the commemorative plaque and archway for 50% nationwide electrification and sprinkled scented water on them. The President also observed the commemorative exhibition and signed the guestbook. The Ministry of Electricity and Energy was reformed when the new government assumed office and nationwide electrification was only at 34%. Increasing electric generation through hydropower, natural gases and solar power, expanding 230KV transmission lines and installing new 500KV lines contributed to the rise of national electricity access.

Additionally, a total of 19,600 miles of transmission lines counting in at 230KV, 132KV, 66KV, 33KV, 11KV and 400V and sub-power stations totaling at 12,636A were constructed and installed over a 3 ½ year plan from 2016. Since April 2016, a total of Ks 2,327 billion has been invested in the electric sector with the result that an additional 900MW are being generated. Estimates say another 1,000MW will be generated in the middle of 2020.

The increase in electrification has now linked 368 towns and 16,941 villages to the national grid and authorities are continuing work to increase the 50% mark.

They aim to achieve 55% in 2021-2022, 75% in 2025-2026, and complete nationwide electrification by 2030. —MNA

Opening speech of President U Win Myint at the ceremony commemorating the occasion of successful 50% countrywise power supply service (13th December 2019)

FIRST of all, I would like to extend my warm greetings to the state leaders, Union Ministers, deputy ministers, departmental heads, authorities of the companies, guests, local people, ladies and gentlemen, auspiciousness to you all.

Today is a day of great significance, marking the occasion of successful 50% power supply service to all over our country. It goes without saying that electricity and road transportation are included among the necessities for the development of our country. Naturally, we have been striving for the boosting up of the power supply service since we have been handed over the state duty.

We all know that electricity and energy are the main sectors for enabling our country to stand as a modern, developed state, and also for the development of the social life of our people. So we have laid down policies, strategies and plans for the development of the sectors of electricity and energy, sustainable supply of the demands in these sectors, which have been increasing from year to year, for the development of the state economy, and have been implementing both short-term and long-term plans.

In order to implement the short-term and long-term plans for the development of our country, aiming at the goals of developing the all-inclusive, sustainable economy, as outlined in the Global Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), providing full labour employment, offering productive, decent jobs, building strong infrastructure, establishing all-inclusive, sustainable industrialization, and giving support to innovations, balancing these goals with others, we have already drawn the Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan (MSDP) 2018-2030. This MSDP had laid down the strategic plan, which covers sustainable development and the construction of the prioritized infrastructures supporting various forms of economic enterprises.

President U Win Myint addresses the ceremony commemorating the achievement of 50% nationwide electrification in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday. PHOTO: MNA

In implementing the task programmes in line with the MSDP, we have cooperated and collaborated with the local private sectors and the overseas organizations harmoniously in such various sectors as drawing the national-level plans, amending the laws and bylaws, seeking budget aids, construct-financial fund of the expenditures of the state, the sector of electricity has been prioritized for the aim of boosting up the power supply service. Our efforts have turned out to prove that, from April, 2016 to December 2019, three hydro-power generator stations, six heat energy generator stations,

Volts, stretching over 19,600 miles, and the substations of power supply transmitting 12,636 MVKs have been built, since 2016, in extended numbers, within the period of three and a half years.

Therefore, while, in March, 2016, electricity was transmitted only to 34% of the whole population all over the country, December 2019 saw an increase of up to 50% all over the country. Since successful measures were taken for the sufficient utilization of the power supply and transmission of more power supply for our people, we believe we have brought about many good results for upgrading the social affairs, education, health and job opportunities of the public.

Besides, we have been making efforts for the power supply service in regions where electricity has not yet been accessible. Priority has been given to such regions formerly lacking the opportunity of having electricity: within these three years, power supply service from the national grid venture was provided in Myawaddy in Kayin State, and Maungtau in Rakhine State, while measures have Moreover, since 2019-2020 financial year, the Mawlamyaing-Ye-Dawei transmission line (230 KVs) is being constructed for the power supply in Dawei, Tanintharyi Region, and the project is to be completed in 2021-2022 financial year. We shall continue our efforts for implementing the projects for the 100 percent use of electricity all over the country by 2030.

ing the infrastructures for power supply, which is necessary all over the country.

In the present, the power supply in Myanmar has been increasingly utilized up to 15% to 19% annually. Naturally, the state has been making efforts for meeting the goal of providing sufficient power supply. In allocating the budget for the

and one solar energy generator station, 10 power stations in total, have been put to service, boosting up 904 Megawatts.

While the state government has built power stations in extended numbers for boosting up the power supply service, the transmission lines transmitting 230 KVs, 132 KVs, 66 KVs, 33 KVs, 11 KVs and 400 been taken for the power supply from the national grid venture in Kyaing Tong in the Shan State (East). Moreover, since 2019-2020 financial year, the Mawlamyaing-Ye-Dawei transmission line (230 KVs) is being constructed for the power supply in Dawei, Tanintharyi Region, and the project is to be completed in 2021-2022 financial year. We shall continue our efforts for implementing the projects for the 100 percent use of electricity all over the country by 2030. Enhancing the sector of electricity can make contributions towards the development of such sectors as education, health and economy. I would urge you all to strive for the development of the sector of electricity for the sake of our present and future generations to enjoy the fruits of the harmonious development in all regions and states.

Formerly, only auto-telephones were installed in Yangon Electricity Supply Corporation and Mandalay Electricity Supply Corporation, but today "1717" Hot Line and "1616" Hot Line have been offering their 24-hour services to serve to the satisfaction of the public. On this occasion of successfully launching the 50% power supply service all over the country, I would like to express my heartfelt thanks to all the organizations, authorities and staff of the Ministry of Electricity and Energy, and our citizens, who have made contributions to the success for the state projects.

In conclusion, I would like to urge the authorities of the Ministry of Electricity and Energy to step up your efforts for the prosperity and sustainable development of the state by developing the sector of electricity more and more, transmitting more high power supply, giving impetus to small-scale and medium-size electrical power supply and transmission enterprises in the Regions and States, and enabling the people to utilize the electricity safely.

Thank you.

Remarks by H.E. Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, State Counsellor and Union Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar as Agent Before the International Court of Justice The Hague, 12 December 2019

MR. President and Members of the Court, It is not disputed that Myanmar – like the United Kingdom or the United States – has a military justice system. The Constitution of Myanmar cannot and should not be ignored if we are serious about establishing constitutional democracy and rule-of-law in Myanmar. International criminal tribunals take four to eight years to undertake investigations of core international crimes, sometimes longer. Just over two years have passed since the serious internal armed conflict against the ARSA, and the second court-martial is now underway. The Gambia has not challenged the quality of the military justice in the Inn Din case, only the pardon, which many of us regret. The ongoing Gutar Pyin court-martial in Buthidaung Township should be allowed to run its course. I am confident that there will be further to nurture in Rakhine, what we are endeavouring to foster throughout Myanmar, our country of great diversity, great potential, and great challenges.

Mr. President, Members of the Court, I pray the decision you make, with the wisdom and vision of justice, will help us to create unity out of our diversity, to develop the potential of our people, and to meet the challenges of a nation in quest of sustainable peace and development. Steps that generate suspicion, sow doubts, or create resentment between communities who have just begun to build a fragile foundation of trust could undermine reconciliation. Ending the ongoing internal armed conflict between the Arakan Army and Myanmar's Defence Services is of the utmost importance for our country. But it is equally important to avoid any reignition of the 2016-2017 internal armed conflict in Northern Rakhine.

Mr. President, Members of the Court, I now conclude by formally presenting to you the final submissions of Myanmar. These are as follows:

"In accordance with Article 60, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court, for the reasons given during the hearing from 10 to 12 December 2019 and any other reasons the Court might deem appropriate, Myanmar requests the Court:

- to remove the case from its List;
- in the alternative, to reject the request for the indication of provisional measures submitted by The Gambia."

Mr. President and Members of the Court, that concludes Myanmar's observations. I thank you for your kind attention, and I also thank the staff of the Registry for all assistance offered to our delegation.

for sustainable, voluntary return of peoples displaced by violence. In the words of Mr. Meyer himself, I quote: "nine months after its inception, and despite increased fighting in the area between the AA and the military, the project has gained sufficient traction in Maungdaw for it to be regarded as sustainable".

Mr. President, recalling the words about football in paragraph 18 of the opening statement of the Agent of The Gambia, allow me to present these pictures from a football match. Organised by the ITI, a football tournament recently took place at the Myoma athletic field in Maungdaw Town. Players and spectators are a mix from different communities in Maungdaw Township, the area at the centre of the 2016-2017 internal armed conflict in Rakhine. Where a country has a military justice system, neutralising this system by externalising justice in effect surgically removes a critical limb from the body - the limb that helps armed forces to self-correct, to improve, to better perform their functions within the constitutional order.

Mr. President, Members of the Court, in my opening statement yesterday, I mentioned that international justice is a practice that affirms our common values, and that we look to justice as a champion of reconciliation and harmony that will assure the security and rights of all peoples. Allow me, in this context, to mention one example of what we are doing on the ground in Northern Rakhine to further reconciliation between communities.

Central Committee holds coord meeting as 73rd Union Day draws close

THE Central Committee for Convening the 73rd Union Day in 2020 held a coordination meeting at the meeting hall of the Office of the President in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday, where Central Committee Chairman Vice President U Myint Swe delivered a speech.

In his speech, the Vice President said the day's meeting was held for the successful organizing and holding of the 2020 73rd Anniversary of Union Day. He said the Central Committee was formed with 14 members by the Office of the President, and with himself as Chairman, on 21 October 2019 to successfully observe the day in accordance with five national objectives with full political essence.

He said that a 19-member management committee led by the Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman and 14 sub-committees to implement the directives of the central committee were also formed.

The Vice President said the five national objectives of the 73rd Union Day are to protect and defend sovereignty for non-disintegration of the Union and unity of ethnic people through collective strength of all the ethnic people, continuing the peace process with Union spirit until success is achieved, strive towards rule of law and for the safety and security of the people through the unity of all citizens, preventing dangers of illegal drugs as a national duty and elevating the living standards of the people, striving towards establishment of a Constitution that is in accord with a Federal Democratic Union.

The Vice President highlighted the historical significance of Union Day, by saying independence was achieved after Bogyoke Aung San and ethnic national leaders held the Panglong Conference of 12 February 1947 and signed the Panglong Agreement in unity. The Union Day that depicts the unity of ethnic national brothers and sisters has been held every year and this is the 73rd year, he said.

The Vice President said the Panglong Conference was the catalyst for ethnic solidarity and independence and drawing upon this crucial historic lesson, the Union Peace Conference – 21st Century Panglong was initiated to achieve the national reconciliation and peace that Myanmar desperately needs. He said the nation would only truly develop when there is genuine peace.

The Vice President said one of the main reasons for celebrating Union Day is to remind successive generations that independence was achieved because of the unity of all ethnic people. He said Myanmar is full of diverse ethnicities each with their own unique language and culture and of different religions and this coexistence is what makes the country a Union. He said the customs and culture of ethnic people must be preserved perpetually and this is why they will be displayed in Union Day celebrations.

The Vice President said the 73rd Union Day event will be held in two parts with the first half including the flag hoisting ceremony and reading messages in the morning and the second half involving a dinner reception and entertainment in the evening.

The Vice President said 15 decisions were made at the meeting on 1 April, 2019 for evaluating the preparations of the 72nd Union Day and he urged all relevant committees and sub-committees to work closely to implement them.

For the people to know the essence of the national aims set by the Central Committee, arrangements are to be made for state-owned media like radio, television, newspaper and periodicals to broadcast and publish entertainment and informative programmes, said the Vice President.

He said subcommittees need to have Plan A as well as Plan B for all matters related to holding of the 73rd Union Day. In order to successfully hold the Union Day ceremony with full political essence all are urged to work together to make this year the best based on past years experiences.

Next, Dr Myo Aung explained the preparations made for the upcoming Union Day ceremony and other subcommittee members explained the progress of their respective assigned sectors. The Vice President responded to all discussions and suggestions and concluded the meeting with a closing speech.

The meeting was attended by Union Ministers U Thant Sin Maung, Dr Myint Htwe, U Soe Win and U Ohn Maung, Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman Dr Myo Aung, Deputy Ministers Maj-Gen Aung Thu, U Kyi Min, U Kyaw Myo and U Win Maw Tun, permanent secretaries, directors-general, and Tatmadaw and department officials.—MNA

Reservoir promises sufficient drinking water in Gwa Tsp

RAKHINE Chief Minister U Nyi Pu inspected the construction progress of Kwinlyarshay reservoir at the namesake village in Gwa Township yesterday.

The Chief Minister received an explanation of the construction process by officials in charge of the project and said they will fulfill the recommendations of the local residents.

The reservoir measures 235 by 20 feet wide and stands at 50 feet high. Total construction cost is estimated at K550 million and the construction is led by the Irrigation and Water Utilization Management Department of Thandwe.

The area receives 200 inches of rainfall every year and thus the reservoir can expect to store an average of 575 gallons per year, providing sufficient drinking water to all surrounding settlements.

Avoid hate narratives to prevent mistrust among diverse communities

STATE Counsellor Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, in her closing statement at the International Court of Justice, said leaders of states and relevant inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations should be aware of their responsibility to express and affirm fundamental values.

“Feeding the flames of an extreme polarization in the context of Rakhine, for example, can harm the values of peace and harmony in Myanmar. Aggravating the wounds of conflict can undermine unity in Rakhine. Hate narratives are not simply confined to hate speech – language that contributes to extreme polarization also amounts to hate narrative,” said Daw Aung San Suu Kyi on 12 December at the ICJ, at the Hague.

Hate narratives from outside the country have driven the two communities in Rakhine State further apart. Now is the time for international communities and the media to focus on how to resolve the issue with a forward-looking approach.

Hate narratives which are not based on hard evidence will only serve to inflame tensions further and potentially hinder the Government’s efforts to create much-needed social cohesion in Rakhine State.

On the Internet, truth is not optimized. On the Web, it’s not enough to battle falsehood with truth; the truth doesn’t always win.

The government is also looking for long-term solutions to the Rakhine problem. The mistrust between the two communities has existed for a long time. The incidents in 2012 deteriorated the situation, and the terrorist attacks by the ARSA terrorist group in 2016 and 2017 further worsened the problem.

People do not dare to commute in Rakhine State due to lack of security, not because of lack of freedom of movement. Hate narratives do not pull the trigger, but does anyone seriously doubt that they create a climate where such acts are more likely?

Hate narratives are less violent, but damaging in their impact in another way: They diminish and undermine the globally common value of tolerance. They enable discrimination. Steps that generate suspicion, sow doubts, or create resentment among communities that have just begun to build a fragile foundation of trust could undermine reconciliation.

Everyone concerned must be positive and committed to the process of reestablishing trust and confidence because fear and hate have taken root in Rakhine, a region where there is very little prosperity and very little security. We hope that the decision of the ICJ judges, with the wisdom and vision of justice, will help Myanmar to create unity out of our diversity, develop the potential of our people, and meet the challenges of a nation in quest of sustainable peace and development.

Banking on action: How ADB achieved 2020 climate finance milestone one year ahead of time

By Takehiko Nakao

AS they extend their power grids, build more roads and bigger cities, and cultivate forestland, developing countries in Asia and the Pacific are increasingly contributing to the global climate change problem. Two of the top three emitters of greenhouse gases are developing countries in Asia—the People’s Republic of China and India. At the same time, five Asian developing countries are among the top 10 most climate-vulnerable countries in the world. Across the region, livelihoods and economic growth are increasingly exposed to climate change impacts and disaster risk. Clearly, Asia and the Pacific must play a strong role in efforts to address climate change.

As the region’s development bank, the Asian Development Bank (ADB) is committed to remaining the partner of choice for climate action by our developing member countries. In 2015, as world leaders gathered in New York to launch the Sustainable Development Goals, ADB made a bold announcement—a commitment to double our climate investment to $6 billion annually by the end of 2020.

Coinciding with the call for action at COP25, the United Nations’ Conference on Climate Change, ADB has proudly reached this achievement one year ahead of time. ADB’s climate-related financing for 2019 comprises $1.4 billion for financing adaptation and $4.8 billion for mitigating climate change.

The feat is the result of a singular focus to integrate climate actions into our entire operations. ADB has introduced climate risk screening of our project portfolio, undertaken diagnostics on the critical infrastructure at risk in the region, and introduced new financing instruments such as contingent disaster risk financing for financial resilience. ADB is strengthening its investments in renewable energy and energy efficiency, sustainable transport and urban development, and climate smart agriculture. This has been accompanied by actions to enhance the transparency of our climate operations by publicly disclosing project-level information of our climate portfolio and enhancing capacity and technical assistance for delivery. The spirit of One ADB has underpinned this achievement, with the collaboration of our sovereign and non-sovereign operations and knowledge departments steering us toward this target. One example of the many that illustrates this is the Pacific Renewable Energy Program, which is providing an innovative blend of loans, guarantees, and letters of credit to encourage private sector investments in renewable energy. ADB’s treasury department also contributed to the endeavor by issuing green bonds amounting to $5 billion as an added financing mechanism.

In addition to scaling up its own climate financing, ADB has been working on new and innovative co-financing opportunities with public and private partners. For example, ADB has mobilized concessional financing from the Green Climate Fund (GCF) for nine projects worth a total of $473 million in grants and concessional financing.

Building on the momentum of our climate finance milestone, ADB is pursuing

Building on the momentum of our climate finance milestone, ADB is pursuing new and ambitious targets on climate change for the coming decade in our Strategy 2030—cumulative climate financing of $80 billion from 2019-2030 and a commitment to make 75% of our projects climate-relevant by 2030.

new and ambitious targets on climate change for the coming decade in our Strategy 2030—cumulative climate financing of $80 billion from 2019-2030 and a commitment to make 75% of our projects climate-relevant by 2030. Furthermore, by steadily increasing shadow carbon price, which factors climate costs into our project economic analysis, ADB is reflecting the urgency of shifting to low carbon alternatives.

However, given the narrowing window for avoiding catastrophic climate change, mobilizing finance at the necessary speed and scale remains a huge challenge. The Nationally Determined Contributions of many countries have outlined the financing needed to achieve their climate ambitions under the Paris Agreement. According to one estimate, it is $4.4 trillion or $349 billion annually. While there are no robust and comprehensive estimates available for the Asia and Pacific region, an assessment by ADB on Asia’s infrastructure needs found that $200 billion will be needed annually to address climate actions in energy, water, and transport.

Though national governments and development financing institutions should devote more of their financial resources, the bulk of climate financing will necessarily have to come from private investors. This highlights the need to deploy climate financing in a way that enables and mobilizes private sector finance. But the good news is there is a robust, and growing, body of evidence that the benefits of climate action already far outweigh the costs—representing a significant opportunity for the private sector.

For example, the New Climate Economy Initiative, to which I have contributed as a Commissioner, has found that investment in low-carbon growth is associated with a cumulative economic gain of $26 trillion until 2030. Meanwhile, a recent report by the Global Commission on Adaptation found that investing $1.8 trillion globally from 2020 to 2030 in five key areas—early warning systems, climate-resilient infrastructure, improved dryland agriculture, mangrove protection, and more resilient water resources—could yield $7.1 trillion in net benefits.

The provision of finance is just one part of the climate change puzzle—high technology, policy support, and capacity development to build better institutions are also critical. But by further scaling up collective actions on addressing climate change by national governments, development partners, and the private sector, we can greatly respond to the voices of younger generations and vulnerable populations across the world for bolder action that ensures our common future on a healthy planet.

No SME loans available due to incomplete information about businesses: Chief Minister

By Nyein Nyein

NO Small and Medium Enterprise (SME) loans are being offered at present because of incomplete information concerning the businesses, said U Phyo Min Thein, Chief Minister of Yangon Region. Although the SME loans are ready, we cannot provide them, he said.

Therefore, SMEs need to prepare systematically to take out loans, he added.

"We are willing to provide SME loans. When we scrutinized proposals, we found only a few complete presentations. We have the money to provide them loans. But, the information furnished by borrowers is not complete. So, we cannot provide loans to them," said U Phyo Min Thein.

"To obtain SME loans, borrowers need to have established their businesses systematically in the first place. The businesses should not be family-owned. Moreover, those who take loans from international organizations should use the funds only for making capital investments. They should not use them as working capital," he added.

"Currently, quality products are being imported and packaging designs have become modernized in SME businesses. But, they need to conduct their businesses properly and systematically, in terms of promotion, to be able to export to international markets," said U Phyo Min Thein.

"SME business development in Yangon Region is important. So, we have tried to get loans for the SME sector. There are two types of loans that can be availed: loans with mortgage and loans without mortgage. Loans of K20 million to K50 million can be availed without mortgage, while loans of K200 million to K300 million can be availed on collateral, depending on the type of mortgage," said U Myint Thaung, the regional Minister for Planning and Finance. There are about 40,000 SMEs in Yangon Region.

Trade at Hteekhee down $42.7 mln in Oct-Nov

TRADE between Thailand and Myanmar at the Hteekhee border gate between 1 October and 29 November in the 2019-2020 financial year plunged to US$291.62 million from $334.3 million in the year-ago period, according to data from the Ministry of Commerce.

During the October-November period, exports through the Hteekhee gate stood at $290.87 million, while imports totaled less than $1 million.

Exports of natural gas from Taninthayi Region had contributed to the enormous increase in exports through the Hteekhee gate in the previous FY, said an official from the ministry.

Normally, the Myawady gate sees the largest trade among the Myanmar-Thailand checkpoints. The rise in exports through the Hteekhee gate last year boosted the value of the Myanmar-Thailand border trade to more than double the amount registered in the previous years.

Of the seven border trade points between Myanmar and Thailand, the Hteekhee and Myeik gates have witnessed a decrease in trade in the current financial year, while the remaining gates have reported an increase in trade.

Myanmar primarily exports natural gas, fishery products, coal, tin concentrate (SN 71.58 per cent), coconut (fresh and dry), beans, and bamboo shoots to Thailand. It imports capital goods such as machinery, raw industrial goods such as cement and fertilizers, and consumer goods such as cosmetics and food products from the neighboring country. — Ko Htet

YCDC holds workshop on disaster preparedness project

YANGON, Mandalay, and Nay Pyi Taw should enforce extensive earthquake preparedness measures, including drills, as the three populated cities are at risk for quakes, said a YCDC official recently.

"The Yangon Region Government has drafted the tasks to be carried out by the government departments concerned under its earthquake preparedness and response project," said vice chairman of the Yangon City Development Committee, Vice Mayor U Soe Lwin, in his opening address at a workshop on the disaster preparedness research project, held at the Yangon City Development Committee Office.

He said the project would benefit not just the people of Yangon, but also the four mega cities of Mandalay, Nay Pyi Taw, Taunggyi, and Mawlamyine.

Myanmar's cities, including Yangon, have experienced about 30 earthquakes in two months, said U Soe Lwin.

Following his speech, Prof Dr Frauke Krass from Cologne University, Germany, and Dr Win Maung from the Myanmar

Environment Institute also extended greetings.

Afterwards, experts discussed matters related with the disaster management project.

Post a disaster, the emergency requirement for least developing countries is six times higher than developed nations, he added.

Algeria awaits outcome of election marred by unrest

ALGIERS — Algerians awaited the outcome Friday of a widely unpopular presidential election marred by attacks on polling stations and the lowest turnout in the country’s history.

The election had been championed by the army as a way of restoring stability almost 10 months into a protest movement that in April ousted president Abdelaziz Bouteflika, 82, after two decades in office.

But on polling day Thursday, protesters defied a heavy police presence to hold a mass rally in the heart of the capital Algiers and smaller demonstrations in provincial cities.

The electoral authority said its chairman Mohamed Charfi would release the results at 11 am (1000 GMT), an announcement that could prompt tens of thousands of election opponents to pour out onto the streets in new protests.

All five of the candidates in Thursday’s vote were widely rejected by protesters as “children of the regime”.

Among them are two of the ousted leader’s former prime ministers — Abdelmajid Tebboune, 74, and Ali Benflis, 75 — and a former minister, Azzedine Mihoubi.—AFP ■

Path to softer Brexit? UK PM’s big win gives him leeway

LONDON — The scale of the Conservative victory in Britain’s election makes Britain’s exit from the European Union all but inevitable but could lead to a softer split, analysts said on Friday.

Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s party secured its biggest majority in parliament since the heyday of Margaret Thatcher in the 1980s in Thursday’s

The outcome should allow Johnson — a figurehead of the original 2016 EU membership referendum — to push his divorce deal with Brussels through parliament and take Britain out of the bloc on 31 January. But he still has to negotiate a new economic partnership with the European Union, which remains Britain’s biggest trading partner, for businesses to continue operating smoothly on both sides of the Channel.

Failure to do so by the end of 2020 would push Britain into uncharted waters and have unknown repercussions for global markets and international trade.

Before the election, Johnson had to rely on hardline eurosceptic Conservative MPs in the European Research Group (ERG), who have been pressing him for a much looser trading relationship with Brussels.

“With a big majority, Boris Johnson can ignore ERG and go for a softer Brexit if he wishes,” noted Charles Grant, director of the Centre for European Reform (CER) think tank.

Despite Brexit dominating the election, there has been little scrutiny of Johnson’s exit deal, which covers separation issues such as expatriate rights and Britain’s financial settlement.

There has been even less discussion about the pros and cons of any future trade agreements, while Johnson himself has given mixed signals about what he wants to achieve.—AFP

Three reclining Buddha images in ancient Hanthawady city

By Maung Tha (Archaeology)

GENERALLY, Buddhists keep Buddha images in sitting postures for obeisance at their houses. Various types of sitting Buddha images in many hand postures were built at religious edifices such as pagodas, temples, stupas and monasteries. However, Buddha images in walking posture were lesser than standing Buddha images.

Among reclining Buddha images in Myanmar, the one at Winsein Tawya in Mudon Township of Mon State is the largest. Three reclining Buddha images in Bago Township among others in major cities including Yangon are not the biggest but the most significant, crowded with pilgrims on a daily basis.

Bago, a royal city ruled by Mon kings, was famous as Hanthawady in Yamanya region. So also, it was a royal palace where Second Myanmar Emperor King Bayintnaung Kyawhtin Nawrahta came onto the throne. A total of 17 kings from King Samala to King Tissaraja reigned Bago in the first Hanthawady era (825-1067 AD). Some experts said Hanthawady Royal Palace established by King Samala was not current place of Bago. King Banya Oo established new royal palace in Hanthawady which was located in current place of Bago in the second Hanthawady era (1369-1538 AD). A total of 11 successive kings from King Banya Oo to King Thushintakayukpi reigned Hanthawady in the second Hanthawady era. King Banya Oo established new Hanthawady state in the place of old Hanthawady built by King Tissaraja, last king of the first Hanthawady era.

moved his throne from Toungoo to Bago. Bayintnaung succeeded to him in Bago in 1551 AD and built Kanbawzathadi Palace in 1553 AD. King Bayintnaung then established the Second Myanmar Empire based on Bago.

Bago, 47 miles northeast of Yangon, is located on Bago River. The town is situated at an altitude of 31 feet. Myanmar Encyclopaedia mentioned Bago was governed by Ngayamankan in the tenure of King Saw Lu in Bagan era as well as ruled by King Tayaphya who was a son-in-law of Mottama King Magadu. In his reign, King Banya Oo built 16-corner walls for Hanthawady Royal Palace. Places of the walls remain unchanged and the walls can be seen as mounds till today.

Bago, Oktha, Hanthawady

Bago was well-known as Oktha and Hanthawady in the past. Name of Bago was changed from different meanings called in ancient times.

Myanmar Encyclopaedia stated that Bago was the great grandeur in the reign of King Bayintnaung. After King Alaungphaya occupied Hanthawady in 1757 AD, Bago was not well-known. Shwemawdaw Pagoda built on Sudassana Hillock or Myinthita Hillock in centre of Bago in 237 Sasana era is a symbol of the town. Likewise, Shwethalyaung, Myathalyaung and Seinthalayung reclining Buddha images are also magnificent ones in Bago. The first two are located in the west of Bago and the last one, in the east.

Shwethalyaung

Shwethalyaung reclining Buddha image is located on the road to Mahazedi Pagoda. Visitors who leave Yangon need to turn left to Shwethalyaung image before arriving at the overpass of railroad in Bago. The image is 55 metres long (180 feet) and 16 metres high (52 feet). It was built by Mon King Maggadipa in 994 AD but the image was hidden in the bushes for a long time. In 1880, the Buddha image was found in clearing the bushes to construct the railroad. The image was renovated in 1881 and left side of its pillow rebuilt. The roof and walls of hall for the image were completed in 1930.

According to the records described on the hall where the image is kept, the reclining Buddha image is 180 feet long and 52.5 feet high, the face 22 feet long, ears 15 feet long each, eyes three feet and nine inches each, eye brows, eyelids, nose, neck and lips, 7.6 feet long each. The areas from shoulder to waist of the image, from waist to knee and from knee to foot are 47.5 feet long each. The length from elbow to tip of finger is 45 feet. The length of little finger is about 10 feet, the foot 25 feet, the big toe six feet and the palm 22 feet.

People in successive eras assumed the well-wisher of Shwethalyaung reclining Buddha image was Mon King Maggadipa but some assumed it was built by King Bayintnaung. The image was enshrined sacred relics and many Buddha images. The forehead of the Buddha was enshrined a piece of real ruby. The robes of the image were gilt, and the image was named Neikban Image, according to the book with the title of "Historical observatories around Hanthawady (Bago)".

Myathalyaung

Myathalyaung reclining Buddha image located near Shwethalyaung image is bigger than the latter. Myathalyaung image was a rebuilt one on the original hillock. Its original title was Naungdawgyi image. It was named by hermit U Khanti because Myathalyaung was located in upper side of Shwethalyaung image and was larger than Shwethalyaung image.

Hermit U Khanti built religious edifices in Bago including the iron stairway connected between Hinthagon Pagoda and Shwemawdaw Pagoda. While carrying out missionary tasks in Bago, the hermit renovated the hillock of the reclining Buddha image. The old hillock of Myathalyaung image seemed to have collapsed brick walls covered by bushes. The entrance to the precinct of Myath-alyaung image was made of baked clay bricks based on large blocks of laterite considered as works of ancient Mon culture.

Ancient bricks found near Myath-alyaung image were assumed as the works in Dhammazedi era as these were evidences of Mon culture. Ancient Buddha images, bricks and broken glazed bricks found in renovation of Myathalyaung image are displayed at the prayer hall in the image's precinct. After building Kyaikpun four-faced pagoda, King Dhammazedi constructed a reclining Buddha image under the title of Kyaikthalun, according to the book "Historical observatories around Hanthawady (Bago)". As the hillock where Myathalyaung image was built was not far from Kyaikpun Pagoda, a precise decision could not be adopted whether Kyaikthalun is Myathalyaung built by King Dhammazedi called Naungdawgyi Buddha image or not. It was because there was no stone inscription on construction of Myathalyaung reclining Buddha image.

Seinthalyaung

Travellers may pay visits to Seinthalyaung reclining Buddha image along the road which turned right from Bago-Thanatpin Road from the exit of Bago. The image, located there before King Dhammazedi, was named Maha Buddharupa as original title, with 100 elbows in height.

There were two kings with names of Migadibba in the first Hanthawady era. Senior King Migadibba ruled the state from 917 to 932 AD and the junior, from 994 to 1004 AD. Seinthalyaung image was built by junior King Migadibba, who was the 13th successor in the first Hanthawady era. The image was originally named Shinpin Paunghla, and it was recorded as Maha Buddharupa in Kalyani stone inscriptions.

In its history, Hanthawady was established in three eras. The state was ruled by the kings from Samala to Tissaraja in the first era, from Banya Oo to Thushintakayukpi in the second era and Tabinshwehti to Nanda in the third era, lasting for 774 years from 835 to 1599 AD. The long history left significantly ancient heritages in Bago or Oktha or Hanthawady. Despite facing terrible impacts of earthquakes, wars and unscrupulous persons for several times, the three reclining Buddha images significantly exist in Bago Township till today, showing evidences of Buddhist religious edifices as well as ancient heritages to local and foreign travellers.

Spurs goal proves Coutinho settling at Bayern - Flick

BERLIN — Interim coach Hansi Flick says Philippe Coutinho's first Champions League goal for Bayern Munich proved the on-loan playmaker is finally settling in.

Coutinho, 27, is attempting to reboot his career in Germany on a season-long temporary deal after a frustrating 18 months at Barcelona.

After impressing by scoring and setting up a goal against Cologne, then Paderborn in September, the Brazil attacker's form dipped in the autumn.

He was left out of Saturday's 2-1 defeat at league leaders Borussia Muenchengladbach.

However, he showed some deadly finishing with a superb goal in Wednesday's 3-1 win over Tottenham as Bayern became the first Bundesliga club to win all six group games in the Champions League.

"He's on the right track. We know that it's not always so easy to get a foothold in Germany," Flick said of Coutinho on Friday.

"He played well (against Spurs), it was important for him to show some joy in his game.

"He had some touches that I really liked and the logical consequence was his goal, which he took beautifully.

"He has enormous qualities and will show them again here and again."

Wednesday's win over Spurs boosted confidence after back-to-back league defeats leave Bayern seventh in the table, seven points behind leaders Moenchengladbach.

"I'm definitely sleeping better," admitted Flick, with a decision about his future expected after their final game before the winter break against Wolfsburg on December 21.

Flick wants three points from each of their next three league games, starting at home to Werder Bremen on Saturday, a tricky away tie at fifth-placed Freiburg on Wednesday before hosting the Wolves.

However, he is without forwards Corentin Tolisso and Kingsley Coman, who are both injured, while defender Javi Martinez is suspended.—AFP ■
