Message of Greetings sent by State Administration Council Chairman Senior General Min Aung Hlaing on the occasion of the Workers' Day

1 May 2021

Esteemed workers,
I extend this message of greetings on the occasion of Workers' Day. May the entire workers in Myanmar; all the workers worldwide, including Myanmar migrant workers, and the people enjoy fruitful results of their good deeds and their socio-economic lives.

All global countries celebrate Workers' Day that falls on 1 May every year. Likewise, I send this message in honour of all the Myanmar workers who are the main force essential for developing the State economy in Myanmar.

In the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, Myanmar encountered losses in socio-economic lives in all sectors affected by COVID-19. Amidst difficulties, crises and challenges, the government, on this opportune occasion, would like to explain the endeavours to serve the interests of its citizen workers and create the appropriate job opportunities.

Esteemed workers,

Emphasizing the role of workers steadfastly, the government disbursed loans to businesspersons, who suspended their businesses for various reasons during the outbreak of COVID-19, in order to sustain their factories and industries and ensure the employment of the jobless workers.

The Social Security Board accepted registration of 36,670 insured workplaces and 1,248,354 insured employees and allotted K69,109.58 million for 1,410,194 cases of entitlement from the 2014-2015 financial year up to the end of February 2021. Moreover, the amount of K67,912.467 million, 40 per cent of entitlement as social security assistance, was disbursed to 1,583,533 insured workers from temporarily closed factories during the COVID-19 period when the combined teams inspected factories whether they conformed with health guidelines of the Ministry of Health and Sports.

The Ministry of Labour, Immigration and Population provides 40 per cent of the salaries as social security cash assistance to the workers from the factories, which were damaged by fire. Jobless workers from those factories are also appropriately re-employed.

The government holds negotiation with the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry, relevant businesspersons and organizations in order to seek solutions for the resumption and continuous operation of factories and industries, including the labour-intensive garment industry.

Labour offices are being run across the nation for the people to grasp job opportunities. The government assigns mobile teams to go right down to the areas where the labour offices cannot be opened yet for seeking employment, cooperates with local employment agencies and holds the job fairs where employers and job seekers can negotiate for the job processes through one-stop service to cut time and money.

Esteemed workers,

The government has managed to soonest repatriate Myanmar workers and Myanmar citizens back home. They are stranded in foreign countries for a long time in various difficulties due to the suspension of international flights during the COVID-19 period.

In so doing, a total of 1,086 Myanmar citizens being detained under punishments at detention centres in Malaysia for lack of identity, based on various reasons. And, 70 Myanmar citizens arriving in India were brought back home by the naval vessel of the Tatmadaw.

Similarly, a total of 12,416 Myanmar citizens missing chances to return home by facing difficulties were sent back home by relief flight, while 26,681 Myanmar citizens re-entered Myanmar through border crossings. The government gave a helping hand to those citizens to receive test and prevention of COVID-19 and return to their respective native areas on a smooth process. In addition, arrangements were made to secure employment for them in Myanmar and attend the skill courses for their respective professions.

The government drafted the forced labour elimination action plan (2019-2021) and established the national complaint machinery for forced labour to resolve the complaints.

As Myanmar labours were sent to foreign countries under the 1999 Overseas Employment Law via overseas employment licensed agencies, a total of 1,322,386 Myanmar labour have been sent from 1990 to February 2021. Labour attachés were assigned in the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Malaysia for helping Myanmar labour enjoy entitlements under the laws of respective countries, whereas Myanmar embassies in international countries give necessary protection for those Myanmar labours.

Meetings to raise awareness of labour affairs were held between employers and employer organizations as well as workers and labour organizations in the Union territory, regions and states with the aim of enabling the employers and employees to have knowledge about proper exercises of fair workplace relations system, leadership, supervisions, labour law and policies.

Tripartite cooperation among the government, employers, and employees focuses on labour affairs with the formation of 3,102 employer and employee organizations under the Labour Organization Law-2011 according to the ILO Convention 87 for freedom of association and protection of the right to organize Myanmar ratified.

Esteemed workers,

The State Administration Council is implementing the five-point roadmap and nine political, economic and social objectives after taking over the State's power according to the Constitution (2008). COVID-19 pandemic affected businesses included in the five-point roadmap of the State Administration Council must be remedied in various ways as quickly as possible through cooperation and endeavours of the government, the strength of the labour forces, and all intellectual and intelligentsia people.

Moreover, it can vividly be seen that stabilizing the market economic system and creating the job opportunities to manufacture many products of the State in line with the objectives of the economic affairs are much expanded on the implementation of capable labour forces.

The government is striving for ensuring fair rights and protection without harming the interests of both employers and employees. As the competitiveness of the labour market will rise in accord with the free migration of skilled workers included in the roadmap of the ASEAN Economic Community being implemented in the ASEAN region, Myanmar labour need to compete with those at home and employees in the ASEAN region. As such, they have to make preparations to have skills in respective sectors if investments of foreign countries flow into Myanmar.

As now is an opportune time to make utmost efforts for the country's development, all need to abide by the laws, rules and disciplines. That is why the tripartite endeavours of the government, the employers and the employees can soonest strengthen the State economy for the long term development of the State. Consequently, the production volume will increase while health, education and social sectors will meet improvement simultaneously. As such, employers and employees should understandably join hands with each other to strive for the emergence of a stable and peaceful environment.

That is why I'd like to sincerely urge the workers, which is the force playing a pivotal role in the economic development of the State, to fully cooperate with the government in its steadfast implementation so as to improve the socio-economic lives of the people and emerge a stable and peaceful environment.

Myanmar needs to emphasize preventive measures of COVID-19

ENCOURAGEMENT should be given to the people to take physical exercises for their healthiness. Myanmar’s expected lifespan is about 66 years, which is less than those of other countries. Priority must be given to uplift the health sector for ensuring the health and fitness of the people. As the infectious rate of COVID-19 is high in some countries, including India, Myanmar needs to emphasize preventive measures of COVID-19.

Increased production of quality meat and fish through region-wise livestock farms will help people consume meat and fish at fair prices: Senior General

State Administration Council Chairman Senior General Min Aung Hlaing is hearing the work progress reports at the Thilawa multiple agriculture and livestock zone yesterday.

CHAIRMAN of the State Administration Council Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Min Aung Hlaing inspected progress in implementing Thilawa multiple agriculture and livestock zone between Yangon River and Hmawwun Creek in Kyauktan Township of Yangon Region yesterday morning.

At the hall of the breeding zone, the Senior General heard reports on the progress of Thilawa multiple agriculture and livestock zone, 26th-mile multiple agriculture and livestock zone, and operating Shwemuyin fish farm in Twantay Township in cooperation with Silver Sea Livestock and Fishery Company Ltd, implementation of multiple agriculture and livestock zones and progress of work operations by officials.

In his response to the reports, the Senior General said that the agriculture and livestock zones in Yangon Region aim to ensure the food sufficiency of local people in the region. Efforts are being made to breed fish and duck at Thilawa multiple agriculture and livestock zone and Shwemuyin fish farm and oxen and dairy cows, pigs, poultry, and goats at the 26th-mile multiple agriculture and livestock zone in order to meet the livestock and fish demand of Yangon Region.

The increased production of quality meat and fish through region-wise livestock farms will help the people consume meat and fish at fair prices with effectiveness to raising the consumption rate of meat and fish of the people. As such, the people will be healthy and fit. Consequently, they will be capable of operating the businesses for the development of the State.

The Senior General stressed the need to sell livestock and fish in the market at fair prices so as to reduce the high prices of these products. Moreover, it is necessary to strive for exporting livestock and fish products to the foreign market. Arrangements should be made as a model for carrying out the long term livestock tasks. Research on hatching must be done for having necessary quality pedigree species for the livestock breeding sector.

Fingerlings are released into rivers and creeks continuously for ensuring plentiful fish resources.

With regard to agriculture, it is necessary to conduct agricultural researches to obtain quality strains of crops so as to cultivate the high yield and quality paddy strains to be able to produce quality rice which is the primary staple food. Efforts must be made not only for meeting the local rice demand but also for importing rice to foreign countries. The Senior General stressed the need to collect the quality seeds of crops, systematically prepare the soils for cultivation, apply the correct agricultural methods and ensure the sufficiency of water. If so, farmers will have quality agricultural products. As such, it is necessary to continuously supply meat, fish and agricultural products not only to military families but also to the people at fair prices.

Trade surplus interrelated with taxes to smoothen State machinery

EVERY country relies on their incomes to operate and manage various measures for the State and the people on a daily basis.

These incomes can be earned from the production of State-owned and private-run enterprises or levying the tax. All global countries classify various kinds of tax to be levied over businesses and trading.

Developing and developed countries are based on trade surplus and trade deficit which limit their incomes. The countries encountering the trade deficit are sure to struggle operation of the State machinery, while the countries facing the trade surplus will enjoy smooth and betterment in the process of all sectors solving problems by spending incomes allotted from the tax.

In fact, local businesspersons need to strive for extending the production of quality products to be exported to the international market. The government will levy tax over the incomes of those businesspersons and spend it on nation-building tasks.

17 budget year respectively.

In assessing the aforesaid trade surplus data, everybody can see the gradual growth of the State economy. Such kind of surplus income could contribute much to booming the State economy.

In fact, local businesspersons need to strive for extending the production of quality products to be exported to the international market. The government will levy tax over the incomes of those businesspersons and spend it on nation-building tasks.

As such, the income based on trade surplus and taxes is interrelated as a key role to operate the State machinery in a smooth process with prosperity.

In the first four-monthly period of the 2020-21 financial year, Myanmar sent export products worth US$191.715 million to Thailand and bought import goods worth US$700.463 million. The total trade volume between the two countries during the period amounted to US$1,620.177 million. That is why more than US$200 million worth of trade surplus was kept in the hand of Myanmar.

Regarding the trade surplus based on calculation over the data mentioned by the Ministry of Commerce, Myanmar has been bagging hundreds of millions of trade surplus in exportation and importation with Thailand since the 2016-2017 budget year.

The trade surplus of Myanmar based on the trade volume conducted with Thailand amounted to more than US$1,000 million in 2017-20 financial year, more than US$1,000 million in 2018-19 financial year, more than US$100 million from 1 April to 30 September 2018, more than US$600 million in 2017-18 financial year and more than US$100 million in 2016-

Risky business: COVID-19 and safety at work

The numbers of home workers around the world have been swelled by the COVID-19 pandemic, putting a fresh focus on the need for employers to ensure that their employees are working in a safe environment. On the World Day for Safety and Health at Work, we look at some of the ways the UN is helping employers and governments to keep people safe, wherever they work.

THE world of work has been upended by COVID-19, and the effects are likely to be long-lasting. Before the pandemic, there were some 260 million home-based workers (not including domestic or care workers). The International Labour Organization (ILO) estimates that figure could have doubled, with as many as one in three workers remote working in North America and Europe, and one in six in sub-Saharan Africa.

The rollout of vaccines, mainly in the developed world, has increased the possibilities of a return to the workplace, but many companies and workers have signalled a wish to retain a degree of home working, after seeing some of the benefits. For employers, these include minimizing the risk of contagion and potentially spending less on expensive office space whilst staff no longer have to spend commuting to and from the workplace.

'If you're losing your mind, I'm right there with you'

However, whilst some are enjoying baking bread or taking a stroll during a conference call, and using the commuting time to indulge in new pursuits, others have been craving a return to a more structured work-life routine.

Teleworking is likely to remain an important factor in many people's jobs.

"I tell myself daily that I am grateful to have a job with understanding supervisors and colleagues. But all of it is hard. If you're also a working mum losing her mind daily, know that I'm right there with you," says Paulina, a New York-based teleworker.

"I have chaired meetings with a laptop and headphones on one side of a tiny, New York City kitchen while cooking lunch and having a screaming toddler wrapped around my ankles. While all of this is cute once or maybe twice, regular screams of children in the background can only be tolerated for so long. I should know, because I passed that line sometime in July."

Stories such as this explain why a recent study by the International Labour Organization (ILO) found that 41 per cent of people who worked from home considered themselves highly stressed, compared to 25 per cent of those who worked on-site.

"The most effective way to eliminate the risk of contagion in a work context is, for those who can do it, teleworking, says Joaquim Nunes, head of occupational health and safety at the ILO, "But we still need to pay attention to the physical and mental well-being of workers".

As teleworking is likely to remain an important factor in many people's jobs, Mr Nunes says that work-related policies will have to be updated to reflect the new reality.

"There's a good chance that the rise of teleworking during the COVID-19 pandemic will permanently change how we live and work. Many governments have realised this, and are taking a fresh look at the rights of employees working from home. For example, companies should ensure that workers do not feel isolated, whilst giving them the right to disconnect, rather than being online 24 hours a day".

In Chile, a law adopted early in March 2020 goes some way to addressing some of these concerns. The legislation recognizes the right of remote workers to disconnect for at least 12 continuous hours in a 24-hour period. In addition, employers cannot require workers to respond to communications on rest days or holidays.

A healthy home?

Beyond the question of comfort and mental health, is one of physical safety. It is often said that most accidents happen at home, so, if this is where much of the working week is spent, should employers be responsible for making sure apartments aren't death traps?

"For now, there are no easy answers when it comes to ensuring a suitable home office environment", says Mr. Nunes. "However, we can say that the same principles that apply to other workplaces apply to teleworkers, in that employers have a general duty of care, as reasonably practicable. Employers can't control the workplace when staff are working from home, but they can provide ergonomic equipment to workers, such as suitable chairs, and help them to assess their own risks and to learn about how to maintain healthy lifestyles."

Teleworking is also challenging for enforcement agencies, as usually inspectors do not have free access to the private spaces. One solution to ensure compliance with legislation could be virtual inspections, which are already taking place in Nordic countries on a voluntary basis. "These involve labour inspectors video calling a worker at home, and being shown their work chair, desk, and lighting setup", explains Mr. Nunes.

EU inches closer to Covid certificate for travel

THE European Parliament on Thursday agreed its position on how a Covid certificate should work, bringing the EU closer to launching a document to open up travel within the bloc.

Europe intends to have a certificate showing the bearer's vaccination status, Covid test results and/or evidence of having survived the disease up and running in June, in time for the continent's summer vacation period.

While technical work has been ongoing to ensure the certificate is recognized across all 27 EU member states, final details have to be worked out involving capitals, the European Commission and the parliament.

The first change MEPs have called for to a commission proposal is the name. Instead of a "digital green certificate" they want to call it an "EU Covid-19 certificate" – to avoid any implication of it becoming a "vaccine passport".

They said the document should "neither serve as travel document nor become a precondition to exercise the right to free movement" and should only be in use for 12 months.

Stressing that the certificate should not result in discrimination, parliament demanded that Covid-19 tests for travel should be free of charge. The commission has said that this issue should be left up to member states.

The parliament's negotiation position was announced Thursday following a vote late Wednesday, with 540 MEPs in favour, 119 against, and 31 abstentions.

'Safe travel'

European Commission chief Ursula von der Leyen welcomed the result, but ignored the proposed renaming of the certificate.

"The (European Parliament) adopting its position on a Digital Green Certificate is a key step towards free and safe travel this summer," she tweeted.

She urged a "swift conclusion" to the final negotiations on the document, adding: "We will have the EU (virtual verification) gateway up and running by June, while supporting the timely roll-out of national systems."

Initially, the plan is for EU citizens and residents in the bloc to be able to use the certificate to avoid quarantine, testing and other obstacles to intra-EU travel.

Covid certificates would ease travel within the EU during the busy summer holiday season.

AI, captain! First autonomous ship prepares for maiden voyage

THE “Mayflower 400” -- the world’s first intelligent ship -- bobs gently in a light swell as it stops its engines in Plymouth Sound, off England’s southwest coast, before self-activating a hydrophone designed to listen to whales.

The 50-foot (15-metre) trimaran, which weighs nine tonnes and navigates with complete autonomy, is preparing for a transatlantic voyage.

On its journey the vessel, covered in solar panels, will study marine pollution and analyse plastic in the water, as well as track aquatic mammals.

Eighty percent of the underwater world remains unexplored.

Brett Phaneuf, co-founder of the charity ProMare and the mastermind behind the Mayflower project, said the ocean exerts “the most powerful force” on the global climate.

Rosie Lickorish, a specialist in emerging technologies at IBM, one of the partners on the project, said the unmanned craft provided an advantage in the “unforgiving environment”.

“Having a ship without people on board allows scientists to expand the area they can observe,” she told AFP.

A variety of technology and service providers have contributed to the project with hundreds of individuals involved from nations including India, Switzerland and the United States, said Phaneuf.

Austria courts face fallout from ski resorts’ virus spread

THE last time Sieglinde Schopf hugged Hannes, her husband of almost 50 years, was before he boarded a train to go skiing in Austria’s popular Alpine province of Tyrol last March.

A few weeks later, in April, the 72-year-old, infected with coronavirus, died alone, hooked up to a hospital bed.

“My entire world shattered into pieces,” says Schopf, who had convinced her husband to go to Ischgl, which ended up becoming one of Europe’s coronavirus hotspots last year.

“I can’t forgive myself, because in the end, I sent him to his death.”

Now a year later, hers is one of 10 lawsuits filed by plaintiffs from Austria and Germany who seek compensation, alleging that Austrian authorities failed to respond quickly enough to coronavirus outbreaks in Ischgl and other resorts.

More than 6,000 people from 45 countries claim they got infected -- the majority of them in Ischgl -- where unwitting tourists continued to ski, drink and party, while the virus was spreading, according to Austrian consumer rights association VSV, which is collecting the complaints.

‘Broad spectrum’ of suits

Schopf believes that her husband, a retired journalist and avid skier since his childhood, caught the virus during the panicked evacuation by bus, crammed with other tourists who were sneezing and coughing for three hours. When the Austrian called her husband on March 13 to tell him that Chancellor Sebastian Kurz had just announced a quarantine for Ischgl, “they were still on the ski slopes,” she told AFP. The widow is now suing the Republic of Austria for 100,000 euros ($120,000) over her husband’s death.—AFP ■

Credit Suisse board member quits after financial fiascos

CREDIT Suisse announced Friday that one of its board members would step aside after shareholders called for his head following major losses linked to the collapses of the Archegos and Greensill financial firms.

The Swiss bank said in a brief statement that Andreas Gottschling, the head of the board’s risk committee, would not seek re-election at a general assembly later on Friday.

Credit Suisse has been hit hard by bankruptcies at Archegos, a US hedge fund, and British financial firm Greensill.

Shockwaves rippled through global financial markets and institutions last month when then little-known Archegos sold at least $20 billion in stocks as it sought to cover obligations to its lenders. Losses at leading global banks have jumped past $10 billion, with Credit Suisse accounting for around half of the damage.

Credit Suisse had also invested heavily in Greensill, a firm specialised in short-term corporate loans via a complex and opaque business model, and was forced to suspend four funds after the firm declared insolvency last month. —AFP ■

US criticizes Ukraine dismissal of reformist energy chief

THE United States on Thursday voiced alarm over Ukraine's dismissal of the reform-minded head of the state-owned oil and gas company, urging its ally to do more to improve corporate governance.

The Ukrainian government on Wednesday sacked Naftogaz chief Andriy Kobolev, whose moves toward transparency won him support among Western investors, and suspended all members of the company's supervisory board.

State Department spokesman Ned Price said the United States was "deeply concerned" over the "calculated move," saying it showed "disregard for fair and transparent corporate governance practices."

"Unfortunately, these actions are just the latest example of ignoring best practices and putting Ukraine's hard-fought economic progress at risk," Price told reporters.

"We will continue to support Ukraine in strengthening its institutions, including advancing democratic institutions and corporate governance reforms, but Ukraine's leaders must do their part," he said. The United States and Western European nations are vital supporters of Ukraine, one of Europe's poorest countries that has been under longstanding pressure to address corruption.

The United States voiced solidarity with Ukraine earlier this month when Russia amassed troops on its border, raising fears.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Giuliani says evidence seized during FBI raid will prove him 'innocent'

RUDY Giuliani, the ex-personal lawyer of Donald Trump, said Thursday the evidence collected during an FBI raid on his home as part of a probe into his dealings in Ukraine would prove him and the former president "innocent," slamming the government's investigation.

The former New York mayor told Fox News' Tucker Carlson that the electronic devices seized at his Manhattan residence and a separate office Wednesday would show he did not violate federal law while helping Trump look for dirt on political rival Joe Biden in Ukraine in 2019.

"The evidence is exculpatory. It proves the president and I and all of us are innocent," Giuliani said of the Ukraine dealings, for which the former president was later impeached.—AFP ■

Kyrgyzstan says ceasefire agreed with Tajikistan after clashes

KYRGYZSTAN said Thursday that three people, including a child, died in clashes at its disputed border with Tajikistan, shortly after announcing the Central Asian rivals had agreed to a ceasefire.

A statement from Kyrgyzstan's health ministry said the country had suffered 84 casualties during the fighting including three fatalities.

They included "a girl born in 2008", the health ministry said, adding that she had died while being rushed to hospital.

The clashes that erupted along the border between the two poor, mountainous countries were the heaviest in years.

Kyrgyzstan's foreign ministry said in a statement that a "complete ceasefire" had been agreed from 8:00 pm (1400 GMT) on Thursday, with armed forces returning to their bases.

Tajikistan did not immediately release an official statement on the agreement.

The two have been locked in border disputes for decades and sporadic firefights have broken out along the frontier for years.

But Thursday's clash between their two armies was rare and raised fears it might escalate into a wider conflict.—AFP ■

Israel pilgrimage stampede kills at least 44

A massive stampede at a densely packed Jewish pilgrimage site killed at least 44 people in northern Israel on Friday, with rescue workers facing chaotic crowds while trying to evacuate the injured.

The disaster occurred in Meron at the site of the reputed tomb of Rabbi Shimon Bar Yochai, a second-century Talmudic sage, where mainly ultra-Orthodox Jews flock to mark the Lag BaOmer holiday.

Closed last year due to coronavirus restrictions, this year's pilgrimage was expected to be a celebratory event in a nation that has largely reopened thanks to a successful vaccination effort.

The pilgrimage was largest public gathering since the pandemic began, with reports that there were three times more people there than authorized. Initial reports indicated that the carnage began when a section of stadium seating collapsed but rescue workers later linked the casualties to a stampede.—AFP ■

Guantanamo detainee Abu Zubaydah to file complaint with UN agency

A Guantanamo Bay inmate alleges he was tortured by his American captors after the September 11 attacks and will file a complaint with the UN Friday over his unending 19-year detention, his lawyer said.

Abu Zubaydah's lawyer Helen

Duffy said the complaint will be filed with the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention against the United States and six other countries, asking for intervention in his case.

The 50-year-old Saudi-born Palestinian, whose real name is Zayn al-Abidin Muhammad Husayn, was detained in Pakistan in March 2002 on suspicions he was a senior member of Al-Qaeda who helped plan the 9/11 attacks.

According to his lawyer, he was handed over to the CIA, which moved him through a series of secret units in several countries where he was brutally interrogated.

He was the first of a series of detainees to go through waterboarding and other now-banned techniques as US intelligence sought to force information from him about others in the jihadist group. In 2003 he was transferred to Guantanamo, where he has stayed ever since. US officials have since admitted he was never a member of Al-Qaeda or an important figure among Islamic extremists. Moreover, one of his interrogators, an FBI agent, has said that he cooperated easily before he was tortured, so that he had nothing to add once he was subjected to the CIA's extreme interrogation methods, which included 83 instances of waterboarding.—AFP ■

“Aung La N Sang: I want to do two or three more fights this year”

AUNG LA N SANG said in his interview with the ONE Championship that he would like to challenge two or three more fights of ONE Championship Middleweight or Light Heavyweight divisions this year.

After suffering a shock loss to Reinier De Ridder in the Light Heavyweight World title clash in the main event of ONE Championship TNT IV event on Thursday, Aung La has revealed his strong desires plus feeling ahead of his next ONE Championship's journey.

“The damage is superficial, so I don't need much time off. I'm healthy, and I'll be back in training Monday. I want to do two or three more fights this year if ONE allows me to”, Aung La N Sang said. Aung La also gave messages to the people of Myanmar: “I need to work a little bit harder; put a little more time into the ground game. I don't think I'm proud of my performance,” Aung La N Sang said. “I'm sorry I didn't get the win. I'm really upset about that, but people, thank you for the support, thank you for love. Keep fighting, keep doing what's right.

On the contrary, Aung La N Sang is hoping to regain his middleweight belt. “I'm done with a light heavyweight. I'm all middleweight now. I'm down to compete against anybody, but to be the best version of myself. I think middleweight is my home,” Aung La said.

“I think, stylistically, Brandon is a bad matchup for [Reinier]. I think he is biting off more than he can chew”, the former two-division ONE World Champion added.—GNLM ■

Tokyo Olympics could be held without fans: Games chief to AFP

THIS summer's virus-postponed Olympics could be held behind closed doors, Tokyo 2020 president Seiko Hashimoto told AFP on Friday, pledging to ensure the Games will be safe.

Former Olympian Hashimoto said the Games could only be a success if organisers “completely protect” athletes and people in Japan, and that she is hopeful people will “be glad” the event went ahead.

Overseas spectators have already been barred from the Games, and this week a decision on domestic fans was delayed until June, with organisers citing a new wave of infections in Japan.

“There might be a situation where we can't allow any spectators to attend,” Hashimoto conceded in an interview.

“The only way that we can call the Games a success is if we completely protect the lives and health of athletes and the people of Japan.”

Most people in Japan back either a further delay of the Games or an outright cancellation, and a recent surge in virus cases has prompted a state of emergency in Tokyo and other parts of the country.

With the medical system already under pressure, Olympic organisers have been criticised for requesting volunteer medical staff for the Games.

Hashimoto said cutting spectators could ease pressure on the medical system.

“If the event itself does change, I think it will be with regard to spectators,” she said.

Man Utd aim to keep Man City title celebrations on ice

MANCHESTER City could wrap up a third Premier League title in four seasons on Sunday, but Manchester United can keep their local rivals waiting by inflicting further damage on Liverpool's hopes of a return to the Champions League next season.

City's 10-point lead with just five games remaining means it is a matter of when, not if, they will collect the second trophy of a potential treble.

Pep Guardiola's men lifted the League Cup for the fourth consecutive season last weekend before taking a huge step towards the Champions League final with a 2-1 semi-final, first leg win away to Paris Saint-Germain on Wednesday.

The return leg against

PSG is likely to play a big factor in Guardiola's team selection for Saturday's trip to Crystal Palace.

However, one of the hallmarks of City's success this season has been their strength in depth, giving Guardiola plenty of options should he choose to rotate his squad once more.

Raheem Sterling, Gabriel Jesus, Sergio Aguero, Fernandinho, Ferran Torres and Aymeric Laporte are among those who did not get off the bench in Paris in midweek and could start against the Eagles.

Palace have won just once in their last seven games as they meander towards the end of the season with safety in the top-flight secured for another season.

Inter on brink of Serie A title as Juve battle for Champions League spot

INTER Milan are on the brink of the Serie A title which they could claim for the first time in over a decade this weekend while Juventus scramble for a Champions League spot.

Antonio Conte's Inter travel south to basement club Crotona on Saturday where a win would allow them to put one hand on a trophy they last won in 2010.

If Inter win and second-placed Atalanta, who are 11 points off top spot, fail to claim all three points at Sassuolo on Sunday, Inter will lift their 19th Serie A crown with four games to go.

Inter could also be crowned champions with a draw if Atalanta lose, but other results would have to go the league leaders' way.

Inter's Chinese president Steven Zhang returned to Milan this week for the run-in to the title celebrations.

And despite the pressure midfielder Nicolò Barella said the team were in a “calm frame of mind” having come close last season.

Inter finished one point behind Juventus last year, having also lost the Europa League final in 2020 to Sevilla.

“We had the same objective last season. We lost a final and this galvanized us,” said Barella.

“We transformed the experience into something positive. This year, we're in the position we wanted to be in.

“We're a well-balanced side that has found an identity.”

Barella scored in Inter's 2-0 win over Juventus in the San Siro in January, “the match that made us aware of our strength,” the Italian said. —AFP ■
