OF 30,000 acres of summer paddy fields in Taikkyi and Hmawby townships in Yangon Region that are irrigated by Tabu Hla Dam, a total of 26,553 acres were well watered by the irrigation, increasing in yields. The water was provided to summer paddy from the Tabu Hla Dam as of 15 December 2021, and the summer paddy was harvested in the first week of April. Due to the abundance of irrigated water, between 90 and 100 baskets of summer paddy were produced per acre, making the farmers delighted.

Efforts will be made to supply full irrigation water depending on the expansion of cultivation, said Staff Officer U Tun Tun Win of the Taikkyi Township Department of Irrigation and Water Utilization Management. In addition to summer paddy, more than 4,000 acres of sunflower plantations will be grown in Taikkyi Township, in January and February, 2023, according to the Staff Officer. Tabu Hla Dam was completed on 27 May 1995, aimed to irrigate 52,000 acres of farmland in Taikkyi and Hmawby

Townships. In the first week of May this year, more than 15 feet of water remained in the dam, and during the rainy season, more than 195 feet deep of water was pumped in. The dam supplies water to 52,000 acres of irrigated farmland areas through three 6x4 feet conduits.—Nyein Thu (MNA)/GNLM

Seintalone mango from Kanbalu District to be shipped to China

SEINTALONE mango produced in the Seintalone Special Farming Zone in Kanbalu District, Sagaing Region will be conveyed to China through Muse border post.

“The mango harvest started on 15 May. They are designated for Chinese market. The minimum price is approximately 90-100 Yuan per 16-kg basket. Each mango can fetch up to 120 Yuan in maximum. As mango is abundantly flowing into the market at present, the price is slightly decreasing,” said U Than Tun Oo, staff officer of Kanbalu District Agriculture Department’s farm.

Sagaing Region Agriculture Department designated 2,500 acres in Kyunhla and Kanbalu townships as Seintalone Special Farming Zone as a trade mark.

There is a total of 148 mango growers engaged in 3,052 acres of Seintalone and other mango varieties in Kanbalu and Kyunhla townships.

“The trade barrier is high transportation charges resulted from the fuel oil hike. Additionally, other general cost related to the virus policy add additional charges.

However, the mango market does not collapse like watermelon market happened. The trade is steadily flowing. This year is unlikely to see as more losses as last year,” said U Than Tun Oo.

A five-year old Seintalone mango tree can bear 20-30 fruits.

The yield rate is 70-80 fruits per 10-year old tree. About 100 trees can be grown per acre, if the distance between trees is 20 feet.—Lu Lay/GNLM

Myanmar exports up by $115.99 mln over one month

THE Customs Department’s statistic indicated that Myanmar’s exports between 1 April and 6 May in the current financial year from April 2022 to March 2023 soared to US$1.34 billion from $1.2 billion recorded in the corresponding period of last year. The figures reflected an increase of over $115.99 million compared with a year-ago period, according to data from the Ministry of Commerce.

The negative pandemic consequences deal a severe blow to the agriculture, livestock and mineral sectors during the past mini-budget period. As China eases some virus rules and regulations, the export sees a slight increase in agriculture sector this FY. At present, the CMP garment sector raises its head again after the vaccination programme to the factory workers as well. Of the seven export groups, fisheries, forest and other exports showed a small increase compared to the year-ago period.

Over one month, export values were registered at $423.3 million for agro products, $2.77 million for livestock, $56.137 million for fishery products, $69.66 million for minerals, $12.15 million for forest products, over $750.69 million for manufactured goods, and $26.24 million for other goods. Myanmar’s top export countries are listed China, Thailand, Japan, India, USA, Spain, Germany, UK, ROK and the Netherlands.

The country’s export sector relies more on the agricultural and manufacturing sectors. The Ministry of Commerce is focusing on reducing trade deficit, export promotion, import substitution and market diversification.—Htet Myat/GNLM

Over 2,000 traditional inshore trawlers allowed fishing despite three-month close season

MORE than 2,000 traditional fishing trawlers have been given the go-ahead in spite of the three-month close season, according to the Department of Fisheries.

Myanmar puts a temporary stop to fishing season in Myanmar sea every year. Between 1 May and 30 June 2020, fishing vessels of squid, bamboo fishing rafts are banned to run operations.

The close season for fishing vessels including bamboo fishing rafts in Taninthayi Region is set from April to June. Nevertheless, the traditional inshore fishing trawlers are allowed to run during the close season.

“The close season will expire on 1 July. Over 2,000 traditional inshore trawlers are excluded from this ban,” said an official of Kawthoung District Fisheries Department.

The fish hatcheries in the regions and states yearly add the one-inch sized fish larvae into the lakes, dams and ponds. Such an event is not found in Taninthayi Region. According to a survey conducted by Myanmar Fisheries Department and Norwegian fish researcher, fish and marine resource depletion is found on the surface and deep sea in Myanmar.

Areca nut price likely to remain high in coming two months

THE prices of areca nuts are possibly to continue rising in the coming June and July, according to areca nut market.

The inventory of dried areca nuts is lower at present. Only the warehouse owners are holding them. Therefore, the price goes up. The prices stood at K4,550-K5,350 per viss (a viss equals to 1.6 kg).

Starting from last April, the fresh areca nuts have been flowing into market. The price jumped on the low supply.

China highly demands those fresh areca nuts, the traders said.

Normally, India purchases Myanmar’s dried areca nuts.

Nonetheless, trade is sluggish for now, the areca nut traders said.

The trade of areca nuts produced in Ye Township of Mon State is brisk. Those areca nuts are delivered to markets of Yangon, Bago and Mandalay regions. Then, they are exported to India through the big cities.

At present, betel nut export to India plummeted because of the trade suspension triggered by the COVID-19 negative consequences and security concerns.

Myanmar earlier exported 400-500 bags of areca nuts. The export volume dropped to 300 for now, areca nut traders stressed.

Transportation rate increased from K2,500 to K3,000 per 60-viss bag owing to the high fuel oil price. At present, the growers are facing a series of challenges such as virus negative impacts, political instability, security concerns, transport difficulty, banking restrictions and money withdrawal limit, high fuel oil prices.—NN/GNLM

Myawady-Mae Sot Bridge yet to reopen on 15 May Cleaning task is being carried out at Mae Sot gate to Thailand on 1 May.

THE Myawady-Mae Sot bridge was not reopened on 15 May although it was reported that it would be reopened, according to locals.

There are rumours that it will be opened on 15 May. In the meantime, the bridges on both sides are being cleaned, and they said that such a bridge is likely to open today. The bridge was not open until 7 am today, so it is certain that it has not reopened today, said driver Ko Zaw Gyi from Myawady.

The bridge will be reopened, but local authorities in Tak District have barred Myanmar nationals for crossing the border, making it difficult for the Myanmar returnees to go home.

Thais are allowed to go anywhere in their country, but Myanmar migrant workers are barred from doing so under local orders. The bridge will be ready to give service after relaxing the local orders, Ko Zaw Gyi added.

After more than two years of closure, Thai authorities cleared the gates of Mae Sot on the Thai side of the border on 1 May.

Officials from the two countries began talks on 5 May to reopen the bridge after cleaning and painting the steel frame on 4 May.

Negotiations are underway to reopen the bridge in Thailand, but no announcement has been released on the Myanmar side, locals said.

Restore peace for ensuring healthcare services to people

NOWADAYS, the government is striving for the implementation of a healthcare system which can cover the whole nation. To be able to provide healthcare services to the entire people, plans are underway to appoint necessary health staff in regions and states.

But, as peace and stability of the nation are crucial to assign the health staff in necessary areas, the government gives priority to the restoration of peace. Only when the country is peaceful, everything can be safely done in all areas of the nation free from dangers.

The Ministry of Health lost many health staff from public healthcare services in the recent political changes. Hence, members of the medical corps from the Tatmadaw are assigned duties in the areas where health staff are shortages. Newly graduated health staff will be assigned to the respective areas for serving the State duties.

Meanwhile, the requirements of hospitals are being fulfilled so that public health services can be provided at full capacity.

Thanks to the concerted efforts of the people, the whole country could overcome the challenges of COVID-19 from the first to the fourth waves although the infection rate of the pandemic was very high in 2021. The World Health Organization stated less than five per cent of the COVID-19 infection rate can be identified as the controllable level in the international community. Despite sustaining less than 0.2 per cent, the people of Myanmar still need to abide by some COVID restrictions not to surge the infection rate.

The government takes preventive measures for all diseases across the nation, especially major diseases such as tuberculosis, malaria, AIDS and hepatitis. In so doing, health staff training schools produce nurses, midwives and health staff for the development of human resources in the health sector.

Anyhow, encouragement is being given to not only government-run hospitals, rural health centres and rural health branches but private hospitals and clinics to provide healthcare services to the people. Only when the development gap in healthcare services can be closed will all ethnic national people enjoy the fruits of development.

Only when the development gap in healthcare services can be closed will all ethnic national people enjoy the fruits of development. Everybody wishes to have longevity. US rate hikes strain Hong Kong's virus-weakened economy

Financial Secretary Paul Chan wrote last week that Hong Kong was now facing a reversal of the low interest rate environment it had enjoyed for more than a decade.

RECENT rate hikes from the Federal Reserve have come at a bad time for Hong Kong which, thanks to its US dollar peg, must follow suit despite its own flagging economy.

Hong Kong has pegged its currency to the US dollar since 1983, which has helped the city weather economic storms such as the 1997 Asian financial crisis and underpinned its status as a major global finance hub.

But it also means Hong Kong has little choice but to follow the Fed's latest round of hawkish rate hikes — the biggest of its kind in 22 years.

“The Covid outbreak in Hong Kong and in mainland China is already hurting growth,” senior economist at Oxford Economics Lloyd Chan told AFP.

“The last thing that Hong Kong needs now is a rising interest rate.”

The city on Friday revised its 2022 GDP growth forecast down to between one and two percent, after a worse-than-expected four percent drop in the first quarter.

Financial Secretary Paul Chan wrote last week that Hong Kong was now facing a reversal of the low interest rate environment it had enjoyed for more than a decade.

“As the economy has not yet fully recovered from the epidemic, we have to pay attention to the impact of interest rate hike... (on) people and small and medium enterprises,” he wrote on his official website.

Impact on housing market

Hong Kong banks have so far kept their best lending rates steady, but they will feel the squeeze in three to six months, analysts say.

“The interest rate may increase quicker than in the past, given the faster pace from the Fed and also the change in the overall background risk sentiment in the world,” economist Gary Ng of Natixis told AFP.

Homebuyers whose mortgages are linked to the Hong Kong interbank offered rate (HIBOR) will be the first to feel the heat, said economist Heron Lim at Moody's Analytics.

“This usually has a downward effect on housing prices, (which) should shrink in 2022 and into 2023 as well, especially if there's low demand from mainland Chinese investors,” Lim told AFP.

The Hong Kong government on Friday said it expected signs of revival later this year following the relaxation of coronavirus curbs that ground the economy to a halt in the first quarter.

But the rate hikes could dampen a domestic rebound as the higher burden shouldered by homebuyers will eat into their consumption power.

Small and medium-sized businesses also potentially face a “really tough time” if the rising rates coincide with a Covid resurgence, economist Samuel Tse of DBS Bank told AFP.

Hong Kong is still hewing to a lighter version of China's zero-Covid model that has taken a toll on businesses in the city.

Dollar peg 'defensible'

Hong Kong allows its currency to trade within a range of 7.75-7.85 to the greenback.

Capital outflows and intense selling of the Hong Kong dollar in recent months have pushed it to the weak end of that trading band.

Last week, the Hong Kong Monetary Authority (HKMA) spent HK$8.53 billion ($1.08 billion) in three attempts to prop up the local currency, the first intervention since 2019.

Some commentators have begun questioning the sustainability of the peg, citing pressures of the pandemic and geopolitical tensions between China and the United States.

Responding to a Bloomberg op-ed, HKMA deputy chief executive Edmond Lau said earlier this month that the US dollar peg was a “highly robust and transparent system” and “highly resilient”.

“Hong Kong's monetary base is fully backed by US dollar assets,” Lau wrote, adding that the government had ample fiscal reserves and no net debt.

All four analysts who spoke with AFP agreed that Hong Kong would hold on to the peg despite changes in the global economy.

“Although the foreign reserve has dropped from $500 billion to around $460 billion, it is still a relatively high level which should be enough to defend the Hong Kong dollar,” said Tse of DBS. Lim at Moody's said the HKMA war chest ensured the peg was “very defensible”, adding that the arrangement had policy value as Hong Kong remained an international gateway to China's economy. Ng of Natixis noted that there has not been any selloff or panic offloading of Hong Kong dollar-related assets, which he said bodes well for the future of the peg. “But in the medium or long run,” he added, “it depends on whether this currency stability still has benefits that outweigh the costs, such as the divergence... between China and the US.”

Study finds glucose-like metabolite effective against COVID-19

CHINESE researchers have identified a glucose-like metabolite associated with diabetes in human blood with effective antiviral activity against SARS-CoV-2.

The findings, led by researchers from Tsinghua University, were published in the journal Nature Metabolism on Tuesday.

Previous studies show that the severity and mortality of COVID-19 are associated with pre-existing diseases such as diabetes. However, the underlying causes behind this have not yet been well established.

In this new study, researchers screened out more than 200 small-molecule metabolites and found that 1,5-anhydro-D-glucitol (1,5-AG), which is deficient in patients with diabetes, can inhibit cellular entry of SARS-CoV-2.

They found the level of SARS-CoV-2 replication is higher in the presence of serum from patients with diabetes than from healthy individuals, but this can be counteracted by 1,5-AG supplementation to the serum from patients.

According to molecular mechanism analysis, 1,5-AG presented an effective anti-SARS-CoV-2 activity by binding to the S2 subunit of the SARS-CoV-2 spike protein, thereby interrupting the process of virus-cell membrane fusion.

In experiments conducted on mice, researchers discovered that diabetic mice undergoing SARS-CoV-2 infection were accompanied by much higher viral loads and more severe respiratory tissue damage when compared to non-diabetic mice. Sustained 1,5-AG supplementation in diabetic mice reduced SARS-CoV-2 loads and disease severity to similar levels in non-diabetic mice.

The results suggest that 1,5-AG supplementation can help reduce such incidences and prevent severe COVID-19 in diabetics, according to the study.

BRICS countries renew pledge to address climate change

BRICS countries renewed their joint commitment to tackling climate change and explored approaches to accelerating the low-carbon transition at a meeting on Friday.

The BRICS High-level Meeting on Climate Change was hosted by China via video link and was attended by ministerial officials responsible for climate change response from Brazil, Russia, India and South Africa.

Noting that the BRICS countries are a prominent force in addressing climate change, China's Minister of Ecology and Environment Huang Runqiu said in a speech that China will work with fellow BRICS countries to promote the full and effective session of the Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, hoping that the event will prioritize implementation and highlight the reinforcement of adaptation and financial aid to developing countries, said Xie Zhenhua, China's special envoy for climate change.

Vice Minister of Ecology and Environment Zhao Yingmin said that climate-change cooperation has brought the BRICS countries closer and helped establish high-quality partnerships. Pakistan parched and pummelled by blistering heatwave

PAKISTAN was in the grip of a heatwave on Friday, with parts of the nation previously scalded by temperatures of nearly 50 degrees Celsius as officials warned of acute water shortages and a health threat.

Swathes of the country have been smothered by high temperatures since late April, in extreme weather the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) has warned is consistent with climate change.

On Thursday the city of Jacobabad in Sindh province hit 49.5C (121 degrees Fahrenheit), the Pakistan Meteorological Department (PMD) said, with temperatures forecast to remain high until the end of the week.

"It's like fire burning all around," said labourer Shafi Mohammad, who is from a village on the outskirts of Jacobabad where residents struggle to find reliable access to drinking water. Nationwide, the PMD alerted temperatures were between 6C and 9C above normal, with the capital Islamabad — as well as provincial hubs Karachi, Lahore and Peshawar — recording temperatures around 40C on Friday.

"This year we have jumped from winter right into summer," said PMD chief forecaster Zaheer Ahmad Babar.

Pakistan has endured heightened heatwaves since 2015, he said, focused in upper Sindh province and southern Punjab province. —AFP

Kenya banking on adventure tourism to boost arrivals

KENYA intends to showcase some of its iconic scenic attractions like mountains, tropical forests and savannah grasslands to foreign and local tourists keen on adventure, officials said Saturday.

Najib Balala, the cabinet secretary for Tourism and Wildlife, said that by promoting adventure tourism, the country expects to shore up arrivals and generate additional foreign exchange earnings. Speaking ahead of a four-day hiking expedition in Mount Kenya, Balala said the adventure tourism had the potential to hasten the sector's post-pandemic revival besides creating new jobs for the country's youth.

He reckoned that hiking and mountaineering are niche adventure tourism products that have the potential to shore up visitors' numbers and generate new revenue for the exchequer.

"We are positioning the country as a top destination for adventure tourism. Our landmarks like mountains are ideal for visitors looking for outdoor adventure," said Balala.

He said the ongoing climbing expedition in Mount Kenya, Africa's second tallest mountain whose height is 5,199 meters, aims to showcase it as an ideal destination for adventure and nature lovers.

Balala added that Mount Kenya national park which is a UNESCO natural world heritage site and a wildlife sanctuary has always been an attractive tourist destination.— Xinhua

Climate change made deadly S Africa rains twice as likely RAINFALL that caused catastrophic floods and landslides last month in and around Durban, South Africa, was made twice as likely by global warming, scientists said Friday.

An exceptional downpour — more than 35 centimetres (14 inches) over two days — on April 11-12 claimed hundreds of lives and caused $1.5 billion in damage across the provinces KwaZulu-Natal and Eastern Cape.

Without climate change, rain of this intensity would happen roughly once every 40 years, according to a report from the World Weather Attribution consortium, a global network of scientists that quantify the impact of a warming world on individual extreme weather events.

But an increase in Earth's average surface temperature of nearly 1.2 degrees Celsius since the late-19th century has shortened that interval to about 20 years. —AFP

7 elephants killed by suspected poachers in past two weeks in southern Tanzania

SEVEN elephants have been killed in the past two weeks in Tanzania's southern region of Ruvuma, police said Friday.

Joseph Konyo, the Ruvuma regional police commander, said the seven elephants were found dead in two separate incidents in Namtumbo and Tunduru districts.

In the first incident, Konyo told a press conference, five elephants were found dead on May 1 in a forest in the Hanga area in Namtumbo district.

"Police could not find poachers who killed the jumbos, but they managed to recover five tusks weighing 44 kilograms," he said.

In the second incident, Konyo said, police found two dead elephants in a forest in Tunduru district on 10 May where they recovered four tusks and eight pieces of tusks weighing 20.4 kilograms. He said three suspected poachers were arrested in connection with the second incident.

The elephants were suspected to have been strayed from the Julius Nyerere National Park that borders with the districts, said Konyo.— Xinhua

Guangzhou airport resumes domestic flights after controlling outbreak

THE Baiyun airport in Guangzhou, capital of south China’s Guangdong Province, has resumed regular operation with a large number of domestic passenger flights reopened, after the latest COVID-19 resurgence was brought under control, the airport said on Friday.

The airport is expected to handle 300 flights on Friday, while its main airline, China Southern Airlines, plans to operate 61 inbound and outbound domestic flights at the airport.

Most of the airport’s inbound and outbound domestic passenger flights were canceled or rescheduled, following positive results found during its routine nucleic acid testing of staff on 27 April.

Baiyun airport has since intensified COVID-19 screenings among staff members. More than 10,000 of them have undergone a total of 26 rounds of nucleic acid testing from 29 April to Friday. Starting from 30 April, daily antigen testing has also been added to the routine staff testing.

Since 30 April, no positive cases have been reported among its staff, said the airport.

With strict COVID-19 prevention and control measures put in place, the airport has also resumed its catering services and retail businesses in the terminals. — Xinhua

Japan, China talks over food import ban not held for over 1 year

TALKS between Japan and China over Beijing's import ban on Japanese food products have not been held for over a year, sources familiar with bilateral relations told Kyodo News recently.

As China has not responded to Japan's request for resuming the talks amid soured bilateral ties, it is uncertain when the ban will be lifted, with the deadlock possibly to affect discussions on China's accession to a major Pacific free trade deal, the sources said.

products from Fukushima and several other prefectures over the risks of radioactive contamination. Japan has been asking

China to hold a third meeting of a panel they established to discuss lifting the ban, the sources said.

Foreign ministers of the two countries agreed in November 2020 to set up the panel as Tokyo aimed to expand sales of Japanese food in the Chinese market, and Beijing, which has been at odds with the United States, hoped to improve ties with Japan.

Officials on the panel met in virtual meetings held in December 2020 and February 2021, according to the sources.

But China did not agree to hold panel talks when Japan in November 2021 called for them, in an apparent protest at Japan's decision in April that year to release treated radioactive water from the crippled nuclear plant in Fukushima into the sea.

Bilateral relations further deteriorated as Chinese authorities detained a Japanese diplomat in Beijing temporarily in February this year for allegedly collecting information illegally.

Peru sues Spain's Repsol for $4.5 bn over oil spill

PERU has filed suit against Spanish energy company Repsol over the massive January oil spill that ravaged its coast, seeking $4.5 billion in damages.

The lawsuit was filed before the 27th civil court in Lima against six companies: Repsol (Spain), Mapfre Global Risks (Spain), Mapfre Peru Insurance and Reinsurance Companies (Peru), La Pampilla Refinery (Peru), Transtotal Maritime Agency (Peru) and Fratelli d'amico Armatori (Italy, owner of the tanker involved), Peru's consumer protection agency said.

"These suits could create precedents for oil spills that cause damage and collective non-material damages due to environmental pollution of coastal areas," said Julian Palacin, executive director of the National Institute for the Defense of Competition and Protection of Intellectual Property (INDECOPI), in a statement released late Friday. —AFP

IMF lifts Chinese yuan's weighting in basket of top currencies

THE International Monetary Fund has lifted the Chinese yuan's weighting in its elite basket of reserve currencies to 12.28 percent from 10.92 percent, the country's central bank said Sunday.

In its first regular review of the evaluation of the IMF's special drawing rights, or SDR, since the yuan was included in the basket in 2016, the Washington-based organization has decided to raise the status of the Chinese currency, also known as the renminbi.

The updated basket weights will come into effect on 1 August, the People's Bank of China said in a statement, adding that the next SDR review is scheduled to be concluded before the end of July 2027.

Iraq's prized rice crop threatened by drought

DROUGHT is threatening the Iraqi tradition of growing amber rice, the aromatic basis of rich lamb and other dishes, and a key element in a struggling economy.

The long-grained variety of rice takes its name from its distinctive scent, which is similar to that of amber resin. It is used in Iraqi meals including sumptuous lamb gouzi, mansaf and stuffed vegetables.

But after three years of drought and declining rainfall, Iraq's amber rice production will be only symbolic in 2022, forcing consumers to seek out imported varieties and leaving farmers pondering their future.

"We live off this land," Abu Rassul says, standing near a small canal that in normal times irrigates his two hectares (five acres) near Al-Abassiya village in the central province of Najaf.

"Since I was a child I have planted amber rice," says the farmer in his 70s, his face wrinkled and unshaven, dressed in a dazzling white dishdasha robe.

"Water enables us to plant every year."

Except for this one.

Normally, rice fields planted in mid-May should stay submerged all summer until October — but that's a luxury Iraq can no longer allow.

The country's available water reserves "are well below our critical level of 18 billion cubic metres (4.8 trillion gallons)", Shaker Fayez Kadhim, Najaf's water resources manager, told AFP.—AFP

THE Indian government has banned wheat exports with immediate effect as part of its steps to control the price increase at home, officials said Saturday.

The notification was issued by the federal ministry of commerce and industry's Directorate General of Foreign Trade (DGFT) on Friday.

The government said only export shipments for which letters of credit have been issued on or before Friday's notification will be allowed.

The government further said it will allow exports on requests from other countries.

The notification said the government had taken the decision "in order to manage the overall food security of the country and to support the needs of the neighboring and other vulnerable countries."

Reports said global buyers had been banking on India after exports from the Black Sea region dropped since the Russian-Ukraine conflict in late February. The move to ban wheat exports comes after a huge crop loss due to a heatwave in March in India.

Japan says Sakhalin energy projects do not contradict Russia sanctions

JAPAN has no plan to pull out of two major energy projects off the Russian island of Sakhalin and the policy does not contradict the slew of sanctions it placed on Moscow over its invasion of Ukraine, a senior government official said Sunday.

"If we give up our stakes and Russia gets them," Deputy Chief Cabinet Secretary Seiji Kihara said on an NHK television, energy imports could be "more costly" for Japan in the long term.

He also said if Japan's stakes in the Sakhalin 1 and 2 oil and liquefied natural gas projects are obtained by other countries, there is a possibility that those not imposing sanctions against Russia will benefit. With other Group of Seven major developed countries, Prime Minister Fumio Kishida has recently said Japan will ban Russian oil imports "in principle."—Xinhua

"Noticeably there has been new demand for dairy products to support health and wellness, which also has created opportunities for our patented products including probiotic strains," he said.

Crisis-hit Sri Lanka lifts curfew for Buddhist festival

SRI Lankan authorities lifted a nationwide curfew Sunday for an important Buddhist festival, with celebrations muted as the island weathers a worsening economic crisis.

A countrywide stay-home order has been in place for most of the week after mob violence left nine dead and over 225 wounded, sparked by attacks on peaceful demonstrators by government loyalists.

In recent weeks, protesters across the Buddhist-majority nation have demanded the resignation of President Gotabaya Rajapaksa over Sri Lanka's worst economic crisis in its history as an independent nation.

inflation and lengthy blackouts, Sunday marks Vesak, the celebrates Buddha's birth, enlightenment and death. The government also announced it was lifting the curfew for the day without saying when or whether it would be reimposed.

But the ongoing crisis prompted the government to cancel its plans to mark the festival, which had been scheduled at a temple in the island's south.

"Given the economic situation of the government and other constraints, we are not having this year's state festival at the Kuragala temple as planned," a Buddhist Affairs ministry official told AFP.
