Beware of silent killer diabetes in daily life

EVERYBODY wishes to be healthy in line with a Myanmar saying goes, “Health is Wealth”. It is because those who are unhealthy cannot embrace any happiness while packing the burden of diseases.

Currently, most of the persons in each society are facing impacts of diseases such as malaria, TB, HIV, diabetes, hypertension, and other various chronic diseases. Among them, diabetes can bring various subsequent impacts to the hosts although it can seem like an unimportant disease.

Those suffering from diabetes may face hypertension and heart diseases. They are three Saturn brothers for the patients. At a time when diabetes raises its digits, hypertension gradually follows it with higher and higher digits. Later, the first two join hands with the last one heart disease with high heartthrobs.

Actually, if everybody takes physical exercises as a light sport event, they are sure to set aside all the diseases. If they suffer from one of these diseases, unfortunately, they will have high immunity to fight against them in a short time by securing the successes.

raises both good and bad cholesterol for the human body.

Those who do not suffer from these diseases are lucky persons. Even if they hold up these diseases, they need to avoid inappropriate meals which may trigger these three brother diseases for having a long life span as they wish. To be able to grasp such rewards, all the persons need to take care of their daily consumption system.

Top economists call for ‘radical redirection’ focusing on healthcare

The World Health Organization (WHO) body advancing public health for all is asking for ambitious investments in healthcare spending, reframing it as a long-term investment and not a short-term cost.

RELEASED on 26 October, the WHO Economic Council’s new brief, Financing Health for All, points to three main actions: create fiscal space, direct investments, and the administration of public and private finance.

On public spending, the experts say that easing constraints imposed by outdated economic assumptions and reversing reforms that lead to big healthcare cuts, would allow spending to increase significantly.

According to the brief, investments to ensure equal access to healthcare for everyone, should become the central purpose of economic activity. Public leadership should work to create positive regulatory, taxation, and industrial policies, and boost investment in the field.

Finally, public and private finance should be governed by greater regulation of private health markets through measures that improve outcomes globally and on an equitable basis.

Inequality

The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted large and growing inequities across the globe in access to healthcare.

For every 100 people in high-income countries, 133 doses of COVID-19 vaccine have been administered, while in low-income countries, that figure is only 4 doses per 100. A mass COVID-19 vaccination site at M&T Bank Stadium in Baltimore on 20 March 2021.

For every 100 people in high-income countries, 133 doses of COVID-19 vaccine have been administered, while in low-income countries, that figure is only 4 doses per 100.

Yet, according to the WHO experts, the world “continues to follow the same economic paradigm that doesn’t change the underlying finance structure and applies outdated thinking on economic development.”

From 29 to 31 October, in Rome, national leaders together with health and finance ministers, will come together for the G20 Summit of leading industrialized countries. For the WHO economists, the meeting is a window of opportunity for a “radical redirection”.

The Council believes that a new paradigm is needed to avoid macroeconomic policies that move the world away from the vision of Health For All.

Introducing the new brief, the Director-General of WHO, Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, said the COVID-19 pandemic “has demonstrated that the financing of health systems needs to change radically to protect and promote the health of all people.”

For him, the document “makes a clear and compelling argument for the need for sustained financing to be directed to achieving health for all people, and for investments to be understood as long-term gains for national and global development.”

Beyond financing

Professor Mariana Mazzucato, Chair of the Council, noted that health systems overall are under-resourced, but warned that “more finance is not the only solution.”

“The work of the Council stresses the need to reform and redirect finance in radical ways so that the objective Health For All, is designed into the financial structures, the conditionalities and the partnerships between business and the state,” she explained.

Ambitious objective

The WHO Council on the Economics of Health For All, was established last November, to rethink how value in health and wellbeing is measured, produced, and distributed across economies.

Made up of ten of the world’s most eminent economists and health experts, the Council works in four areas. Briefs in each of these areas, and a final report to be produced in 2023, will be used to build momentum towards changing the structure of economic activity, in favour of realizing the ambitious goal.

The members of the Council are Professor Mariana Mazzucato (Chair), Professor Senait Fisseha, Professor Jayati Ghosh, Vanessa Huang, Professor Stephanie Kelton, Professor Ilona Kickbusch, Zelia Maria Profeta da Luz, Kate Raworth, Dr Vera Songwe and Dame Marilyn Waring.

Which Asia-Pacific countries are reopening to foreign visitors?

THAILAND’S reopening to vaccinated foreign tourists marks a major easing of border controls for Asia, where governments have been far slower to roll back coronavirus travel curbs than in much of the West.

Here is a look at which countries are opening up across the Asia-Pacific region and those staying sealed off from the world.

Southeast Asia

Thailand will allow vaccinated travellers from 46 countries and territories to enter the kingdom without quarantining from Monday, as it seeks to revive its vital tourism industry.

Other parts of the region — which largely escaped the pandemic’s initial wave, only to be hit hard this year — are following its lead, albeit at a slower pace.

Business hub Singapore has started quarantine-free travel for fully vaccinated travellers from 10 countries, including the United States and several European countries, and will add more soon.

Indonesia reopened the resort island of Bali this month to tourists from select countries although, with travellers still required to do a five-day quarantine on arrival, the scheme has had a slow start.

Vietnam plans to allow foreign visitors entry to the holiday island of Phu Quoc from next month and Malaysia has a similar plan for Langkawi island, while Cambodia will reopen beach spots Sihanoukville, Koh Rong and Dara Sakor from 30 November.

Some countries, including the Philippines and Myanmar, remain closed to foreign tourists.

East Asia

Mainland China, where Covid-19 first emerged last year, remains closed to overseas tourists, as is Japan.

South Korea has started accepting visitors from 49 countries. A negative coronavirus test is required for all arrivals, with a limited exemption from a 14-day quarantine for those vaccinated in South Korea. Some of the world’s toughest measures have been implemented in Hong Kong -- with a maximum 21-day quarantine for incoming travellers -- which has kept virus cases low but crippled the travel industry.

South Asia

Recovering from a devastating surge earlier this year, India reopened for foreign tourists on charter flights this month and will allow in visitors on all flights from mid-November.

Fully vaccinated travellers no longer have to undergo home quarantine, provided they are arriving from countries with which India has reciprocal arrangements for acceptance of WHO-approved vaccines. Last month, Nepal started issuing visas on arrival for vaccinated tourists and dropped quarantine requirements as it seeks to lure back foreign trekkers to its mountains.

More than a million tourists visited the Himalayan country in 2019 — but numbers dropped by 80 per cent last year.

borders was the popular holiday destination of the Maldives, which started allowing in foreign tourists in July last year.

The number of tourists visiting the Indian Ocean atoll nation recovered to 500,000 last year following the reopening, and authorities expect 1.5 million holiday-makers this year — just shy of the figure in 2019.

Chrysanthemum farming helps increase grower family income in Kyaunggon

THE chrysanthemum farming will help increase local farmers’ family income in Kyaunggon township, Ayeyawady region. “I am a flower grower from Moepya East village, Kyaunggon Township. Currently, I have cultivated around 7,000 lucky species of chrysanthemum flower. The chrysanthemum flowers are started growing in August. The flowers are now three months old. The flowers started to blossom after four months in November,” said Ko Soe Htet Kyaw, a chrysanthemum flower grower.

It is difficult to grow flowers during this monsoon season. Thus, we have covered the waterproof plastic in plantation areas costing about K300,000. The cultivation area is 70 feet in length and 30 feet wide. It is expected to be profitable about K1 million in the harvesting season, said the flower grower. Palm oil price plunges to K4,400 per viss

THE price of palm oil plummeted to K4,400 per viss (a viss is equal to 1.6 kg) at present, following the Kyat revaluation on the US dollar in the local forex market, according to the domestic market.

The price hit a record high of K5,000 per viss in late September, whereas it fell to K4,450 per viss. It shows a decrease of K500 per viss within a month.

The drop in palm oil price is related to the Kyat appreciation against the US dollar. A dollar was valued at around K1,800 at present, whereas it hit an all-time high of over K3,000 per dollar in late September.

To tackle price high in the palm oil sector tracking the dollar gains, the total volume of palm oil that was sold at the subsidized price (K3,700 per viss) is equivalent to the amount that the oil importers directly purchased the foreign currency from the Central Bank of Myanmar.

Those retailers and wholesalers who can resell the palm oil to the consumers with a gross profit of less than two per cent can come and buy them at the association's office located at No 104/108 on Strand Road, Ahlon Township through the contact numbers (09444437295, and 09401527049 of the association and 01250270 and 0943666668 of the Yangon Region Consumer Affairs Department).

Under the plan of the Myanmar Edible Oil Dealers' Association, palm oil is sold at K3,800 with the mobile market trucks at present.

Additionally, the association notified the consumers not to worry over the supply of the edible oil on 15 July.

The association is also making concerted efforts with the organizations concerned and the related departments to secure the edible oil sufficiency and offer a reasonable price to the consumers, as per the statement.

sumers, as per the statement.

The association is trying not to occur unnecessary issues regarding edible oil amid the global pandemic impacts.

Myanmar Edible Oil Dealers' Association is attempting to maintain price stability, prevent market manipulation, import palm oil from foreign countries sustainably for self-sufficiency and distribute the edible oil at fairer prices to the consumers.

The domestic consumption of edible oil is estimated at one million tonnes per year. The local cooking oil production is just about 400,000 tonnes. To meet the self-sufficiency in the domestic market, about 700,000 tonnes of cooking oil are yearly imported. — NN/GNLM

Potato price edges up in retail market

On 1 July, the potato was priced at K820 per viss in the wholesale market, whereas it dramatically rose to K1,270 per viss at the end of July. The price keeps rising in the retail market.

THE price of potatoes remains in the bull market and touched a high of K1,400-2,700 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes) in the domestic market, as per the price data of the retail market.

Normally, the price of potatoes rises in the monsoon season. This year, potato prices remain in the upward trend.

On 1 July, the potato was priced at K820 per viss in the wholesale market, whereas it dramatically rose to K1,270 per viss at the end of July. The price keeps rising in the retail market, said a trader.

Additionally, tracking the strict restriction measures to contain the COVID-19, the prices of commodities fluctuate in the domestic market.

Last year, flooding the market with a bulk supply resulted in a price drop. Nevertheless, this staple food potato is highly demanded this year amid the COVID-19 consequences, causing the price to rise significantly.

There are over 90,000 acres of potato plantations across the country. About 600,000 tonnes are produced yearly. Local potato consumption is estimated at 350,000 tonnes.— KK/GNLM

Black sesame price rises by K50,000 per three-basket bag

THE price of black sesame has been rising in the Mandalay commodity depot since early October, with the price of a three-basket bag rising to about K50,000, according to the Mandalay wholesale market.

Last September, the rising of foreign exchange rates caused the exported variety pulses prices to remain on an upward trend. The price of black bean stood at K200,000 per three-basket bag, while the pigeon pea fetched at K150,000 per bag and the green gram was priced at K140,000 per bag. Now, the value of the Kyat against the US dollar dropped. Due to the closure of the Chinese border checkpoints, the price of domestic pulses will not fall. Due to an export ban by China last August, Myanmar shipped its products to China through Laos according to the Mandalay wholesale market.

Normally, Myanmar exports about 80 per cent of sesame production to foreign markets. China is the main buyer of Myanmar sesame, which was also shipped to markets in Japan, South Korea, China (Taipei), the UK, Germany, the Netherlands, Greece, and Poland among the EU countries.

Sesame is selling well in the market these days. The black sesame fetched K150,000-K250,000 per bag depending on the quality. The price has been rising for about a week. It sharply rose to K50,000 per bag in early October. The price of black sesame stood at K170,000 per basket in the early harvest season, according to the Mandalay wholesale market.

Sesame is cultivated in the country throughout the year. Magway Region is the main producer of sesame seeds. The seeds are also grown in Mandalay and Sagaing regions.

The volume of sesame exports has registered over 96,000 metric tons, worth $130 million, in the financial year 2015-2016; $100,000 tonnes, worth $145 million, in the 2016-2017FY; 120,000 tonnes, worth $147 million, in the 2017-2018FY; 33,900 tonnes valued $43.8 million in the 2018 mini-budget period, 125,800 tonnes, worth $212.5 million in the 2018-2019FY and over 150,000 tonnes of sesame, worth $240 million in the previous 2019-2020FY, the trade data of the Central Statistical Organization indicated. — Aye Maung/GNLM

IN BRIEFWTO wades in on Australia-China
wine spat

AUSTRALIA on Tuesday secured the establishment of a dispute panel at the World Trade Organization to probe China's imposition of anti-dumping and countervailing duties on imported Australian wine.

Canberra's first request to have the case examined was blocked by Beijing in September. According to WTO rules, second requests are automatically granted.

Australia wants to lift the customs barriers which have almost closed the most important export market for its wines.

"Australia noted that while it remains ready to engage in bilateral discussion with China, Australia is disappointed that it is not seeing any concrete steps by China to respond to its concerns," the WTO said.

"As a result, Australia is again requesting the establishment of a panel to examine the matter.—AFP ■

US regulator

authorization of China Telecom's
US unit

THE Federal Communications Commission said Tuesday it has decided to revoke the authorization for China Telecom Corp.'s US subsidiary to operate in the United States, citing the need to safeguard the nation's telecommunications infrastructure from "potential security threats".

The order directs China Telecom (Americas) Corp., which has been operating for about 20 years in the United States, to discontinue any domestic or international telecommunication services within 60 days. The US telecom regulator warned that the company's ownership and control by the Chinese government raises "significant" security risks by providing opportunities "to access, store, disrupt, and/or misroute US communications, which in turn allow them to engage in espionage and other harmful activities against the United States."—Kyodo News ■

Kishida urges gov't panel to craft proposals for "new capitalism" soon

JAPANESE Prime Minister Fumio Kishida said Tuesday he instructed a government economic policy panel to compile "urgent proposals" by early November to flesh out his signature "new capitalism" vision.

The proposals will include promoting the development of advanced technologies for digitalization and decarbonization and economic security issues, including securing semiconductor supplies as "top priorities", Kishida told the panel's first meeting. "We shared the view of aiming to improve productivity through growth strategies and increase the levels of people's income through redistribution of the fruits" of that growth, Kishida said, repeating his mantra of creating "the virtuous cycle of growth and distribution".

The proposals will include promoting the development of advanced technologies for digitalization and decarbonization and economic security issues. The request comes as a debate over economic stimulus has been heating up among political parties vying for support in Sunday's general election.

Economic and fiscal policy minister Daishiro Yamagiwa told a press conference after the meeting that the proposals will be reflected in an economic package that Kishida plans to compile if his party, as expected, wins a majority in the election for the House of Representatives, the powerful lower chamber of parliament. The prime minister has vowed an economic package worth "tens of trillions of yen", or hundreds of billion dollars, to support the coronavirus pandemic-hit economy.

As the head of the panel, Kishida, along with 15 business leaders, researchers and his Cabinet, will discuss policy measures for economic growth and redistribution of wealth under his "new capitalism" policy. The panel will focus on issues such as expanding the middle-class through wage hikes and improving working conditions for nonregular employees and freelancers, as Kishida pledged when being inaugurated as prime minister on 4 October.—Kyodo News ■

Slowing growth creates headache for next
German government

GLOBAL supply chain bottlenecks forced the German government to downgrade its 2021 growth forecast on Wednesday as it prepares to hand over the reins of a spluttering economy to the country's next coalition.

Supply chain disruptions and shortages of raw materials, including plastics, metals and paper, have choked off the recovery from the impact of the coronavirus pandemic in Europe's top economy.

As a result, the government lowered its forecast for gross domestic product growth to 2.6 per cent this year, Economy Minister Peter Altmaier told ZDF public television, from 3.5 per cent previously.

"It will still be one of the strongest growth rates in Europe," Altmaier said.

"But many goods are not being delivered because there is a shortage of raw materials in many areas and that is simply having an effect," the minister said.

"Higher energy prices are also a factor. At 2.6 per cent, the economy will still expand strongly this year. But it will only really begin to boom next year with growth of over four per cent."

BRITAIN unveils its latest budget Wednesday, looking to fix the public finances after emergency pandemic support sent debt rocketing. While attempting to bring down the deficit, Prime Minister Boris Johnson's government is set also to confirm multi-billion-pound funding projects aimed at driving long-term recovery and reducing pressure on the state-run health service. Finance minister Rishi Sunak delivers his tax and spending plans in parliament from around 1130 GMT, grappling not just with the pandemic but with problems associated with Brexit. "Today's budget begins the work of preparing for a new economy post-Covid," he is set to say, according to excerpts of his speech released by the finance ministry. "An economy of higher wages, higher skills, and rising productivity. Of strong public services, vibrant communities and safer streets. An economy fit for a new age of optimism," Sunak will add. Water tycoon is China's richest as wealth crackdown batters Jack Ma

BOTTLED-WATER tycoon Zhong Shanshan has become China's wealthiest person, according to an annual ranking released Wednesday, as a government campaign to rein in the super-rich took a big bite out of the fortunes of perennial front-runners like Alibaba co-founder Jack Ma.

Zhong, in his late 60s, has seen his fortune swell following the stock listings last year of his Nongfu Spring mineral water and separate pharma company Wantai Biological Pharmacy Enterprise, which has tapped into massive demand for Covid-19 test kits.

He is worth $60.5 billion, according to the Hurun Rich List, up seven per cent.

Heineken cheers profit jump, but outlook 'below 2019'

HEINEKEN on Wednesday posted a 2.6 billion euro ($2 billion) jump in year-on-year net profit three-quarters into 2021, but reported a major slump in beer sales in Asia markets because of Covid-19 restrictions.

Net profit for the first nine months was up to 3.082 billion euros ($3.5 billion) as opposed to 396 million euros last year and 1.66 billion in 2019, the world's number two brewer said in a statement.

But the profits were boosted by an exceptional gain of 1.3 billion euros from a remeasurement to fair value of a previously held equity interest in United Breweries in India — and full year expectations remained below that of 2019. Heineken took control of United Breweries — which makes India's popular Kingfisher brand — in July, pushing its holding to 61.5 per cent from 46.5 per cent before. Overall beer volumes grew by four per cent since the start of the year, but the Amsterdam-based brewer saw a 37.4 per cent dip in key markets such as Cambodia, Malaysia, Indonesia and Vietnam in the third quarter.—AFP ■

Beijing Games organizers say virus ‘biggest challenge’, 100 days from start

BEIJING Winter Olympics organizers said Wednesday that protecting the Games from the coronavirus is the “biggest challenge”, as China races to stamp out an outbreak 100 days before the event starts.

The Chinese capital will in February become the first host of a Summer and Winter Games, and last week welcomed the Olympic flame with a low-key ceremony.

But with just a few months until it kicks off, China is battling a virus outbreak that has seen millions told to stay at home, mass testing across at least 11 provinces and brought many flights and trains to a standstill.

“The pandemic is the biggest challenge to the organization of the Winter Olympics,” Zhang Jiandong, executive vice-president of the Beijing Organizing Committee, told a press conference.

China’s strict rules “can reduce the risks and impact of Covid-19”, he said, adding that those in the Games’ strict bubble who do not comply with anti-epidemic measures will face consequences. He did not say what.

Zhang told reporters that “all preparations are complete” and venues finished.

Case numbers remain comparatively low in China — where the virus emerged towards the end of 2019 — but authorities have maintained a strict zero-Covid approach through border controls and rigorous local lockdowns.

There were 50 new domestic cases reported Wednesday in six regions.—AFP ■

Damascus bookshops disappear as crisis hits culture

The Al-Nouri bookstore was founded in 1930 and is one of the capital's oldest bookshops, but is threatened with closure. PHOTO: AFP

THE Damascus bookshops and publishing houses that once stood as beacons of Syria’s intellectual life are being replaced with shoe shops and money changers, as culture falls casualty to crisis.

Syria is home to some of the Arab world’s literary giants, and Damascus boasted an abundance of busy bookshops and publishing houses printing and distributing original and translated works.

But the city’s literary flare has faded.

A decade-old civil war, a chronic economic crisis and a creative brain drain that has deprived Syria of some of its best writers and many of their readers, have compounded worldwide problems facing the industry, such as the growing popularity of e-books.

“People can’t afford to read and bookstores can’t cover the expenses of staying open,” said Muhammad Salem al-Nouri, 71, who inherited one of the capital’s oldest bookshops from his father.

Last month, the iconic Nobel bookshop in Damascus, founded in 1970, closed its doors.

The Al-Yaqza bookshop, founded in 1939, shut seven years ago, with a shoe store now taking its place.

A money exchange office has replaced the Maysalun bookshop which was open for four decades. The Al-Nouri bookstore, founded in 1930, is at risk of meeting the same fate.

“We wanted it to remain for our children and grandchildren,” Nouri told AFP. “But the Al-Nouri bookshop is threatened with closure, as are other bookstores.”

Qatar emir pledges ‘equal citizenship’ after vote controversy

Qatar’s emir pledged “equal citizenship” Tuesday after some people were excluded from participating in the country’s first legislative elections, sparking rare debate in the wealthy Gulf country.

Only descendants of Qataris who were citizens in 1930 were eligible to vote and run for 30 of the 45 seats in this month’s Shura Council polls, disqualifying members of families naturalized since then. “To promote equal Qatari citizenship and translate it into practice...I have instructed the council of ministers to prepare the appropriate legal amendments to ensure the achievement of this goal,” Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al-Thani told lawmakers at the new council’s opening session. In his first remarks on the issue, he called for combatting “tribal bigotry vis-a-vis public interest or loyalty to the homeland”.

This “negative aspect of tribalism” was surprising, he said, in apparent reference to isolated protests during the run-up to the elections.

Afghan all-female orchestra keeps music alive in exile

FOR the first time in months, members of Afghanistan’s all-female Zohra orchestra have re-assembled in Doha, their music once again filling the air as they face an uncertain future.

While grateful to be safe in Qatar, their escape from Taliban rule is bittersweet, as the girls leave behind friends from the orchestra and their “old companions” — their instruments. Last week marked the first time in three months that Marzia Anwari, along with other members of the Afghan music community who escaped to Qatar, played live for an audience. “Most of the girls from the Zohra orchestra are here with me in Qatar, but some

“I hope that they can join us here as soon as possible and we can be together and rebuild our orchestra.”—AFP ■

Brazil senators back criminal charges against Bolsonaro

A Brazilian Senate commission approved a damning report on Tuesday that recommends criminal charges be brought against President Jair Bolsonaro, including crimes against humanity, for his Covid policies. Seven of the panel's 11 senators voted to endorse the text -- presented last week after a six-month investigation into Brazil's pandemic response -- which also calls for the indictment of 77 other people, including several ministers and three of Bolsonaro's children. The nearly 1,200-page report also urges Brazil's Supreme Court to suspend the far-right leader's access to his accounts on social media platforms YouTube, Twitter, Facebook and Instagram for falsely alleging that Covid-19 vaccines were linked to AIDS.—AFP ■

Greek PM tells Turkey to stop 'aggressive posturing'

Greece's leader on Tuesday called on Turkey to stop its "aggressive posturing" and engage in talks over their maritime dispute, during a visit to Saudi Arabia to strengthen ties with Gulf countries. Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis warned that Greece had "drawn our lines very, very clearly" after signing defence deals with the United States and France earlier this month. Mitsotakis also held talks with Saudi Arabia's crown prince and de facto ruler, Mohammed bin Salman, and Bahrain's crown prince before addressing the Future Investment Initiative in Riyadh.—AFP ■

Anger over men-only foreign delegations to meet Taliban

GLOBAL powers and aid groups that have loudly demanded an inclusive Afghanistan under the Taliban are now facing criticism for sending all-male delegations to Kabul to meet the hardline Islamists. Since seizing power in August, the Taliban have excluded women from their new caretaker government and put restrictions on work and education, drawing condemnation from the outside world. But female representation has been little better among some governments and aid groups in their meetings in the capital with Afghanistan's new rulers, who are seeking international recognition. "Senior women in your teams should be leading your interactions with the Taliban... Don't exclude women," said Shaharзад Akbar, the exiled head of the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission. In a tweet addressing "governments and aid agencies", she called on them to "NOT NORMALIZE Taliban's erasure of women". In Biden shift, US denounces Israel on settlements

THE United States on Tuesday forcefully criticized Israel for the first time in years on its settlements, with President Joe Biden's administration saying it "strongly" opposed new construction on the West Bank. The reaction comes after four years under Donald Trump in which the United States offered a green light to Israel's activity on occupied Palestinian land, with his secretary of state, Mike Pompeo, touring a settlement at the end of his tenure. The State Department under Biden had repeatedly warned against settlement construction and on Tuesday sharply criticized Israel after it moved ahead. "We are deeply concerned about the Israeli government's plan to advance thousands of settlement units" on Wednesday as well as tenders published Sunday for more than 1,300 homes, State Department spokesman Ned Price said. "We strongly oppose the expansion of settlements, which is completely inconsistent with efforts to lower tensions and to ensure calm, and it damages the prospects for a two-state solution," he told reporters.—AFP ■

Sudan PM released as protesters face tear gas

SUDANESE Prime Minister Abdalla Hamdok was brought home late Tuesday, his office said, after a day of intense international pressure following his removal in a military coup. Hamdok was "under close surveillance" while other ministers and civilian leaders remained under arrest, his office added, after the army dissolved Sudan's institutions on Monday. Earlier in the day, the United States had said it would suspend aid over the coup and the EU had threatened to do the same. Meanwhile UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres demanded Hamdok "be released immediately" ahead of an emergency Security Council meeting that began at 2000 GMT. The coup comes just over two years into a delicate power-sharing arrangement between the military and civilians after the army's ousting during enormous street protests in April 2019 of longtime autocrat Omar al-Bashir. Top General Abdel Fattah al-Burhan had earlier vouched for Hamdok's "good health", while a military source who requested anonymity said Hamdok had been escorted home, with "security measures" erected "around the perimeter". Angry citizens stood their ground on barricaded streets where tyres burned, chanting "No to military rule", the day after four people were shot dead by security forces, according to a doctors' group.—AFP ■

'I prefer other players, says Real's Ancelotti about Hazard

CARLO Ancelotti delivered a reality check to Eden Hazard on 26 October by saying the Belgian is being left out of Real Madrid's starting line-up because he "prefers other players".

Hazard has endured a nightmare two years riddled with injuries since joining from Chelsea for €100 million ($150 million) and he stayed on the bench during Madrid's 2-1 win over Barcelona at Camp Nou on Sunday.

The 30-year-old has only started four La Liga games this season under Ancelotti, with an unknown muscle injury the latest fitness issue to rule him out of action earlier this month.

"He has absolutely everything," said Ancelotti, ahead of Madrid's game against Osasuna on Wednesday.

"But he has to put up with it. He's not playing but he has all the characteristics of a Real Madrid player - quality and motivation - but there are times when the coach prefers other players. "He can play. But the coach in this moment prefers other players. The important thing is he is motivated to work and to play. —AFP ■

France footballer Hernandez avoids jail as Madrid court accepts appeal

BAYERN Munich defender Lucas Hernandez will not go to a Spanish jail for violating a restraining order in 2017 after a Madrid court on Wednesday accepted the appeal by the French player.

"We consider that the appeal should be upheld and the order to enter prison suspended," the court said in a statement.

The suspension of the sentence will be for a period of four years as long as Hernandez does not commit any further crime and the payment of a fine of 96,000 euros ($111,000), the court said.

Hernandez, a World Cup winner with France in 2018, was arrested four years ago in Spain for violating a court order banning him from contacting his partner after a violent altercation between the pair.

He and his partner, Amelia Lorente, were both convicted of domestic violence in February 2017.

She hit and scratched Hernandez, while the player hit her in the ribs, back and face, according to the court ruling at the time.

Neither made a complaint against the other, but both were charged by Spain's public prosecutor.

The then-Atletico Madrid player and his girlfriend were each sentenced to 31 days of community service. They were also ordered not to see each other for six months.

Four months later though, Hernandez was arrested at a Madrid airport.—AFP ■
