Natural gas export tops US$2.17 bln in nine months

MYANMAR'S exports of natural gas are estimated at US$2.175 billion in the past nine months (October-June) of the current financial year 2020-2021, the Commerce Ministry's data showed.

The figures indicated a sharp drop of over $1 billion compared to the year-ago period.

There are 53 onshore blocks and 51 offshore blocks, totalling 104 blocks. A total of 25 onshore blocks and 31 offshore blocks are being operated under foreign investment. Natural gas extraction is being made at the Yadana, the Yedagun, the Shwe, and the Zawtika offshore blocks as well as onshore drilling blocks. Yearly extraction is elevated to cubic feet in 670.36 billion from 600 billion last year, according to the statement of the Ministry of Electricity and Energy.

The above incidents were investigated and it was discovered that terrorists conspired to commit acts of violence by temporarily renting houses or apartments. Therefore, landlords are required to report the accurate information of the tenants with complete documents under Section 17 of the Ward/Village-Tract Administration Law, and to cooperate by notifying the relevant authorities in a timely manner if they find that their tenants are suspicious.

In addition, the rented house or apartment will be confiscated as evidence under the Counter-Terrorism Law and will be confiscated as State Treasury as a result of the investigation.

If product is more than the town needs, we will be able to supply it to the surrounding towns and villages,” he added.

Kyat depreciation in the local forex market adversely impacted the imported edible palm oil market, coupled with the shipment problem amid the COVID-19 pandemic. The prices of imported edible palm oil remained upward trend, the edible oil traders stated.

The price soared to US$1,185-1,355 per 18-litre can at present. The price may vary depending on the local currency value. The palm oil was priced at over K4,200 per viss in the Mandalay market, Mandalay wholesale market's data indicated.

In early January 2021, production slump in importing countries Malaysia and Indonesia, caused by erratic weather conditions and the COVID-19 impacts, high imports by certain countries under tax reduction, a tax hike on exports in producing countries and the short storage of palm oil in those countries contributed to the rise in edible oil price. The palm oil price stood at $1,055-1,200 per tonne in the foreign market then.

Myanmar brought in 620 million worth of palm oil in the past nine months (October-June) of the current financial year 2020-2021, according to the Myanmar Customs Department.

“The oil palm trees produce fruits in abundance this time. The price is likely to be in the bull market up to October if any trade barrier will not occur,” Chair U San Lin of the Myanmar Edible Oil Dealers' Association said.

Myanmar Edible Oil Dealers' Association is attempting to maintain price stability, prevent market manipulation, import the palm oil from foreign countries sustainably for self-sufficiency, distribute the edible oil at a fair price to the consumers and ensure that there will be no edible oil shortage in regions and state when there is a rise in imported oil price.

The domestic consumption of edible oil is estimated at 1 million tonnes per year. The local cooking oil production is just about 400,000 tonnes. To meet the self-sufficiency in the domestic market, about 700,000 tonnes of cooking oil are yearly imported. — KK/GNLM

Vaccinate the people to prevent and control COVID-19

NOWADAYS, the government is striving for arranging the vaccination for the people without delay amid many difficulties, pressures and disturbances as part of efforts to serve the national cause and the national interests.

Everybody needs to be able to work for ensuring the prosperity of the nation. Only when they are healthy will they be able to work. Currently, it is necessary to place emphasis on staying away from COVID-19 for being healthy. Only when they are free from COVID-19 can they work, do business, learn, meditate and operate the social life as usual. As such, the government is making utmost efforts for providing anti-COVID-19 vaccines to the people as much as it can.

In fact, the vaccination of COVID-19 is arranged with the purpose of a national cause. The vaccination programme is being implemented without dogmatism and personal cult but it creates a chance for the people to participate in the nation-building tasks.

The anti-COVID-19 vaccination programme is inclusive of all the national people of Myanmar. The government does not have any plans to leave anyone in the programme as all are citizens of the nation. So, the people residing in border regions, far-flung areas, internally displaced person's camps, prisons and those from Rakhine State have the right to receive the COVID-19 vaccine. Although some ethnic armed organizations break provisions of the NCA, the government contacts them to give the vaccines.

So far, the government has cost US$169 million for the purchase of vaccines for the fight against the COVID-19 and medical equipment while spending K566 billion on maintenance and construction of hospitals, clinics, COVID-19 centres and social organizations in addition to more than US$500,000 on general costs. Till today, the government is ready to spend the fund on the prevention of COVID-19.

As State responsibilities, the government arranged the vaccination for 2.1 million units of anti-COVID vaccine to the people for the first time and 2.6 million units for the second time. Thanks to the efforts of the government, 10 million units of anti-COVID-19 vaccine will arrive in Myanmar in September, 10 more million units in October and 10 another million units in coming November. Negotiation is being conducted with the production companies for purchasing the more units of vaccines. If the entire people received the vaccination, they could save their lives to some degree.

6 months' immunity in mild covid patients as antibodies persist: study

Researchers analyzed nearly 130 subjects with PCR-confirmed COVID-19 illness between three and six months after initial infection.

“We’re showing that people with mild bouts of COVID-19 did really well after their infection, made antibodies, and kept them,” added Schuler.

COVID antibody tests

The prospective study's participants were either Michigan Medicine healthcare workers or patients with a high risk of exposure to COVID-19. Most subjects took part in the same research team's previous study, which found that COVID antibody tests are effective at predicting prior infection.

During the observation period, none of the subjects who produced antibodies were re-infected, compared to 15 antibody-negative patients. Schuler's team also found that the antibodies' ability to neutralize COVID-19 did not differ significantly from the first visit, which occurred three months after infection, to the second visit at the six-month mark.

“While some studies have suggested antibodies against COVID-19 wane over time, these findings provide strong prospective evidence for longer-term immunity for those who produce an immune response to mild infection,” said James Baker Jr, MD, senior author of the paper and founding director of the Mary H. Weiser Food Allergy Center at Michigan Medicine.

“To our knowledge, this is the first prospective study that demonstrates such a risk reduction for clinical reinfection in this specific type of population,” added Baker Jr.

The team of researchers is now analyzing samples of this subject group taken up to a year after infection to further evaluate antibody responses. Meanwhile, they concluded that individuals with COVID-19 can delay vaccination for 90 days after infection ends.

The Centres for Disease Control and Prevention recommends those treated with monoclonal antibodies or convalescent plasma wait 90 days after receiving treatment before getting vaccinated, and others should wait until they have recovered from COVID-19 and “have met the criteria to discontinue isolation.”

Additional protection

A study conducted in Kentucky found that unvaccinated people who already had COVID-19 were 2.34 times more likely than fully vaccinated people to be infected again, suggesting “vaccination provides additional protection against reinfection.”

Additionally, the research was conducted between March 2020 and February 2021, months before the highly transmissible Delta variant became the dominant strain of Covid in the United States.

Amid rising cases and hospitalizations, Schuler said, remaining unvaccinated comes with “a high price” for immunity.

“These results are encouraging for those who have already run the gauntlet of COVID-19 infection,” he said.

“However, I do not recommend citing this study as a reason not to be vaccinated for those never previously infected. Vaccination decreases infectiousness, the risk of hospitalization and deaths from COVID-19, without having the actual infection. Achieving natural immunity by deferring vaccination in favour of infection is not worth going through the discomfort, risk to yourself and risk to others,” he concluded.

Remote work goes ‘luxury’, but many may be left out

VIRTUAL reality meetings, $7,000 all-in-one kits and digital hot desking: Big Tech is rolling out premium tools as the work-from-home era looks set to last well beyond the pandemic.

But experts warn that while top-of-the-line features may benefit privileged Americans, millions of others can barely access remote work tools already available.

Facebook has unveiled online ‘workrooms’ for users of its Oculus virtual reality gear, and Google showed off interactive conferencing displays, declaring the ‘hybrid’ mix of in-person and remote work is here to stay.

Yet outside of Silicon Valley and other urban centers, basics like a fast internet connection and proficiency in remote tech is beyond the reach of tens of millions in the United States.

‘For many people, being able to work from home is still a luxury,’ said Michelle Burris, a senior policy associate at progressive think tank The Century Foundation. One reason is access to high-speed connections, with advocacy group BroadbandNow saying in a May report that 42 million Americans — about 13 per cent of the population — cannot get broadband internet.

Another problem is equipment as many workers have to buy their own.

Take the example of Patricia McGee in Texas — a 39-year-old mother of four who switched from an Amazon warehouse job to remote customer service work for another company when pandemic lockdowns hit about 18 months ago.

She had to plunk down $2,000 to get a computer, not to mention the price of internet and the process of installing software and updates.

‘Not everybody can afford a computer. So it’s taking jobs from people that can’t (buy one) or actually don’t have the skills (to use one),’ she told AFP. Her machine broke a few days ago and because she had exhausted her paid time off, McGee can’t work or make money until her computer is back online.

The digital divisions exposed by the pandemic are well-documented with striking examples like families using the wireless internet at fast food restaurants so their children could attend school online.

As schools and workplaces have, in many areas, moved gradually back toward in-person activity, some inequalities have been eased. But a percentage of workers have come to appreciate the flexibility and utility of a ‘hybrid’ mix where they can work from home sometimes.

‘It’s one of these innocuous seeming things that looks like it’s convenience but it can be — unless we really address and acknowledge it — another tool for increasing inequality,’ said Monica Sanders, a Georgetown University professor. Sanders noted that this is different than other technological developments, like the latest smartphone or even having a videocassette player when the machines revolutionized home entertainment.

They didn’t ‘impact your earning power or where you live or how you work,’ she said.

The change in how people work has not gone unnoticed for employers, with digital skills for zoom presentation or remote management tools working their way into job ads.

Bandicoot species
'back from the brink' on Australian mainland

A small nocturnal marsupial that once roamed the Australian mainland has been brought back from the brink of extinction after a decades-long conservation effort, authorities said Wednesday.

The Eastern Barred Bandicoot populated the grassy plains of Victoria state's southwest until it was all but obliterated by non-native foxes, feral cats and habitat destruction.

By 1989, there were just 150 animals left in the region, mostly scrounging an existence in rusted-out cars at a rubbish dump.

Over the past three decades, multi-million dollar captive breeding and rewilding programmes have revived the mainland Australian population to an estimated 1,500 — bumping it off the state's "extinct in the wild" list.—AFP ■

Kenya's iconic wildebeest
migration suffers disruptions amid climate change

THE sight of brown grassland that greets visitors to the well-known Maasai Mara game reserve in southwestern Kenya reaffirms a growing consensus that dry spells have taken a toll on the pristine haven for iconic wildlife species.

Often regarded as Kenya's jewel thanks to its lush vegetation, idyllic setting and presence of iconic land mammals like elephants and rhinos, the Mara is slowly losing its luster amid climate change induced recurrent droughts. Thanks to depressed rains this year, the normally tall green grass at the Mara has withered, exposing the ground to harsh elements while pushing a huge population of herbivores to the brink of starvation.

In addition, water levels in the Mara River have sunk to historic lows as delayed and suppressed rains became the norm this year in Kenya, with experts blaming global warming for the change.—Xinhua ■

Chevron plans new 'lower carbon' ventures
but activists not pleased

FACING pressure from environmentalists, Chevron boosted spending Tuesday for "lower carbon" ventures and unveiled plans to reduce emissions from its operations in a pitch that drew shrugs from climate activists.

The US oil giant said it would more than triple spending through 2028 to $10 billion on its "lower carbon businesses", including on products like aviation fuel made from biofeedstocks instead of crude oil.

"We believe climate change is real and that human activity, including the use of fossil fuels, contributes to it," Chief Executive Mike Wirth said at the outset of an investor presentation.

"We believe the future of energy will be lower carbon and intend to be a leader in that future."

But the strategy — which keeps the vast majority of Chevron's capital budget going to fossil fuels — drew little praise from critics.

Like its US rival ExxonMobil, Chevron has faced intensifying pressure from environmentalists as well as mainstream investors, and shareholders have voted against their recommendations at annual meetings earlier this year. "We're pleased that Chevron finally wants to talk about the energy transition. We're pleased that they're increasing spending on lower carbon energy," said

Chevron plans to boost investment in "lower carbon" energy, while investing primarily in oil and gas. PHOTO: AFP

Mark van Baal, founder of Follow This, a Dutch activist shareholder group. "But this is by far not enough."

Chevron's increased investment in lower carbon energy is "encouraging," but "it's hard to see" how bringing renewable fuels to seven percent of refineries throughout by 2030 "will convince investors that it's taking climate seriously," Andrew Logan, director of the oil and gas programme at activist non-profit investor group Ceres, said on Twitter.

Many activists view the climate situation as a crisis, arguing that worsening storms and forest fires are proof of the need for immediate action.—AFP ■

Young German activists stage hunger strike for climate

'The climate crisis kills. We are on hunger strike for an unlimited period of time,' say protesters in Berlin. PHOTO: AFP

IN late August, six young climate activists set up tents on a stretch of grass between the Reichstag and the chancellery in central Berlin, refusing to eat. More than two weeks later, some look pale and emaciated. One collapsed on Tuesday. Another broke down in tears as medics performed a daily check of their weight and blood pressure. Neither have they achieved their chief objective — a meeting with the three main candidates vying to replace Angela Merkel as chancellor when Germany goes to the polls on 26 September. "The climate crisis kills. We are on hunger strike for an unlimited period of time," a banner strewn across one of the tents proclaims in large red letters. The activists want to meet conservative Armin Laschet, Social Democrat Olaf Scholz and the Greens' Annalena Baerbock. All three parties have made climate policy a key issue in their campaigning, and the Greens have even pledged to make climate neutrality the top priority of the next government. But the activists say it's not enough. For Jacob Heinze, none of the major parties is prepared "to take the necessary measures to protect us, the younger generation, from the catastrophe" that is unfolding.

Outcry as Faroe Islands slaughter 1,400 dolphins in a day

THE government of the Faroe Islands, an autonomous Danish territory, faced an outcry on Tuesday over the culling of more than 1,400 white-sided dolphins in a day in what was said to be the single biggest hunt in the northern archipelago.

"There is no doubt that the Faroese whale hunts are a dramatic sight to people unfamiliar to the hunts and slaughter of mammals," a government spokesman told AFP. "The hunts are, nevertheless, well organized and fully regulated," he said.

Traditionally, the North Atlantic islands — which have a population of around 50,000 people — hunt pilot whales and not dolphins, the spokesman said.

"There are usually a few of them in the 'grind', but we normally don't kill such a large number," said a local television journalist, Hallur av Rana. The "grindadráp" is a practice whereby the hunters first surround the whales with a wide semi-circle of fishing boats and then drive them into a bay to be beached and slaughtered. "It looks quite extreme and it took some time to kill them all, while it's usually pretty quick," av Rana said.

the beach sparked outrage on social media. According to av Rana, although some 53 per cent of the islands' population are opposed to the "grind", there no plans to abolish the practice. The authorities insist it is a sustainable way of hunting.—AFP ■

Philippines eases virus lockdown in capital to spur economy

THE Philippines will ease coronavirus restrictions in the capital Manila despite record infection numbers, officials said Tuesday, as it seeks to spur economic activity.

Restaurants, churches and beauty salons in the national capital region will open at lower capacities from Thursday to get tens of thousands more people back to work.

“We should strive for total health and this can only be realized by carefully balancing our COVID-19 response by considering both the health of our people and the economic health of the nation,” President Rodrigo Duterte’s spokesman Harry Roque said.

Virus cases have surged to record levels — more than 140,000 cases in the past week — thanks to an outbreak of the highly contagious Delta variant. Metropolitan Manila will be placed on the second-highest alert under a new classification system that replaces guidelines that left many residents and business owners confused about which activities were allowed. Localized lockdowns targeting specific buildings, streets or neighbourhoods will be enforced to check the spread of the virus, replacing the current scheme that covers entire cities and regions.

Fully vaccinated customers in the capital region can now be served indoors in restaurants and beauty salons at up to 10 per cent capacity, and at outdoor venues at up to 30 per cent capacity regardless of vaccination status.

Six out of 10 adults in Manila are inoculated, compared to 22 per cent of Filipino adults nationwide, officials said.

Churches will also be allowed to seat 10 per cent of their capacity for services but other indoor group activities, including those that lead to crowding, remain banned.

Cost of lockdown

A succession of shutdowns since the start of the pandemic has sidelined more than two million workers in the food and leisure sectors in the capital alone, according to Trade Secretary Ramon Lopez.

Millions of children started a second year of remote lessons this week in the Philippines, which has kept schools closed since the start of the coronavirus pandemic.

Officials said Tuesday that when the alert level is reduced to the second-lowest, classrooms may reopen alongside indoor entertainment and social events at up to 50 per cent capacity.

Thailand’s new COVID-19 cases drop below 12,000

THAILAND on Tuesday reported 11,786 new COVID-19 cases and 136 additional fatalities, according to the Center for COVID-19 Situation Administration (CCSA).

New cases went down again for three days in a row after reporting a spike of over 15,000 cases on Saturday. Out of the new cases reported, 2,788 were found in the capital Bangkok, the epicenter of the country’s worst outbreak so far.

The CCSA also said that 14,738 COVID-19 patients were discharged from hospitals over the past 24 hours after making a full recovery, nearly 3,000 more than the number of new infections. Since the beginning of the pandemic early last year, there have been 1,406,542 COVID-19 cases and 14,621 cumulative deaths in Thailand.

A total of 40.9 million COVID-19 vaccines have been administered between 28 February and 13 September out of which 676,669 were injected on Monday.

Roughly 18 per cent of Thailand’s 69-million population have been fully vaccinated so far. The country aims to inoculate 70 per cent of its population by the end of this year. — Xinhua ■

Stars dazzle in defiant fashion at ‘surreal’ Met Gala

NEW YORK is done with dressing down: the splashy black-tie Met Gala returned Monday, with a cohort of Gen-Z’s glitterati hosting the A-list bash famed for its over-the-top panache — and, despite the pandemic, this year the fashion was so fierce one guest wielded a sword.

The crowd of some 400 actors, athletes, poets and performers — all of whom were either vaccinated or had tested negative for Covid-19 — was largely maskless on the cream carpet, defying the global coronavirus pandemic that forced the cancellation of last year’s event. “It’s so surreal,” US rapper Megan Thee Stallion, attending the Gala for the first time and dressed by designer Coach to evoke old Hollywood glamour, told AFP. “I feel like, oh my gosh, Houston, Texas we made it! ... But she did admit that it was “kinda weird” to be around so many people, more than 18 months into the coronavirus pandemic. “I’ve kinda gotten used to being a little introvert like — but I’m back on side so I’m excited to see everybody,” she said. Canadian musician Grimes, who was one of the few wearing a face mask, set Twitter alight by carrying a sword — perhaps to, as one user suggested, “make sure people stay 6 ft away.” US lawmaker Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez added to the revolutionary spirit with a white off-shoulder dress, on the back of which was written in scarlet capital letters: “Tax the rich” — an inflammatory statement at an event where tickets cost $35,000 apiece and tables were up to $300,000.—AFP ■

New Zealand house prices hit record high amid COVID-19 lockdown

MEDIAN prices for residential property across New Zealand increased by 25.5 per cent from 677,400 NZ dollars in August 2020 to a record 850,000 NZ dollars in August 2021 amid COVID-19 lockdown, as shortage of houses available for sale continued, according to the latest real estate data recently.

Four out of 16 regions reached new record median prices and 25 districts reached new record median highs, showed data from the Real Estate Institute of New Zealand (REINZ). The median house price for New Zealand excluding Auckland increased by 22.8 per cent from 570,000 NZ dollars in August last year to a new record of 700,000 NZ dollars in August 2021. Jen Baird, chief executive at REINZ said in a statement: “House prices have once again risen across the country, with every region seeing a year-on-year increase from August 2020. This latest lockdown has not dampened demand for, or confidence in, the housing market as we saw in early 2020. We have heard from across the industry that prices achieved on sales completed in the early part of this lockdown continue to illustrate an ongoing excess of demand over supply; prices are still rising.” New Zealand’s house prices hit new record highs in the last several months in a row despite the pandemic, while record low interest rates boosted demand for housing and credit. As the housing demand kept high, the supply touched low. In some regions, inventory levels were at lowest point ever.—Xinhua ■

China August retail sales growth slowest in a year

GROWTH in China's retail sales sank in August to a 12-month low, data showed Wednesday, as parts of the country were hit by lockdowns and other containment measures to fight the worst Covid outbreak since its initial spread in 2020.

The figures are the latest pointing to a slowdown in the world's number two economy, and observers warned that a fresh flare-up could add to the weakness, adding that a crack-down on private enterprises was also taking a toll.

Retail sales grew 2.5 per cent last month, well short of the seven per cent forecast and sharply down from the 8.5 per cent witnessed in July. The reading was the lowest since August 2020.

Industrial production growth was also slightly below expectations and slower than the month before.—AFP

Republicans withhold support for US debt ceiling increase

REPUBLICAN leaders in Congress on Tuesday continued to withhold support for efforts by the Democratic majority to increase the US debt ceiling.

Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen warned last week that the government will run out of money next month unless lawmakers take action, and banking groups have urged Congress to move to prevent "irreparable harm" to the US economy.

Amazon CEO Andy Jassy called for raising the debt ceiling in an interview with CNBC. "I think it's scary for consumer confidence and for confidence in US businesses and potential credit ratings if we don't make sure that we raise that debt ceiling," Jassy said. The Securities Industry and Financial Markets Association (SIFMA), American Bankers Association and other industry groups said in a letter to congressional leaders that defaulting "on our existing obligations would be irresponsible and do irreparable harm to the US economy and taxpayers".—AFP

Malaysia, Thailand setting up system of Qualified ASEAN Banks

BANKING institutions from Thailand and Malaysia have been invited to indicate their interest to be a Qualified ASEAN Bank (QAB) in Malaysia and Thailand, said Bank Negara Malaysia (BNM) and the Bank of Thailand (BOT) on Tuesday.

The bilateral arrangement and its commitments form part of the ASEAN Framework Agreement on Services (AFAS), they said in a joint statement.

The move followed the bilateral arrangement under the ASEAN Banking Integration Framework (ABIF) between BNM and the BOT which was concluded in April 2019. According to both parties, the QABs are envisioned to facilitate greater intra-ASEAN trade and investment in the region, in accordance with the ASEAN Economic Community Blueprint 2025 that aims to create an integrated and highly cohesive ASEAN economy.

To ensure the financial stability of both countries, they said, a QAB candidate, whether a new entrant or an existing bank in the host country, must be a strong and well-managed bank that has its interest endorsed by the home country's regulator; and comply with the host country's prudential requirements. According to them, a successful QAB candidate will enjoy market access and operational flexibility accorded under the bilateral arrangement.

BNM governor Nor Shamshah Mohd Yunus said, this bilateral arrangement signifies the strengthening of economic ties between Malaysia and Thailand, and it is set to benefit the people of both countries where they will

UAE, Israel eye trillion-dollar prize one year into Abraham Accords

THE United Arab Emirates marks one year since normalizing ties with Israel on Wednesday, a move which drew Palestinian anger but that leaders hope could reap a trillion dollars in economic exchanges. Watched by then US president Donald Trump, the UAE and Gulf neighbour Bahrain formally recognized Israel on 15 September, 2020 in Washington, prompting Palestinian accusations of a "stab in the back". The surprise step, under the US-brokered Abraham Accords, broke with decades of Arab consensus that ruled out formal ties while the Palestinian conflict was unresolved.

However, it marked a thaw in the region, with Morocco and Sudan soon following suit and regional power Saudi Arabia, the world's top oil producer, allowing some overflights from the Jewish state. The economic benefits have come quickly for the UAE and Israel, who signed a series of deals ranging from tourism to aviation and financial services. Billions wiped from Macau casino stocks as city eyes gambling review

Leading casino operators Sands China and Wynn Macau both suffered over 24 per cent drops after the consultation began. PHOTO: AFP

MACAU casino operators saw billions wiped off their value Wednesday as their shares collapsed after officials in the world's biggest gambling city unveiled plans for a crackdown that would tighten their grip on the already beleaguered industry.

Hong Kong-listed operators Sands China and Wynn Macau both plunged around 30 per cent; SJM Holdings and MGM China lost 25 per cent while Melco and Galaxy Entertainment both shed around 20 per cent.

Bloomberg News estimated the combined losses for the six big operators amounted to some $14 billion.

The sell-off came after the Macau government announced a 45-day public consultation that included a proposal for direct supervision over the gambling industry, which has faced increasing scrutiny from authorities in recent years.

Officials are looking to put government representatives on licensed operators' boards to oversee their operations, and to criminalize underground banking in the industry.—AFP

BRITAIN on Tuesday said it would push back its implementation of full post-Brexit borders checks on goods from the European Union, as the pandemic, red tape and new immigration rules fuel supply problems. Plans to introduce full controls in areas such as the import of food and animal products had been due from next month but would now start from January next year under a “pragmatic new timetable”, the government said. Britain will still introduce full customs declarations and controls on 1 January 2022, as planned. Certification and physical checks on food and animal goods designed to protect against diseases, pests and contaminants — due to be introduced on 1 January — will now be introduced in July 2022.—AFP ■

Pope calls for 'integration' for poverty-stricken Slovak Roma

POPE Francis on Tuesday visited a dilapidated housing estate inhabited by ethnic Roma in eastern Slovakia, calling for "integration" for the marginalized community.

The 84-year-old Argentine pontiff, who is on his first foreign trip since a colon operation in July, often calls for assistance to the world's poorest communities.

After hearing from Roma at the Lunik IX estate in Kosice, the pope told members of the community that "all too often you have been the object of prejudice and harsh judgements".

"Marginalizing others accomplishes nothing. Segregating ourselves and other people eventually leads to anger. The path to peaceful coexistence is integration," he said from a podium, as residents watched from apartment blocks.

"Francis, Welcome Among Us," read a sign hanging from one window.

In Lunik IX, nearly 4,500 residents are squeezed into a space meant to accommodate half that number.

Many blocks have no electricity, heat, gas or running water as utilities were cut because of unpaid bills.

"Marginalizing others accomplishes nothing. Segregating ourselves and other people eventually leads to anger. The path to peaceful coexistence is integration," he said from a podium, as residents watched from apartment blocks.

Singapore news site suspended, critics fear censorship

Singapore ranks 160th out of 180 countries and territories in Reporters Without Borders' World Press Freedom Index. PHOTO: AFP

A Singaporean news website often critical of authorities had its licence suspended Tuesday for failing to declare funding sources, regulators said, with a rights group slamming the move as "unacceptable censorship".

Critics frequently accuse the tightly-regulated city-state of curbing media freedoms, and The Online Citizen (TOC) had long been in the government's crosshairs.

One of Singapore's few alternative news sources, it often ran stories more critical of the authorities than those in the pro-government mainstream media.

The city-state's media regulator said it had suspended the company's licence to operate its websites and social media channels as it had not fully met obligations to declare funding.

Sites such as TOC "are required to be transparent about their sources of funding", the Infocomm Media Development Authority said in a statement.

"This is to prevent such sites from being controlled by foreign actors, or coming under the influence of foreign entities or funding."—AFP ■

Qatar won't take 'responsibility' for Kabul airport without Taliban agreement

Qatari special forces arrive at Kabul airport where the Gulf emirate has been supporting operations. PHOTO: AFP

QATAR warned Tuesday it would not take responsibility for Kabul airport without "clear" agreements with all involved, including the Taliban, about its operations.

Doha has become a key broker in Afghanistan following last month's withdrawal of US forces, helping evacuate thousands of foreigners and Afghans, engaging the new Taliban rulers and supporting operations at Kabul airport.

"We need to make sure that everything is addressed very clearly otherwise — we are not able to take any responsibility of the airport (if) all these things are not addressed," Foreign Minister Sheikh Mohammed bin Abdulrahman Al-Thani said at a press briefing.—AFP ■

Biden to host India, Japan, Australia leaders

JOE Biden will host the prime ministers of India, Japan and Australia for an in-person summit on 24 September, the first-ever White House gathering of the "Quad" grouping, the president's office said on Monday.

"The Quad Leaders will be focused on deepening our ties and advancing practical cooperation on areas such as combatting COVID-19, addressing the climate crisis, partnering on emerging technologies and cyberspace, and promoting a free and open Indo-Pacific," White House spokeswoman Jen Psaki said in a statement.

The diplomatic grouping, seen as a counter to China's growing influence, held online leaders' talks in March, and ministers from the four countries have also held in-person discussions.

The White House meeting is expected to be one of the final international summits for Japan's Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga, who has decided not to stand for re-election.

He will be replaced as head of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party on 29 September ahead of general elections slated for October or November.

India's Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Prime Minister Scott Morrison of Australia will also attend the White House summit.

Any talks between the four countries would likely touch on the situation in Afghanistan, as well as present a united front between the allies before a G20 meeting in Rome in October, Japanese media said last week.—AFP ■

Facebook shields VIPs from some of its rules: report

FACEBOOK exempts certain celebrities, politicians and other high-profile users from some its own rules for posts as part of a programme launched as a quality-control mechanism, the Wall Street Journal reported on Monday.

The programme, referred to as "cross check" or "XCheck," shields millions of elite users from rules that Facebook claims to apply equally at the social network, according to a report citing internal documents.

Facebook spokesman Andy Stone in a series of tweets defended the programme, but noted the social media giant is aware its enforcement of rules is "not perfect".

"There aren't two systems of justice; it's an attempted safeguard against mistakes," Stone tweeted in response to the Journal report.

"We know our enforcement is not perfect and there are tradeoffs between speed and accuracy."

The article cites examples of posts from high-profile people, including one from soccer star Neymar showing nude images of a woman who accused him of rape and that Facebook subsequently removed.

A double-standard regarding content moderation would defy assurances Facebook gave to an independent board set up as a final arbiter of disputes regarding what is allowed to be posted at the leading social network.—AFP ■

North Korea fires two ballistic missiles: South's military

NORTH Korea fired two ballistic missiles into the sea on Wednesday, according to the South's military, as China's foreign minister visited Seoul and days after Pyongyang said it had successfully tested new long-range cruise missiles.

Beijing is the North's key diplomatic ally and main partner for trade and aid, although Pyongyang is under a self-imposed blockade after closing its borders early last year to protect itself against the coronavirus pandemic.

The nuclear-armed North had fired "two unidentified ballistic missiles" from its central inland area into the sea off its east coast, Seoul's Joint Chiefs of Staff said in a statement.

"South Korean and US intelligence agencies are conducting detailed analysis," they added, without immediately giving details of the missiles' range.

The launch came as Chinese foreign minister Wang Yi visited Seoul for talks with his South Korean counterpart.

ner for trade and aid, although Pyongyang is under a self-imposed blockade after closing its borders early last year to protect itself against the coronavirus pandemic.

Speaking before the news emerged, Wang hoped that all countries would help "peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula", Yonhap news agency reported.

"For example, not only the North, but also other countries are engaging in military activities," he added.—AFP ■

Stench of death: villagers flee site of Ethiopia mass killings

BODIES of rebel fighters dot the roads and fields leading to Chenna, a village in the mountains of northern Ethiopia that this month saw one of the most gruesome reported incidents in the country's 10-month-old war.

Last week, the government accused the rebels, the Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF), of massacring as many as 200 civilians in Chenna, including women and children. Medics put the death toll at 125 but told AFP it could climb.

The TPLF rejected the allegations, while accusing Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed of sending "priests, women and children" into battle as cannon fodder.

Chenna is located in Ethiopia's Amhara region which lies south of Tigray, where fighting broke out last November between pro-government forces and the TPLF.—AFP ■

Kosovo war crimes court begins first case

THE first case at a special court probing Kosovo's 1998-1999 independence conflict begins on Wednesday in The Hague, with the war crimes trial of a former rebel leader.

Salih Mustafa, 49, a commander in the ethnic Albanian Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA), faces charges of murder, torture, cruel treatment and arbitrary detention that date back to the war with Serbia. Mustafa, who was arrested last year while working as an adviser at Kosovo's defence ministry, is alleged to have mistreated prisoners at a detention compound in Zilash, a village east of the capital Pristina, in April 1999.

The case is the first to go to trial at the Kosovo Specialist Chambers, an EU-backed court set up in the Netherlands in 2015 to probe alleged atrocities by the separatist KLA.

The head judge will formally open the trial on Wednesday and then read out the indictment to Mustafa, the court said in a statement.—AFP ■

Spain PM in Barcelona to reopen Catalan separatist talks

Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez (l) and Catalan leader Pere Aragonès meeting last July. They will hold fresh talks on Wednesday but expectations are low. PHOTO: LA MONCLOA/AFP

SPANISH Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez visits Barcelona Wednesday to resume dialogue with Catalonia's separatist leadership on resolving the political crisis triggered by the region's 2017 failed independence bid.

"I will lead this negotiation on behalf of the Spanish government," Sanchez said late Monday, confirming he would meet Catalan leader Pere Aragonès on September 15 for talks on the region's political situation.

Since the crisis of October 2017, Catalonia has been a dominant theme in Spanish politics and one which Sanchez's government has vowed to tackle through negotiations.

"The situation in Catalonia is very different, much more stable than in 2017 or in 2019," the prime minister said of the huge violent protests that followed Spain's jailing of nine separatist leaders exactly two years after the failed breakaway bid.

In January 2020, Sanchez agreed to open talks after ERC — Catalonia's oldest and largest separatist party — offered crucial parliamentary support that got his minority government approved.

Initial talks began at the end of February 2020 but were soon suspended as the pandemic took hold. Expectations of success this time are low, with both sides coming to the table with radically different expectations.—AFP ■

Haiti PM sacks prosecutor who accused him of links to president's murder

THE investigation into the assassination of Haitian president Jovenel Moïse descended into confusion Tuesday, as the Caribbean island's prime minister sacked a prosecutor who had accused him of links to the killing.

The decision by Prime Minister Ariel Henry to fire prosecutor Bed-Ford Claude exposed the infighting at the highest levels of what is left of Haiti's government, more than two months after Moïse was slain in his home by gunmen.

Henry's move came hours after Claude asked the judge investigating Moïse's murder to charge the prime minister with involvement in the case. "I have the pleasure of informing you that it was decided to terminate your post," Henry told Claude in a publicly distributed letter. Henry was named by Moïse as prime minister days before the president's murder. He was sworn in after the killing, on 20 July, pledging to improve the country's dire security situation and to organize long-delayed elections. Haiti currently has no president and no functioning parliament.

But Claude had begun pointing the finger at Henry, based on alleged phone conversations that the prime minister had with one of the main suspects in the hours after the killing. "There are sufficient compromising elements that form (my) conviction on the appropriateness of prosecuting Mr Henry and requesting his outright indictment," wrote Claude in an official letter addressed to a Port-au-Prince court.—AFP ■

Hundreds of sports allowed, Taliban promise — if you’re a man

Afghanistan’s new director general for sports and physical education Bashir Ahmad Rustamzai (C) served as the wrestling federation chief when the Taliban were last in power. PHOTO: AFP/BULENT KILIC

FROM swimming to soccer, running to horse riding, Afghanistan’s new sports chief said Tuesday that the Taliban will allow 400 sports – but declined to confirm if women can play a single one. “Please don’t ask more questions about women,”

Bashir Ahmad Rustamzai told AFP, from an armchair where Afghanistan’s Olympic Committee president had sat until he fled the country last month.

Rustamzai, a heavily-built former kung fu and wrestling champion with a bushy black and white beard, was appointed by the hardline Islamist group to be Afghanistan’s director-general for sports and physical education.

Once the wrestling federation chief when the Taliban were last in power, Rustamzai then worked with the Western-backed government, before falling out with them because of “their widespread corruption,” he said.

‘We will not ban any sport’

Dressed in a black turban typical of the Taliban, Rustamzai repeatedly ducked questions on the issue of women’s sports.

During the extremists’ brutal and oppressive regime from 1996 to 2001, women were completely banned from playing any sport while men’s sport was tightly controlled. Women were also largely banned from education and work.—AFP ■

Man Utd dealt shock Champions League loss as Lukaku boosts Chelsea

MANCHESTER United slumped to a shock 2-1 loss at Young Boys despite a goal from Cristiano Ronaldo in their Champions League opener on Tuesday, while Chelsea kicked off their title defence by beating Zenit.

Robert Lewandowski struck twice for Bayern Munich as the German heavyweights inflicted a 3-0 defeat on Barcelona at Camp Nou in their first European game since the departure of Lionel Messi.

Ronaldo, the leading scorer in Champions League history, bagged his 135th goal in the competition after 13 minutes in Bern, but Swiss champions Young Boys hit back after the sending-off of Aaron Wan-Bissaka.

The United defender saw red for a dangerous tackle on Christopher Martins before half-time. Nicolas Moumi Ngamaleu equalized in the second half before Jordan Siebatcheu snatched the winner with the final kick.

“It’s the first game in the group. We’ve got many games to bounce back and we must do,” said United captain Harry Maguire. “We’ll try and pick up three points in our next game and build momentum from there.”
