Conservationists step up efforts to save rare turtle species in Kyeintali

“AS the number of rare species of turtles laying eggs along the sea shore of Pone Nyat Village in Kyeintali, Gwa Township, Rakhine State, has declined on a yearly basis, certain measures are being taken to prevent them from becoming extinct,” said U Thant Zin Oo, secretary, KIFCA.

It has been reported that fishing in the region is contributing to the decline in the turtle population due to indiscriminate consumption and use of nets.

“The number of turtles laying eggs is decreasing excessively, year by year. Prior to this alarming situation, five species of turtles could be seen laying eggs here. The last time we saw female Leatherback turtles, one of the endangered species, laying eggs was eight years ago. It has been a number of years since the event. At the time, we recorded about 21 females of 4 different species — Olive Ridley, Hawksbill, Leatherback, and Loggerhead turtles — laying eggs on the shore,” said U Thant Zin Oo.

“If I remember correctly, we managed to free 1,800 baby turtles. Then for some reason, the preservation weakened over time. From January to 23 March this year, we spotted 5 female turtles laying eggs on the shore. In addition to that, we recorded some turtle species getting caught unexpectedly in fishing nets. They were eventually freed,” he said.

“This slow decline is being caused by consumption by fishermen and unsystematic use of fishing nets. In the long run, the turtles will become extinct. This is why we are working hard to preserve them,” he added.

DILIGENT EFFORTS

The Department of Fisheries is working hard to save the endangered species from extinction by creating and protecting breeding sites in collaboration with the RCA, the TSA, and the WCS.

RARE SPECIES

There are seven known species of turtles in the world. Some of the species such as the Leatherback turtle, Green turtle, Olive Ridley, Hawksbill Turtle, and Loggerhead Turtle are found in Rakhine, Myanmar. Experts say that most of them lay eggs along the beach in Pone Nyat Village in the town of Kyeintali.

At present, 24 miles of the beach (1,79,200 acres) has been designated as a sanctuary and divided into three zones to protect endangered turtle species. The preservation work is being conducted in collaboration with the Kyeintali coastal association. A total of 97 baby sea turtles were released into the sea from Pone Nyat beach's Zone 1 on 19 July. —Painzalok Thein Nyunt

Kayin State starts hot air balloon tour to boost tourism

A FIVE-DAY trial tour on a hot air balloon kicked off at 6 a.m. on 21 March at Thiri field in Hpa-an Township, as part of the Kayin State government's push to develop tourism in the state.

The ‘Oriental Ballooning Myanmar’ tour was organized by Myanmar Ballooning Co. Ltd at the direction of the Kayin Region Government. The hot air balloon tour seeks to promote Hpa-an region's scenic beauty, offering views of the Thanlwin River, mountains surrounded by natural caves, pagodas, Kantharyar park, and other unique sites. Hpa-an, the capital of Kayin State, draws local visitors and tourists because of its natural caves, waterfalls, pagodas, and other destinations.

The high season from December to February will be ideal for hot air balloon rides, which will not only help promote tourism in Kayin, but also Myanmar, said officials. Tourists will be able to enjoy the views of Kayin State by riding the hot air balloon, but the local people may find the charges for the rides steep, said U Aye Maung Hlaing, deputy director, Kayin State Directorate of Hotels and Tourism. Members of the Kayin State government, respective ministers, and mediapersons took part in the trial hot air balloon ride from 21-25 March. —Nay Myo Lwin

Continuing the fight against tuberculosis

SOUTH East Asia is the region most affected by tuberculosis in the world, with serious social, political, and economic repercussions from the high incidence of the life-threatening disease.

According to the Global TB report (2018), Myanmar is among the 30 countries most affected by TB. As per the report, 358 of every 100,000 people in Myanmar are infected with TB, and about 9.3 per cent of new TB patients are also HIV carriers, while about 5 per cent have drug-resistant TB.

The Ministry of Health and Sports has adopted a five-year national strategy for fighting TB, as part of efforts towards the World Health Organization's 'End TB Strategy', which seeks to eliminate TB by 2035.

East Asia is also home to a growing number of drug-resistant cases of the disease, threatening the control of TB generally, as well as health security specifically.

The increase in the number of drug-resistant TB cases is also posing a problem for the healthcare sector in Myanmar.

The Ministry of Health and Sports has adopted a five-year national strategy for fighting TB, as part of efforts towards the World Health Organization's 'End TB Strategy', which seeks to eliminate TB by 2035.

A total of 30 local and foreign partner organizations, with about 2,400 private general practitioners, are participating in the drive.

As statistics on TB cases play an important role in the fight against the disease, we would like to urge private hospitals, clinics, and laboratories to send information about TB cases to the ministry, under the Mandatory TB Case Notification, announced on 18 September 2018.

Tuberculosis is curable. But, to contain the spread of infection and reduce mortality rate, it is important for TB patients to take drugs and follow the treatment guidelines.

Roundtable on Revising the New Basic Education Curriculum

"In drawing up a new curriculum, we are trying to include practical ways in which students can utilize the skills and knowledge learnt from the Myanmar Language course,"

Professor Dr. Aung Myint Oo

THE roundtable on revising the new basic education curriculum for Myanmar part 1 and 2 was broadcasted by MRTV. The roundtable talk includes: Dr. Zaw Latt Htun, Deputy Director-General of the Education, Research, Planning and Training Department; Dr. Aung Myint Oo, Professor (Department Head) of Myanmar, University of Yangon; Dr. Poe Poe, Professor (Department Head) of English Language, University of Yangon; Dr. Cho Win, Professor (Department Head) of Mathematics, University of Yangon; U Aung Sithu Hlaing, Curriculum Committee Head of Fine Arts; Dr. Khin Mya Thet, Curriculum Committee Head of Physical Education.

Facilitator: Can you explain to us about drawing the new basic educational curriculum?

Dr. Zaw Latt Htun: The Comprehensive Education Sector Review was completed for Myanmar in 2013 with help from both local and foreign experts, teachers, other stakeholders who were dedicated to improving the education sector of Myanmar.

The review brought light on several gaps in the system such as: a list of learning goals the respective subjects would achieve towards the end of each grade, ensure that such learning goals for the subjects are reflective of the children's ages and learning abilities, the current time assigned (30-35 minutes) for kindergarten classes are not sufficient for learning and the need to include materials that will help high school students enter the workforce and/or vocational training schools. Hence, we have decided to revise our current education curriculum to raise its standards for providing the best quality basic education system we can.

Facilitator: Would you like us to share some insights about the new curriculum?

Dr. Zaw Latt Htun: According to Section 5, Paragraph 16(A) in the Myanmar National Education Law (2014), "Basic Education is divided into the following three levels, aiming to have 12 years of education after the completion of kindergarten," we are targeting education from completion of kindergarten and the 12 years afterwards, also known as KG+12.

Facilitator: What are the main reasons behind changing the KG+12 education system?

Dr. Zaw Latt Htun: As we all are aware, our current education system focuses on Rote Learning which emphasizes memorization. Therefore, we are working towards including critical thinking along with other new standards in the curriculum and emphasize practical skills as well to match the needs of the 21st century workforce.

Facilitator: Can you also explain to us about drawing the curriculum for the different subjects?

Dr. Zaw Latt Htun: The Myanmar language can give you both practical skills and knowledge. We are working Myanmar towards redesigning the Myanmar language course so it will teach skills and knowledge that is applicable and used in a practical situation for the rest of the student's life.

Facilitator: What are some skills the Myanmar language can teach?

Dr. Zaw Latt Htun: In the Myanmar Language course, we teach about the Myanmar language, the grammar and emphasize on Myanmar arts and literature. Literacy in another language is a skill itself. In Myanmar, we use the Myanmar language for the country so it is important to be able to speak, read and write the language. Hence, by teaching the language, we can help the youth become active members of society as they will be able to command the country's language and participate in the country's art and literature. We have plans to redesign the curriculum with these goals in mind.

Facilitator: What about the English language?

"As the world gets more connected and interactions increase with globalization, it is not enough to just be able to read and write basic English. We'd like to teach the language so it can be utilized in real life, in everyday interactions, which is why, we have decided to change the curriculum." Dr Poe Poe ...

Dr. Poe Poe: There are three parts to changing to the new curriculum. Since the reason for teaching the English language has changed, the teaching methods have changed as well. This also affects the course. The first reason for redesigning is that the motive behind teaching the English language has changed. It used to be that English was taught so students can read and use reference books, and write in English. "As the world gets more connected and interactions increase with globalization, it is not enough to just be able to read and write basic English. We'd like to teach the language so it can be utilized in real life, in everyday interactions, which is why, we have decided to change the curriculum." Dr Poe Poe

Facilitator: Can you explain to us the difference between the old and the new curriculum?

Dr. Poe Poe: Because the overall objective has changed, the curriculum did as well. Now there is a need to not only teach reading and writing but also reading and hearing skills. The courses books have to reflect the student's level of learning; something that was courses to match the age and learning abilities of the students in the Primary, Middle School and High School levels.

Facilitator: So, there are other subjects such as Development included in the curriculum along with educational subjects. Can you explain to us a little bit about that as well?

Dr. Khin Mya Thet: In the previous curriculum, such subjects -including physical education-is contained as an additional course. In the new curriculum, they are considered main courses instead of supplementary ones.

The reason we put physical education is so that students are aware of the multiple benefits of physical activity in their everyday lives, along with educating them about the general knowledge and problems that can be prevented by exercise.

It also teaches students about team work and respecting one another for the development of the whole. As a result of this coursework, not only will the students improve their physical health, they also learn about teamwork which makes them better students overall.

Facilitator: What about the subject Fine Arts? Can you explain to us a little bit on that as well?

Dr. Aung Si Thu Hlaing: The arts, especially painting has been in the basic education system since 1963. After 1963, it has been considered as a supplementary subject as there wasn't enough support for the materials and the teaching wasn't as effective. There was also a lack of assessment and enforcement of rules as there wasn't enough manpower to do field trips to school to check whether the schools actually taught the subject and how much the students have learned.

The reason for teaching arts is that it boosts the creativity, memory and innovation of students. It also boosts the general sense of responsibility and appreciation for beauty. As the Myanmar saying goes, a peaceful mind brings wealth and success. In order to build a well-rounded society, the arts provide tremendous support. Hence, teaching arts in the new national curriculum is very important.

Facilitator: Can you explain to us how the KG+12 education system is structured?

Dr. Zaw Latt Htun: KG+12 includes five grades in the primary education stage, four for middle school and three for high school. Hence, there is the name KG+12 (5+4+3). The main difference from the previous system is that in KG+12, KG is considered as kindergarten and is not included as primary education. The new system aims to help students become self-sufficient, happy, well-rounded in education and eager to learn and we have six areas of learning to work towards these goals.

Commercial city Yangon to get smart car parking

TO tackle traffic congestion in commercial hub Yangon, with its cramped roads and lack of designated areas for vehicles to park, the regional government and the Yangon municipal body have invited tenders from private companies for setting up smart car parking.

Companies from Japan, China, Israel, and Singapore have shown a keen interest in the project. Meanwhile, local companies are also eager to participate in the project. Therefore, the project is expected to take off soon. To implement the smart car parking project in Yangon, tender proposals and financial statements were screened on 5 March. The tender evaluation committee will enlist engineers, IT technicians, parliament members, and experts to thoroughly evaluate the bids.

On 12 March, Yangon Region Chief Minister U Phyto Min Thein met with officials from Shin Watahan Co. Ltd at the Yangon Region Government Hall 4, and discussed the adoption of the smart car parking system to deal with the lack of parking space on Yangon roads. The meeting highlighted the regional government's focus on resolving car parking problems. Six downtown townships of Yangon — Kyauktada, Pabedan, Lanmadaw, Latha, Pazundaung, and Botahtaung — from have been designated for a pilot project for smart car parking. Thereafter, the project will be expanded to cover other busy townships in Yangon. At the eighth meeting of the Second Pyidaungsu Hluttaw's 10th regular session, held on 30 November, Deputy Minister for Transportation and Communications U Kyaw Myo had said plans are under way to implement the smart car parking project, in cooperation with private companies, to find a solution to car parking problems. The statement underlined the authorities' concern over severe car parking problems and plans to deal with them.

The number of registered vehicles in Yangon Region jumped to 529,473 by 31 July, 2017 from 214,649 as recorded on 31 August, 2011. At present, the number of registered vehicles is more than 530,000. With so many vehicles on the roads, parking problems were inevitable, and they need to be resolved at the earliest. This has prompted the authorities to go for a smart car parking system.

There are 144 roads in Yangon on which no vehicles are allowed to park. Vehicles parked on those roads are towed away and the owners are fined. Nevertheless, drivers are still parking their vehicles on public roads and violating traffic rules owing to the lack of parking space.

It was announced that old and scrapped vehicles have been removed from Yangon's roads from 31 January, 2018. But, they can still be found on the roads.— Wai Yan Oo

Lower imports drag maritime trade down $107 mln

A container vessel is seen near Yangon Port which is the main gateway for sea trade. PHOTO: PHOE KHWAH

THE value of Myanmar's maritime trade for the period between 1 October, 2018 and 15 March, 2019 in the current fiscal year totalled US$11 billion, a decrease of $107.46 million compared with the corresponding period of the previous FY, according to data provided by the Ministry of Commerce.

In the October-March period, maritime imports outperformed exports. However, the value of maritime imports saw a sharp decline of $4,836.6 million compared with the same period last year, whereas exports were up by $376 million. Maritime exports were valued at $4.2 billion, while imports were registered at $6.8 billion.

During the five-and-a-half-month period, the value of trade through the border gates exceeded $4.4 billion, an increase of $293 million, amid tight confiscation and trade suspension by Myanmar's main trade partner, China.

The country's total external trade topped $15.5 billion, an increase of $185 million from the previous FY.

Myanmar exports agricultural products, fishery products, minerals, livestock, forest products, finished industrial goods, and other products, while it imports capital goods, consumer goods, and raw industrial materials.

The country currently has nine ports involved in sea trade. The Yangon Port is the main gateway for Myanmar's maritime trade, and includes the Yangon inner terminals and the outer Thilawa Port. —Mon Mon

About 3,700 tons of glass exported over last one month

THE No. 36 Heavy Industry factory in Kyaukse has shipped 3,700 tons of glass to the Philippines, Sri Lanka, India, and Nepal over the last one month, after resuming operations.

The No. 36 Heavy Industry is producing tinted glass, glass, and mirrors under a public-private partnership with International Glass Co. Ltd, located in Kyaukse Township, Mandalay Region.

Earlier, the industry produced only 100 tons of 7-foot glass per day. After an upgrade of glass kilns and production lines, production at the plant has increased to 250 tons per day. The plant is producing glass with a width of 12 feet and thickness of 3 millimeters.

The Union Minister for Industry, U Khin Maung Cho, inspected the glass furnace operation, technology, thermal management, automated systems, and production processes at the plant yesterday. He urged officials to make products of marketable quality, and asked them not to violate any rules and regulations embodied in the contract and pay the natural gas and electricity charges before the deadline.

Afterwards, the Union Minister went to a pharmaceutical factory in Inyaung to inspect the production process of intravenous solutions, medical injection bags, and blow-fill-seal (BFS) equipment. He asked factory officials to produce drugs in line with WHO's GMP guidelines, boost production of pharmaceuticals to meet local demand, meet international standards criteria, use new packaging design, develop capacity of factory staff, and get know-how on maintenance and handling systems from foreign technicians.

The Ministry of Industry produced 5 million bottles of intravenous solution per year. The pharmaceutical factory was opened to help meet 30 per cent of local demand and boost production to 1.5 million bottles per year, the minister said.

In the evening, the Union Minister visited a household goods factory in Minsu and observed the manufacturing process of steel beds for hospitals, and asked staff to find innovative ideas to increase the production of equipment. —MNA

Kachin State Investment Committee endorses tissue-culture banana cultivation

By Nyein Nyein

THE Kachin State Investment Committee has endorsed one proposal by a company for carrying out tissue-culture banana cultivation, although the Myanmar Investment Commission has not permitted such projects, said U Aung Naing Oo, secretary of MIC.

“The MIC has not approved that tissue-culture banana cultivation business. But, the Kachin State government has allowed a company to execute tissue-culture banana cultivation on 188.7 acres of land owned by Myanmar citizens,” said U Aung Naing Oo.

Meanwhile, according to data released by the Ministry of Commerce, the value of trade at Kanpiketee gate has increased on account of tissue-culture banana exports. There are over 60,000 acres of tissue-culture banana plantations in Kachin State, and more than 20 companies are engaged in the business in Myitkyina and Waingmaw townships.

Tissue-culture banana is being exported to China through the Kanpiketee border gate, as income from tissue-culture banana exports is increasing every year. Additionally, other agro products such as watermelon, chilli, and other crops are also being exported, creating jobs for local residents and increasing the country's revenues.

Myanmar's tissue-culture banana is exported to Kunming, Beijing, Kwang Tung provinces in China and border areas of Russia.

A total of 266,369 tons of tissue-culture banana, worth US$83.367 million, was exported through the Kanpiketee gate in 2018; the figure stood at 266,450 tons worth $55.2 million in the 2016-2017FY; 81,340 tons worth $25.7 million in the 2015-2016FY; 33,770 tons worth $4.98 million in the 2014-2015FY; 26,405 tons worth $4.04 million in the 2013-2014FY; 5,129 tons worth $0.84 million in the 2012-2013 FY; 25,880 tons worth $3.14 million in the 2011-2012FY; and, 51,400 tons worth $5.84 million in the 2010-2011FY, according to data from the Ministry of Commerce.

The government earned K1.4 billion from the two-per cent withholding tax imposed on tissue-culture banana exports through the Kanpiketee gate in the 2016-2017FY, K2.1 billion in the 2017-2018 FY, and over K3 billion in the last mini-budget period.

Myanmar is strategically located between the most populous countries China and India. The country has established trade links with ASEAN and European countries. Myanmar's external trade is conducted by air as well as maritime routes and border gates.

New Zealand announces royal commission into Christchurch attack

SYDNEY — New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern announced on Monday the launch of a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the country's security agencies following the terror attack on two mosques that saw 50 people shot dead.

Ardern said the commission, the country's highest form of investigation, would look at what "could or should have been done" to stop the attack.

"While New Zealanders and Muslim communities around the world are both grieving and showing compassion for one another, they are also quite rightly asking questions on how this terror attack was able to happen here," she said.

"This includes questions around the accessibility of semi-automatic weapons, the role social media has played generally and the focus of the intelligence and security services."

The investigation will also inquire into the activities of alleged gunman Brenton Tarrant.

The inquiry follows Ardern's announcement last week that the country will strengthen its gun laws by banning military-style semi-automatic weapons, assault rifles and high-capacity ammunition.

New Zealand will hold a national memorial for the two mass shootings this coming Friday at Hagley Park, opposite the Al Noor Mosque where 42 of the 50 victims were killed, two weeks after the attack.

The service is being jointly led by the New Zealand government, the city of Christchurch and the local Maori and Muslim community.

Australian-born Tarrant, 28, is alleged to have gone into the Al Noor Mosque on March 15, which was filled with hundreds of people attending midday prayers, and opened fire on the congregation.

He is alleged to have then travelled Linwood Mosque, 5 kilometers away, where he shot a further seven people. One victim died later in hospital.—Kyodo News

At least 18 dead as floods sweep Iran: emergency services

TEHRAN, (Iran) — The death toll of floods that have swept across most Iranian provinces has risen to 18 with more than 70 injured, the country's emergency services said Monday.

National Emergency Service chief Pirhossein Koolivand said the casualty toll in the southern city of Shiraz was 17 dead and 74 injured, while another person was killed in Sarpol-e Zahab in the western province of Kermanshah, the service said on its website.

Iran has been facing unprecedented floods in 25 of its 31 provinces, the country's Crisis Management Organisation said. The latest floods have struck mostly west and south-west Iran and follow major flooding on 19 March in the northeast's Golestan and Mazandaran provinces, for which no official casualty toll has been issued.

Emergency services have been hampered by Iranian New Year holidays, with many employees on vacation.

The police have advised against road trips in the coming days, with many roads blocked by flooding or landslides caused by heavy rains.

The Crises Management Organisation and the health ministry, in charge of hospitals, have cancelled all leave and been placed on full alert, while provincial chiefs have been ordered to remain at their posts.

India's main opposition party makes poll promise for poorest families

NEW DELHI— India's main opposition party - the Indian National Congress (INC) on Monday made a poll promise of providing an income support of 72,000 Indian Rupees (about 1,028 U.S. dollars) per annum to the 20 percent of the poorest families in the country, if the party was able to form the next government after the ensuing general elections.

Rahul Gandhi, INC president, termed this announcement as the final "assault on poverty" in the country.

India faces a seven-phased election beginning 11 April. Votes are scheduled to be counted on 23 May.

Announcing the party's election promise, Gandhi said that he and his party members had studied the fiscal implications of the scheme.

"20 percent of the poorest families will be given an income support of 72,000 Indian Rupees every year.

All modalities have been worked out and this is possible within our budget.

We have studied fiscal implications of the scheme," Gandhi said while addressing media persons in the Indian capital.

The INC president, who is also a lawmaker, further said that the amount will be directly transferred to the bank accounts of the poor. "50 million families and 250 million members of these families will directly benefit from the scheme. We will end poverty in this country," Gandhi said.

Meanwhile, the INC is yet to come out with its final election manifesto ahead of the general polls.—Xinhua

US science educator encourages students to involve actively in science research

SAN FRANCISCO — Students should be more positive in taking training courses on science and research, Marcus Wojtkowiak, director of 2019 Golden Gate STEM Fair (GGSF), told Xinhua on Saturday.

Wojtkowiak made the remarks after a ceremony awarding dozens of students for their innovative projects on various scientific topics.

The annual event, which was held this year on 21-23 March in the US Army Corps of Engineering Bay Model Visitor Center in Sausalito, Northern California, aimed to award top-ranked students from schools in 17 cities in the San Francisco Bay Area, who emerged victoriously from local competitions before they advanced to the GGSF.

“Don’t wait for somebody to tell you what you should do, and the most successful scientists are those that have an idea and go after it themselves,” Wojtkowiak gave his advice for students to focus on the study of Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM).

He said science fairs, in general, are an integral part of science learning because they are student-driven projects.

“It’s super important to secure interest in science and allow students to take responsibility and have control over their learning and the path of learning,” he added.

According to the GGSF, over 70,000 middle and high school students throughout the San Francisco Bay Area completed science projects for science fairs at their schools.

The student’s projects covered a diversity of research areas such as biological, behavioral, environmental, engineering and computer sciences, as well as mathematics.

Juliana Pearse, an 11th grader from Salesian College Preparatory, a Roman Catholic college preparatory high school in Richmond, East Bay, did research on behavioral psychology and conducted an interesting test on different responses they receive when they wear clothes of different colors. She found people would often get unfriendly responses when they were in dark outfits, but they were greeted with more smiles if they wore light-color clothes, such as light blue. Sahand Adibnia, an Iranian-American boy in the ninth grade of Dublin High School in Dublin city in East Bay, Northern California, addressed environmental problems such as water pollution in his neighborhood.

He studied the toxic content and water quality in a local creek where he lives. “We have to become more aware of the environment and figure out ways to decrease the effect of pollution on our environment,” he said. Ethan Kwan, a Chinese-American boy from St. Brendan Parish School in San Francisco, is also worried about the potential damage of day-to-day waste to the environment.

His research project focused on the tensile strength of various premium tapes that are often used in daily life.

“Instead of throwing things away, you can fix roof gutters, you can fix windows with all these tapes. They’re all waterproof and they’re all very strong, and they can help sustain the environment,” he added.

Wojtkowiak said science fairs like the GGSF have a positive impact on students and make them feel really good about science and about their accomplishments.

“It does so much for them and for the confidence level in their future careers,” he added.

When asked for advice for Chinese student to participate in science research, he encouraged them to be bold in seeking science education. “If you have the initiative, and if you have the brain, you can get to anywhere you want to be,” he said. “Forgetting that maybe you don’t have the structure. You gotta take the initiative and not wait for somebody to tell you that you can,” said Wojtkowiak. —Xinhua

Researchers discover Japan’s oldest rock in western Japan

HIROSHIMA — Japanese researchers said Monday they have found the country’s oldest known rock dating back 2.5 billion years in the western prefecture of Shimane, around 500 million years earlier than the previous oldest discovery.

The Hiroshima University team collected fragments of the rock located near a forest road in the town of Tsuwano. The granite-gneiss metamorphic rock, formed by intense heat, has a striped appearance.

Many rocks of the same age exist in North Korea and northeastern China, and analysis of the latest specimen is likely to provide insight into the formation of the Japanese archipelago, which was originally connected to the Asian continent.

“We will study the chemical composition of the rock and make clear from which part of the continent it came,” said Yasutaka Hayasaka, an associate professor at Hiroshima University.

The previous oldest rock in Japan consists of 2 billion-year-old gneiss found in Hichiso, Gifu Prefecture, in 1970.—Kyodo News

Thai election still too close to call as Thaksin party takes lead

BANGKOK — The Pheu Thai Party, a political vehicle of former Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra, has won the most constituency seats in Sunday's general election, but far from a majority, the Election Commission announced Monday.

The Pheu Thai Party, which was ousted from power in a 2014 coup, won 137 of the 350 directly elected constituency seats in the 500-seat House of Representatives, the commission said in announcing the unofficial results after vote counting reached 95 percent.

Of the remaining 213, the pro-junta Palang Pracharath Party won 97, Bhumjaithai Party took 39, the Democrat Party received 33, the Future Forward

Party got 30 seats and the remaining 14 will be divided among three smaller parties.

The other 150 seats in the lower house will be allocated on a proportional party-list basis. Under the "mixed member apportionment" system, the more constituencies a party wins, the fewer seats they will obtain from the party list.

Even as those results have yet to be announced, the two major political parties are already moving to form a coalition government.

Pheu Thai, whose loyalists have won every election since 2001, insists on receiving priority on grounds that the latest results show it again received a popular mandate.

The Palang Pracharath Party has also vowed to form a coalition. It has nominated junta chief Prayut Chan-o-cha for the premiership.

The Election Commission must announce the official results within 60 days.

The latest results come the day after those released late Sunday showed Palang Pracharath in the lead in terms of votes with around 7.5 million, Pheu Thai close behind with around 7 million, the Future Forward Party of businessman-turned-politician Thanathorn Juangroongruangkit with 5.2 million, the Democrats with 3.2 million and Bhumjaithai with 3.2 million.

Those figures were not updated Monday.—Kyodo News

North Korea returns to inter-Korean liaison office

SEOUL — North Korea has returned its staff to an inter-Korean liaison office, Seoul said Monday, just days after unilaterally withdrawing from the joint facility.

The office in the Northern city of Kaesong was opened in September as the two Koreas knitted closer ties, but the North pulled its staff out last week amid a deadlock in talks between Washington and Pyongyang.

The unification ministry said some of the North Korean staff were back at work on Monday saying they had come to cover their "shift as usual".

"Thus, the South and the North held consultations at the liaison office this morning and will continue to operate the office as usual," the ministry said in a statement. It said the North did not offer details on why they had returned or pulled out in the first place. Experts had suggested that the withdrawal was Pyongyang's attempt of pressuring Seoul to exert more influence on the US in the current diplomacy.

Their return follows US President Donald Trump's abrupt tweet at the weekend saying he had "ordered" the withdrawal of additional sanctions — without identifying the measures — against Pyongyang by the US Treasury. South Korean President Moon Jae-in was instrumental in brokering the talks process between the nuclear-armed, sanctions-hit North and the US, Seoul's key security ally.

Moon has long backed engagement with the North to bring it to the negotiating table, and has been dangling the carrot of inter-Korean development projects, among them an industrial zone also in Kaesong and cross-border tourism for Southerners. But the failure by North Korean leader Kim Jong Un and US President Donald Trump to reach agreement in Hanoi last month on walking back Pyongyang's nuclear programme in exchange for relaxation of the measures against it has raised questions over the future of the process.

WILLINGNESS TO TALK

Both sides expressed willingness to talk further after the Vietnam summit, but it has since emerged that Washington presented Kim with a wider definition of what it regards as denuclearisation. A senior Pyongyang diplomat recently told reporters that the North was considering suspending nuclear talks with the US while last week Washington unveiled a new set of sanctions targeting two Chinese companies accused of helping Pyongyang.

The liaison office opened three months after Kim signed a vague pledge at his first summit with Trump in Singapore to work towards "denuclearisation of the Korean peninsula", and shortly before Moon went to Pyongyang for his third summit with Kim last year. When it opened, Seoul's unification ministry said the office would become a "round-the-clock consultation and communication channel" for advancing inter-Korean relations, improving ties between the US and the North, and easing military tensions.—AFP ■

Rocket hits house near Tel Aviv, Netanyahu to return home

MISHMERET — A rocket fired from the Gaza Strip hit a house in a community north of Tel Aviv on Monday, wounding seven Israelis and leading Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to cut short a visit to the United States.

Israel's army said the rocket was fired from the Palestinian enclave run by Islamist movement Hamas, raising the risk of another escalation between the two sides just ahead of 9 April Israeli elections.

Netanyahu is currently in Washington and said he would return home after meeting US President Donald Trump later Monday, cancelling an address to pro-Israel lobby AIPAC's annual conference on Tuesday.

Israel also closed its people and goods crossings with the blockaded Gaza Strip and reduced the zone in the Mediterranean it allows for Palestinian fishermen off the enclave, a statement said.

The house hit was located in the community of Mishmeret, around 20 kilometres (12 miles) north of Tel Aviv, police said.

Mishmeret is more than 80 kilometres (50 miles) from the Gaza Strip and rocket fire from the Palestinian enclave at that distance is rare.

The hospital treating the wounded said seven Israelis were injured lightly by burns and shrapnel, including three children. One of the wounded was a six-month-old child and six of them were members of the same family. The house was destroyed in the wake of the rocket and subsequent fire, with burnt wood, a children's toy and other debris piled at the site.

Netanyahu said "there has been a criminal attack on the state of Israel and we will respond with force." "I have decided, due to the security incidents, to cut short my visit to the United States," he said in a video released by his office.

"I will meet President Trump in a few hours and just after that I will return to Israel to lead closely the operations."

There was no immediate response from Hamas but its ally in Gaza, Islamic Jihad, said "we warn the Zionist enemy from committing an aggression against the Gaza Strip".—AFP ■

Nepal, Japan sign government-to-government labor pact

KATHMANDU — Nepal signed a memorandum of cooperation with Japan on Monday to send to the country “specified skilled” workers for the first time.

The broad framework agreement, signed in Kathmandu by Japanese Ambassador Masamichi Saigo and a Nepalese government representative, opens doors for Nepali blue-collar workers to get jobs in Japan based on the government-to-government recruitment model.

It comes into effect on 1 April. “But the actual flow of workers from Nepal to Japan will take time because different bilateral mechanisms need to be set up to ensure that only those who meet employment criteria reach Japan,” Narayan Regmi, spokesman at the Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Security, told Kyodo News.

The ministry will set up a body that will facilitate the recruitment process, he added.

In December, Japan decided to recruit 345,000 foreign workers in five years from nine countries, including Nepal, to address the problem of rapidly depleting and aging workforce.

Nepal proposed to Japan to set up a government-to-government recruitment mechanism to prevent recruitment agencies in Nepal from duping Nepali workers. A similar mechanism set up with South Korea to send Nepali workers under the Employment Permit System has been successful in protecting workers from being taken advantage of.

However, scores of cases of workers getting fleeced by recruitment agencies in Nepal or getting exploited by employers in job destinations such as Qatar and Malaysia are reported every year.

Tens of thousands of Nepali workers leave for foreign countries for work every year. An estimated 4 million Nepalis work abroad.

Over two decades of political turmoil that started in 1996 when former rebel Maoists started their 10-year-long armed insurgency dried up investment and jobs in Nepal. —Kyodo News ■

Trump declares ‘complete exoneration’ after Mueller finds no collusion

WASHINGTON — US President Donald Trump declared Sunday that he had been completely exonerated after his campaign was cleared of colluding with Russia in the 2016 election, in a major boost for his re-election hopes.

The long-awaited final report of Special Counsel Robert Mueller’s probe into Moscow’s election meddling concluded that no member or associate of the campaign conspired or coordinated with Russia in its plot to boost Trump in the vote more than two years ago. While the Mueller report did not exonerate the president of obstruction of justice, Attorney General Bill Barr’s letter to Congress summarizing the still-secret document cleared a dark cloud that had hung over the Trump’s legitimacy since he took office in January 2017.

“There was no collusion with Russia. There was no obstruction. It was a complete and total exoneration,” Trump said of Mueller’s conclusions. “It’s a shame that the country had to go through this,” he added. “This was an illegal takedown that failed.”

Deputy press secretary Hogan Gidley said Trump was “in a really good mood” and “very happy with how it all turned out.”

Gidley said the president watched television, talked to staff and made calls during his flight home from Florida.

Summarizing Mueller’s findings, Barr said no Trump campaign official was involved in Russian conspiracies in 2016 to hack Democratic computers and flood social media with disinformation to harm Trump’s Democratic election rival Hillary Clinton.

He also said there were no new surprises coming from the Mueller team, which is disbanding — no further indictments being referred, and no sealed indictments outstanding.

EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT

On the other hand, according to Barr’s letter, Mueller clearly had some evidence to support an obstruction case, but was uncertain whether it was enough to support criminal charges.

“While this report does not conclude that the president committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him,” Barr cited Mueller as saying. Democrats in Congress are now certain to demand Mueller’s underlying evidence and push to investigate further.

“It is unacceptable that, after Special Counsel Mueller spent 22 months meticulously uncovering this evidence, Attorney General Barr made a decision not to charge the President in under 48 hours,” the Democratic chairs of the House Judiciary, Intelligence and Oversight committees said in a joint statement. “His unsolicited, open memorandum to the Department of Justice, suggesting that the obstruction investigation was ‘fatally misconceived,’ calls into question his objectivity on this point in particular.” —AFP ■

Millions malnourished in Pakistan despite abundance of food

KARACHI — A frantic mother cradling her seven-month-old baby rushes towards the special paediatric ward in a desolate Pakistan town, his eyes are blank and he is smaller than most newborns.

NO SHORTAGE OF FOOD

He is starving in a country that has no shortage of food, but which has one of the highest infant mortality rates in the world and where malnutrition is rife.

The infant weighs just 2.5kg — the average for a healthy child of that age is almost three times that.

His case is not unique for the doctors at the Mithi Civil Hospital in hunger-stricken Sindh province where millions survive on less than US$1 a day.

Of the 150-250 patients who come in each day, roughly one fifth are suffering from malnutrition, Dr Dilip Kumar, head of the paediatric department, tells AFP. Inside the ward, nine other malnourished infants are crying inside glass incubators. A young mother, Nazeeran, clutches the hand of her toddler.

“Her weight is dropping, even though we consulted many doctors,” the 25-year-old says.

The International Food Policy Research Institute (IFPRI), a poverty and hunger watchdog, estimates around one in five of Pakistan’s more than 200 million people are malnourished.

And yet, the nation is not short of food — in fact, according to the US Department of Agriculture, it is projected to export 500,000 tons of wheat from May 2018 until April 2019, and 7.4 million tons of rice in the same period.

Dawn, the English-language daily newspaper, even reported a potato glut earlier this month.

EXTREME DEPRIVATION

The issues, experts say, are socio-economic — that is, just because food is available, does not mean people can access it.

“There are four key pillars of food security in Pakistan: The first is availability, then accessibility, utilisation and stability,” says Dr Ambreen Fatima, senior research economist at the Applied Economic Research Centre of the Karachi University. —AFP ■

Tokyo 2020 organizers announce venue capacities

TOKYO — Tokyo's New National Stadium will hold a crowd of 68,000 people next year at the 2020 Olympics, organizers said Monday when venue capacities were announced.

Ajinomoto Stadium, which will host soccer and rugby, was listed at 48,000, while the Tokyo Aquatics Center will be able to hold 15,000. Due to cost cutting, some venue capacities are smaller than those estimated in Tokyo's candidature file.

The totals announced will include seating used by officials and others.

For the purpose of ticket sales, the actual number of available seating will be carefully calculated from this point on.

Fukushima's Azuma Stadium, a softball and baseball venue that was not in the candidature file, will have a capacity of 14,300. Shizuoka Prefecture's Fuji Speedway, where the cycling road race will finish, will hold 22,000, while the capacity at the sailing venue at Enoshima Yacht Harbor in Kanagawa Prefecture was given at 3,600.

Zorc dismisses rumours linking Sancho to United

BERLIN (Germany) — Borussia Dortmund sporting director Michael Zorc has dismissed rumours that 19-year-old rising star Jadon Sancho is set for a move back to Manchester.

English youngster Sancho has flourished since joining Dortmund from Manchester City two years ago, and recently signed a contract extension which keeps him at the German club until 2022. Yet Sancho, who picked up an assist in England's 5-0 thrashing of the Czech Republic on Friday, has been repeatedly linked with a return to the Premier League.

A recent report in The Sun alleged that Sancho's agent was in talks with Manchester United, but Dortmund boss Zorc dismissed the rumours as "irrelevant". "I have no knowledge (of the talks), but it is also completely irrelevant," Zorc told Bild.

In a recent interview with the same newspaper, Zorc admitted that it would be hard for Dortmund to hold on to Sancho long-term, but insisted that the youngster would remain at Dortmund next season.

"I can't put a price tag around Jadon's neck but I can say that even the biggest clubs in the world struggle to afford him at the moment," said Zorc.

"Jadon will be playing at Borussia Dortmund next season. But it is obvious that the interest in him will keep growing, especially from English clubs. He will not end his career in Dortmund, that much is true."—AFP ■

Djokovic downs Delbonis, Halep battles into Miami 4th round

MIAMI (United States) — Novak Djokovic remains on course for a record seventh Miami Open title, but the world number one admitted to a loss of focus in a 7-5, 4-6, 6-1 victory over spirited Federico Delbonis which booked his place in the last 16.

Djokovic is hoping to eclipse Andre Agassi's six ATP crowns in South Florida over the next week and although the 31-year-old endured some shaky moments at Hard Rock Stadium, he still possessed enough quality during the key moments to see off the battling Delbonis.

The Serbian, though, wasn't happy with letting a 5-2 advantage slip in the first set and became furious with himself as the second squirmed from his grasp.

He will need to tighten up his game if he is to reach next Sunday's final with Roberto Bautista Agut waiting in the fourth round after the Spaniard defeated Italian Fabio Fognini 6-4, 6-4.

"To be honest, I lost my focus," said Djokovic who smashed 36 winners compared to 24 from Delbonis. "I should have done better I think mentally than I have done at the end of the first two sets.

"I managed to really play well last couple games of first set, go up a break, put myself in front, then I played a couple of really bad service games. Credit to Federico, he stepped in."

Djokovic had looked impressive in the second round win over Bernard Tomic and the Serbian continued his decent form by immediately imposing himself onto the Argentine.

Djokovic moved 5-2 ahead but after he missed a set point opportunity on the Delbonis serve, his game deserted him and suddenly, the South American had a spring in his step.

Delbonis had opportunities to steal ahead, yet calling on all his experience and mental resolve, the Serbian was able to hold firm and take the opener.

The world number one was getting incredibly frustrated, he received a warning for racquet abuse and was furious for allowing a 3-1 lead to slip in the second, yet credit to Delbonis who stayed calm and served out confidently to force a decider, something which looked beyond him midway through the opening set.

He couldn't keep the pressure on, however, and when Djokovic managed to get 3-1 ahead, this time there was no way back for the 28 year-old from Azul who rightly received an ovation from the center court crowd for his monumental efforts.

"I think last four games were terrific, so I ended up in a positive way," Djokovic added.

Defending champion John Isner blew Spain's Albert Ramos-Vinolas off court with serves touching 139 mph as the American sealed an ultimately comprehensive 7-5, 7-6 (8-6) win to set up an intriguing match with Kyle Edmund in the last 16 after the British number one impres-sively saw off Canadian Milos Raonic 6-4, 6-4.

In the women's draw, Simona Halep kept alive hopes of regaining the world number one ranking Sunday, beating Polona Herczeg 5-7, 7-6 (7/1), 6-2 to reach the last 16 where she will play Venus Williams. Halep, 27, lost her place at the top of the rankings following Naomi Osaka's triumph at the Australian Open earlier this year.

But with the Japanese faltering here on Saturday, Halep can return to the position she last held at the end of 2018 if she lands the Miami Open for the first time.

"It's always tough against Venus," said the current world number three, who has beaten the American in their previous three encounters.—AFP ■
