Daw Khin Kyi Foundation hands over mobile libraries, equipment, publications to MoI

STATE COUNSELLOR Daw Aung San Suu Kyi observed a ceremony to hand over mobile libraries, equipment, books and publications donated by Daw Khin Kyi Foundation to the Ministry of Information, and to sign memorandum of understanding for cooperation with community centers at Thingaha Hotel in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday afternoon.

The ceremony was also attended by former President U Htin Kyaw and wife Daw Su Su Lwin, Union Ministers Dr Pe Myint, U Min Thu, Thura U Aung Ko, Dr Myo Thein Gyi, Dr Win Myat Aye, U Ohn Maung, Nai Thet Lwin; Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman Dr Myo Aung and its members, state/region ministers, deputy ministers, local and foreign donors, invited guests, officers and staff members of MoI and officials.

In delivering a speech at the ceremony, Chairperson of Daw Khin Kyi Foundation and State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi said that the mobile library was introduced by the foundation in the country. The idea had been developed since the foundation was set up. She said the first person she needed to thank was her great Dr Ohn Mar Moe Myint. The country needed many libraries. People needed to read a lot. However, it would take time to build libraries in every town, and it would not be pragmatic. After a brief argument about this idea, Dr Ohn Mar Moe Myint decided to give in and agreed to implement the mobile library project.

She devoted herself entirely to the project, and never expressed her reluctance although she resisted the idea. She brought this project to a successful conclusion. Donors from Japan, Taiwan and other countries helped in the project.

Although she thought the project would not be successful, all the books on a mobile library were borrowed by the readers within two hours in the first day. It was very encouraging to see a long queue of children. It was also understood that the project has a great potential for success. Then, the mobile library project was expanded across the country.

The State Counsellor also remarked that Myanmar people loved reading, but they had no books to read. The mobile libraries were mainly targeted for the children with the use of attractive and colorful designs. Actually, the (state-owned) libraries in many towns failed to attract both children and adults. For example, most of the books and publications at these libraries were outdated and discarded books donated by private donors. Thus, these uninteresting books could not attract readers.

The books in mobile libraries looked attractive with many pictures and brilliant colours. The pictures were eye-catching and known easily. In the rural areas, the adults also hired these books.

The foundation handed over 17 vehicles for mobile libraries, 346 sets of computer and equipment, over 110,000 books and 27 skilled personnel.

The Daw Khin Kyi Foundation has invested over K 1 billion until now since it established the mobile library project. It would be extended by signing the MoU. As the project had grown dramatically, it has become impossible for the Foundation to handle it alone.

explained that different matters were almost in the same degree of importance to be known like own experiences.

She also suggested that it was necessary to avoid seeing the world in a narrow scope as both personal and global views were important. Someone could compare own experiences with those of others.

She also said that it was necessary to know the dos and don'ts by taking lessons from others as reading was good for all ages and that it was necessary to take time for reading every day.

The mobile library project was started in Kawhmu township, and the success of this project had required more infrastrucwere set up for the public. The State Counsellor also appreciated the displays of cultural items in the mini museums at these centres.

She remarked that as the number of libraries was very restricted in the past, Myanmar has started to enjoy library culture at present with the increasing number of mobile libraries.

She also gave an example of museum culture with understanding about their value, accessibility and objectives. She compared the museums with the books in giving knowledge, culture, global issues and the country's history. She remarked that the subject of culture should be intended for mutual under-

It had developed into a State project. It had been proven that the mobile libraries could reach many corners of the country, and the project is therefore handed over to the government.

The State Counsellor also expressed her satisfaction for the success of this project and thanked all persons concerned with the project, including from the Daw Khin Kyi Foundation.

She emphasized the importance of reading which could help us look into thoughts and feelings of others. Different ideas and beliefs could be understood by reading.

She also recounted her experience in a literary talk with university students that a student insisted their real lives do not seem to relate with the message in the books. The State Council ture such as parking spaces for mobile library cars, the storage of books, and accommodation for staff members. After discussing with the Information Minister, it was decided to base the mobile libraries in the community centres. These centres were being used for public discussions, reading and computer training courses.

The Information Minister has expected more people to use these centres as these facilities standing among each other.

She said that reading was for understanding others, and quoted a researcher's appraisal of writing as a greatest revolution for human beings as reading and writing could develop human lives by sharing knowledge for the following generations.

She also said reading and writing could develop human history and culture. She then expressed her appreciation to the Information Ministry for taking over the responsibility and leading role to manage and maintain the Daw Khin Kyi Foundation and the mobile libraries.

Union Minister Dr Pe Myint's speech

Next, Union Minister Dr Pe Myint delivered a speech.

The library of the Information and Public Relations Department (IPRD), more commonly known as the IPRD office, were working under certain limitations. From that situation, the mobile library began lending new books in Kawmhu Township. Training courses for computer skills, English proficiency and other skills essential for youths were given in conjunction with the mobile library, and that this became interesting prospect for us, said Union Minister Dr Pe Myint.

The Union Minister went on to say that if the overlooked IPRD libraries could be transformed into community centres then they would become livelier and vibrant and the staff assigned there would become more self-confident. Furthermore, these places would become more essential for their community and that this was a vision that was clearly emerging, said Dr Pe Myint.

He then said that this was the reason why they decided to transform the IPRD offices and libraries into community centres and they wished to thank the Daw Khin Kyi Foundation for giving them the necessary support and motivation to initiate that objective. The Union Minister said the IPRD offices were usually located in the centre of towns or districts but the books would be old and the buildings decrepit. He said renovation would be costly but they strived to achieve that while seeking assistance from interested persons. He said that while renovation had yet to begin, they initiated whatever activities of a community centre were possible in those old buildings.

The Union Minister highlighted the fact that the space could be used as a meeting place for two people, a reading spot, or a venue for discussion between four or five individuals. He said from there, the community centre could invite people to discuss on community matters or other affairs.

He said eventually this would make the centre indispensable among the people and urged everyone to make it so that the public could not imagine a community without a community centre. He said this would make the officials managing the centre more valuable in and out of the centre. The objective should be create a tradition so that a person would most likely answer they were going to the community centre when asked where they would be spending their time, said the Union Minister

He expressed his gratitude for handing over the materials and duties of the community centre and for believing that it was done with the utmost trust. He said they would strive to meet that level of trust with appropriate results.

The Union Minister said they would ensure that the mechanisms and procedures instilled by Daw Khin Kyi Foundation were maintained and requested advice be given during the transition period as appropriate.

He then highlighted the people who helped and donated to the Daw Khin Kyi Foundation, which included regular donors from both home and abroad. He said a portion of that donation would go to the community centres.

The Union Minister said even though the mobile libraries had already been handed over to the Ministry of Information, the duties related to it were not over yet. He said his ministry had the human resources and accompanying service potential to take the work processes to a higher level.

Which was why the ministry would warmly welcome further donations to the mobile libraries in order to expand its reach and activities, said the Union Minister, adding his modest request for continued patronage.

Next, a video clip on the activities of mobile libraries under the Daw Khin Kyi Foundation was shown.

U Ye Naing, the Director General of IPRD, and Dr Thant Thaw Kaung, Executive Committee Member of Daw Khin Kyi Foundation signed MoUs in the presence of Chairperson of the foundation and State Counsellor Daw Aung San Su Kyi and Union Minister U Pe Myint for the handover of mobile libraries and equipment of the foundation at the Community Centres, and the co-operation in community centres between the department and the foundation.

The State Counsellor and the attendees posed for documentary photos before closing the ceremony. After greeting those present at the ceremony, they looked around the displays of documentary photos about inauguration ceremonies of community centres, their activities, public talks and the activities at the centres funded by state/region governments, Hluttaws and private donors, as well as the photos for Chairperson of the foundation and the State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi at the community centres, mobile libraries and the vehicles of mobile libraries. The IPRD and the foundation signed an MoU in 2013 to develop an office and a libraries of IPRD's office in Kawhmu Township, Yangon Region, into a community centre and to collaborate in the mobile library project. A three-year MoU was signed in the 2016-2017 fiscal year to expand the project across the country, which has set up a total of 16 community centres in Kawhmu, Insein, Myaungmya, Natmawk, Dekkina district, Pyinmana, Myitkyina, Mandalay, Hpa-an, Dawei, Loikaw, Sagaing, Mawlamyine, Thandwe, Hakha, Taungoo and Kalaw.

The foundation handed over K 1 billion worth of 17 vehicles for mobile libraries, 346 sets of computers and accessories, 110,000 copies of publications and 28 skilled staff members to the department.—MNA

Base price for rice will safeguard farmers' interest

THE Rice Market and Price Assessment and Advising Working Committee has been assigned the task of suggesting a base price for summer and monsoon paddy to the Steering Committee for Protection of Rights and Enhancing Economic Welfare of Farmers, after taking the actual production costs of crops into consideration.

Supply and demand dictates the price of commodities, as is in the case of markets, and moving away from the two parameters would only lead to instability, which can further spread to other sectors.

It is the State's duty to ensure fair price and equal market share to prevent farmers from being exploited. The law has also made provisions for this.

The weaknesses and strengths of the announcement of the base price made in the previous years must be studied and reviewed. The government, on its part, must strive towards ensuring that the price does not fall below the base price.

In our country, too, even if a base price cannot be announced for all crops, it must be announced for main crops like peanuts, sesame, and corn, which are widely cultivated by farmers.

The weaknesses and strengths of the announcement of the base price made in the previous years must be studied and reviewed. The government, on its part, must strive towards ensuring that the price does not fall below the base price.

A base price for rice is one of the five essential aims in the farmer's law, which has made provisions for helping farmers find suitable loans, assistance during production, investment and technology to increase production, suitable prices for their agricultural products in the market, and which protects the rights and interests of farmers who own small plots, and offers support for grievances and losses caused by natural disasters as far as possible.

A base price is a very basic price, and the market price must not fall below it. The work of announcing a base price must be conducted as part of long-term cooperation between the government, traders, and farmers.

Natural disaster or man-made?

By Ko Ko Aung

DIFFERENT kinds of dangers occur daily in different parts of the world; floods, fire, storm, earthquake and landslide have caused a lot of dangers, pushing millions of people to flee their shelters with loss of their properties and collapses of their houses and buildings.

People have faced a lot of problems—injuries, illnesses, loss of lives, destruction of crops, mental disorders and social ills such as continuation of education and a crisis of survival.

Disaster should be viewed with three categories of natural disaster, man-made disaster and disaster caused by human involvement. Natural disasters have begun since the beginning of our planet earth. Such disasters do not involve human activities nor conditions done by human beings. Emergence of earthquakes, tsunami, volcanic eruptions are good examples of natural disasters. Man-made disasters came after social civilization; fire, collapses of bridges and buildings, dams, radiation and chemical poisons are man-made disasters.

The third one involves creating human activities for their own advantages. For instant, raising the level of sea water, global warming, emergence of extreme climates, disorderly weather, severe drought and abnormal flooding are disasters caused by human involvement. The emergence of storms, landslides, collapses of mountains could occur due to either natural phenomena or human deeds.

Such disasters are normally named natural disasters, but they could happen because of industrialization, excessive carbon emissions, deforestation, mining and explosions of quarries.

The emergence of a storm depends of three fundamental factors; the factor is low pressure area followed by the second factor of high temperatures on the sea water and third one is the acidity rate high on low pressure area. The earth rotates at a sloping 23 degree centigrade around its own axis and completes one revolution around the sun about 365 days, thus making the wind move quickly here and there as the creation of a new cultivation after clearing natural weeds and that of artificial waterfalls on the mountain sides. Creation of spring gates and felling of perennial trees, construction of buildings on the mountain sides and river banks without systematic construction of earth walls and installations of towers of human deeds cause landslides, collapses of mountain edges and river banks.

Based on the field trips made to these areas in Thephugon village and the foot of the Malat Mountain in Paung township, we can conclude that the disasters were perhaps the result of human activity rather than any geological processes.

The Social Security and Rescue and Rehabilitation Ministry, headed by Vice-President U Henry Van Thio as Chairman and the Ministry's Deputy Minister as Secretary, was composed of Union Ministers, Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman, States and Regions Prime Ministers; an advisory committee was formed to give valuable advice to the Ministry.

As I am a professional analyst for disasters, I usually submit an advice on disasters at meetings at main committee and the advisory committee. Personal field trips to the States for analysis were made in order to submit suggestions to the main committee and the Governments concerned.

In last August, the field trips to Paung township, Mon State were made to enquire the landslides and the collapses of the mountains in order to submit the findings, considerations and suggestions under the given duties of the management committee on natural disasters from 27-30 August; these trips were also made to Mawlamyine township, Mon State, Zengyaik and Kwaychan villages. I was accompanied by Dr. Soe Lwin Nyein, an advisor for public health, irrigation expert U Victor and U Ye Htwe, a management expert on natural disasters.

Upon arrival in Mawlamyine township, Mon State, we discussed with the State Government officials, headed by the State Prime Minister about the programs on the field trips at a meeting room of the State Government Office. On 28th August, our group of experts together with the Minister for the Immigration and Manpower Ministry of the State visited the sites of landslides and collapses of the mountains in Paung township which caused loss of lives and also to 12 sites where landslides and collapses of mountains could probably occur. Based on the field trips made to these areas in Thephugon village and the foot of the Malat Mountain in Paung township, we can conclude that the disasters were perhaps the result of human activity rather than any geological processes. Extension of land areas after the explosions of the mountains, earth-digging and its transportation according to the local populace who speak about these activities from an eyewitness account.

Because of these activities, Malat Mountain and nearby mountains where earth and rocks stand solid; heavy rainfalls occur in these mountains due to seeping water into the soil and rocks on the top and sides of the mountains. The pebble formation of Malat mountain is not similar to those of nearby mountains, collapsing at the rapid rate within a period of seconds, leading to loss of properties and lives.

Among the 12 sites inspected by our group, reoccurrence of the sites during the rainy season and all-season collapsible are found and precautionary measures should be taken against them, by submitting the suggestions to the State Government. During the field trips to Paung township, Mon State, as the delegates of Mon State Government and those from Immigration and Manpower Ministry are hereby highly praised for their active participation. However, reoccurrence of dangers in Paung township could not be done without the participation of the service personnel, to the disappointment of our group upon the State Government.

In conclusion, there are a lot of dangers in the present day. People alone could not do anything against these disasters; the incumbent government and local populace in their respective States and Regions must take serious care against these disasters which usually happen due to human deeds.

Trade at Muse slides by $1.3 bln as of 13 September

THE value of Sino-Myanmar border trade through the Muse gate plunged by US$1.3 billion between 1 October, 2018 and 13 September, 2019 in the current financial year from $5.94 billion recorded in the year-ago period, according to data from the Ministry of Commerce.

In the eleven-and-a-half month period, exports through the Muse gate dropped significantly to $2.95 billion, while imports were valued at $1.6 billion, totaling $4.62 billion.

Exports through Muse gate have declined owing to tight confiscation and trade suspension by China since October, 2018, coupled with the closure of the Mandalay-Muse road, a major trading route, due to fighting in August.

Muse is an important border gate in Myanmar and handles the largest trade volume, but it has seen a steep drop as trade in agricultural products has been halted on account of China clamping down on illegal goods.

Myanmar merchants find it difficult to export goods to China through the legitimate channel as they find the tax levied by China too high. Therefore, rice confiscation and price manipulation often occur.

“We need to convert the government-to-government (G2G) agreement into a sustainable pact. Myanmar requires G2G or business-to-business (B2B) agreements for trade of pulses and beans, corn, sesame, fish, and shrimp to grab a share of the Chinese market. The government and the private sector also need to move forward in harmony through public private partnerships (PPP),” according to U Ye Min Aung, the President of the Myanmar Rice Federation.

Myanmar exports rice, sugar, pulses, sesame seeds, corn, dried tea leaves, fishery products, minerals, and animal products to China, while it imports agricultural machinery, electrical appliances, iron and steel-related materials, raw industrial goods, and consumer goods from the neighbouring country. — GNLM ■ (Translated by EMM)

Gold price soars to K1.246 mln on back of gains in global market

THE price of gold in the domestic market has touched a high of K1.246 million per tical (0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogram) due to a price surge in the global market, according to traders.

On 25 September, gold opened at K1,246,000 per tical in the domestic market, according to the Yangon Gold Entrepreneurs Association. Gold is currently priced at US$1,528 per ounce in the global market.

Meanwhile, the Kyat exchange rate against the dollar has also weakened to K1,530, according to the local forex market.

The domestic gold price is positively linked to global gold prices. With global gold prices soaring, the price of gold in the local market has been on the rise. But, gold trading has cooled in the market, said gold traders.

With prices on the rise, the Myanmar Gold Entrepreneurs Association has warned members of legal action if any fraudulent case is detected against them. Traders have also been asked to clear payments at once, according to the association.

With global gold prices on the uptick, the domestic price has hit fresh highs this year, reaching K1,050,000 per tical between 17 and 29 January, crossing K1,060,000 (30 January-7 February), climbing to 1,070,000 (8-18 February), and then K1,080,000

(19-21 February) to reach a fresh peak of K1,110,000 on 21 June. Thereafter, the price gradually increased, and hit a new record of K1,200,000 on 7 August.

According to gold traders, the lowest price for gold in May was K1,035,200 (2 May) and the highest was K1,059,200 (14 May). In June, gold prices touched the lowest level of K1,055,000 on 1 June and the highest level of K1,125,500 on 25 June.

The prices moved in the range of K1,099,000 (1 July) and 1,149,400 (31 July) in July. Last month, the prices ranged between K1,141,5000 and K1,263,000.—GNLM ■ (Translated by Ei Myat Mon)

‘Media is lying’ about Amazon devastation, says Brazil’s Bolsonaro

Jair Bolsonaro, President of Brazil, tells the UN General Assembly that the Amazon rainforest is sovereign territory. PHOTO: AFP

UNITED NATIONS—Brazil’s President Jair Bolsonaro said Tuesday it was a lie that the Amazon was being devastated by fire and accused countries critical of him of having a “colonialist spirit.” Speaking first at this year’s UN General Assembly, the far-right leader also heaped praise on his American counterpart Donald Trump for respecting his country’s sovereignty.

The speech came a week after a Human Rights Watch report that accused Bolsonaro of giving a “green light” to illegal loggers and failing to protect those defending the world’s largest rainforest. “The Amazon is not being devastated or consumed by fire. The media is lying,” said Bolsonaro, whose 32-minute speech went more than double his allotted time. “It is a fallacy to say that the Amazon is the heritage of humankind, and a misconception confirmed by scientists to say that our Amazon forests are the lungs of the world,” he said.

Bolsonaro also hit out at his detractors, saying that while every country had problems, sensational reporting in the international media “aroused our patriotic sentiments.”

“Using and resorting to these fallacies, certain countries, instead of helping... behaved in a disrespectful manner and with a colonialist spirit,” he said.

“They even called into question that which we hold as a most sacred value, our sovereignty.”

Making a clear reference to France, he said: “One of these countries during the recent G7 meeting dared suggest applying sanctions to Brazil without consulting or even listening to Brazil.” France and Ireland have threatened to block a trade deal between the EU and South American countries including Brazil because of Bolsonaro’s environmental policies.

Bolsonaro by contrast said he was grateful to Trump, “who summed up the spirit that should prevail among United Nation member countries: respect for the freedom and sovereignty of each of the member countries.”

Two million children out of school in war-torn Yemen: UN

UNITED NATIONS—Two million children are out of school in war-torn Yemen, a fourth of whom have dropped out since the conflict escalated in March 2015, the UN children’s agency said Wednesday. The education of a further 3.7 million children is at risk as teachers’ salaries have not been paid in more than two years, UNICEF said in a statement. “Violence, displacement and attacks on schools are preventing many children from accessing school,” said Sara Beysolow Nyanti, UNICEF representative in Yemen. One in five schools in the country can no longer be used as a direct result of the conflict that has devastated Yemen’s already fragile education system, the UN agency says.

“Children out of school face increased risks of all forms of exploitation including being forced to join the fighting, child labour and early marriage,” Nyanti said. “They lose the opportunity to develop and grow in a caring and stimulating environment, ultimately becoming trapped in a life of poverty and hardship.” —AFP ■

Europeans see last chance for Iran-US meeting

UNITED NATIONS —US President Donald Trump and his Iranian counterpart Hassan Rouhani face their last chance Wednesday for a historic meeting as European leaders raced to arrange talks aimed at defusing soaring tensions. A meeting between the arch-adversaries would be historic but also come under a political cloud, with Trump’s Democratic rivals on Tuesday announcing an impeachment inquiry against him.

With world leaders gathered in New York for the annual UN General Assembly, French President Emmanuel Macron made a fresh push for Trump to meet Rouhani. Escorting a smiling Rouhani to a meeting with British Prime Minister Boris Johnson, Macron said that time was running short. “If he leaves the country without meeting with President Trump, honestly this is a lost opportunity because he will not come back in a few months,” Macron said. —AFP ■

French #MeToo founder faces verdict in defamation suit

PARIS—The woman behind France’s answer to the #MeToo campaign exposing male abusive behaviour on Wednesday faces the verdict in a defamation case brought by a media executive she accused of making lewd and sexist remarks. Sandra Muller started a viral hashtag in French in October 2017, #balancetonporc (“expose your pig”), which called on Frenchwomen to name and shame men in an echo of the #MeToo movement that began in response to allegations that toppled movie producer Harvey Weinstein. In another post sent hours later, the US-based French journalist had accused French TV executive Eric Brion of humiliating her with sexual remarks at a function in the town of Cannes in 2012. —AFP ■

Democrats launch formal Trump impeachment inquiry

Nancy Pelosi, the speaker of the US House of Representatives, had resisted calls for Donald Trump’s impeachment for months, preferring to focus on the 2020 election. PHOTO: AFP

WASHINGTON—Top US Democrat Nancy Pelosi Tuesday announced the opening of a formal impeachment inquiry into President Donald Trump, saying he betrayed his oath of office by seeking help from a foreign power to hurt his Democratic rival Joe Biden.

The dramatic move — the first step in a complex process that stands little chance of driving Trump from office — pushed US politics into a perilous new chapter just 14 months before new elections for control of the White House and Congress. Following the bombshell developments from Trump Tower in New York—after addressing the UN General Assembly—the president denounced the inquiry as “Witch Hunt garbage”—while also claiming it would help his re-election chances in 2020.

“The actions of the Trump presidency revealed the dishonorable facts of the president’s betrayal of his oath of office, betrayal of our national security, and betrayal of the integrity of our elections,” Pelosi told a highly anticipated news conference in the US capital.

“Therefore, today I’m announcing the House of Representatives moving forward with an official impeachment inquiry.”

Pelosi, the speaker of the House of Representatives, and other Democratic Party leaders had resisted taking the step for months, preferring to focus on the coming election fight. —AFP ■

Stock markets slide on Trump impeachment move, trade fears

UNITED NATIONS—Stock markets slid Wednesday after US Democrats launched formal impeachment proceedings against President Donald Trump.

The dollar steadied versus the euro and yen amid renewed trade fears as Trump adopted a hard line on China. The pound meanwhile dropped as British MPs returned to parliament one day after a momentous Supreme Court ruling that Prime Minister Boris Johnson's decision to suspend parliament ahead of Brexit was unlawful. "Markets have taken a bit of tumble on fears US president Trump could be impeached, while the (UK) drama... is just as intoxicating as the Brexit drama rumbles on," noted Neil Wilson, chief market analyst at trading group Markets.com. In a dramatic move Tuesday in the US, House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi launched a formal impeachment inquiry. Wall Street closed with sizeable losses ahead of her expected announcement. Democrats accuse Trump of abuse of power in a reported attempt to pressure the newly-installed president of Ukraine to open a corruption investigation into his lead challenger for the White House, Joe Biden, and Biden's son Hunter.

Focus in Europe meanwhile was on the UK parliament after Tuesday's Supreme Court judgement dented Johnson's authority, prompting calls for his resignation and casting further doubt on his promise to pull Britain out of the European Union on October 31, come what may.

Concerns over US and British political turmoil added to worries over international trade after Trump ripped into China at the UN, declaring that the time of Beijing's "abuses" of the system was "over". —AFP ■

Vox Media and owner of 'New York' magazine to merge

magazine and a series of other titles. A joint statement presented the move as a merger, although Jim Bankoff, the head of Vox will "lead all aspects" of the new company and the New York Times reported that New York Media would be "effectively taking a minority stake" in Vox.

Launched in 1968 New York magazine has become a prominent voice in culture and lifestyle writing in its home city and beyond, winning dozens of National Magazine Awards and a Pulitzer in 2018 for criticism.

The 1977 classic film "Saturday Night Fever" was inspired by an article that appeared in the magazine, as was 2007's "American Gangster" starring Denzel Washington. New York Media also owns a stable of websites on style (The Cut), food (Grub Street) and pop culture (Vulture). The company was running at a loss before the announcement, according to the New York Times. Vox Media, a child of the internet, was founded in 2005 originally as a network of sports websites. In recent years Vox and New York Media have sought to diversify, into podcasts, video production and event organizing. —AFP ■

South Korean President Moon Jae-in laid out his rosy vision for the last Cold War frontier in an address to the UN General Assembly. PHOTO: AFP

NEW YORK—South Korean President Moon Jae-in on Tuesday proposed that the United Nations create an “international peace zone” to replace the peninsula’s divide, saying the idea would both reassure the North and inspire the world.

The left-leaning leader, whose diplomacy paved the way for historic summits between President Donald Trump and North Korean strongman Kim Jong Un, laid out his rosy vision for the last Cold War frontier in an address to the UN General Assembly.

He asked the international community to commit to designating the international peace area to replace the 250-kilometer (155-mile) Demilitarized Zone that has split the two Koreas for more than 60 years.

Moon said the zone would offer an added incentive for Kim to give up nuclear weapons, the focus of more than a year of on-again, off-again talks between North Korea and the United States.

“The establishment of an international peace zone will provide an institutional and realistic guarantee for North Korea’s security,” Moon said.

“At the same time South Korea will be able to gain permanent peace,” he said.

Moon voiced hope that the zone, which is four kilometers wide, would become the home of UN agencies dedicated to conflict resolution and the environment and eventually be declared a world heritage site by UNESCO, the UN cultural body.

“It can become an international peace zone in name as well as substance,” Moon said.

Despite the intense military buildups on each side of the Demilitarized Zone, “paradoxically it has become a pristine ecological treasure trove,” he said.

“When the DMZ that cuts the midriff of the Korean peninsula is turned into a peace zone, the peninsula will evolve into a bridge nation that connects the continent and the ocean and facilitates peace and prosperity,” he said.—AFP ■

Toilet controversy: India’s Modi ignores protests to collect Gates award

NEW YORK—Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Tuesday brushed aside an outcry from human rights activists to receive an award from the Gates Foundation in New York for his efforts to end open defecation. tenure, while British-Asian actors Jameela Jamil and Riz Ahmed who had been due to attend dropped out. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation said it respected the critics’ views but defended its decision, saying sanitation is a neglected issue and India’s program can serve as a model for other countries.

“I dedicate this award to all those Indians who transformed the ‘Clean India Mission’ into a people’s movement and started giving cleanliness the highest priority in their daily lives,” Modi said after collecting the award from billionaire philanthropist and Microsoft founder Bill Gates. India’s government says it has built more than 100 million toilets under a $20 billion initiative begun in 2014 to address the issue of open defecation, particularly in rural areas, a major public health issue in the country. Under Modi’s plan, tribal households get $200 each for building latrines.

But ahead of the ceremony, Nobel Peace Prize winners Mairead Maguire, Tawakkol Abdel-Salam Karman and Shirin Ebadi said that under Modi’s leadership, “India has descended into dangerous and deadly chaos that has consistently undermined human rights, democracy. “This is particularly troubling to us as the stated mission of your foundation is to preserve life and fight inequity,” they wrote, urging the Gates Foundation to change its decision.—AFP ■

UK MPs return after bombshell court ruling

LONDON—British MPs return to parliament on Wednesday following a momentous Supreme Court ruling that Prime Minister Boris Johnson's decision to suspend the house was unlawful.

The judgement has hit Johnson's authority, prompting calls for his resignation and cast further doubt on his promise to pull Britain out of the EU on October 31, come what may. The Conservative leader landed back in London at around 10:30am (0930 GMT) after his trip to New York, heading straight into a political maelstrom triggered by Tuesday's damning court ruling that his decision to suspend parliament for five weeks was unlawful. Britain's right-wing tabloids reacted angrily to the ruling, with The Sun saying it had been bombarded with letters from readers expressing "fury". The Daily Telegraph said Johnson was "seen as the champion of the people against an establishment determined to stop Brexit", while for the Daily Mail, "The real political vandals are the out of touch MPs blocking Brexit". The Speaker of the House of Commons, John Bercow, announced that MPs would reconvene at 11:30 am (1030 GMT) on Wednesday, while the upper House of Lords said it would return later the same day.

Labour opposition leader Jeremy Corbyn called on Johnson to resign but said he would not call a no confidence vote in parliament until the possibility of a no-deal Brexit has been eliminated. "Our first priority is to prevent a no-deal exit from the European Union on October 31," Corbyn told BBC radio. Bercow said there would be no Prime Minister's Questions—a weekly session held on Wednesdays—but there would be "full scope for urgent questions, for ministerial statements, and for applications for emergency debates". —AFP ■

Netanyahu, Gantz set for new talks on Israel vote deadlock

JERUSALEM—Israel's president meets Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his challenger Benny Gantz on Wednesday as the clock begins ticking on a one-week deadline for him to name someone to form a government.

President Reuven Rivlin will receive official results from Israel's deadlocked September 17 election on Wednesday afternoon, beginning the one-week timeframe, while his three-way meeting is set for 6 pm (1500 GMT). He could name someone to try to form a coalition as early as Wednesday, and speculation has run rampant over whether he will do so or wait until after the Jewish holiday of Rosh Hashanah, which falls on Monday and Tuesday.

In either case, the person selected will face what could turn out to be an impossible mission: forming a governing coalition when neither man has a clear path to a majority. Gantz's centrist Blue and White and Netanyahu's right-wing Likud have started talks on forming a unity government, but they appear far apart on a range of issues, including who will lead it. Wednesday night's meeting with Rivlin, Netanyahu and Gantz will be their second since the election, and the president has repeatedly made clear he would like to see both of their parties in a unity government. He has pledged to do all he can to avoid yet another election — which would be the third in a year's time after April polls also ended inconclusively.

"I therefore believe that the right path for the state of Israel today is to build as broad a governing coalition as possible," Rivlin said at a Wednesday reception for foreign diplomats to mark the Jewish new year. "It's my opinion. I'm trying to do my best." A rotation arrangement has been floated, but the question of who would be premier first remains a major stumbling block.

Russian 'advisers' train new Syrian battalion

Russian military support has allowed Syrian government forces to retake large parts of Syria from rebels and jihadists since 2015, and now they control around 60 percent of the country. PHOTO: AFP

YAFOUR (Syria)—Wearing clean bullet-proof vests and knee pads, fighters from a new Syrian army battalion showcase the skills they have learned from Russia's military advisers. In the countryside west of Damascus, the soldiers carry out a mock assault, fire mortar rounds and rockets, perform mine-clearing and first aid exercises. Large clouds of dust rise over the training camp as troops in camouflage fatigue open fire.

In the afternoon sun, top brass from both countries and dozens of journalists, including an AFP team invited from Moscow, are looking on.

"We sacrifice our blood for you Bashar," the soldiers chant in unison, throwing their fists in the air, in praise of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad. EU backs sanctions on seven more Venezuelans

BRUSSELS—The EU has approved sanctions on seven more Venezuelan officials over torture and other human rights abuses, diplomatic sources told AFP on Tuesday, as the bloc seeks to keep up pressure on President Nicolas Maduro.

Ambassadors from the European Union bloc countries gave their backing to the measures in a meeting on Wednesday, bringing to 25 the number of Venezuelan officials under European travel bans and asset freezes. The EU has had sanctions in place against crisis-wracked Venezuela since 2017, with a ban in place on the export of arms and other equipment that could be used for repression, in addition to the individual measures. "The majority (of the seven) are members of Venezuela's security and intelligence services involved in cases of torture and other human rights violations," one diplomat told AFP ahead of the meeting. The measures will now be formally signed off by ministers from the 28 EU states at a later date. —AFP ■

New Zealand Finance Minister says economy "well positioned"

WELLINGTON—New Zealand Finance Minister Grant Robertson said on Wednesday that the country's strong growth potential and resilience has been backed by another international report, saying "we are well positioned". International credit ratings agency Moody's just released its latest opinion on New Zealand on Tuesday, rating New Zealand as one of the few countries with its strongest "AAA" credit rating. "It follows the IMF's report last week which said we had solid rates of growth, particularly in the context of the global economic volatility we are seeing," the finance minister said. In its report, Moody's said New Zealand's economic strength is "very high" and growth remains "robust". It expects New Zealand's economy to grow around its potential rate of 2.5-3 percent in the next few years, in line with the median for Aaa-rated countries. —Xinhua ■

Alisson cannot wait to make Liverpool return

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Liverpool goalkeeper Alisson Becker is back in full training and nearing a return to competitive action after six weeks out with a calf injury.

The Brazilian number one was carried off in Liverpool's 4-1 victory over Norwich on the opening night of the Premier League season on 9 August.

"I'm on a good way, I think we are nearly there," he told the Liverpool website.

"I can go outside to the pitch to do some goalkeeper work and I feel very well.

"I feel confident and I think now it's just about getting all my power, all my confidence to come back and do what I love to do."

Alisson was named men's goalkeeper of the year at FIFA's annual awards ceremony in Milan on Monday for his role in helping Liverpool win the Champions League last season.

Even without the inspirational goalkeeper, the Reds have also made a brilliant start in their quest to end a 30-year wait to win the Premier League, winning all six of their opening games to take a five-point lead over Manchester City. Stand-in 'keeper Adrian, who only joined the club four days before the Norwich game, has overcome an uncertain start and was pivotal to a 2-1 win at Chelsea on Sunday.

And Alisson admitted the Spaniard's form has allowed him not to rush his recovery.

"I think the boys are doing very well, all the team (and) Adrian especially," he added.—AFP ■

Bayern Munich president ups stakes in Germany 'keeper row

BERLIN (Germany) — Bayern Munich president Uli Hoeness has threatened to deprive the German national side of Bayern players if Manuel Neuer loses the number one goalkeeper spot, Sport Bild said Wednesday.

Barcelona 'keeper Marc-Andre Ter Stegen, 27, is currently Neuer's understudy and has voiced frustration at being kept out of the Germany side by the Bayern veteran.

The two players have traded barbed remarks with Ter Stegen last week accusing Neuer of making "inappropriate" comments.

Hoeness, however, has spoken up for Neuer and criticised German coach Joachim Low and the national federation for not backing the Bayern star more vocally.

"We will never accept that there will be a change," the sports daily quoted Hoeness as saying.

"Before that happens we would prevent any of our players turning out for the national side."—AFP ■
