PRESIDENT U Win Myint received graduates from the University for the Development of the National Races of the Union yesterday morning at the Presidential Palace in Nay Pyi Taw.

The students were the third batch to successfully complete the five-year education degree course. They paid their respects to the President and sought advice from him.

The event was attended by Union Ministers Lt-Gen Ye Aung, Dr Pe Myint, U Min Thu, U Ohn Maung, Nai Thet Lwin; Deputy Ministers Maj-Gen Than Htut and U Win Maw Tun; departmental heads, the Rector, the Deputy Rector and teachers of UDNRU and officials.

The President first extended greetings to those at the ceremony and expressed appreciation in meeting with the students as he said the students have recently completed the five-year education degree programme and have become potential architects who would build up the future of education for the country and its people. The President added that Myanmar comprised over 100 ethnic races who have lived together in unity for many years, sharing weal and woe. The divide and rule policy of colonialists left doubts, mistrusts and disagreements among the people from upper and lower Myanmar. This policy was one the underlying reasons for the prevailing internal armed conflicts in Myanmar, hindering the nation-building process of the country.

Seeing this root cause, successive state leaders have tried to work for infrastructure development, human resources development and poverty reduction programmes.

One part of these efforts included the establishment of the Institute for Development of the National Races of the Union on 20 October 1964. It was promoted to a university on 10 March 1991 to offer higher level education for the ethnic people from border areas.

President U Win Myint also emphasized the importance of human resources for national development, and that the Education and Training Department under the Ministry of Border Affairs has offered a free education system of basic and higher levels for the ethnic people in border areas by setting up 45 youth training schools across the country, as well as the University for the Development of the National Races of the Union and the colleges of Nationalities Youth Resource Development Degree in Yangon and Sagaing regions.

He said education was the most fundamental requirement for human resources development, and that it developed the mental, ethical and physical development of the young people. Education was key to the prosperity of individuals and the whole country. And that the state established the UDNRU to generate capable teachers who would then share their knowledge at the basic education schools in remote areas after studying for five years theoretically and practically.

The President also expressed that the government was trying to develop the country into a Democratic Federal Union enjoying sustainable development in the world. In this regard, the Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan (2018-2030) has been adopted. The Goal 4 under this plan had focused on human resources and social development for a 21st century society, and it has set a strategy to improve equitable access to high quality life-long educational opportunities. It was the aspiration of every citizen with regard to education.

As Myanmar was implementing the National Education Strategic Plan (2016-2021), the teacher candidates need to have possessed 21st century skills and soft skills of personality.

The President also suggested them to train the students for the skills in collaboration, communication, critical thinking and problem solving, creativity and innovation and citizenship which were required to overcome various challenges in the world. He also advised to match these skills with honesty.

He also asked them to produce the students who can accept the concept of equality and diversity, respect democratic practices and human rights norms, and promote varieties of ethnic languages, literatures, cultures, arts and customs of ethnic people in 21 century knowledge era.

He also advised them to promote human resources of ethnic youths in accordance with the policies of the Ministry of Education on no discrimination at all levels of education, no one outside education and no dropout from schools.

The President firmly reminded the avoidance of narcotic drugs in various forms for the young people as the illegal drugs would pose dangers on the young people.

Lower living standards and lack of health knowledge were the underlying reasons for diseases, and that school healthcare services could help to disseminate this knowledge. He also advised to develop the physical and mental well-being of the young people.

Regarding the principles of civil service staff, the President said the civil employees play a pivotal role in administrative pillar together with the other two pillars of legislation and judiciary of a country. He also remarked that capable and self-confident civil service employees were the main backbone for democratic practices due to their good ethics, free of bias, responsibility and accountability. Police to monitor hiring of tour guides

By Nyein Nyein

THE tourist police will verify whether tourists are hiring local tour guides or not, said Naw Pan Thinzar Myo, the Yangon Region Minister for Kayin Ethnic Affairs and the vice-chairperson of the Regional Tourism Committee.

“Although Myanmar has made it mandatory for tourists to hire local guides, tourists are only using guides from their own country. Those guides may misrepresent Myanmar culture. Additionally, this may lead to lack of jobs for local guides. So, the tourist police will now check whether local guides are being hired,” she added.

“We have already issued instructions to police to ensure that tourists hire local tour guides. We have often found that local guides are being hired by tourists, but English guides are being hired for Chinese tourists. Local guides are not getting jobs as tourists are only using guides from their own country. Therefore, we need to resolve the issue. We need to keep a check on this at the entry gates,” said Naw Pan Thinzar Myo.

“To check tour destinations,

such as Shwedagon pagoda and Botahtuang pagoda, the tour police can screen QR codes from tour guides’ ID cards, which are issued to them on hand-phones. Thus, the tourist police can determine whether they are local guides or not. So, we have already made arrangements for the tour police to use technology to check whether tourists are hiring local tour guides or not. For this, the tourist police will have to undergo training next month,” she added.

If the tourist police find the policy is being disobeyed, the local agent, who tied up with the tour company, will face legal action, said Naw Pan Thinzar Myo.

Currently, Chinese tourists are opting for cheap tour packages offered by Chinese tour agencies, which are also known as zero dollar or zero budget tours. But, they are being asked to buy jade lots at set shops, she said.

Myanmar receives US$50 per person from Chinese tourists for issuing visas. The tourists are spending a minimum of $60 per day. Local tour companies hire entire hotels and restaurants for zero budget tours, in cooperation with Chinese tour companies. As a result, the enterprises make money, while the government loses out on income.

At present, most of the tourists entering Myanmar are from China. Between January and July, 2018, more than 640,000 tourists visited Yangon. During the same period this year, the number of tourists crossed 740,000, said U Naing Win, the director of the the Yangon Region Directorate of Hotels and Tourism.

Earlier, the hotels and tourism sector was regulated by the Union government. After the implementation of the Myanmar Tourism Law 2018, the sector has been decentralized and power has been devolved to the region and state governments, said Naw Pan Thinzar Myo.

Yangon Region Chief Minister U Phyo Min Thein is the chairman of the regional tourism committee. The committee also includes officials from the Ministry of Home Affairs, the Ministry of Religious Affairs and Culture, the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population, the Directorate of Hotels and Tourism, the Department of Environmental Conservation, the Yangon City Development Committee, the Union of Myanmar Travel Association, and Civil Society Organizations as members.

Thrice as many foreign visitors as locals coming to watch Ayeyawady dolphins

THE number of foreign visitors coming to watch cooperative fishing with Ayeyawady dolphins has been three times higher than local visitors this year, according to U Maung Lay, the leader of the Ayeyawady Dolphins Conservation and Cooperative Fishermen Team.

Between January and September, more than 1,430 tourists and over 430 locals observed demonstrations of fishing with the dolphins.

“This year, Japanese visitors came for video shooting for more than one month. We were booked for the entire day, and they paid high rates. Local people are also interested in watching fishing with the dolphins.

Tourists have been visiting every day since the start of the tour season,” said U Maung Lay. Germans topped the list of foreign visitors. According to travel data, about 73 foreign and 90 local travellers watched the Ayeyawady dolphin shows in 2016, while 95 foreign and 183 local travellers watched them in 2017. The number increased to 183 foreign and 402 local travellers from January through May, 2018. Groups of private school students have also been coming down to observe the dolphins. “The dolphin conservation and community-based tourism projects have been successful. We have implemented dolphin conservation and community-based tourism projects in eight villages. Now, local people are earning extra income from cooking, selling souvenirs, and showing dolphins,” said U Han Win, the head of Dolphin Conservation.

A demonstration on fishing with dolphins can fetch K40,000 for one boat owner. A single boat can carry two foreign passengers or four local passengers in one trip. The implementation of community-based tourism has helped increase the number of tourists significantly year by year.—Khaing Satt Wai

Unicode spells brighter service system for Myanmar

IT has been some time since the Myanmar language was integrated for use in typing with computer systems. First there was CE, used widely in the 1990s, and then Academy, the Win series and with the advent of mobile phones the Zawgyi font came on the scene.

Then came Myanmar 1, Myanmar 2, and Myanmar 3 to supply letter images, metric letters, pinni, khit and other symbols.

of understanding this Unicode system, thus making automatic digital translation easier.

With all these positives and benefits presenting themselves before us, we need to change our font system together with the government ministries, which have done the same. Other countries that have adopted this system are able to provide better services to their citizens. Myanmar should follow suit and quickly adapt to this system.

The Union Government had announced they will be completely switching to Unicode on 1 October 2019 and are swiftly implementing these changes.

But for people who do not need to compile or access databases nor will be regularly communicating with government offices, changing to Unicode is not compulsory. They can continue using the system they are comfortable with and no one will object to their freedom to choose.

However, we believe that converting to Unicode now will have great advantages in the long-run. Changes are always hard at the beginning, but the results they will achieve can be incomparable in the bigger picture.

GENERALLY, jobs, income international relations, and high social standards are acknowledged as the characteristics of tourism. Tourists may have various reasons for visiting different destinations. A tourist will spend money for services and goods during his visit. So, tourism is a business of providing services, food, accommodation, transport pleasure, safety, and new experiences and so on for a guest his private visit.

Nowadays, countries are prioritizing the task of developing their economy, improving living standards of citizens, generating jobs and reducing unemployment, and they have found that tourism is the best answer to all those priority sectors. So, they adopt master plans and strategies for tourism development.

Jobs

World Travel and Tourism Council (WTTC) conducted an annual analysis quantifying the global economic and employment impact of travel and tourism in 185 countries and 25 regions of the world. The World Travel & Tourism Council's research reveals that the tourism sector accounted for 10.4% of global GDP and 319 million jobs, or 10% of total employment in 2018. The division of overall spend is firmly weighted towards the leisure market, which represented 78.5% of the total compared with 21.5% for business spend, and the sector accounted for 6.5% of total global exports and 27.2% of total global service exports. Domestic tourism, which represented 71.2% of all tourism spending in 2018 and had the strongest growth in developing nations, continues to support opportunities by spreading development and regional economic benefits and building national pride.

In fact, tourism is a smokeless industry that ensures indirect benefits for the supporting businesses and also generates income for the state and all strata of life of the people.

The tourism industry benefits all the stakeholders from horse carriage drives, tour guides and companies to hotels, restaurants, transporters and souvenir shops. The food and beverage industry and agro-industry are also enjoying the indirect benefits of the tourism business. Generally, a government of a nation is among the main players of its tourism industry together with private enterprises, non-governmental organizations and local communities and people.

The government's role

The government is the main organization that is adopting and realizing tourism policies, inviting investments, facilitating the functions of the tour and travel companies, transporter companies and other businesses, recruiting manpower for the industry, taking safety measures and arranging international connections. In turn, for the tourism industry, apart from the people who are directly involved in it. Their attitudes, hospitality, and support are of vital importance. As community-based tourism has direct involvement of the residents, their suggestions, views, and trends should be taken into account. Their roles should be enhanced through training, transparent reports on the benefits and proceeds. Many developing countries are effectively using community-based tourism as the driving force behind employment reduction and job generation programs.

Myanmar started community-based tourism in 2015. The Min-the government can channel the revenues and investments from the industry in the national economic drive and in protecting and preserving national heritage, culture, and archaeological sites and improving the living standard of the people.

Local residents

The involvement of resident communities is also important istry of Hotels and Tourism of the country and private enterprises jointly set up 18 community-based destinations in 43 villages, with the aim of encouraging the participation of resident communities in the industry and developing their socio-economy through the establishment of direct profit-sharing channels.

Tourism and the role of women

International travellers visit an open market in Mandalay. PHOTO: PHOE KHWAH

Women are joining the tourism sector that generates more jobs than other industries. If compared with other industries, the number of women taking part in the industry is two times higher. Their roles range from handicraft business to hospitality services. So, women are earning income for their households, and in some cases, they the breadwinners of a household, thus helping improve the socio-economic and living standards their families. So we must promote the role of women in the tourism industry. They should enjoy equal rights with their male counterparts and should be given the leading role in some issues or businesses. Besides, there should not be any gender discrimination in any workplace or occupation. Moreover, women should be provided with proper training and encouragement and support to run small or medium tour businesses.

Social benefits

The development of tourism will bring infrastructure development for many sectors and places, especially the remote areas. The industry will act as an engine of growth for improving the transport sector, water and electricity supply, education, language proficiency and perspectives of the people of faraway places. Community-based tourism allows people of remote areas to have the chance to share or exchange cultural and social values with visitors from many different places of the world. In this way, they will cherish and understand the culture and traditions and archaeological heritages more.

According to the World Tourism Organization report on tourism towards 2030, the future brings enormous opportunities for tourism to take centre stage in the political and economic agenda, seeking recognition for its contribution to economic growth and development. It also brings added challenges and responsibilities for our sector to take the lead in mitigating its potential negative impacts on host communities and the environment. It will be the leader in protecting and preserving the

Fishery exports cross $700 mln

EXPORT earnings from the fisheries sector in the period from 1 October, 2018 to 20 September, 2019 in the 2018-19 financial year reached US$709 million, an increase of $21.9 million from the year-ago period, according to statistics released by the Commerce Ministry.

In 11 months of this FY, the export volume of fishery products crossed 540,000 metric tons, according to the Commerce Ministry. This year, fishery exports have risen, but the price offered is much lower than that during the same period in the previous fiscal, said an official from the Commerce Ministry.

Myanmar fisheries products, such as fish, prawns, and crabs, are exported to markets in 40 countries, including China, Saudi Arabia, the US, Japan, Singapore, Thailand, and countries in the European Union.

Earlier, only fish caught in the wild were allowed to be exported to the EU market. At present, Myanmar is exporting farmed fish, prawns, and crabs to the EU.

Saudi Arabia's suspension of fish imports from Myanmar, beginning April last year, has affected rohu fish suppliers. Myanmar keeps only 25 per cent of rohu fish for local consumption and exports the remaining 75 per cent to Saudi Arabia, UAE, as well as Bangladesh.

Myanmar's exports to Saudi Arabia account for 30 per cent of its farm-raised fish exports and 40 per cent of rohu exports.

The Myanmar Fisheries Federation is making concerted efforts to increase fishery export earnings by developing fish farming lakes which meet international standards and adopting advanced fishing techniques.

There are over 247,000 acres of fish farms and 240,000 prawn breeding farms across the country. Myanmar exported 340,000 tons of fishery products worth $530 million in the 2013-2014 FY, 330,000 tons worth $480 million in the 2014-2015 FY, 360,000 tons worth $500 million in the 2015-2016 FY, 430,000 tons worth $600 million in the 2016-2017, and 560,000 tons worth $700 million in the 2017-2018 FY, according to the Commerce Ministry.

MFF Vice President Dr Toe Nandar Tin said the federation has asked the government to tackle problems faced in the export of farm-raised fish and prawns through G2G pacts and ensure smooth freight movement between countries to bolster exports. According to the MFF, integrated poultry and fish farming cannot ensure food safety, which is a requirement for export. Therefore, the federation has asked for the formulation of a law to restrict that kind of mixed farming. Fish farming must be conducted as a large-scale project to get access to Project Bank loans, according to the MFF. — GNLM

Domestic investments touch K1,694 bln, $473.29 mln as of fiscal year end

DOMESTIC investments by Myanmar citizens reached K1,694 billion and US$473.29 million as of the end of the current fiscal year, including expansion of capital by existing enterprises, according to a press release issued by the Myanmar Investment Commission.

Between 1 October, 2018 and 27 September, 2019, 171 local enterprises were allowed to invest in various sectors, with estimated capital of over K1,432 billion and $379.65 million.

The investments flowed into the real estate, manufacturing, hotels and tourism, construction, industrial estate, energy, mining, livestock and fisheries, agriculture, and other services sectors, according to figures from the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration.

To simplify the verification process of investment projects, the Myanmar Investment Law allows the region and state Investment Committees to grant permissions to local and foreign proposals, where the initial investment does not exceed K6 billion, or $5 million.

While some projects no longer need MIC approval, businesses that are strategic to the government require a permit from the commission. In addition, those businesses that have large capital investments exceeding $5 million and that may have a possible impact on the environment and the local community need to be approved by the DICA proposal assessment team. With a fast-track way to set up a business in Myanmar having been introduced, investors can apply to the MIC or the state and regional investment committees for endorsing investment proposals, depending on the business type. — GNLM

Myanmar likely to improve Ease of Doing Business ranking post WB report: DICA

By Nyein Nyein

MYANMAR is expected to move up in the Ease of Doing Business ranking in 2020 against last year, following the initial report of the World Bank, according to U Thant Sin Lwin, the Director-General of the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

Myanmar has been ranked as one of the top 20 improvers in Doing Business 2020 by the World Bank, based on the number of reforms and the degree by which the country's ease of doing business score has improved in five initiatives; two of which are directly related to the DICA.

"The first initiative is that Myanmar launched an online company registry platform, merging several procedures and reducing the need for in-person interaction. The country showed improvement in starting a business indicator. When Myanmar had been placed a lowly 171 in Doing Business Ranking 2019, it was ranked 154th in starting a business. We expect it will improve its ranking this year. The second initiative is the enactment of the Myanmar Companies Law in which directors' stipulated duties and changes in shareholding are embodied. Therefore, we expect better results in the 2020 report," said U Thant Sin Lwin.

Myanmar expects an under-100 ranking in Doing Business 2021, said U Aung Htoo, the Deputy Minister for Commerce, who is also a part of the Improving Ease of Doing Business Ranking working group.

Myanmar was ranked 171st among 190 countries in the World Bank's Doing Business 2018 report. The country remained 171 in the 2019 report.

The Myanmar Investment Commission under the Ministry of Planning and Finance is targeting a rank of 100 in 2020, 80 in 2025, 60 in 2030 and 40 in 2035, according to the Myanmar Investment Promotion Plan.

The World Bank has determined ease of doing business rankings based on 11 indicators: starting a business, obtaining construction permits, getting electricity, registering property, getting credit, protecting minority investors, paying taxes, trading across borders, enforcing contracts, resolving insolvency, and managing labour, all of which were incorporated into the indicators in 2018.

Cambodian PM fires arrest warning to fans of his arch-rival

PHNOM PENH — Cambodia's premier Hun Sen on Wednesday threatened to arrest supporters of his nemesis Sam Rainsy if they mobilise for the opposition figure-head's much-trumpeted return from self-exile next month.

Rainsy, who has lived in France since 2015 to avoid jail for convictions he insists are politically motivated, has promised a dramatic return on November 9, Cambodia's Independence Day.

Seeking to maintain his support base after years outside the country, Rainsy has urged supporters — including among the armed forces — to unite to topple Hun Sen and restore democracy to the poor Southeast Asian nation.

Hun Sen, who has ruled the kingdom for 34 years, has hit back with a new barrage of arrests and threats.

"Those who join the campaign to destroy the country and peace on November 9 will be prosecuted," Hun Sen warned Wednesday in a typically bombastic speech. In his absence, Rainsy's opposition Cambodia National Rescue Party (CNRP) has been dismantled through court rulings and intimidation. Dozens of opposition activists have been arrested over recent weeks for allegedly agitating for the government to be toppled during Rainsy's mooted return.

Last week, Rainsy and several opposition officials were charged with plotting a coup, which carries up to 30 years in jail. The court also warned that anyone deemed to be a co-conspirator could face 20 years in prison.—AFP ■

North Korea likely fired submarine-launched ballistic missile: South Korea

SEOUL — North Korea fired early Wednesday a projectile believed to be a submarine-launched ballistic missile, or SLBM, South Korea's presidential office said.

South Korea's Joint Chiefs of Staff said the projectile was launched at 7:11 am from the sea, northeast of Wonsan in the eastern part of North Korea.

Japan's top government spokesman, Yoshihide Suga, said Tokyo is still analyzing the information and did not confirm it was a submarine-based missile. After flying about 450 kilometers and reaching an altitude of about 910 km, the projectile likely fell into Japan's exclusive economic zone off the western prefecture of Shimane, according to South Korea's Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Japanese government. If proved correct, it would be the first projectile fired by North Korea since 10 September, and the 11th since May. There were no immediate reports of damage to vessels or planes in the area.

Pig farmers pessimistic as China tries to talk down swine fever

PEKIN — Sun Dawu sighs sadly when asked about the death of thousands of his pigs, killed by the African swine fever outbreak that has been decimating hog herds across China.

"The pig farm was completely destroyed," he says quietly, fanning himself from the heat and flies on his large Hebei province farm outside Beijing.

"It's a painful process, it's painful to watch them die. We buried all the dead pigs five metres underground." More than a year since swine fever began to spread across the country, China's pig farmers are wary of replenishing their stock — and the disease could become a political and economic liability for the government. Frustrated after a month of official stonewalling, Sun posted pictures of the dead pigs on social media platform Weibo — quickly attracting tens of millions of views and forcing the local government to respond.— AFP ■

Singapore's 'fake news' law takes effect as critics sound alarm

SINGAPORE — Singapore's new law to combat "fake news" came into effect Wednesday despite criticism from tech giants and activists, who labelled the tough rules a "chilling" attempt to stifle dissent.

The law gives government ministers powers to order social media sites to put warnings next to posts authorities deem to be false, and in extreme cases get them taken down.

Facebook, Twitter and Google — who have their Asian headquarters in Singapore — were given temporary exemptions from a handful of provisions in the act to give them time to adapt.

If an action is judged to be malicious and damaging to Singapore's interests, companies could be hit with fines of up to Sg$1 million (RM3 million), while individuals could face jail terms of up to 10 years.

ties — insist the measures are necessary to stop the circulation of falsehoods that could sow divisions in society and erode trust in institutions. But the laws have sparked outrage from rights groups, who fear they could stifle online discussion, tech companies and media organisations.

Journalist and activist Kirsten Han, who is the editor-in-chief of independent media outlet New Naratif, said the legislation was "extremely worrying".

"It's such a broad law that it's hard to predict how it's going to be applied. What's of immediate concern is the chilling effect and the further entrenchment of self-censorship," she told AFP.—AFP ■

Rally held in Hong Kong after teenager shot by police

HONG KONG — A rally was held in Hong Kong on Wednesday in protest at the shooting of an 18-year-old high school student by police during a clash the previous day on the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China.

The male teenager was critically wounded in the chest when he was shot by a riot police officer at close proximity, but he was in stable condition Wednesday after surgery, according to local media.

In Hong Kong, National Day celebrations were largely overshadowed by violence that left over 100 protesters and police officers injured, including two critically.

The Hong Kong government on Wednesday condemned the protests, which have become increasingly violent since they began in June, over a now-abandoned bill that would have allowed Hong Kong citizens to be sent to mainland China for trial.

Students were among the participants at the protest rally held near the wounded teenager's school on Wednesday.

The student was hospitalized in critical condition after being shot with a live round during a clash in Tsuen Wan in the New Territories, according to local media.

Footage uploaded online showed him wielding a metal rod at police standing at arm's length when the shot was fired.—Kyodo News ■

Johnson promises ‘compromise’ Brexit offer to Brussels

MANCHESTER — Prime Minister Boris Johnson said he would submit “compromise” plans for a Brexit agreement to Brussels on Wednesday but again warned that Britain was prepared to leave the European Union later this month without a deal, despite fears it could herald an economic slump.

In his closing speech to his Conservative party’s annual conference, Johnson said the plans would address the contentious issue of how to keep open Britain’s border with Ireland.

“This is a compromise by the UK,” he told delegates in the northwestern city of Manchester, adding that he hoped EU leaders “understand that and compromise in their turn”.

But he emphasised that if they did not, Britain would still leave the EU on October 31.

A no-deal exit “is not an outcome we seek at all. But let me tell you my friends it is an outcome for which we are ready”, he said, to big cheers from delegates.

Johnson is expected to speak to European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker later on Wednesday to discuss the revised offer.

The Confederation of British

Industry said a no-deal would be “a historic failure of statecraft” which would dog growth and trade “for years to come”.

Leaked blueprint

Johnson, a leading “leave” campaigner in the 2016 EU referendum, took office in July vowing to deliver Brexit at the end of this month in all circumstances.

But like his predecessor Theresa May, he has struggled against a hostile parliament and the complexities of untangling four decades of EU integration.

His promise to leave without a deal was derailed when MPs last month passed a law demanding he seek to delay Brexit if he has not reached an agreement by an EU summit on October 17.

Johnson is now racing to renegotiate the exit terms May agreed with Brussels, which were rejected by the British parliament three times.

His proposals focus on finding an alternative to her controversial “backstop” plan, which aims to keep an open border between British Northern Ireland and EU member Ireland after Brexit. The current arrangement would keep Britain in an effective customs union with the EU, which critics argued would force London to abide by the bloc’s rules indefinitely.

Johnson said his plan would “under no circumstances have checks at or near the border in Northern Ireland”.

It would seek to protect cross-border agricultural trade by extending existing regulatory arrangements — indicating Northern Ireland will continue following some EU rules.

But the province will remain part of the same customs territory as mainland Britain, he said.

“We will allow the UK — whole and entire — to withdraw from the EU, with control of our own trade policy from the start,” he said. The Daily Telegraph newspaper reported the plan would potentially create two new borders — regulatory checks between mainland Britain and Northern Ireland along the Irish Sea, and customs checks on the island of Ireland.

It added that Johnson wanted to keep this arrangement until 2025, when the devolved assembly in Belfast would be able to decide how to proceed.

But the EU has warned many times it will not accept any attempt to put a time limit on the border plan.—AFP ■

In Syria camp, uncertain future for foreign IS orphans

AIN ISSA — Sitting in a wheelchair beside a metal fence in a camp in northern Syria, nine-year-old Ruqaya Mohammad raises a scarf over her face to hide from journalists.

The Egyptian girl lost her left eye, her legs and both her parents during battles against the Islamic State group in their last Syria redoubt in March.

She now lives in a large tent along with 23 other orphaned children of foreign IS fighters in a camp for the displaced in Ain Issa, under the care of older camp residents.

Aged 18 months to 13-years-old, the children were born to parents from Russia, Uzbekistan, Indonesia, Tajikistan, Egypt and Iraq.

“Among the children, Ruqaya moves me the most,” said Sara al-Abdullah, a 37-year-old who helps look after the orphans.

“She always looks withdrawn, shy, and sad,” said the widowed mother of three, one of nine women residents of the Ain Issa camp paid a small fee to help look after the children.

Cuba slams US denial of visas to medical delegation

HAVANA — Cuba’s Foreign Affairs Ministry on Tuesday criticized the United States for refusing visas to a medical delegation scheduled to take part in a high-level meeting of the Pan-American Health Organization (PAHO).

“We reject this arbitrary measure,” the ministry said in a statement, adding “the U.S. government without justification is violating its obligations as host country of an international organization.”

Washington is “once again trying to silence the voice of Cuba,” it added.

UN urges Australia to release Tamil family

SYDNEY — The United Nations has called on Australia’s government to release a Tamil asylum seeker family from offshore detention, weighing in on a case that has galvanised huge public support.

The family of four have been held at the Christmas Island detention facility for the past month while their fight to stay in the country is before the courts.

Kokilapathmapriya Nadesalingam and Nadesalingam Murugappan, from Sri Lanka, arrived in Australia by boat separately in 2012 and 2013 seeking asylum and have not been accepted as refugees.

Their two children, Kopika and Tharunicaa, were both born in Australia and the family’s legal battle hinges on the youngest daughter as her lawyer argues her claim has never been assessed. Lawyer Carina Ford made a submission to the UN’s Human Rights Committee last month on the toddler’s behalf.

In an 1 October letter, seen by AFP, the committee says in response that it “has requested the State party to transfer (the family) within 30 days into a community setting arrangement or to find another way to end their existing situation of detention”.—AFP ■

Iraq police fire to disperse new protests despite restraint calls

BAGHDAD — Iraqi security forces fired live rounds on Wednesday to disperse new protests in the capital, despite calls from top leaders for restraint a day after two demonstrators were killed.

The protests are the first significant popular challenge to Prime Minister Adel Abdel Mahdi, who formed his government a year ago this month and who controversially blamed the violence on “aggressors” among the protesters.

On Wednesday, the iconic Tahrir Square in Baghdad where hundreds of protesters had gathered the previous day was sealed off by security forces, with some demonstrators gathering around the edges.

Smaller crowds took to the streets in Al-Shaab in north Baghdad and Zaafaraniya in the south, an AFP correspondent reported, with riot police attempting to disperse them with tear gas and live rounds fired in the air.

Like the previous day, protesters railed against state corruption, failing public services and unemployment.

“I came out today in support of my brothers in Tahrir Square,” said Abdallah Walid, 27.

Premier League appoints David Pemsel as chief executive

LONDON — The Premier League has appointed David Pemsel as its new chief executive, announcing on Wednesday that he would take up the role “no later than April 2020”.

Last November, the league selected Susanna Dinnage for the post but, after accepting, she changed her mind and decided she no longer wanted the job.

The league said Pemsel's appointment had been approved unanimously at a special league shareholders' meeting.

Pemsel is chief executive of the Guardian Media Group.

Bruce Buck, the chairman of the Premier League nominations committee, said: “We are delighted to welcome David to the Premier League. His straightforward style and personal integrity make him an ideal person to lead the business.

“At the Guardian, he has shown strong leadership through a period of change and transformation.” Buck praised Richard Masters for his performance in the role of interim chief executive. “I am thrilled to have been offered this incredible opportunity,” Pemsel said. “The Premier League is the most-watched football league in the world and I am very excited to be a key part of that.” Dinnage withdrew late in 2018 to remain in her role with the Discovery group of TV channels. Her appointment had been hailed as a significant step forward for women in sports administration. When Pemsel takes over he will become the permanent successor to Richard Scudamore, who first joined the Premier League as chief executive in 1999. Grassroots festival, youth football tourney to be held in Sittway

WITH the aim of identifying, grooming, and training the next generation of youth footballers, a grassroots football festival and an U-14 tournament will be held in Sittway this month, according to the Myanmar Football Federation.

The festival and tourney will be supervised by the Myanmar Football Federation and the Myanmar National League, and will be mainly sponsored by Myanma Posts and Telecommunications (MPT), said an official.

The Grassroots Football Festival will be held on 20 October, and the opening ceremony for the U-14 football tourney will also be held on the same day.

The U-14 Football Tournament 2019 will run from 21 to 29 October, according to the Myanmar National League.

During the grassroots football festival, children will learn new and innovative football skills, and then showcase their talent and participate in activities with friends and football trainers.

Grassroots football festivals are being organized to show the power of soccer to educate, inspire, and mobilize youth in Myanmar to overcome health challenges, live productive lives, and be agents for change in their communities.

Grassroots festivals have also been held in Yangon, Mandalay, Mawlamyaing, and Taunggyi with hopes of improving youths' skills and health.

Similar grassroots football festivals were held last year across Myanmar, including in Mandalay Region, Shan State, Mon State, Yangon Region, and Bago Region. Local children studying at the Basic Education level can benefit from the festivals and improve their health and sports knowledge, and get opportunities to hone their football skills.—Lynn Thit (Tgi) ■
