I have learnt that our citizens in Yangon have started to wear their masks again. This is in a way producing excellent results. Only now some people realize to be vigilant. I want Yangon to be extremely careful. I have estimated that the infection spread happened from 16 August; after that, I have heard that there were some people who went from Sittway to Yangon by plane. If that type of incident has occurred, please contact the nearest health centre. After contacting this, please participate in a tracking interview where you will be asked where you have been and where you have travelled. If needed, they will give you medical treatment immediately.

ministered zone in 2019-2020 financial year, said U Win Hlaing Oo, regional head from the Agriculture Department.

“The department is sharing the growing method and protection method of the crops. Also, the department is providing

Myanmar to import over 3 mln broiler chicks from Thai in 4 months

TO fulfil domestic needs, Myanmar targeted to import 3.79 million broiler chicks from Thailand in September as a monthly temporary project, under which the import has been conducted starting from June, according to Myanmar Livestock Federation (MLF).
“Because of the coronavirus outbreak in April and May, the local broiler chicken breeders dropped the production of chicken because of decreasing demand. The COVID-19 outbreak is not worse in the country, and broiler poultry businesses are re-operated again. So, we have market demand, and we are planning to import the broiler chicks from Thailand,” said MLF Vice-Chairman (3) Dr Nay Thurein.

The country will import 1.7 million broiler chicks for the third time from Thailand in one and a half months from 15 August to 30 September.
“The broiler chicks are imported nationwide. Myanmar imported 920,000 broiler chicks between 15 June and 15 July for the first time and 1.8 million broiler chicks between 15 July and 15 August for the second time. Now, the country targeted to import 1.7 million chicks for the third time from 15 August to 30 September. Later on, there will be sufficient supply of the broiler chicken in the country. Before that, we have to import them from other countries,” he added.

The broiler chicks are imported from Thailand through the border areas because of the temporary suspension of airlines. In June, the chicken price has increased to K5,000 per viss from K4,000 per viss. These days, the chickens are sold for only K2,700 per viss in Yangon market and K3,100 per viss in Mandalay market. The production costs K2,800 per viss. With the increase of import volume of chicken in Yangon market, the price of chicken has reached below the production cost. Myanmar will ease the import volume of the chicks from Thailand after raising the domestic chicken production, he added.

“The broiler chicks cost around K700 per chicken. There are poultry farms in Yangon and Mandalay regions. The chicks are also distributed to other poultry farms in other states and regions. Later, the local incubators will be able to produce nearly 100 per cent to meet the local chick demand,” he added.
The country produces 18 million chickens per month, mainly from Yangon and Mandalay.—Htet Htar Naing

Canada economy takes record plunge but outlook bright

CANADA'S economy shrank at a record pace in the second quarter but by the end of the period showed signs of a rapid recovery from the pandemic trauma that forced businesses to close and put millions out of work.

At the same time, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's government ran up a Can$120 billion (US$90 billion) budget deficit doling out emergency aid to Canadians, compared to a shortfall of Can$85 million during the same period last year.

The economy contracted 11.5 per cent, or at an annualized pace of 38.7 per cent, in the three months ending June 30, the government statistical agency said Friday.

Declines were recorded across the board amid a nationwide lockdown including in consumer spending, business investment, trade and tourism — in line with analyst forecasts, following a 2.1 percent (8.2 per cent annualized) contraction of Canada's gross domestic product (GDP) in the first quarter.

After steep declines at the height of the COVID-19 outbreak in April and May, however, GDP surged 6.5 per cent in June.

And preliminary data for July forecast a three per cent rise in GDP. Economists said this suggests the worst is over for the Canadian economy.

"It was a quarter to forget for Canada's economy," commented CIBC analyst Royce Mendes in a research note.

The drop in GDP, he said, was of "a magnitude never before seen... and was likely the worst performance since the Great Depression."

But, he added, "things were looking up by the end of the second quarter" with "solid momentum" continuing into July.

Mendes also noted that Canadians' disposable income actually grew in the period as emergency government support more than offset a drag from a jump in unemployment.

That drove the household savings rate up to 28 per cent, from seven per cent, "potentially leaving some extra cash for spending in upcoming periods," he said. — AFP ■

Ireland's pubs to stay shut

IRELAND'S acting chief medical officer announced on Thursday that pubs which do not serve food would not be allowed to reopen on 31 August as previously planned. Around half of Ireland's 7,000 pubs will be affected by the extended restrictions.

The news comes as health officials try to curb the virus, amid a rising infection rate of 33 per 100,000 people. The establishments have been closed since March in Europe's longest lockdown for pubs. — AFP ■

Peru extends coronavirus state of emergency

PERU on Friday extended its national emergency until September 30 and prolonged a lockdown in some of the areas worst affected by the coronavirus, the government said.

The South American country has one of the worst death rates in the world from Covid-19 with 86 fatalities per 100,000 people.

"The national emergency that was planned until the end of August... is prolonged for the whole month of September," Prime Minister Walter Martos said.

This week Peru overtook Belgium to sit second only to the tiny European state of San Marino as the country with the highest death rate in the world.

Peru has recorded more than 620,000 cases and 28,000 deaths among its 33 million population.

In Latin America, it's second only to Brazil in terms of total infections, and trails Brazil and Mexico in deaths. The departments of Cusco, Moquegua, Puno and Tacna will remain in lockdown, as they have been since Peru started lifting restrictions in the rest of the country, including the capital Lima, from July 1.

Only stores selling basic necessities, such as food and medicine, can open.

The country's borders remain closed and the nighttime curfew in force since March 16 has been extended.

Social and family gatherings remain banned throughout the country and a Sunday curfew is still in place. — AFP ■

Profit out of loss – unity is for the fight against COVID

RECENTLY, an added tally or a record high in the coronavirus-confirmed cases in Myanmar has indicated that we all need to tightly roll up our sleeves in bravely and collaboratively combatting what is now called the pandemic second wave. Sadly, everyone has to endure seeing losses almost everywhere across the globe hardly battered by the deadly pathogen.

Governments around the world have firmly determined to tackle this global health issue since it emerged late last year. World nations have also imposed and enforced stringent restrictions upon their people in the hope of slowing down the pandemic spread in their respective regions as well as for saving their lives.

The World Health Organization has taken the leading role to instruct the people all over the world to follow an easy-to-understand set of rules that everyone has got accustomed to in this coronavirus era. We are now used to these simple guidelines in our daily routine: washing our hands for 20 seconds frequently, putting on face-coverings whenever we go out or in public places, distancing socially or physically with one another, no crowded gatherings any more during the pandemic, etc.

Myanmar Government has been sparing no effort, since early months of the year, to carry out the preventative and control measures to contain the infection spread all inclusive of the entire country and people based on the ‘No one left behind’ and ‘whole of the nation’ principles. Here, we would like to quote the State Counsellor saying: “No matter where an outbreak occurred, it concerned the whole Union. If there is a pain in any part of the country, it is a pin for the entire Union. That is the spirit in approaching COVID-related activities. There is no discrimination with regards to place”.

People participation is more and more of vital importance in the countermeasures against this global infectious disease over these days when we’re reading news stories of soaring cases not only in Myanmar but also in our neighbouring Asian countries as well. Regional governments should be cooperative in curbing the pandemic danger. Likewise, people should be more and more cohesive in such a time of importance to protect others while protecting oneself from the virus infection.

As we all are aware, no doubt this lethal pathogen impacts global people socially, politically, and economically as well as in many and varied different ways of people’s daily routines. People suffer losses. However, we can gain profit at least out of our significant losses if and when we shall be more united and cohesive than ever in fighting back the new coronavirus pandemic out of our earth.

Fighting two pandemics hand in hand in Asia and the Pacific

Ending hunger and poverty amid COVID-19 impacts will require leveraging agricultural technology, innovation and partnerships

By QU Dongyu, Director-General of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

GLOBAL hunger has been on a regrettable rise in recent years, and despite Asia’s economic clout, the continent – home to more than half of the world’s undernourished – has not been spared. Now COVID-19 is leading to a slow-down of regional economic growth and further threatening food security.

Southern Asia is particularly vulnerable, with the number of chronically underfed people projected to rise by almost a third to 330 million by 2030. It is also the only subregion in the world, where more than half the children from the poorest fifth of society are stunted, a condition that prejudices their futures. But there are challenges all around: The Pacific Island States have the world’s highest child wasting rates, and East Asia has the world’s highest absolute costs for a healthy diet – one that goes beyond mere calorie counts to offer balanced nutrition. On top of that, Asia and the Pacific is the region where obesity and overweight, for children and adults, are growing faster than anywhere else.

We are facing two pandemics. COVID-19, which beyond its health toll is crushing livelihoods, and hunger, a scourge the international community pledged to eradicate by the end of this decade – the Sustainable Development Goal 2.

Tackling them will require new ideas and more robust political will. Past progress was sustained by the benign trickle-down effects of strong economies. This is not the case anymore.

The facts have changed, and so must our minds.

We need to find ways to increase resilience across our food systems by identifying new marketing channels (like e-commerce), increasing efficiency to reduce losses, improve the quality of products available and storage facilities, which are critical to flows of healthy foods and income to those who produce them. Inclusive access to finance to strengthen and expand rural supply chains is also crucial.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) has recently launched a new comprehensive COVID-19 Response and Recovery Programme to provide an agile and coordinated global response aimed at ensuring access to nutritious food for everyone by mobilizing all forms of resources and partnerships at country, regional and global level. In line with the UN agenda to “build back better”, and in pursuit of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), the new comprehensive COVID-19 Response and Recovery Programme aims to mitigate the immediate impacts of the pandemic while strengthening the longer-term resilience of food systems and livelihoods.

So we are making headway, but we must, as a priority, attend to the most urgent issues at the very source by enabling farmers to be more dynamic, entrepreneurial and competitive through continual innovation.

We need smallholder farmers to produce nutritious foods, without fear of crop failures, and we need to get those foods to the mouths of the hungry across the region and beyond. To do this, smallholders desperately need access to financial resources, technology and innovation. We also need to educate people on the importance of healthy diets, so that farmers will have a solid base of demand to whom they can market those foods.

The Asia-Pacific region is as dynamic as it is large. It has some of the best agricultural scientists, institutions and innovative ideas. From Australia, New Zealand and the Pacific to China, India, Japan, South Korea, Singapore and virtually every country in between, innovators are proving that everyone can benefit from new technologies and science.

Examples range from deploying drones to monitor flood and pest risks, smartphone apps that can identify plant diseases, advanced genetics that build on crop and livestock breeding, precision agriculture and aquaculture systems that conserve natural resources such as water, indoor farming and consumer tools for nutrition monitoring and smart purchasing.

There is no time to waste. Everyone needs to lend a hand: governments, academia, the private sector, UN agencies, civil society organizations, international financial institutions and the people who bring us the food we eat – the smallholders. And our hands need to be working in unison to overcome pandemics that by definition affect and involve everyone.

FAO has rolled out the Hand-in-Hand Initiative to tackle these collective challenges, and the FAO Regional Conference for Asia and the Pacific, which will be virtually hosted by Bhutan (1-4 September), is the perfect opportunity for forty-six Members and other partners to forge ways to expedite action and leverage resources.

By working together, learning together and contributing together, we can overcome both pandemics and transform the agri-food system.

CORONAVIRUS HEALTH MEASURES

For Covid-19, what is ‘safe distancing’? It depends...

ONE metres or two? Or is it six? When it comes to coronavirus social distancing, there is no single rule of thumb, researchers cautioned this week in a study.

Indoors or outside; the velocity and pattern of air flows; whether one is whispering, shouting or sneezing; air conditioning or open windows; duration of exposure; whether one is wearing a mask -- all of these elements will determine how far is far enough when it comes to steering clear of Covid-19 infection.

“Rigid safe distancing rules are an oversimplification based on outdated science and experiences of past viruses,” said lead author Nicholas Jones, a researcher at Saint Thomas Hospital in London.

“Instead of single, fixed physical distance rules, we propose graded recommendations that better reflect the multiple factors that combine to determine risk.”

Around the world, living with Covid-19 has become a reality.

A widely available vaccine is months away at best, and the number of cases is on the rise again in many countries that had succeeded in bringing the epidemic under control.

But governments at all levels -- eager to avoid the lockdowns that devastated their economies -- are looking for ways to fine-tune policy responses in a middle ground.

On Thursday, for example, France’s prime minister -- flanked by his ministers of education and health -- outlined new measures that included mandatory mask wearing in Paris and its immediate suburbs, among other regions.

Previously, masks had been obligatory only in public transport, shops, and public buildings.

From the earliest days of the pandemic, experts have sharply debated what constitutes “safe” social distancing.

The World Health Organization (WHO) recommends “maintaining at least one metre (three feet) distance between yourself and others,” and many national health authorities have issued similar guidelines.

But experiments conducted in recent months suggest this may still be too close for comfort, at least in some circumstances.

“Eight out of 10 studies in a recent systematic review showed horizontal projection of respiratory droplets beyond two metres for particles up to 60 microns,” Jones and colleagues noted in the BMJ, a medical journal.

In one study, droplets that could contain live virus were detected more than six metres from the source, a distance consistent with sneezing, coughing or vigorous singing.

These findings could explain the case of a choir practice in the United States in which a person carrying the SARS-CoV-2 virus infected 32 other singers -- with 20 other likely cases -- despite physical distancing.

Sports clubs, boxing or martial arts gyms, churches, call centres are all places where people sing, pant or talk loudly.

Interestingly, there have been few ‘super-spreader’ incidents on commercial flights, perhaps because people don’t talk much and are more likely to be wearing masks, the authors speculated.

“Rigid safe distancing rules are an oversimplification based on outdated science and experiences of past viruses,” a study concluded. PHOTO: AFP

How far a virus might spread in an indoor setting is also determined by whether the air in a room is ventilated with open windows or recirculated with an air conditioning system.

The density of occupation is likewise key.

US now says asymptomatic people don't need virus test after exposure

AFTER previously encouraging people without Covid-19 symptoms to get tested if they have been exposed to someone diagnosed with the virus, US health authorities have abruptly reversed their position without a clear explanation.

The changes in guidance were quietly made to the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) website on Monday amid US media reports of political interference from the White House.

President Donald Trump has repeatedly said that the US should do less testing, and blamed testing for making it appear as though the country is doing poorly against the pandemic.

This is not true: though the US is testing at a high level, that is because its outbreak is worse than any other country in the world, with more than 5.8 million confirmed cases and almost 180,000 deaths.

The CDC's site previously said: "Testing is recommended for all close contacts of persons with SARS-CoV-2 infection."

"Because of the potential for asymptomatic and pre-symptomatic transmission, it is important that contacts of individuals with SARS-CoV-2 infection be quickly identified and tested."

The site now says: "If you have been in close contact (within 6 feet) of a person with a COVID-19 infection for at least 15 minutes but do not have symptoms, you do not necessarily need a test unless you are a vulnerable individual or your health care provider or State or local public health officials recommend you take one."

Fauci critical

In a call with reporters, senior health department official Brett Giroir said, "The new guidelines are a CDC action.

Travellers wearing protective suits, facemasks, face shields and gloves walk past to the ride share area August 20, 2020 at Los Angeles International Airport in Los Angeles, California. PHOTO:

As always, guidelines received appropriate attention, consultation and input from (coronavirus) Task Force experts."

Giroir did not elaborate on what new evidence had led to the guidance.

But he said that the documents had been seen by other senior officials including the widely respected Anthony Fauci, who leads the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases.

Fauci later denied this, telling CNN: "I was under general anesthesia in the operating room and was not part of any discussion or deliberation regarding the new testing recommendations.

"I am concerned about the interpretation of these recommendations and worried it will give people the incorrect assumption that asymptomatic spread is not of great concern. In fact, it is," he added.

Fauci had surgery last Thursday to remove a vocal cord polyp.

The CDC has previously emphasized that between 40-50 per cent of people with Covid-19 are asymptomatic, and therefore getting tested is important to stop the spread of the virus.

Many other health experts also reacted with dismay.

"I still can't make sense of CDCgov change in guidance," tweeted Leana Wen, a professor at George Washington University and former health commissioner of Baltimore.—AFP ■

Nation plunges into recession with historic slump

SWITZERLAND has plunged into recession after the coronavirus pandemic caused a "historic" 8.2-per-cent slump in economic activity in the second quarter, official figures showed Thursday.

"In the second quarter, Switzerland's GDP (gross domestic product) suffered the biggest decline since records of quarterly data began in 1980," the economic affairs ministry (SECO) said in a statement.

During the first quarter, the wealthy Alpine nation's economy shrank 2.5 per cent compared to the previous quarter, it said, revising the figure slightly from the 2.6 per cent announced in June.

Recession is defined as two consecutive quarters of contraction.

SECO pointed out that Switzerland was by no way unique, with the global economy also in sharp recession as the pandemic rages worldwide.

To date, more than 820,000 people have died out of the some 24 million infected globally by the novel coronavirus.

SECO stressed that in Switzerland, which has seen over 1,700 deaths and more than 40,000 cases, the "GDP decline remained limited in an international comparison."

During the second quarter, Switzerland saw manufacturing slump nine per cent, with growth in the country's sizeable pharmaceutical industry preventing a steeper decline.

Exports of goods, excluding precious metals and other valuables, plunged 9.4 per cent.

Switzerland's service sector was meanwhile hit hardest by the measures taken to contain the pandemic, it said, with accommodation and food services for example plummeting over 54 per cent.—AFP ■

Hotel and casino group MGM Resorts lays off 18,000

HOTEL and casino giant MGM Resorts on Friday said 18,000 furloughed employees in the United States would be permanently laid off as the hospitality industry struggles amid the coronavirus pandemic.

"Federal law requires companies to provide a date of separation for furloughed employees who are not recalled within six months," CEO Bill Hornbuckle said in a letter seen by AFP.

"Regrettably, August 31, marks the date of separation for thousands of MGM Resorts employees whom we have not yet been able to bring back."

The US has seen tens of millions of layoffs since Covid-19 broke out, with the wave peaking in late March but nonetheless still potent. In the week of August 22, the latest reported by the Labour Department, around one million people made new claims for unemployment benefits.

Bars, restaurants and hotels have been among the businesses hardest-hit by orders to close down to stop the disease's spread, and MGM closed all of its US properties on March 17, furloughing 62,000 of its 70,000 employees.

Parts of the US have lifted those restrictions and some MGM workers have returned to their jobs as their casinos and hotels have reopened, but in his letter Hornbuckle said "our industry — and country — continues to be impacted by the pandemic, and we have not returned to full operating capacity."—AFP ■

India battles black market in used gloves and masks

INDIAN police are battling a booming black market in used face masks and surgical gloves scavenged in some cases from hospital refuse tips, as people scramble for cheap coronavirus protection.

Police in the western city of Navi Mumbai said Friday that they seized from one gang 3.8 million pieces of refurbished single-use surgical gloves that were washed, dried and packed ready for sale.

“They sourced nearly 35 tonnes of used gloves from different hospitals and were preparing to sell it to dealers at throwaway prices,” investigating officer Subhash Nikam told AFP.

“They had managed to sell 6,000 to 10,000 pieces and were in touch with several buyers for the rest of the consignment,” he said.

The four accused are facing initial charges of cheating and endangering lives by spreading a communicable disease.

Demand for personal protection equipment has soared in the country of 1.3 billion people, which on Friday saw the official tally of coronavirus infections hit 3.4 million with over 60,000 deaths.

Many experts say that with India not testing enough people and many deaths not properly recorded, the real toll could be considerably higher. Several antibody tests have borne this out.

Coca-Cola to cut 4,000 jobs after Covid-19 hits Q2 profits

COCA-COLA announced Friday it will cut 4,000 jobs in North America as part of a reorganization following a rough second quarter in which Covid-19 slashed profits.

As sporting events, theatres and entertainment all shut down to stop the spread of the coronavirus, the beverage maker suffered a 32 per cent plunge in net income to $1.8 billion in the April-June period while sales fell 28 per cent to $7.2 billion.

The iconic American brand, that owns dozens of juice, water and soft drink labels, said it plans to cut down to nine business units from 17 currently, but will offer severance packages to employees costing between $350 million and $550 million.

OVER 6,000 NEW DAILY CASES IN FRANCE

Paris masks up as European leaders warn virus fight getting tougher

MASKS became compulsory outdoors all over Paris on Friday as France joined a growing global battle against new virus outbreaks, while Germany warned the crisis will be “more difficult” in the autumn and winter.

There has been a surge of infections in many countries as well as a rising global death toll, which now stands at more than 832,000.

In the worst-hit United States, where there are more than 180,000 fatalities, US President Donald Trump pledged to “crush” the virus with a vaccine by the end of the year.

The total number of declared cases has now topped 24.5 million since the virus first emerged in China almost nine months ago.

Announcing the new mask rules for Paris, French Prime Minister Jean Castex said Thursday there was an “undeniable resurgence” of the disease throughout the country.

“The epidemic is gaining ground, and now is the time to intervene.” On Thursday, official data showed 6,111 confirmed new cases in 24 hours nationwide, a record since the end of France’s lockdown in May, and French leaders said they cannot exclude out a new stay-at-home rule.

Masks were already compulsory on public transport, in enclosed public spaces, and outdoors in Paris in certain high-congestion areas around tourist sites.

‘Challenging’

In Berlin, German Chancellor Angela Merkel warned the battle against the virus is “likely to be more difficult over the next few months” as people start spending more time indoors.

She and state leaders agreed Thursday to toughen face mask rules and ban large events until the end of the year to combat rising case numbers in Germany blamed mainly on summer travel and private parties.

Austrian Chancellor Sebastian Kurz also warned of a “challenging” autumn and winter but predicted a return to “normal” next year.

He said the government would decide next week whether to further tighten measures.

The Spanish government said this week children as young as six will be required to cover their nose and mouth at school, while Britain reversed earlier guidance that pupils aged 11-18 did not need to wear masks.

South Korea also decided Friday to ramp up coronavirus curbs in the greater Seoul area, home to half the country’s 52 million people, as clusters grow.

Bhutan lifts tobacco ban due to coronavirus

The remote Himalayan kingdom of Bhutan, known for embracing gross national happiness and outlawing television until 1999, has now made the unusual decision to reverse a ban on the sale of tobacco, blaming coronavirus.

The decision comes even though smoking is considered a sin in the mostly Buddhist country, where a tobacco control law was first passed in 1729 and the plant is believed to have grown from the blood of a demoness.

The country of about 750,000 banned the sale, manufacture and distribution of tobacco in 2010 but allowed smokers to import controlled amounts of tobacco products after paying hefty duties and taxes – sparking a thriving black market for cigarettes smuggled over the border from India.

EU could sanction Turkey if no progress on Mediterranean crisis

EU diplomatic chief Josep Borrell said the bloc is steadfast in its support for member states Greece and Cyprus over the eastern Mediterranean. PHOTO: AFP

BRUSSELS — The EU on Friday warned Turkey it could face fresh sanctions -- including tough economic measures -- unless progress is made in reducing soaring tensions with Greece and Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean.

EU diplomatic chief Josep Borrell said the bloc wanted to give “a serious chance to dialogue” but was steadfast in its support for member states Greece and Cyprus in the crisis, which has raised fears of a military standoff.

A dispute over maritime borders and gas drilling rights has reignited the long-running rivalry between Athens and Ankara, with the two neighbours staging rival naval drills.

EU foreign ministers meeting for talks in Berlin agreed to a request from Cyprus to sanction more individuals for their role in Turkey’s exploratory drilling in waters claimed by the island.

Borrell urged Ankara to “abstain from unilateral actions” as a basic condition to allow dialogue -- which Germany is trying to broker -- to advance.

“We agreed that in the absence of progress in engaging Turkey we could develop a list of further restrictive measures that could be discussed at the European Council on September 24 and 25,” Borrell said after the talks.

Asked what these measures might entail, Borrell said sanctions could be extended to ships or other assets involved in the drilling, as well as prohibiting the use of EU ports and supplies and restricting “economic and financial infrastructure related with this activity”.

Riot in southern Sweden after anti-Muslim Danish leader banned

MALMO — Protesters threw stones at police and burned tyres in southern Sweden late on Friday, authorities said, hours after an anti-Muslim Danish politician was blocked from attending a Koran-burning rally nearby.

About 300 people were on the streets of Malmo with violence escalating as the evening wore on, according to police and local media.

The demonstration was connected to an incident earlier in the day in which protesters burned a copy of the Islamic holy book, police spokesman Rickard Lundqvist told Swedish tabloid Expressen.

Rasmus Paludan, who leads the far-right Danish anti-immigration party Hard Line, was due to travel to Malmo to speak at that event, which was being held on the same day as weekly prayers for the Muslim sabbath.

But authorities pre-empted Paludan’s arrival by announcing he had been banned from entering Sweden for two years. He was later arrested near Malmo.

“We suspect that he was going to break the law in Sweden,” Calle Persson, spokesman for the police in Malmo told AFP.

“There was also a risk that his behaviour... would pose a threat to society.”

But his supporters went ahead with the rally, and three people were then arrested for inciting racial hatred.

Paludan later put up a scathing message on Facebook.

“Sent back and banned from Sweden for two years. However, rapists and murderers are always welcome!” he wrote.

Paludan last year attracted media attention for burning a Koran wrapped in bacon - a meat that is anathema for Muslims.—AFP ■

Brazilian Supreme Court of Justice suspends Rio de Janeiro governor from office over alleged corruption

RIO DE JANEIRO -- The Brazilian Supreme Court of Justice (STJ) announced on Friday that it has suspended Rio de Janeiro Governor Wilson Witzel from office following reports of alleged corruption. According to the STJ, Witzel and eight people have been accused of involvement in a corruption scandal, including Witzel’s wife, Helena Witzel, and the former presidential candidate and current national president of the Social Christian Party (PSC), Pastor Everaldo Pereira.

The Attorney-General’s Office reported that Witzel and the eight others accused had created an alleged scheme to embezzle funds meant to aid in the state’s fight against the COVID-19 pandemic.

In May, Witzel and his wife were also the subjects of a police investigation into fraudulent contracts used in the construction of field hospitals. This operation resulted in the arrest of a former federal deputy and a businessman close to the Witzels.—AFP

Rome’s last Cinema Paradiso of porn confident of surviving coronavirus challenges

ROME — It survived the advent of DVDs and the internet era of instant gratification. Now Rome’s last remaining adult cinema says it is sure to also overcome its latest challenge as it grapples with coronavirus.

Discreetly tucked away between upmarket apartments and hotels, a stone’s throw from the Italian capital’s main train station, the “Ambasciatori” continues to show its vintage pornographic films to the delight of its customers.

In early March when Italy shuttered against the devastating pandemic, its movie houses closed too, and the Ambasciatori was no exception.

But after Rome eased its lockdown restrictions over the summer, the adult landmark once again opened for business with social distancing measures in place.

Outside its presence is advertised by a simple sign that says “Cine” (Cinema), but stepping inside, a red poster sets the tone -- “Sexy movie, adults only”.

It promises customers a selection of “cult productions” and the “best stars in the history of hard cinema”. “We will survive Covid,” Carlo, the Ambasciatori’s supervisor and cinema manager, tells AFP, declining to give his full name. “A lot of customers are calling us to find out when they can come back,” he adds. —AFP ■

Huge Indonesia mine resumes operations after lockdown protest

JAYAPURA — Operations have resumed at the world’s biggest gold mine in Indonesia, the company that runs it said Saturday, after workers blocked access to the site in protest at being stopped from visiting their families over virus concerns.

The miners at the Grasberg complex in the country’s easternmost Papua region reached an agreement with the US-based operator Freeport, which said it would resume bus services for workers to return home. This week more than 1,000 employees demonstrated at the mine’s main entrance over the decision to cancel bus services to the city of Timika in response to fears about the spread of coronavirus infections.

been unable to leave the site -- a high-altitude open pit that is also a major copper mine -- for six months.

Freeport spokesman Riza Pratama told AFP Saturday that the roadblock had been removed after a long negotiation period. Several buses departed from the mine late Friday, carrying some workers who had been granted a leave of absence, said local company spokesman Kerry Yarangga.

China starts trial run of online int’l LNG trade

SHANGHAI — Shanghai Petroleum and Natural Gas Exchange (SHPGX), a national energy trading centre, started the trial run of its online platform for international liquefied natural gas (LNG) trading on Friday. China’s oil giants Sinopec and CNOOC respectively reached LNG purchase deals with their foreign counterparts through the trading platform, with total trading volume at 130,000 tonnes.

Given China’s market size and weight in the sector, China is well placed to establish a liquid and relevant market for LNG, said Laurent Vivier, president for the gas division of Total.

As China’s largest LNG importer, CNOOC will actively participate in the online trading, and will support more domestic new players in the natural gas sector to enter the international market, said Wu Wenlai, chairman of CNOOC Gas and Power Group.

With the establishment of the national oil and gas pipeline company China Oil & Gas Pipeline Network Corporation (PipeChina), China has accelerated market-oriented reforms over its oil and gas market, creating favourable conditions for the launch of the online international LNG trading business, noted Ye Guobiao, chairman of the SHPGX.—Xinhua ■

Chinese airlines’ losses mitigated by domestic travel

BEIJING — China’s biggest airline on Saturday reported less severe losses in the second quarter as domestic travel picks up with the coronavirus outbreak brought largely under control.

The country where the disease first emerged last year has reported no new deaths since May -- allowing for a tentative return of business and tourist travel within its borders, even as the virus wreaks havoc elsewhere.

China Southern Airlines, the nation’s largest carrier in terms of passenger numbers, posted losses of 2.9 billion yuan ($422 million) in April-June, compared with 5.3 billion yuan in the first quarter from January to March.

“The Covid-19 pandemic has exerted a long-term and profound impact globally,” the company said in its results announcement, predicting further uncertainty.

But “the aviation market in China will be the first to rebound, and the overall trend of recovery and development is prosperous”, it said, noting a “strong potential demand for passenger travel” if the virus is suppressed.

Flag carrier Air China reported total first-half losses of 9.4 billion yuan, with the second-quarter loss of 4.6 billion only slightly lower than 4.8 billion posted in the first quarter.—AFP ■

JAL tests new contactless tech for check-in to ease virus concern

TOKYO — Japan Airlines Co. has recently introduced self service check-in machines equipped with motion sensors, which enable customers to complete procedures without touching the screen, to help prevent coronavirus infection.

Through the use of infrared technology, which captures finger motion, customers are able to make their selections by holding their finger 3 centimetres away from the screen. Two touchless kiosks are available at Tokyo’s Haneda airport Terminal 1 during the trial period through Sept. 15, JAL said.

The device allows users to scroll through texts and press digital buttons by simply moving their fingers in front of the screen as they would do with a conventional touch panel, according to the airline, who said ground staff are available nearby for guidance.

JAL said it will consider whether to fully introduce the touchless check-in kiosks based on user response and feedback. The device was developed by Mitsubishi Electric Information Systems Corp. and Oki Electric Industry Co.

“We will make every effort so passengers feel safe in this difficult time with the new coronavirus,” a company spokeswoman said.—Kyodo ■

Crocodile conservation in Myanmar

By Myint Maung Soe

EVERYBODY in Myanmar is familiar with the crocodile named Nga Moe Yeik via videos, Zat Pwe (traditional theatrical performance) and other entertainment since their childhood. I knew nothing regarding the crocodiles even though I am a graduate in Zoology. I became to know a little about crocodiles when I arrive at Thaketa Crocodile Farm. The Nga Moe Yeik crocodile is very interesting because it is the wildest aquatic animal. They ate fish, prawn, tortoises and sharks and other huge animals, and are sometimes harmful to human beings.

They can be seen at freshwater and saltwater regions near Bogale in Ayeyawady Region. Now, they become an endangered species. The Department of Fisheries under the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation established a crocodile farm. It is located in Mya Khwar Nyo Street of industrial zone ward in Thaketa near Nga Moe Yeik creek. The farm takes a walk of about 15 minutes from Kyauk Tine bus stop.

The crocodile breeding industry began in 1968-1969 in Myanmar, and Thaketa Crocodile Farm was launched in May 1978 and operated as a recreation centre to the public since 6 November 1997.

Thaketa crocodile farm was established with the aims of ensuring more extended existence of the crocodiles, becoming a site of relaxing and seeking knowledge for local and foreign travellers and ensuring public participation in the wildlife conservation.

There are 547 crocodiles of different ages. It is the figure compiled on 3 August 2020. The farm breed only Crocodylus porosus (Saltwater Crocodile) and they are called Nga Moe Yeik crocodiles or Than Thu Mar crocodiles.

The crocodile species found in Myanmar are Crocodylus porosus, Crocodylus polustris and Gravialis gangeticus and Crocodylus siamensis.

They are amphibious carnivores with long bodies and have been in existence since more than 240 million years.

They can be seen in Africa, Australia, America, Bangladesh, Brunei, Myanmar, Cambodia, China, India, Indonesia, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Solomon Islands, Thailand and Viet Nam and sometimes in Japan. There are about 27 species of crocodiles but only 23 species are found -14 kinds of crocodile species, 8 of alligator species and 2 of gavial species.

The Saltwater Crocodile, Nga Moe Yeik can live for 70 to 100 years and the size of male crocodile is bigger than female. Male crocodile is 13 ft in average length and the female is about 10 ft in length. They become adults when they reach about 8 ft. Nga Moe Yeik crocodiles are kinds of alligator species and the length of head is one-seventh of their total length. They mate in February and lay eggs in April. A female crocodile lays 20 to 70 eggs which incubate after 90 days. A baby crocodile is about 8 inches in length, and becomes one-foot-long crocodile after a year.

At the temperature of 30.6 degree centigrade, eggs usually hatch into males, and when the temperature is lower or higher, eggs usually hatch into females.

Saltwater Crocodiles are the most expensive animals in the world and their skins are used in producing clothes and bags. The World Wildlife Fund (WWF) bans the sale of crocodiles.

The Nga Moe Yeik crocodiles are the most dangerous animals for the human beings and the crocodile attack occurred in Bogale township.

Those who want to see the Nga Moe Yeik crocodiles should go to the Thaketa Crocodiles Farm individually or together with the family members and can feed the crocodiles.

The entrance fees range from K500 for locals and K1,000 for foreigners. The children under five are free of charge. There are places to park cars, motorcycles and bicycles.

In conclusion, Myanmar boasts for its ability to conserve the endangered crocodiles to date. Although dinosaurs and Homo Sapiens emerged at the same time, dinosaurs gradually disappeared due to the lack of conservation. So, all people should participate in conservation of Nga Moe Yeik crocodiles.

FIFA 'requests the suspension' of Ivorian federation election

Former Ivory Coast captain Didier Drogba has launched a foundation in his home country. PHOTO: AFP

ABDIJAN — FIFA have called on the Ivory Coast Football Federation (FIF) to halt its election campaign after Didier Drogba's bid was rejected, a letter seen by AFP on Friday (Aug 28) showed.

FIF's election has turned into a soap opera marred by incessant infighting and on Thursday the former Chelsea forward's candidacy was thrown out as he had only received the official support of two of a required four Ivorian clubs.

"We request the suspension of all action in relation to the election process until further notice," the document dated August 27 and sent to FIF said.

Drogba's election team said on Thursday it expected FIF's decision which claimed he was ineligible to run for the position.

"Drogba's staff isn't surprised by this decision to reject the bid. But we remain unfazed. We will react to conform to the texts which surround this election," Mahamadou Sangare, a member of Drogba's team, told AFP.

Drogba also has the backing of the association for the former and its current players equivalent and has five days to appeal FIF's decision.

'No chance' Klopp rules out Liverpool move for Messi

LONDON — Jurgen Klopp said on Thursday there is "no chance" of Liverpool signing Lionel Messi, but the German admits the unsettled Barcelona star would be a great addition to the Premier League.

Messi has told Barcelona he wants to leave after growing unhappy with the club's problems on and off the pitch.

The Argentina forward has been linked with a move to Manchester City, where he could link up with his former Barca boss Pep Guardiola.

Paris Saint-Germain, Inter Milan and Juventus have also been mooted as potential destinations for Messi if he gets his wish to quit the Camp Nou.

Klopp insisted he would love to have Messi, but made it clear the 33-year-old would not end up at Anfield.

"Interest? Who doesn't want to have Messi in their team? But no chance," Klopp told reporters.

Liverpool finished 18 points ahead of second placed City last season as they won the English title for the first time since 1990.

And Klopp conceded Liverpool's bid to retain the Premier League crown would clearly be under threat if Messi joined City.

But the former Borussia Dortmund boss believes it would be a significant coup for English football to have one of the world's greatest ever players in the Premier League.—AFP ■

Commuters on Buses

By May Thu Htay
2nd year Honours Student,
English Specialization,
University of Yangon

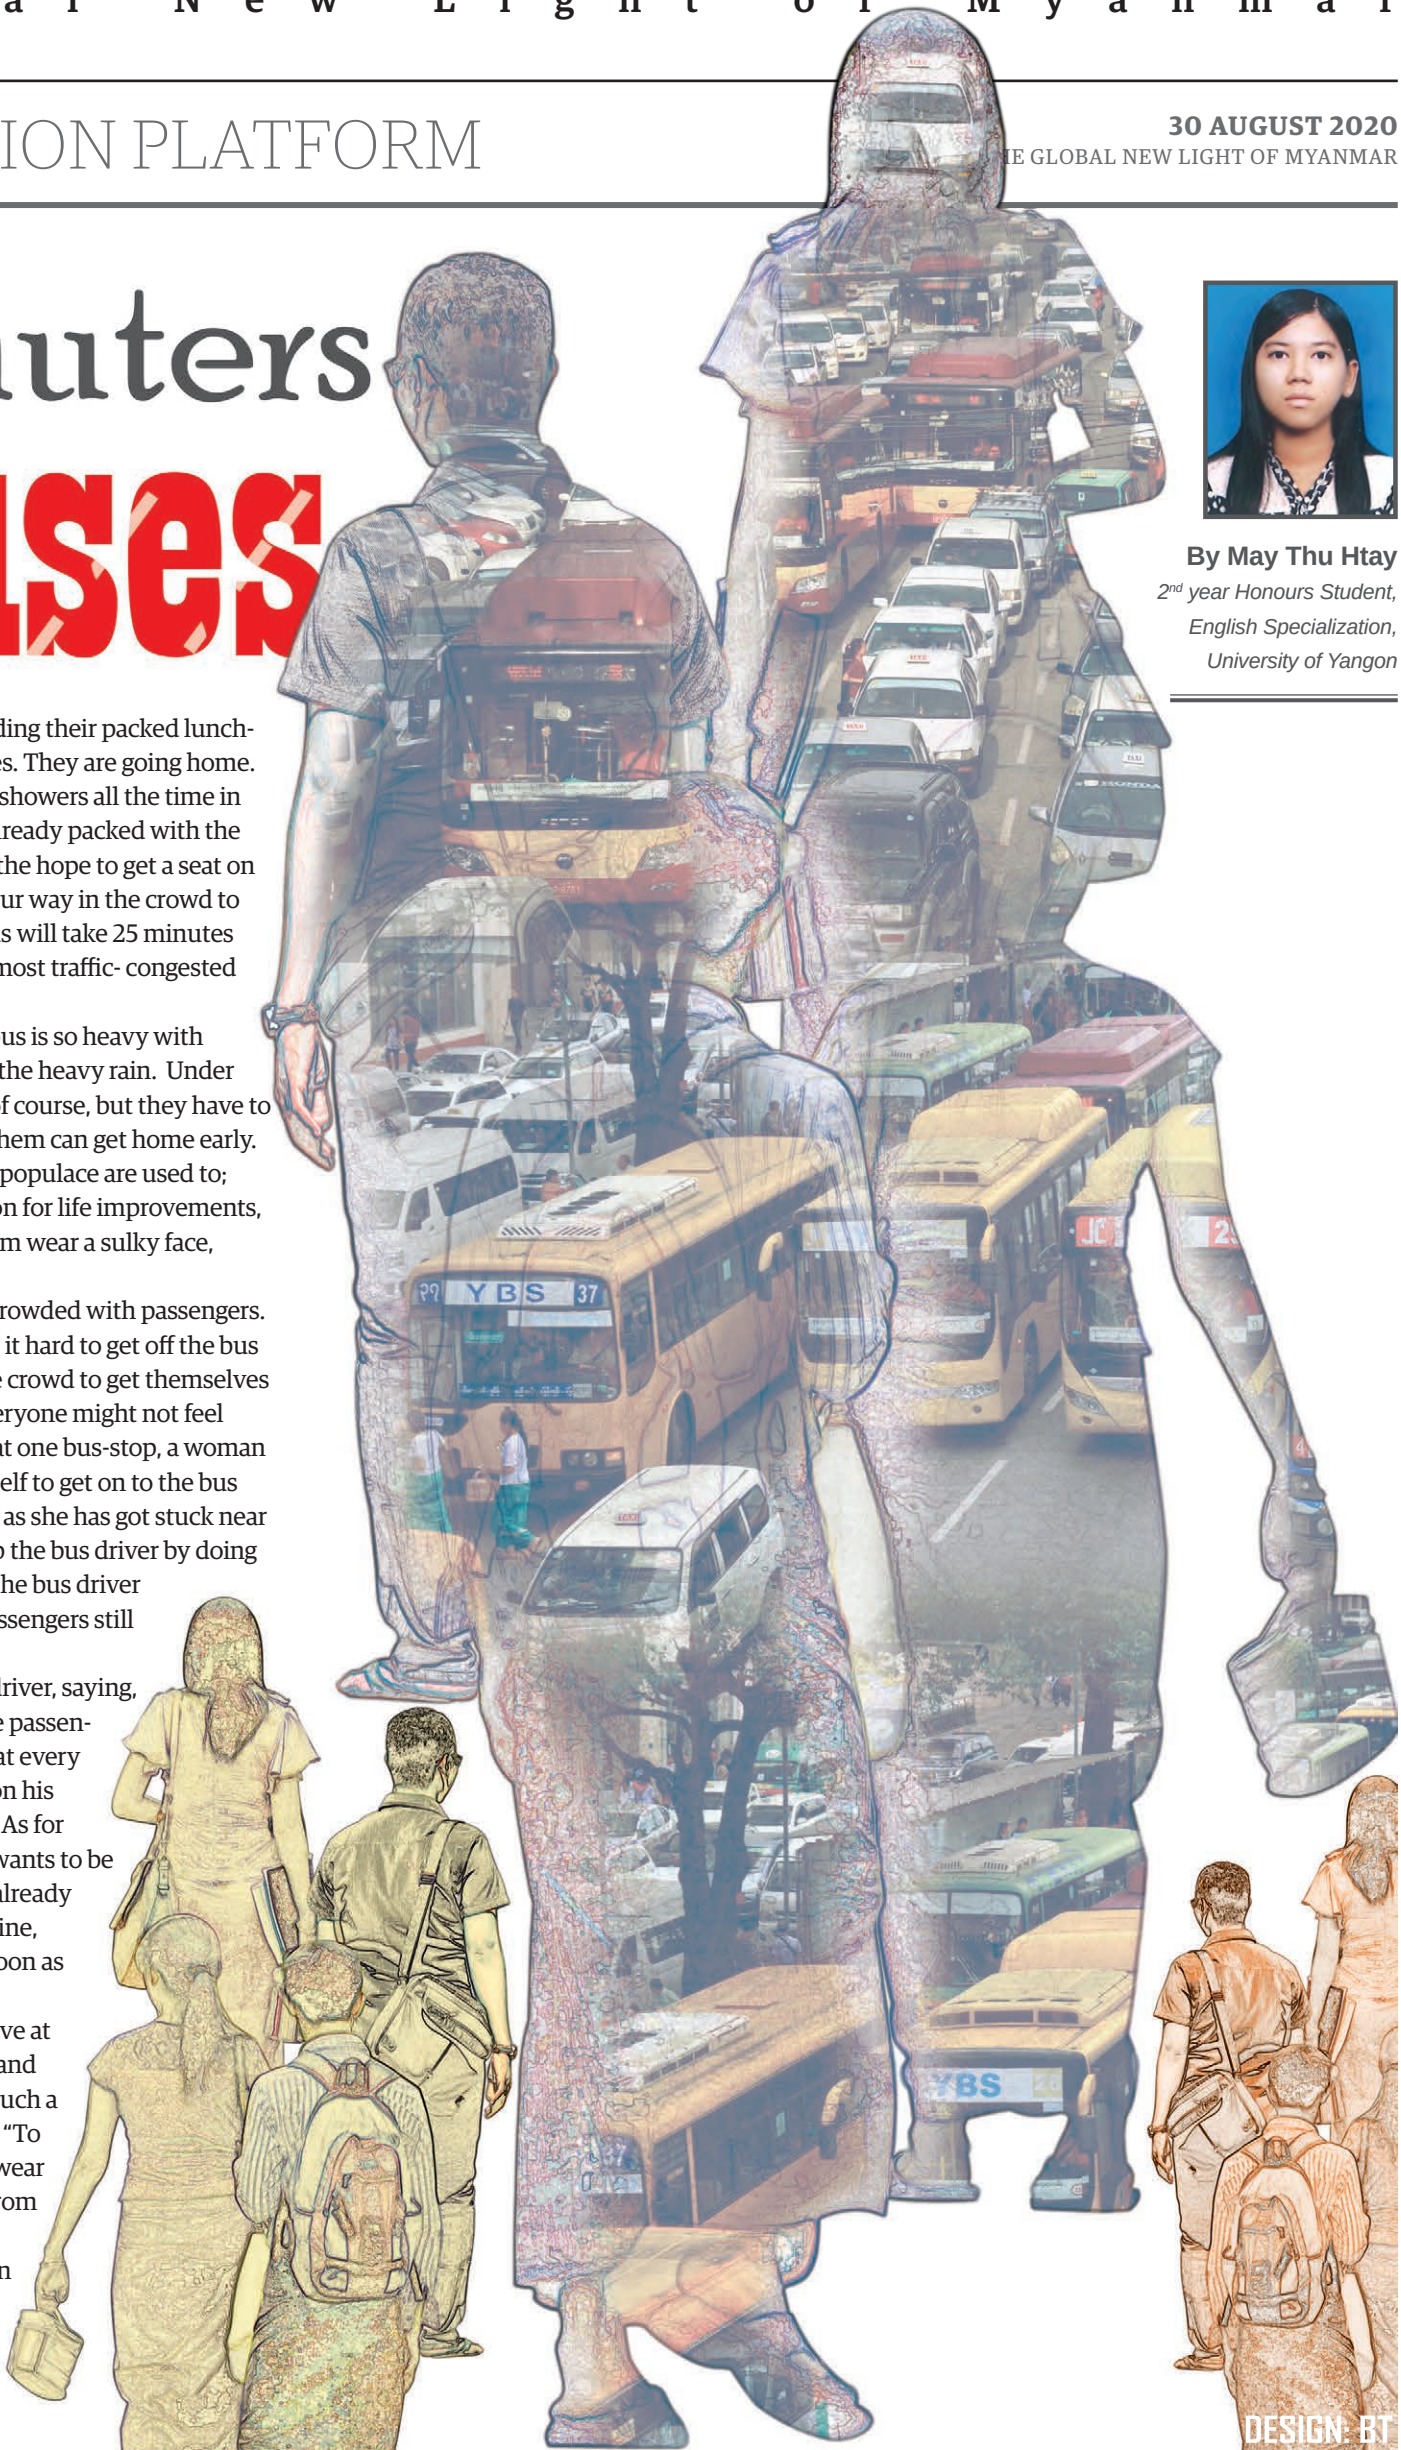

PEOPLE in different uniform badges, holding their packed lunch-boxes in their hands are waiting for buses. They are going home. Recently, it is always overcast with high showers all the time in all parts of Yangon. After a long wait, the bus, already packed with the passengers, arrives on the scene. Setting aside the hope to get a seat on the bus, the first thing you must do is elbow your way in the crowd to set your feet in this bus. Waiting for another bus will take 25 minutes or so. Everyone knows that the evening is the most traffic- congested hours in Yangon.

The bus driver has to drive carefully. The bus is so heavy with passengers and the road is slippery because of the heavy rain. Under the threat of Covid-19, all people wear masks, of course, but they have to stay really close so that more commuters like them can get home early. This is the kind of condition that most Yangon populace are used to; however, for ones who are just settled in Yangon for life improvements, it must be quite unusual for them. Some of them wear a sulky face, expressing they are losing their temper.

As the journey proceeds, the bus is more crowded with passengers. Those who have reached their destination find it hard to get off the bus from the exit. Anyway, they hustle through the crowd to get themselves out. The route is such an uneven ground as everyone might not feel comfortable being in this situation. Suddenly, at one bus-stop, a woman carrying a seemingly heavy basket shoves herself to get on to the bus and another woman helps her carry her basket as she has got stuck near the entrance. At the same time, some men help the bus driver by doing the unpaid job of a ticket collector, reminding the bus driver when to open the slide door and how many passengers still remain to get off.

Some worried women are reminding the driver, saying, "Please Slow down." "Drive carefully" "No more passengers, please." However, the driver kindly stops at every bus-stop and still welcomes more passengers on his bus when some are getting off at this bus-stop. As for me, I understand the driver's Cetana. Nobody wants to be rejected by the driver's harsh words, "The bus already crowded. If you do not want to be on board, it's fine, then." Maybe he wants to take them home as soon as possible.

Shoving and hustling, passengers now arrive at their desired bus-stops and they now can sigh and take a deep breath. Undoubtedly, this route is such a bumpy one for every passenger. A saying goes: "To feel comfortable in bumpy routes, we need to wear a pair of shoes right." It is what I have learned from a book. So, to feel at least easy in this journey, there should be at least understanding between passengers, understanding between the driver and passengers, most importantly, the safety of passengers_ this is what most commuters demand at the moment.

Cultivating a positive attitude

ONE of the greatest forces governing the human being is habit. It is something that we often do without thinking. From dawn to dusk, one third of our actions are automatically running. When we do a particular activity more often, gradually we stick to doing it even without our knowledge. If that activity is good, then we can cultivate a good habit. If it is a bad one, then we are addicted to it and often find it hard to get rid of that habit. So does the positive attitude. Nature is human who tends to go easily to adopt the negativity. For example, if someone is cross in your sight, we easily take negative attitude to him and try not to search the answer 'why?' which we need almost no efforts for it. Depression is another serious issue. If we are in depression, everything looks bleak that we are always going against with others and black mind-set handles superior. Again, we know that letting go is probably the healthiest action, but wanting revenge is often much more appealing and is nature of people which favors the dark side. Gradually we are bearing the negative attitudes upon ourselves or on others. So, letting us be addicted to bad habits or adopting minus attitude is easy to follow at first but hard to drop later. It is like floating ourselves down the current which will draw us and drown us in the ocean in the end.

Can, therefore, positive attitude be easily cultivated? For me, it is much easier to be negative and angrier than let bygones be bygones. As even people with positive mindset can have a hard time, I have not learned to express myself on a mature level using positive affirmation and virtuous attitude. I think, not everything in life is positive and pretending that everything has a positive side is plainly ridiculous. When we are in grief, people might soothe, 'Everything happens for a reason', since they are not the receiver of that experience. It is hard for me to develop a positive mindset because I might not understand the importance of being positive and might have negative mindset because of some previous experience or trauma. For example, one of my friends frequently criticized me about my introvert and being naive. I was mostly left behind among the friends and he seemed shy to be with me although we are childhood and bosom-friends. Because of being left alone, I felt that I was not good enough and I was holding myself back in public. I kept thinking that nobody wanted to make friends with me. I was eventually criticizing myself. Apparently, I doubted myself and began to see myself in the negative light. I was no longer to be better in life, I thought. How harmful this was at the time! Knowing the negative attitude could gradually spoil me, I most of the times tried to be positive ways in my daily routine and tried thinking positivity for others. However, my unwillingness to be positive or pretending later made me physically and mentally tired. I was not contented with who I am, and felt bitter. I was not me myself. Ultimately, I understood, just go neutral, not too much or too less in judging on life. We should not always be positive but is a must to differentiate what is right and what is wrong. Definitely, life is a mixture of positives, negatives and neutrals. Understanding that I should adapt myself between negative and positive attitude, I dropped pretending to be all time positive and let my heart adjust my inner voice. Later, I found my habit healthier and more enjoyable than before. Just get real and stop pretending that it is otherwise.

All in all, in life, cultivating a positive attitude is hard at first but easy later with fruitful results if you follow your right moral. It is like rowing upstream. It will lead us up to highland where we can make a living easily. Everyone can practise how to cultivate a positive attitude if continuous effort is used, if so, a habit of right thought is formed. It is never too late to form a habit. However, a man with an indecisive mind like how to sow a positive attitude and extract the negative attitude which can wither itself is simply a man who cannot manage to think right enough. Such a man is the most disappointing creature on earth, for he indulges in his desire to be an enemy to himself, instead of making it his ally. It is up to us whether to follow a bad habit or to cultivate a good one.

The Buddha at Kosambi, in a Burmese manuscript. British Library,

Lessons from the Kosambi's Conflict

By Nwe Phyo (Cherry Land)
M.A student, Specializing in English Language, Yadanabon University

“Blessing is the spiritual pursuit of the united truth-seekers.” (Dhammapada 194)

Being in disunity brings no good result. When the Buddha was in his age of forty three, He faced with a terrible case in the Kingdom of Kosambi. The cause of the problem was simple. Yet, a honey drop brings the devastation to a Kingdom. Similarly, the root of this conflict started from the accusation of others. All of the participants in this case were the monks.

The conflict started as follows. A monk left the toilet when he came across another monk coming to the toilet. The former mastered in the Suttas while the latter studied the Vinayas. The Sutta monk unintentionally left a little amount of water in the bowl. When the Vinaya monk noticed it, he told him about it. The Sutta monk, then, realized he had breached the Vinaya. However, the Vinaya monk asked him whether he had intended to do so. The Sutta monk replied he hadn't. So, the Vinaya monk told him that he (the Sutta monk) had not breached the Vinaya and that he was not sinful. Finally, they left each other having no doubt about this action.

Yet, in a lecture, the Vinaya specialized monk told his students that the Sutta monk had breached the Vinaya. Then his words finally reached to the Sutta monk. He said the Vinaya monk was telling lies. Later, this unintended mishap led to the conflict and the united Sangha Order was split into two groups. Though the Buddha himself tried to negotiate between them, the case remained unresolved. The Buddha was the one who laid down the Vinaya and delivered the Suttas. Moreover, both of two different parties belonged to his disciplines. But He stood neither for one side nor against the other. He stood only for the truth and the peace. However, as both of different groups did not listen to Him, He finally left for a grove believing the time would heal everything later. Time passed and all of the benefactors there came to realize the conflict had made the Buddha leave them. So, they offered nothing to the monks. Finally, this resulted in the revealing of the truth and the understanding. And, they came down to the grove where the Buddha was dwelling. They all promised they would be reunited. As the Buddha had foreseen the outcome, the case was settled down and the Sangha Order finally came to be the united one under the teachings of the Buddha.

To reflect over this problem, the root cause really seemed to be a minor one. But, the participants of this case were so aggressive that it finally led to a conflict. Like this, today in our country, there are so many groups and parties in different beliefs, different ideas and different backgrounds. And the followers of each group are getting aggressive, taunting each other. However, it is my belief that all different groups in our nation have no bad intentions but good intention to make our nation a better place to live in. So, they all are heading to the same destination. If so, why are they fighting each other? Should they think about each other and do negotiating to come to a common platform? Of course, they should. Only forgiveness and understanding will bring the end to the vicious cycle of revenge. If they are in unity, our nation will be leading to a better place where there will be no conflict, no fighting and no aggressiveness.

The case which happened in the Kingdom of Kosambi should be a good lesson to learn for us. As long as there are conflicts, the truth will be away and the dream of making a developed nation will still be far, far away. When the present conflicts happening in Myanmar are settled down sooner or late, a great nation in our dream will be nearer and nearer.

Taung Byone Nat Festival in Wagaung

By Dr. Khin Maung Nyunt
(Maha Saddhamma Jotika Dhaja, Sithu)

THOUGH Myanmar Traditional Monthly Festivals do not include Taung Byone Nat Festival of Wagaung [ဝါခေါင်]. This Nat festival is more well-known at home and abroad. So we may make an academic study of it as follows. There are 37 nats in Myanmar Pantheon. Of them the first Thagyar Nat was Hindu deity or deva Thunder god. The remaining 36 were Myanmar nats. Myanmar 36 nats were not born deva nats. They were human heroes and heroines, kings, queens, soldiers, sportsmen who became nat spirits due to violent deaths by assassination, execution, child birth, fatal accidents or killed by snake or tiger. Their spirits wandered until they got resting places.

In the order of 36 nats Taung Byone Min Nyi Naung [Elder and Younger] brother well known as Shwe Pyin Nge Naung originated in the time of King Anawrahta [A.D 1044-1066]. The founder of First Myanmar Empire. The Shwe Pyin Nyi Naung were two sons of Byatta, king's equestrian forester and flower seller Mei Wunna of Mt Popa 30 miles away from Bagan Capital.

Nga Htwe Yu, the toddy palm climber, Nga Lone Let Phe, the ploughs man and Nyaung U Pe, the great Swimmer were selected by king Anawrahta to be his knights event. So these four and Byatta formed commanders of royal Land Forces. When Byatta was executed for his secret marriage with flower seller Mei Wunna and their two sons Shwe Pyin Nyi Naung sons were taken adopted as his grandsons. Mei Wunna died of broke heart. She becameal Popa Mei daw Nat.

The two Shwe Hpin brothers accompanied King Anawrahta who visited Sacred Tooth Relic Chamber in China. The two brothers served the king bravely and faithfully. On return home Anawrahta stayed for some time at Taung byone, north of Mandalay. There he built Su Taung Pyi Zedi in which he enshrined religious relics presented by his Chinese emperor U Di Bwa. By royal order every member of royal entourage was required to contribute one brick, one tin of sand and one coconut shell of water in the building of Pagoda.

But two adopted grandsons Shwe pyin gyi and Shwe pyin nge forgot to carry out the royal order as they were courting Ma Shwe Oo, the beauty village girl of that place. When the king found his two adopted grands on disobeyed his order, he punished them. But the executioner flaked then needs to death. So they became nat spirits King Anawrahta built nat shrine near the Pagoda. Some rice fields were donated to Pagoda and some to two nat brothers for holding their nat festival at the time of Pagoda Festival. Who are the believers of Taung Byone Nat and goers of that Festivals.

First, the very first nat mediums and their descendants. They have been holding Taung Byone Festival till today.

Secondly, believers and propitiates. You propitiate the two nat brothers and if your propitiations or prayers are answered. You have to but fill your promise of presents to the nat brothers clothing, food, money, other presents.

Visual artists and performing artists are believers including Bingers dances, musicians, film stars etc. People whose professions are risky such as soldiers, air pilots, seamen.

mariners etc. They visit Taung Byone nat festivals and make profitable bring back whatever nat brothers give them to keep as amulet. Next are the majority they are effeminates who dress like women, sing and dance. They say they are possessed by nat brothers and they danced and sing.

The last but nat the least are the gays from all over the world. Regard less of their race, religion, social status, they come to this festival without fail and enjoy all their gay activities. Open gay, hidden gay, active gay passive gays. Freedom permitted by Taung Byone nat festival is boundless permitted but within the limit of law. Among believers are included educated classes, foreigners from all countries. Doctors, engineers, professor dentists at etc ... Politian's teachers, UN officials. The writer of this article had the chance of accompanying the wife of one UN officer in Myanmar. They were from Denmark. The wife was a believer in Hindu Gods. She believed in Ramayana, Maha ba rata. They applied for transfer to Myanmar because the wife wanted to study Taung byone nats. The writer was assigned to accompany them to Taung byone festival. We put up at Mandalay Hotel and by car we visited Taung Byone 2 days ahead.

The Dane Lady made a through study of geography, history, legend, inscription and made a interview nat medium. On the Day of Nat Bolting festival the idols of 2 brothers were taken to the river and bathed and brought back to shrine. Big nat dances began. The Dane Lady old the with she was possessed by two brothers and so saying she joined the nat dance. For nearly half an hour she dances in trance. When the music stopped she woke up to herself.

Oh! Dr. Khin Maung Nyunt I had a wonderful time doing with two brothers. The two nat brothers gave one costly long silk longyi to the husband and one long silk hlunei and scarf to the lady. She participated in all festivals of days.

On return to Yangon this Dane Lady has become a confined Nat Ka Daw, Nat median. She much images of two brothers held consecration nat to be brought with. The writer come to know that she became Taung Byone nat telling earning many in her country. One officer from U.S counsellor office in Mandalay went to visited with his friends from Mandalay University. Joking by or testing he propitiated two nat brothers.

"I have been posted every where except Geneva. If your help me to get transfer Geneva. I shall always send you every year without fail". A month after he got transfer order to Geneva. So keeps his promise of sending whisky a some cakes to Taung Byone nat brothers and visited them when he had where to come to Myanmar. The writer of this articles mother was a believer. The nat brothers told her that the son would go to England and get high and get married. The writers mother told him never to forget Taung Byone Nat brothers.

Mother of students sitting final exams. Interview at the Public Service commission to get jobs. Political Parties to win majority votes at General Elections. Politicians and M P to green winning vote and those who expect Winning state lottery traders, enterprises expecting good gain propitiate two Taung Byone Nat brothers. Portmanteau Words in the English Language

THE learning of a certain human Language is good fun. Each language has its own system for communicating in human societies. So has the English language. We Asians learn English as a second language or as an occidental language. It takes time for the learner to obtain about the knowledge of the nature of English language and proper usages of it. Even the native speakers of English language have to learn hard to obtain the four language skills namely writing, speaking, listening and reading. Basically, as for the native speakers, they can easily obtain the speaking skill because they have the daily or regular language exposure around their environment and within their family for communicating among them. However, even the native speakers have to learn rules of English grammar, vocabulary, rules of morphology, semantics and syntax so that they can use the formal and accepted English Language. If a native speaker does not study or learn his or her mother language or first language systematically, he or she will become an illiterate person. Slang words and slang expressions are very informal that are more common in spoken English language known as colloquial language, especially used by a particular group of people. For example, children, teenagers, criminals and soldiers etc.

In any living language, new vocabulary and phrases are increasing from time to time. Likewise, in English language, new vocabulary and phrases are increasing. As a result, dictionaries are to be updated with the compilation of new coined words or created words used in multiple fields and subjects. Sometimes we cannot look some new words in the English dictionary. Normally, the definitions of new vocabulary can be found in some advanced English dictionaries. Learners will be able to master any language (including mother languages) to some degree.

The learners have to learn hard to gain perfect English language proficiency. There is no short-cut method to own this status indeed. Furthermore, the learners of English Language need to acquire knowledge of newly-coined English words in specific subjects or fields or technologies so that they might be able to use the advanced English vocabulary in formal speech or in writing properly. If we want to master English, we should not be complacent with the limited knowledge of English Language. As saying goes; Learning is eternal, we need to learn it continuously. A single English word may have many meanings and word classes. Phrases are defined for different expressions in speech or in writing and existing words can be found in the dictionaries. Every learner needs to use a variety of advanced English dictionaries compulsorily in order to get accurate definitions, word classes and meanings of the words that they learn.

You may see and find some new words known as 'portmanteau words in English Language. A portmanteau is a word which has been made up of two existing words in order to create a new sound. The new word blends the sounds and meanings of the two words from which it is made up.

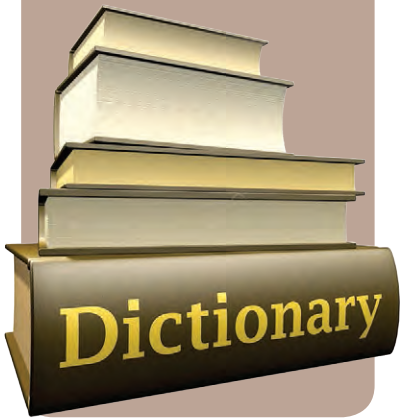

The reason for using a portmanteau is to give a meaning to something which is combined from two different things, a good example of this is the word podcast this is a portmanteau of the two words iPod and broadcast which has a new meaning of a broadcast which can be listened to on an iPod. By creating this new word, the speaker does not have to use the sentence 'a broadcast listened to on an iPod'

The portmanteau words are being used in formal speech and in writing. We ought to use them in conformity with the subjects or fields or science or some technologies. We must learn the definitions and meanings of portmanteau words by heart. First, learn them. Then use them in the specific sentences correctly. As you can see, there are thousands of English words in English language and new words are being added to the existing words in the dictionaries constantly. Moreover, the slang expressions (informal usages) may be included in these new coinages. Nevertheless, we can use the coinages which are suitable for formal speech and writing.

The Hands that Bring about the Changes

The roads on which your feet stand firmly,
the dark, shiny tar roads, smooth as silk,
The long, long roads you drive,
humming a tune, sometimes whistling, the broad, four-lane highways winding up the blue mountains,
the roads towards prosperity and progress of our country,
Never has this fifty-nine-year-old guy witnessed such changes, irrefutably, over the last fifty-three years.
Who has brought about these changes, it's as clear as day,
within these five years?
We should be grateful to the hands that have brought about these changes, shouldn't we?
Why not join the benevolent hands that are determined to continue to bring about the better changes?
