IFC to provide technical assistance to cut water losses

By Nyein Nyein

THE International Finance Corporation (IFC) will offer technical assistance to reduce wastage in water distribution, which currently stands at 50 per cent, said Daw Thwe Naing Oo, deputy director of the Yangon City Development Committee's water distribution project. We will plug water losses with technical assistance from the IFC, she said. At present, Hlawga, Gyobyu, Phu Gyi, and Nga Moe Yeik reservoirs are the main sources of water supply in Yangon, providing over 205 million gallons of water every day. However, half the water supplied gets wasted, she said. After expressions of interest (EOIs) were invited for water distribution through Public Private Partnership (PPP), 20 companies put their names forward to invest in the project, according to the YCDC's tender evaluation committee. "Currently, the EOIs are under scrutiny. Later, we will seek requests for proposal and continue the tendering process," Daw Thwe Naing Oo added. Yangon Mayor U Maung Maung Soe has urged Yangonites to systematically use water as half of the water supply is getting wasted amid an increase in Yangon's population. "Regardless of new water resources, systematic use is a must. The IFC will help to cover water losses in the urban water distribution network," said U Maung Maung Soe. The YCDC decided to privatize water distribution to deal with the problem of water loss and staff shortage. Additionally, the current rates for water supply do not cover production costs. "The water meter bills must reflect the charges for laying the pipe network and the water distribution cost. If we compare the water meter rates with the distribution cost, the existing bills are much lower than that, excluding the cost of the machines. This being so, the government is making a loss on running this, like power supply," said U Maung Maung Soe. However, there is no plan yet to increase the water rate for now, he said. At present, the Yangon authorities are raising awareness about systematic water meter installation, dealing with water pipe leakages, unsystematic water consumption, management of water loss in urban water distribution, and curbing illegal connections to the water pipe network, he added. # Smart cards issued to over 7,000 YBS drivers

By Nyein Nyein
OVER 7,000 drivers employed with YBS bus lines have received smart cards, said U Aung Nyi Nyi Maw, Managing Director of the Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA).
“A total of 7,351 YBS drivers, who applied to the YRTA for smart cards, have been issued the cards, and nine of them are women,” he added.
“Following the issuance of smart cards, drivers will be strictly checked by the YRTA’s inspection team on whether they are holding the cards or not, starting from 1 November,” said U Aung Nyi Nyi Maw.

According to the YRTA, passengers will be able to send their complaints to the inspection team through two Viber contact numbers — 09448147149, 09448147153-4.
With the adoption of the smart cards, the YRTA will have the personal information of each driver, so, it will be simpler for the authority to deal with complaints or take action against undisciplined drivers, said the YRTA managing director.

The transport authority will have a centralized database detailing the job history and work experience of YBS drivers. This will make it easy to trace drivers quickly, according to the YRTA.
As per data compiled by the transport authority during the first half of this month, it is currently dealing with driver indiscipline. It is looking into seven cases of drivers changing routes, 597 cases of fine receipts, 94 complaints against drivers, and seven road mishaps which have left three persons dead and two injured. At present, over 100 bus lines are operating 4,500 buses on 135 routes, along with the Airport Shuttle. The number of daily commuters has been estimated at 1.8 million.

Black, white sesame enter Mandalay market, get good price

BLACK sesame from Bhamo, Katha and Htigyaing townships and white sesame from Shwebo and Wetlet townships has started to enter the Mandalay market and is commanding a good price, according to Mandalay bean traders.

Among the winter sesame, the quality of black sesame from Magway region is better than that of monsoon black sesame. Although the price of monsoon black sesame is K250,000 per bag in the local market, the price of winter black sesame entering the market is K258,000 per bag. The price of winter white sesame has also increased slightly this year compared to last year. The price of winter white sesame is K152,000 per bag this year in Mandalay market, said U Soe Win Myint, the owner of Soe Win Myint brokerage.

“Black sesame from Bhamo and Katha townships enters the Mandalay market every year in the winter season. Last year, the price of black sesame was K230,000 per bag. But this year, the price of black sesame is K258,000 per bag. The sale of other goods is a bit cool in the border areas. But, the sale of sesame is normal because there is demand from the Chinese market. Local farmers and merchants are expecting normal sales of corn and paddy, like black sesame, in 2020 even though there are challenges,” he added.

With local consumption low, black sesame is being cultivated for export. Chinese traders purchase black sesame to produce medicines and cosmetics. Moreover, Japan also purchases black sesame from Myanmar annually.

TRADITIONAL earthen pottery businesses which have been passed down from generation to generation in Theetakan Village of Meiktila Township are shutting down as raw materials are getting increasingly difficult to find, said potters from the village.

“The village has 82 households and a population of 400. Most men have been earning their living by making pottery at home, like their ancestors. Earlier, the business involved lower inputs costs and raw materials were easy to find. But now, input costs are rising and raw materials such as farmland, straw, fuel, and wood are becoming scarce,” said U Kyaw Myaing, 100-household leader.

“The cost of renting farmlands has increased slightly, and the rate for renting a cart has touched K2,500. With the changing climate, it is becoming difficult to cultivate paddy and straw is becoming rare. The scarcity of straws has led to a decline in pottery businesses in our village. Now, there are only 15 potters in our village,” he said.

“Women in the village are still making pottery on a manageable scale. Water pots, flower pots, planters, and earthen pots for palm juices are selling well in Meiktila, Mahlaing, and Taungtha markets. But, water bottles are being used instead of water pots and bronze pots are also being used as flower pots. Therefore, potters are making fewer water and flower pots due to low demand in the market. Demand is still strong for planters and earthen pots for palm juices. We will continue to hand over our pottery businesses from one generation to the next even if raw materials become scarce, in order to maintain the cultural heritage of our family,” said Daw Tin Mya.—Thein Myint Kyaw (Meiktila)

Wooden comb-making businesses dying due to lack of raw materials

WOODEN comb-making businesses in Thet Kael Kyin Village, Monywa Township, have almost vanished due to lack of raw materials and substitution products.

“Earlier, the whole village was involved in weaving, making rosary beads, and the comb-making business. Now, the village is almost deprived of wooden-comb making businesses and weaving businesses. There are only four people who are still making wooden combs,” said Ko Myint, a local from Thet Kael Kyin Village.

Thet Kael Kyin Village is located 5 miles from Monywa town. The village has over 960 houses with 3,500 residents and over 800 households.

“Making a wooden comb involves ten steps. To make the combs, we were earlier using teak, Daung Nwe, Tamalan and Padauk wood. When the forests started to deplete over 30 or 40 years ago, we lost the opportunity to bring wood from the forests. Now, we are purchasing good-quality wood from firewood collectors to make the combs. The wooden combs are exported to international markets,” said a local involved in the comb-making business. —Myo Win Tun (Monywa)

Elevating Myanmar's sports

THE fact that Myanmar used to be at the top of Southeast Asian and Asian sport competitions might raise a disbelieving eyebrow from the current generation. But whether they believe it not, it is the truth.

There once was a time when Myanmar collected all the gold, silver and bronze medals for running, high jumps, long jumps, vaulting, discus throwing, hammer throwing, javelin throwing, swimming, diving, tennis, badminton, basketball, volleyball, weightlifting, judo, gymnastics and even soccer.

Bahar Duu, Hla Htay, Tin Aung, Khin Maung Tun, Ba Pu, Aung Khin, Shin Bwe Gan, Mi Tone Naw, Jimmy, Jennifer Tin Lay, Ma Khin Pu, Than

Now, Myanmar is seeing individuals achieving success in badminton, chess, lethwei and even soccer, where international teams are picking the single skilled players to come kick on their team.

The nations who were once left behind by Myanmar in international sporting events are now far ahead in the lead. We cannot get to where we once were if we merely clap when our home team wins and swear loudly or throw water bottles when we lose. This will in no way help Myanmar to reach the top of Asian or global sporting events.

Generally speaking, sports are an important component of a nation. The general wellbeing of every citizen alleviates the healthcare burden of the country. Children and youths will appreciate the value of teamwork when playing sports.

The spirit of sportsmanship is the pinnacle of fair play that translates well into everyday life. The nation and the people would do well to promote our athletes and reclaim our place in the global sports arena.

A Tribute to Sayamagyi Daw Kyan

Dr. Saw Mra Aung

I WAS stunned by the news of the demise of Sayamagyi Daw Kyan, a native of Rakhine, at the ripe age of 102 years on 16 November, 2019. Her death was an irreplaceable loss not only to Rakhine but also to the whole Myanmar. Although Sayamagyi and I belong to the same ethnic race, I had no close relation with her. I had met only once with her at a meeting held by the Sarpay Beikman about six years ago. Never Had I seen her again in the flesh since then. But I was later much more acquainted with her through her books and my teachers, her colleagues who often talked about her. I pay my tribute to her with this article for two reasons. The first one is that I had a great admiration for her due to her peerless literary contributions. And the second is that my nationalistic pride was conceived in my mind with the thought that I, as a Rakhine national, should proudly enter her name in the list of a brood of learned personalities Rakhine State has ever produced including Sayadaw U Ottama, U Shwe Zan Aung, U May Aung, Daw Mya Sein, U San Shwe Bu, I.C.S. U Shwe Mra, I.C.S. U Kyaw Min, I.C.S. U Shwe Baw, I. C.S. U Kyaw Khaing, I.C.S. U Sein Nyo Tun, Dr. Yee Yee, U San Tha Aung, etc. Though some of the afore-said Rakhine erudite personalities achieved only posthumous fame, Sayamagyi's reputation had spread further afield, while she was still active and alive for her exceptional literary talent and contributions.

Sayamagyi was born to U Kyaw Tun and Daw Ngwe Hnit on July 1, 1918 in Taung-goke in Thandwe district with the world-famous Ngapali Seabeach four miles west of the town, in the southern Rakhine State. She started her primary education at the tender age of five years and passed the High School Final(matriculation) examination with Grade A from the Thandwe Governmental High School in 1935. Soon, she embarked on her life profession as a junior assistant teacher at the Thandwe Governmental High School. Then she was transferred to the post-offices of Thandwe and Sittwe as an upper-division clerk. But, as she had a great thirst for knowledge, she left the postal service in 1951 to pursue university education.

Therefore, Sayamagyi set forth for Yangon and started to read at Yangon University in the same year and graduated with a B. A degree in March 1954. She was appointed a tutor at the Department of English Language and Literature soon after her graduation and worked there for two years from 1954 to 1956. She entered the Myanmar History Commission (which was subsequently changed into the Department of Historical Research) as a Senior Research Officer in 1956. Thenceforwards, she devoted most of her time to doing research on Myanmar History and writing many articles, research papers, monographs and books on the findings of her research. In 1957 and 1959, she was entrusted with the task of collecting and copying rare documents on Myanmar History from the libraries, archives and other resource centres in England. She accomplished her task well and could bring back some rare, invaluable historical documents like micro-films, etc. from England to Myanmar. In 1959, she secured a M. A degree(History).

In brief, I find that Sayamagyi gradually worked her way from a lower rank up to the top of her profession - from a teacher, a postal staff, a historian, a researcher and a writer up to a scholar.

That year, in recognition of her contributions, she was selected to tour some big towns in Australia under the Cultural Award Scheme. She retired from the Myanmar History Commission in 1984 but continued to serve as a Consultant to it for four years and was then appointed a Part-time Professor at the Department of History in Yangon University. Advanced as she of Pakokku U Ohn Pe Literary Awards and a Member of the Committee of Arranging Reference Books of the Sarpay Beikman .

Sayamagyi is such a prolific, committed writer that she has so far compiled a considerable number of books. To the best of my knowledge, she wrote “ မြန်မာနိုင်ငံအခြေအနေ” (The Situation of Myanmar was in age, she actively and healthily served until her death in various capacities such as a Full-time Member of the Myanmar Language Commission, a Member of the Selection Board of National Literary Awards, a Member of the Selection Board and, “မြန်မာနိုင်ငံ စက်မှုသမိုင်း” (The History of Myanmar Industry) in 1985-1990. Moreover, she also edited two books entitled “ ဘင်္ဂလားသွားစာတမ်း”, (The Treatise on the Trip to Bangalore) in 1963 and “ရတနာသိမ်မြို့ထွက် ရဲတင်းမော်ကွန်း” (The Epic Poem on Setting forth from Ratanasinkha) in 1968.

The State Government and some private organizations awarded Sayamagyi

Pe Life-long Literary Award in 2004 for her dedicated literary devotion. Moreover, she was also offered the Art Outstanding Prize and the Outstanding Woman Prize.

In brief, I find that Sayamagyi gradually worked her way from a lower rank up to the top of her profession - from a teacher, a postal staff, a historian, a researcher and a writer up to a scholar. So rare is a woman of versatility like Sayamagyi in the Myanmar society, where more men than women come to the fore in many aspects due to traditional and cultural conventions and constraints, although the latter are officially permitted to stand on the equal footing with the former there. I also notice that, though Sayamagyi almost confined her research area to Late Konbaung and Early Colonial Periods of Myanmar, she also wrote some research articles on Rakhine History, among which the ones titled, “ Doe Wei, a Marama Royal Reader of Rakhine King Abhayamaharaja” and, “ Nga-zin-ga and Nga-in-ga “, could, I think, provide clues to some riddles of Rakhine History. Moreover, Sayamagyi wrote an article entitled “ The Treatises of Rakhine History”. In it, she gave reviews on many ancient Rakhine chronicles and histories which have appeared in the form of palm-leaves and books in Rakhine. It can, to a great extent, help those who study Rakhine History find reference books. I am aware as well that Sayamagyi wrote some more articles on Rakhine History, all of which can serve Rakhine historical researchers as assets. So I want to say that Sayamagyi has done to her possible degree for revelation of Rakhine history and Myanmar history and that she, as a native of Rakhine, could have fulfilled her national and literary duty. I, as a Rakhine national, really swell with pride at the phenomenal achievements she redounded to the country and the people.

UNION Minister for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement Dr Win Myat Aye led a delegation to Vientiane, Laos, and attended the 10th ASEAN Ministerial Meeting on Social Welfare and Development (AMMSWD) at Don Chan Palace Hotel yesterday.

During the opening ceremony, Laotian Deputy Prime Minister Mr Soudy Douangsdy

delivered a speech where he said this meeting will discuss the necessary framework for providing social protection for vulnerable youths, elderly and people with disabilities. He said the more important factor is to share assistance and cooperation on these matters between the nations.

The ministerial meeting then commenced and Dr Win Myat Aye said Myanmar strategic plan for social protection accords and protects the rights of embryos to the elderly, through implementing eight sectors, and in coherence with the Myanmar Sustainable Development Programme (MSDP). He said this year marks the 30th anniversary of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and that they held the World Children’s Day commemoration event in Nay Pyi Taw where they invited over a hundred children from across the country and demonstrated the importance of adults listening to children and their participation.

The Union Minister said

they have enacted a new child rights law that will protect children living in conflict areas, in forced labour and those with disabilities. He said they have a strategic plan for 2020-2025 for the development of disabled persons and to be in line with the UNCRPD. He said they provide monthly social pensions to elderly above 85 years of age and youths are providing cooperation and support to raise the capacity of the elderly.

The Union Minister said that just as ASEAN nations assist affiliated countries, Myanmar is cooperating with China, Japan and South Korea on protecting children, elderly and disabled persons. This includes cooperation with KOICA, JICA and China Lancang-Mekong Cooperation Programme, said Dr Win Myat Aye. —MNA

Chinese royal goldware of Ming Dynasty on display in Romania

BUCHAREST — An exhibition of Chinese royal goldware of Ming Dynasty opened Wednesday at the National History Museum of Romania, on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of China-Romania diplomatic relations.

The exhibition “Royal Gold Wares of Wanli Period, Ming Dynasty — Dong Bo Zhai Collection” is the first collaboration between National History Museum of Romania and a Chinese private museum.

At its opening ceremony, Chinese Ambassador to Romania Jiang Yu said that “culture is colorful because of communication, and culture is enriched by mutual learning.”

“It is hoped that the people of the two countries will share their hearts and minds, and jointly build the friendship through cultural exchanges and mutual understanding,” she added.

Irina Cajal, undersecretary of state of the Romanian Culture Ministry, said that cultural exchanges are “the best way” to enhance friendship between the people of the two countries.

The exhibition is the second large-scale Chinese exhibition held at the National History Museum after the 2013 “Treasures of China,” which gives the Romanian people a chance to appreciate at close range the exquisite craftsmanship of ancient China, and enhance their understanding of China, said Cajal.

All the 145 pieces of goldware, dating from Wanli period (1573-1620) of Ming Dynasty, are the collections of Xi’an Qujiang Museum of Fine Arts. Zhou Tianyou, director of Qujiang Museum of Fine Arts, said he believes the collections could “play an active role in enhancing the bilateral friendship between China and Romania.” —Xinhua ■

Uber may contribute more transport pollution than solution: study

Transport NGOs say Uber is not helping solve urban transport systems, attracting more cars onto the road and increasing pollution as a result. PHOTO: AFP

LONDON — Ride-hailing pioneer Uber, rather than being part of the solution to urban transport may be adding to related problems, especially pollution from diesel cars, a study showed Thursday.

Transport & Environment, which groups NGOs in Europe to promote sustainable transport solutions, said Uber revolutionised the once heavily regulated taxi sector, attracting thousands of new Private Hire Vehicle (PHV) drivers.

But this “stellar increase in Uber drivers has not been offset by a similar reduction in taxi licences... and Uber’s appearance did not accelerate the reduction of car trips in London and Paris.”

Instead, “the convenience of door-to-door, app-based trip booking makes travelling by (hired) cars in cities more and more popular, risking a reversal of a 15 year trend of reducing car trips in cities,” the Brussels-based TE said in a summary of the study’s findings.

By the same token, “the uptake of ride-hailing services across EU cities also poses a risk to the fight against pollution and climate changing emissions.”

Uber operations in London, Paris and Brussels likely pump out 525,000 tons of CO<sub>2</sub> a year, equivalent to the emissions from 250,000 cars “which runs counter to the cities’ ambitions to reduce their climate footprint.”

These vehicles are mostly diesel, it said, noting that “only in London, where it is mandatory, is Uber making an effort to shift to cleaner, electric-powered vehicles.”

Uber is currently unprofitable but valued at around $49 billion on the markets as investors buy into its vision of a transport provider in a new world of electric vehicles and reduced greenhouse gas emissions.

“If Uber continues its current business practice of adding more combustion engine cars and fossil-powered kilometres in our cities, it is an obstacle to the transition to green and sustainable cities in Europe,” TE said.

But Uber could also “do the right thing,” as promised in its share offer, and “stop adding fossil-fuelled cars to city roads and to rapidly electrify its existing fleet.” In response Uber said it was committed to moving away from privately owned cars “towards a shared, electric future.”

“To do so, we are actively working with cities across Europe to improve access to clean, safe and affordable modes of transportation.”—AFP ■

US-born panda Bei Bei arrives in new China home

CHENGDU — The US-born giant panda Bei Bei has arrived in southwestern China after a 16-hour flight, with plenty of bamboo for him to munch on as he settled into his new home.

The four-year-old cub, whose name means “precious, treasure” in Mandarin, appeared to be contentedly eating and ambling around his new cage at a research centre in Sichuan province, according to images broadcast Thursday by state broadcaster CGTN.

Bei Bei travelled aboard a specially outfitted Boeing 777F cargo plane called the “Panda Express” — paid for by FedEx — accompanied by his keeper from the National Zoo in Washington and more than 70 pounds of bamboo and other treats.

China lends pandas to zoos around the world — a programme dubbed “panda diplomacy”.

Once young pandas reach the age of four, they are repatriated to breed with other pandas at sanctuaries in China. The animals are considered “vulnerable” to extinction by the International Union for Conservation of Nature. Bei Bei was welcomed “home” on Thursday with a ceremony at the Bifengxia Panda Base in Sichuan, local media reported. Fans had lined up at the National Zoo — the only home Bei Bei had ever known before his return to China — to bid the cub farewell ahead of his departure.—AFP ■

Online fundraiser for bushfire-hit koalas tops Aus$1 mn

SYDNEY — An online fundraiser for koalas injured in devastating bushfires topped Aus$1 million ($680,000) on Thursday, making it Australia’s biggest campaign on the GoFundMe platform this year.

Deadly bushfires have ravaged vast swathes of eastern Australia, and wildlife carers estimate the blazes have killed hundreds of koalas this month in New South Wales state alone.

A crowdfunding page set up by the Port Macquarie Koala Hospital to provide automatic water drinking stations for wild koalas soared past Aus$1 million, with donations from more than 20,000 people from countries including the United States, France and England. The wildlife charity’s “Help Thirsty Koalas Devastated by Recent Fires” drive, which had an initial goal of just Aus$25,000, got more donations than any other campaign in Australia this year, GoFundMe said, and is the second-biggest since the platform launched Down Under in 2016.

It is one of 700 bushfire-related fundraisers launched on the platform in the past 10 days, which to date have raised a combined total of Aus$2 million.

The next-biggest has raised Aus$60,000 to support firefighters and people impacted by the blazes, which have killed six people, razed hundreds of homes and scorched about 1.5 million hectares (3.7 million acres) of land since October. The koala hospital, some four hours north of Sydney, has rescued 31 koalas from the scorched bush in recent weeks, and said it had been “overwhelmed by the kindness, good wishes and support from the Australian and international community”.—AFP ■

China ‘medicine’ demand threatens world donkey population: report

LONDON — China’s demand for donkey skins to make a traditional medicine could wipe out more than half the world’s donkey population in the next five years, researchers said Thursday.

Nearly five million skins are used every year to make ejiao, a gel believed in China to be a remedy for troubles ranging from colds to ageing, putting enormous strain on donkey populations around the world, Britain-based animal welfare group Donkey Sanctuary said in a report.

Ejiao was once the preserve of emperors but is now highly sought after by a burgeoning middle class, with production growing 20 per cent each year between 2013 and 2016, Donkey Sanctuary said. China’s domestic donkey population has collapsed by 76 per cent since 1992, and the country imports most of the donkey skins it uses, mainly from traders in South America, Africa and Asia. There are currently around 45.8 million donkeys in the world, Donkey Sanctuary said.

The donkey skin trade has resulted in “suffering on an enormous and unacceptable scale”, the group’s chief executive Mike Baker said in a statement.

Researchers documented instances of unhygienic and inhumane processing conditions, including donkeys being crudely bludgeoned on the head at one slaughterhouse in Tanzania while still conscious and restrained.

At a holding facility in Brazil, malnourished animals were being kept in the same pens as “hundreds of donkey carcasses” that had contaminated the only available water source, “putting remaining donkeys at risk of either infectious disease or severe dehydration”.—AFP ■

British Airways says flights hit by glitch

LONDON — British Airways flights were facing delays in and out of London's Heathrow and Gatwick airports on Thursday after a technical glitch overnight, the airline said.

"Our teams are working hard to resolve a technical issue which is affecting some of our flights," said a spokeswoman for BA, owned by airlines group IAG.

"We have rebooked customers on to alternative flights and offered hotel accommodation where they have been unable to continue their journeys last night.

"We are very sorry for the disruption to their travel plans.

We plan to operate a full flight schedule today," she added.

BA warned that there would be knock-on delays — but declined to comment on the nature of the problem nor the number of flights affected.

"This is the latest in a long line of British Airways technical glitches causing delays and cancellations," said Rory Boland, editor of consumer magazine Which? Travel.

"Yet again it's thousands of passengers who are paying the price — left tired, frustrated and with a lack of information and assistance from the airline."

Workers of Samsung unite, new union tells chipmaker staff

SEOUL — Under the watchful gaze of Samsung Electronics security personnel, health and safety staffer Ko Jee-hun stood outside his semiconductor plant, handing out leaflets touting the benefits of joining a trade union.

For almost 50 years the firm avoided unionisation of its employees — sometimes adopting ferocious tactics according to critics — while rising to become the world's largest smartphone and semiconductor manufacturer.

It is the flagship subsidiary of the giant Samsung Group, by far the biggest of the family-controlled conglomerates, known as "chaebol", that dominate the world's 11th-largest economy.

But last week local authority officials in Suwon, where the chipmaker is headquartered, certified the National Samsung Electronics Union.

It is affiliated to the powerful Federation of Korean Trade Unions umbrella group (FKTU), and analysts say the move could spell trouble down the line for the firm.

Ko is the union's deputy general secretary. "What's at stake here is more than wages," he said as he mounted a recruitment drive this week.

"We demand communication and to have our voices heard. Because we are not just components."

The leaflets he handed out showed a series of cartoon characters complaining about issues from holidays and lunch breaks to forced early retirement and unexplained bonus reductions.

"The real union has arrived," it proclaimed, with a link and QR codes for employees to sign up.

The security guards would not let him stand directly outside the factory gate in Hwaseong, about 50 kilometres (30 miles) south of Seoul, forcing him to take up a position at the next intersection — but almost all passers-by took a copy.

"The fight has just only begun," Ko told AFP.

Ahead of its formal establishment the union registered 400 expressions of interest from Samsung Electronics employees, the FKTU says.—AFP ■

Tough times for Yemen honey trade as war drags on

SANAA — Mohammed Manea has tended honey bees northeast of Sanaa for years, but despairs that the production of "Yemen's gold" is under threat as the war engulfing the country drags on.

The conflict has blighted millions of lives and brought the economy to the brink of collapse. Cottage industries such as beekeeping, coffee growing and artisan manufacturing have been hit particularly hard.

Beekeepers say clashes between the Saudi-supported government and Iran-backed rebels, alongside a humanitarian crisis that the United Nations has called the world's worst, have throttled their livelihoods.

"When we recently arrived in this part of Hajjah province on the front line between the aggressors (the Saudi-led coalition) and the Huthis, the trucks were hit by an air strike," Manea told AFP.

"One was carrying the honey, and the other was carrying the bees," he added as he used his bare hands to remove a honeycomb frame crawling with bees from a hive in the rural region of Aslam. Yemen is renowned for its Sidr honey, named after the tree from which the nectar is gathered. The honey is referred to informally as "Middle Eastern manuka", a bow to its famed market rival from New Zealand.

'Production has dropped'

Sidr honey is said to have medicinal properties and is a bestseller in the souks and bazaars of the Gulf where it retails at a premium.

It is also a natural product that is traditionally recommended to new mothers to augment breast milk production.

Manea's fellow beekeeper, Ali Kabsh, agreed that the business was suffering badly.

"Honey production has dropped," he said pointing to the challenges of exporting during wartime and the logistical difficulties of keeping bees.—AFP ■

Saudi king says to use revenues of Aramco's IPO to boost investment

RIYADH — Saudi King Salman bin Abdulaziz Al Saud said on Wednesday that the revenues of the Saudi Aramco's initial public offering will be channelled to Saudi Arabia's sovereign wealth fund to boost investment inside and outside the kingdom, the Saudi Press Agency reported.

King Salman made the announcement in his speech during a Shura Council opening session, where he said Aramco's IPO would greatly enhance the size of the Saudi financial market in line with advanced international markets.

He also said Saudi Arabia is determined to carry on with its reform programs to raise its competitiveness to become one of the 10 most business-friendly countries in

The Saudi king referred to opening of the tourism sector and issuing tourist visas as part of the steps to attract and diversify investments in the sector.

"It provides great job opportunities and a cultural bridge to connect with the world to share our rich heritage and civilizational landmarks," he said.

On Saudi Arabia's host of the G20 summit in 2020, King Salman said it is another evidence of the pivotal role of the kingdom in the global economy.

"We hope that the ambitious program ... will contribute to the enhancement of the kingdom's march to serve the interests of all countries," he said. — Xinhua ■

Investors win big in French lottery operator's IPO

PARIS — Investors cheered a strong market debut Thursday for shares in France's state-owned lottery monopoly, an IPO the government hopes will create support for further privatisations and bolster President Emmanuel Macron's ambitious economic reforms.

The government reaped around 2.1 billion euros ($2.3 billion) from selling a 52-per cent stake in the Francaise des Jeux (FDJ), whose scratchcards and lotteries are played by millions.

Around a third of the shares was reserved for some 500,000 individual investors, who snapped up a chance to own part of a company that will maintain its lottery monopoly for the next 25 years.

The vast majority of French savings is parked in ultra-safe but low-interest savings accounts, reflecting deep suspicion of "speculative" markets which only hardened in the wake of the 2007-08 financial crisis.

But the demand for FDJ shares was buoyant, prompting the government to set the IPO price at 19.90 euros, the high end of the indicative range.

By 11:30 am (1030 GMT) the shares were up 16.7 per cent at 22.75 euros, even as the broader market slumped, with the CAC 40 index down 0.2 per cent.

Finance Minister Bruno Le Maire, who rang the opening bell at the Paris Stock Exchange to mark the occasion, hailed "an immense" success.

The strong trading debut "signals a reconciliation of the French with the economy and the markets" after the 2008 crisis, he said.—AFP ■

India offers ailing telecom firms two-year moratorium on payments

NEW DELHI — India has granted the country's beleaguered telecom giants a moratorium on spectrum payments until the end of March 2022, offering much-needed respite after the Supreme Court slapped a massive $13-billion bill on the companies.

Vodafone Idea and Bharti Airtel bore the brunt of last month's court ruling ordering firms to pay a combined 920 billion rupees in past spectrum and licensing fees.

The judgement saw Vodafone Idea record the biggest quarterly loss in Indian corporate history last week after it factored in the $4 billion levy.

But New Delhi offered a measure of relief to the struggling sector late Wednesday, with the cabinet approving a moratorium on spectrum payments for the next two financial years.

"Deferment of spectrum auction instalments will ease the cash outflow of the stressed (telecom providers) and facilitate payment of statutory liabilities and interest on bank loans," the cabinet said in a press release.

Vodafone Idea and Bharti Airtel, which was hit with a $3-billion bill, have warned that the ruling will exacerbate the telecom sector's financial woes.

The announcement didn't appear to do much to help the share price of either firm, with Bharti Airtel down two percent and Vodafone Idea losing four percent on Thursday morning in Mumbai.

In addition to seeking the deferral of payments, the British parent company Vodafone had also asked for a reduction in licensing fees.

Vodafone's chief executive Nick Read said last week that the telecom firm was facing a crisis in India and would not invest any more equity in the country since the South Asian market contributed zero to its global share valuations.

Vodafone Idea and Bharti Airtel have both struggled since India's richest man Mukesh Ambani launched Reliance Jio in 2016. The new mobile operator has offered dirt-cheap internet and free calls. All three companies have announced plans to raise their charges in the next few weeks in a bid to boost their bottomline and help the sector recover after years of cut-price tariffs.—AFP ■

Pope meets Thai Buddhist patriarch on visit promoting harmony

BANGKOK — Pope Francis met with Thailand's supreme Buddhist patriarch on Thursday in a gilded Bangkok temple on the first full day of his Asia tour aimed at promoting religious harmony.

This is the pontiff's first visit to Buddhist-majority Thailand — where just over 0.5 percent of the population are Catholics — before he jets off to Japan on Saturday.

He is pushing a message of inter-faith peace on a four-day visit that will see him lead a mass later Thursday for tens of thousands of faithful from across Southeast Asia.

The 82-year-old head of the Catholic church also delivered impassioned remarks about the plight of vulnerable children and women who he said deserved a "dignified" future. In a highly symbolic meeting Thursday, he sat down with Thailand's supreme Buddhist patriarch Somdej Phra Maha Muneewong at the Ratchabophit temple in Bangkok's historic old quarter.

"Catholics have enjoyed freedom in religious practice, despite their being in a minority, and for many years have lived in harmony with their Buddhist brothers and sisters," the Pope said in a speech at the meeting. The pair sat before a brilliant gold Buddha statue inside the ornate temple, built 150 years ago by the former Thai King — the supreme patriarch barefoot and draped in orange robes as they spoke.

The Pope reciprocated the gesture, removing his shoes for part of the tete-a-tete.

In an earlier speech, the Pope said the meeting was "a sign of the importance and urgency of promoting friendship and inter-religious dialogue".

It was the same temple visited by John Paul II on the last papal trip to Thailand in 1984.

This visit coincides with the 350th anniversary of the founding of the "Mission de Siam", marking the first papal mission from Europe in the 17th century.

Though Christianity's first visitors were initially met with scepticism, today Thailand's nearly 400,000 Catholics face little discrimination.

The head of the world's 1.3

N Korean leader Kim not to attend ASEAN summit in S Korea: KCNA

SEOUL — North Korean leader Kim Jong Un has declined an invitation to attend an upcoming summit between South Korean and Southeast Asian leaders to be held in the South, Pyongyang's state-run media said on Thursday.

The Korean Central News Agency said that South Korean President Moon Jae In early this month sent a personal letter to Kim, requesting his participation in the special summit between South Korea and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to be held in the port city of Busan from Monday. It added that "(Pyongyang) does appreciate hopes and sincerity from the South, but would like to ask for understanding that our Chairman failed to find proper reasons to visit Busan in the end."

Inter-Korean ties have been in a stalemate. The two leaders agreed in their last summit to resume an inter-Korean tour project, but Seoul has been unwilling to defy US-international sanctions against the North. —Kyodo News ■

Philippine police say will arrest anyone flouting vaping ban

MANILA — Philippine police were ordered Wednesday to arrest anyone caught vaping in public, just hours after Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte announced he would ban e-cigarettes.

The abrupt prohibition, revealed by Duterte late Tuesday adds to a growing global backlash against a product once promoted as less harmful than tobacco smoking.

Duterte, a former smoker, called the devices "toxic" and said vaping introduced "chemicals" into the user's body.

He ordered the arrest of anyone vaping publicly in a country that already has some of Asia's toughest anti-smoking rules.

No formal, written order has been made public that spells out the scope of the ban or penalties for violations.

ti-narcotics crackdown, but he has also targeted tobacco with a wide-ranging ban on smoking in public. Citing "the order of the president", on Wednesday a statement from the head of the Philippine police ordered "effective today, all police units nationwide to enforce the ban on use of vapes; ensure that all violators will be arrested".

The ban came days after Philippine health authorities reported the nation's first vaping-related lung injury, which resulted in a 16-year-old girl being hospitalised. Vaping has taken off in the Philippines, with speciality shops and vapers puffing away in public a common sight.—AFP ■

Three navy ships held by Russia return to Ukraine port

KIEV — Three navy vessels that Moscow seized last year and handed back to Ukraine have arrived at a Ukrainian port, though Kiev said they were stripped of equipment.

The Nikopol, the Berdyansk and the Yany Kapu were seized in November last year in the Kerch Strait, in the most serious confrontation between Russia and Ukraine since the beginning of the conflict in east Ukraine in 2014. The two gunboats and a tugboat were handed back this week after they were held in evidence following what Moscow says was an illegal breach of the Russian border. The ships were welcomed back on Wednesday evening by the Ukrainian navy and President Volodymyr Zelensky, who reviewed them in the Black Sea navy port in Ochakiv.

“I am very happy that our navy vessels are back where they belong. As promised, we have brought back our sailors and our ships,” Zelensky said.

“Some of the equipment is missing, as well as some weapons,” he said. “There will be an investigation. We will see all of the details.” The vessels had to be towed to their destination by other Ukrainian ships and were greeted from the shore by Ukrainians holding national flags.

The Ukrainian defence ministry said that “the Russians have dismantled some communication and navigation equipment on board,” and the ships will be examined by Ukrainian investigators and military prosecutors.

This will permit Ukraine to use the information “for judicial review of Russia’s actions in Ukrainian and international courts,” Admiral Igor Voronchenko said in a statement.

Sailors from the three ships were held by Moscow for months before being released in October in a high-profile prisoner swap with Ukraine, a long-awaited measure aimed at easing tensions ahead of a Ukraine peace summit next month. The presidents of Ukraine and Russia, with mediation by their counterparts from Germany and France, will meet in Paris on December 9 aiming to end the conflict in eastern Ukraine. —AFP ■

Georgia jails opposition protesters

TBILISI — A court in Georgia on Thursday jailed 10 opposition demonstrators for terms ranging from four to 13 days for “disobeying police orders” during protests which were dispersed with water cannon.

Tens of thousands of anti-government protesters this week demanded snap polls after the ruling party in parliament failed to enact promised reforms.

The 10 defendants had been arrested Monday at a peaceful protest outside parliament.

Twenty-five more await verdicts later Thursday from the Tbilisi city court.

In a separate case, the court ordered the pre-trial detention of prominent opposition activist Giorgi Rurua, who is a shareholder of the pro-opposition Mtavari TV channel. Rurua has been charged with “illegal possession of firearms” which he accused police of planting in his car.

He could face up to seven years in prison if convicted.

Georgia’s opposition said the crackdown was an attempt at frightening the protesters by powerful billionaire Bidzina Ivanishvili, the leader of the majority Georgian Dream party accused of orchestrating the crisis.

“With these arrests, Ivanishvili tries to sow fear to stop the protest movement, but he gets an opposite result,” said MP Nika Melia, a leader of Georgia’s main opposition force United National Movement “Popular anger is growing,” she told AFP. Melia is under house arrest over his role in anti-government protests over the summer.

Groups of protesters on Thursday symbolically locked the entrances to several government buildings with padlocks — including the prime minister’s office while he was leading a cabinet meeting.

The protests gripped Tbilisi after ruling party MPs last week voted down legislation to hold parliamentary elections next year under a new proportional voting system. Ivanishvili pledged to carry out a “large-scale political reform” following a summer of protests that saw 240 people injured in a police crackdown.

In the biggest anti-government protest in years, more than 20,000 demonstrators rallied Sunday outside the parliament building and some protesters who attempted to block building entrances were dispersed on Monday.—AFP ■

French police officer faces judge over ‘yellow vest’ violence

PARIS — A French police officer was to appear in court Thursday on charges he hurled a paving stone at protesters during a “yellow vest” rally, the first member of the security forces to face trial after a wave of claims of police violence during the weekly protests.

The court hearing comes just days after the first anniversary of the anti-government rallies, which were again marked by clashes with police and vandalism in Paris last Saturday.

Demonstrators accuse police of using brutal tactics to suppress the movement, in particular the use of heavy rubber bullets that activists say have cost some two dozen people to lose an eye.

The fierce violence that flared during the protests earlier this year shocked many in France and made headlines worldwide, as rioters ran amok burning cars while facing off against police firing tear gas, stun grenades and water cannon.

Paris prosecutors have signalled 212 cases of alleged police violence to the IGP police oversight body, of which 18 are being examined by investigating magistrates to decide if there is enough evidence to press charges.

The officer on trial Thursday was captured on video heaving a paving stone toward a crowd during a May Day rally in Paris, a scene which quickly went viral on social media.

AC Milan offer Ibrahimovic six-month deal - reports

MILAN — Sweden star Zlatan Ibrahimovic has been offered a six-month deal to come to the aid of struggling former Italian giants AC Milan, according to reports in Italy on Thursday.

The 38-year-old striker confirmed his departure from Los Angeles Galaxy last week following the club's elimination from the Major League Soccer playoffs.

Gazzetta dello Sport and Sky Sports Italia reported that the former seven-time European champions have now made contact with the player's agent Mino Raiola.

The US-owned club want the former Swedish international for six months and are prepared to pay him six million euros ($6.6 million) if he remains for 18 months in total, Gazzetta claimed.

Milan finished fifth last season, missing out on a return to Champions League football by just a point to city rivals Inter.

They have had a poor start to this campaign and are 14th after 12 games before they host last year's runners-up Napoli on Saturday in the San Siro.

Ibrahimovic played for two seasons between 2010 and 2012 with AC Milan, helping them to their last Serie A title, and scoring 42 goals in 61 league appearances.

He also won three league titles with Inter Milan, and two with Juventus, which were both revoked following the 'Calciopoli' match-fixing scandal.—AFP ■

'Humble' Mourinho not planning on big changes at Spurs

LONDON — Jose Mourinho is not planning on wholesale changes as he tries to turn Tottenham's season around and believes he is humble enough to have learned lessons from his failed spell in charge of Manchester United.

Mourinho replaced Mauricio Pochettino as Spurs boss on Wednesday after the Argentine's five-and-a-year spell ended in the sack with Tottenham 14th in the Premier League. The Portuguese has won 25 trophies in a storied managerial career at Porto, Chelsea, Inter Milan, Real Madrid and United.

However, his time in charge at Old Trafford ended in the sack 11 months ago having failed to win the league at a club for the first time since he left Portuguese minnows Leiria to join Porto in 2002.

"I am humble enough to try to analyse my career. Not just the last year, my career, the evolution, the problems, the solutions," said Mourinho in his first press conference as Tottenham boss on Thursday. "I was humble enough to do that. The principle of the analysis was not to blame anyone else."

Pochettino was let go less than six months after reaching the club's first ever Champions League final, but results domestically have been on the slide for nearly a year.

The Argentine had been keen for a bigger turnover of his squad in recent seasons to prevent his time in charge from growing stale. However, Mourinho insisted he will not demand millions to spend in the transfer market.—AFP ■
