilians as "human shields" during the military operations.

Additional displacement has been reported in Bokpyin Township in Kawthoung District in February 2023. Striking civil servants who joined the Civil Disobedience Movement (CDM) also made up some of the displaced populations as the junta forces had increasingly targeted them during their search and raid operations in Bokpyin township. An internally displaced person stated that the displaced populations are in dire need of adequate rations, safe drinking water, and healthcare services. Young children and elderly are at higher risk of malnutrition, skin diseases and preventable diseases like diarrhea. The junta forces' restrictions on rations had also been extended to include many parts of Bokpyin township as the tensions between local PDFs and junta forces had recently heightened.

Socio-economic impacts of the 2021 coup in Tanintharyi Region

The widespread conflict across Tanintharyi Region as a result of increased junta troop reinforcements and offensives disrupts the local populations' housing conditions, health, security, livelihood and education. Since the junta forces continued to commit some of the most visceral and obscene acts towards children, children are suffering through horrific situations where the security of them is not guaranteed and their basic rights are being denied. Furthermore, the children's rights to education has been put "on hold" as hundreds of thousands of children lack access to formal education and alternative methods of schooling due to the impacts of the 2021 coup. While some children in urban settings with adequate internet access have been able to be part of online learning hubs supported by the National Unity Government (NUG) and other independent organizations, many children, especially those in rural settings and conflict-affected areas remained to be left behind in terms of access to education. Parents are facing a difficult decision to send their children to state-run basic education schools despite their safety concerns for their children. Also, there are several accounts in which junta forces occupied schools used them as barracks for soldiers. This increases the risks of violations against children and interferes with education.

Junta's fortified presence and restrictions on medical supplies have significantly strained access to healthcare services in Tanintharyi Region. Aid workers face severe shortages of medical supplies they urgently need to provide treatment to local populations and internally displaced populations in camp-like settings. Junta forces sought to arrest individuals who they suspect to be providing medical treatment and supplies to the local PDFs. Those carrying or transporting the bulk of medicines, food, and clothing have been interrogated and intimidated by the junta forces at the checkpoints along major highway roads. The junta forces continued to enforce the ban on transporting bulks of dry rations (rice, instant noodle, etc) and medicines and other medical items (anticoagulant drugs, gauze, bandages, etc.). A local aid worker also reported that the local PDFs have also interrogated and intimidated the aid workers who were transporting patients and assisting the bereaved families with funeral services in Palaw township.⁴⁶ The restrictions set by both the junta forces and the local PDFs on the use of the major roads along Myeik-Palaw and Dawei-Hteekhee road had considerably disrupted the healthcare and funeral services provided by the local aid organizations.

Increased presence of junta forces, security checks and their restrictions on food items have also continued to strain the livelihoods of the local populations across Tanintharyi Region. As the junta forces established checkpoints to conduct security checks at the vehicles and passengers and often demand money in a form of arbitrary taxation, the local businessmen and traders are unable to make profits for their goods. In fact, the farmers and local traders in betel-nut plantation stated that each checkpoints along the roads demand money for transporting the bags of betel nut. Betel nut harvesting in the conflict-affected areas such as Wa Kone and nearby villages in Dawei District have also been abandoned due to intensified clashes in the area. Dawei town has also been guarded heavily by the presence of junta troops at every gateways connecting the town to other towns/townships in the region, disrupting the flow of goods and services to and from the town.⁴⁷

ANALYSIS

Despite the strong presence of junta troops in Tanintharyi Region, February 2023 saw an increase in the number of non-violent movements as the local populations kicked off the month with 'silent strikes' and other forms of non-violent movements across different townships in Tanintharyi Region. As the local protesters marked the 2 year anniversary of the region's prominent strike committee, they pledged to sustain non-violent resistance and extend the movements further to the townships in other districts in the region. Meanwhile, the SAC extended the state of emergency in Myanmar and announced martial law in a total of 37 townships across the country, including Palaw and Tanintharyi townships of Tanintharyi Region. That led to increased offensives, troop reinforcements and fortified military operations in Palaw and Tanintharyi Township. Similar activities were also observed in other townships, with tensions recently on a rise in Dawei township of Dawei District and Kawthoung and Bokpyin townships of Kawthoung District. With the increased presence of junta troops across the region, the anti-coup protesters will likely face a higher risk of brutal crackdown, arrest, detention and torture. However, due to the determination of the local strike committees, women and youth-led movements, Tanintharyi Region will likely see a sustained movement of non-violent resistance.

During February 2023, Tanintharyi Region saw a slight increase in the number of armed clashes compared to the numbers reported in January 2023. Furthermore, the tensions between the junta forces and local resistance groups showed no signs of abating. Particularly, in Palaw and Tanintharyi Townships, which the SAC declared martial law in the beginning of the month, the local resistance groups had engaged in fighting against the junta troops despite the junta forces' disproportionate use of ammunition and manpower. Incessant artillery shelling into villages in the conflict-torn areas was reported, even when there was no active conflict between the junta and other armed groups in Palaw and Tanintharyi Townships. That led to increased numbers of civilians' deaths and injuries in those townships. Junta forces' heavy-handed response to the resistance had not only caused "collateral damage"; simultaneously, the junta forces continued to fail to distinguish between combatants and noncombatants and treated the civilians as their perceived opponents on the battlefield.

However, both armed resistance and non-violent resistance necessitate strong and sustained support of the general public and are now facing a looming threat of losing adequate support. As the state of emergency lengthened, the severity of the socio-economic impacts surged at unprecedented levels. The local populations have been bearing the brunt of severe socio-economic impacts of the 2021 coup as well as the increasing sense of insecurity featured by atrocities, threats and intimidation by the junta forces. The woes of the economic crisis and soaring rates of unemployment will likely weaken the local populations' support towards the revolution. There remains the need to address the socio-economic impacts of the coup such as lack of access to education and healthcare as well as protection of vulnerable groups, including women, children, and the internally displaced communities. In fact, lack of access to formal education and alternative methods of schooling have become protracted with little hope for a solution.

As the SAC prepares for the planned 2023 general elections, the military regime has also ramped up its efforts to gain a greater control over Tanintharyi Region mostly through its increased presence and fortified search and raid operations with an intent to crush any forms of resistance. In February 2023, the junta forces arrested more than 30 civilians including the civil servants who joined Civil Disobedience Movement (CDM) and refused to return to the workforce in Palaw Township. According to local sources, the junta forces had also searched the striking civil servants during their military operations across the region. Recently in Bokpyin Township, during the raid operations by the junta forces, the civil servants were specifically searched for arrests and detention, causing the majority of them to evade their houses and seek shelters in relatively safer areas. The junta forces have also increasingly targeted the civil servants, alleged members and supporters of local resistance groups and other anti-coup activists. In fact, according to local sources, during arson attacks in Palaw Township, the houses known to belong to them were specifically targeted by the junta forces.

The junta troops' strong presence, as well as the intensified clashes across the region, resulted in increased displacement of local populations in February 2023. Also, the junta's widespread ban on the transport of relief items across all townships in the region, to curtail all the local PDFs' access to supplies, have deprived displaced populations of adequate food, medicines, and shelter. Local aid organizations' endeavors to fulfill the needs of IDPs and the host communities have been largely and continuously hampered by restrictions and other acts of junta forces that involved confiscation of the bulk of aid items (e.g. medicines, warm clothing, food), interrogation of local aid workers, threats, and intimidation. As the local PDFs have also increasingly placed access restrictions on the use of certain roads in the conflict areas, the local aid workers are facing additional threats on this front. Both the SAC and the local PDFs must allow unfettered humanitarian access to displaced populations.

As the current conflict trajectory features intensified armed clashes, civilian houses burnt down, the flight of thousands of people, and loss of economic development and income, the SAC's efforts to purport an image of Tanintharyi Region as a stable and prosperous region have been in vain. Furthermore, the current situation in most parts of Tanintharyi Region suggests that only a handful of urban settings in certain townships may be nominally secure enough to conduct polls in designated constituencies, during the upcoming junta-controlled general elections. As such, given the widespread locations of armed clashes and rise in displacement figures in the past, there is increasing uncertainty about whether voting can indeed take place in the region.

RECOMMENDATIONS

State Administrative Council (SAC)

- The State Administrative Council (SAC) must cease attacks on civilians and must also allow unfettered humanitarian access to displaced populations.

National Unity Government (NUG)

- The NUG should ensure that local resistance groups are following its military Code of Conduct (COC).

Local resistance groups (PDFs, Local PDFs, and ethnic armed organizations)

- PDFs and other local resistance groups should refrain from committing human rights abuses, including killing of detainees, and attacks on civilians and civilian property. They must also refrain from targeting schools and medical facilities.

International Community

- The international community should advocate for the removal of the military's restrictions on the flow of trade and freedom of movement. These restrictions affect not only areas where armed clashes occur, but also surrounding areas. As a result, local communities suffer from significantly increased prices of food and essential medicines.

United Nations

- In collaboration with local organizations, humanitarian partners should provide critical life-saving assistance to the most vulnerable people in conflict affected villages, despite challenges accessing these areas, and limited funding.
- Humanitarian partners should implement programs facilitating the delivery of cross-border aid to reach displaced populations in the region.
- Humanitarian partners should coordinate with ethnic armed organizations' respective departments to ensure the swift and effective provision of humanitarian assistance.
- International organizations should strengthen the capacity of local community-based organizations and civil society organizations in aid delivery, including data collection and monitoring.

Local Non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and International Non-governmental Organizations (INGOs)

- Local non-governmental organizations and international organizations should support the implementation of activities regarding mine risk reduction education, as well as first-aid training, and supplies to local communities.
- Local non-governmental organizations and international organizations should support implementation of activities regarding safe migration knowledge and practices to local communities, especially targeting young people.

Local Media

- Local media should be aware of the local context and minimize the impact of rumors and misinformation, to mitigate triggering violence in the region.
