Coord meeting aims to produce ethnic rights strategic plan

A two-day coordination meeting to familiarize the public with the Ethnic Rights Protection Bylaw and initiate drafting of a strategic plan for ethnic rights was held at Mingalar Thiri Hotel in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Firstly, Union Minister for Ethnic Affairs Nai Thet Lwin addressed the meeting. He said they collected the opinions of the ethnic people into a survey while conducting information sharing sessions on the Ethnic Rights Protection Law with them.

He said they began the legislative process for the accompanying bylaw in 2017 and was finally ratified on 23 August, 2019. He said they will continue working to materialize a strategic plan which will serve as a roadmap for ethnic affairs in conjunction with yearly action plans.

The Union Minister pointed out that different unique ethnic races reside side by side in Myanmar and everyone is entitled to the same human rights and constitutional rights.

He said if the prioritized tasks in the strategic plan are implemented properly every year then the unequal development rates between the ethnic brothers and sisters will lessen, armed conflicts will come to an end, and support national peace and the establishment of a democratic federal republic.

Next, Deputy Ethnic Affairs Minister U Hla Maw Oo said the outcome of this meeting and the decisions made by the ethnic people will be recorded. He said they will develop the National Races Village (Yangon) so that ethnic festivals can be organized there at the national level while coordinating with the administration of the Yangon Region government.

Myanmar Permanent Representative makes rebuttal statements to Special Rapporteur and FFM at interactive dialogues

He also explained about Myanmar's peace-making and peace-building efforts with ethnic armed groups and said participation of civil society, women and youth, persons with disabilities presents "a testimony of inclusive peace process" in Myanmar.

With regard to Rakhine issue, he stressed, the government is taking "the holistic and inclusive approach". He recalled the terror attacks of ARSA on 30 police outposts as well as their threat and horrific atrocities against innocent people, which is the main cause of the exodus. He further explained about the 3 visits of Myanmar high-level delegations to Cox's Bazar and 3 attempts to commence repatriation. He talked about the movement in the Camps to hinder repatriation, including ARSA's threat and NGOs and stated, "The plight of displaced persons has been exploited for political agenda". He highlighted the need of creating conducive condition in the camps for displaced persons to express the truth without any fear or influence.

He reaffirmed that Myanmar is "willing and able" to address accountability issue and rejected any mechanism or attempt to refer Myanmar to international judicial body.

With regard to Myanmar's position on Ms. Yanghee Lee, he mentioned the Parliament unanimously denounced on her absence of impartiality, objectivity and good faith. Then, he explained Myanmar's cooperation with the relevant UN mechanisms. He stated that non-constructive approach, selective manner, retributive measures and undue pressure in the name of human rights, will, in no way, stimulate any positive change in Myanmar. He stressed the need of constructive support by international community to achieve human rights realization in Myanmar.

In the rebuttal statement to FFM and its reports, the Permanent Representative underscored the strong rejection of whole of Myanmar - the Government, Chambers of Commerce, Confederation of Trade Unions in Myanmar (CTUM), UEHRD, private companies - to FFM's reports and its unfounded allegations. Those reports are simply called "the Darusman's reports". He reiterated Myanmar's strong rejection to FFM since its establishment and its less than objective reports as well as its purported conclusions and recommendations. He reaffirmed that Myanmar strongly rejected its extension, the IIM, and said it is "selective discriminatory scrutinization on Myanmar".

"People of Myanmar, who used to stand with the UN in their long struggle for democracy and human rights, are increasingly disappointed with less than objective stand taken by some elements of the UN with regard to Myanmar", strongly stated by the Permanent Representative. He stressed that the work of FFM should not be allowed "to cast a dark shadow" over the Human Rights Council and the UN system as a whole. He expressed Myanmar's concern about the narrative of FFM for economic isolation as it could inflict economic hardship to millions of innocent people and cause negative impact on the enjoyment of all human rights, including the right to development.

He pointed out that the report painted a distorted picture of UEHRD, the humanitarian body. He rejected FFM's blame on Myanmar for border fencing as Myanmar has the sovereign right to construct border fencing along its demarcated boundary for security and to prevent illegal border crossing.

He also pointed out that FFM fully adheres to what it wants to focus. The atrocities and massacre of hundreds of innocent ethnic minorities by ARSA were "deliberately discounted in FFM's findings", he said.

Furthermore, he apprised the Council of the efforts by the Government in preventing sexual violence, addressing alleged violations by taking action upon credible evidence. He stated, "Impunity is not accepted by policy or by practice". He clarified the wrong usage of the terminologies by FFM with regard to the word "Clearance Operation", which was counter-insurgency operation and not clearing the whole area. He concluded by calling for constructive support and cooperation of international community to promote social and economic progress, strengthen democratization process, and benefit to further political reforms, according to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.—MNA

YRTA yet to receive report on issuing of import slips for de-registered vehicles

By Nyein Nyein

THE Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA) said it is yet to receive a report on issuing of import slips for family-use cars in return for de-registration of old vehicles from the 1999 to 2003 model years.
Although the report has not been submitted to the YRTA, vehicle owners are preparing to take out import slips, said U Hla Aung, the joint secretary of the transport authority.
“The YRTA has granted permission for de-registration in return for import slips. So, we have requested car owners to register with the YRTA to de-register car models manufactured between 1999 and 2003. Some vehicle owners are now making preparations in this respect. Some are still in discussions with the companies to de-register the vehicles,” he added.

The Yangon Region government had obtained permission from the Ministry of Transport and Communications to issue import slips and de-register buses from the 1999 to 2003 model years, which are in poor condition, have low energy efficiency, and do not match the city features.
“The owners of old model buses should not suffer great losses when they de-register their buses. They should be given a chance to buy shares in the company. This means that we ought to let them invest in the YRTA. Even if the owners do not want to invest in the company, they should not suffer great losses in disposing of their vehicles,” said U Hla Aung.

With the granting of the permission for de-registration, bus owners will be at ease, said Ko Tayote Lay, the managing director of Power Eleven public company.
All bus lines have been apprised of the situation. Currently, there are over 700 YBS buses from the 1999-2003 model years. Compressed Natural Gas (CNG) purchase permits for buses that are de-registered and whose owners are granted import slips will have to be surrendered.

“CNG is being provided for cheaper transport of passengers. So, they will have to give the CNG permit back. And this has been practiced for a long time,” said U Hla Aung. The Union government has been allowing de-registration of old vehicles since 2011. Earlier, only buses from the model year 1999 were allowed to be de-registered. ■

Monywanites investing in properties worth over K100 mln

HIGH-priced properties are selling well these days, with Monywanites investing in properties in the K100-600 million price range in downtown Monywa, said Ko Htay Thein, a real estate agent from Monywa.

“Earlier, property owners quoted high prices. Now, they are open to selling their estates at a reduced price. So, purchasers are showing their willingness to buy apartments downtown. From 2019, some downtown areas such as Aung Mingalar, Ahlae, Sulegon, and Phonesoe along the Bogyoke Road have become a favorite among buyers. The main purchasers of Monywa real estate are businessmen, Yangon companies, private hospital investors, and private school investors,” said Ko Htay Thein.

Earlier, entrepreneurs and real estate agencies were buying and selling prime properties in Monywa town for K1 billion. But now, properties worth K100-600 million are finding buyers in the market.

“Annually, properties in Chanmyawady which are located near Monywa University sell better than those situated in other places in the market. After 2017, property prices in Chanmyawady have become stable, and the properties are being sold at normal prices,” said Ko Htay Thein.

“Earlier, the price of an 80x60 square feet ground floor apartment was around K20 million. Now, a flat of this measurement near Thazi road is being sold in the range of K30-K40 million.

Although the house owners have decided to sell apartments at lower prices, the agencies are increasing the prices of the properties for their own profit,” he added.—Myo Win Tun (Monywa) ■ (Translated by Hay Mar)

High wages, input costs hit businesses at start of beekeeping season

WHILE plum flowers are in full bloom in Kani Township, Sagaing Region, labor wages and input costs for relocating beehives have climbed up this season, according to beekeepers.

Normally, over 30 villages in Kani Township undertake honey production during the plum blossom season. But, bee business owners are spending more on workers’ wages and input costs this year compared to the previous year.

In the present production season, the wages of workers have risen to K6,000 per day, and the cost of renting a 17-foot vehicle is in the range of K280,000 per trip. Last year, the wages of workers were K4,000 per day and the rental rate for vehicles was K250,000 per trip, according to beekeeping business owners.

There are around 900 registered beekeepers in Myanmar. The country produces 7,000 tons of honey a year. It exports 2,400 tons of honey annually.

Myanmar honey is exported annually to the United States, Canada, South Korea, Singapore, Malaysia, Thailand, China, and Japan. Beekeeping businesses could help reduce the poverty rate in rural areas by creating more job opportunities, said officials.

Myanmar produced 10,875.81 metric tons of honey in the past three fiscal years from 2013-2014 to 2015-2016, of which 8,471.24 metric tons was exported.—Win Oo (Zayar Tine)/ Ko Htet ■ (Translated by La Wonn)

Domestic investments reach K1,677 bln in current fiscal

BETWEEN 1 October and 14 September in the current fiscal year, domestic investments by Myanmar citizens reached K1,677 billion and US$469.78 million, including expansion of capital by existing enterprises, according to a recent press statement issued by the Myanmar Investment Commission.

During the eleven-and-a-half-month period, 165 local enterprises were allowed to invest in various sectors, with estimated capitals of over K1,416 billion and $376.6 million.

Investments primarily flowed into the real estate sector. Investors also parked funds in the manufacturing, hotels and tourism, construction, industrial estate, energy, mining, livestock and fisheries, agriculture, and other services sectors, according to figures from the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

To simplify the verification process of investment projects, the Myanmar Investment Law has allowed the regional and state investment committees to endorse local and foreign proposals, where the initial investment does not exceed K6 billion, or $5 million.

While some projects no longer need MIC approval, businesses that are strategic to the government require a permit from the commission. In addition, businesses that have large capital investments exceeding $5 million and projects which may have a possible impact on the environment and the local community need to be approved by the DICA’s proposal assessment team.

With a fast-track way of setting up a business in Myanmar having been introduced, investors can apply to the MIC or the state and regional investment committees for endorsement of their investment proposals, depending on the business type.—GNLM ■ (Translated by Ei Myat Mon)

Myanmar fishery exports up $15 mln in Oct-Aug

By Aye Yamone

EXPORT earnings from the fishery sector for the period from October 2018 to August 2019 in the current fiscal year amounted to around US$667.007 million, which is an increase of $15.778 million compared to the year-ago period, according to the Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF).

During the October-August period in the 2017-2018FY, Myanmar had exported 536,396.005 tons of fishery products, worth $651.219 million. During the same period in the 2018-2019FY, the country has exported 544,533.187 tons of fishery products, worth $667.007 million. So, the export volume has increased by 8,137.132 tons, worth $15.778 million, in the current FY.

“Myanmar has earned $667 million from export of fishery products within 11 months. This means it has earned just $60 million per month. If we add $60 million for the month of September, our earnings will total only $720 million, which will be a slight increase compared with last year. This is because of problems in the trade route between China and Myanmar. This could have affected the export of fishery products. In addition, Myanmar had also banned fishing in the no-fishing season,” said U Win Kyaing, the general secretary of the MFF.

Between 1 April, 2018 and 31 March, 2019, export earnings from the fisheries sector reached an all-time high of $720 million.

Myanmar earned $482 million from the fisheries sector in the 2014-2015FY, $502 million in the 2015-2016FY, and $652 million in the 2016-2017FY.

Currently, the Myanmar government has permitted exports of only natural fishery products such as fish and prawns to China because China has restricted fishery imports due to concerns over food safety. Therefore, the export of some fish and prawns, which are not listed with the General Administration of Customs (GACC), may prove to be difficult.

“The volume of Myanmar’s fishery exports is still much lower than its neighboring countries. Therefore, we need to adopt good breeding practices to promote exports,” according to the fisheries department.

Myanmar exports fishery products such as fish, prawns, and crabs to over 40 countries, including China, Saudi Arabia, Japan, and Thailand. ■ (Translated by Hay Mar)

UNESCO Global Geopark tag for Mount Popa would bring pride to local community

MYANMAR has some sites which are worthy of being designated as Global Geoparks by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Of these sites, an area spanning over 360 square miles around Mandalay Region's Mount Popa has good potential as a UNESCO Global Geopark site.

Geologists have discovered animal fossils, including jaws of elephants that could be between 20 and 25 million years old, teeth fossils, and deer horns, and a furnace from the Bagan era in the area around Mount Popa, which is also rich in biodiversity.

The discoveries at the Popa Geopark area are invaluable for geological studies. Steps are under way to get the area designated as a Global Geopark.

The purpose of establishing geoparks is to protect important and rare geological resources and the natural environment, carry out geoscience research, and promote the sustainable development of the local society.

UNESCO's work with geoparks began in 2001. At present, there are 147 UNESCO Global Geoparks in 41 countries. UNESCO Global Geoparks are single, unified geographical areas, where sites and landscapes of international geological significance are managed through a holistic approach involving protection, education, and sustainable development.

A UNESCO Global Geopark uses its geological heritage, in connection with all other aspects of the area's natural and cultural heritage, to improve awareness and understanding of key issues facing society, such as using our earth's resources in a sustainable manner, mitigating the effects of climate change, and reducing natural disaster-related risks.

By raising awareness of the importance of the area's geological heritage in history and society today, UNESCO Global Geoparks give local people a sense of pride in their region and strengthen their identification with the area.

As the nature of a geopark is different from Ramsar sites and sanctuaries, which are under the management of the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation, we need cooperation from the ministries and organizations concerned to get the Mount Popa area designated as a Global Geopark.

According to the UNESCO's description of geoparks, a Global Geopark designation requires a commitment from local communities and a long-term agenda that involves "showcasing and protecting the area's geological heritage".

The Global Geopark Working Committee, which was formed recently, would work to reach that goal and carry out necessary tasks once the area gets the UNESCO tag.

The inclusion of the Mount Popa area on UNESCO's list would be the first such honor for Myanmar.

The Global Geopark Working Committee, which was formed recently, would work to reach that goal and carry out necessary tasks once the area gets the UNESCO tag.

Myanma Motion Picture Museum to celebrate 100 years of Myanmar movies

DURING the long journey of one hundred years, shortage of raw films had been experienced in movie world.

Production of movie had been totally stopped in 1945 during the Second World War, which pushed the artistes in engaging the performances of stage show called drama or play during day time, as the night time performance was unsafe from aerial bombing from aircrafts if they saw lights on the grounds.

Movie production re-started after the war with all the strain, struggling and stumbling blocks. The most difficult part of the film industry was the shortage and scarcity of movie films.

He continued by saying that among the difficulties, the film that can be dubbed and recorded with the dialogues while shooting were extremely in short supply and mostly out of stock. It was therefore, the film under referral was to be divided and cut into two portions and kept for the future.

It has been quite a journey of one hundred years with many difficulties having a hard time in the production of Myanmar movies which eventually has to be proud of. Myanmar movies had started with "Myittar and Thuyar". Moreover, the Centenary of Myanmar Movies event is coincided with two other events, and therefore, the commemoration would be memorable, he continued.

During the Second World War in 1945, there was no shooting of films and that the artistes were displaced elsewhere in the country evading from the war at their own villages or small home towns, resulting with the stoppage of Myanmar movie production for some years.

However, the large cities such as Yangon and Mandalay had hosted with entertainments such as play or drama during day time, literally, a transfer of artistic presentation from movie to a play performed on stage rather than broadcast or made into a film.

Artistes from the Myanmar movie sphere engaged themselves in jobs that they could catch up during the war time.

Entering back into the arena of movie production, they faced the difficulties in the shortage of films. Lack in equipments and need of expertise, they tried to stand on own two feet locally and struggled through the years.

Cutting the movie films with sound recordings into two parts of films, they survived.

Veteran movie actor U Than Win said, "I had entered into the movie world in 1967, and now, it is time to celebrate Movie Centenary. As I have had the opportunity in celebrating the Golden Jubilee and the Diamond Jubilee, I am looking forward to celebrating the Myanmar Movie Centenary with much pride and honor. The Diamond Jubilee event was celebrated at the Pavilion in the premises of Myoma State High School and the Tatmadaw Hall. During our time, the movie production was made with the film and therefore, we had to handle with extreme care never to spoil the film in anyway. Time has changed and that we could produce the movies at our own convenient and time. The acting process of the movie stars had also changed compared to our times. Nowadays, movie could be shot from many views and angles, which was not possible during our times."

U Than Win continued that a full movie could be shot in twenty days and that some movie took time for one month. We all worked in happy mood in unity and helped each other, and above all, we accorded respect to each other. We are on the eve of celebrating the Myanmar Movie Centenary, and that we are very much grateful to the movie lovers and the people who always support and encourage Myanmar movies.

Until today, those who had worked in the Myanmar movie domain for many years really deserved high praise and honor for their dedication. Passing on from one generation to the next, they carried the onerous job through fate, intellect, wisdom, and diligent.

With these at the backdrops, the stakeholders in the movie world and the movie lovers as a whole have the opportunity to celebrate the Myanmar Movie Centenary.

In recent days in the movie domain, the artistes those are alive in the memorable old days of the Silver Jubilee of 1970 remained very few in number, and therefore, the celebration of the Myanmar Movie Centenary is to be proud of. The Golden Jubilee celebration was first held in Mandalay, and then in Yangon. The Diamond Jubilee was celebrated in remain in the back row on the instruments and apparatuses and the expertise in movie production. Artistic presentation as she considered is on same degree, footing, level, place, and position.

With regards to the cultural aspect of the artists, she endorsed to value own nationals and people along with the implication of arts so as to have compact national culture. Otherwise the bad dress code and too showy of flesh would be leading to bad behavior and poor culture. She pointed out the independence of Myanmar which was regained through the sacrifice of many lives. She warned that if the nation's independence was lost, there is no way to get it back.

She said that "United we stand, divided we fall" is very well-known saying which is designed to stir people up to greater unity, including the movie world. One must have optimistic outlook, and if someone is pessimistic, the person is to be extended with helping hand. When the cynical people are on the rise, one must exemplify for good nature and persuade the others. If we could create such good scenario in real life, the artistic world

The religion, culture, and fine arts of a nation stand out as its intangible and priceless heritage, and the lofty beginnings of the Myanmar fine arts would be chronicled at the Myanmar movies centenary.

Mega star Daw Nwe Nwe Sann, who is still entertaining the audience, has recounted, "Time passes by very quickly as we are ready to celebrate Myanmar Movie Centenary. I am proud as I could take part in the celebration. During one hundred years time we were able to produce skillfully in script writing, cinematography, editing, sound, well acted, cohesive and internally consistent story that has the ability to elicit emotion, set mood and guide a reaction. Of course, there were sub-standard Myanmar movies. Whatever it may be, an actor needs to work hard, though the ambition to be a star has no easy way out. To become a top-notch movie director would be laborious, hard, arduous, strenuous and demanding so also in producing a good movie."

She continued by saying that she was thankful to the old artistes for their endeavors in the movie world and also expressed appreciation to the current artistes.

Daw Nwe Nwe Sann said she was of the view that the artistic presentation of Myanmar is on a par with the global norm. She viewed that the situation might would remain forever.

In the recent past, the renowned movie actress Daw Tin Tin Mu was the most gorgeous mega star of her time in Myanmar movie domain with exceptional and unique acting style.

Most adorable mega star was Daw Kyi Kyi Htay, and had fashionable hairdo in Myanmar style and had unforgettable performances.

Among the top mega actresses, the list was filled with the names such as Daw Khin Ohn Myint, Daw May Thit, and Daw Myint Myint Htay, whose acting in the movies were perfect and stylish, but actually the decent clothing had successfully won the hearts of the movie lovers. Their styles are to be emulated.

Over the years, it could be termed as the time for disgusting sentiments over the ostentatious outfits showing too much flesh by some female movie stars.

Myanmar mindset are embedded with sense of shyness, sense of propriety, full of compassion, and feel for pity that other people on this planet have lesser chance to catch up with.

Self-respect and self-esteem are to be valued and that the traits are to be shared and disseminated to the young ones with the mutual respect basis. Culture and the fine arts are to be preserved.

Most popular Myanmar movies namely "Htar Thakin" and "Mone" are no more in our hands. Moreover, the famous movie "Bo Aung Din" was also gone. Preservation is the needy aspect in the Myanmar movie realm.

Paradoxically, most of the professionals in the movie sphere just survived in lesser income, and remained poor. They lacked in technical know-how for the preservation of films. The most essential part in this topic is the interest, the natural bent and the hobby.

When all the stakeholders uphold the values of fine arts, the chronicle of Myanmar movie would remain more colorful and shining. Daw Nwe Nwe San sincerely wishes for the emergence of persons coming up with the determination in uplifting the standard of Myanmar movie so as to remain in the annals of Myanmar movie history forever. Wishing for the development of Myanmar Motion Picture Museum with the modern technology is also her aspiration.

May the Myanmar movie domain stays in sustainable status is also her prayer.

Myanmar movies stand tall to a certain extent on this planet by showing some innovations in their movie production. Citation for this statement is the movie "Mya Ga Nine" which presented with daring adventures including the flying of hot air balloon in the movie production.

Many good movies had been produced by the founding fathers of Myanmar movie world.

Myanmar movie Centenary is just around the corner.

Doors of the Myanmar Motion Picture Museum are going to open up for the public soonest in the month of October 2019.

The religion, culture, and fine arts of a nation stand out as its intangible and priceless heritage, and the lofty beginnings of the Myanmar fine arts would be chronicled at the Myanmar movies centenary.

Sustainable development of the Myanmar Motion Picture Museum is on the agenda and the unity and unison among the stakeholders of the Myanmar movie sphere would remain strong with strength for many years to come.

In conclusion, I wish that a red carpet is literally laid out for dignitaries to walk on at the Myanmar movie Centenary celebration with the high honor for those who involved in making the Myanmar movie bright and shiny.

Indian solo cyclist on 7-nation tour arrives in Yangon

Ji Ingobi Chingtham, a 21-year-old cyclist from Imphal, Manipur, India arrived in Yangon on 18 September as part of his solo seven-nation tour. The seven-month tour will spread the idea of One World One Family, or global integration, he said.

Ji Ingobi Chingtham visited the Shwedagon and Botataung Pagodas and the Indian Embassy in Yangon.

"In Myanmar, I feel so really happy because the people of Myanmar show kindness and sympathy to foreigners. When I was travelling from Mandalay, one of the locals on the roadside asked me: 'Brother, where do you come from? Did you have any food?' He offered me breakfast. So, I had some breakfast with him. The people are really good. Now, the country is developed. Earlier, a people were wary of travelling through the border pass between India and Myanmar. Nowadays, people from India and Myanmar can easily travel to and fro, and I would like to share my message with the people of both the nations. The road is very nice, somewhere between Tamu and Mandalay, the road is very hilly."

China urges US to stop pushing for Hong Kong bill

BEIJING — China on Thursday urged the United States to stop supporting a Hong Kong human rights and democracy bill scheduled to be voted on by US congressional committees next week.

“China expresses its strong dissatisfaction and resolute opposition” to the Hong Kong-related bill and calls on the United States to “stop acting as a violent radical force in Hong Kong,” Foreign Ministry spokesman Geng Shuang said at a regular press briefing.

In reiterating that “Hong Kong affairs are purely China’s internal affairs and should not be interfered by any foreign forces,” Geng also advised the United States to abide by the basic norms of international law and “earnestly respect China’s sovereignty.”

On Wednesday, US House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi held a press conference with both Republican and Democratic House members along with Hong Kong pro-democracy activists to support the Hong Kong Human Rights and Democracy Act of 2019. If passed, the current

Lebanon exhibits drones used in alleged Israeli attack

BEIRUT — Lebanon’s defence minister on Thursday exhibited two drones he said Israel had sent last month into a Beirut bastion of the Shiite militant group Hezbollah.

Elias Bou Saab displayed a pair of drones — one intact and the remains of the other — and used slides to give a detailed account of the alleged Israeli operation.

He said the devices were “advanced military production” and even listed the name and address of one Israeli company he said made some of the components.

The August 25 drone incident in Beirut, which came a day after Israeli strikes targeted Hezbollah operatives in Syria, drastically raised tensions in the region.

Lebanon’s government and Hezbollah chief Hassan Nasrallah both described the apparently botched operation as an act of aggression. Israel’s and Hezbollah’s respective patrons, the United States and Iran, have been locked in an escalating tit-for-tat proxy war in recent months.

Bou Saab said that the data retrieved from the intact drone — from which the explosive charge was purportedly removed for the press conference — offered a set of detailed times and locations.—AFP ■

Venezuelan gov’t, agricultural industry discuss output expansion amid US sanctions

CARACAS — The Venezuelan government and agricultural producers on Wednesday discussed increasing production to cope with shortages caused by U.S. sanctions, a top official said.

The government’s economic team met with representatives from the agricultural sector as part of renewed conciliation talks between the ruling socialist party and the opposition groups, Vice President Delcy Rodriguez said.

“We can say it is a true economic dialogue to continue to consolidate the expansion of the productive forces,” she said.

Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro has called on the productive sector to help combat sanctions imposed by Washington in a bid to pressurise the South American country.

“It is a total embargo against Venezuela, it is a shipping blockade against Venezuela, and the way out is production,” said Rodriguez.—Xinhua ■

Germany targets Airbus in military spying probe

FRANKFURT AM MAIN — German authorities on Thursday were looking into how Airbus employees came to see confidential military documents, the latest in a series of scandals to hit the aerospace giant.

Munich prosecutors “are investigating 17 named suspects and further thus far unknown perpetrators over revealing, or incitement to reveal, trade and company secrets,” the investigators told AFP.

Airbus said in a statement Wednesday that it had reported itself to the authorities.

“Some of our employees had documents that they shouldn’t have had,” an Airbus source said.

The confidential documents relate to two planned military procurement projects. In cooperation with prosecutors, the defence ministry is “clearing up what kind of documents are involved,” said a spokesman, Lieutenant Colonel Lars Ebinger. “We can’t rule out that these might be documents Airbus had permission to see.”

The Airbus workers concerned were at the Munich-based Programme Line Communications, Intelligence and Security (CIS), which handles cybersecu-rity and related activities.

In its statement, the company said it had “self-declared to German authorities potential wrongdoing by several employees with respect to certain customer documents relating to two future German procurement projects” handled by CIS.

It added it was conducting an “ongoing internal review with the support of an external law firm” and “fully cooperating with relevant authorities to resolve the matter”. Politicians were quick to call for consequences for the contractor firm. “In normal life, a company would be shut out from the tender process for the projects in question” after such revelations, Greens party defence spokesman Tobias Lindner told daily Die Welt.

It is “problematic that employees at a defence firm should know in advance the army’s requirements for its future projects,” agreed fellow defence committee member Alexander Mueller of the Free Democratic Party (FDP). Defence spokesman Ebinger said before results from the investigation are available, it will be impossible to predict the impact on procurement.—AFP ■

Senior Saudi military commander killed in bomb explosion in Yemen

ADEN — A senior commander of the Saudi Arabia-led coalition forces and five of his bodyguards were killed in a bomb explosion in Yemen’s southeastern province of Hadramout on Thursday.

“A roadside bomb blast struck a military patrol of the Saudi-led coalition forces in the historic town of Shibam in Hadramout province,” said a government official who asked to remain anonymous.

The Yemeni official based in Hadramout pointed out that the roadside bomb blast resulted in killing a Saudi army commander named as Abu Nawaf along with five of his bodyguards. Around 11 other soldiers were injured as a result of the bomb blast that struck their military patrol in Shibam controlled by Yemeni government forces, according to the official.

Australia blocks 'unacceptable' South Korean coal mine

SYDNEY — An Australian planning watchdog on Wednesday blocked the development of a large South Korean-owned coal mine, citing concerns about long-lasting "environmental impacts" that would hurt future generations.

India bans e-cigarettes as vaping backlash grows

NEW DELHI — India announced on Wednesday a ban on the sale of electronic cigarettes, as a backlash gathers pace worldwide due to health concerns about a product promoted as less harmful than smoking tobacco.

The Indian announcement, also outlawing production, import and distribution, came a day after New York became the second US state to ban flavoured e-cigarettes following a string of vaping-linked deaths.

"The decision was made keeping in mind the impact that e-cigarettes have on the youth of today," Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman told reporters in New Delhi.

E-cigarettes do not "burn" but instead heat up a liquid — tasting of everything from bourbon to bubble gum and which usually contains nicotine — that turns into vapour and is inhaled.

estimated 7,000 chemicals in tobacco smoke but does contain a number of substances that could potentially be harmful.

They have been pushed by producers, and also by some governments including in Britain, as a safer alternative to traditional smoking — and as a way to kick the habit. However critics say that apart from being harmful in themselves, the flavours of e-cigarette liquids appeal particularly to children and risk getting them addicted to nicotine.

Indonesia's toxic haze affecting Borneo's orangutans - rescuers

JAKARTA — Massive forest fires in Indonesia that have caused a toxic haze to spread as far as Singapore and peninsular Malaysia are also seriously affecting endangered orangutans and their habitat, a rescue foundation said Tuesday.

Jakarta has deployed thousands of troops as temporary fireman and deployed dozens of water-bombing aircraft to battle blazes that are turning pristine forest into charred landscape in Sumatra and Borneo islands.

The fires — usually started by illegal burning to clear land for farming — have unleashed a choking haze across parts of southeast Asia.

The Borneo Orangutan Survival Foundation said Tuesday that the haze was affecting hundreds of great apes in its care at rescue centres and wildlife re-introduction shelters.

"The thick smoke does not only endanger the health of our staff... but also it affects the 355 orangutans we currently care for", the foundation said in a statement, referring to just once centre in Kalimantan. "As many as 37 young orangutans are suspected to have contracted a mild respiratory infection," it added.—AFP ■

Tiny penguin's clean bill of health after epic NZ-Australia swim

SYDNEY — A tiny penguin that made the mammoth journey from New Zealand to Australia has been nursed back to health and released into the wild — in the hope it will find its own way home.

The emaciated Fiordland penguin was found struggling on rocks near Lorne, south of Melbourne, about 2,500km (1,500 miles) from its native habitat of New Zealand. Melbourne Zoo head of veterinary services Michael Lynch said the bird was so underweight it had to be gradually reintroduced to food and the water over several weeks. "Over time it began to put on weight again," he said. "We then started to reintroduce it to water when it was strong enough to swim to help build up some muscle."

Fiordland penguins are known to swim large distances to forage for food, sometimes even spending so long in the ocean that they grow barnacles on their tails.

They are classified as a threatened species, with an estimated 5,000 left in the wild.

After two months of care it earned a bill of good health this month. It has now been micro-chipped and released at a beach on Phillip Island, off the Victoria state coast.—AFP ■

Italy's Enel to reduce CO2 emissions 70% by 2030

MILAN — Italian energy giant Enel said Wednesday it plans to reduce its direct greenhouse gas emissions by 70 percent by 2030.

In an announcement just a few days ahead of the UN Climate Summit, Enel said in a statement that it wanted to help achieve the UN's goal of limiting the maximum global temperature increase to 1.5 per cent Celsius from pre-industrial levels, and achieving zero emissions by 2050. "By cutting our direct emissions by 70 percent... we will be well on track, 20 years before the 2050 deadline, to achieving our full decarbonisation target," said CEO Francesco Starace.—AFP ■

OECD cuts 2019, 2020 global growth outlook on US-China trade spat

TOKYO — The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development on Thursday lowered its forecasts for global economic growth this year and next, citing escalating trade tension between the United States and China.

The world's gross domestic product is expected to grow a real 2.9 per cent in 2019 and 3.0 per cent in 2020, slowing from 3.6 per cent in 2018, the OECD said in its latest interim economic outlook.

Its projections were downgraded from May forecasts of 3.2 per cent in 2019 and 3.4 per cent in 2020.

"The global outlook has become increasingly fragile and uncertain," the OECD report said. "These would be the weakest annual growth rates since the financial crisis, with downside risks continuing to mount," it added.

"Escalating trade policy tensions are taking an increasing toll on confidence and investment, adding to policy uncertainty, weighing on risk sentiment in financial markets, and endangering future growth prospects," the Paris-based organization said.

The ongoing tit-for-tat tariff war between the world's two largest economies could reduce global GDP growth by between 0.3 and 0.4 percentage points in 2020, and between 0.2 and 0.3 points in 2021, according to the report.

By country, the OECD forecast the US economy to grow 2.4 per cent in 2019 and 2.0 per cent in 2020, slowing from 2.9 per cent in 2018.

China's economy is projected to expand 6.1 percent in 2019 and 5.7 percent in 2020, down from 6.6 percent in 2018.

Fed cut propels stocks and oil soars again on Mideast tension

Federal Reserve boss Jerome Powell said the bank 'will act as appropriate' to support the economy. PHOTO: AFP

LONDON — World stock markets mostly rose Thursday after the Federal Reserve cut interest rates but left the outlook unclear, while oil rebounded on fresh supply concerns in the Middle East.

In late morning deals, London stocks advanced before a Bank of England decision at 1100 GMT, which will likely see its key interest rate left at 0.75 per cent.

Awaiting the BoE update, investors shrugged off official data showing that UK retail sales dipped 0.2 per cent in August from July. In the eurozone, the Frankfurt and Paris stock markets gained on the Fed news and after increases across much of Asia.

"European equity markets are higher... even though the Federal Reserve was not overly dovish," said IG analyst David Madden.

"The US central bank cut interest rates by 0.25 percent, meeting expectations, but the message from the update suggested that further rate cuts are not definitely in the pipeline."

While the Fed met expectations with a 25-basis-point reduction, the lack of strong forward guidance disappointed many.

However, lower interest rates tend to support stock markets because they cut the cost of credit for businesses and loan repayments for consumers.

"Easier policy in absolute terms is good for stocks as it means lower rates, lower cost of capital, high bond prices and so pushes investors up the risk curve," noted Neil Wilson at Markets.com.

Oil spikes again

In commodities, Brent oil rebounded two percent as traders seized on re-surfacing tensions in the crude-rich Middle East.

Netanyahu, Gantz in standoff over Israeli unity government

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his main challenger Benny Gantz were in a standoff over calls for a unity government on Thursday as election results put the premier's long tenure in office at risk.

In a major development following Tuesday's polls, Netanyahu said he preferred to form a right-wing coalition, but the results showed it was not possible.

He urged Gantz to join him in forming a unity government instead, and the two men shook hands when they crossed paths at a memorial event later.

But on Thursday afternoon, Gantz made clear that he would have to be prime minister of a unity government, noting that results so far put his centrist Blue and White two seats ahead of Netanyahu's right-wing Likud.

Despite Gantz's slim lead, neither has an obvious path to form a majority coalition, and the Blue and White leader has made several calls for a unity government since polls closed on Tuesday.

Netanyahu's stark admission came as the results threatened his status as the country's longest-serving prime minister while he faces possible corruption charges in the weeks ahead. "During the elections, I called for the establishment of a right-wing government," Netanyahu said in a video message.

"But unfortunately the election results show that this is not possible." He went on to call on Gantz to form a "broad unity government today." Speaking to journalists, Gantz said: "The public voted clearly in favour of unity."

"Blue and White has at the time I am speaking won 33 seats, while Netanyahu has not obtained a sufficient majority to form a coalition as he hoped."

The ex-military chief, who mounted his challenge to Netanyahu without any prior political experience, went on to say: "We will listen to everyone, but we will not accept mandates imposed on us."—AFP ■

EU backs Romanian former anti-corruption czar as bloc's new prosecutor

BRUSSELS — A majority of EU member states on Thursday backed making a former top anti-corruption official from Romania their bloc's first-ever anti-fraud prosecutor — despite opposition from her own country, European sources said.

"An informal vote confirmed there is a sufficient majority" among EU ambassadors to put Laura Codruta Koevesi in charge of the new European Public Prosecutor's Office (EPPO) set to start work at the end of 2020, according to a diplomatic official from Finland, which holds the EU's rotating presidency.

The 46-year-old Romanian magistrate received 17 votes from the 22 countries signed on to the new office, whose job is to investigate suspected fraud involving the EU's budget, European sources said.

France has 'not changed mind' on rejecting Snowden asylum

PARIS — France has not changed its mind on rejecting any asylum request from US surveillance whistleblower Edward Snowden, its foreign minister said Thursday, after the former CIA employee said he would like sanctuary in the country.

Snowden has been living in Russia since June 2013 after leaking a trove of classified documents showing the scope of post-9/11 US government surveillance. He said in an interview at the weekend he hoped President Emmanuel Macron would grant him the right to live in France.

The whistleblower, who has given a host of interviews from Moscow to mark the publication of his new book, saw an initial request for asylum in France turned down six years ago under then-president Francois Hollande.

"For now, he has made the request just through the media but I don't see any reason to change the point of view," Foreign Minister Jean-Yves Le ate and I don't see anything that has changed today, either from a political point of view or a legal one," he added.—AFP ■

Thieves nab 2-mn-euro haul from vaunted French chateau

BOBIGNY (France) — The owners of a 17th-century French palace said to be the model for Versailles were tied up as their opulent home was ransacked Thursday by robbers who fled with a haul worth two million euros ($2.2 million), police said.

The Vaux-le-Vicomte chateau, set amid sumptuous gardens about 50 kilometres (30 miles) southeast of Paris, has been owned by the same family since 1875. A police source said six hooded but unarmed robbers found neckties belonging to Patrice de Vogue, 90, to tie up him and his wife Cristina, 78, in their lodging on the grounds of the palace. The thieves targeted a safe and stole emeralds and other items, but did not attempt to make off with the chateau's works of art. The couple was not injured during the robbery, which occurred shortly before dawn, according to prosecutors in the nearby city of Melun.

Migrant workers still exploited in World Cup host Qatar: Amnesty

PARIS — Qatar is not fulfilling all its promises to improve the conditions of migrant workers in the country in the run-up to the 2022 World Cup, Amnesty International said Thursday.

In a report entitled "All Work, No Pay", the rights group said: "Despite the significant promises of reform which Qatar has made ahead of the 2022 World Cup, it remains a playground for unscrupulous employers." The report came as French President Emmanuel Macron and Qatar Emir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al-Thani were due to meet in Paris on Thursday. Sheikh Tamim also attended Wednesday's high-profile clash between Paris Saint-Germain — owned by Qatar's state-owned investment fund — and Real Madrid. Doha has made efforts since being named World Cup hosts to improve the conditions of the migrant workers who make up a majority of the Gulf emirate's population.—AFP ■

ISLAMABAD — Pakistan's Prime Minister Imran Khan on Wednesday inaugurated a new terminal building at a customs and immigration post on the border with Afghanistan that will remain open around the clock.

In a speech at the ceremony, Khan expressed hope that Torkham border crossing will see increased bilateral and transit trade, benefiting both Pakistan and landlocked Afghanistan.

"We pray for peace in Afghanistan when Torkham border post will become a hub of international and transit trade," he said.

Khan said that during his meetings with leaders of Central Asian countries, they sought increased bilateral trade with Pakistan.

US seeks Southeast Asia's support to combat economic espionage

SINGAPORE — The United States would like Southeast Asian countries to help it combat economic espionage, a senior US national security official said Wednesday.

"We rely on our partners in the region to enforce intellectual property," said Adam Hickey, deputy assistant attorney general at the US Justice Department, who is now visiting Singapore to discuss what the United States considers national security threats such as economic espionage and cyber threats.

Noting that the United States has seen a rising trend in recent years of "foreign intelligence services" trying to recruit American company insiders for facilitated computer network intrusion or to steal trade secrets, he said "it might be easier to recruit employees of American companies here than it might be to recruit them from the US directly."

"And then again a lot of it comes down to the enforcement regime of that particular country."

Hickey gave the example of Taiwan where a court indicted a Chinese state-owned company, a Taiwanese company and three individuals for a conspiracy to commit economic espionage last year. "If I were an American businessman choosing whether to do business in Southeast Asia, I might give some thought whether my intellectual property will be protected there, is there a rule of law, can I be confident that authorities there will stand up for me if I am the victim of attack."

Asked if the United States is seeing a rising threat of foreign intelligence services targeting US companies operating in Southeast Asia, the official said, "I do think there is the risk that employees of American companies abroad could be co-opted, and that you got to think about what the security environment is." —Kyodo News ■

'Too awful': Anger at acquittals in Fukushima case

TOKYO — As a Tokyo court pronounced three former executives not guilty in the only criminal trial over the Fukushima nuclear disaster, a woman's voice cut through the silence from the gallery: "Unbelievable!"

More than eight years after the worst nuclear accident since Chernobyl, only three people have faced criminal prosecution in relation to the Fukushima disaster, and their acquittal Thursday left victims angry and distraught.

"This is extremely, extremely frustrating," said Ayako Oga, who evacuated to Japan's Niigata region from Fukushima in the wake of the disaster.

"We cannot understand it," an elderly woman said, her voice breaking as she addressed the crowd, clutching a microphone.

"In these eight-and-a-half years, so many people were forced to leave their houses... and they remain displaced and unable to decide where to live," she said.

"How would you feel if your house, today, were taken away from you?"

The tsunami triggered by an earthquake that swamped the Fukushima nuclear plant on 11 March, 2011 left more than 18,500 people dead or missing. No one is officially recorded as having been killed by the nuclear accident itself, but tens of thousands of people were ordered to evacuate, with many more fleeing of their own accord, afraid of radiation that rendered whole towns off-limits.

Parts of the region remain uninhabitable, and may be so forever. Even where decontamination has been completed and evacuation orders lifted, many residents have been reluctant to return. "I couldn't be more angry," a man who evacuated from Fukushima told supporters at a rally after the verdict was announced. "We can't go back to our normal lives," he added.

"Those who were at the top of the company at the time must be prosecuted!"

'It's about our dignity'

Akihiro Yoshidome, an 81-year-old anti-nuclear campaigner from Tokyo, said he was astounded by the decision.

"I had braced myself that we might not get a clean victory, but this is too awful," he told AFP. —AFP ■
