Peacemaking processes in the post-2020 period

AT this time when we already have the peace roadmap for the post-2020 period clearly in our view, we will implement the post- 2020 period peace process with new approaches by exerting our efforts from all angles and points of view so that not only the NCA signatories but also the non-signatories will come on board and cooperate.

We have realized that both formal and informal dialogues are pivotal to the peacemaking processes in the post-2020 period. Similarly, we also recognize the role of public participation. This is related to paving the way for inclusiveness of all the stakeholders. Moreover, we have to focus on the design aspect of the peacemaking process such as policy and framework guidelines, the formation of necessary working groups, and the establishment of systems and mechanisms.

China allows Myanmar fishery products only with COVID-free certificates

By Nyein Nyein

DEPARTMENT of Animal and Plant Quarantine of the General Administration of Customs of China-GACC informed the Embassy of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar in Beijing that China has allowed import of Myanmar fishery products only upon production of COVID-free certificate.

The GACC mentioned in a statement that to ensure the safety and effective prevention of the spreading of the COVID-19 on the goods plays an important role, to set up an effective safety system by the companies registered to export edible aquatic animals to China following these guidelines, to implement the protection system, to give specific guidelines to check COVID-19 in edible aquatic animals exported to China.

Besides, the companies registered to export edible aquatic animals to China need to halt the import process immediately and need to inform China when they found the suspected COVID-19 patients in their companies or if there is a risk of COVID-19 infection in the export products. The suspended companies should resume the export process to China after confirming that they are safe. Also, China urges companies to work together for security and convenience regarding the export of edible aquatic animals to China.

Therefore, the COVID-19 free certificates essential to fishery exports to China must be issued at as soon as possible because it can cause disturbance on trading, said General Secretary U Win Kyaing of the Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF).

Since last October, China authorities have given a permit for fishery exports only upon production of COVID-19 free certificates on products. Consequently, fishery exports, including frozen fish, prawn, eel and crabs, cannot be exported to China via the land border.

Although China earlier allowed Myanmar to export fishery products without having any certificates through regular trade, China did not allow importing without the COVID-free certificates.

However, MFF is not clear about which department is responsible for issuing COVID-19 clearance certificate for fishery products.

"It is a new order for the COVID-free certificates on fishery products. We are not clear as to who are legal authorities. Also, there are no guidelines to check the COVID-19 on the export products," said U Win Kyaing.

The Federation has already submitted a report to the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation through the Fisheries Department to screen fishery products and receive the COVID-19-free certificates.

On 21 January, a coordination meeting was held in the meeting hall of the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation in Nay Pyi Taw to respond to the impact of COVID-19 on the fisheries sector.

At the meeting, Union Minister for Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation Dr Aung Thu said that coordination would be made between the governments to engage the fishery products to the potential foreign markets. The ministry will also call for coordination with the relevant departments, including the Myanmar fisheries federation, to issue the COVID-free certificates on Myanmar fishery products.

China is the second-largest buyer of Myanmar's fishery products. During the previous financial year 2019-2020, Myanmar shipped over US$850 million worth fishery products to external markets and among them, $254 million worth exports flowed into China.

The Federation expects to reach fishery export target of $1 billion in the current FY. Myanmar has earned $278.378 million from the export of fishery products over three and a half months of this financial year between 1 October 2020 and 15 January 2021. The same period of the last FY saw $301.958 million. So, this year's amount plunged into $23.580 million, according to official data of the Ministry of Commerce.

Myanmar's marine products mainly go to more than 45 countries, with Thailand being the largest exporter followed by China.

MoSWRR accepts US assistance for women rehabilitation centre in Lashio

THE Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement hosted the virtual handover ceremony of additional assistance from the US government for women’s rehabilitation training programme to be conducted at Lashio drug rehabilitation centre yesterday.

During the ceremony, Union Minister Dr Win Myat Aye expressed words of thanks to the US government and its people for their donations to the drug rehabilitation centre in Wethikan and Pekhonn in 2019 and other additional assistance for new women rehabilitation training to be established in Lashio drug rehabilitation centre.

The Union Minister also highlighted the establishment of 14 rehabilitation centres to date, 3-month rehabilitation training and 40-day community-based rehabilitation programmes.

He then talked about the temporary closure of centres during COVID-19 outbreak and the plans to run the centres with no more than 30 people according to the instructions of National-Level Central Committee on Prevention, Control and Treatment of COVID-19. The US Ambassador Mr Thomas Laszlo Vajda said the US and Myanmar are facing the problems of drug addiction which affect the families and regional economy.

The rate of drug abuse is increasing amid the COVID-19 outbreak. Myanmar is facing similar cases, and so the US government provides the needed assistance to Myanmar to use in rehabilitation processes.

He also stressed the importance of rehabilitation programmes without any gender discrimination and briefed the donations for the first women’s rehabilitation training.

Director Mr Ryan McKean for the Department of State’s Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement emphasized the donation as a good result of the bilateral agreement between the US and Myanmar signed in 2017 and further bilateral relations in rehabilitation programmes.

Then, Mr Ryan McKean handed over the donations to Director-General of Rehabilitation Department U Win Naing Tun. —MNA (Translated by Khine Thazin Han)

A NUCLEAR FREE WORLD

UN, pope hail launch of anti-nuclear treaty

THE Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons took effect Friday – but the milestone is marred by the lack of signatures from the world’s major nuclear powers. Despite the missing participants, the occasion was marked by praise from the United Nations and even Pope Francis. “The Treaty is an important step towards the goal of a world free of nuclear weapons and a strong demonstration of support for multilateral approaches to nuclear disarmament,” UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said in a statement. He praised “the first multilateral nuclear disarmament treaty in more than two decades,” and called on “all States to work together to realize this ambition to advance common security and collective safety.” The treaty seeks to prohibit the use, development, production, testing, stationing, stockpiling and threat of nuclear weapons. The pope heralded the treaty’s enactment during his general audience Wednesday. “This is the first legally binding international instrument explicitly prohibiting these weapons, whose indiscriminate use would impact a huge number of people in a short time and would cause long-lasting damage to the environment,” Francis said. “I strongly encourage all States and all people to work decisively toward promoting conditions necessary for a world without nuclear weapons, contributing to the advancement of peace and multilateral cooperation which humanity greatly needs today.” The president of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Peter Mauer, echoed those sentiments. “Today is a victory for our common humanity. Let us seize the moment – and take the Treaty all the way to its goal: a world without nuclear weapons,” he said in a statement. SOURCE: AFP

OVERHAULING THE ‘BROKEN’ SYSTEM

Biden undoes Trump migration orders, pushes for major reform

WITHIN hours of taking office, President Joe Biden undid some of Donald Trump’s most controversial immigration policies and sparked cautious hope that mil-majority Muslim nations and halted construction of Trump’s border wall with Mexico, heartening immigration defenders left reeling by four years of “America First” nationalism. Yet advocates see new battles ahead, including whether lawmakers can finally overhaul the nation’s immigration system which has been branded as “broken” with some 11 million undocumented people living in limbo. These discussions, however, have only begun as the Trump administration has just left the White House. His so-called “Muslim ban,” which in 2017 targeted citizens of Iran, Iraq, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria and Yemen, ignited international outrage and lead to domestic court rulings against it. Iraq and Sudan were dropped from the list, but in 2018 the Supreme Court upheld a later version of the ban for the other nations – as well as North Korea and Venezuela. As part of his first acts, Biden signed new protections for so-called “Dreamers” – immigrants who arrived illegally as children and had been temporarily shielded from deportation by a program Trump tried to dismantle. In addition, the new president overturned one of his predecessor’s orders pushing aggressive efforts to find and deport unauthorized immigrants, and imposed a 100-day suspension on most deportations. Immigration advocates erupted in support for Biden’s first orders. SOURCE: AFP

ADJUSTING THE ACRONYM

Colombia’s FARC party to change blood-soaked name

COLOMBIA’S FARC party said Thursday that it would change its name to move away from the acronym that identified the Marxist rebel force for decades. On the heels of a 2016 peace accord, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia transitioned to a political party called the Common Alternative Revolutionary Force – both of which went by FARC. “It was complicated (for us) to keep the FARC name; not because we regret it, or it makes us ashamed of anything, but because it was as the FARC that we took part in armed conflict, in war,” said Rodrigo Londono, leader of the leftist party, also known as Timochenko. He acknowledged that “the conflict caused a lot of pain” and added that the name FARC is closely associated with bloodshed. A new name is expected to be announced later this month, he added. The former rebels have been divided since their disarmament. Although the majority of some 13,000 former FARC combatants and militiamen accepted the peace agreement, dissident factions have kept up or retaken arms. SOURCE: AFP

PRESSURING CRITICS

Navalny allies face jail ahead of weekend protests

ALLIES of jailed Russian opposition politician Alexei Navalny were facing possible fines and prison time on Friday in court cases that ramp up pressure on Kremlin critics ahead of weekend protests. Navalny’s allies are planning to hold demonstrations on Saturday in dozens of cities in support of the Kremlin critic who was arrested and jailed on his return to Russia following a near-fatal poisoning with a nerve agent. Several close Navalny associates, including prominent activist Lyubov Sobol and his spokeswoman Kira Yarmysh, were detained late on Thursday for calling on Russians to join the demonstrations and face hefty fines and short jail stints. Sobol, 33, is accused of repeatedly violating legislation on public gatherings, which carries a maximum fine of up to 300,000 rubles ($4,000), her lawyer Vladimir Voronin told AFP. Sobol, who has a small child, is not likely to be given jail time Friday, Voronin said. But he cautioned that if she is found guilty, authorities could later open a criminal probe against her. Yarmysh, a 31-year-old Navalny spokeswoman who spent the night in jail, is accused of violating legislation on public gatherings and could be detained for 10 days, her lawyer Veronika Polyakova told AFP. Ahead of Yarmysh’s arrest, she recorded a video urging a large turnout on Saturday. “Our future literally depends on the number of people who take to the streets,” she said. A number of Navalny allies were also detained in the regions on Thursday and Friday, including the coordinator for the opposition politician’s offices in the Far Eastern city of Vladivostok. NEW ID SYSTEM

Fear and frustration in Nigeria as millions at risk of phone suspension

“IF I don’t have my phone, I don’t make money,” said Raphael Ajih, resting on a rusty metal chair, his hands clenched on his lap.

The government of Africa’s most populous country has ordered telecom operators to block the SIM cards of anyone who fails to register for a National Identity Number (NIN) by February 9.

Across the country, many like Ajih are trying to comply with the directive, only to be frustrated by days-long waits to do the paperwork, often in large crowds despite the Covid pandemic.

The idea behind the NIN is to create a single ID database for Nigeria’s 200 million people, replacing the hotchpotch of documents, from drivers licences to voter cards, that citizens use to identify themselves. A unique number for each person, which in turn will unlock their national ID card, will help to smooth out problems in policy-making and budget planning, the government says. The change will also fight Nigeria’s rampant crime, goes its argument. By linking the ID number to a SIM, this will weed out unregistered cards used by crooks and jihadists.

Ajih, 38, sells goods via WhatsApp and Amazon and works as an Uber driver in the capital Abuja – jobs that enable him to financially support his two younger brothers and sister as well as extended family members.

He sends money to relatives by mobile transfer, something he may no longer be able to do if he fails to get a NIN and submits the number to his mobile operator.

FACING PRESSURE

Embattled Intel says earnings better than expected

INTEL said Thursday that earnings topped prior expectations, as the computer chip giant faces pressure to come up with bold ways to fend off fierce competition and an activist shareholder.

Intel said it took in $20 billion in revenue during the final quarter of last year, little changed from a year earlier, amid robust sales of personal computers.

The Silicon Valley company reported

net income of $5.9 billion in the quarter, down a billion dollars from the same period a year earlier.

Intel said that its board approved an increased cash dividend of $1.39 per share in what may have been a move to placate investor Dan Loeb of Third Point, who has called on Intel to bolster its weakening position in the chip market.

DAUNTING CHALLENGES

Asia to dominate Davos virtual forum as virus-hit West struggles

EMERGING stronger from the Covid-19 pandemic, Asia is set to dominate this year's virtual World Economic Forum as a virus-battered West struggles and a new US president faces particularly daunting challenges.

The 2020 WEF, which took place in its usual Swiss Alpine resort of Davos, saw the global elite just starting to worry about a pandemic that surfaced in China a month earlier. While the coronavirus leaves a mounting death toll and upends economies, depriving millions of people of work, China and Asian countries in 2021 are making a strong comeback from the virus that hit them first. In virtual format because of the pandemic, next week's event is headlined: "A Crucial Year to Rebuild Trust." The spotlight will be on Chinese President Xi Jinping, who will give a speech on Monday, the opening day of the event that will last through next Friday. The big names from Europe will be German Chancellor Angela Merkel, French President Emmanuel Macron and European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen, who heads the European Union executive.

US President Joe Biden will not appear at the virtual Davos, which has never been a fixture on the White House calendar -- even if the new administration has pledged to revive a US multilateral foreign policy after four years of Donald Trump's America First approach. Trump had been an exception as he stopped in Davos twice, with the real estate billionaire enjoying mixing with the global business elite. Before him, Bill Clinton was the only American president who had travelled to Davos, and that was just once.

UNEMPLOYMENT CRISIS

US jobless claim data underscores employment crisis awaiting Biden

The latest government data confirms layoffs are continuing at high levels in the United States. PHOTO: AFP/FILE US government data released the day after Joe Biden entered the White House made clear the scale of the employment crisis facing the new president as the country struggles to make it through the Covid-19 pandemic.

The United States saw 900,000 new filings for unemployment benefits last week, the Labour Department said Thursday, a huge number that remains well above the single worst week of the 2008-2010 global financial crisis, during which Biden served as vice president under Barack Obama. Economists had been expecting a significant reduction in seasonally adjusted claims in the week ended January 16, but instead they fell just 26,000 from the prior week's downwardly revised total, underscoring the damage done by the pandemic's renewed onslaught in the country.

The government also reported 423,734 new filings made under the Pandemic Unemployment Assistance programme for self-employed people not normally eligible for benefits. That was nearly twice the week prior, after that programme lapsed briefly amid a standoff in Washington over extending it and other aid.

All told, nearly 16 million people were receiving some form of assistance from the government as of January 2 -- a figure that's expected to rise.

DIGITAL INDUSTRIALIZATION

Xinjiang's digital economy grows 10 per cent in 2020

THE digital economy in northwest China's Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region registered a 10-per cent growth year on year in 2020, contributing 26 per cent to the region's annual gross domestic product (GDP), local authorities said on Thursday.

The growth was mainly driven by the construction of new infrastructure projects, such as the Xinjiang Software Park, and the rapid expansion of the 5G+ Industrial Internet last year, according to the regional government's department of industry and information technology.

During the 13th Five-Year Plan period (2016-2020), Xinjiang's digital economy maintained an average annual double-digit growth. Currently, 6,272 5G base stations are operating, with 2.75 million 5G users.

The region has applied the Industrial Internet in more than 20 key industries such as new energy, oil and gas exploitation, electricity, and equipment manufacturing. In 2021, Xinjiang will accelerate industrial digitalization and digital industrialization to promote key-industry integration. These include the energy and chemical, textile and clothing, machinery and equipment, and mining industries, said the department.

Thiha Thana throne and statues of royal pages

Statue of the royal page on the front wing of Thiha Thana throne

Royal Pages

in Myanmar

By Maung Tha
(Archaeology)

TRANSLATED BY
THAN TUN AUNG

MYANMAR encyclopaedia defines a royal page as child servant who served minor duties at the royal palace and royal residences in the past. Veteran historian Dr Toe Hla said those children under seven years old served at the king for carrying out minor tasks.

Religious edifices were decorated with statues of royal pages, and now, they are well-known as Papier-mâché dolls.

Statue of royal page

Some people decorate their houses with puppets of royal page, made of wood, stone or concrete in postures of sitting, playing, standing, offering oil lamps to the Buddha images and so on. Now, the puppet of the royal page is in standing position.

Hair of Papier-mâché doll is tied by a string on both sides of its head. Its neck is decorated with a large gold coin. The doll grids its loins. Large bracelets are worn at wrists and ankles. Cheeks are decorated with round patches of Thanakha. In dancing, the doll wears quarter pants.

In 1996, Myanmar used Papier-mâché doll as a mascot of the Visit Myanmar Year.

Thrones of Myanmar kings were decorated with 12 kinds of decoration including a statue of royal page. The statue can be seen in front of the throne in Anjali Mudra. Some statues bare clothes. Thiha Thana throne displayed at the National Museum in Yangon was decorated with eight 22 inches high gilt royal page statues made of wood.

Carving the statues of royal page dedicates portents for day by day growing up of prestige and power of the king. Anjali Mudra of the statues is the posture of electing the Buddha embryo as the president in the early world, according to Vocabulary in Use of Royal Palace Dictionary.

Origins of royal page and definitions

Some Myanmar histories mentioned ranks, duty and obligations of royal pages in the monarchical era.

They were sanitation workers serving at the western royal building. They served in the reign of King Badon (1712-1819 AD) in the Konbaung era under supervision of clerks from the western minister. They had got 80 baskets of paddy as salaries.

King Bodawpaya allowed 110 people of families from Thandwe, Yanbye and Manaung of Rakhine State to reside in Amarapura Royal Palace in Nadaw of 1150 ME. The king allotted land plots to them and formed the royal page group.

Historian Daw Kyan wrote they served near the king to perform tasks at same positions of those managing shoes, betel quids and tea servants.

The paper on royal administration of Myanmar kings stated the royal pages had to clean the rooms and pavements of queens, princesses and maids of honour. If these areas were uncleaned, the western minister had to punish them.

Old Myanmar History compiled by Myanmar Historical Commission member U Thein Hlaing mentioned child servants had to clean halls of king and queens, especially toilets.

The dictionary compiled by Judson mentioned royal pages as formerly palace sweepers or personal attendant of a Saopha. But, historian Daw Kyan reviewed such servant might not exist current era because of using ‘formerly’.

Royal pages in Bagan era

Researchers clarified matters related to royal pages in Bagan era with evidence. O Pyae Sone Thin stone inscription (at Saw Min Latt Pagoda) carved in 595 ME, Saw Hla Wun Pagoda’s stone inscription in 626 ME, Minwaing stone inscription in 627 ME, Mathkhein Phwarzat stone inscription in 631 ME and Tuyin Pahtoe stone inscription in 651 ME mentioned royal pages. Moreover, Thitmahtee Kyaung stone inscription carved in 634 ME in Bagan era, Minister Intapaccaya stone inscription in 655 ME and Thanbyin Zeya Thahtay stone inscription in 656 ME used words of royal pages.

O Pyaw Sone Thin stone inscription expressed that child servant was one of the royal pages. They were at the same level of Thanbyin, Kalan, Hura and Thukhamein posts. Min Waing stone inscription said the child servant discharged duty together with gift collector Uttamabhiriz under King Uzzana, according to Myanmar Historical Commission member Sayamagyi Daw Kyan. Likewise, Thitmahtee stone inscription mentioned royal pages were witnesses in trading farmlands. Minister Intapaccaya stone inscription mentioned merits gained in donating the monastery were shared with king, minister, mother of the king, first queen and royal pages.

According to the records in the stone inscriptions, royal pages in Bagan era were different in positions of Amarapura and Yadanabon eras. Those servants were at the same level of Thanbyin, Kalan, counsellor, Hura and Thukhamein posts. Royal pages were not room cleaners.

As such, veteran historian Dr. Than Tun remarked that royal pages might be those born at the same moment as the king.

Royal pages in after Bagan era

In the reign of King Ngaseeshin Kyaw Swa in Pinya era, Danyawady revolutionary treatise compiled by Rakhine Sayadaw mentioned matters related to royal pages, saying that Chit Hnaung Oo, son of Tagaung governor, served at Taseeshin Minye Kyaw Swa and his brother Shwe Hsin and the younger at the crown prince.

Uminkyaung stone inscription carved in Pinya era of 700 ME mentioned Apathunge generally used in Bagan era, urging Thanbyin, high officers of Myanmar royal court and royal pages to call well-done for the meritorious deeds. That is why royal pages might be in a high position in the Bagan era.

According to the research conducted by Saya Bo Sheik, the stone inscription of Thangetaw Village head carved in 727 ME in Inwa era mentioned that head of Thangetaw Village U Shwe Khet and wife donated 10 peis of lands to Pinya Shwezigon Pagoda. The stone inscription of Asalathu of Thang-etaw Village donated chamber and land plots to the pagoda in 761 ME. The stone inscription from Yanaungmyin Pagoda in 769 ME stated when King Min Khaung I built Yanaungmyin Pagoda, the head of Thangetaw Village Nan Thu Klaung donated 13 peis of farmlands and 10 pieces of gold bracelets to the pagoda.

Shin Maha Rathtathara of Inwa era composed Samvara poem illustrating royal pages as guards of stairways and arches leading to the inner royal buildings.

In the second Inwa era (Nyaungyan era), royal pages became gunners to take security measures of the royal palace. In the reign of King Thalun, the royal page troops were involved in 40 groups under the control of the western minister. However, some royal pages guarded the dead bodies in the royal palace according to the orders and gazettes.

Researcher Bo Sheik wrote that royal pages became guards at the doors in the time of King Sinku in Konbaung era. In the reign of King Badon, some royal pages discharged the duty of cleaner. Some royal pages discharged higher duties. According to the folded paper of toilet door group, some royal pages guarded toilets in the time of King Badon, but the paper did not mention they carried out sanitation of the toilet.

Seven characteristics of royal pages and royal page dance

Swesone Kyawhtin treatise mentioned Kyeethe Layhtet Sayadaw replied to question on seven characteristics of royal pages having capabilities namely well-knowing wish of the king, having neatness and tidiness, cleverness, abiding by the laws, having wider knowledge, minimizing needs and conscientiousness to serve the king.

The puppet of the royal page is involved in 28 puppets in the marionette drama of Myanmar. Each puppet indicates 28 physical structures of Abhidhamma Desana preached by the Lord Buddha.

The 28 puppets comprise 17 right puppets and 11 left puppets. The puppet of the royal page is included on the list of right puppets. The preliminary dance of female dancer in the drama needs to follow 12 kinds of dancing called 12 dancing sections of a female dancer. Seven sections from the performance of the female dancer were separated into seven kinds of dancing. Dancing of royal page was included in both 12 sections of a female dancer and seven kinds of dancing. As such, two puppets of royal page were used in the past, but the marionette performance uses only one royal page puppet.

In staging marionette performances, it is the most difficult to handle strings of the royal page. Later, the dance of royal page was inserted into the theatrical drama performance. In central Myanmar, local people perform a dance of royal page to the accompaniment of Dobet troupe in the procession of novice-to-be.

As royal pages served the king from Bagan to Konbaung eras, they might be trusty servants of the king. Their ranks might be the same as servants for shoes, tea and betel spittle or might be higher them. Now, royal pages cannot be seen, but statues and dance of royal page still remain as Myanmar cultural heritages.

Japan says 'no truth' in Tokyo Olympics cancellation report

TOKYO—Japan dismissed a report claiming officials see cancelling the Tokyo Olympics as inevitable on Friday, as Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga said he was "determined" to hold the Games.

Deputy government

spokesman Manabu Sakai there was "no truth" to the report in The Times, which quoted an unnamed ruling coalition source as saying "the consensus is that it's too difficult" to hold the Games.

It is the latest article to cast doubt on the Games, which were postponed over the coronavirus last year but have been hit by a surge in cases and plunging public support. "I am determined to realize a safe and secure Tokyo Games as proof that mankind will have overcome the virus," Suga insisted on Friday.

Games organizers also said they were "fully focused on hosting the Games this summer".

But Sakai said a decision on hosting the Games was looming for Japan, a statement that appeared to deviate from the government's stated position.

"At some point in time, we will naturally make a decision as to whether to actually hold it," he said.

"Until then the Japanese government will do what it needs to do and make progress and prepare for it."

Concerns have risen as Japan battles a third wave of virus infections, with polls showing around 80 per cent of Japanese oppose hosting the event this year.—AFP ■

Defending champions Serbia, led by Novak Djokovic, drawn in tough pool

MELBOURNE—Defending champions Serbia were handed a "brutal" draw in the ATP Cup Friday, with Novak Djokovic's team facing Germany and Canada in the group stage.

The tournament - launched last year as a rival to the Davis Cup - has been slimmed down to 12 teams this year and will be played in Melbourne as a curtain-raiser to the Australian Open, rather than the multi-city format employed in 2020.

It was delayed to 1-5 February because of COVID-19 restrictions in the host city and the prize money on offer has also been halved to US$7.5 million, reflecting a leaner, pandemic-affected budget.

Commentator Mark Petchey said the Serbians faced a tricky draw in Group A against the Alexander Zverev-inspired Germany and a Canada team featuring Denis Shapovalov and Milos Raonic.—AFP ■

Liverpool's 68-game unbeaten home run comes to an end after 0-1 loss to Burnley

Liverpool—Jurgen Klopp took responsibility for the sudden collapse of Liverpool's Premier League title defence after their 68-game unbeaten run in the Premier League at Anfield came to a stunning end in a 1-0 defeat to Burnley on Thursday.

The Clarets began the game just one place above the relegation zone, but gave their chances of beating the drop a huge boost when Ashley Barnes was tripped by Alisson Becker seven minutes from time and then beat the Brazilian from the penalty spot.

Klopp's men have now failed to win in five consecutive league games to slip to fourth in the table, six points behind leaders Manchester United. Liverpool had not tasted a league defeat at Anfield since April 2017.

Since then the Reds have ended a 30-year wait to win a league title, but their chances of repeating that feat are fading rapidly after a disastrous run over the past month. "We lost the game, which I think is pretty impossible to lose, but we did it," said Klopp. "That is my fault because it is my job so that the boys have the right feelings, like they have the right amount of confidence." —AFP ■
