Step up war on illicit trade

IT is an undeniable fact that illicit trade is thriving in Myanmar. Why? There are several reasons. Private firms in Myanmar are in the process of transitioning into listed companies. The nation is also going through another transformation: moving from a weaker to stronger rule of law.

To curb illicit trade, the government has formed task forces in nine regions and states which share a border with neighboring countries. The government is also trying to end armed conflict to achieve complete peace.

Illegal trade entails a massive loss of potential tax revenue, thereby negatively affecting the economy, natural environment, and society. Illicit trade also does not come under the purview of the law as it is operated by illegal groups.

Illicit trade violates the taxation law and has negative consequences. A market flooded with illegal goods makes it difficult for domestic small and medium enterprises to sustain themselves, while hampering the nation's industrial development. Corruption and an unfavorable economic environment also scare away foreign investors.

Effective strategies and plans are sine qua non for preventing illicit traders from taking advantage of Free Trade Zones (FTZs) and Special Economic Zones (SEZs), and to crack down on illicit trade in accordance with the law.

other to make the policies on border trade a success.

It is especially important to give priority to the fight against drug trafficking in the drive in the regions and states.

Effective strategies and plans are sine qua non for preventing illicit traders from taking advantage of Free Trade Zones (FTZs) and Special Economic Zones (SEZs), and to crack down on illicit trade in accordance with the law.

The fourth amendment to the Anti-Corruption Law, sub-section (A), Section-3, bars officials from abusing their power by using their position in the administration. Under the law, action can be taken against those who give and receive bribes.

These efforts show that the Union Government is stepping up its efforts to fight illicit trade. Hence, the people, Hluttaw representatives, private businesses, media, and the local authorities are urged to actively participate in the drive to combat illicit trade.

The importance of the interim census

By Maung Mudita

POPULATION censuses around the world are a resource of basic civilian information and can assist in the workings of the smallest administration areas, including drafting development projects. Furthermore, they can also assist in the distribution of natural resources, reviewing borders and population density, making decisions in constructing schools, hospitals, health departments, roads and other basic infrastructure, and conducting research in various areas.

Thirty years after 1983, the first nationwide population and housing census was conducted across Myanmar in 2014, from 30 March to 10 April. There were 80,556 designated areas for compiling the census and it was done to professional international standards. The census showed the national population was 51,486,253 back then.

The census helped to produce an early demographic list, a main report, state/regional reports, an image of Myanmar formed from the census, an employment and business report, religious demographic report, township-level and sub-township-level reports and even 13 in-depth research papers.

National development projects and other initiatives after 1983 were mostly conducted on yearly estimates and this practice continued for thirty years until the 2014 Census was compiled. The processes became more exact and efficient after that. The information from the census helped not just the government, but also other international and domestic organizations and researchers.

The census made drafting short and long term projects more efficient. In essence, the Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population, assisting government departments, UNFPA, international organizations and civil society organizations should be commended for their efforts in compiling the valuable information contained in the 2014 Census.

An interim census emerges

Conducting a nationwide survey for compiling a census is vastly time-consuming and requires a lot of resources, human and otherwise, that most countries only conduct them once every ten years. It would follow then that the next census for Myanmar would be done in 2024.

However, various sectors across the globe are developing at a rapid pace and socioeconomic facts and information are changing at the same quick pace. Ten years is too wide a gap to fulfill the deficit of information in the period before the next census. Thus, we see our neighbours conducting interim censuses to compensate.

The Department of Population used population science and the 2014 Census to estimate Myanmar's population has grown to 54,101,253 in an announcement made on 1 April this year. This means there was an increase of 2.6 million people between 2014 to 2019.

Just as the population increases and changes every year, we can logically assume that socioeconomic changes must be taking place as well. Modern numbers and information are needed to design accurate projects. That is why Myanmar will also conduct an interim census so as to see the differences between it and the 2014 Census and to produce updated information.

Another reason for the interim census is to make estimates for 2024 as accurate as possible when comparing it to the 2014 Census and the changes to the population and socio-economic situation that will come about in the decade between them. It would also aid in future research papers and the implementation of Myanmar's Sustainable Development Plan.

The interim census may not be as in-depth as the 2014 Census but it will at least aim to gather information at the district-level of each state and region. But it will still follow the same four steps as the last census, and this involves preparation, gathering information, compilation, and reviewing and finalization.

Another difference is the census won't be conducted at the same time but rather collected from designated sample areas. The working committees will still be formed in the same way as before. Maps compiled in the 2014 Census were digitized using Google Map and GIS technology and compiling data on the number of buildings and such went smoother when drawing from past experience.

A total of 4,200 sample areas have been designated for the interim census and data will be collected for district-level statistics and indexes. One designated area will contain 35 households and each surveyor must collect data from 70 households within a span of 14 days and every four surveyor will constitute one team with a separate leader.

Collection in four phases

The interim census will be done in four phases with the first phase conducted in Kachin State, Chin State and Nay Pyi Taw Council Territory from 18 November to 1 December, 2019. The second phase will be done in Kayin, Kayah and Mon states and Tanintharyi and Ayeyawaddy regions from 11 to 24 December 2019.

The third phase will be in Bago, Sagaing and Magway regions from 2 to 15 January, 2020 and the fourth and final phase will be in Shan State, Rakhine State, Yangon Region and Mandalay Region from 15 to 28 January of the same year.

The interim census will be done using the latest Computer-Assisted Personal Interviewing (CAPI) technology on mobile tablets for the first time. Government department officials will be conducting the census and aided by energetic local youths who would have received proper training beforehand.

The technological advancement is another difference from the 2014 Census. While it was done using the old fashioned pencil-on-paper method for answering 41 questions to citizens, the mobile tablet will allow faster and accurate recording of citizens answering to 110 questions. These will all be uploaded to the main server of the Population Department headquarters in Nay Pyi Taw. The increase in number of questions is to accommodate the needs of government departments and others whose works rely on this data.

Of course, the use of modern technology means there is a requirement for skilled mobile tablet users and the expenses concerned with purchasing the equipment and related accessories. On the other hand, there is a dramatic reduction of human resource, time and energy consumption and the work can additionally be then faster and more efficiently.

Furthermore, there will also be an evident decrease in human error when inputting information. Not only that, the information collected can be disseminated in real time and mobile tablets can be used in future projects as well.

110 questions

The 110 questions to be asked in the interim census can be divided into 11 different categories. These include 13 questions on population information, 2 questions on domestic migration, 12 questions on education, 10 questions on labour affairs, 8 questions on reproduction, 1 question on living with disabilities, 5 questions on elderly life, 7 questions on inclusiveness, receiving assistance and quality of life, 15 questions on migrating abroad, 11 questions on house and home, 14 questions on environmental and individual cleanliness, and 2 questions on death and maternal death.

Interviewing all 110 questions will consume an average 45 minutes per person and the interviewers are accountable for maintaining confidentiality of the interviewees. The interviewers are also instructed to conduct only on the basis of data-gathering for the interim census and cannot use the interview for probing into other unrelated matters.

The questions mentioned above are all related to establishing the necessary indexes and statistics to run projects for socio-economic development. The answers of each household will be compiled and evaluated to produce useful data for regional development.

While the interim census will not be as far-reaching or comprehensive as the census before it, it will provide valuable data when used for comparison and to see changes reflected. This will without a doubt supplement the efforts of the nation.

However, it requires the active participation and trust of the people of Myanmar. Everyone's truthful answer is a point towards our collective development. The theme of the 2014 census campaign was 'A nationwide census - Let us all Participate' and it applies just as equally to the currently ongoing interim census.

Week-long survey on to explore bus-rail connectivity: YRTA

By Nyein Nyein

A week-long survey has been launched to explore linking train and bus stations, and depending on its findings, the bus-rail connectivity project will be taken forward, said U Hla Aung, joint secretary of the Yangon Region Transport Authority (YRTA). The Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) is conducting a survey, for the first time, from 2 to 8 December, on a pilot project that is currently on at the Thamine Railway Station (Baho road). Suggestions and opinions will be sought from the public as part of the survey. “The survey is being conducted. We want to gauge public opinion to find out if the project is effective for the public or not, invite suggestions for more projects, and explore public attitudes towards the project. The survey will be conducted by JICA. Depending upon the results, we will carry out the connected operation between trains and buses,” said U Hla Aung. “We want to boost transportation in future. That is why we are implementing the pilot project. By implementing the connected operation, the passengers can calculate the travel time, and travel with ease and comfort,” he added. “The public transportation network is very important for people and the economic sector. Currently, YBS bus terminals are located near Thamine Station (Baho road). So, passengers will find it more convenient to change from bus to train and vice versa,” he said. “Moreover, preparations are being made to ensure the convenience of passengers and adopt rules and regulations for passengers to follow at bus stations. PR is being conducted jointly with the public, with guidance staff appointed to give directions at the stations, and project areas are being built,” he said. Currently, the connected operation bus line numbers are YBS 15,16,19,61,68,79,83,11,22, and 94. The bus-rail connectivity project will be conducted jointly by Myanma Railways, Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC), YRTA, JICA, and the traffic police. Under an agreement with the Myanmar government, JICA is supporting the development of the bus transportation system, in terms of bus driver training, technology development, and transportation sector development.

Thai investors eyeing tourism businesses in Taninthayi Region: DICA

By Nyein Nyein

AS Thai entrepreneurs are considering investing in tourism businesses in Taninthayi region, Thailand has sought information about the region from the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration, according to U Thant Sin Lwin, director-general of DICA.

"They contacted us a few days ago by email. In the email, they asked about how many islands in Taninthayi region there are, how many roads there are, what kind of airplanes can be landed there, ways to reach hospitals, if there are any hospitals there, etc. They sent us questions, and most of them concerned travel," said U Thant Sin Lwin.

Entrepreneurs from Thailand, who plan to invest in the region's tourism sector, are trying to get the information from DICA and conducting research in order to draw up their plans, he added.

"Tourism businesses are enormous projects and we have to submit proposals step by step. Then, we have to coordinate by requesting and sharing information," said U Thant Sin Lwin.

"The investors want to implement all-inclusive tourism in Taninthayi region. It will be a huge project because they want to ride the speedboat and use the airplane. But, we have to submit the proposals step by step, and we need to request some data from them. Also, they want to negotiate with us to get permission," he added.

In order to boost local and foreign investments, the Taninthayi investment forum 2019 is being organized on 7 December at the Pearl Laguna Resort in Myeik town, he added.

"Through such forums, investment opportunities can be showcased in the regions. Foreign investors and local entrepreneurs can network at the forum. Then, investments will flow into the country," he added.

There are investment opportunities in the tourism, fisheries, and mining sectors in Taninthayi region. Currently, the region only has saltwater shrimp breeding and production industry, with a total investment of K3,300 million, according to official statistics provided by DICA.

According to the Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC), Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) of US$1,392.629 billion flowed into the country from 1 October to 30 November. The MIC aims to attract $5.8 billion in FDI this fiscal.

The participants from the two sides also discussed guidelines for broadcasting, media ethics and reporters' manuals.

Broadcasting in Myanmar began in 1980 with the assistance of the Japanese Sasakawa Foundation, which built a broadcasting studio and provided equipment to Myanmar. "Japan's assistance can be said to have played an important role in launching the broadcast media in Myanmar," said Union Minister Dr Pe Myint.

Following his speech, Chief Representative of JICA Myanmar Office, Mr Masayuki Karasawa, explained the purpose of the workshop. Afterwards, the two sides reviewed the ongoing cooperation in developing broadcast media of MRTV, a draft for media ethics written by Myanmar and Japanese experts, reporter manuals, guidelines for broadcasting and a draft for extension of public interest programmes.

The workshop mainly focused assistance from JICA to promoting of MRTV's broadcast quality and plan for producing public interest programmes and results of the implementation of the cooperation.

MRTV broadcast the colour TV Programmes in 1980s with the assistance of Japanese Sasakawa Foundation and JICA.

With the cultural assistance fund of Japan, Japan's NHK broadcast 383 programmes in MRTV channels. As a third co-operation between Japan and Myanmar, the two countries adopted a four-year project on promoting the quality of MRTV, and trained the MRTV staff and helped in producing public interests programmes. The 2019-2020 FY is the last year of the project.

Meanwhile, the equipment of the MRTV was upgraded with the JICA ODA Grant assistance.

A ceremony to launch the use of equipment was held at the MRTV (Yangon) on 7th September. —MNA

Merkel visits Auschwitz for first time

OSWIECIM (Poland) — Germany’s Angela Merkel crossed the gates of the former Auschwitz Nazi death camp in Poland on Friday for the first time in her 14 years as chancellor, promising to battle a new wave of anti-Semitism.

Merkel is only the third chancellor ever to visit the Nazi German camp where a million Jews were killed between 1940 and 1945 and which has come to symbolise the Holocaust as a whole. Her trip, which comes ahead of the 75th anniversary of the camp’s liberation by Soviet troops on January 27, is being seen as an important political message.

On the eve of her visit, 65-year-old Merkel said that “the fight against anti-Semitism and against all forms of hate” was a priority for her government.

She also hailed a new 60-million-euro ($66-million) donation for the Auschwitz-Birkenau Foundation that was approved by Germany’s federal states on Thursday.

Merkel began her visit by walking under the Nazi slogan “Arbeit macht frei” (Work will set you free) that still hangs over the gates of the camp. She will also hold a minute’s silence by the Death Wall where thousands of prisoners were shot dead and visit the site of a gas chamber and a crematorium.

The visit “is a particularly important signal of attention and solidarity at a time when Auschwitz survivors are victims of anti-Semitic insults and hate-filled emails,” said Christoph Heubner, deputy chairman of the Auschwitz International Committee.

Merkel was accompanied during the visit by a survivor of the camp, 87-year-old Bogdan Stanislaw Bartnikowski, as well as Polish Prime Minister Mateusz Morawiecki.

Josef Schuster, head of the Central Council of Jews in Germany, and Ronald Lauder, head of the World Jewish Congress, also took part in the visit. In total, 1.1 million people were killed at Auschwitz-Birkenau, including non-Jewish Poles, Soviet prisoners of war, Roma and anti-Nazi fighters.—AFP ■

Healthcare battles Brexit as top UK election issue

LONDON — Britain’s snap election next week was called to resolve the impasse over Brexit but much of the campaign has instead been dominated by explosive rows over healthcare.

The state-run National Health Service (NHS) provides free taxpayer-funded treatment for all. It is often criticised but fiercely defended.

For many voters, the debate over how to address its shortcomings is more important than less tangible issues such as Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s Brexit deal. Naomi Fulop, from the Institute of Epidemiology and Health at University College London, said direct taxpayer ownership of the NHS, and interaction with it, gives the service a personal link which guarantees it as a perennial top election issue. Mark Dayan, a policy analyst at the Nuffield Trust health think-tank, told AFP: “There’s a national feeling of protectiveness towards the NHS — and that has become anxiety as performance has slipped.”

Johnson’s centre-right Conservatives and the left-wing Labour main opposition are both promising big NHS spending boosts over the next five years if they win next Thursday. “All the major parties are competing with each other to show how much they want to increase expenditure and address workforce issues that have been created over the last 10 years, rather than reorganising,” said Fulop.—AFP ■

France hit by second day of massive strike over pension reform

PARIS — Travellers across France endured a second day of chaos on Friday as unions vowed to keep up their strike until President Emmanuel Macron backs down on controversial pension overhauls.

Rail operator SNCF said 90 percent of high-speed TGV trains were again cancelled, and several airlines dropped flights including Air France, EasyJet and Ryanair.

Nine of the capital’s 16 metro lines were shut and most others severely disrupted, sparking some 350 kilometres (220 miles) of traffic jams in the Paris region, well above the usual 200 km, the traffic website Sytadin reported

Many employees were unable to get to work and several schools again provided only daycare, though fewer teachers were on strike compared with Thursday when some 800,000 people demonstrated across the country according to the interior ministry.

Bike paths were crowded with bikes and electric scooters, with metro operator RATP sponsoring special deals for commuters with a range of ride-hailing companies and other transportation alternatives. The walkout is the latest test for Macron after months of protests from teachers, hospital workers, police and firefighters as well as the “yellow vest” movement demanding improved living standards.—AFP ■

Towards Myitchay

the area of Mural paintings

in Nyungyan era

By Maung Tha (Archaeology)

WHILE in Myaing, I had the opportunities to pay a visit to Myitchay thanks to friend U Kyaw Shwe from Myitchay. Myanmar histories showed King Anawrahta passed away in on the way to Aungtha Myitchay for killing a wild buffalo. But, Myitchay and Aungtha are separately located on Pakokku-Seikpyu motor road, west of Pakokku.

Myitchay in history

Assessment of Bagan created in Konbaung era mentioned Myitchay was a village. Locals believed Myitchay of its establishment downstream of Ayeyawady River. Old Bagan city, Pakokku and Myitchay were located in tripartite area. Some assumed Myitchay has been there since Bagan era. Till today, the pagodas built by King Anawrahta, King Kyan-sittha, King Alaungsithu and Princess Thanbyin can be seen in Myitchay.

King Anawrahta built Kaunghmudaw Tooth Relic Pagoda on Tantkyi Hill near Myitchay, King Sawlu, Kaunghmudaw Shwesawlu Pagoda in Myitchay Town and King Kyansittha, Kaunghmudaw Thettawya Pagoda in East Kalakyaung Village in Myitchay region.

Princess Thanbyin, daughter of King Kya Swa, built Shwekugyi Pagoda and Nyi Ama Layphaw Pagoda in Theindaw Village, west of Myitchay Town.

King Swa Saw Ke who came onto the throne in Inwa in 1368 AD ordered his brother Pyay governor Saw Yan Naung to build seven monasteries made of magnolia, one of which was located in Myitchay. It was built in 1394 AD, and the land for religious purpose was set four square miles. Some assumed the monastery made of magnolia donated by King Swa Saw Ke was the currently damaged Tawshwe Monastery, two miles northeast of Myitchay.

The Ministry of Home Affairs upgraded Myitchay Village to a town formed with eight villages on 23 November 2018.

Mural paintings at PhaungdawU Pagoda

There were two ancient pagodas in Nyaunghla Village, 3.5 miles west of Myitchay. Some assumed these pagodas were built at the places where the raft of King Alaungsithu of Bagan anchored.

One of the two was named PhaungdawU Pagoda and another, Phaungchitaing Pagoda. These pagodas lost original works in past renovation. But, mural paintings in late Nyaungyan era can be seen on the walls.

A Buddha image was kept in Bhumiphasa Mudra (touching the ground with hand) facing the south in the tunnel of PhaungdawU Pagoda. The floral arabesques depicting Bo tree in dull colour can be seen on the back of the Buddha image. Pictures of two Aggasavaka monks Shin Sariputtara and Shin Moggalana were illustrated on both sides of the Buddha image in addition to the pictures of king of celestials and Sahampati Brahma.

Lotus flowers with many petals were illustrated on the ceiling and 28 Buddha images together with Bo trees around the lower part of the tunnel. Mural paintings on two episodes of eight triumphant ones of the Lord Buddha—triumphant ones over Nalagiri elephant and Alavaka ogre—can be seen there.

Although captions of 10 major Jatakas of the Lord Buddha illustrated on four walls of the tunnel cannot be read clearly, viewers can guess positions of pictures depicting Maha Janaka, Suvannasama, Vesantara, Nemi and Temiya Jatakas. Moreover, mural paintings showed the hells related to Temiya and Nemi Jatakas.

As some mural paintings on maritime trip of king and queen by raft together with dancers and musicians were illustrated on the wall of eastern arch from the tunnel, some assumed the painting depicted the tour of King Alaungsithu but some thought it was the maritime marching of King Videhariz from Mihtila State to Pancalariz State in Mahosadha Jataka.

The wall of the southern arch was filled with mural paintings on paying homage to two pagodas with flowers and cylindrical pennants, assuming that it might dedicate to PhaungdawU and Phaungchitaing pagodas.

Mural paintings at Phaungchitaing Pagoda

Full of mural paintings can be seen at Phaungchitaing Pagoda built on four-corner structure based on triple terrace. A Buddha image was kept in the cave, facing the east, and its back was filled with mural paintings on two Aggasavaka monks, king of celestials and Sahampati Brahma similar to those of PhaungdawU Pagoda.

Mural paintings on the ceiling were similar to those of PhaungdawU Pagoda. The interior of the tunnel was full of masterpiece mural paintings depicting Tavatimsa abode of celestials and monasteries and tier-roofed buildings where the Lord Buddha resided.

At the painting on King Kossala and queen served by their followers at the royal palace, King Kossala was looking at his image on the square shape mirror held by a hand while preparing his hair by another hand. Some paintings showed two square shape mirrors in his hands.

The walls of the royal palace, the stage of royal drum, guard soldiers, elephant warriors, peacock pictures and celestial pictures can be seen on the mural paintings.

Other mural paintings and prayer scripts

Mural paintings are under preservation at 13 pagodas in Myitchay and nearby areas—four pagodas in the precinct of Shwekugyi Pagoda in Theindaw Village, four in Nyaungghla Village, four pagodas in the pre-assignment, adding pagoda well-wishers San Toe, Mi Hnin Myo and Bwa Shin, children Mi Chit, Shin Nyein Pon, Shin Moe Kaung, Shin Zayan, Mi Shin Nge and Mi Shin Za.

Saya Tu Yin Pyinnya reviewed Zeya Yawdha title recipient Nyaungyan governor awarded the gold sword by the king might be pagoda well-wisher San Toe.

The scripts of well-wishers can be seen together with mural paintings in red and black colours. According to the scripts, these mural paintings might be in late Nyaungyan era.

Likewise, visitors may observe mural paintings at Thiri Mingala Pagoda near Myitchay-Kyunchaung road.

They can see prayer scripts in addition to mural paintings.

Similar prayer scripts can be seen under the mural paintings in north of the eastern arch of the pagoda. One of the prayer scripts mentioned the date on 7th waxing of Tawthalin, 1077 ME (24 August 1715) which showed the tenure of King Taninganwe in Nyaungyan era.

The tunnel of Anauksu Yaddana Manaung Pagoda in Sabay Village is full of mural paintings. The caption for drawing the paintings was mentioned as full moon day of first Waso, 1077 ME, on Sunday. The umbrella hoisting date was scripted as 4th waning of Kason, 1182 ME, (30 April 1820), showing the tenure of King Sagaing in Konbaung era.

Saya Tu Yin Pyinnya wrote that visitors might observe mural paintings at Sitkegyi, Hsutaungpyae and Shwepwintlin pagodas from seven Shwemyintin pagodas in Kyattoe Village and the paintings created in golden ink at Okkan Kyawzaw or Arntkyawzaw Pagoda. As people painted the pagodas with limes, these pagodas lost invaluable mural paintings except the collapsed tunnel of Sitkegyi and Shwepwintlin pagodas.

Mural paintings in ancient works

Mostly, mural paintings on plots of Buddhology as well as lifestyle of people were illustrated at pagodas of Myanmar in Bagan era. The paintings in Nyaungyan era depicted royal conditions.

Mural paintings created at Buddhist monuments along the Myanmar history were evidences of respective eras. But, local people and officials in weak cultural knowledge painted the edifices with limes, created new pictures, smoothed the walls with concrete and renovated the pagodas in addition to writing scripts by correction pens, losing the invaluable mural paintings.

As preservation of ancient mural paintings revealing parts of history means safeguarding the cultural heritages, all the people need to value ancient mural paintings across the nation including those of Myitchay.
