Pyidaungsu Hluttaw hears report of joint committee on constitution amendment process

THE second Pyidaungsu Hluttaw convened its 7th day meeting of 15th regular session yesterday, and discussed the report and recommendations of the Joint Committee on Scrutinizing Second Bill on Amending 2008 Constitution.

Dr Myat Nyana Soe, the committee's Secretary, explained the 7 bills presented by Hluttaw representatives.

The amendments in each bill were edited to meet legal terms without changing the meanings by the officials led by the Deputy Attorney-General from the Union Attorney-General Office.

Referring to the sub-paragraph (a) of Article 436 under the Chapter 12 of the State Constitution, Dr Myat Nyana Soe said the bills could be approved only if more than 491 Pyidaungsu Hluttaw representatives (over 75 per cent) agreed with it. There were 655 Pyidaungsu Hluttaw MPs while the report was being prepared and one Pyithu Hluttaw representative from Aunglan Township passed away.

The secretary of Joint Committee also suggested secret voting system while making decision on constitution amendment in the Hluttaw.

The Joint Committee was formed with 15 members of Pyithu Hluttaw Bill Committee and 15 members of Amyotha Hluttaw.

Brigadier General Maung Maung, Brigadier General Tint Lwin, Daw Nan Ni Ni Aye and U Stephen suggested to make a while the remaining members of committee remarked to continue the process with the decisions of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Bylaw. Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker U T Khun Myat then invited the names of MP who wanted to debate articles and sub-articles in the appendices H-1 and I-1.

However, Tatmadaw representative Brig-Gen Maung Maung insisted separate discussions as the proposal was supported by 20 per cent of MPs in accordance with their rights.

The Pyidaungsu Hluttaw Speaker replied that the Hluttaw has agreed with the decision of the joint committee which includes the Hluttaw representative, and that the Hluttaw would not agree on separate discussions on the topics.

The Pyidaungsu Hluttaw also agreed appointment of Lt-Gen Soe Htut as the Union Minister for Home Affairs without any rejection. Deputy Governor of the Central Bank of Myanmar U Soe Min made a discussion on the reports of implementing financial policy and financial stability from April to September 2018.

The Pyidaungsu Hluttaw kept the reports as a record.

Myanmar, Singapore supreme courts sign MoG on enforcing money judgments

THE Union Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Singapore signed the Memorandum of Guidance as to Enforcement of Money Judgments yesterday. The signing ceremony was held at the meeting hall of the Union Supreme Court in Nay Pyi Taw. Chief Justice U Htun Htun Oo and The Hon Sundaresh Menon, Singapore Supreme Court's Chief Justice, signed and exchanged the memorandum.

U Htun Htun Oo first delivered a speech where he said while the memorandum has no binding legal effect, it must be acknowledged as an important step forward while there exist no memoranda of understanding concerning the enforcement of money judgments between the two countries.

He said the Code of Civil Procedure shows possible steps for Myanmar to enforce foreign judgments and this MoG explains the scenarios, rules and regulations for either country to enforce judgments from the other. He said there need to be practical discussions to implement the content of the MoG.

This was followed by a speech from The Hon Sundaresh Menon, after which the two chief justices signed and exchanged the MoG.

Myanmar and Singapore currently have numerous investments between them and show a promise of increased economic cooperation in the future.

The recently signed MoG will assist in enforcing foreign judgments of a financial nature. This will help in safeguarding the interests of investors from both nations and create better business opportunities for Myanmar businesses as well.

Present at the signing ceremony were Union Ministers, the Union Attorney-General, Justices from the Union Supreme Court, chairpersons and secretaries from Hluttaw com-

Course on Sangha Nayaka & judgement on disputes 1/2020 concluded

Course No 1/2020 (Central) on Sangha Nayaka and delivering judgement on disputes involving the ecclesiastic code was concluded yesterday at the Wizaya Mingalar Dhamma Hall at Thiri Mingala Kaba Aye Hill in Yangon.

In his conclusion address, State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee Chairman Abhidhaja Maharattha Guru Abhidhaja Agga Maha Saddhamma Jotika Bharmo Sayadaw Dr Bhaddanta Kumarabhivamsa urged the trainees to work their best with enthusiastic teaching when they lecture other Sayadaws in multiplier courses in regions and states.

The chairman Sayadaw also called on the trainees for machining arrangements for ensuring that all chairmen Sayadaws of the township, ward/village Sangha Nayaka Committee attend the multiplier courses with the help of local authorities.

The Bharmo Sayadaw also stressed the importance of the digesting the rules and principles of the Sangha Committee to deliver judgement on disputes with monks and monasteries in right way.

The first course on Sangha Nayaka and delivering judgement on disputes involving the ecclesiastic code came after the State Sangha Maha Nayaka Committee considered that Sangha Nayaka committees in regions and states are weak in understanding the rules for solving the cases related to the monks.

“The purpose of the course is to build the capacities of the Sangha Nayaka Sayadaws and Sayadaws who are taking responsibility for delivering judgement on disputes with monks and monasteries, said the chairman Sayadaw in his address at the opening of the course on 3 February.

The similar course was held in 1981 one year after the first Meeting of All Orders in Yangon in 1980 for the Purification, Perpetuation and Propagation of Sasana.

Lectures at the 1981 course were compiled and published as the manual for rules for Sangha Nayaka. The State Sangha Nayaka Committee also ordered directives and approved the Vinaya Manual for judging the disputes.

Sangha Nayaka committees were established at region/state, township, ward/village levels after the 1980 meeting of the All Orders of the Sangha. — MNA

A PhD candidate from King’s College London in England recently attended the 22nd Zawti Shan novitiation and ordination ceremony in Mohnyin Twonship in Kachin State.

She also attended the Sang Long ordination ceremony in Mohnyin.

Drug smuggler fatally shot in Maungtaw

Two people smuggled illegal drugs tried to flee from police in Maungtaw, Rakhine State, on 9 February and one was fatally wounded from a warning shot while the other managed to escape.

The deceased person was identified as Lin Lin Tun, 27, from Ywar Gyi (North) Ward of Sittway while his accomplice is still at large. Police confiscated 914,550 psychotropic tablets worth an estimated K1,829,100,000 and a ‘L’ driving licence from the vehicle the suspects were driving.

Mineral exports up $579 mln in current FY

MYANMAR'S mineral exports showed a marked climb this fiscal, touching US$907 million between 1 October and 31 January, an increase of $579 million compared with the year-ago period, according to data from the Ministry of Commerce.

Last year, mineral exports were pegged at just $328 million.

Both private and public sector mineral exports witnessed an increase in the current fiscal, with private sector exports valued at $452.458 million and public sector exports estimated at $454.87 million.

Of the seven export groups, exports of agricultural goods, minerals, fishery, and finished industrial goods showed an increase, while the exports of livestock, forest products, and other goods declined.

Export values stood at $1.2 billion for agricultural products, $50.37 million for livestock, $343.65 million for fishery products, $58.59 million for forest products, over $3.4 billion for manufactured goods, and $114.6 million for other goods.

The country's export sector relies more on the agriculture and manufacturing sectors. While export earnings from the CMP (cut, make, and pack) garment businesses are rising, the country's reliance on natural resources has been lessening.

Due to limited extraction of natural resources, exports of forest products and minerals dropped significantly in the previous year. Permits for mining blocks were suspended in 2016, but after a period of two years, Myanmar's mining sector has now been opened to local and foreign investors, according to the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation. —GNLM

Myanmar International Furniture Expo 2020 to kick off on 13 Feb at Tatmadaw Hall

A four-day Myanmar International Furniture Expo 2020 will take place from 13 to 16 February at the Tatmadaw Hall in Yangon. The event will be organized by the Myanmar Rattan and Bamboo Entrepreneurs Association and the Wood-based Furniture Association.

The expo aims to expand the business of SMEs engaged in Myanmar's furniture industry, promote talented designers, and build closer interactions among furniture entrepreneurs.

The expo will showcase locally produced furniture for businesses and houses. More than 60 exhibitors will put up 180 booths at the show.

Visitors will get a chance to observe unique furniture designs at the expo, said organizers.

Rattan and bamboo SMEs are facing financial constraints in efforts to reach more external markets, said a rattan and bamboo maker.

"At present, some producers are relying solely on the domestic market. For instance, they are providing hampers to City Mart Holdings and furniture to local markets," he said.

"If the related department can help us explore foreign markets and provide technical and financial assistance to SMEs, the rattan and bamboo production sector might improve," the rattan and bamboo maker added.

At present, Myanmar exports furniture made of bamboo, rattan, and wood to markets in the US, the Republic of Korea, Japan, New Zealand, Australia, and the EU countries. Traders earn only $1-2 million annually from the export of bamboo, rattan, and wood furniture, according to the Myanmar Rattan and Bamboo Entrepreneurs Association.

"Over the last 30 to 40 years, Myanmar has exported teak logs and raw materials due to lack of infrastructure. There are more than 700 rattan and bamboo companies in Viet Nam. However, Myanmar has only 30 to 40 value-added rattan and bamboo enterprises. We need to make efforts to increase the number of value-added producers and help their businesses grow," said an official from the Myanmar Rattan and Bamboo Entrepreneurs Association.

The Myanmar Rattan and Bamboo Entrepreneurs Association and the Wood-based Furniture Association have been holding the Myanmar International Furniture Expo biannually, with a view to boost Myanmar's furniture industry, promote shift to value-added production, create jobs, alleviate poverty, improve import-substitution businesses, encourage value-added producers, hold international furniture expos beyond the domestic market, and upgrade technology by linking with international producers. —Ko Khant

Survey vital to tackle challenges in immunization programme

THE nationwide initiative for inoculating children younger than 5 years against 12 diseases could serve as an important milestone in the history of immunization programmes in Myanmar.

In addition, girls aged between 9 and 10 years will be administered the Human Papilloma Virus vaccine against cervical cancer in July and August. The HPV vaccine will be the 13th vaccine on the immunization list.

The cost of vaccinating a child against 12 diseases is about US$40. Twenty-six per cent of the total funds required for the nationwide immunization programme has been allocated by the Union government, while Gavi, the Vaccine Alliance, has donated 74 per cent of the funds.

The government will have to fund the entire immunization programme in 2025. Hence, it is important that the funds allocated for the programme are used effectively. To make the 2025 Expanded Programme on Immunization a success, we need to find out the possible challenges ahead and find ways to tackle them. In any such undertaking, the role of surveyors would be important for conducting a nationwide survey for the programme.

At the same time, we also need to prepare for refuting rumors and misinformation on social media, which has become an amplifier of doubt and is highly volatile. It also has the power to change the landscape.

We need to care more about these connections if we want everyone to benefit from immunization.

At the same time, we also need to prepare for refuting rumors and misinformation on social media, which has become an amplifier of doubt and is highly volatile. It also has the power to change the landscape.

We believe that the Ministry of Health and Sports and its health workers would leave no stone unturned to make the nationwide immunization programmes a success at a time when deadly diseases like diphtheria and measles, which can be prevented through vaccination, are surging in developing countries.

"We welcome international experts including those from the United States to take part in the joint expert team," Mi said, adding that appropriate arrangements for the team will be made after thorough consultation and communication.

WHO warns overseas virus spread may be 'tip of the iceberg'

The head of the World Health Organization has warned that confirmed cases of coronavirus being transmitted by people who have never travelled to China could be the "tip of the iceberg".

Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus's remarks come as members of a WHO-led "international expert mission" flew to China on Monday to help coordinate a response to the outbreak that has so far infected more than 40,000 people and killed 908 in the country.

"There've been some concerning instances of onward #2019nCoV spread from people with no travel history to (China)," Tedros tweeted Sunday, using the virus's provisional scientific name.

"The detection of a small number of cases may indicate more widespread transmission in other countries; in short, we may only be seeing the tip of the iceberg."

While the spread of the virus outside China appeared to be slow, Tedros warned it could accelerate.

"Containment remains our objective, but all countries must use the window of opportunity created by the containment strategy to prepare for the virus's possible arrival," he said.

Outside mainland China, there have been more than 350 infections reported in nearly 30 places. There have been two deaths, one in the Philippines and the other in Hong Kong.

Several countries have banned arrivals from China while major airlines have suspended flights, and Air China cancelled some of its flights to the United States.

The WHO-led mission to China is being headed up by Bruce Aylward, a veteran of previous health emergencies, Tedros said. Aylward oversaw the WHO's 2014-2016 response to the Ebola epidemic in West Africa.

Novel coronavirus vaccine starts animal trials

A candidate vaccine targeting the novel coronavirus has been tested on animals, according to a report Monday on news portal yicai.com, citing sources with the Chinese Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

The mRNA vaccine was co-developed by the CDC, Shanghai-based Tongji University School of Medicine and Stermerna Therapeutics Co., Ltd. The vaccine samples were injected into more than 100 mice Sunday, the report said.

This came just two weeks after the center successfully isolated the first new coronavirus strain on Jan. 24.

A CDC official warned that the animal testing is in a very early stage of vaccine development and there are still many steps to be taken before the vaccine is ready to be used on humans.

Testing on mice is only an initial screening of a candidate vaccine. After that there will be toxicity tests on larger animals such as monkeys to ensure the safety of the vaccine in human clinical trials, said the report, citing a researcher of Tongji University.

The development and production cycle of the mRNA vaccine is shorter than that of traditional vaccines.

A number of research institutes and companies around the world are stepping up efforts in developing vaccines and agents against the novel coronavirus.

Latest developments worldwide

Death toll tops 900. Prices

Kong and one in the Philippines.

There have been 97 new deaths from the virus — with 91 in hardest-hit Hubei province.

The number of confirmed infections in China reaches 40,171, according to the National Health Commission.

The World Health Organization warns that while there are signs the epidemic is stabilising, there could be more infections abroad in people who have never travelled to China.

Slow return to work

After the extension of the annual Lunar New Year holiday, millions of people in China return to work, but the pick-up is only partial.

Tens of millions of people in Hubei province remain under lockdown and outside the quarantined region, many companies are limiting staff.

Schools and universities across the country remain closed.

Soaring prices

Consumer prices in China rise 5.4 percent in January over one year, a record since the end of 2011. The spike in pork and fresh vegetables prices in particular push up costs.

Beijing reports a jump of more than 20 percent in food prices, due in part to the disruption of transportation and other lockdown measures, and people buying supplies in bulk.

'Imminent threat'

With four confirmed cases in Britain, the government warns the outbreak of the coronavirus is "a serious and imminent threat" and announces new measures to protect the public.

Anyone with the virus can now be forcibly quarantined if they are deemed to pose a public health threat.

Infections rise aboard cruise ship

Around 60 more people on board the Diamond Princess cruise ship off Japan's coast are diagnosed with the coronavirus, bringing the total infections to about 130.

The quarantine of all aboard — around 3,600 people, many elderly — started a week ago and could last until February 19. The WHO recommends psychological support measures for passengers.

E.Guinea leader's son fined 30mn euros, suspended jail confirmed

Teodorin Obiang is the son of Equatorial Guinean President Teodoro Obiang Nguema, who has ruled the country for four decades. PHOTO: AFP

PARIS (France) — The son of Equatorial Guinea's leader was handed a 30-million-euro fine by a Paris court Monday on top of a suspended jail term for using public money to fund a jet-set lifestyle in Europe.

Teodorin Obiang, the son of Equatorial Guinea's leader Teodoro Obiang Nguema, had been convicted in 2017 of embezzlement.

He had been handed a three-year jail term as well as the $32.9 million fine, with both sentences suspended.

Obiang, who is also vice president, challenged the penalty only to have the Paris appeals court return a heavier sentence on Monday by removing the suspended provision from the fine.

The notorious playboy fond of fast cars and Michael Jackson memorabilia was not in court for the ruling.

Obiang, 50, was put on trial on charges of using money plundered from his country's state coffers to fund a jet-set lifestyle in France, where he bought a six-storey mansion in an ultra-posh part of the capital.

The judges in his initial trial, which he did not attend, had ruled that his 107-million-euro mansion — which boasts a hammam, a disco and gold-plated taps — should be confiscated, along with other assets.

The case, initiated by anti-corruption NGOs, is one of three involving families of African leaders which campaigners hope signals a new willingness of French authorities to tackle money laundering.

Paris has long been a favoured destination for the ill-gotten gains of wealthy figures linked to political leaders in Africa, particularly in France's former colonies.

When investigators first raided the home, they hired trucks to haul away a fleet of Bugattis, Ferraris, a Rolls-Royce Phantom and other cars as evidence.

Obiang was agriculture and forestry minister before being promoted by his father to vice president, putting him in pole position to succeed him as leader when the post becomes vacant.

Africa's only Spanish-speaking nation, Equatorial Guinea is the continent's third-biggest oil producer but more than half of its 1.2 million population live below the poverty line.

It is regularly accused by human rights reports of corruption, repressive laws, extrajudicial killings and torture.

President Obiang has ruled with an iron fist for four decades.

He overthrew his uncle Francisco Macias Nguema in a bloody coup in August 1979 and became president a few months later. He has since seen off at least half a dozen assassination or coup attempts. The latest of them, in December 2017, reportedly involved a group of men from Chad, Central African Republic and Sudan. — AFP ■

'Parasite' makes Oscars history with stunning best picture win

HOLLYWOOD (United States) — South Korean black comedy "Parasite" made movie history at the Oscars on Sunday, becoming the first non-English-language film to win the best picture award — Hollywood's biggest prize of all.

A genre-defying thriller about a poor family infiltrating a wealthy household, "Parasite" won four awards, stunning the pundits who believed the Academy would never crown a subtitled Asian movie.

"It's such a great honor. I feel like I'll wake up to find it's all a dream. It all feels very surreal," a jubilant Bong Joon-ho, who also won best director honors, told journalists backstage, calling the night "crazy."

"Parasite" also won the Oscar for best international feature, and became the first Asian film to scoop best original screenplay.

"I thought I was done for the day and ready to relax," Bong had said earlier after his best director win, promising to "drink until next morning."

Bong also paid tribute on stage to his childhood hero and fellow nominee Martin Scorsese, drawing a standing ovation for the veteran director of "The Irishman" — which went home empty-handed.

But a bigger shock was in store as the movie beat frontrunner "1917" to win best picture, the night's final prize.

"It feels like a very opportune moment in history is happening right now," producer Kwak Sin-ae told an audience of Tinseltown A-listers, who cheered the film's wins throughout the night at the Dolby Theatre.

Bong predicted that "naturally we will come to a day" when "a foreign language film winning this won't be much of an issue."

Phoenix and Zellweger win

The pre-Oscars favorite "1917," Sam Mendes's innovative and personal World War I movie about two soldiers crossing no-man's-land, had to settle for best cinematography, visual effects and sound mixing prizes.

The movie — filmed to appear like one continuous shot — had swept up trophies at several other galas in the build-up to Sunday.

Joaquin Phoenix won his first Oscar for his turn in supervillain origin story "Joker," the film that started the night with the most nominations.

In an emotionally charged speech, the actor railed against injustice and "an egocentric worldview" that leads to environmental destruction, before paying tribute to his actor brother River, who died of a drug overdose in 1993. — AFP ■

Solar Orbiter launches on mission to reveal Sun's secrets

MIAMI (United States) — The US-European Solar Orbiter probe launched Sunday night from Florida on a voyage to deepen our understanding of the Sun and how it shapes the space weather that impacts technology back on Earth.

The mission, a collaboration between ESA (the European Space Agency) and NASA, successfully blasted off from the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral at 11:03pm (0403 GMT Monday) and could last up to nine years or more.

At 12:24am Monday (0524 GMT) the European Space Operations Centre in Darmstadt, Germany, received a signal from the spacecraft indicating that its solar panels had successfully deployed. Space Orbiter is expected to provide unprecedented insights into the Sun's atmosphere, its winds and its magnetic fields, including how it shapes the heliosphere, the vast swath of space that encompasses our system.

By journeying out of the ecliptic plane — the belt of space roughly aligned with the Sun's equator, through which the planets orbit — it will acquire the first-ever images of our star's uncharted polar regions.

Drawing on gravity assists from Earth and Venus, Solar Orbiter will slingshot itself into a bird's eye view of the Sun's poles, reaching its primary science orbit in two years' time.

"I think it was picture perfect, suddenly you really feel like you're connected to the entire solar system," said Daniel Muller, ESA project scientist, shortly after the launch. "You're here on Earth and you're launching something that will go close to the Sun." "We have one common goal and that is to get the good science out of this mission. I think we're going to succeed," added Holly Gilbert, director of NASA's heliophysics science division.

Ten state-of-the-art instruments on board will record myriad observations to help scientists unlock clues about what drives solar winds and flares.

These emit billions of highly charged particles that impact the Earth, producing the spectacular Northern Lights. But they can also disrupt radar systems, radio networks and even, though rarely, render satellites useless.

The largest solar storm on record hit North America in September 1859, knocking out much of the continent's telegraph network and bathing the skies in an aurora viewable as far away as the Caribbean. "Imagine if just half of our satellites were destroyed," said Matthieu Berthomier, a researcher at the Paris-based Plasma Physics Laboratory. "It would be a disaster for mankind." — AFP ■

Iran satellite launch fails, in blow to space programme

TEHRAN (Iran) — Iran said it "successfully" launched a satellite Sunday but failed to put it into orbit, in a blow to its space programme that the US alleges is a cover for missile development.

The attempted launch of the Zafar — "Victory" in Farsi — comes days before the 41st anniversary of the Islamic Revolution and crucial parliamentary elections in Iran.

Arch foes Iran and the United States have appeared to be on the brink of an all-out confrontation twice in the past seven months.

Long-standing acrimony between Tehran and Washington was exacerbated in 2018 when US President Donald Trump unilaterally withdrew from a deal that froze Iran's nuclear programme, before issuing new demands that Tehran curtail its development of ballistic missiles.

Washington has also raised concerns in the past about Tehran's satellite programme, saying the launch of a carrier rocket in January 2019 amounted to a violation of limits on its ballistic missiles.

Iran maintains it has no intention of acquiring nuclear weapons, and says its aerospace activities are peaceful and comply with a UN Security Council resolution.

On Sunday, it launched the Zafar satellite at 7:15 pm (1545 GMT) but it fell short of reaching orbit, the defence ministry said.

A ministry spokesman said initially that the satellite was "successfully" launched and went "90 percent of the way", reaching an altitude of 540 kilometres (335 miles). "The Simorgh (rocket) successfully propelled the Zafar satellite into space," said Ahmad Hosseini of the ministry's space unit. "Unfortunately, in the final moments the carrier did not reach the required speed" to put it into orbit, he told state television.

"God willing with improvements made in future launches this part of the mission will be done as well," he added.

"We achieved most of the goals we had and data has been acquired, and in the near future, by analysing the data, we will take the next steps."

Telecommunications Minister Mohammad Javad Azari-Jahromi admitted in an English-language tweet soon after that the launch had "failed". — AFP ■

Chinese scientist awarded UNESCO-Equatorial Guinea International Prize for Research in Life Sciences

ADDIS ABABA — Chinese Nobel laureate Tu Youyou has been awarded the UNESCO-Equatorial Guinea International Prize for Research in the Life Sciences for her research into parasitic diseases.

At ceremony held on Monday as a side event of the ongoing 33rd African Union (AU) summit in Ethiopia's capital Addis Ababa, two other scientists, namely Prof. Cato Laurencin (USA) and Prof. Kevin McGuigan (Ireland) have also been awarded the prize.

As the winner of the 2015 Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine, Prof. Tu Youyou of the China Academy of Chinese Medical Sciences, discovered an entirely new anti-malarial treatment, artemisinin, which made possible the treatment of thousands of patients in China in the 1980s.

Since the turn of the century, the World Health Organization (WHO) has been recommending artemisinin-based combination therapies as the first-line treatment for malaria; and these combination treatments have saved 6.2 million lives reducing malaria mortality in Africa by 66 per cent, and by 71 per cent among children under 5 years of age.

Speaking at the awarding ceremony at the AU headquarters in Addis Ababa, Audrey Azoulay, the Director-General of UNESCO, has hailed the contribution of Tu Youyou to lives of humanity.

"Professor Tu has not been able to be with us, who we would like to greet is also an exceptional woman.

Her work is revolutionary; she used traditional Chinese remedy at the manuscript of a 12th century in order to provide a new treatment for malaria," the Director-General has noted.

"She is among the ones who have received the Nobel Prize; she has used indigenous knowledge and we are very proud in UNESCO because we have specific program which is very ambitious in order to develop the position of women in sciences," she said.

With its fifth edition now, the UNESCO-Equatorial Guinea International Prize for Research in the Life Sciences rewards outstanding scientific research projects in the life sciences that have led to an improvement in the quality of human life. — Xinhua ■

China inflation rises as coronavirus disrupts supply chains

BEIJING (China) — China consumer prices rose at their highest rate in more than eight years, official data showed Monday, with inflation more than expected on the back of Lunar New Year demand and a deadly virus outbreak.

Beijing had already been battling a slowing domestic economy before the new coronavirus emerged, disrupting businesses, travel and supply chains.

The consumer price index (CPI), a key gauge of retail inflation, came in at 5.4 per cent last month on-year, up from 4.5 per cent in December — with prices of pork and fresh vegetables pushing up costs. Food prices spiked 20.6 per cent. The overall monthly figure exceeded the 4.9 per cent forecast by analysts in a Bloomberg survey and is the highest since October 2011. “The year-on-year increase has been affected not only by Spring Festival-related factors but... by the new coronavirus as well,” said the National Bureau of Statistics on Monday.

Analysts expect China’s struggle to contain the spread of the virus over the Lunar New Year holiday, which started in late January, to keep prices higher than usual. “Some food supplies may spoil before shipping to large cities due to the disruption of transportation and other lockdown measures, especially for fruits, vegetables and livestock,” said Lu Ting of Nomura in a research note last Thursday.

“People also tend to hoard food and other supplies in this kind of situation. The hoarding will most likely push up prices.”

The virus has so far claimed more than 900 lives in China.

The rise in January was the highest since October 2011 when CPI inflation was 5.5 per cent, .

UOB’s head of research Suan Teck Kin told AFP that while prices tend to fall after the Lunar New Year break, “this year, prices may continue to stay high” because of supply chain disruptions.

Over the past year, a spike in pork prices due to African Swine Fever, which ravaged pig herds across the country, had also driven up CPI.— AFP ■

Global markets mostly dip on coronavirus woes

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Asian and European markets mostly fell Monday with investors worried over the impact of China’s coronavirus outbreak on the global economy.

At midday in Europe, London was down 0.2 per cent, Paris dipped 0.4 per cent, and Frankfurt slid 0.3 per cent.

“Coronavirus concerns are weighing,” noted CMC Markets UK analyst David Madden.

“The deepening health crisis is chipping away at market confidence.

“In London, stocks that are connected to China are under pressure. Mining, energy as well as travel stocks are in the red.”

The virus has killed more than 900 people, infected more than 40,000 across mainland China and spread to more than two dozen countries in what has been termed a global health emergency.

It has also jolted major supply chains for everything from food and household supplies to car and electronics parts.

In Asia, Tokyo’s benchmark Nikkei 225 index closed 0.6 per cent down, while Hong Kong pared some losses, ending the day 0.6 per cent lower after tanking 1.1 per cent at the open.

Shanghai however rebounded after opening lower and ended with a 0.5-per cent gain at the close.

Investors around the world have been watching with concern as China, the world’s second-largest economy, battles the novel coronavirus, which emerged at the end of last year in the central city of Wuhan.

The domestic impact was reflected in China’s inflation figures released Monday, which showed the highest rise in consumer prices in more than eight years, with food prices spiking more than 20 per cent.

It has also disrupted the supply chains of major global firms such as Apple supplier Foxconn and auto giant Toyota. Key production facilities across China have been temporarily closed, with authorities imposing lockdowns and quarantine measures.

China’s CPI up in January

BEIJING — China’s consumer price index (CPI), a main gauge of inflation, rose 5.4 per cent year on year in January, the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) said Monday.

The increase was up from 4.5 per cent for December.

The hike was mainly driven by the effect of Spring Festival holiday and the novel coronavirus pneumonia epidemic, said NBS senior statistician Dong Lijuan.

Food prices grew 20.6 per cent year on year last month, up from 17.4 per cent in December, while non-food prices gained 1.6 percent, 0.3 per centage points higher than that of December.

Pork prices rose 116 percent year on year last month, while vegetable prices saw a 17.1 per cent increase from a year ago.

The CPI in urban and rural areas posted a year-on-year growth of 5.1 per cent and 6.3 per cent, respectively.

The CPI of Hubei Province rose 5.5 per cent year on year in January, generally in line with the growth of the country’s CPI, reflecting a positive effect of the government’s efforts on securing supply and stabilizing prices, said Dong.

Monday’s data also showed that China’s producer price index, which measures costs for goods at the factory gate, rose 0.1 per cent year on year in January.—Xinhua ■

Intelligent Automation will boost India’s economy to USD 5 trillion by 2024-25

NEW DELHI (India) — Intelligent automation will catapult Indian economy to USD 5 trillion dollars in the next five years, up from USD 2.7 trillion dollars, according to a new study commissioned by Automation Anywhere, a global leader in Robotic Process Automation (RPA)

Today, automation is driving efficiencies for enterprises, resulting in dramatic productivity gains in the back office and enhanced customer experiences in the front office. According to the study conducted by Ernst and Young India (EY) the country will experience a significant boost to its economy to reach USD 5 trillion by as early as 2024. The research, presented today at the IAMA’s India Digital Summit 2020, examined the economic impact of automation and found that large-scale adoption of automation technologies, such as RPA, artificial intelligence, natural language processing, and machine learning will drive increased efficiencies and new jobs resulting in economic growth in the next few years.

“Our research shows that intelligent automation and RPA, in particular, will make businesses more efficient by automating business processes end-to-end, allowing organizations to become true digital enterprises,” said Kamalanand Nithianandan, Partner, Advisory Services, EY India.

“As more organizations adopt intelligent automation at scale, this will eventually create more high-skilled jobs providing more economic opportunities for everyone,” added Nithianandan.

According to the report, automation is driving intrinsic growth in every sector of the Indian economy and is influencing every activity of the workforce by creating higher-skilled jobs, resulting in more opportunities for workers and higher economic output.

Banking, insurance and financial services have emerged as key industry adopters of intelligent automation as they experience the benefits of lowering costs of business transactions and providing a differentiated customer experience.

Telecom, retail-consumer packaged goods, oil and gas, logistics and transportation organizations have also increased efforts to automate core business functions, driven by mandates to cut costs and improve customer experiences. — ANI ■

Australia, Indonesia move to implement trade deal

SYDNEY (Australia) — Australia and Indonesia announced a 100-day plan on Monday to implement a long-awaited trade deal, as the two countries hailed a “new beginning” for their sometimes troubled relationship.

The two G20 economies hope to deepen trade currently worth a modest US$12 billion a year, in a region increasingly dominated by China’s economic and military might. Addressing Australia’s parliament on a landmark state visit, President Joko Widodo cast the two nations as would-be “Avengers” — “forces of good” uniting to defeat a “common enemy” and shared challenges like protectionism, intolerance and climate change. Widodo said his visit to Australia marked “a new beginning of a new relationship” between the two nations. —AFP ■

Sinn Fein finds its voice in Ireland after vote gains

DUBLIN (Ireland) — Republican party Sinn Fein on Monday stood on the threshold of a potential role in Ireland's government after winning the popular vote in a weekend election, a result shattering the political landscape.

The result from Saturday's ballot broke the stranglehold of two-party politics in Ireland, opening up a potential role for a party once shunned because of its links to IRA paramilitaries.

Former leader Gerry Adams and other party representatives were even banned from the airwaves in the UK as violence raged over British rule in Northern Ireland over three decades to 1998.

But with two decades of peace and a new leader under Mary Lou McDonald, Sinn Fein's left-wing policies on tackling crises in housing and health found favour with voters.

McDonald said the two main parties — Fine Gael and Fianna Fail — were "in a state of denial" and had not listened to the voice of the people.

"I will talk to and listen to everybody," she said on Sunday night.

Prime Minister and Fine Gael leader Leo Varadkar acknowledged the shift, and raised the prospect of protracted negotiations between the parties.

"It seems that we have now a three-party system. That is going to make forming a government quite difficult," he said.

After ballots in all 39 constituencies were tallied on Sunday, Sinn Fein received 24.5 per cent of first preferences in Ireland's single transferable vote system.

That outstripped the opposition Fianna Fail party on 22.2 per cent and its centre-right rivals Fine Gael on 20.9 per cent.

"The Irish political system has to react to it and probably accept that Sinn Fein will be part of the next government," Eoin O'Malley, associate professor at Dublin City University, told AFP.

Young appeal

At 1000 GMT on Monday, state broadcaster RTE reported 78 of the 159 seats in the Dail — Ireland's lower house of parliament — were filled.

Sinn Fein, whose flagship policy is uniting the republic with Northern Ireland, had 29.

But because it ran just 42 candidates, even a strong performance in the popular vote may not result in it becoming the biggest party in the next parliament.

Fine Gael and Fianna Fail have both ruled out any deal with Sinn Fein because of its past associations under Adams, who has long denied allegations he had a leadership role in the IRA.

"The Troubles" saw the IRA wage a campaign against unionist counterparts and British security forces over UK-rule in Northern Ireland that saw more than 3,000 killed on all sides. McDonald's policies on tackling wealth inequality and housing shortages appear to have appealed to younger voters in the EU member state's 3.3 million-strong electorate.—AFP ■

US Democrats trade barbs as New Hampshire vote nears

WASHINGTON (United States) — Bernie Sanders and Pete Buttigieg locked horns in their fight for the US Democratic presidential nomination Sunday as they scrambled for votes with just two days to go before New Hampshire's closely-watched primary.

The 78-year-old Vermont senator and the 38-year-old former mayor of South Bend, Indiana came top of the first contest in Iowa — marred by messy confusion about the result — giving each momentum as Democrats seek a candidate to take on Donald Trump in November.

Sanders, a leftist who won the New Hampshire primary by a landslide in 2016, led in four polls released Sunday, each of which had the moderate Buttigieg in second followed by Massachusetts Senator Elizabeth Warren and then former vice president Joe Biden.

"I think we have an excellent chance to win," Sanders told CNN as he started a final push on the ground in the small northeastern state.

With the primary season underway in earnest, earlier collegiality among Democrats has fallen away.

"I am running against a candidate, Pete Buttigieg, among others, who has raised contributions from more than 40 billionaires," Sanders told CNN. "Our support is coming from the working class of this country."

His campaign, based heavily on small donors, says it raised $25 million last month.

Buttigieg, appearing separately on CNN, turned aside the billionaire charge, quipping, "Well, Bernie's pretty rich, and I would happily accept a contribution from him."

Turning serious, he said he was "building the movement that is going to defeat Donald Trump," boosted by donations from some two million people.

Barrage of mysterious bomb hoaxes plagues Moscow

MOSCOW (Russia) — Moscovites are mystified by a flood of bomb hoaxes forcing the evacuation of courts, schools and malls while authorities appear unable to find the culprits even after months of disruption to public life.

The warnings of planted bombs, all of them false, have been sent to numerous Russian cities, but particularly targeted the capital, where around 16 million live and work, with up to 1,000 threats per day.

Since late November, more than 1.6 million people have been evacuated from buildings in Moscow, the Interfax news agency said citing sources.

Yet, both the authorities and Kremlin-controlled television channels stay mostly clear of the topic.

Yulia Olshanskaya, a local government official, said her daughter Maria's school was evacuated "sometimes several times a day" throughout December. "We can't keep count of how many times it's happened," she said.

"Sometimes our lessons were cancelled or postponed on those days and they also evacuated people," said 13-year-old Maria Olshanskaya.

Another Muscovite, Yulia Grebenchenko, said her daughter's school has been evacuated 13 times since the start of December.

"Some parents even hired a dog handler to check the school more quickly because you never know how long the sniffer dog units will take," said the office worker.—AFP ■

Xi inspects coronavirus-treating hospital in Beijing

BEIJING — Xi Jinping, general secretary of the Communist Party of China Central Committee, inspected the Beijing Ditan Hospital, a designated institution treating the novel coronavirus pneumonia, on Monday afternoon.

Xi, also Chinese president and chairman of the Central Military Commission, learned about the treatment of infected patients and made video calls to hospitals in Wuhan receiving patients with severe conditions, heard reports from the central guiding team in Hubei Province and the provincial headquarters on the prevention and control of the epidemic, and extended regards to medical workers on the frontline.

Xi then went to the center for disease control and prevention of Chaoyang District, where he learned about the district's emergency response, epidemiological investigation and screening report efforts, and the city's overall epidemic prevention and control work. — Xinhua ■

66 more test positive for coronavirus on cruise ship in Japan

TOKYO — An additional 66 people on a cruise ship quarantined in Yokohama have tested positive for a new coronavirus, the operator of the ship said Monday, bringing the number of confirmed cases in Japan — including some 130 on the vessel — to more than 150.

Of the 66, 45 are Japanese, 11 are Americans, four are Australians, three are Filipinos and there is one each from Canada, Britain and Ukraine, US company Princess Cruise Lines Ltd., operator of the Diamond Princess, said in a statement.

In an effort to prevent the spread of the deadly pneumonia-causing virus in Japan, the health ministry said it is considering testing all of the approximately 3,600 passengers and crew members aboard the ship when the two-week isolation period ends on 19 February. Once their results are clear, they will be able to leave the vessel. “We need to properly address the unease and concerns of our citizens,” said health minister Katsunobu Kato. The Ministry of Health, Labor and Welfare had previously said it might be possible for people to disembark from Feb. 19.

Grief swells as Thais mourn 29 killed in mass shooting

NAKHON RATCHASIMA (Thailand) — Grieving relatives of 29 people murdered by a rogue soldier in Thailand held tearful Buddhist prayer ceremonies Monday, as fresh details emerged of shoppers cowering in terror while the gunman stalked the mall.

Holding portraits of their relatives and dabbing away tears, families of the victims arrived on Monday morning at a city morgue in NakhonRatchasima, better known as Korat, in the morning to carry home coffins bearing their dead.

The gunman—Sergeant-Major JakrapanthThomma — was shot dead by a commando unit Sunday morning, ending a rampage that left 29 dead and scores more wounded.

The killer started his killing spree on Saturday afternoon with weapons stolen from a barracks' arsenal, where he gunned down Mehta Lertsiri, 22, who was guarding the depot.

“I don't know what to do next,” Mehta's grief-stricken grandfather, UdomPrapotsang, said outside of the morgue waiting to claim his body.

“His four-year-old son keeps asking why he can't call his dad.”

After seizing the weapons, the shooter drove to a Buddhist temple, where blood splatters and bullet holes attested Monday to the horrors that unfolded.

NarissaraChotklang, a 52-year-old Pharmacist, was among nine people to die there.

Her funeral rites began late Monday a few kilometres away, where hundreds of mourners lined up to pour water over a jasmine garland placed delicately over her outstretched hand.

The attacker then moved to the town centre mall, where a terrifying siege unfolded late Saturday.

Armed with automatic weapons, the gunman held out overnight as hundreds of shoppers sought refuge in toilets, store-rooms and under tables — staying silent or making a break for the exits when they could.

Pressed to the ground in an office inside a Japanese home goods shop, PartiyaAree, 29, tried to control her breathing as she watched the masked soldier stop just yards away on the shop's own CCTV. “He was carrying a gun, looking left and right constantly,” Partiya told AFP.

Alongside 21 others, they disabled location services on their phone fearing the social media-obsessed gunman might be able to find them.

Her group escaped several hours later, flanked by police in a sprint for the mall entrance “which felt like forever.”

But others were not so fortunate. Flowers and messages of condolences including one saying “R.I.P. Korat, we will not forget” piled up outside the bullet-riddled mall. A Buddhist monk in orange robes led a prayer ceremony on a grass verge outside the mall for PeeraphatPalasan, shot dead as the gunman sprayed bullets into traffic, killing the 25-year-old engineer.

His father, Witoon, was among a dozen mourners crying, kneeling, hands clasped — some holding incense sticks — in prayer. “My son had just finished work and came here to go shopping,” Witoon told AFP. “I never thought I would lose him so soon.”—AFP ■

McTominay says Man Utd determined to end season on high

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Scott McTominay says Manchester United are "fully focused" on ending their troubled season on a high note, with silverware still on offer in the FA Cup and Europa League as he nears a return from injury.

United have found it hard to establish any momentum in a challenging campaign that has threatened to spiral into disarray at times.

They are six points adrift of the Premier League's top four but could still qualify for the Champions League through another route if they win the Europa League.

United face Club Brugge in the last 32 later this month, while their next FA Cup assignment is a fifth-round tie at second-tier Derby.

Despite distracting speculation about Ole Gunnar Solskjaer's future as manager, combined with fan protests against United's owners the Glazer family and the club's executive vice-chairman Ed Woodward, McTominay is adamant there is still a possibility of a happy ending for everyone at Old Trafford.

"It would be nice to come back and have a massive push with the rest of the boys to get into some finals, get some trophies under our belts and really set the bar for next season, set a bar that we don't step underneath," McTominay told United's website.

"All of the boys are fully focused on doing that and hopefully we can do it as well."

McTominay's performances have been one of the few bright spots for United this season, but the 23-year-old Scotland midfielder has been sidelined with a knee injury since late December.

He will be out until early March but has stepped up his recovery during United's warm-weather training camp in Spain. — AFP

Jim Ratcliffe: British tycoon oversees growing sporting empire

British chemicals tycoon Jim Ratcliffe has signed a sponsorship deal with Mercedes' F1 team. PHOTO: AFP

LONDON (United Kingdom) — Chemicals tycoon Jim Ratcliffe has often been labelled a recluse but the British billionaire's latest foray into the world of sport with Formula One team Mercedes thrusts him into the global sporting spotlight.

Mercedes on Monday announced a five-year "principal partnership" with Ratcliffe's company Ineos, adding to an ever-growing portfolio of sporting investments for one of Britain's richest men.

It follows last year's launch of the Team Ineos cycling outfit, formerly known as Team Sky. That reaped immediate dividends as Colombia's Egan Bernal won the 2019 Tour de France.

Ineos bought Swiss football club Lausanne-Sport in 2017 and last year completed the purchase of French Ligue 1 side Nice.

Ratcliffe, a Manchester United fan, has been mentioned as a possible future owner of Chelsea, if Russian tycoon Roman Abramovich ever sells the Premier League club.

Ineos also ploughed £110 million ($142 million) into British sailor Ben Ainslie's Americas Cup team and sponsored Eliud Kipchoge's successful 2019 project to break the two-hour mark for running the marathon. — AFP
