Vice President U Myint Swe calls for development of human resources in traditional medicine sector

VICE President U Myint Swe delivered an opening address at the 20th Myanmar Traditional Medicine Practitioners' Conference in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

Speaking at the event, Vice President U Myint Swe said, the Myanmar Traditional Medicine Practitioners' Conference has been held annually since 2000, and this year marks the 20th session of the conference.

The discussions at the 19th Myanmar Traditional Medicine Practitioners' Conference focused on future tasks, which were carried out and progress was made.

Regarding the collective efforts for promoting the manufacturing and efficacy of traditional medicine, traditional medicine manufacturers were given training on the Good Manufacturing Practice for ASEAN traditional medicine and health supplements, calculating potency and the life of traditional medicine, quality control and rules and procedures to follow.

To speed up the research on traditional medicine, as part of efforts for finding new traditional medicines and new healing methods, and to encourage medical ethics among practitioners, the Training Course on Research Methodology and a refresher course on Myanmar traditional Mesotherapy were conducted.

We learned that the Myanmar Traditional Medicine Council, Myanmar Traditional Medicine Advisory Board and Myanmar Traditional Medicine Practitioners Association have been working together to eradicate fake practitioners in the country.

The Myanmar Traditional Medicine Council Law was approved by the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw under the 2019 Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Law No. 1 on 25 January, 2019, and the Union Government formed the Myanmar Traditional Medicine Council Patrons Group through Notification No. 61/2019 on 8 October, 2019.

We have seen strong evidence that Myanmar traditional medicine has been practiced since the time of Tagaung, Sri Ksetra, and Bagan, and we published the book Milestones of Traditional Medicine in Myanmar in August, 2019 after collecting a record of the hidden history of Myanmar traditional medicine. This achievement can be found as a significant milestone in the history of traditional medicine in Myanmar.

Thanks to the efforts of our traditional medicine practitioners, experts related to traditional medicine, professionals, and the research conducted by monks throughout the long history of Myanmar, our traditional medicine has progressed ducers, concerned ministries, and our people must work with each other for the sustainable development of traditional medicine.

In accordance with the guidance of the State, the Union Government is making efforts on all fronts to save Myanmar's traditional healing practices, which are on the brink of extinction, by encouraging experienced and learned practitioners, and working to professionals from traditional medicine associations, healing practices and effective medicine region-wise.

The Union Government has convened annual conferences and seminars for traditional medicine practitioners from around the country so they can gather in one place and share their knowledge. This kind of fine tradition has continued until today.

Currently, there are sector-wise interconnections and relationships among countries. Myanmar has included the traditional medicine sector, to ensure international-level cooperation. To develop traditional medicine, including treatment methods and research, Myanmar is cooperating with traditional medicine organizations from the ASEAN, BIMSTEC, and Mekong regional countries.

It is also working with Japan, China, India, and Korea on matters related to traditional medicine in the areas of teaching, healing practices and research.

To improve the potency of traditional medicines when they are used for healing at traditional medicine hospitals and clinics, modern machinery has been installed at the Mandalay Traditional Medicine Manufacturing Factory, and the factory's output has been boosted.

Hence, to implement the Health and Sports Ministry's objective of enabling every citizen to attain full life expectancy and enjoy longevity of life, and to ensure that every citizen is free from disease, the Traditional Medicine Department has carried out several initiatives, including disseminating knowledge about health, disease prevention, and providing effective treatment for infection at the grassroots level in rural areas.

Meanwhile, the government promotes the standard of Myanmar traditional medicine, which comprises experience and knowledge about our ancestral medicine practitioners and those who wrote treatises on traditional medicine, with the assistance of the Union Government and ministries concerned, to be able to pass it down to future generations without deviating from the original medical philosophy, potency, and professional knowledge. I would like to urge our traditional medicine practitioners, on this special occasion of the 20th Myanmar Traditional Medicine Practitioners' Conference, to discuss and exchange views with goodwill, wisdom and diligence, aiming to discover and apply the hidden healing practices of the Netkhata naya and Vissadara naya out of the Four Great Nayas, namely Desana naya, Bethistsa naya, Netkhata veda naya and Vissadara naya, to connect with international medical professions, with the aim of developing the Myanmar traditional medicine profession and to promote sufficiency of raw materials for traditional medicine, and to work together to pass down our medicine profession to our future generations.

and evolved into a profession in which our people take pride.

By encouraging and preserving the traditional medicine profession, which is the heritage of the Myanmar people, as well as its potency, and has made the Myanmar people fit, healthy and intelligent throughout our history, the leaders of the country have aided in the emergence and development of a powerful traditional medicine community, in accordance with the current times. Our practitioners, prorediscover traditional treatises and therapies written on ancient palm leaf manuscripts, called 'Pay parabaik', which are highly effective traditional healing practices, valuable herbs, highly valuable medicinal plants, and natural herbal and mineral resources of medicinal value. In particular, the Union Government has been encouraging the integration of traditional medicine practitioners, and promoting and gathering information about diverse traditional medicinal economic policies, and to import effective traditional medicines.

Justice brings harmony and peace

MYANMAR citizens are coming out in mass rallies in support of State Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, who is defending the case filed by the Gambia at the Hague, the Netherlands.

Like the State Counsellor, the people of Myanmar know the genuine situation on the ground in Rakhine.

The Myanmar Government has said repeatedly that it will show “no tolerance” for human rights abuses committed in Rakhine state and will prosecute the military, if war crimes are found to have been committed there.

We will not shirk our responsibility to take care of the rights and security of all those whom we must protect.

The government of Myanmar is also fully committed to voluntary, safe, and dignified repatriation of displaced persons from Rakhine under the framework agreement signed with Bangladesh and the trilateral agreement signed with the UNHCR and UNDP.

Meanwhile, with constructive contribution from ASEAN, the ASEAN Secretariat and the AHA Centre, the government is making efforts for creating a conducive environment to which the displaced people can return in peace, voluntarily and safely.

Myanmar’s intention is to continue its work with the help of friends who approach the problems in Rakhine in a practical and balanced way.

Hence, the State Counsellor said at the Hague: “Can there be genocidal intent on the part of a state that actively investigates, prosecutes, and punishes soldiers and officers who are accused of wrongdoing?”

Myanmar’s greatest challenge is to address the roots of distrust and fear, and prejudice and hate that undermine the foundations of our Union. The nation will adhere steadfastly to its commitment to non-violence, human rights, national reconciliation, and rule of law, as it moves forward on building a Democratic Federal Union, which the people have aspired to for generations past.

With accountability, responsibility, and honesty, the State Counsellor has clarified the real situation of the complex issue and we hope that the international community would understand the extent of the complexities.

The challenges Myanmar is facing today took root decades ago, and lack of development and poverty are the root causes of the problems.

As Myanmar builds a Federal Democratic Union and works hard to achieve eternal peace, the international community is urged to cooperate with the government rather than putting pressure by forming groups.

We look to justice as a champion of the reconciliation and harmony that will assure the security and rights of all peoples.

Thai rice farmers shun 'big agribusiness' and fight climate change

By Sophie Deviller and Anusak Konglang (AFP)

BATTLING drought, debt and ailments blamed on pesticides, rice farmers in northern Thailand have turned to eco-friendly growing methods despite powerful agribusiness interests in a country that is one of the top exporters of the grain in the world.

Walking through a sea of green waist-high stalks, farmer Sunnan Somjak said his fields were “exhausted” by chemicals, his family regularly felt ill, and his profits were too low to make ends meet.

But that changed when he joined a pilot agricultural project for the SRI method, which aims to boost yields while shunning pesticides and using less water. “Chemicals can destroy everything,” the 58-year-old said, adding that the harvest in his village in Chiang Mai province has jumped 40 percent since employing the new method.

There have been health benefits too.

“It’s definitely better, we don’t get sick any more,” he added.

SRI was invented in the 1980s in Madagascar by a French Jesuit priest, and the technique has spread globally.

It works by planting crops wider apart -- thus drawing in more nutrients and light -- and limiting the amount of water that gets into fields, which helps micro-organisms flourish to act as natural fertilisers.

In a plus for debt-laden farmers, it also uses fewer seeds, and they are encouraged to use plants and ginger roots that naturally deter insects rather than chemical alternatives -- meaning fewer expenses.

Traditional Thai rice farmers earn around 3,000 baht a month ($100) but Sunnan was able to increase his income by 20 percent after adopting the SRI method.

“I’ve finally got rid of my debts,” he told AFP.

- Vicious cycle -

Rice is a staple in the diet of around three billion people globally.

But agricultural workers are locked in a vicious cycle: beset by drought and floods brought on by climate change, the farmers contribute to the disruption as their fields release methane and nitrous oxide, two greenhouse gases.

With SRI, paddy fields are not permanently flooded, which reduces methane emissions by 60 percent, according to Tristan Lecomte, founder of Pur Projet, a French company supporting the technique.

The project also helped Sun-nan plant trees around his crops to reinforce the water table.

According to Lecomte, rice yields can jump from 20 percent to more than 100 compared to the traditional method.

Southeast Asia, where agriculture supports millions, is slowly embracing SRI.

The US-based Cornell University created a centre specialising in the technique in 2010 and more than two million farmers in the region -- especially from Thailand, Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos -- have been trained.

In Bac Giang province in northern Vietnam, net profits for farmers were as much as 226 percent higher after adopting the SRI method than when using traditional ones, according to Abha Mishra, who led a large project on behalf of the Asian Institute of Technology.

The Philippines, which grows rice but is also one of the world’s leading importers, is also interested in this method and the Ministry of Agriculture has started training farmers.

- Harder but healthier -

The method is also used in parts of India, China, and Africa.

But, while there is support from NGOs, as well as some scientists and authorities, it still has a long way to go before widespread adoption.

It faces resistance domestically from agribusiness as there is no new hybrid seed or fertilizer to sell.

Industry lobbies are very active in Southeast Asia, particularly in Thailand, one of the largest users of pesticides in the world. And they recently won a big battle over chemical use in agriculture.

Thai authorities, who had committed to ban controversial glyphosate, backtracked at the end of November, deciding that “limited” use would eventually be allowed. The use of two other herbicides has also been extended.

Lecomte says the other challenge potentially impacting the rate of adoption is the SRI method is quite complex to learn and it is labour intensive.

“You have to plant one by one and closely control the amount water,” he explained, adding that the extra manual effort required means some farmers don’t want to try the method, and others give up early on.

Sunnan admits that his workload is heavier but the financial and health benefits make it worth it in the end.

He added: “It is safe for our body, and the environment.”

Plan to relocate Kyimyindine fish market: Yangon Mayor

By Nyein Nyein

THE Yangon authorities are planning to relocate the Kyimyindine fish market to another place, said Mayor U Maung Maung Soe.

He made the remarks at a press conference on the Yangon City Development Committee's performance, held on 9 December at the Yangon City Hall.

Local residents and people from neighboring wards were irked by offensive odor emanating from the market and the passage of container trucks at night, said the Mayor.

"We plan to move the Kyimyindine fish market. It is very congested here. Furthermore, it is next to houses. Some people do not want it to be relocated, while some want it to be moved to another place. As a mayor, I would like to suggest that it be moved," he said.

To relocate the market, two places have been identified — the mouth of Yangon River or Shwepadauk area, he added.

The designated sites should have cold storage and must accommodate boats, according to the Yangon City Development Committee.

On 13 August, the Yangon Region Chief Minister had met with representatives from CITIC Myanmar Company and discussed matters related to the establishment of a fish auction market.

A feasibility study is being undertaken to set up a fish auction market in Dala Township. A systematic fish market will be developed in Yangon, said U Phyo Min Thein, the Yangon Region Chief Minister during a press conference at the Yangon Region Investment Committee office.

At present, a basket of sesame is fetching K48,500-78,000, depending on the variety. The sesame depots are crowded with growers.

Sesame cultivation costs K70,000 per acre, including ploughing machine charges, seeds, and other general costs.

In Myinmu Township, sesame is cultivated in September and harvested in November. An acre of white sesame produces 10 baskets, while an acre of black sesame yields eight baskets.—Aung Soe Phay (Myinmu-IPRD) (Translated by Ei Myat Mon)

Imports up $110.27 mln as of 29 Nov: MOC reports

THE value of Myanmar's imports between 1 October and 29 November in the current financial year stood at US$3.06 billion, an increase of $110.27 million from $2.95 billion registered in the year-ago period, according to data released by the Ministry of Commerce.

Over the two-month period, capital goods such as auto parts, vehicles, machines, steel, and airplane parts with an estimated import value of $1.02 billion were brought into the country. The figure was up $86.7 million compared to the same period in the 2018-2019 FY.

Meanwhile, Myanmar imported consumer products worth $559.9 million, including pharmaceuticals, cosmetics, and palm oil. Both private and public sector imports of consumer products showed an increase of $9.66 million compared with the same period of the previous FY.

Intermediate goods make up a large share of Myanmar's imports, with petroleum products and plastic raw materials being the main import items. In the current fiscal, imports of raw materials declined by $13.3 million from $1.08 billion registered in the year-ago period.

As of 29 November in the 2019-2020FY, raw materials worth $397.95 million were imported for the Cut-Make-Pack (CMP) garment sector.—GNLM (Translated by Ei Myat Mon)

Exports climb by $810.87 mln in current fiscal MYANMAR'S exports between 1 October and 29 November in the current financial year jumped to US$3.106 billion from $2.29 billion registered in the corresponding period of the 2018-2019 financial year, according to data provided by the Ministry of Commerce.

The figure showed an increase of $810.87 million compared with the year-ago period. Of the seven export groups, shipments of agriculture, fisheries, finished industrial goods and minerals rose, while exports of livestock, forest products, and other goods declined.

Export values were registered at $554.13 million for agro products, $41.5 million for livestock, $175.38 million for fishery products, $629.94 million for minerals, $27.57 million for forest products, $1.62 billion for manufactured goods, and $54.67 million for other goods.

The country's export sector relies more on the agriculture and manufacturing sectors. While export earnings from the CMP (cut, make, and pack) garment businesses are rising, the country's reliance on natural resources, such as natural gas and jade, is lessening.

The Ministry of Commerce is focusing on export promotion, which has resulted in a trade surplus in the current financial year. Since 2011, the Ministry of Commerce has adhered to its reforms policy. A series of moves to liberalize the economy have been introduced to improve the trade environment in the country.—Ko Khant

New 66/33KV 30MVA power substation in commission to mark 50% electrification in Myanmar

A new power substation was opened at Shwe Pan Gon village, Wetlet Township, Shwebo District, Sagaing Region on 10 December to mark the 50-per cent electrification milestone in the country. The 66/33KV 30MVA Shwe Pan Gon power station was opened by Sagaing Region Chief Minister Dr Myint Naing and officials. After the opening ceremony, the officials toured the station.

“Our village mainly focuses on the agricultural sector, like the neighbouring village. Earlier, we could not use agricultural machines and rice mills because we did not have full-time access to electricity. Now, we can use those things because a power station has been constructed,” said U Han Tun, a local villager from Shwe Pan Gon village.

Restaurants to be opened at Yangon parks: Mayor

By Nyein Nyein
A PLAN has been drawn up to open restaurants in Yangon parks, which are under the supervision of the Yangon City Development Committee (YCDC), said U Maung Maung Soe, Yangon Mayor.

“The YCDC has been upgrading urban parks and roundabouts for two years. So, the parks and roundabouts are looking more beautiful than ever,” he added.

“The parks are not as they were previously. They have become quieter and more beautiful public places now. Now, we also plan to open restaurants in parks that will sell clean food at fair prices. Earlier, people had nothing to eat and drink inside the parks. So, they had to eat at street stalls. Therefore, we plan to open restaurants in parks so people can eat clean and quality food,” said U Maung Maung Soe.

In order to open restaurants in parks, the YCDC has already drawn up a project and will submit a proposal to the Yangon Region government.

According to the YCDC, the restaurants will not be opened in public recreation areas, and the food courts will be kept separate.

Upon receiving approval from the Yangon Region Hluttaw, the YCDC will invite expressions of interest (EOI) to implement the project through a tender system. Currently, there are 61 public recreation parks in YCDC areas, including 15 parks in eastern district, 19 parks in western district, 14 parks in southern district, and 13 parks in northern district. Caviar ‘queen’: Chinese roe reigns around the world

QIANDAOHU — The caviar on the menu of Michelin-starred restaurants may come from an unexpected place: China.

The country has endured embarrassing food scandals in recent years, but its sturgeon eggs have gained the respect of caviar connoisseurs around the world.

It has also become pricier for US buyers as Chinese caviar is among the slew of products hit with 25 per cent tariffs in the US-China trade war.

The bulk of China’s production comes from a picturesque lake ringed by mountains in eastern Zhejiang province where industry leader Kaluga Queen breeds the giant fish.

The brand was created in 2005 by experts who worked for the ministry of agriculture and it now produces more than a third of the world’s caviar, making China the global leader.—AFP ■

Germany slams planned US sanctions on Russian pipeline

BERLIN—Germany on Thursday criticised a vote by US lawmakers on a bill that would sanction contractors working on a Russian pipeline to Germany, saying Washington should mind its own business.

“European energy policy is decided in Europe, not in the US,” Foreign Minister Heiko Maas said on Twitter.

“We reject external interference and sanctions with extra-territorial effect as a matter of principle,” he said. The 9.5 billion euro ($10.6 billion) Nord Stream 2 pipeline will run under the Baltic Sea and is set to double shipments of Russian natural gas to Germany.

The German-Russian Chamber of Commerce (AHK) said the pipeline was important for the energy security of Europe as a whole and called for retaliatory sanctions against the United States if the bill passes. “Europe should respond to sanctions that damage Europe with counter-sanctions,” Matthias Schepp, head of the AHK, said in a statement. Schepp said the sanctions would end up affecting European companies more than Russia.—AFP ■

Russia’s only aircraft carrier on fire in port: news agencies

MOSCOW—A fire broke out Thursday on Russia’s only aircraft carrier as it underwent repairs in an Arctic shipyard, Russian news agencies said, with at least one worker reported missing.

The Admiral Kuznetsov has been undergoing repairs for more than two years in Murmansk and suffered previous damage in October 2018 when a crane crashed onto its deck.

State news agency RIA Novosti quoted a source in the Zvezdochka shipyard as saying the fire broke out during welding operations.

More than 400 people were on board when the fire erupted, state news agency TASS quoted a Zvezdochka spokesman as saying.

News agency Interfax reported that the fire had spread over an area of about 600 square metres (6,500 square feet).

The Admiral Kuznetsov – launched in 1985 and the flagship of the Russian navy – has been undergoing its first major repairs since 1997.

The repairs were expected to be completed by the end of 2020, with the warship rejoining the navy in 2021.

The vessel was deployed to the Mediterranean in 2016 and early 2017 to strike targets in Syria and help Moscow ally President Bashar al-Assad recapture rebel-held areas in the war-torn country.

The ship headed a naval group off the Syrian coast, with fighters from the carrier hitting more than 1,200 targets during its mission.

It also stopped off the coast of Libya in January 2017 and took on board military strongman Khalifa Haftar, who Russia has reportedly backed in the country’s long-running civil conflict.—AFP ■

A program named 'Judo in Schools' will be launched in basic education schools in Yangon in the near future, according to the Myanmar Judo Federation (MJF). Well-trained Judo trainers will conduct the program for schoolchildren in the 5 to 12 age group. For upgrading the skills of Myanmar Judo athletes and coaches, a ceremony for Coaching and Referee Training and the 1st Kodokan Dan Examination were held yesterday at the training center of the Myanmar Judo Federation in Yangon.

During the ceremony, MJF president U Tun Tun said that Myanmar Judo teams missed gold medals but grabbed silver and bronze medals at the recent SEA Games in the Philippines. He said the reason why Myanmar Judo athletes missed the gold medal was due to the participation of older players. Myanmar needs more younger players to participate in the SEA Games as youths are faster in Judo, he said.
