State Counsellor holds videoconference to discuss relief aid ...

Village-tract Administrator Daw Ni Ni Aung talked about collection of grassroots family lists, scrutinizing processes, providing relief supplies door-to-door, the participation of local authorities, common people and NGOs in carrying out relief activities, categorizing the groups of needy people, the follow-up lists for further relief aid, and dredging local creeks to help farmers facing a shortage of water.

Township Administrative Officer U Kyaw Swe reported on the system of collecting household lists to distribute the five essential household supplies, difficulties faced in the processes due to time constraints and compiling lists for the distribution of relief supplies for the second time.

Regarding the discussions, the State Counsellor said, “This time we will give cash instead of essential items. Giving essential items was a little more difficult. This was because the relief items had to be bought from different places. We had to make coordination arrangements to make sure that we got the relief supplies in the required quantities. It was difficult to get these relief supplies in some states and regions. We had to wait. We have given relief supplies in the Magway region the first time. For the second time, we will be giving cash so it will be much easier than the first time. This time we will not be giving relief items to those who were not included the first time and for those who are in the supplementary list. In some regions, it was difficult to buy the five essential food items. It was also difficult find them. When providing relief supplies for some states and regions, we had to buy these supplies in other regions so it took more time. In future, we will only give cash assistance.”

She added that the weather has changed and that it was necessary to educate everyone about this. It was necessary to live harmoniously with the new weather patterns. Rainy days have decreased compared to former times. When it rained it came down in torrents so there were floods and landslides. It was necessary to be prepared for such eventualities. It might be necessary to change the plantation methods in accordance with the changing rainfall patterns.

She said that it was difficult to estimate how long the COVID-19 would last; although Myanmar was not a rich country relief aid was being given as much as possible; to continue providing relief aid like this would be extremely difficult; that was why conditions were being created to allow people to work; people needed to work as much as possible; it was necessary to create a proper balance between the need for health security and the need to earn a living.

She went on to say that at this time the whole world was facing economic decline; efforts were being made so that Myanmar would face the least amount of decline; all the people need to give help; and that it was necessary to work hard so that the economy would gradually begin to function as before. She ended by outlining the measures that the Union Government would be implementing to fulfill the needs.

In her concluding remarks the State Counsellor said that during the first three weeks of May, the number of migrant workers who returned from Thailand were not that many; the reason for the low number of returnees was because of the situations in Thailand; it was initially expected that they would return beginning in early May; all arrangements of illegal workers have become very little; and that arrangements have been made with the Government of Thailand so that all these workers would be holding legal documents.

The State Counsellor said that local authorities in Myawady reported that some returnees were not willing to return to the areas mentioned in their passports and documents, and that it was not possible for them to go to other areas before returning plemented, the national economy would develop significantly; food sufficiency is essential for the world; the agricultural sector is declining in developed countries; as people in these countries abandon the agricultural sector, produce in this sector has declined and they have to rely on import of agricultural produce; the agricultural sector would always be a fundamental need for the world, and that Myanmar needs to grasp the existing opportunities by adopting suitable policies to promote food export which could help the economic development of the country.

The State Counsellor finally said that there are many internal migrant workers in Hlinethaya Township, Yangon; the increase of employment opportunities in other areas could help reduce the number of migrant workers in this township; everyone wanted to work in their own home towns and villages if employment opportunities were available; Magway Region and Mon State should try to make this happen; in providing assistance the Union Government looks at the problem from the long-term view; it is pleased to provide relief supplies to the grassroots people; however, and that the government was expecting a situation of self-reliance. She said the goal should be to realize an economic status where there would no longer be such grassroots people in the country. She ended by saying “That is why I wish to urge everyone to help your own communities in your own sectors”. —MNA were made for their quarantine as well as for their transportation; however, because they could not come from Thailand yet, the number of returnees were not much during the first three weeks; they started to come in round about 20 May; on the first day the number was only in the hundreds but now about a thousand were coming in daily; it was difficult for Thailand to provide a detailed list showing the regions or states these returnees originally came from; now the majority of Myanmar citizens working in Thailand are working on a legal basis; about three years ago about 80 per cent were working illegally; right now 90 per cent of Myanmar workers are legally working; the number to their homes; officials had to explain to them that they needed to return to their home towns or villages to undergo quarantine.

It was important for Mon State and Magway Region as the agricultural season has set in; Myanmar has a lot of potential in the agricultural sector; at this time, agricultural produce are not easily available in most of the European countries, and that Myanmar has got more opportunities to export of agricultural produce to other countries and that the role of Myanmar farmers has become crucial nowadays; from the beginning Myanmar was a country based on agriculture; at present also, if a modern agricultural system could be im-

MoHT unveils COVID-19 relief plan to restart tourism industry

THE Ministry of Hotels and Tourism launched the COVID-19 Tourism Relief Plan at the ministry in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday, providing guidelines for implementation of the plan.

Union Minister for Hotels and Tourism U Ohn Maung said world's tourism industry has been paralyzed following the cancellation of airlines, travel restrictions, and 14-day or 21-day quarantines due to COVID-19.

Myanmar is one of the countries hit by the novel coronavirus. Foreign tourists' entry into the country was banned, and domestic travelling was also restricted following the stay-home rule in April. With the closures of hotels, guesthouses, travel companies and restaurants, jobless rate in the country has increased creating socio-economic impacts.

A total of 4.36 million of tourists visited the country in 2019, and some 400,000 travellers came to Myanmar in January 2020. However, the entry of tourists into the country decreased to less than 100 in April.

To promote Myanmar's tourism industry, the ministry drew up the COVID-19 Tourism Relief Plan, which includes three strategies, following the COVID-19 Economic Relief Plan (CERP).

The tourism relief plan was drawn up based on the tourism crisis management guidelines from the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) and the Pacific Asia Travel Association (PATA), and suggestions from the tourism organizations.

The ministry will implement the plan as a COVID-19 Myanmar Tourism Strategic Roadmap. The three strategies of the plan are survival, reopening and re-launching. Each strategy involves four major processes.

In the "survival" stage, taxes will be relaxed, licence fees will be reduced, rental fees will be postponed and loans will be provided for the hotels and tourism businesses.

The ministry will continue organizing online training for tourism professionals and staff, discussing travel destinations and tourism market assessments.

In the "reopening" stage aimed to be implemented in June, July and August, standard operating producer (SOP) will be sought for the health and safety of travellers and staff.

The ministry will also provide aids for the human-powered vehicles' drivers and vendors, and promote tourism market and domestic digital payment system developing e-commerce and digital platforms.

The "re-launching" stage aimed to be implemented in August will launch communication & marketing campaigns to attract foreign visitors.

The third stage will include easing of travel restriction and providing incentives to investment. Cash aids and loans from allied organizations will be requested in this stage, and a fund will be established for longterm.

In June, the ministry will issue tourism national guidelines, which is mixed with the guidelines from Ministry of Health and Sports and the Ministry of Transport and Communications.

Pagodas, museums and parks will also be reopened in the stage in accordance with the guidelines issued by the Ministry of Health and Sports. The Union Minister said the tourism industry in the "new normal" condition will re-operate step by step in accordance with the ministry's roadmap and in cooperation with related tourism organizations.

Deputy Minister U Tin Latt and Director-General U Maung Maung Kyaw answered the questions raised by the attendees on implementation of SOP the ministry's plan on containing virus infections when travellers visit, how to support the businesspersons and staff by the ministry, and the ministry's post COVID-19 plans. — MNA

Banana growers face price drop as coronavirus hovers

PHEEGYAN banana growers in Pwintbyu Township are not happy even with a good yield this season as the price of banana has dropped in the local market because of coronavirus pandemic, according to the banana growers from Nyaung Pin Sauk Village from Pwintbyu Township.
The local farmers from Pwintbyu Township are growing seasonal crops on a commercial scale. They are growing mostly paddy, sesame, chickpea, green gram and other crops. Other local farmers are growing Pheegyan, Theemhwe, Rakhine bananas on a commercial scale.

Before the outbreak of coronavirus infection, the banana growers are making the profit by growing banana than other fruits because people are more likely to eat the banana than other fruits. Now, the banana market has declined because of the pandemic and the price of Pheegyan banana has declined to K600-K700 from K1200-K1300 per bunch. So, the local banana growers are facing difficulties because of the declining price.

“We are growing the Pheegyan banana by irrigating the water from Mae Zalee dam in Nyaung Pin Sauk Village from Pwintbyu Township. Pheegyan banana is more consumed banana than other kinds of banana. So, we earned a better price by growing Pheegyan. However, the sale of banana has declined in our township during the pandemic. So, the price of banana has decreased and we are also facing the loss,” said U Than Zaw Lin, a local Pheegyan banana grower from Nyaung Pin Sauk village from Pwintbyu Township.

Hotels in Bagan likely to reopen in first week of July

WITH the Bagan hotels following the guidelines of the Ministry of Health and Sports, they are likely to be permitted to resume operation in the first week of July, according to the Myanmar Hoteliers Associations—Bagan Zone.
About 150 hotels in Bagan are registered with the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism. Among them, 10 hotels have been scrutinized whether they have been following the rules and regulations prescribed by the Ministry of Health and Sports or not.
“The remaining hotels are still being checked. Then, we will submit a report to the regional government. We will resume the hotel operations after having permission from the regional government. Currently, there are no even local visitors in the Bagan region because there is no place to stay. Only one or two vehicles reached Bagan region,” said an official from Myanmar Hoteliers Associations.

When the hotels resume the operation in the Bagan region, the room rates will be discounted to 15 or 20 per cent.
On 3 June, the Ministry of Health and Sports issued the instructions for the hotels, motels and guesthouses to follow.
At present, the hotels across the country except for Chin State, Mandalay and Bago regions are reopened after scrutinizing by the authorities, according to the Ministry of Hotels and Tourism.

The Bagan heritage site also rarely sees visitors. The local tourism industry is hampered by the coronavirus pandemic and those engaged in local transport rental business (three-wheel, boat, horse-riding, car, e-bike, cycle, motorcycle), hotels and guesthouses, restaurants and souvenir shops are suffering from the coronavirus concerns.
Earlier, during the high season from November to April, Bagan is usually packed with local pilgrims and tourists.

They used to visit Bagan to observe the temples and stupas and view the sunset. The horse-riding business, motorcycle and electric bike rental business, hotels, motels, and guesthouses were earning well in the high season, along with souvenir business. Those businesses created jobs for residents.
The businesses relying on tourism are nearly closed amid coronavirus negative impacts.

FDI up over $1 bln in eight months (Oct-May)

By Nyein Nyein

THE inflow of foreign direct investments into Myanmar increased to over US$4.1 billion in the eight months of the current fiscal year 2019-2020, which was up by more than $1 billion compared to the corresponding period of the previous FY, according to the data released by the Directorate of Investment and Company Administration (DICA).

Between 1 October and 31 May, FDI of $4.102 billion flowed into the country, including the expansion of capital by existing enterprises. According to a press statement issued by the DICA, 178 foreign enterprises obtained permits from the Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) and endorsements from regional and state Investment Committees in the current fiscal.

In the year-ago period, FDI of $2.49 billion had flowed in from 170 enterprises. The number of permitted or endorsed enterprises this year was eight higher than last year. Additionally, the COVID-19 consequences have not affected the foreign investments, said DICA Director-General U Thant Sin Lwin.

The proposals submitted to MIC include CMP businesses. At present, such kind of labour-intensive enterprises is facing financial hardship, disputes between the employers and employees and the closure of factories. Yet, the sector remains attractive to foreign investors.

The manufacturing enterprises and businesses that need large labour force are prioritized. MIC is endeavouring to clear those kinds of projects so fast that they can start running after the coronavirus pandemic period, he continued.

Moreover, MIC showed readiness to accept the projects regarding the production of the mask, pharmaceuticals and medical equipment, in responding to the activities of prevention, control and treatment of coronavirus disease.

Myanmar targets to attract $5.8 billion of FDIs in the current fiscal year. The Ministry of Investment and Foreign Economic Relations is inviting responsible businesses so the country benefits, he said. The Myanmar Investment Promotion Plan (MIPP) was drawn up with the assistance of Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA), and it is being implemented. As per the MIPP, Myanmar aims to reach an FDI target of $200 billion in 20 years, stated Union Minister U Thaung Tun of Ministry of Investment and Foreign Economic Relations.

Grab agro export opportunities by shifting to modern farming

WHILE the COVID-19 crisis has disrupted the global supply chains, some countries are also impacted by supply shortages and trade restrictions.

Meanwhile, another kind of emergency— food insecurity— is threatening countries around the world.

In this situation, there may be opportunities for the export of Myanmar agricultural products, and we should now find a chance to grab export market shares of other countries.

At the moment, there are some barriers for our farmers in farming technology and post-harvest infrastructure, such as storage and distribution facilities to improve the quality of agricultural produce which is vital for grabbing the export market.

We need investments from the private sector to improve such ing value-added goods, modern production methods and storage facilities.

Modern processing machinery and technologies are beyond our farmers’ means.

Our country exports agricultural products, animal products, minerals, forest products, and finished industrial goods, whereas capital goods, raw industrial materials and consumer goods are imported into the country.

The country’s export sector is more dependent upon agriculture and industrial products from small and medium sized enterprises, while reducing its reliance on natural resources, such as natural gas and the mining of jade.

Our agriculture sector still depends on manual labour, but generates the lowest income per person. To grab the world’s market share in agricultural products and to create job opportunities in the farming sector, we need to shift from traditional to modern agricultural practices with the use of technology, and ICT – information and communications technology for production and marketing. This will ensure that a new generation returns to the farmland.

Agriculture remains a necessary sector forever for the world. Hence, if we take the advantages brought about by the changes happening in the world, we can boost our economy while supplying food to the needy places in the world.

THE WORLD ECONOMY

CORONAVIRUS ECONOMIC DOWNTURN

COVID-19 pandemic drives broadest economic collapse in 150 years: World Bank

THE coronavirus pandemic inflicted a "swift and massive shock" that has caused the broadest collapse of the global economy since 1870 despite unprecedented government support, the World Bank said Monday.

The world economy is expected to contract by 5.2% this year – the worst recession since 1945-46 as World War II spending dried up – but the sheer number of countries suffering economic losses means the scale of the downturn is worse than any crisis in the last 150 years, the World Bank said in its latest Global Economic Prospects report.

That will push 70 million to 100 million people into extreme poverty, more than the bank's prior estimate of 60 million.

The World Bank said that advanced economies are expected to shrink 7% in 2020, while emerging market economies will contract 2.5%, their first decline since aggregate data became available in 1960.

For the U.S., the updated World Bank forecast is for the gross domestic product (GDP) to fall 7% this year, before growing 3.9% in 2021. That estimate is similar to top forecasters for the National Association for Business Economics who forecast a 5.9% drop for the U.S. this year.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) in April projected a drop in global output of 3% this year but it is expected that figure will be lowered when the IMF releases its forecast update in the coming weeks.

For China, the world's second-largest economy, the World Bank forecast growth will slow this year to a barely discernible 1% but rebound to 6.9% in 2021. For the 19 European countries who use the euro currency, the World Bank projected a drop of 9.1% this year followed by growth of 4% next year.

World Bank economists cautioned that their forecast was based on an assumption that the worst of the coronavirus outbreak was coming to an end and economies would pick up fairly quickly once governments begin to reopen.

If there is a second wave of the virus that disrupts economic activity later this year, then growth will fall even farther and the rebound next year will be weaker, the World Bank analysts said. SOURCE: AFP

DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION OF BANKS

The Number of Banking Executives Saying New Technologies Will Drive Global Banking Rises by 57% in a Year, Reveals Economist Intelligence Unit Report Released by Temenos

■ Two-thirds (66%) of banking executives say new technologies will continue to drive global banking in the next 5 years compared to 42% in 2019

■ AI will separate winners from losers, say 77% of bankers surveyed during COVID-19

■ 84% of bankers believe that DevOps and modern cloud platforms will drive core banking transformation

■ Nearly half (45%) of global banking executives are set on transforming their business models into digital ecosystems to enhance customer experience and create new revenue streams

■ This global, independent report, now in its seventh year, surveys over 300 senior banking executives, 49% of whom are C-suite

Credit Suisse is a leading global wealth manager with strong investment banking capabilities. Headquartered in Zurich, Switzerland. PHOTO: AFP

Two-thirds of banking executives believe that new technologies such as AI, machine learning will continue to have the greatest impact on the global banking sector in the next five years, according to a global survey conducted by the Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) on behalf of Temenos (SIX: TEMN), the banking software company. The new report “Forging new frontiers: advanced technologies will revolutionize banking” highlights that COVID-19 is likely to accelerate the digital transformation of banks, which already face intense competition from payment players, Big Tech and e-commerce firms. The report trends will be discussed on the webinar ‘The Future of Digital Banking: Revolution Accelerated’ on 25 June, with the CEO and Founder of Varo Money, the EIU and Temenos.

With COVID-19 accelerating the digitization of banking, 45% of banking respondents say their strategic response is to build a ‘true digital ecosystem’ and integrate their self-built digital services and third-party offerings. AI will undoubtedly play a key role in accelerating this digital shift. Over three-quarters (77%) of respondents agree that unlocking value from Artificial Intelligence (AI) will be a key differentiator between winning and losing banks. And improving user experience through greater personalization ranked highest (28%) among the most valuable uses for AI. The focus is shifting towards enterprise agility with DevOps, which brings together software development and IT operations using modern cloud-based platforms. In fact, 84% of respondents agree that DevOps will drive transformation in core banking, while 81% of banking executives believe a multi-cloud strategy will become a regulatory pre-requisite. The primary focus of banks’ technology investment is on cybersecurity (35%), followed by developing AI platforms such as digital advisors and voice assisted engagement channels (33%), and cloud-based technologies (27%).

Max Chuard, Chief Executive Officer, Temenos, said: “Banks were under huge pressure due to new competitors, ongoing regulation and slowing profit growth – these pressures have intensified as a result of the pandemic. The report highlights that senior banking executives believe that new technologies such as AI will have the greatest impact in banking in the coming years. As the digitization of banking continues, these new technologies can help banks fend off competitors and gain competitive advantage.

“Temenos’ cloud-advanced, AI technology and rich banking functionality can help banks deliver value to their customers in the immediate term and accelerate their digital transformation to build sustainable growth in the future. Trends toward digital banking, cloud and SaaS models will only become more pronounced – in the new normal, the need for modern banking technology will be greater than ever.” Pete Swabey, Editorial Director EMEA - Thought Leadership, The Economist Intelligence Unit, added: “Retail, corporate and private banks were already under pressure to deploy new technologies quickly and change their cultures in order to compete with big tech firms and payment players and deliver an engaging digital experience. Now, as digital banking surges as a result of the coronavirus crisis, this task is more pressing than ever.”

About the survey

Now in its seventh year, the Economist Intelligence Unit report includes for the first time respondents from commercial and private banks, alongside retail banks. The EIU surveyed 305 global banking executives throughout February and March 2020 about the challenges banks are facing relating to the digitization of the sector; and the strategies they are deploying in response. Almost half of respondents (49%) were at C-Suite level. Respondents came from Europe (25%), North America (24%), Asia-Pacific (18%), Africa and the Middle East (16%), and Latin America (17%).

Japan, Britain begin trade negotiations with eye on deal this year

TOKYO—Japan and Britain formally began negotiations Tuesday on a free trade agreement, aiming to clinch a deal by the end of the year when the transition period for the United Kingdom’s exit from the European Union concludes. The countries will build on an existing Japan-European Union deal, with Tokyo looking to scrap auto tariffs while London has said it wants benefits for its financial services and textile industries.

Foreign Minister Toshimitsu Motegi kicked off the talks in a videoconference with Liz Truss, the British trade secretary. Britain departed from the European Union in January and is in trade negotiations with dozens of countries. It is eager to make deals before the end of the year, after which it will no longer be included in the bloc’s arrangements.

The Japan-European Union free trade agreement entered into force in February last year, removing or lowering tariffs on agricultural products such as wine and cheese from Europe while scrapping the 10 per cent tariff on Japanese automobiles in its eighth year and immediately removing those on auto parts.—Kyodo ■

New York starts reopening as WHO says virus ‘worsening’ worldwide

NEW YORK—New York City—the epicentre of America’s coronavirus outbreak—began partially reopening its shattered economy Monday after almost three months of lockdown, as the World Health Organization warned the health crisis was “worsening” worldwide.

Some 400,000 New Yorkers were allowed to return to work as retailers began offering limited in-store and curbside pickup, with construction and manufacturing also permitted to resume operations. “It’s good to be back,” said Michael Ostergren, manager of the Shakespeare and Co bookshop on Manhattan’s

Upper West Side, where a trickle of customers arrived shortly after the doors reopened. “Everybody wants to be out of the house. We’re just picking up where we left off in March,” he added. As New York entered phase one of its reopening and some of Europe’s hardest-hit nations lurched back to a new kind of normal, the WHO reported a record number of new cases globally. Director-general Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said 136,000 cases had been reported in the past 24 hours, “the most in a single day so far,” with the majority of them in the Americas and South Asia.—AFP ■

Cathay Pacific unveils US$5 billion bailout

HONG KONG - Troubled
Hong Kong airline Cathay
Pacific announced a HK$39 billion ($5 billion) government-led bailout plan on Tuesday as it battles a crippling downturn caused by the coronavirus.
Like many carriers hammered by the crisis, the company has seen passenger numbers evaporate in recent months, leaving most of its fleet sitting on the tarmac and the firm haemorrhaging cash.
The airline was already under pressure after taking a hit from months of sometimes violent protests in Hong Kong last year that saw tourism battered.
On Tuesday the carrier announced a sweeping proposal to inject liquidity and keep it afloat with the help of Hong Kong's government, which will take a small stake in the UK's Johnson says will not ignore anger over racial injustice

LONDON— The toppling of a statue of a slave trader has reignited demands for the removal of other monuments to Britain's colonial past, with further protests planned on Tuesday, as Prime Minister Boris Johnson acknowledged anger at racial injustice.

Calls have mounted across the country for a reassessment of the way historical figures are portrayed in public spaces, as part of a wider debate about inequality and prejudice.

Britain has seen days of protests sparked by the death in police custody of George Floyd, an unarmed black man, in the United States.

Johnson said he understood the "depth of emotion" triggered by Floyd's death and the anger from black and ethnic minority groups about discrimination in education, employment and law.

"We who lead and who govern simply can't ignore those feelings because in too many cases, I am afraid, they will be founded on a cold reality," he said in a video message Monday.

But he warned he would not tolerate violence, after clashes in central London near his Downing Street office left 35 police officers injured and public monuments vandalized.

Instead, he urged those who wanted change to "stand for election, or vote for someone who will".

Uncomfortable truth

On Sunday, protesters defaced a central London monument to World War II leader Winston Churchill, citing policies blamed for the death of millions during famine in the Indian state of Bengal in 1943.

In the southwestern city of Bristol, crowds toppled a statue of 17th century trader Edward Colston, who helped build the city but played a leading role in slavery.

Years of local debate over what to do with the statue came to an end when it was thrown in the harbour — an act that has stirred debate about other historical monuments.

In Glasgow, activists pasted the names of civil rights leaders and victims of racist attacks on streets named after tobacco and sugar traders in the 18th and 19th centuries.— AFP

Virus puts brakes on Salvini's far-right message in Italy

ROME — Matteo Salvini, the leader of Italy's far right, has seen his popularity drop as the coronavirus pandemic has drowned out his anti-immigrant message, but his League party remains a potent threat to the government.

The big man with the beard is much less visible in the media after being almost omnipresent last year, until he brought his own coalition government down in a botched bid to become prime minister.

The then-deputy prime minister and interior minister collapsed the League's coalition with the anti-establishment Five Star Movement (M5S) in a power grab that turned into a major tactical blunder.

His former M5S allies instead in September formed a government with the centre-left Democratic Party (PD), sending Salvini into his more habitual role in opposition.—AFP

Ahead of vote, virus emboldens Serbian president's one-man show

BELGRADE — An excuse to dominate the airwaves, sideline the opposition and cast himself as a saviour: President Aleksandar Vucic has emerged from the coronavirus crisis stronger than ever as he looks to extend his vice-like grip on Serbia's troubled democracy.

After flattening the infection curve and capping deaths at around 250, the Balkan state of seven million is now rapidly emerging from lockdown in time for general elections on June 21.

In political terms, the relatively low toll has paid off handsomely for a man at the apex of Serbian politics.

Vucic's popularity enjoyed a remarkable rise as infections fell following their peak in March.

Under quarantine, critics took to their balconies to bang pots in protest at the government, but the movement fizzled out after the lockdown was lifted.

In April, nearly half the public said they put their trust in him alone — a record since Ipsos started polling in Serbia more than 20 years ago.

With the opposition splintered, and some planning to boycott the ballot, Vucic's Serbian Progressive party (SNS) was already well positioned to extend its eight-year rule.—AFP

German FM to visit Israel as West Bank annexation looms

BERLIN — German Foreign Minister Heiko Maas will travel to Jerusalem on Wednesday, with Israel intent on toning down Europe's reaction to its annexation plans in the occupied West Bank.

Maas is the first foreign dignitary to visit since Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu formed a coalition government with his election rival Benny Gantz, although US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo had visited just days before the May 17 swearing-in.

Israel could take initial steps to annex its West Bank settlements and the Jordan Valley as soon as July 1, the same day Germany takes the rotating European Union presidency.

The EU opposes the move, which forms part of a US peace initiative, and argues it would contravene international law.

The Washington plan was unveiled in January and paves the way for the eventual creation of a Palestinian state, but it has been rejected by the Palestinians who were not consulted on proposals they see as capitulating to Israeli demands.

While Israeli officials are unlikely to change Europe's anti-annexation stance, they see Maas's visit as a chance to at least soften its response.—AFP

Part of China’s Great Wall not built for war — study

JERUSALEM — The northern segment of the Great Wall of China was built not to block invading armies but rather to monitor civilian movement, an Israeli archaeologist said Tuesday.

When researchers fully mapped the Great Wall’s 740-kilometre (460-mile) Northern Line for the first time, their findings challenged previous assumptions.

“Prior to our research, most people thought the wall’s purpose was to stop Genghis Khan’s army,” said Gideon Shelach-Lavi from Jerusalem’s Hebrew University, who led the two-year study.

But the Northern Line, lying mostly in Mongolia, winds through valleys, is relatively low in height and close to paths, pointing to non-military functions.

“Our conclusion is that it was more about monitoring or blocking the movement of people and livestock, maybe to tax them,” Shelach-Lavi said.

He suggested people may have been seeking warmer southern pastures during a medieval cold spell. Construction of the Great Wall, which is split into sections that in total stretch for thousands of kilometres, first began in the third century BC and continued for centuries.

The Northern Line, also known as “Genghis Khan’s Wall” in reference to the legendary Mongolian conqueror, was built between the 11th and 13th centuries with pounded earth and dotted with 72 structures in small clusters.

Shelach-Lavi and his team of Israeli, Mongolian and American researchers used drones, high-resolution satellite images and traditional archaeological tools to map out the wall and find artefacts that helped pin down dates. According to Shelach-Lavi, whose findings from the ongoing study were published in the journal Antiquity, the Northern Line has been largely overlooked by contemporary scientists.—AFP ■

Nepali police clash with lockdown demonstrators

KATHMANDU — Police fired water cannon at about 500 people who staged a demonstration in Kathmandu on Tuesday against the Nepali government’s handling of the coronavirus crisis.

Protesters, carrying banners reading “enough is enough”, demanded better testing and quarantine facilities for returning migrant workers and greater transparency in government spending.

Ten demonstrators who gathered near the prime minister’s residence were arrested, police said.

Nepal imposed a nationwide lockdown on March 24 when the country had two confirmed coronavirus infections. The number of cases currently stands at 3,762 with 14 deaths. “The economy is in shambles, the government has pushed our health and the health system in crisis and they have been ineffective and incapable,” Jagannath Lamichhane, a mental health expert who took part in the protest, told AFP.

Tens of thousands of migrant workers have returned to Nepal from India and the Middle East after losing their jobs, overwhelming testing and quarantine facilities in border areas.

“The government had time and could have prepared much better. We were there to call on the government to do better,” photographer Prajwal Bhattarai, 29, who was among those arrested, told AFP by telephone.

Death toll rises to 18 in Pakistan building collapse

KARACHI (Pakistan)—The death toll from a building collapse in Karachi rose to at least 18 on Tuesday, with the final count expected to increase further, Pakistani officials said.

The five-storey residential building housing about 40 apartments collapsed Sunday in the Lyari neighbourhood of southern Karachi. Officials say about 30 people were home at the time.

Authorities initially put the death toll at seven but on Tuesday, an additional 11 bodies were found in the debris. “So far, 18 bodies have been recovered,” Sharjeel Kharal, the police chief for Karachi’s western district, told AFP. Muqaddas Haider, a senior police official, confirmed the toll and said six injured people had been rescued so far.

Roof and building collapses are common across Pakistan mainly because of poor safety standards and shoddy construction materials in the South Asian country of about 215 million people. In March, more than two dozen people died in a different Karachi neighbourhood when their apartment building collapsed. Regulators in the port city have earmarked about 150 residential and office buildings as dangerous and told residents to leave.

“We had issued notices to the residents of this building too as it was not worthy of living in,” said Ali Mehdi, a senior official with the local building authority.—AFP ■

TOKYO — The confirmed COVID-19 cases in Japan increased by 44 to reach 17,267, according to the latest figures from the health ministry and local authorities on Tuesday.

The number excludes the 712 cases from the Diamond Princess cruise ship that was quarantined in Yokohama near Tokyo. Meanwhile, the death toll in Japan from the pneumonia-causing virus currently stands at a total of 933 people, according to the health ministry, with the figure including those from the cruise ship.

Last Tuesday, the Tokyo metropolitan government issued what Governor Yuriko Koike has called a “Tokyo alert” to warn against possible COVID-19 resurgence, about a week after the state of emergency was lifted for the metropolis.—Xinhua ■

Cambodia to probe Thai democracy activist’s alleged disappearance

PHNOM PENH — Cambodian police said Tuesday they will investigate the alleged disappearance of a self-exiled Thai activist, denying any involvement in what a rights group claimed was an abduction.

Pro-democracy activist Wanchalearm Satsksit, a sharp critic of the Thai government, was dragged into a car in broad daylight last week in the Cambodian capital Phnom Penh, according to Human Rights Watch, which cited witnesses and security camera footage.

“I would like to confirm that Cambodian authorities and police did not arrest that individual,” National Police spokesman Chhay Kim Khoeun told AFP, as fears mounted about the activist’s safety.

“We are launching an investigation into it... it’s not clear yet at what level this information (about his disappearance) is true.”—AFP ■

Sterling calls for more black managers in football

LONDON -- Manchester City star Raheem Sterling has urged English football to use the global anti-racism protests to initiate debates and find solutions regarding the lack of black representation in top leadership positions in the sport. Calling for racial justice, thousands of protesters have rallied across the UK, joining a wave of demonstrations sparked by the death of African American George Floyd at the hands of US police last month. England forward Sterling, who has previously been prominent in calling out racism in both the domestic and international game, is the latest sports star to lend his support to the protests.

"The protest is a great starting point, to make your voice be heard. But just protesting alone is not going to make a change in this country," Sterling said Monday in a BBC TV interview. "It's how we move on from here. It's about highlighting things, the society that needs changing, and then acting upon it. We've done a lot of talking, and it's time now to act."

"This is a time to speak on these subjects, speak on injustice, especially in my field," he added. Sterling pointed a finger at the long-running disparity between the number of high-profile Black, Asian and minority ethnic players and the dearth of those who go on to hold significant managerial, coaching or administrative jobs.—AFP ■

Bayern Munich target double repeat with Goretzka at the fore

BERLIN — Bayern Munich can take another step towards repeating last season's German league and cup double on Wednesday, with midfielder Leon Goretzka a player transformed since the coronavirus shutdown.

Bayern host Eintracht Frankfurt behind closed doors in the semi-finals of the German Cup, three days before they could conceivably wrap up an eight successive Bundesliga title.

Hansi Flick's side have won all five games since the league resumed last month following the coronavirus suspension, including a 5-2 rout of Wednesday's opponents Frankfurt.

Germany international Goretzka has been at the heart of Bayern's impressive displays, notching two goals and three assists since the restart.

"I feel very good at the moment," said Goretzka, who set up a goal for Kingsley Coman and then scored himself in Saturday's 4-2 win at Bayer Leverkusen.

The 25-year-old said he made the most of the unscheduled break to spend more time in the gym, giving Bayern extra muscle in midfield alongside the likes of Joshua Kimmich and Thiago Alcantara. "I haven't lost any speed, quite the opposite," said Goretzka, cited by Flick as the catalyst behind Bayern's comeback win at Leverkusen last weekend.

"Leon was instrumental. With his physique, he has a huge presence on the pitch," said Flick.

"He set the tone that you need in a team when things are not going so well. He did that brilliantly."

Frankfurt upset Bayern in the 2018 German Cup final with a 3-1 victory in Berlin, but the Bavarians have already beaten Eintracht home and away in the league this season.—AFP ■

'Turbo Timo' Werner gives new-look Chelsea goal threat

LONDON — When Timo Werner seals his imminent move from RB Leipzig to Chelsea, the German's turbulent rise from national pariah to one of Europe's most feared forwards will be complete.

Chelsea are willing to meet the 60 million euro (£53 million, $67 million) release clause in Werner's contract despite the economic crisis caused by coronavirus.

But for the pandemic, Werner could have been lining up for Liverpool next season after the 24-year-old admitted to being flattered by Jurgen Klopp's interest.

However, Liverpool, concerned by the financial fallout from the virus, were not willing to pay Werner's release clause before it expired this month.

So instead Chelsea are set to add some much-needed firepower to Frank Lampard's revamped attack next season.

The Germany international has scored 31 goals for Leipzig in all competitions this season, including four in five games since the Bundesliga returned last month.

Werner has already proved he can trouble Premier League defences. He played an influential role as Leipzig thrashed Tottenham in the Champions League last 16, bagging the only goal of the first leg from the penalty spot.

Michael Ballack knows exactly what it takes to shine in the Premier League after leaving Germany and the former Chelsea and Bayern Munich midfielder believes Werner has the qualities required to adapt to English football.

"I think it's a good decision for both sides.

For Timo, because he fits there, because the way (Chelsea) play football suits him," Ballack said.

"He is a robust player, is very fast, but he is also physically good in a duel and he will quickly get used to it."
