The message sent by Chairman of the State Administration Council of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing to the ceremony to mark Workers' Day 1 May 2022

Esteemed workers,

Today is Workers' Day, deeply honouring the workers across the world, including Myanmar. On this historic and significant occasion, I wish the entire workers of Myanmar to enjoy mental and physical well-being with good aspirations for the New Year.

According to the historical records, the 1 May was designated as the International Workers' Day to recognize the efforts of workers to get the deserved rights against the labour exploitation in working overtime at factories in the 19th Century. And that day has been marked yearly throughout the world, including in Myanmar.

When the government is pouring the utmost efforts for ensuring prosperity of the State and sufficiency of food as the national work processes, I take pride in sending this message in honour of the workers who are the vital force of the nation on the workers' day, today.

Part of the life story of an amputated man

THE transitional period between birth and death is described as life. The life of the human being is formed up of various parts. None of these parts should miss. If so, life will become blank, and it will be difficult to define a perfect meaning. However, there is an unusual case where the missed part of the life is restored.

The message sent by Chairman of the State Administration Council of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing to the ceremony to mark Workers' Day 1 May 2022

Esteemed workers,

In accord with the objective to promote and support local businesses to create employment opportunities and increase domestic production, one of three economic objectives of nine objects of the State Administration Council, emphasis is being placed on the development of the State through tripartite cooperation among the government, employers and employees in order to develop State economy based on increased production, create employments for workers and ensure workplace peace and tranquillity.

The State Administration Council is making concerted efforts to enhance livelihoods for individual people with peaceful living, develop the State economy, restore perpetual peace across the nation, and surge recovered businesses as much as possible to escape from losses of COVID-19. In so doing, workers are playing an important role in creating the productivity of the State. As the government prioritizes the sufficiency of food for the people, the role of workers in creating the State's productivity is very crucial.

Esteemed workers,

Currently, the global countries are facing not only economic loss triggered by COVID-19 but also the instability of job opportunities and reduction of labour number. Hence, emphasis is being placed on solving the labour issues and other difficulties through negotiations among the government, employers and employees in Myanmar.

Local and foreign companies put investments in the Cutting, Making and Packaging-CMP system, which can create employment opportunities in a short time, contributing to the improvement of the State economy. As a result, the country can enjoy the fruits of creating labour-approached job opportunities in the CMP system, earning foreign exchange for the State with the least capital and turning out skilled labour.

Moreover, the government assists in developing small and medium scale enterprises and attracting local and foreign investments, technologies, markets and job opportunities. Due to the development of these works, efforts are being made to broaden the industries and services further so as to create job opportunities.

Under the Myanmar Investment Law, Myanmar citizens' investments and foreign investments mostly flow into industries, services, hotels and tourism and electrical sectors to generate a large number of jobs.

Esteemed workers,

As the survey on labour statistics is conducted twice a year as of 2017 for having the labour statistics to compile the research on labour affairs and data on the labour market, the annual labour statistics (first time) report 2020 has been published.

According to the survey, Myanmar is involved in the ASEAN arena with the largest number of workable populations. It can be seen that the abundance of a workable population is an excellent human resource for the development and prosperity of the nation.

In striving for the development of the nation with an abundant workable population, now is time for the government, the employers and the employees to unite among them to ensure the correctness of morals, confidence, concept and perception, adore the jobs and possess the high skills of knowledge and techniques with physical and mental capabilities.

Esteemed workers,

The government has signed the memorandum of cooperation on technological apprentice trainees and the memorandum of cooperation on skilled labour affairs with Thailand, the Republic of Korea, and Japan to enable Myanmar migrant workers to move to foreign countries safely and provide effective protection.

Moreover, labour officers are assigned to the Republic of Korea, Thailand, and Malaysia, where many Myanmar labourers reside, to protect Myanmar migrant workers abroad so that they can enjoy legal rights in their respective countries.

As the government decided to make utmost efforts to enhance the internal economy through the domestic strength in accord with the saying goes: "Strength of the nation lies within", the power, skill and cooperation of the workers that play a key role in the development of the nation are very important.

Esteemed workers,

Healthcare services are given, and monetary compensation is delivered to insured workers at three workers' hospitals and social security clinics to enable the workers who are the primary productive force of the nation to enjoy the safety of social life and healthcare services.

The government amended the period for paying social security fees for insured workers from factories during the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, increased the monetary compensation for ailing insured workers, pharmacy charges and travel allowance in the jobless period and delivered financial assistance to insured pregnant insured workers and those in quarantine for the interests of the workers.

Aiming to prevent infection of COVID-19 to employers and employees from factories and workplaces across the nation and not degrading the momentum of production, vaccination of COVID-19 was administered to workers from Yangon, Mandalay, Ayeyawady and Bago regions, where the number of factories is the largest, and the similar vaccination continues at remaining regions and states.

Esteemed workers,

Being a developing country, Myanmar is making preparations to approve the prohibited dangerous jobs and workplaces for children under 18 from the jobs contributing to families' livelihoods.

The team consisting of relevant ministries supervises and inspects the regular running of factories, shops and workplaces, whether they operate works in line with a directive for the COVID-19 pandemic, worksite safety and health guidelines for having successful production, the creation of employment, earning of incomes for employees and employers and increasing more earnings of foreign exchange.

Lessening worksite disputes is crucial for workplace peace and tranquillity, increasing production. Worker coordination committees, township dispute mediation bodies comprising representatives of the government, employers and employers, region and state arbitration bodies and an arbitration council were formed to solve workplace disputes and decide disputes in serving the interests of both sides fairly.

In conclusion, I send this message with wishes for the entire Myanmar workers participating in the critical role in peace, stability and development of the nation to improve social-economic life. May they all be safe in workplaces and peaceful and tranquil. May all employers and employees be capable of increasing productivity through the united strengths of employers and employees. And may all effectively contribute to the State, citizens and national interests to achieve success in gaining more significant development in multiple sectors of the State.

Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement enters into force between Myanmar and China

By May Sipwa

DURING the negotiation period and signing of the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) between ASEAN and China, Japan, South Korea, Australia and New Zealand, the participation of Myanmar in RCEP has been covered in newspapers and shared the discussions with business people.

The RCEP was discussed for eight years, starting in 2012, and the ASEAN countries, including Myanmar and China, Japan, South Korea, Australia and New Zealand, signed the agreement on 15 November 2020. The RCEP agreement is the world's most significant trade agreement covering 30 per cent of the world's population, 30 per cent of global gross domestic product (GDP), 29 per cent of world trade and 30 per cent of foreign direct investment. The agreement with Myanmar comes into force on 1 May 2022, and the country achieves access to opportunities of the agreement.

Among partner countries of ASEAN that signed in RCEP, China is the first one that recognized the letter expressing agreement with Myanmar comes into force starting 1 May 2022, and Myanmar can get the priorities in customs of China and other chances.

Myanmar, an ASEAN member country, is still suffering the chances of the ASEAN-China Free Trade Area-ACFTA signed in 2010. However, the ACFTA is the first Free Trade Agreement-FTA among ASEAN and partner countries, so it included only a few of trade and servicing trade, investment, and other sectors.

The RCEP agreement carries multi-sectoral things in line with the trend, and Myanmar-China economic cooperation can be done widely under the agreement.

Myanmar entrepreneurs have previously used the ASE-

AN-China Free Trade Area-ACFTA and can enjoy the chances under the RCEP.

In RCEP, it pre-determines the products to be exported regarding the customs procedures that are not included in ACFTA, customs value and products/produced by Myanmar and customs clearance within 48 hours from the time of products arrive. Therefore, the products exported to China can be taken out faster than before, according to RCEP.

Moreover, it can protect the severe risks for the local enterprises such as the high import volumes, selling with discount, export with the help of other countries. So the trade can be made full of trust between Myanmar and China, according to RCEP.

Myanmar business people will be exempted from customs tax for 5,969 products now. They are 368 animal products, 389 agricultural products, 10 edible oil products, 163 food-stuffs, 181 mineral products, 1,127 chemical products and work materials, 125 plastic materials, 67 leather products, 234 forest products, 146 cement, mirror and its related materials, 62 pearl and valuable gems, 554 units of metal and metal-based materials, 554 units of metal and metal-based materials, 1,058 machines, 124 vehicles, planes, ships and transportation parts, 240 medicines, movie materials and instruments and so on. The remaining goods also receive reduced customs tax to be paid yearly.

The trade between Myanmar and China was $5420.052 million for export in 2019-2020, while the import volume amounted to $6729.174 million. The export volume was $5160.825 million, and the import volume was $4647.096 million due to the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020-2021.

Therefore, Myanmar can enjoy duty-free and other reliefs for the exports to China, and it can earn export incomes, create job opportunities and increase the taxes.

Regarding the services, Myanmar eased 52 sectors under ACFTA and 80 sectors in the economy, communication, construction, distribution, education, environment, finance, health, tourism, transportation and other services under the RCEP. China eased 88 sectors under ACFTA and 95 sectors under RCEP.

By easing service sectors, it can improve economic capacity, enhance the competitiveness of exports and products of developing countries in international markets, offer varieties of choices, foreign direct investment inflows into Myanmar, grab chances to create job opportunities and technological aid and extend service sectors and other relevant parts.

Myanmar and China can launch technological cooperation in the fields expressed in RCEP as electronic material trade, MSMEs, procurement of government, supports, and capacity building programmes for IP, which are not included in ACFTA.

The RCEP agreement is a multi-sectoral world standard agreement, and being a member country, it can get chances to reform the laws and frameworks for the country in line with the international norms in implementing the provisions of the agreement and other opportunities to improve the capacity of government and private organizations.

Moreover, Myanmar is a less developed country, so there is no need to follow some commitments in the agreement, and it can enjoy a one-sided chance for three to five years. During that period, the country can draft a legal framework, develop the human resources and promote the capabilities of organizations.

In conclusion, as the RCEP enters into force between Myanmar and China, Myanmar starts a new chapter in regional economic cooperation for future economic collaborations in addition to trade and investment.

Mark workers’ day with plans to improve workers’ life

THE 1st May was designated as the International Workers’ Day to recognize the efforts of workers to get the deserved rights against the labour exploitation in working overtime at factories in the 19th Century.

Currently, the global countries are facing not only economic loss triggered by COVID-19 but also the instability of job opportunities and reduction of labour number. Hence, emphasis is being placed on solving the labour issues and other difficulties through negotiations among the government, employers and employees in Myanmar.

the country can enjoy the fruits of creating labour-approached job opportunities in the CMP system, earning foreign exchange for the State with the least capital and turning out skilled labour.

As the survey on labour statistics is conducted twice a year as of 2017 for having the labour statistics with the aim of compiling the research on labour affairs and data on the labour market, the annual labour statistics (first time) report 2020 has been published.

The survey proved Myanmar is involved in the ASEAN arena with the largest number of workable populations. Such an abundance of a workable population is an excellent human resource for the development and prosperity of the nation.

The government has signed the memorandum of cooperation on technological apprentice trainees and the memorandum of cooperation on skilled labour affairs with Thailand, the Republic of Korea and Japan for Myanmar migrant workers to move to foreign countries safely and effectively protect them.

Moreover, labour officers are assigned in the Republic of Korea, Thailand and Malaysia, where a large number of Myanmar labourers reside, to protect Myanmar migrant workers abroad so that they can enjoy their legal rights in the respective countries.

The government amended the period for paying the social security fees for insured workers from factories during the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, increased the monetary compensation for ailing insured workers, pharmacy charges and travel allowance during the jobless period and delivered financial assistance to insured pregnant workers and those in quarantine.

Vaccination of COVID-19 was administered to workers from Yangon, Mandalay, Ayeyawady and Bago regions for their health. As healthy and fit workers can join workplaces for production, it is necessary to uplift the life of workers without fail.

It can be said that winning the sports events is designed to defend the State. As such, young and talented youths need to emphasize sports training for their health and fitness. If so, their new generations will build a healthy country.

Overcoming challenges in life with a positive attitude

THE brain thrives on positivity. A positive attitude will help lessen stress management. It can lead to success in life. Maumyit Publishing House published a book titled Overcoming challenges in life with a positive attitude by Dr Htay Hlaing, in which it’s interesting how people have surmounted difficulties in life.

This book is a collection of 28 pieces of writing related to the author’s experiences and perspectives, including two essays expressing my gratitude to my parents (The voyage and I dreamt about my late father).

One of his written works, “Optimism”, stated that rewiring your brain for positivity will give you greater happiness, much contentment, and peace of mind.

The author showed his opinion that the more satisfied with your life, the happier you will be.

Everyone wants to be successful

By Sann Ni Lar Winn

BEFORE summer vacation, the students from the Basic Education High School used to take an examination. According to their efforts, the school examination is the testing ground for school boys and girls. This Myanmar proverb says that “No Pain, No Gain”.

Everyone wants to be successful in life, but not all meet with success. Therefore, they are immortalized and look upon as a source of creative inspiration for those who desire to succeed likewise.

The Lord Buddha has taught us the way to success in many of his discourses. According to one of these discourses, there are four virtues that, when developed, lead to success and enable man to achieve his goals in life. They are “Will, Effort, Active thought and Wisdom”.

The Four Keys to success

The first key to success is to work or fulfil one’s duties to the best of one’s ability. It means that one should have the desire, interest and determination to work. There should be the right attitude towards what one is expected to do.

Will is, in fact, a primary requirement in the execution of one’s responsibilities, without which nothing much can be accomplished. The English proverb says that “Where there is a will, there is a way”.

The second is effort or perseverance in one’s undertakings. It implies the ceaseless application of energy to the work one is supposed to do. When we undertake to do something, we should exert ourselves, fully and continually, until it is completed. If students are merely interested in the subjects they study but do not want to commit themselves actively, the chance for success would be very slim indeed. An effort is, therefore, a very important factor for success. We should try to cultivate this virtue in us.

Active thought means the thought about one’s work which is well directed and constantly applied. Whatever we do, be it great or small, we have to apply our active thought to it repeatedly until it is finished. If we do not succeed at the first attempt, we should not feel discouraged but think about it carefully and work even harder. We should be positive in our thinking and firm in our goals.

The last virtue is also very important. Wisdom is necessary for all kinds of activities. When we work, we should always examine our work; we should have good planning and a proper understanding of the work. It is not enough to work hard; we should also work wisely, using our intelligence and common sense.

Only those who work in this way will attain a high degree of success. The use of wisdom will prevent us from doing wrong things and ensure our success. Therefore, it is very important that we learn how to cultivate wisdom and use it in all our activities.

Youth and Student life

I remember that my teacher and benefactor, Saya U Khin Maung Mya (B.A, BL), gave many guidelines on overcoming the difficulties throughout my life.

Youth all over the world have some common characteristics. They are full of youthfulness and vitality. They are fresh, alert and active. They are free from worries and anxieties, not having experienced the twists and turns of life.

They are honest and frank. They are ready to learn from their natural environment and the society they live in. By nature, they are inquisitive. They want to know about new and strange things. So they have investigative and exploratory minds.

The strong-willed, healthy young men are eager to take adventures to test their strength and capability. As they are raw and do not have fixed habits, they are prone to imitate what they see and hear. The world is open to them, not knowing about any limitation in life. They live by hope and expectation. They want to lead a carefree, independent, peaceful and happy life. They are looking forward to progress and development.

Youth and Buddhism

According to the concept of the Myanmar Buddhists, there are three periods of life. The first period is to gain knowledge. The second period is to accumulate wealth and property. The third period is a devote oneself to meditative practices.

Therefore, children and young people must gain knowledge during the first period. The first source of their knowledge lies in their parents. The parents are the foremost teachers, as the saying goes. As the children learn by imitation, they follow after their parents’ actions, words, and mental attitudes. Children of the wise behave well while children of the fool grow wild. That is conventional wisdom. So the parents are the foremost responsible persons for nurturing the children. It is essential for parents to be good fathers and good mothers.

As youths are still inexperienced and immature, they are in danger of falling into various pitfalls. Being a social animal, youth is very likely to be fallen into bad company. He might be persuaded to play truant, smoke cheroots or cigarettes, drink beer or liquor, and then take illicit drugs. Exploiting youths’ sensitive and adventurous nature, some ruthless elements persuaded them to commit acts of terrorism and anti-government activities. In this way, some youths become criminals and anti-societal rascals.

Youth and the future life

But luckily enough, the teachings of Lord Buddha are still shining bright in our country. Spotlighting the danger of bad company, the Lord Buddha had taught us not to get associated with the fools but get associated with the wise. It is the first point among the 38 Auspicious Deeds in the Mingala Sutta. There are many discourses, including the Singalovada Sutta, which deal with social principles for building a good society. Under such influence, our Myanmar Buddhist society does not accept bad behaviour and unwholesome deeds.

We are also trying to keep the Five Precepts as fastened as the longyi is on our waist. We regard morality as the basis of virtue. Along with these religious teachings, the government, the educational authorities, the teachers and the parents are nurturing and preparing our youths to become well-qualified, disciplined and good citizens.

Some fare well, and some find difficulties. Some succeed, and some fail. This is the time they encounter the grim facts of life. This is when they have the chance to become experienced, mellowed and mature.

This is the time to face the facts of life with courage and perseverance. This is the time to exercise restraint and rationality. Of course, life is a constant process of adjustments to keep up the balance between the two ends.

Most important of all, it is the ability to strike a balance between self-interest and the common good of society. Only by properly balancing these two ends can a man live in peace and happiness. A contented and full life can be achieved only through a well-balanced life.

In Scandinavia, wooden buildings reach new heights

A sandy-coloured tower glints in the sunlight and dominates the skyline of the Swedish town of Skelleftea as Scandinavia harnesses its wood resources to lead a global trend towards erecting eco-friendly high-rises.

The Sara Cultural Centre is one of the world's tallest timber buildings, made primarily from spruce and towering 75 metres (246 feet) over rows of snow-dusted houses and surrounding forest.

The 20-storey timber structure, which houses a hotel, a library, an exhibition hall and theatre stages, opened at the end of 2021 in the northern town of 35,000 people.

Forests cover much of Sweden's northern regions, most of it spruce, and building timber homes is a longstanding tradition.

Swedish architects now want to spearhead a revolution and steer the industry towards more sustainable construction methods as large wooden buildings sprout up in Sweden and neighbouring Nordic nations thanks to advancing industry techniques.

tel," Therese Kreisel, a Skelleftea urban planning official, tells AFP during a tour of the cultural centre.

Even the lift shafts are made entirely of wood. "There is no plaster, no seal, no isolation on the wood," she says, adding that this "is unique when it comes to a 20-storey building".

Building materials go green

The main advantage of working with wood is that it is more environmentally friendly, proponents say.

Cement – used to make concrete – and steel, two of the most common construction materials, are among the most polluting industries because they emit huge amounts of carbon dioxide, a major greenhouse gas.— AFP

Videoconferencing hinders creativity, study finds

PEOPLE are worse at coming up with creative ideas during a video call compared to meeting in person, a study said Wednesday, suggesting that workplaces should prioritize brainstorming sessions for the office.

The pandemic has changed the nature of office work, propelling a massive rise in videoconferencing that looks unlikely to abate as homeworking becomes more entrenched across the world.

Seeking to find out how this huge change affects creativity, US researchers studied nearly 1,500 employees of a telecommunications company in Finland, Hungary, India, Israel and Portugal.

In pairs, either in person or on a Zoom call, the employees came up with as many creative ideas as they could for the company's products, then picked the best one.

The pairs who spoke in person came up with around 15 per cent more, according to the study published in the Nature journal.

The researchers found similar results in an experiment involving more than 600 university students, who were also paired off and told to come up with creative ideas for either a frisbee or bubble wrap. The in-person pairs came up with 14 per cent more ideas.

However, it was not all bad news for Zoom, Skype and the other videoconferencing apps.

Both sets of results found that video calls were just as effective for selecting the best idea, a decision which requires "cognitive focus and analytical reasoning", the study said.— AFP

Power cuts, forest fires in South Asia heatwave

POWER outages compounded the misery of millions of people wilting in a heatwave across India and Pakistan on Friday, with experts blaming climate change for an early onset of roasting summer temperatures.

In the northern Indian state of Himachal Pradesh hundreds of forest fires have broken out in recent weeks, eating up tinder-dry pine forests including around Dharamsala, home of the Dalai Lama.

Himachal Pradesh normally sees rain, hail and even snow in higher areas at this time of year but many parts have seen no precipitation in two months, sparking more and bigger blazes than normal.—AFP

California probes 'Big Oil' over plastic pollution

California launched a sweeping investigation Thursday into plastic pollution by major oil companies, in a probe it says will look at whether fossil fuel giants have been lying about the problem for decades. As part of the wide-ranging probe, the state's attorney-general hit ExxonMobil with a subpoena with the aim of uncovering its role in an alleged cover-up.

"Enough is enough. For more than half a century, the plastics industry has engaged in an aggressive campaign to deceive the public, perpetuating a myth that recycling can solve the plastics crisis," said Rob Bonta, the US state's top lawyer.

"The truth is: The vast majority of plastic cannot be recycled, and the recycling rate has never surpassed nine percent."—AFP

Paris suspends electric bus fleet after fires

Dozens of electric buses will be taken off the streets of Paris temporarily "as a precaution" after two of the vehicles caught fire within a month, in a possible setback for the French capital's green transport ambitions.

‘Zero-COVID’ policy doesn’t harm economic growth: Chinese epidemiologist

A leading Chinese epidemiologist has refuted the claim that China’s “zero-COVID” policy has impeded the country’s economic growth.

“The ultimate goal of the dynamic “zero-COVID” approach is to safeguard the well-being of the people to the greatest extent possible, and at the same time protect social and economic development as well as people’s normal life and production,” Liang Wannian, head of the COVID-19 response expert panel under the National Health Commission, said at a press conference.

The “zero-COVID” approach coordinates measures against the epidemic with economic development, Liang said, noting that the virus is the true cause of the economic downturn.

He made these remarks amid growing criticism of China’s harsh COVID measures from people at home and abroad.

“Precision” is what the dynamic “zero-COVID” approach emphasizes, Liang was quoted as saying by Xinhua News Agency.

Defending the COVID policy decision taken, the leading Chinese epidemiologist said that based on local conditions, governments are required to strike a balance between the fight against the epidemic and social and economic development.

China’s economic slowdown and the country’s high-handedness in tackling COVID-19 are pushing the investors to move out of the country and shut down their businesses.

US biotech firm Moderna said Thursday it had submitted a request for an emergency use authorization in the United States for its Covid vaccine for children aged six months to under six years.

Children under six are the only age group that has yet to gain access to a Covid-19 vaccine in the United States and in most countries. “We believe (this vaccine) will be able to safely protect these children against SARS-CoV-2, which is so important in our continued fight against Covid-19 and will be especially welcomed by parents and caregivers,” the company’s CEO Stephane Bancel said in a statement.—AFP

New COVID-19 cases in Los Angeles up 40 pct in one week: media

NEW COVID-19 cases in Los Angeles, the most populous county in the United States, rose by 40 per cent over the past week and hospitalizations have started to creep up as well, local media reported on Thursday.

The renewed surge in coronavirus infections underscored “how important it is for people to be up-to-date on their vaccines and boosters, as well as wear masks in indoor public settings”, reported The Los Angeles Times, citing public health officials.

Although neither the number of infections nor the patient census are setting off alarm bells as yet, the trendlines illustrate that the county is contending with reinvigorated coronavirus transmission, the report noted.

Over the last week, the county, home to over 10 million residents, has reported an average of about 1,764 new coronavirus cases per day — up from 1,261 a week ago, compared with 879 cases a day in early April, according to The Los Angeles Times, which is one of the largest newspapers in the country.

Officials said that the Omicron BA.2 variant is the primary culprit behind the uptick in cases in the county, accounting for at least 88 per cent of cases here, the newspaper reported.

The number of reported infections still remains an important indicator of where the pandemic is heading, and it’s not a guarantee that the coronavirus is now destined to mainly result in milder illness, Barbara Ferrer, the county’s director of public health, was quoted as saying.—Xinhua

China suspends freight train operations with N Korea amid virus

CHINA has suspended freight train operations with North Korea amid the outbreak of the novel coronavirus in the Chinese border city of Dandong, the Foreign Ministry said Friday.

Since earlier this week, many residential compounds in Dandong, which lies opposite the North Korean city of Sinuiju, have been locked down against a backdrop of the spread of the highly contagious Omicron variant, while people living in such areas have been compelled to stay home. Although North Korea claims it has found no COVID-19 infection cases, Pyongyang had suspended land traffic with China since early 2020, with worries mounting that the virus, first detected in the central Chinese city of Wuhan in late 2019, could enter the reclusive nation.

The freight train operations between the two countries resumed in January this year, as a plunge in trade with China apparently dealt a heavy blow to North Korea's economy, making it more difficult for its citizens to receive adequate food and daily necessities.

The bilateral trade plummeted around 90 per cent in 2021 from 2019 before the pandemic began. North Korea is seen to be vulnerable to infectious diseases due largely to chronic shortages of food and medical equipment triggered by international economic sanctions designed to thwart its nuclear and ballistic missile ambitions. China is North Korea's closest and most influential ally in economic terms, accounting for more than 90 per cent of its trade.—Kyodo

Norway to close ports to Russian ships, except trawlers

NORWAY will follow the European Union's lead and close its ports to Russian ships with the exception of trawlers, the Norwegian government announced Friday.

The Nordic country is not an EU member but has adopted almost all EU sanctions on Russia – often with a slight delay – since Moscow invaded Ukraine on 24 February.

On Friday, Norway said it would implement the fifth set of sanctions that the 27-member bloc agreed three weeks earlier, on 7 April.

This includes a ban, with some exceptions, on transporting goods by road from Russia, with which Norway shares an Arctic border, via the Storskog crossing point between the two countries.

The Arctic archipelago is governed by a century-old treaty that allows all signatory states, including Russia, to take part in economic activities there on an equal footing.

“Sanctions are our main means of pressure against the Russian regime,” said Norwegian Foreign Minister Anniken Huitfeldt.

Russian central bank slashes key interest rate again

RUSSIA'S central bank Friday said it was cutting its key interest rate for a second straight time as risks of price rises and financial instability were no longer rising.

The Bank of Russia said it was slashing the rate from 17 per cent to 14 per cent from next week, a greater cut than predicted by many analysts. It said this was because “price and financial stability risks (are) no longer on the rise”. The central bank had cut the interest rate to 17 per cent earlier this month saying that risks to financial stability had “ceased to increase” for now. This followed an emergency hike to 20 per cent in late February, four days after the start of Moscow's military action in Ukraine.—AFP

Spain cuts 2022 growth forecast over war in Ukraine

SPAIN on Friday slashed its economic growth forecast for 2022, mainly due to the fallout of Russia's invasion of Ukraine which has fuelled inflation and eroded consumer purchasing power.

The gross domestic product of the eurozone's fourth-largest economy is now expected to expand by 4.3 per cent rather than the 7.0 per cent previously forecast, the economy ministry said.

This is lower than the growth of 4.5 per cent forecast by the Bank of Spain and the 4.8 per cent expansion predicted by the Washington-based International Monetary Fund.

Indonesia’s palm oil export ban heats up vegetable oil market

The prices of palm, soybean, European rapeseed and canola oil have reached historic highs. PHOTO: AFP

The prices of palm, soybean, European rapeseed and even its Canadian GMO counterpart, canola oil, have reached historic highs following Indonesia’s announcement on Wednesday.

“We already had problems with soybeans in South America, with canola in Canada,” said Philippe Chalmin, an economics professor at Paris-Dauphine University in France, stating that both crops had been severely affected by extended droughts.

Then came devastation for the “sunflowers in Ukraine” due to Russia’s destructive invasion, he added.

Palm oil is the most consumed vegetable oil in the world, and Indonesia accounts for 35 per cent of global exports, according to James Fry, chairman of LMC consulting firm.

Indonesia’s export ban is designed to bring down prices in the country and limit shortages, according to authorities.

But Chalmin said the move “comes at the worst time.”—AFP

Over 3,000 Europe-bound migrants lost at sea in 2021

MORE than 3,000 people died in the Mediterranean and Atlantic while trying to reach Europe last year -- double the toll from 2020, the United Nations said Friday.

A fresh report from the UN refugee agency demanded urgent action to combat surging deaths among refugees, asylum seekers and other migrants trying to reach Europe.

Last year, a total of 3,077 people were lost while trying to cross the Mediterranean and Atlantic routes to the continent, the report showed, up from 1,544 in 2020.

"Alarming, since the beginning of the year, an additional 478 people have also died or gone missing at sea," UNHCR spokeswoman Shabia Mantoo told reporters in Geneva.

The report showed that for 2021, 1,924 people were reported dead or missing on the Central and Western Mediterranean routes, while another 1,153 perished on the North African maritime route to the Canary Islands.

"Most of the sea crossings took place in packed, unseaworthy, inflatable boats, many of which capsized or were deflated leading to the loss of life," Mantoo said.

The sea journey from countries on the West African coast such as Mauritania and Senegal to the Canary Islands was particularly perilous, she said, pointing out that the crossing could take up to 10 days. "Many boats drifted off course or otherwise went missing without trace

Student's death stokes anger over Mexican femicide crisis

THE death of an 18-year-old Mexican student has unleashed anger against authorities accused of negligence over the murders and disappearances of thousands of women each year, few of which receive as much attention.

At least 50 killed in explosion at Kabul mosque: media

AT least 50 people were killed in an explosion at a mosque in Kabul on Friday, Reuters reported.

The blast in the Afghan capital may have been another in a series of terrorist attacks in the country during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, though no group has yet claimed responsibility. The latest incident reportedly occurred after worshippers finished their Friday prayers at the mosque.

A day earlier, 11 people died when two minibuses blew up in the northern city of Mazar-i-Sharif, with the Islamic State claiming responsibility for bombing the vehicles.

The militant group has also claimed responsibility for the bombing of a mosque and adjacent religious school in the same city last week that killed 33 worshippers, US media reported. — Kyodo

N Korea’s Kim vows pre-emptive use of nuclear weapons if threatened

NORTH Korean leader Kim Jong Un has reiterated his intention to “pre-emptively” use the country’s nuclear weapons if the nation is threatened by what it regards as “hostile forces”, state-run media reported Saturday.

While praising top military officials who directed a vast military parade in Pyongyang earlier in the week, Kim was quoted by the official Korean Central News Agency as expressing his eagerness to continue developing nuclear weapons.

North Korea will “pre-emptively and thoroughly contain and frustrate all dangerous attempts and threatening moves, including ever-escalating nuclear threats from hostile forces, if necessary”, Kim told the military officials, according to the news agency.

ing of North Korea’s army, Kim pledged to bolster development of nuclear weapons at a faster pace and use them if the country’s fundamental interests are jeopardized.

Kim’s remarks were an apparent warning to the United States, which has recently deployed a nuclear aircraft carrier to the Sea of Japan, and South Korea, where conservative President-elect Yoon Suk Yeol will take office on 10 May.

South Korea has said it has detected activity to restore tunnels at North Korea’s only known nuclear test site. In May 2018, Pyongyang said it had “completely” demolished the Punggye-ri site in the presence of foreign reporters. The United States and its security allies South Korea and Japan have strengthened surveillance of North Korea, with concern mounting that Pyongyang will launch an intercontinental ballistic missile or conduct its seventh nuclear test in the near future.

On 24 March, North Korea conducted the first launch of an ICBM since November 2017, marking an end to its self-imposed moratorium on such firings stretching back to April 2018. KCNA said the missile was a Hwasong-17.—Kyodo

Ukraine says evacuation from Mariupol plant planned

KYIV said Friday plans were in place to evacuate civilians from the besieged Azovstal steel plant in the southern city of Mariupol where Ukrainian forces and civilians are encircled by Russian troops.

“An operation to evacuate civilians from the Azovstal factory is planned for today,” the Ukrainian presidency said in a statement.

Russia last week said it had gained full control of the strategic port city, except for the huge Azovstal industrial area.

UKRAINIAN President Volodymyr Zelensky has been invited to the G20 summit in November, which will also be attended by Russian President Vladimir Putin, the president of host nation Indonesia said Friday.

“I have invited President

Zelenskyy to attend the G20 summit,” said Joko Widodo, suggesting a compromise had been reached following Western pressure to bar Russia from the event in response to its invasion of Ukraine. Putin confirmed in a phone call with Widodo he will attend the summit, to take place on Bali island, the Indonesian leader said in a livestreamed address.

Russia is a G20 member, while Ukraine is not. Since the start of the war in Ukraine, Indonesia has faced fierce pressure from Western countries, led by the United States, to bar Russia from the summit. But Jakarta had insisted that, as the host, it must remain impartial, while US President Joe Biden had suggested Ukraine could take part.—AFP

Real Madrid win 35th Spanish La Liga title

REAL MADRID secured a 35th La Liga title on Saturday with four games to spare after a 4-0 home win over Espanyol fuelled by two goals from Rodrygo.

Needing just one point to clinch the trophy, Madrid struck twice through the Brazilian in the first half at the Santiago Bernabeu before goals from Marco Asensio and Karim Benzema. Madrid moved 17 points clear of second-placed Sevilla with four matches to play. Barcelona have a game in hand but are 18 points adrift. Given they have been top since November, there was no surprise about Madrid winning a league they have dominated for months, but dips in form from Barcelona and Sevilla offered the chance for an earlier coronation than expected.

With La Liga wrapped up, Madrid can now turn their full attention to the second leg of their semi-final at home to Manchester City on Wednesday, when they will need to overturn a 4-3 loss from the opening game last week to advance to another European final. Madrid coach Carlo Ancelotti rested Benzema and Vinicius Junior from the start for the visit of Espanyol, and Rodrygo seized his chance with two goals late in the first half.
