'Love of humanity' essential for helping make lives of others better

ON 19th August, we celebrated World Humanitarian Day. The purpose of World Humanitarian Day is to raise awareness on the plight of civilians caught in conflicts across the world, and also to honour and raise support for humanitarian workers who risk, and sometimes lose, their lives to help others.

World Humanitarian Day was established in 2008 by the United Nations General Assembly and was first celebrated officially in 2009. The date — 19th August — was chosen as it marks the anniversary of the bombing of the Canal Hotel in Baghdad, in which the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Sergio Vieira de Mello, and 20 others had lost their lives.

Besides the Myanmar Red Cross Organization, there are several philanthropic organizations in Myanmar, and it is heartening to see their activities when the country faces disasters. Their activities range from ambulance services to healthcare services, providing aid to disaster victims, providing care to orphans and women, and rescue and evacuation of victims in conflict- or disaster-ridden areas.

Three days before World Humanitarian Day, news arrived of the killing of a philanthropist who tried to rescue those trapped in armed conflict.

The ambulance carrying the local philanthropic association leader and his colleagues was attacked, and some people were also injured in the attack.

People with "love of humanity" are donating their time, money, experience, skills, and talent to help those who are in trouble. In return, they deserve compassion and loving kindness from others, and their safety must be guaranteed.

In Myanmar, some philanthropic associations are registered and are offering their services systematically. Some have not yet registered and are not yet recognized as philanthropic organizations as they cannot provide services systematically.

Meanwhile, under the guise of philanthropic associations, some people are running illegal businesses, including smuggling of timber, which has tarnished the image of the philanthropy.

Even though such fake associations have arisen, their activities cannot hurt the true spirit of philanthropy, which involves giving the gifts of "time, talent, and treasure" to help make life better for other people.

For philanthropists to play a valuable role in Myanmar, their safety needs to be ensured. There is no substitution for philanthropy for the essential work we perform collectively as citizens.

Let's take preparatory measures for natural disasters

(Nyaunglebin)

EXTREMELY Severe Cyclonic Storm Nargis was an uncommonly destructive and deadly cyclone that caused the worst natural disaster in the recorded history of Myanmar. The cyclone made landfall in Myanmar on Friday, 2 May 2008. Nargis developed on 27 April in the central area of Bay of Bengal. Initially, the storm tracked slowly northwestward, and encountering favourable conditions, it quickly strengthened. Nargis rapidly intensified to attain peak winds of at least 165 km/h (105 mph) on 2 May, according to India Meteorological Department — IMD observations; the Joint Typhoon warning Centre — JTWC assessed peak winds of 215 km/h (130 mph). The cyclone moved ashore in the Ayeyawady Division of Myanmar at peak intensity after gaining extra strength near Haingyi Island.

Terrible losses
The natural disaster killed at least 138,000 persons and destroyed USD 10 billion worth of property. Failure to provide help in time had also increased the number of death and the amount of property lost. In one incident, the father survived, but lost all his three children and wife, as he could not hold them till morning.

Worst floods

Cyclone season occurs in the northern Indian Ocean between April and December every year. Most of the cyclones appear during the period between May and November. In 2015, Komen was the worst cyclone. It appeared on 7 July, and intensified into a 75 km/h (45 mph) cyclonic storm. Komen dropped torrential rainfall from 16 June to 30 July in 11 regions and states of Myanmar, causing floods that killed 27 people and hit another 150,000. It destroyed about 170,000 homes, according to the estimated records. The cyclone might trigger the biggest flood in Myanmar. July alone received 600 millimeters or two feet of rain. As the rains were heavy in the upper parts of Myanmar, there were floods in many areas. Chin and Rakhine states and Sagaing and Magway regions were declared disaster-hit zones.

Another tragic event

This year, Mon State, Tanintharyi Region and Kayin State face unprecedented floods. The worst is the landslide that triggered by the downpours in Thanbyugon ward, Thaephyugon village, Paung Township, Mon State. About 14 homes collapsed due to the landslide. A total of 65 persons died and 27 were injured by the landslide. A station hospital in Mottama was inundated. Mawlamyine, Ye and many other towns were facing floods. Chairman of Natural Disaster Management Committee Vice President U Henry Van Thio, Union Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Dr Win Myat Aye and officials arrived at the areas together with relief aids on 11 August. They also made arrangements to facilitate the flow of aids to the disaster-hit areas, in addition to providing direct assistance to the victims. Floods can cause a lot of damages. They can trigger landslides, cause erosion, destroy crops, humans and animals and cause other losses.

Direct impacts

Floods have a lot of direct impacts on the human society. They can cause loss of human lives and farm animals and property. They can also destroy towns and villages, transport and communication facilities, cut off power lines, halt production industries and cause clean water shortages due to contamination. In many cases, floods are followed by epidemics, as waterborne diseases are easy to spread. But it will be difficult to evacuate people or transport or treat victims amidst the floods which make every infrastructure landslide in Mon State is the worst tragedy Myanmar people have faced after the Nargis Cyclone. A large number of people perished in a single catastrophe. It shows that we are still weak in taking natural disaster preparatory measures. We must always be aware of the natural disasters of every kind. It may be difficult to prevent a natural disaster, but we can take preparatory measures to mitigate the impacts. The most important requirement is the awareness that we all should have.

Prevention

Public knowledge of the seasonal natural hazards and preparatory measures should be disseminated. Moreover, regular simulation drills in connection with natural disasters should be conducted in wards, villages and towns, and emergency evacuation programs should be laid down. Infectious diseases prevention, together with search and rescue programs and life saving measures including first aid treatments must be made available during poisonous creatures like snakes may come out of their holes and cause harm to man.

Indirect and long-term impact

Generally, economic losses occur in the aftermath of floods. Many of the crops, businesses and factories were destroyed beyond repair during the inundation. Loss of transport facilities has made everything worse. There will be shortage of crucial goods and rise in commodity prices. Jobs were also lost, and many people are suffering from chronic mental problems due to loss of their family members or property or both. Floods may also turn residences into chronic wet houses which can cause ill health and are unfit for living.

Sun Outage may disrupt television broadcast

SUN Outage may cause disruption to TV and radio channels broadcast by Myanmar Radio and television through Thai-com-6. This can take place from September 25th to October 6th. Signal disruption will last 3 to 15 minutes.

Sun outage is the result of the sun aligned with satellite and the TVRO satellite. It is common that sun outage disrupts the signal from satellite temporarily.

Sun outage occurs every year. It usually takes place one time in March and one time at the end of September or beginning of October.

The phenomenon depends on size and location of TVRO Satellite, as well as differences in when the sun outage happens and how long signal disruption happens.

Nipa palm thatch businesses flourishing in Chaungzone

WITH the price of nipa palm thatches rising in Chaungzone Township, Mon State due to high demand from Yangon, Bilin, Kyaukhto, and Mudon townships, nipa palm businesses are earning a good income, according to locals.

"I have been in this business for a long time, and I have never seen prices as high as the current level. Now, nipa palm thatches are selling well even in the rainy season. Previously, nipa palm thatch businesses were flourishing only in the early monsoon period. Nipa palm thatch makers are doing well now due to the high demand for nipa palm thatches," said a nipa palm thatch business owner.

Normally, nipa palm thatch businesses are suspended during the rainy season. The price of 10 nipa palm thatch sheets was K350, but now, it has increased to K500 due to high demand.

"Earlier, we used to suspend our businesses during the rainy season. But now, the owners of nipa palm farms are doing well and workers are not difficult to find. At least, one third of the profits are left over after the payment of wages and input costs. Over 6,000 sheets of nipa palm thatches can be produced per day, depending on the harvest," said Daw Win Win Maw, a nipa palm thatch business owner.

"During the rainy season, it is difficult to get jobs and some farm owners do crop farming. In our village, nipa palm farm owners are continuing their businesses even in the rainy season, and we are earning between K7,000 and K8,000 per day by making nipa palm thatches. Therefore, we have a convenient source of livelihood even in the rainy season," said a nipa palm maker.

Most of the residents in the villages of Chaungzone Township are doing well with the nipa palm thatch business. Earlier, when the Balukyun-Chaungzone bridge had not been constructed, the Mudon, Ye, and Kyaukkhame townships were purchasing Chaungzone nipa palm thatches only through marine transport. Now, the bridge has made it convenient for the townships to purchase nipa palm thatches from Chaungzone. —IPRD

One-day trips to Pwintbyu, Saku arranged for tourists

ONE-DAY trips are being arranged for local and foreign travellers keen on exploring the cultural heritage of Pwintbyu and Saku townships in Magway Region, said Daw San San Myint, the trip coordinator from My Apex Tour Company, Magway Region.

"Although there are many Bagan-style buildings in Magway Region, few local travellers visit the region. Therefore, we are making arrangements for one-day trips for local and foreign travellers so they can visit Yokesoan Kyaungs in Saku and Pwintbyu townships, and observe the unique traditional hairstyle, known as sayitwaine, worn by young girls in Yayboatgyi Village of Pwintbyu Township. Currently, the trip plan is being drawn by My Apex Tour Company in Magway Region with the help of with Yangon tour companies. "Although local and foreign travellers are visiting Magway Region, they are not aware of the Saku Yokesone Kyaung in our village. After an attempt was made by local residents a year ago, some local and foreign travellers as well as experts have begun visiting the Saku Yokesone Kyaung. And what is more, the local residents are now planning to form a Cultural Heritage Conservation Committee," said U Zaw Myo Oo, a local resident from Saku Township.

The wooden Saku Yokesone Kyaung was constructed during the Yadanarbon period. It was renovated with 172 wooden pillars. The Hmankin Yokesoan Kyaung was constructed in 1242 ME by U Sai and Daw Ngwe. The structure includes 136 wooden pillars and three brick steps.—Min Htet Aung (Man Sub-printing house)

Brand new cars popular despite high demand for right-hand drive vehicles

WHILE brand new cars sold under instalment plans are popular among buyers, the demand for right-hand drive vehicles is still high and they are commanding good prices in the market.

According to the market, car dealers are hoping for the implementation of the Yangon Vehicle Quota Certificate (YVQC) system, which was been discussed by the vehicle import supervisory committee and forwarded to the authorities.

"Sales of right-hand drive cars have remained high amid news of the YVQC, with prices ranging from K20-68 million, depending on the model year. Vehicles assembled locally under the SKD system and sold under instalment plans are ranking second in terms of trade," said a car dealer.

Starting from early August, the Yangon automobile market has cooled as dealers from outside Yangon have not come to purchase vehicles on account of heavy rainfall and flash floods in lower Myanmar.

However, in Mandalay, the market has witnessed regular trade. Dealers usually prefer a Yangon licence to other towns.

According to the automobile market, the price of second-hand cars with right-hand drive vehicles shot up in late 2018 after the authorities announced plans to implement a new car import policy in 2019, under which, imports of right-hand vehicles would be barred.

At present, the market for new cars is also booming, with buyers showing some interest in vehicles assembled locally under the Completely Knocked-down (CKD) and Semi-Knocked Down (SKD) systems. Eighteen companies have been permitted to assemble cars locally so far.—Ko Htet

MIC: No intention of interfering in education businesses

By Nyein Nyein

THE Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) does not intend to interfere in education businesses, and is solely concerned with regulating investment, said U Thant Sin Lwin, the director-general of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

The commission wants education businesses to apply for permits in order to screen them and check whether they are paying taxes and are registered with the MIC or not, he added.

The director-general of DICA made the remarks in response to the controversy over "MIC interference" in the education sector.

"It has been said that the MIC is interfering in education businesses. Some of them do not even hold a registration. They have set up companies and are running businesses without registration. They need to seek a permit from the MIC. We will issue permits to them after obtaining approval from the Ministry of Education and the concerned educational organizations. We will not give a green light to them just for boosting investment. We will not allow them to draw up a curriculum on their own," said U

Thant Sin Lwin.

"We can easily monitor and supervise the businesses if their registry status is valid. We cannot do anything to unregistered businesses. Under the Myanmar Investment Law, the MIC can take legal action against businesses permitted by the commission," he said.

"The MIC will clear investment proposals in the education sector after screening school criteria, school rank, and curriculum. The screening process will be changed once a law drafted by the Ministry of Education comes out. Prior to the law's institution, we are processing applications as per existing rules and regulations of the related education council," he added.

Last year, the DICA released 17 criteria for private educational services.

The MIC began allowing foreigners to set up wholly-owned educational enterprises in the country from April, 2018, as per a DICA notification. Following the liberalization of the education sector to foreign investment, investors from Singapore, Australia, New Zealand, the US, and the UK have expressed interest in investing in Myanmar, according to the DICA.

Asia-Pacific nations rush to conclude trade deal amid tensions

Ministers from 16 Asia-Pacific countries begin talks in Beijing on 3 August, 2019, aimed at concluding the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership agreement. PHOTO: KYODO NEWS

BANGKOK — Amid concerns over rising trade tensions and uncertainty about global economic growth, officials of 16 Asia-Pacific countries have voiced their commitment to speeding up negotiations for an Asia-wide free trade pact, with the hopes of concluding it by November, Thailand said Tuesday.

The Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership is being negotiated among the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations, Australia, China, India, Japan, South Korea and New Zealand.

Auramon Supthaweeethum, director general to the Trade Negotiations Department under the Commerce Ministry, announced Tuesday that a Southeast Asian nations economic ministers meeting and a RCEP ministerial meeting will be held Sept. 3-10 in Bangkok.

She said ministers will attempt to complete the RCEP negotiations in the hopes the trade pact will help promote trade growth in the region.

“The 16 Asia-Pacific countries have acknowledged that they need to conclude the talks so that the pact can be implemented as soon as possible to promote trade growth amid uncertainties about global growth,” Auramon said. The RCEP talks began in 2013, and the initial goal was to wrap them up in 2015. But the deadline has been postponed repeatedly.—Kyodo News ■

Over 3 mil. freelancers in Japan amid rise of flexible working styles

TOKYO — Up to 3.41 million people, accounting for about 5 percent of Japan's total labor force, are estimated to be working as freelancers, according to a recent survey conducted by the government.

Analysts expect the number of freelancers to grow amid the government's push for more flexible working arrangements to address the country's labor shortage, as more companies are allowing employees to take on second or side jobs to increase their incomes.

The government plans to take steps to support such self-employed workers, including submitting a bill to the Diet next year for a new law aimed at enhancing transparency in business practices.

The government recognizes the need to assist freelancers who tend to be pressured into disadvantageous contracts when negotiating with companies, officials said.—Kyodo News ■

Yangon Region sees big inflow of foreign direct investment

By Kyaw Htike Soe

THE Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) approved 17 foreigner-invested projects worth US$ 122.818 million in the last week of July this year. The MIC permitted 17 foreign investment projects worth US$ 123.818 million in Yangon and Bago Regions, Shan and Rakhine States, according to a source from the MIC.

Most of the investment came to the industrial and agricultural sectors, creating nearly 9,600 job opportunities for Myanmar citizens. Arrangements are being made to attract more foreign direct investments in the industrial sector under its Investment Promotion Plan, said U Thant Sin Lwin, Acting Director-General of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration under the Ministry of Investment and Foreign Economic Relations. "We are currently making efforts to woo foreign entrepreneurs to invest in the industrial sector. Five committees were set up under the plan and the industrial sector promotion committee was also formed separately so as to support foreign investment in the industrial sector," he added.

More than half of foreign investment inflows into Yangon Region this fiscal year came from China, said an official from the Yangon Region Investment Committee. "Yangon Region welcomed 113 foreign investment projects in the current financial year in which 65 projects were from China. China topped the list of foreign investors in Yangon Region," he said. He continued that foreign investment in Yangon Region during this fiscal year totaled over US$ 210 million

In addition he also pledged to implement a plan to promote foreign investment in the region, he added.

The regional investment committee also approved six foreign investment projects in accordance with the Myanmar Investment Law in late July. The permitted foreign investment projects are valued at US$ 11.545 million and can create up to 4,868 job opportunities. 124 foreigner-invested projects and 17 Myanmar citizen-invested projects worth US$ 210.360 million and Ks. 33978.966 million flowed into Yangon Region from 1 October 2018 to 24 July 2019, creating 72,375 job opportunities for local people, according to the data from the regional investment committee. The regional investment committee also approved eight foreigner-invested projects and one Myanmar citizen-invested project that will be implemented in Yangon Region. The decision was made during the investment committee’s monthly meeting held on 13 August.

The FDI to be channeled into Yangon is worth US$ 10.239 million while the capital of Myanmar citizen-invested venture is valued at Ks. 1.675 billion. The approved projects are expected to create up to nearly 6,000 job opportunities for local people, according to the regional investment committee. “Some foreign companies want to invest in garment sector which can employ many people.

At the same time, we are trying out utmost to create a more attractive and foreign investor-friendly business environment in the region, Yangon Region Minister for Kayin Ethnic Affairs Naw Pan Thinzar Myo told the reporters after the investment committee’s meeting.

The Urban and Housing Development Department (UHDD) under the Ministry of Construction of Myanmar and the Korea Land and Housing Corporation from the Republic of Korea sealed a deal to jointly set up an industrial complex in Hlegu Township, Yangon Region on 7 August. Under the agreement, an industrial zone named “the Korea-Myanmar Industrial Complex” will be developed on nearly 600 acres of land in NyaungHna Bin Village, Hlegu Township at an estimated cost of about US$ 110 million. The industrial complex will include SMEs, heavy industry and a vocational training school and will support the development of industrial, export and human resource sectors in Yangon Region.

As many as 200 Korean firms are expected to make investments in the industrial complex which will create 50,000 to 100,000 job opportunities for local people and generate US$ 10 million in taxes annually. In addition, the local government inked a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with a consortium from Hong Kong and Taiwan to establish a US$ 500-million industrial zone on 2,200 acres of land in Htantabin Township.

Construction of the project is slated to start by the end of September this year and is expected to create around 100,000 job opportunities.

Gamers risk health in bid to be eSports millionaires

SHANGHAI(China)— A record $33.5 million is up for grabs but professional eSports players like those competing in The International in Shanghai this week pay a physical price with deteriorating eyesight, digestive problems and wrist and hand damage.

At first, Evgenii "Blizzy" Ri looks perplexed at the notion: "It's impossible, how can you get injuries when you play games?"

Then the 24-year-old from Kyrgyzstan discloses that a doctor urged him to take six months off to give his failing vision a badly needed rest.

Ri plays for NatusVincere, or NAVI, and this week is competing in The International, a world championship said to have the biggest prize pool in the history of eSports.

NAVI and 17 other teams will play the multiplayer battle game Dota 2 in front of thousands of fans at a major indoor stadium while hundreds of thousands more will watch online.

If NAVI triumph on Sunday, Ri and his team-mates will become instant millionaires — but success could come at a price.

"I didn't worry before but now I feel like my eyes are really... I can't see so much," said Ri, who practises up to 12 hours a day.

"Ten years I've been playing computers so they are a bit... I've just got bad vision.

Ri has been told to wear glasses but he does not find them comfortable and said that his deteriorating eyesight does not hinder his performance because the screen is up close.

A doctor recommended simple eye exercises — moving them up and down, left and right — but he admits that he does not do them.

"Actually he also told me not to play the computer for six months to get back my vision, but I didn't listen.

"I need to play."

'My body is so sore'

According to several players in Shanghai, the most common health complaint for pro gamers is Carpal Tunnel syndrome.

Not unique to gamers, it happens through repetitive hand and wrist motions and is characterised by numbness, burning and tingling of the thumb, index, middle and ring fingers.

In severe cases surgery is required. Some gamers talked about wrist injuries so severe they had to quit and lower back problems related to sitting for too long, day after day.—AFP ■

Manchester United 'disgusted' by racist abuse of Pogba

LONDON (United Kingdom)— Manchester United said they "utterly condemn" the racist abuse their World Cup-winning midfielder Paul Pogba received after he missed a penalty in the 1-1 draw with Wolverhampton Wanderers on Monday.

The 26-year-old Frenchman has missed four penalties since the start of last season — the most by a Premier League player — while team-mate and fellow penalty-taker Marcus Rashford has converted all four of his attempts in that time. Pogba was assailed on social media, becoming the third player in England to have received racist abuse in the past week due to missing a penalty.

United said they were "disgusted" by the abuse and "utterly condemn" it. "The individuals who expressed these views do not represent the values of our great club and it is encouraging to see the vast majority of our fans condemn this on social media also," the club said in a statement.

"Manchester United has zero tolerance of any form of racism or discrimination and a long-standing commitment to campaigning against it through our #AllRedAllEqual initiative. "We will work to identify the few involved in these incidents and take the strongest course of action available to us. We also encourage social media companies to take action in these cases."—AFP ■
